Shultz, Shevardnadze report progress in talks

Associated Press

MOSCOW—Secretary of State George Shultz and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze claimed "good progress" Sunday in daylong talks on arms control, human rights and regional conflicts.

But a Soviet Foreign Ministry spokesman sharply criticized the U.S. nuclear rebuilding program in Western Europe.

The spokesman, Gennady Gerasimov, said the modernization program in NATO countries clashed with the new U.S.-Soviet treaty to scrap intermediate-range missiles.

Gerasimov said building new missiles with a range less than 315 miles was "incompatible with the strengthening of European security."

The U.S. State Department spokesman, Charles Redman, dissociated the U.S. government from the Soviet criticism.

Otherwise, both sides gave extremely upbeat appraisals of the Shultz-Shevardnadze talks, he said.

"They both agreed without any hesitation whatsoever that the atmosphere was excellent throughout the day, that they were businesslike, and they both agreed we made good progress across the range of issues," Redman said.

Shultz took an hour off to meet with noted Soviet dissident Andrei Sakharov, who wished him well in pressing for human rights reforms. Shultz called the 1975 Nobel Peace Prize winner "an inspiration" and a "model and symbol" to the world.

They met in Sakharov's seventh-floor apartment. Sakharov said serious Soviet reforms were under way but the country had not made enough progress yet on human rights or on Afghanistan.

Sakharov was sent into internal exile in Gorky for almost seven years in 1980 for speaking out against the Soviet mil-

BEIRUT, Lebanon—Iranian-backed Hezbollah extremists clashed Sunday with Shiite militiamen searching for a kidnapped U.S. marine and declared support for his abductors.

A Hezbollah leader said he believed Lt. Col. William Higgins had been smuggled out of south Lebanon.

"We declare solidarity with, and full support for, the strugglers against America who confront the plots of the great Satan," said a statement from Hezbollah, or Party of God. "The demands of the Organization of the Oppressed on Earth are just."

The Organization of the Oppressed on Earth on claimed responsibility Friday for Higgins' kidnapping, charging he was a CIA spy. U.S. and U.N. officials denied the charge.

Higgins, a decorated Vietnam veteran and a one-time military assistant to former U.S. defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger, heads a 76-man observer group attached to a U.N. peacekeeping force in south Lebanon. He was kidnapped on Wednesday near the ancient port city of Tyre.

Hezbollah is believed to be the umbrella organization for pro-Iranian groups holding foreign hostages in Lebanon.

Police said Hezbollah and Justice Minister Nabih Berri's mainstream Shiite Amal militia clashed in a brief firefight in the southeastern Lebanese village of Ein el-Tineh. No casualties were reported.

Governors appeal for relief from red tape

Associated Press

WASHINGTON—The nation's governors appealed to the White House on Sunday for relief from 163 federal rules and regulations and heard a former governor call for a constitutional convention to restore states' rights.

New Hampshire Gov. John Sununu, opening the National Governors' Association's winter meeting, said that the time had come to press for a new division of authority between the states and Washington.

"There has been an erosion of the fundamental balance struck 200 years ago in Philadelphia," Sununu, the NGA chairman, said at a news conference before calling the first plenary session to order.

President Reagan was hosting a black-tie dinner for the governors Sunday night, then inviting them back to the White House Monday to hear firsthand of their concerns.

James Miller III, director of the Office of Management and Budget, told the governors the Reagan administration had carried out nearly 50 of 80 recommendations the NGA made 16 months ago to reduce red tape and administrative burdens on state and local governments.

Eyeing the new stack of 163 recommendations, Miller said, "There's a lot more out there that needs to be done. It's hard to do." But he added, "There is no question that our federal system of shared power between the federal and state governments . . . is healthier today than it has been in years."

The governors heard just the opposite from former Georgia Gov. George Busbee, who warned, "We are about one recession away from a complete breakdown of domestic government in this country."

Gore looks forward to primaries

Associated Press

DALLAS—After sitting on the sidelines in Iowa and falling short of his aim in New Hampshire, Albert Gore Jr. has two weeks to show that he, too, is a real contender for the Democratic presidential nomination.

Gore, the Tennessee senator who has made much of his Southern roots, long ago crafted a strategy for winning the Democratic presidential nomination that is 100 percent dependent on achieving a breakthrough on one day.

That day, March 8, looms large now that the race for the nomination has moved to his turf. Twenty states hold Democratic delegates contests then, including every Southern state save one.

Gore's strategy flies in the face of the conventional wisdom that, as in the past, to win the nomination a candidate in either party must first score a success in the earliest contests of Iowa and New Hampshire's

To disprove that thinking, Gore must mount in the two weeks before Super Tuesday a campaign that appeals broadly to Southern white voters—since Jesse Jackson figures to capture most of the black vote.

And Gore must do so against the attention that naturally has fallen on the Democratic race's two winners to date—Richard Gephardt, who won in Iowa, and Michael Dukakis, who won in New Hampshire.

It's no coincidence that those two rivals were the ones Gore targeted with a flurry of barbed attacks as quickly as the first Southern debate began in Dallas last Thursday.

