Class of 1988 takes a big step forward

Malloy gives degrees for the first time

By MARK PANKOWSKI
Senior Staff Reporter

Notre Dame will see at least two firsts and 2,427 lasts at Sunday's commencement exercises.

It will be the first commencement presided over by University President Father Edward Malloy.

It will be the first time a 16-year-old graduates from Notre Dame.

And it will be the last stage of undergraduate work for 1,873 students and postgraduate work for 554 others.

Atlanta Mayor Andrew Young will address the graduates at commencement ceremonies beginning at 2 p.m. in the arena of the Joyce Athletic and Convocation Center.

Malloy, who is completing his first year as Notre Dame president, will celebrate the Baccalaureate Mass at 5 p.m. Saturday in the South Dome of the JACC.

The University has experienced no early problems preparing for Notre Dame's 143rd commencement, said Richard Conklin, director of public relations and information at Notre Dame.

"We've been though this a lot of times so the planning is pretty fine tuned," said Conklin.

At Sunday's ceremonies, Eunice Kennedy Shriver, founder and chairman of Special Olympics International, will receive the Notre Dame's highest honor, the Laetare Medal.

The University will give honorary degrees to 10 others, ranging from Erich Bloch, director of the National Science Foundation, to Father Bruce Ritter, founder of Covenant House crisis shelters for the homeless and runaway youths.

437 graduate tomorrow at Saint Mary's

By SANDY CERIMELE
Saint Mary's Editor

The undergraduate endeavors of 437 students at Saint Mary's will be celebrated at the 141st commencement exercises this weekend.

One of the world's foremost journalists, Georgie Anne Geyer, will address the class Saturday at noon in the Court of LeMans Hall.

Today's events include the Nurses Pinning ceremony at 1 p.m. in the Church of Loretto and the Baccalaureate Mass, which will be held at 4 p.m. in Angela Athletic Facility. The celebrant will be Bishop John M. D'Arcy of the Diocese of Fort Wayne-South Bend.

The co-valedictorians for the class of 1988 are Joan Mary Boutton, a business major with a concentration in accounting from Westlake, Ohio, and Gretchen Preston Gilcrest, also a business major with a concentration in finance from Mishawaka. This year's class is the second in the history of the College to have co-valedictorians.

This year's honorary degree recipient, Laura Bornholdt, is special assistant to the president and director of the office of university-school relations at the University of Chicago. Bornholdt will receive an honorary doctor of humanities degree for her work in higher education during the past forty years as an administrator and as a member of a variety of foundations and educational support groups.

The College will also award the Lumen Christi Medal, its highest student honor, to a graduating senior. The recipient will be announced at the ceremony.

In the event of inclement weather, ceremonies will be moved indoors, to Angela Athletic Facility.

English professor dies before final exams

Special to The Observer

Professor of English Joseph Duffy died Saturday, April 30, at South Bend's Memorial Hospital, two days before final examinations began.

Duffy, a specialist in 19th and 20th century fiction, taught courses on a variety of literary genres and was among the University's most challenging and popular teachers.

"I want to be a transparent mediator," Duffy once said of his teaching technique, "so a student can look through me without being distracted from the literary work, get his own conception of the work and make it part of himself. Student imaginations are stirred and become large through their contact with literature enabling them to conceive of themselves in finer terms," he said.

Graduated from Columbia University in 1946, Duffy was a Fulbright scholar and received his doctorate from the University of Chicago. He joined the Notre Dame faculty in 1954.

He received the Danforth Foundation's E. Harris Harbison Award for Gifted Teaching in 1971, for two of his most heavily subscribed courses, "Literature and the Imagination" and "Tragedy and Literary Tradition."

Duffy is survived by his mother, Susan Duffy, of South Bend. A funeral Mass was celebrated on May 3 in Sacred Heart Church.

Arthur Decio, University trustee and chief executive officer of Skyline Corporation, has been elected one of twelve University fellows. The fellows include six lay and six religious trustees who are members of the Priests' Society of the Congregation of Holy Cross, are responsible for electing trustees, adopting and amending bylaws, and safeguarding the University's Catholic character. -The Observer

Marty Rodgers, a senior economics major at Notre Dame, has been named the recipient of the Rev. A. Leonard Collins Award by Father David Tyson, vice president for student affairs. The Collins Award, in memory of a Holy Cross priest who served as the University's prefect of discipline from 1957 to 1965, is given annually to a graduating senior for "substantial personal effort to advance the interest of students" at Notre Dame. -The Observer

Father George Minamiki, associate professor of modern and classical languages, has been named the winner of the 1988 Sheedy Award for Excellence in Teaching in the College of Arts and Letters. A faculty-student committee made the award in consultation with Michael Loux, dean of the College of Arts and Letters. The award, endowed by an anonymous donor, has been given annually since 1970 in memory of Father Charles Sheedy, former dean of the College. -The Observer

Father Richard McCormick, O'Brien professor of Christian ethics and one of the country's leading bioethicists, will receive two honorary degrees this month. McCormick will receive a doctor of humane letters from Xavier University on May 14 and Fordham University on May 21. The degrees are his eighth and ninth honorary doctorates. McCormick, a past president of the Catholic Theological Society of America, will also receive the Henry Knowles Beecher Award from the Hastings Center in New York state for "lifetime contributions to ethics and the life sciences." -The Observer

New language department divisions have been approved by the Notre Dame Academic Council. The Department of Modern and Classical Languages will be reorganized into the departments of Classical and Oriental Languages and Literatures, Romance Languages and Literatures, and German and Russian Languages and Literatures. The reorganization will be effected by the fall of 1989. -The Observer

Graduates must apply the past to the future

I have stayed on campus for every Senior Week since I have been a student at Notre Dame. I honestly cannot say that this one has been very different from the others, except for all of the senior-y stuff I had to do (i.e., filling out the epic survey before I could get my graduation tickets).