Gore and his strategists have long contended he already had "a ticket to Super Tuesday" because Gore is from the South and because he early on decided to forego Iowa's caucus system to concentrate on the delegate-rich states that vote March 8.

ND commencements could get much worse

Most of last year's Notre Dame commencement was formal and ceremonious. It was a little rowdy near the end, but it was nothing like the chaotic graduation ceremony which took place at Georgetown University last May.

Notre Dame's ceremony began quietly. As the band played and the choir sang, the black-robed graduates silently filed into their seats inside the Joyce ACC arena. Honorary degrees were presented. Dignitaries spoke. The hundreds of ND degree recipients waited politely, quietly, patiently through the formalities.

Then the conferral of degrees began. And the solemn scholars broke into bedlam.

The graduate students and College of Science students jumped up and applauded themselves loudly as their degrees were conferred. As Father Theodore Hesburgh prepared to confer degrees on the engineering students, seated to his right, the business majors on his left screamed "geeks" across the arena. After he conferred the degrees, the engineers also erupted in noisy celebration.

Next, the students of the College of Arts and Letters celebrated their degrees with confetti, streamers, and a champagne shower from a shaken bottle. As Hesburgh was about to confer degrees on the business students, they leapt to their feet, sounding airhorns. The engineers screamed across the arena, "Don't do it Father Ted." But after joking that he was having second thoughts, he went ahead and conferred the degrees.

Suddenly, the noise ceased as all fell silent for the rest of the ceremony.

A Northwestern graduate watching all this said she had never seen such a rowdy graduation. A Harvard undergrad said the loudest noise heard at a Harvard commencement was the unfurling of an anti-apartheid banner.

But Notre Dame's rowdiness paled next to the chaos which occurred during last year's commencement ceremony at Georgetown. Students there did more than just shower each other with a little champagne. They drank it. Gallons of it.

The ceremony was held outdoors on a 90 degree May day. Fifteen thousand people crammed into a lawn which was meant to hold 10 to 12 thousand. They started drinking during the baccalaureate mass that morning and kept drinking through five hours of ceremonies under a hot sun.

The chaos was so great that the speaker was barely able to talk over the noise. The platform party was sprayed with champagne. Two fist fights broke out. One girl was rushed to the hospital after being hit in the face by a champagne bottle.

This year, Georgetown students have suggested shortening the ceremony so there will be less time to get drunk. Others have offered to encourage their fellow students not to drink. But many students maintained that drinking was an integral part of commencement.

Fortunately, few ND parents went running to the liquor stores between baccalaureate and commencement to buy champagne for their sons and daughters as GU parents did last year. And drinking isn't yet considered an integral part of the ceremony at Notre Dame.

But Notre Dame commencements are beginning to deteriorate along with those of high schools and universities across the country.

NEWS FROM

MATERIALS SCIENCE AND ENGINEERING

A wide spectrum of new materials are being announced every day. Each is changing the many decades-old views about which application requires what materials and indeed applications need no longer be materials limited. The labels "Superalloys", "Specialty Fibers", "Technical Ceramics", "Advanced Composites", "Exotic Semiconductors", "Biocompatible Materials", "Superconducting Ceramics", "Thin Film Diamonds", "High Energy Magnets", "Engineered Surfaces", "Metallic Glasses", "Ultrahard Materials", hint that a quiet revolution has been occurring in engineering - the "materials revolution". This revolution is expanding the job opportunities for engineers with knowledge of the unifying factors among these diverse materials developments and the ability to innovate new applications.

The broadening scope and complexity of materials technology demands a much larger scale of human resources prepared to work with a wide variety of materials. The Occupational Outlook Handbook, U.S. Department of Labor projects that the demand for materials scientists and engineers will grow faster than the average of all occupations. In addition, a College Placement survey indicates that starting salaries in this vital area will be higher than the overall average starting salary for the nine top engineering professions.

The Department of Materials Science and Engineering began its long tradition at Notre Dame as the Department of Metallurgical Engineering and Materials Science in 1933. It was the first department in Engineering to award the B.S., M.S. and Ph.D. degrees. Over its 55 year history, the students and faculty have established an outstanding record in teaching research and engineering.

In 1986, the Department name was changed to Materials Science and Engineering to reflect the change in instructional emphasis under way to better prepare students for the "materials revolution". New emphasis will be added in ceramics, glasses, superalloys, advanced composites, sophisticated processing and analytical techniques. Built on a strong base in unifying between structure, processing and performance of materials, these changes will prepare Notre Dame graduates to become active participants in the "materials revolution".

To implement these changes, the Department of Materials Science and Engineering hired four new faculty in 1986/87. The expertise of these faculty in ceramics, surface structure, electron microscopy and electronic packaging has led to the development of the Center for Sensor Materials and the Indiana Center for Innovative Superconductor Technology. This provides an excellent opportunity for undergraduates in Materials Science and Engineering to secure scholarships and obtain engineering experience with co-operating industries determined to commercially exploit the materials research and development efforts of these Centers.