It's been a pretty good four years. I think everyone had a pretty decent time across the board. And the few who did not probably will find some nice memories to take away with them in the long run. Therefore, I have made a vow not to get too sentimental in this column, although it will be pretty tough to restrain myself.

Graduation is an interesting event. It is supposed to be the culmination of our four years, but I believe that many of us would not mind getting our diplomas in the mail if it were not for our parents and the chance to be with our friends for a few more hours. But you just cannot help feeling sappy at times -- being here for the past four years has made us quite comfortable with the place.

And I believe that is what a lot of the emotion is about, being comfortable with our lives at Notre Dame and Saint Mary's. On a trip to Chicago this past Wednesday, one of my friends was making fun of some others who insist on categorizing all of the "lasts" that we get involved with in these final weeks. With fake tears and maudlin voice, he was satirizing their emotion over taking our "last trip to Chicago." I, like most people laughed at the joke; but I could not help but feel a little twinge when I was reminded that these good times were not going to last forever.

Life at college -- and especially these colleges -- is generally pretty easy. We are surrounded by friends, constantly reminded that the community is here to educate us and help us in good times and bad. These characteristics do not serve only to make the students comfortable with life in this community. Parents who send their children here generally feel comfortable about the sense of Catholic values that surround their children as they come to maturity.

So when the time comes to leave this community, almost everyone involved starts to feel a bit emotional about having to abandon surroundings of the past four years. If our college careers have been like some stage play, we have gotten through the last act and are making our way to the curtain call on closing night. Everyone wants to get together for a final time to celebrate and reminisce about the trials, tribulations, and adulations of the entire production.

But when the urge to get sad about leaving ND and SMC starts to get the best of us, I suggest that we forget about getting too caught up in the emotion of leaving this comfortable environment. We have done what we could with our lives in college; now we have to put all of the training to use. As we prepare to graduate, we should think about the work we are going to do in the future -- the application of our past here.

Commencement speakers set Young 'honored' to speak at Notre Dame

By HEIDI SCHLUMPF
Senior Staff Reporter

Andrew Young, mayor of Atlanta and a spokesman for the civil rights movement, will address an audience of graduating seniors and guests Sunday during Notre Dame's 143rd Commencement.

University President Father Edward Malloy and the Board of Trustees chose Young as this year's speaker from a list of suggestions made by the senior class.

"He is a major spokesman for the black community" and his selection is a step toward efforts to respond to the recently-announced Notre Dame minority policies, Malloy said in a previous interview.

Young's selection came soon after the University's announcement of a plan to increase minority enrollment in the next four years through the formation of a $12 million endowment for minority financial aid.

The selection of Young has brought optimistic reactions from the minority community at Notre Dame. Young will be the second black to speak at a Notre Dame commencement. The first was Vernon Jordan, who addressed the class of 1976.

"Mayor Young is honored to have been selected to be the commencement speaker at Notre Dame," said Nehl Horton, Young's press secretary. "Certainly, Notre Dame is one of the more prestigious institutions of higher learning in America."

Young was out of town and not available for comment.

"The mayor looks on this as a good opportunity to influence the thoughts and ideas of the nation's future leaders," Horton said.

Young was born March 12, 1932, to a middle-class family and grew up in a predominantly Irish and Italian neighborhood in New Orleans, Louisiana. He graduated from a private high school and enrolled in Dillard University in New Orleans. The following year, he transferred to Howard University in Washington D.C. as a pre-med student.

After his graduation in 1951, Young decided to enter ministry. He graduated from the Hartford Theological Seminary in 1955 and was ordained a minister in the United Church of Christ.

Journalist Geyer will praise Saint Mary's

By MIMI TUOHY
Assistant Saint Mary's Editor

High praise for Saint Mary's is in order, according to Georgie Ann Geyer, syndicated columnist and the 1988 commencement speaker at Saint Mary's. "Saint Mary's is the perfect setting to prepare a woman to enter the world and the many challenges it offers. I hope to deliver a message of hope and enthusiasm to the graduating seniors," said Geyer.

Geyer, whose column appears in various newspapers throughout the United States and Latin America, also appears as a regular panelist on the PBS television show "Washington Week in Review." She received an honorary doctor of letters degree from Saint Mary's in 1986.

"I was very lucky because I always knew what I wanted to do. It is very important for the youth of today to decide what it is that they want to do and make a place for themselves in society. Everyone should do something that they enjoy, not something that they are told to do by the rest of society," Geyer said.

After receiving a bachelor's degree from Northwestern University, Geyer worked as a general assignment reporter in her native Chicago. She later worked as a foreign correspondent in various locations, including Central and South America and Middle East and Southeast Asia.