Israeli troops kill two, Palestinians to protest

Associated Press

JERUSALEM- Israeli soldiers killed two Arabs Sunday in clashes in the West Bank. Palestinian organizers called for stepped up protests to coincide with the visit of U.S. Secretary of State George Shultz this week.

The army said soldiers shot and killed the Arabs in separate confrontations in the West Bank city of Nablus and the Deir Ammar refugee camp. Nablus hospital officials said 17 Arabs were wounded.

The army initially reported a third Arab shot and killed in Nablus but later retracted the statement. Nablus hospital officials said the man, Ahmed Abu Salhiye, in his 50s, died of a heart attack after being overcome by tear gas.

The latest deaths brought the number of Palestinians killed by Israelis since the protests began Dec. 8 to 61, according to United Nations figures.

Officials in the Economy Ministry said the government had spent $330 million to finance the crackdown on the protests. Israel's 1988 budget is $31 billion.

Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin rejected demands that he issue specific guidelines to soldiers to curb the use of excessive force against Palestinian protesters.

Court seeks mercy killer's name

Associated Press

CHICAGO- One of the nation's leading medical journals is headed for court in what may be its most serious editorial controversy - the publication of an anonymous article by a doctor who described committing a mercy killing.

The Cook County state's attorney's office wants the name of the doctor, but the Journal of the American Medical Association, citing a state free-press law, says it will be in court Monday seeking to quash the subpoena.

Letters to the journal have been about evenly split on whether JAMA should have printed the anonymous essay.

It's not the first time in recent years the 105-year-old journal, the official publication of the country's largest organization of physicians, has found itself in a clash over its contents.

In 1984, a U.S. army medical expert charged that AMA officials killed a smoking he had submitted on smoking so they could win favor with politicians in tobacco-growing states.

Two years earlier, the journal was accused of publishing an article on heart medicine to placate a major drug company that was an advertiser.

JAMA officials denied the charges in both cases.

The latest case involves the broader issues of press freedom and mercy killing.

In the Jan. 8 essay, titled, "It's Over, Debbie," a doctor described injecting a lethal dose of morphine into a woman dying of ovarian cancer. He wrote that he did not know the patient, but was asked to check on her and moved by her plea of "Let's get this over with."

AMA officials said they did not verify the incident but believed it was based on fact. They said the author had requested anonymity. The essay did not indicate where the doctor lived or where the incident occurred.

Last week, the Cook County state's attorney's office served JAMA with a subpoena ordering it to name the writer of the article.

AMA attorney Kirk Johnson said the journal would not comply. JAMA officials said their attorneys would file a motion Monday to dismiss the subpoena.

itary intervention in Afghanistan.

The treaty to ban U.S. and Soviet missiles ranging from 315 to 3,125 miles was signed by President Reagan and Mikhail Gorbachev at their summit meeting in December in Washington. The treaty is now before the U.S. Senate and the Supreme Soviet for approval.

Gerasimov said the Soviets were eager to see the treaty placed in force and had begun withdrawing short-range missiles from East Germany and Czechoslovakia. But he rejected assertions by U.S. officials that the Soviets were holding back on a date for the next summit meeting until the treaty was approved.

"We never stated directly that there is some sort of link," the Soviet spokesman said.

Reagan and Gorbachev agreed to meet in Moscow but did not set a date. Redman said the two sides were considering "the general time frame of mid-May or early June."

Redman said holding a summit did not depend on completing another treaty to halve the superpowers' arsenals of long-range bombers, land-based missiles and submarines.

Negotiations in Geneva have slowed down over ways to verify the cutbacks and over the U.S. program to develop an anti-missile defense in space.

Shultz discussed verification procedures with Shevardnadze. A joint statement is to be issued after talks Monday with Gorbachev. Shevardnadze is expected to deal with the problem and also compliance with the 1972 Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty, which the Soviets say prohibits much of the U.S. "Star Wars" program.

Knowledge comes in questioning

Too often in our world today, people are simply content to sit back and listen to everything told to them without even thinking about raising a possible question or two. The problem with this lack of questioning is that a select few are put in influential positions of power, facing no opposition to what they say or do. Who is to say that everything these select few say is true and unquestionable? Actually, no one is. Granted, there are certain facts which should, or at least can, remain unquestioned. But in an attempt to gain more knowledge, all of us should avoid apathy and complacency by questioning as much as possible.

Rob Hahn

guest column

The now classic confrontation between CBS anchorman Dan Rather and Vice President George Bush is an excellent example of the need for questioning. CBS News surely thought it was important enough to take a good amount of time out of the newscast to question Bush; the interview took nearly half of the actual news time during an evening newscast. America has the right and should want to know what role our own Vice President played in one of the largest covert operations exposed during the last decade.

Sometimes aggressive reporting is the only way to achieve answers to such difficult questions, such as the one surrounding Bush's involvement and knowledge of the Iran-Contra affair. The questions Rather presented during the interview were legitimate. In fact, many others have asked those same questions. Take, for instance, James Gannon, editor of the Des Moines Register. When he questioned Bush about the Iran-Contra affair during a debate involving Republican candidates for president, Gannon was faced with criticism. Instead of giving a simple answer to the question, Bush criticized the manner in which the Register had covered the whole affair.

The response to both the Rather confrontation and the Gannon questioning was greatly in favor of Bush. This is a very sad commentary on the American people. Instead of wanting to know answers, in this case answers to political questions, many people find it much more convenient to criticize the press and others for asking tough and sometimes disturbing questions. These same people apparently would prefer a stance of ignorance and allow those in power to do as they please without any form of "checks and balances."

Many philosophers would also agree with the need to question. One philosopher in particular has set forth a hypothesis stressing the need to question. W.K. Clifford states: "It is wrong always, everywhere, and for anyone, to believe anything upon insufficient evidence." The only way proper evidence can be obtained is through thorough questioning. Clifford adds: "No simplicity of mind, no obscurity of station, can escape the universal duty of questioning all that we believe." He says that those who do not question in a quest for sufficient evidence are hurting themselves and those around them.

Everyone is taught numerous different things throughout a lifetime, whether it be inside or outside of the classroom. The problem is that so many people take so much they are taught to be true without even thinking about questioning those beliefs. Leo F. Buscaglia, in his book, "The Way of the Bull," notes that, "during the years of my life I have been schooled by our society in many things. Mostly, I learned and never questioned." He then added that after some thorough questioning, "it soon became painfully obvious that much of what I had been taught had served as the greatest deterrent to joy and finding myself. . ." This shows how much one can miss when there is an absence of questioning in one's life. Take a moment to consider how much you and I have missed, because we have failed to ask questions and open our eyes.

The need to question exists every day, and no one is exempt from that need. Through investigation, we increase our awareness of the world around us. Sometimes our questioning may prove fruitless. Yet for those times something new is learned through questioning, it is well worth the effort set forth. If you disagree with this need to question, then go ahead and believe without question that the Chicago Cubs will win this year's World Series, that Elvis Presley and the Beatles will play live in concert at the Joyce ACC this year and that Richard Nixon will be the next President of the United States.

Rob Hahn is enrolled in the Freshman Year of Studies.

Letters can affect S.African injustice

Dear Editor:

The current upheaval in South Africa has raised consciences around the world; yet to many the reality is thousands of miles away and quickly leaves the minds of those distanced from the conflict. The media often portrays the struggle as impersonal by reporting of the masses. However, the following incident is an attempt to bring the situation into a more intimate context.

On Aug. 5 or 6, 1986, Mutele Henry Fazzie, the vice president of the Eastern Cape Regional Structure of the United Democratic Front (UDF) in South Africa, was arrested by South African security police at a road block near New Brighton Township. According to Amnesty International, he is believed to be detained under emergency regulations at St. Alban's Prison in Port Elizabeth. Mr. Fazzie was considered a moderate influence in the black community and sought to resolve black grievances through negotiations with the apartheid business community.

As a result of this concern and involvement, he and Mkhoseli Jack, another UDF leader, were issued five-year banning orders in March 1986 which restricted them to Port Elizabeth. These orders received much criticism abroad and from white South African businessmen. This outcry not only led to the lifting of Mr. Fazzie's and Mr. Jack's bannings, but it initiated the invalidation of all banning orders in South Africa that same year. Mr. Fazzie has significantly contributed to the blacks' liberation. His wife, Ethesia Buyiswa Fazzie, also suffered arrest and joined him in prison in December 1986. They both are detained without trial. Amnesty International reports that Mr. and Mrs. Fazzie are believed to be victims of torture and ill-treatment at a security police detention in Port Elizabeth.

Amnesty International will be writing letters to South African government officials today, Feb. 22, urging the immediate and unconditional release of Mr. Fazzie. If the facts and realities of this case have heightened your concern for those suffering injustice in South Africa, I encourage you to join us tonight at 6:30 p.m. in the Center for Social Concerns. One letter can make all the difference.

Models show off their 'Fashion Savvy'

accent writer

The only thing in this world that separates the men from the women is the ability to do a 360 in Nike sneakers versus five inch heels.

It is the world of Fashion Savvy. The world brought to Notre Dame Saturday night by the Black Cultural Arts Festival (BCAF) at the South Bend Century Center.

Sixteen students from the University of Notre Dame strutted their stuff (and the stuff from participating local clothing merchants) to the latest in funk music. Their dancy, highly choreographed presentation dazzled the standing room only audience for nearly three hours.

Because of the bad weather, the 8:00 performance got off to a late start, but it was a performance worth waiting for.

Emcee Jocelyn Allen, a Notre Dame freshman, told the audience to let go of its inhibitions; it was entering the world of fashion savvy-- the world where the innocent would become sensuous, where the tame would answer the calls of the wild, and the free of heart would see the elegant and elite.

The first hour of the show was dedicated to "In Leisure" where the models showed that stone washed denim is still the rage and can be worn a number of ways, leather is "hot" and bright cotton in solid colors is "cool".

The models' versatility was shown by presenting their fashion sets in a number of ways. The audience saw all sixteen models on the stage only in the opening. The T-shaped runway was indeed overflowing--not only with the hottest in fashion, but with the some of the hottest looking men and women on Notre Dame's campus.