Lapsley named as Senior Fellow

By REGIS COCCIA
News Editor

Professor Daniel Lapsley has been named the 1988 Senior Fellow. Lapsley, was chosen from 10 candidates nominated by graduating seniors, said Diane Fitzgibbon, senior class president.

Lapsley, assistant professor of psychology, won by majority vote over fellow candidates

Lou Holtz, head football coach, Father Andre Leveille, director of campus ministry, Joe Cassidy, director of student activities, Mary Ann Roemer, coordinator for special events and concerns of the Center for Social Concerns, and five others.

"We sent out ballots to every senior and got 500-600 back," Fitzgibbon said. "We got nominations from a bunch of seniors and we looked for people (in the Notre Dame community) who worked with seniors."

Each of the candidates received a large number of votes, Fitzgibbon said.

"I'm really excited about it and Professor Lapsley is very excited, too." Lapsley could not be reached for comment Thursday.

Valedictory: examine past

By LIZ PANZICA
Senior Staff Reporter

Notre Dame Co-Valedictorian Gilberto Marxuach described himself as feeling both anxious and scared about delivering the valedictory address to the graduating class of 1988.

"It's a lot for one person to take on, talking to thousands," said Marxuach, adding that his speech will "share an experience I had four years ago," when he gave his high school valedictory address. In his speech to 84 graduating high school classmates, Marxuach said his theme was forgiveness.

He said his Notre Dame address is a comparison of his high school and college graduation experiences.

In high school, choosing a subject for the valedictory address was easy, Marxuach said, because he knew what had to be expressed. He said he was not able to speak on such a personal level here, because he would have excluded too many. "I'm asking each student to examine his own past," he said.

Marxuach said he discussed his speech with Professors Katherine Tillman and Mark Jordan, of the Program of Liberal Studies. No one was assigned to oversee the writing of the address, but he went to the professors because they were close personal friends, Marxuach added.

Marxuach, a PLS major, shares the honor of valedictorian with Michael Chapski, an English major.

Honorary degrees conferred upon 10

Special to The Observer

Notre Dame will give honorary degrees to 10 persons at its 143rd Commencement exercises on Sunday, May 15.

Also to be honored at graduation ceremonies is Eunice Kennedy Shriver, founder and chairman of Special Olympics International. She will receive the Laetare Medal, Notre Dame's highest honor and the oldest and most prestigious award given American Catholics.

Atlanta Mayor Andrew Young, Jr., the previously announced commencement speaker, will receive a doctor of laws.

Those receiving honorary degrees are:

- Eric Bloch, director of the National Science Foundation in Washington, D.C., will receive a doctor of engineering.
- James Burke, chairman of the board and chief executive officer of Johnson & Johnson in New Brunswick, N.J., will receive a doctor of laws.
- Bishop John D'Arcy, ordinary of the Diocese of Fort Wayne-South Bend, will receive a doctor of laws. While in Boston in the late 1970s as a "regional bishop," D'Arcy directed the Office of Spiritual Development, whose programs reached some 250,000 people.
- Mary Douglas, a British anthropologist and visiting professor in anthropology and religion at Princeton University, will receive a doctor of laws.

- Norman Francis, president of Xavier University in New Orleans, will receive a doctor of laws. Francis has served since 1968 as the president of the only Catholic institution of higher education in the United States with a predominantly black enrollment.

- Bernard Hank, Jr., chairman of the board of the Montgomery Elevator Company in Moline, Ill. and a University trustee, will receive a doctor of laws. He has been active in many civic, charitable, and industrial organizations over the years.

- Linus Pauling, research professor at the Linus Pauling Institute of Science and Medicine in Palo Alto, Ca., will receive a doctor of science. Pauling is an American theoretical chemist and biologist who was awarded the Nobel Prize in chemistry in 1954 for work on intermolecular forces and the 1962 Nobel Peace Prize for organizing scientists over the world in opposition to nuclear testing.

- Father Louis Putz, founder of the Harvest House and Forever Learning Institute enrichment programs for the elderly, Notre Dame graduate and former professor of theology, will receive a doctor of laws.

- Father Bruce Ritter, founder of Covenant House crisis shelters for homeless and runaway youths, will receive a doctor of laws.

SMC survey shows future

By ROSE PIETRZAK
News Staff

A 1987 survey indicates that the graduating seniors at Saint Mary's have bright futures awaiting them after their commencement weekend.

Each year, Sister Jeannette Lester, director of institutional research, polls graduating seniors in April and again in February, after graduation, on graduate preparation, job satisfaction and life expectation. The results of the 1987 survey have just been released.

The Class of '88 was polled recently and will be surveyed again next year.

"The responses on our survey so far this year have been pretty meager," said Jeff Roberts, assistant director of placement services. He said that of accounting and education majors who replied, most have already been placed in jobs or currently finding work assignments.

The responses from the surveys are collected by Lester following the second survey in February and compiled for release the next spring. The surveys' results have provided an outline for a general pattern of graduate activity.

If the graduating seniors follow the patterns of previous classes, about 20 percent will enter graduate school. More than 70 percent of those who attend graduate school will pursue advanced studies, said Roberts.