Senior model Yolanda McCullum has been in the show for four years and choreographed much of this year's presentation. Other female models included Michele Cage, Lois Conrad, Vivian Crosswell, Danielle Duchatellier, Robin Holley, Tracy Lowery, and Frances Shavers.

The male models included Calvin Allen, Lionel Coleman, Ray Dumas, Mark Green, Everett Jackson, Andre Jones, Cornelius Southall, and James Suttle.

In the first part of the show, there was very little hope for the men to catch up with the women who played hard to get. But they gave in for the second set "In Business". These up-and-coming young urban professionals showed that double-breasted suits and matching silk ties and hankies are the wave of the men's future, as well as skirted long jackets for the women.

The third and fourth sets, "In Elegance" and "In Twilight", gave the lighting crew a chance to strut its stuff and music coordinators a chance to slow it down.

Despite a few musical gaps, covered skillfully by the models who just made their own music, the first half of the show went rather well.

A student band, The Groove, entertained the audience during intermission, keeping anybody with an ear for good music from going to the bathroom. Models Lois Conrad and Michele Cage, also band members, captivated the audience with a very good rendition of Sade's "Sweetest Taboo."

The second half of the show ended well--but the beginning left a little to be desired. A representative from Denderah's, an Indianapolis designer, showed that her ability to emcee was not near her ability to design.

The second half was again plagued with minor music problems, but this time the models were not given the chance to make their own music. Instead the Denderah's representative announced her dismay by exclaiming "oh, please" and "we'll get it together in a minute."

Her avant garde line was far from avant garde, while her oriental line was as oriental as the shag carpet in my living room. I did enjoy the burlap jacket in her oriental line, which was quite avant garde.

When emcee Jocelyn Allen reclaimed her chair, the performance reclaimed its validity, in my opinion, as a good student effort to display the talents of some of the men and women on campus, and the exciting clothes of the some of the South Bend clothing merchants.

USA hockey team falls 4-1; knocked out of medal hunt

Associated Press

CALGARY, Alberta—The United States lost its offense and its chance at an Olympic hockey medal Sunday night in a 4-1 defeat to a West German team it had to beat by two goals.

The loss was a bitter disappointment for the Americans, who were seeking vindication in the Olympics after finishing seventh at Sarajevo in 1984. Now, they must win a final game in the consolation round just to match that finish.

The Americans fell behind 2-0 early in the game and never could catch up, their high-powered offense bottled up by a smothering defense and West German goaltender Karl Friesen, a former member of the NHL New Jersey Devils.

In its entire 60-game exhibition schedule, the U.S. team was held to one goal only twice, and it had scored 26 goals in four previous Olympic games. When the offense was needed the most, though, the offense failed.

The U.S. outshot the Germans 34-23, but scored only on Scott Fusco's goal early in the third period with West Germany already ahead 3-0.

The Americans ended the preliminary round with a 2-3 record, the two victories coming against the only winless teams in the same pool, Austria and Norway.

The Americans started at a disadvantage, needing not just to win but to win by two goals under Olympic tiebreaking procedures for the final berth in the medals round.

As it turned out, that calculation never entered the picture as the West Germans jumped to a 2-0 lead on goals by Dieter Hegen and Ron Fischer in the first period and clinched it on third-period goals by Peter Obresa and Roy Roedger.

West Germany killed off 3:33 of a four-minute power play with six minutes to play as the United States got off only three shots before Scott Young was called for slashing to end the man advantage.

It could have been worse. With the Germans up 2-0 in the first period, U.S. goalie Mike Richter deflected a penalty shot by Roedger and then made a kick save on him.

The Americans had their chances in the first period, but came away empty-handed largely because of Friesen's goaltending and their own bad luck.

A shot by Jim Johannson hit the crossbar, and a shot by Corey Millen was stopped on a brilliant glove save by Friesen.

In the second period, the West Germans appeared content to play defense, and they played it well, keeping the Americans off the scoreboard despite being outshot 11-5.

Tennis loses three in weekend matches

By GEORGE TRAVERS
Sports Writer

The previously undefeated Notre Dame men's tennis team came back to reality this weekend.

Despite a gallant effort, the Irish lost to three superior teams in the 1988 Notre Dame Men's Quadrangular. After falling to Northwestern, Iowa and Miami of Ohio, Notre Dame now stands at 5-3.

Coming into this weekend, Bob Bayliss' Notre Dame squad was an impressive 5-0, and had yet to lose a doubles match all year. Bayliss knew his team would be underdogs for the first time this weekend. He thought they were ready, but it was just a case of too much, too soon.

"This was a case of extremely tough scheduling," said Bayliss. "In our first five matches, we were definite favorites, and in the last three we were heavy underdogs."

Action at the Eck Tennis Pavilion began on Friday with a match against Northwestern, which Notre Dame lost 8-1. The only Irish winner was senior captain Dan Walsh. In fact, Walsh was the only Notre Dame player to avoid losing a singles match all weekend. In the number-one singles match, Brian Kalbas lost to Matt Armon 6-2, 6-3.