Of those who pursue graduate studies, more than 25 percent will enter law and MBA programs. Another 25 percent will pursue studies in the arts and sciences, while fewer than five percent will study full-time for other degrees.

Hesburgh still working for Notre Dame

By KENDRA MORRILL
Assistant News Editor

Where does one go after spending 35 years at the helm of the greatest Catholic university in the world? Everywhere, if you're University President Emeritus Father Theodore Hesburgh.

Hesburgh and University Executive Vice President Emeritus Father Edmund Joyce left South Bend on June 11, 1987, in a van, dragging a Chevy behind the van and holding a sign saying "Gary or bust." They did get by Gary, said Hesburgh, and three months, 26 states, 16 national parks and 30 national forests later they came back to the University.

"During that time we did 16,000 miles and didn't put a scratch on the van or the Chevy," he said.

Hesburgh and Joyce came back shortly for the International Special Olympics held at Notre Dame in August, and after that "took off for Alaska in a small plane," Hesburgh said.

"It was a wonderful time. I did the cooking and we both lost 10 pounds," he said. "I'd never cooked before in my life."

"We both drove and stopped along the way and met Notre Dame people almost everywhere," he said.

"It was a wonderful chance to see our country and I came up with the conclusion that, having been in 130 different countries on earth, America's got to be the most beautiful -- not one spot but when you put it all together," Hesburgh said. "It took me 70 years in America to see our own parks and I hope that you younger folks will all get the chance to see them because they're absolutely fabulous."

They got back from their cross-country excursion just in time to see the opening home football game against Michigan State, said Hesburgh.

Then the administrators emeriti were off again -- to Latin America. They began in Mexico and traveled south through through all of Central America and all of South America to Tierra del Fuego in Chile. "the southernmost point on earth before you get to the Antarctic," said Hesburgh.

The two priests wound up in Buenos Aires, Argentina, said Hesburgh, and flew home in time to give the talk at the Heisman Trophy award presentation in New York, at which Notre Dame's Tim Brown received the trophy.

"Then we went off to the Caribbean over Christmas with the QE II (Queen Elizabeth II) to get used to the ship. It was very complicated. It's the biggest ship on earth," said Hesburgh.

Hesburgh returned to New York from the first leg of his ocean voyage on Jan. 2 and flew to Amsterdam for a meeting with the Soviets on human rights, at which an organization was established to monitor human rights in the Soviet Union and in the United States, he said.

"Following that, we went back to New York on the 13th of January and left for around the world," said Hesburgh. Beginning the second leg of their ocean voyage, Hesburgh and Joyce headed south to the Caribbean, across the Panama Canal and up to Los Angeles via Acapulco, Hesburgh said. They then went to Tahiti and Morea and Rorotonga and New Zealand, and then over to Australia "where we did the big cities -- Sydney; Canberra, the capital; Melbourne; Fremantle-Perth, where they had the America Cup races," said Hesburgh.

Aboard the QE II, Hesburgh and Joyce were chaplains. "We had Mass every day and gave homilies every day -- we gave over a hundred homilies on that boat," Hesburgh said. He and Joyce celebrated the full Holy Week services, Hesburgh said.

During the entire voyage, "we distributed close to 10,000 hosts for Holy Communion," he said. "We also did a lot of counseling work. We had five people die, and we helped with that. We had the usual crises one has on a large ship like that. It's like being the chaplain of the Waldorf-Astoria.

"We left on the 13th of January and got back at the end of April," Hesburgh said. He said he and Joyce stopped at 40 ports of call and, including the Christmas cruise, spent 115 days aboard the ship.

Hesburgh and Joyce logged about 50,000 miles during their year abroad, Hesburgh said.

"It was a great year," he said. "I read over 40 books and I wrote a diary every day, so I have about 600 pages of diary that when it gets all typed up has to be edited." The 600 pages "may or may not" become a book. "I just have to see how it comes out. I haven't even read it myself yet," he said.

After going virtually everywhere on earth, then what does Notre Dame's former president plan to do?

Hesburgh said he felt as if a burden had been lifted from him when he stepped down as University president. "When you're president here you're president 24 hours a day," he said. "Every problem is your problem. It's a constant pressure from morning till night. It's wonderful to be free of all that administrative kind of duty.

"The things I'm doing now I love to do," he added.

Grads

Among the 1,873 receiving baccalaureate degrees will be 16-year-old Narciso Jaramillo, the youngest graduate in Notre Dame history.

Jaramillo, an honors math-computing major, said he feels no different from the other graduates.

"I can't see how I would be any different from anyone else, except that I can't drink," said Jaramillo, who plans to study artificial intelligence and computer science at the University of California, Berkeley.

Gilberto Marxuach, a Program of Liberal Studies major, and Michael Chapski, an English major, will be honored as co-valedictorians. Marxuach, who holds a 3.986 grade point average, will deliver the valedictory address.

Minorities have seen change in four years at Notre Dame

By LYNSEY R. STRAND
Staff Reporter

"I've seen such a wide spectrum of change at Notre Dame in my four years here. When I arrived, minority issues were on the back burner," said Lisa Boykin, a black graduating senior.