The Irish lost five of the six singles matches, prompting Bayliss to make a strategic move by resting his top doubles teams for Saturday.

It was more of the same on Saturday. In the day's first match, Notre Dame fell to Iowa 7-2. Kalbas defeated Iowa's Martin Aguirre in straight sets 7-5, 6-3. Walsh came through with the only other Irish win. Mike Wallace lost to Dan Novak 6-3, 7-5. Ryan Wenger and David Kuhlman both lost in three set matches. In doubles action, Bayliss' strategy from Friday failed to pay off, as the Irish lost all three matches.

The most positive aspect of the weekend for Notre Dame was its match against Miami of Ohio on Saturday afternoon. The Irish played an amazingly intense match considering the grueling schedule, losing 6-3.

"We played better as the weekend went on," said Walsh. "After the initial loss we woke up and started to play pretty well" said Walsh.

Once again Kalbas and Walsh won. Senior Paul Daggs got Notre Dame's other victory. Kalbas soundly defeated Miami's Jeff Skolnik, one of the top 25 players in the country, 6-2, 6-2. the country. Bayliss feels Kalbas himself is becoming one of the premier players in the country.

"If I could say one thing about Brian it would be that he is absolutely maximizing his capabilities," the first-year coach said. "He is an incredibly intense competitor and played excellently considering he reagravated his groin injury."

"We have a lot of depth and a strong will to win, as was shown in the Miami match," said Bayliss.

Skaters earn America's first gold, silver medals

Associated Press

CALGARY, Alberta- Tomas Gustafson of Sweden set a world speed-skating record and became the Winter Olympics' first double gold medalist Sunday, while America still basked in the triumphs of its own two skaters.

Franck Piccard won the super giant slalom and gave France its first ski racing gold since Jean-Claude Killy took Grenoble by storm in 1968. Anita Wachter of Austria won the women's combined. With spring-like temperatures lingering in the Rockies, Brian Boitano and Eric Flaim were America's men for all seasons. Boitano with a gold in figure skating, and Flaim won a silver in speed skating.

And, while Americans could not match the mighty Soviet bloc in medals, they at least had something to talk about besides the weather.

"I got one for the USA," Boitano said Sunday, one day after his victory. "The thought has occurred to me that if we leave with no more gold medals, at least we've got this one."

Flaim, who won his silver in the 1,500 meters, finished Sunday's 10,000 in fourth place. It was Flaim's third No. 4 finish

America had three medals, but its hockey team failed to stay in contention for another one Sunday night, losing to West Germany 4-1 in a game that decided the third and final team advancing from the B pool into the medal round.

The Soviet Union beat Czechoslovakia 6-1 in a rematch of the 1984 gold medal game, and Austria met Norway in the other Group B games.

Poland's best hockey player, Jaroslaw Morawiecki, became the first athlete to test positive for steroids from urine samples taken in the first week of the Games. Morawiecki was banned from the Games, and Poland had to forfeit a victory over France, costing it any chance of winning a medal.

The Soviet Union and East Germany have 26 of the total 66 medals at these Games, including 12 of 22 golds. The Soviets have 16 medals, East Germany 10.

Gustafson, a 1984 gold medalist in the 5,000, won at the same distance last Wednesday in Olympic record time and set a world record in winning Sunday's 10,000 in 13 minutes, 48.20 seconds. The old mark was 13:48.51 by Geir Karlstad of Norway.

"How do you describe happiness?" he asked after his first gold medal. "I will have to write a poem."

Piccard, who already had a bronze in the downhill, challenged Mount Allan's super giant slalom course where others showed caution on the icy, steep hill.

He got such a rough ride, he cracked his helmet open when he hit a gate near the start and slammed his poles into the snow at the finish, fearing the worst. But he was a winner by more than a second over Helmut Mayer of Austria, and he spoiled the return to action of downhill gold medalist Pirmin Zurbriggen and the debut of Italian ace Alberto Tomba.

The Soviets won another gold medal Sunday when their women's cross-country relay team prevailed, tying East Germany with six golds. Four of the Soviet golds are in cross-country skiing, where they have won nine of 15 medals offered so far.

America's next good chance for a medal is Monday when speed skater Bonnie Blair of Champaign, Ill., renews her rivalry with East German Christa Rothenburger in the 500 meters.

Gustafson beat Michael Hadschieff of Austria, a bronze medalist at 1,500 meters, by 7.91 seconds. Leo Visser of Holland, second behind Gustafson in the 5,000, won the bronze.

Piccard's gold was the first in the Olympics for the French men since Killy won three golds in Grenoble before dissension ripped apart the team and destroyed it in the mid-1970s.

"I made lots of mistakes in the upper part, but by the bottom of the race, I was skiing better," Piccard said.

Piccard, a non-winner in five seasons on the World Cup tour, chattered and churned his way through the course, ending in 1 minute, 39.66 seconds. Mayer was 1.3 seconds behind for the silver, and Lars-Boerje Eriksson of Sweden won the bronze.