Last June, a University committee issued a report on minority students which the administration responded to this February by announcing its goal to raise the minority enrollment from 11 to 15 percent in four years and the establishment of a $12 million endowment fund for minority concerns.

"It's great that the University is implementing change, but we must be cautiously optimistic," Boykin said.

Of the 32 black students who started freshman year with her, 25 are graduating this May, Boykin noted. The University's percentage of black undergraduates has grown from two to nearly four percent since her freshman year, she said. The report stated its four-year goal was to reach six percent.

"There are only five black teaching faculty members Notre Dame, one black professor at Saint Mary's and no black women professors at either campus," she added.

Hiring minority faculty is "a problem now being forcibly addressed," said Nathan Hatch, associate dean of the College of Arts and Letters.

Boykin said she thinks the University's minority program is a positive step, but has two flaws. She cited the program's voluntary affirmative action plan to hire more black scholars "leaves almost an escape door to hire women and Asians if they couldn't fill the positions with qualified blacks."

She also criticized Associate Provost Oliver William's appointment to oversee the University's minority program.

"Putting a white in charge is ironic because he is not a minority."

The University has proclaimed 1988-89 as the year of cultural diversity to promote minority awareness. "The student body has to do its job of bridging its gap between minority and majority students," added Boykin.

"In an institution of higher learning, students shouldn't leave here with the same feelings based on ignorance they came here with," said Angie Chamblee, assistant dean of Freshman Year of Studies. "There are individuals at Notre Dame who have stereotypes. We need to educate those to believe diversity is best at the University."

Notre Dame applicants set record

By MAURA KRAUSE
News Staff

The class of incoming freshmen promises to be one of the most qualified, drawn from the largest pool of applicants in the University's history, according to Pat Leonardo, associate director of undergraduate admissions.

This year the Admissions office received nearly 9,700 applications, a figure "about 20 percent ahead of last year which was a record with approximately 7,985 applications," Leonardo said.

The Class of 1992 boasts some of the most impressive test scores to date, with a "the median being in the top 3 percent of their class with a 1250 SAT (Scholastic Aptitude Test) score," he said, but added that Admissions will not have exact statistics on the class until August.

The Admissions office undertook some steps itself to "create interest in the University," Leonardo said. The office "doubled the number of Notre Dame information nights ever offered and generated more correspondence with prospective students," he said.

"With the rising costs of college, more and more students are looking for the most quality for the dollar and Notre Dame looks better and better. In Notre Dame's case, reality is catching up with reputation," he said.

Minority enrollment at Notre Dame is also on the rise. With the Class of '92, "minority enrollment will be the highest ever with a possibility of 13 percent," Leonardo said.

The number of women at Notre Dame is also increasing, he said. Next year's class will number about 1,150 men and about 650 women. Over the next four years, the University will admit 650 women each year, to increase the overall number of female students by about 600, Leonardo said.

New graduates face new obligations

We have closed our books, said our goodbyes and snapped that last photograph of the Dome. Our years at Notre Dame and Saint Mary's are over, just as quickly as they began.

This column is not about all of these things though--all of us are so wrapped up in our own sentiments and memories of college that we do not need another column to remind us of them.

a look ahead

Instead, I want to focus on topics which will be as important at our 25th reunion as they are today: the tremendous responsibilities for which the Notre Dame community has prepared us to undertake and the obligation we have to Notre Dame and Saint Mary's as a sign of thanks for giving us this opportunity to grow during the past four years.

We have a number of choices to make that will affect our individual lives-- marriage and family, career, a new "hometown,"--choices which will be keeping us very busy during the next few years. Life at Notre Dame hopefully has prepared us for these choices, or at least has made us able to adjust to our new situations.

But, the Notre Dame community has done more than prepare us for our individual lives; it has prepared us to affect the lives of many others as well.

In the fields of government, business, medicine, science, engineering, the arts, teaching and other professions, we will be called upon to lead the way. The decisions we make will be based on the education gained during our time at Notre Dame and, equally important, the day-to-day experiences here which will have readied us for our new day-to-day lives.

The standards which the University espouses and the strong community bonds which have been developed while at college here have given us an edge over students at many other universities--but Notre Dame expects that we use these experiences not just for our own gain, but also for the benefit of all society, or at least to contribute to our own smaller portions of the world.

Notre Dame provides the opportunity to learn the importance of contributing back to the causes for which we believe. Most of us have found a way to become involved on this campus or in the South Bend community. Now that we are moving on to new environments, this involvement in the community must continue.

There is a responsibility to do what we can to make a difference in our world--through our individual lives, in our careers and in those community interests in which we strongly believe. This not a responsibility of only Notre Dame and Saint Mary's graduates, but of everyone. However, these are responsibilities which we willingly have learned while at Notre Dame.

There also is the obligation for each of us to contribute back to the Notre Dame and Saint Mary's community.

Even more than the need for financial support, there is the need for us to be aware of what is happening within the Notre Dame community in future years. The university has given us tremendous support--and our first priority as alumni must be to see that Notre Dame is providing ever-expanding opportunities in education, financial assistance and personal development to future students.

Our years at Notre Dame are over but fortunately the memories will live on as we continue our friendships and return to campus for football games and reunions. Even more important than these memories will be the example we set in our new environments--the example of a Notre Dame or Saint Mary's "alum" concerned about their university community, concerned about the world around them and willing to be involved in both.

Scott Bearby is graduating with a B.A. in Government/ALPA and is a writer for the news and Viewpoint departments.

Spirit of Notre Dame will persist

Well it's over. The four year lease with no option to buy has expired. They are kicking us out after four years of hard work, hard play and most importantly, maturing. It hardly seems fair that the Class of 1988 has to move out now from under the shadow of the dome, to a world that is looking for us to be its leaders. Yet it is necessary that Notre Dame ask us to leave. You see this place in northern Indiana, where we all chose to spend the last four years, is a constant source of change and renewal. You can see it every year, as each class moves on so Notre Dame moves on. It is a progression of the spirit of human life, under the guidance of Mary, Our Lady, that best sums up what Notre Dame means.

Brian Broderick
sincerely yours

No words can express the experience of living in a community such as this. No article in The Observer can do justice to the love, warmth and friendship that comes from living at a place like Notre Dame. As we are to go about our separate ways, we begin to look back and relive our memories of the good times and the bad times. We all want to hang on to the experience of being at Notre Dame. As we leave, I only hope than we can bring that experience with us.

Our families should be thanked. We left home and brought with us a sense of community, love and friendship. Here at Notre Dame these qualities were renewed, shaped and made whole through the guidance of our hall staff, faculty administration, and the love that Mary gives to this campus. Without the sacrifice, support and guidance of our parents none of us would be here today. Because they cared, a very special day is upon us.

We all will move on to a world that is full of problems, problems which appear insurmountable. The challenge is to make a difference in this world of ours. Notre Dame has sheltered us in a way from the "real" world. As we graduate we mark the end of one journey and the beginning of another. Our world after Notre Dame will be filled with excitement, challenges and more maturation. We can not be apprehensive about our new beginning. We should attack it with all the verve and anticipation that marked our entry into Notre Dame. As a wise government professor told his graduating seniors, "if you come back here twenty years from now, and you are with your friends at the Grotto and you say 'those were the best years of my life', then you just wasted the last twenty years of your life. Your future is now. The best years of your life are ahead of you."

All of us will have different memories of Notre Dame, from Bridget's on a Friday night to a football Saturday to a stroll around the lake with your favorite guy or gal. We came here from different backgrounds and formed a family. Notre Dame gave us more than a academic education, it gave us the opportunity to grow both spiritually and intellectually. We have all made friends here that we will never forget. We were renewed by the spirit of Notre Dame. Now, Our Lady asks us to go forth and live our lives according to the Christian principles that we were taught here. We are asked to live a life of unconditional love, of unbounded giving and of peace. It is time for Notre Dame to renew itself. We should leave with happiness in our hearts and thankfulness for the opportunity to live in such a special place. If we live with the spirit of Our Lady in our hearts we will live happy lives.

Malloy bids farewell to Class of 1988

Dear Members of the Class of 1988:

These are busy days for you and the members of your family who are visiting the campus. Four years can pass quickly, especially in an invigorating environment like Notre Dame. Great changes have taken place in each of your lives over the course of these years. I know that many of the friendships you have made will last forever.

Notre Dame has its own special traditions, sights, and smells. You have become familiar enough with the campus to call it your own. The Dome and the Grotto, the Hesburgh Library and the Joyce ACC, the Bookstore and the road to Saint Mary's--these are reminders of the people of Notre Dame who are so precious to all of us.

On behalf of all of us here at the University who have served you for these four years I pray for your well-being and happiness in coming years. May you find satisfaction in your work and good friends to comfort and support you. May you never stop learning and may you bring a compassionate heart to a world that suffers many pains.

I hope to have the opportunity to welcome you back to the campus frequently. You are now a full-fledged Domer, and may this be both a reward for four years of hard work and a sign of the responsibility you now bear.

Brown wins Heisman with surprising ease

By DENNIS CORRIGAN

NEW YORK The surprise of the 53rd annual Heisman Trophy award ceremony was that there was no surprise. Notre Dame's Tim Brown, despite a record week which made him a sudden underdog to win Saturday night's trophy, won the award by a landslide.

1 Brown is tops

It was a runaway. Irish flanker Tim Brown finished 611 points ahead of Syracuse quarterback Don McPherson in the balloting to become Notre Dame's seventh Heisman Trophy winner as college football's best player. Brown holds Irish career records for pass receptions, kickoff return yards, combined kick and punt return yards and all-purpose yards. He returned three punts for touchdowns in 1987, leading Notre Dame to an appearance in a major bowl for the first time since 1981.

Brown finished the year with 11,000 yards of offense and seven touchdowns. He was named the National Player of the Year by both the Walter Camp Foundation and Scripps Howard News Service. Garrett heading to NCAAs

By BRIAN O'GARA
Sports Writer

Notre Dame's Dan Garrett is once again en route to the NCAA Championships.

The senior pulled off a surprising sixth-place finish at the NCAA Cross Country Championships last fall, and will make a run at another all-America performance at the NCAA Outdoor Track Championships in June. The senior from Clarence Center, N.Y., qualified for the NCAAs in the 5,000 meters at a meet last month at Stanford with a school-record time of 13:53:52. The NCAA qualifying time for the 5,000 meters is 13:57:00. Garrett then re-qualified for the NCAAs at the Penn Relays with a 13:57:97 and a third-place finish.