Boitano wins duel of Brians

Associated Press

CALGARY, Alberta- A fist thrust in the air by an elated Brian Boitano and the pain that pinched the face of Brian Orser told it all.

"It's the ultimate," Boitano said after he beat friend and skating opponent Orser for the gold medal Saturday by a razor's edge, the second straight time the Canadian lost an Olympic title to an American.

The bronze went to up-and-coming Soviet skater Viktor Petrenko.

Orser, choking back his disappointment at a news conference, put on a brave face. "Sure I'm disappointed," he said, "but now I have to focus on Budapest and defend my world championship."

The dramatic showdown of freeskating, performed to each man's choice of military music and battle colors, with Boitano wearing blue and Orser donning red, capped 10 years of competition. Boitano had lost the last two encounters, at Skate Canada last fall and at the 1987 world championships.

The buildup had been intense for a faceoff billed as "The Battle of the Brians," and it clearly weighed heavily on both men. During warmups in the last group for Saturday's long program, both were careful to avoid looking at the other, zipping by with eyes averted.

"This whole week was exhausting like no competition I've ever experienced," said Boitano, 24, of Sunnyvale, Calif. "It was pressure at its ultimate."

When he stepped on the ice, Boitano said, "There was a voice saying, 'This is it. This is it.' And then there was another voice saying, 'Just treat it like another competition. It was a kind of a fight, a tug of war and an exhausting fight.'" again. Tim Osburn scored at 14:02 of the second period, and Joe Mocnik followed with a power play goal less than four minutes later, and the Wolves led 5-2 with one period to play.

McNeill and Montgomery scored in the first two minutes of the third period to close the gap to 5-4, but the Irish could get no closer. Ron Duda scored his team-leading 30th goal at 17:31 of the final period to seal the win for Dearborn.

The Irish had plenty of power-play opportunities throughout the game, but they never could take advantage. Notre Dame went 1-for-7 in the man-advantage situation for the game, and the Wolves also scored during one Irish power play.

Schafer thought the loss of sophomore wings Bruce Guay and Tim Kuehl, who both were sidelined with injuries, might have had something to do with Notre Dame's scoring problems.

"We sorely missed their presence," said Schafer. "They represent 41 of our goals this season. We played well enough to win, but Dearborn played well. They played with a lot of emotion, and they're a good hockey team."

"Everybody gave their best effort," Schafer continued. "I'm disappointed with the loss, but not with the effort. They might have a little more skill than we do right now."

11-3 run to tie the score at 47-47 with 13:54 to play in the game. With the score still tied at 57-57, the Irish outscored the Warriors 14-2 to take a 71-59 lead and put the game away.

Notre Dame clinched the win with a barrage of free throws down the stretch. For the game, the Irish connected on 33 of 42 free throws, a stat that left McGraw pleased.

"It was a great day for us at the line," McGraw said. "It was much better than we had been shooting."

The Irish continue their road swing with a game at Valparaiso on Thursday.

Kuhns, Gavin lead the way as Irish conquer Marquette

By GREG GUFFEY
Sports Writer

In its first meeting with Marquette this season, the Notre Dame women's basketball team coasted to victory behind the career-high 32-point effort of Heidi Bunek.

The host Warriors held Bunek to only 10 points in Saturday's rematch, but the rest of the squad picked up the slack to pace the Irish to a 79-69 victory, their fifth straight win.

With more than 100 of her fans watching, Bunek, a Milwaukee native, shot only 3-8 from the field and 4-8 from the foul line in 32 minutes of action. She eventually fouled out late in the second half.

"She didn't play well," Irish coach Muffet McGraw said. "It was a big homecoming for her. There were a couple hundred of her fans watching and the local television station interviewed her. She was pressing too hard and she got into some foul trouble."

With Bunek struggling, it was time for others to step up and shine for the Irish. Lisa Kuhns poured in a career-high 22 points, hitting six three-pointers, and Sandy Botham scored 19 points, all in the second half.

One of the biggest boosts came from senior co-captain Mary Gavin. She scored a season-high 15 points, but McGraw said it was her leadership that got the team going.

"She played with a lot of intensity," McGraw said. "We were flat and complacent in the first half, but she really got everybody going in the second half. She thought she could pick up some of the slack."

Not only did the Irish complete the season sweep of the Warriors, but they kept alive their NCAA tourney hopes. The win improved their record to 17-6.

"It looks a lot better if we win by 20 points," McGraw said, "but we were on the road and they take that into account."

We think that if we win the next four games we will get in."

Marquette controlled the opening tap and then controlled the entire first half. The Warriors twice built leads of seven at 17-10 and 27-20. The Irish cut the advantage to 36-33 at the half on a Kuhns three-pointer with :50 to play.

"We let them score at will," McGraw said of the first half. "We didn't have any intensity. I was not pleased at all with the first half. That's what happens when you beat a team by 37 points earlier in the season and you're expecting to win again. You're expecting it to happen without working for it."

In the second half, Botham took control. She scored the first six points of the second half to give the Irish a 39-36 lead. Gavin added a basket and Kuhns a three-pointer to boost the lead to 44-36.