"Dan has had a really solid year across the board," said Irish track coach Joe Piane. "He's a great leader, was sixth in cross country and is one of the top 5,000 runners in the country. I have high expectations for him at the NCAAs."

Though a senior, Garrett retains a year of eligibility after sitting out his sophomore year with an injury. He hopes to be accepted into Notre Dame's graduate program and pursue a M.S.A. degree while running next year.

Garrett has been hampered recently by tendonitis in the knee which he suffered in a post-Penn Relays workout. "I was running some of the hills out there during a workout after the relays when I hurt the knee," recalled Garrett. "There are no hills in Indiana so I guess my legs were a little surprised to be doing that stuff."

"But I've got some time--the NCAAs are still a long way off."

Before the NCAA Championships, which will be held in Eugene, Oregon, Garrett and 16 teammates will travel to the IC4A Championships in Philadelphia next weekend. More Irish runners will have an opportunity to qualify for the IC4As this weekend at the Illinois Twilight Invitational in Champaign, Ill.

Among those going to the IC4As are some who hope to join Garrett at the NCAAs. According to Piane, senior Tom Mick (hammer), senior Rick Mulvey (steeplechase), sophomore Mike O'Connor (5,000 meters) and freshman Ryan Mihalko (javelin) all have a shot at the NCAAs with a good showing in Philadelphia.

More top sport stories

Special To The Observer

The 1987-88 school year had its share of major sports stories as more than a few teams posted record-breaking seasons.

Though not among The Observer's list of top five sports stories of the year, these teams and moments should be recognized as among the year's best stories.

The soccer team fell just short of its goal to make the NCAA Tournament but had its best season ever none the less. The Irish finished 17-3-1 including a 4-3 overtime win over Indiana, which held the top spot in national polls for several weeks of the season.

Notre Dame made its first appearance ever in a soccer Top 20 poll, but these accomplishments would not pull weight with the NCAA selection committee which snubbed the Irish when tourney invitations were extended.

The Irish hockey team had a banner season in its first year under head coach Ric Schafer. The Irish went a school-record 27-4-1 and won the American Collegiate Hockey Association championship. It was the team's first winning season in three years, and as the wins mounted so did the attendance figures at home games. More than 25,000 people saw the Irish play at home.

Another first-year coach led her squad back to its winning ways. Muffet McGraw coached the Irish to a 20-8 record which included a 78-66 victory at 17th-ranked Duke.

The win was the first ever against a Top 20 team. Notre Dame led the nation in field goal shooting from the beginning of the season to the end behind the strong inside game of Heidi Bunek and Sandy Botham. Botham and point guard Mary Gavin finished their careers as all-time Notre Dame leaders in several categories. Despite the renewed success, two close losses to North Star Conference rival DePaul may have cost the Irish a post-season bid.

In the madness called Bookstore Basketball XVII, the Adworks All-stars, led by tournament MVP Gary Voce, topped Tequila White Lightning 21-18 to capture the title.

The all-weather, month-long tournament once again grew to a record number of teams, this time consisting of 666 teams of contenders and pretenders.

The Notre Dame men's basketball team had an up-and-down season but still captured its fourth-straight NCAA Tournament bid. SMU knocked out the Irish (20-9) in the first round of the East Regional 83-75. Along the way, the Irish upset Louisville and eventual National Champion Kansas. David Rivers became the third player in Notre Dame history to score more than 2,000 points, ending his college career as the third-leading scorer in team history with 2,058 points.

Knight weighs move decision

Associated Press

BLOOMINGTON Thousands of Indiana University basketball fans rallied on campus Thursday in an attempt to persuade Coach Bob Knight not to leave for the vacant head coaching job at the University of New Mexico. Meanwhile New Mexico officials, who originally hoped to announce the name of a new coach by Friday, said negotiations likely will continue until next week.

Knight, talking to reporters before speaking Thursday night at a sports banquet, indicated he had not made up his mind whether he would leave Bloomington.

"I have not made a decision like that since I've been at Indiana," Knight said. "It's time to make that kind of decision. It's a personal decision. I'll have to leave it at that. I'm not going to get into the whys or wherefores. I've got to make it in the next couple of days."

"That's a part of the country that I enjoy very much," said Knight.

Joe Duffy: A Second-Hand Friend

On Saturday mornings, I have a program called "The Children's Hour," on WSND-FM radio. Two weeks ago, when Professor Duffy of the English department died, the program lost its most faithful listener.

put on their galoshes. Joe, I'm told, enjoyed being told how he should prepare himself to face the day outside. On Saturdays when I was away, he was impatient for me to get back, to give him advice.

Father Robert Griffin

Letters to a Lonely God

Joe Duffy never told me that he tuned in regularly to a radio broadcast which features a gallery of characters ranging from Pooh-bear and Christopher Robin, Mr. Toad and Mr. Badger from "Wind in the Willows," to Aslan the Lion-Lord of Narnia, Tolkien's hobbits and Saint-Exupery's Little Prince. As a matter of fact, Joe Duffy never told me anything, because we were not personally acquainted, though we once had Thanksgiving dinner together as guests at the same dinner table.