The Warriors then went on a

With senior guard Mary Gavin (10) scoring a season-high 15 points, the Notre Dame women's basketball team defeated Marquette 79-69 on Saturday at Marquette. Notre Dame next plays at Valparaiso on Thursday.

UM-Dearborn snaps hockey team's streak in sweep

By STEVE MEGARGEE
Sports Writer

Michigan-Dearborn goalies Mike Klavon and Dave Church stopped just about everything that came their way last weekend.

By the end of the Wolves' series with the Irish hockey team, they had stopped Notre Dame's 14-game winning streak and its chances of gaining the American Collegiate Hockey Association regular season title, as well.

Klavon recorded 37 saves on Friday night and Church followed with 34 saves on Saturday as the Wolves swept Notre Dame 3-1 and 6-4 at Dearborn.

"Their goaltender was exceptionally hot Friday night," said Irish coach Ric Schafer. "We just couldn't get it by their goaltender. We outshot them Saturday too. We just couldn't get the upper hand."

The Dearborn sweep clinched the ACHA regular season title for the Wolves, who sport a 10-1-1 conference record and a 22-13-3 mark overall. Second-place Notre Dame fell to 5-3-2 and 23-4-2. A post-season tournament March 4-5 at Dearborn will determine the ACHA champion.

Dearborn jumped out to an early lead less than four minutes into Friday's contest when Joe Burton converted on a power-play opportunity.

At 14:20 of the first period, Matt Hanzel tied the game on a shot from just inside the right circle. The Irish, who averaged 6.9 goals a game going into the weekend, would not score again on Friday.

Burton, the Wolves' leader in total points, scored his second goal of the evening at 6:12 of the second period to give Dearborn the lead for good.

Ken Chaput added the final goal for the Wolves four minutes later, scoring from close to the same spot as Burton had on his winning goal.

"The defense played pretty well most of the time, but we made a couple of mistakes they jumped on," said Schafer. "It was a hard-fought series."

Notre Dame took several shots from close range during the final two periods, but Klavon managed to make the save every time. Although the Irish outshot Dearborn 25-9 in the final two periods, the Wolves outscored Notre Dame 2-0 during that time.

Church did not enjoy quite as much success on Saturday, but Dearborn's superb penalty-killing unit kept the Irish offense frustrated.

After the first 12 minutes went scoreless, the Wolves scored three goals in less than five minutes to gain a commanding lead. Burton's short-handed goal to open the scoring highlighted the run.

Senior Tom Mooney scored with less than two minutes left in the period to make the score 3-1, and Tom Fitzgerald made it a one-goal game by tallying at 4:31 of the second period.

Riding a four-game winning streak, the Notre Dame basketball team will entertain Creighton tonight at the Joyce ACC. Tip-off is at 7:30 p.m.

The rebuilding Bluejays, billed as 'young but tested' by their media guide, have endured an up-and-down season and have hit some hard times of late. They have lost to Bradley (twice), Illinois State and Wichita State in the last 10 days to drop their record to 13-14 (5-8 in Missouri Valley Conference play).

Senior Rod Mason is Creighton coach Tony Barone's main man. Mason averaged 13.3 points to earn Missouri Valley Conference Newcomer of the Year honors last season after coming from Northeastern Oklahoma A & M junior college.

The 6-3 guard averages 21.2 points and 4.6 rebounds this season.

Creighton's other junior-college transfer is also its other starting guard, James Farr. The 5-10 junior, who attended Northwest Community College, is averaging 13.5 points this year. Both guards are threats from three-point range.

The rest of the Creighton roster is definitely young, all underclassmen, but the probable starting frontcourt, all freshmen, is just in the process of being tested.

Chad Gallagher (6-9) is having a fine rookie year at one forward spot, hitting for 11.4 points and grabbing 5.3 rebounds per contest.

Bob Harstad (6-6, 220 pounds) has been solid as the other forward, averaging 8.2 points and 8.3 rebounds.

Bill O'Dowd, (6-10, 195) has been getting the starting nod at center lately. For the season, he averages 1.8 points and 1.4 boards.

The Bluejays were hurt by the loss of sophomore Todd Eisner, who started at forward last season. Eisner had reconstructive knee surgery earlier this year.

Notre Dame, now at 16-7, is coming off wins against Fordham, UCLA, Rutgers and Dayton as it continues its drive to be included in the NCAA Tournament. With four of the last five games of the year at home, Head Coach Digger Phelps says he is most concerned with getting his team back to where he it should be, and letting the tournament take care of itself.

"We were in a groove after we beat Kansas, then we went into a holding pattern for two weeks with Mark Stevenson out," Phelps says. "Now we want to get back to where we were when we defeated Kansas."

"We just need to get Stevenson back to playing the way he was before his suspension, and get a little more consistency from our inside game, and we'll be fine."

Notre Dame leads the overall series 17-15, and the Irish have won their last two games against Creighton. Benoit Benjamin led the Bluejays to a 60-58 win over the Irish in Omaha during the 1984-85 season.