Many years ago, when the Scholastic solicited Joe's opinion, "Inter Alia," on campus life during the Vietnam era, he declined comment except for a quote from a poem: "Caged bird no sing." Why he felt caged, I no longer remember; but from that time on, I regarded him as a sensitive, reticent human being whose privacy must be respected.

"I don't know if he ever respected me, but I trust that he did not refuse me his good will or affection."

Seeing him riding his bicycle on campus, or at lunch in the pay caf, I nodded at him, he nodded at me. Though I kept hoping to find him free of this cage, willing to sing, or at least to talk, it never happened. I grieved at this death, because the caged bird, leaving, took his song with him, and now I will never hear it.

Ten years ago, when he heard I was reading "omnibus opera" of Charles Dickens, he sent me a collection of figures: Mrs. Gamp, Uriah Heep, Mr. Micawber and other characters from Dickens. He sent them through a mutual friend, with specific directions that he did not want to be thanked. It seemed clear to me that the caged bird was embarrassed by gratitude.

Yet I spoke to Joe every Saturday on the radio. When you do a program, you're never sure if anyone is listening. I knew Joe always listened, because his close friends told me so. Joe became the audience I was talking to, especially at the end of the hour, when I advised the "children" to dress warmly or lightly, or

Was he aware that I knew he was listening? I have never heard. The feedback from him came to me second-hand. He was unhappy when I changed versions of "The Teddy Bears' Picnic," the theme song with which the program opens. He didn't like the new version, and was annoyed with me for making a switch. This news blew my mind. Here was this scholarly professor with the I.Q. of a genius, a noted authority on Jane Austen and Dickens, a teacher of courses in meta-fiction

This impossible, charming curmudgeon got himself bent out of shape because I replaced the King Cole arrangement of "Teddy Bears" with the King's Singers' arrangement. Caged bird took his teddy bears to heart!

I was aware, too, that Joe Duffy read this column weekly; and at times, he expressed his annoyance at the sanitized picture of the world I painted. Knowing that the caged bird was monitoring my articles, out of respect for Joe as an urbane reader, I have tried to leave out silliness and sentimentality which would cause him to wince in visible pain.

His death was a disappointment. I always hoped we would be together for another Thanksgiving meal, which we would leave as cronies who got together to talk once a week. He knew so much that I need to hear; maybe I could have told him something cheerful that would relieve his pain. His pain was obvious, even from a distance. I suspect he was pained because he felt that losers, or phonies, or second-raters, or crooks, or blockheads, or the blind leading the blind, or unworthies of one kind or another were in charge of the visible universe, and maybe he was unhappy with God for leading them there.

It's strange that I'm writing this, since I wasn't acquainted with Joe. From a long distance away, I thought the world of Joe Duffy, the friend I knew second-hand through people we were both close to. I am writing this to make the sadness go away.

On Saturday's "Children's Hour," perhaps I can report clear skies for the Commencement weekend. Joe, listening on a crystal set in heaven, will understand that I'm reporting to him.

Graduating Magna Cum Laude, majoring in Math and Computing, and going on to graduate school are not uncommon events for a graduating college senior. They are extraordinary, however, when the graduate is 16 years old.

Narciso Jaramillo, from Rialto, California, is graduating Magna Cum Laude with a major in Honors Math and Computing. Narciso came to Notre Dame in the fall of 1984, just one month after his thirteenth birthday.

Narciso learned to read at eighteen months. He started school a year early and then skipped the third, fourth, and sixth grades as well as his senior year in high school.

"My parents never really pushed me," says Narciso. "When I was little, whenever I was bored, they gave me stuff to learn. They only did so if they thought I could, or wanted to, handle it. There was never any pressure."

Narciso does not feel that he missed his childhood by starting school so early. "I'm just doing what I think is right rather than worrying about not having done it," observes Narciso. "I would rather worry about not having a 'normal' childhood."

Narciso comes from a close family. His father is a director of information systems at a company in California and his mother is a homemaker. Narciso's sister is earning her master's degree in Literary Criticism at New York University.

Notre Dame took Narciso under its wing when he first arrived here. Father McCell, Rector of Cavanaugh, observed Narciso at his arrival. "Narciso struck me as being very mature for a 13-year-old. He fit in very well. He was the center of attraction for awhile, but after that, everything was normal."

Narciso Jaramillo

Those first days at Notre Dame were not as eventful as one may imagine. The biggest problem, he recalls, was trying to deal with people. "Entering college was a bit different for me, rather than a 17 or 18-year-old. I had to learn how to deal with people and not take things so seriously," says Narciso. "You've got to remember, I was a normal 13-year-old."

After the initial shock of his age wore off for his fellow classmates and dormmates in Cavanaugh Hall, Narciso says people treated him normally. "The first two years here, however, I kept to myself a lot. By junior year, I relaxed and got mellow", he says. "Now, most of my close friends are here, not at home anymore."

In retrospect, Narciso observes, "It seems the University watched me more than I was aware of at the time. Everyone thought I was very mature. I really wasn't. I faked it for awhile."

As the time for leaving approaches, Narciso contemplates his life here. "I am very glad that I decided to come here, this being the University that it is. The people I've met here are so cool—that is really not a good word—but it says it. People accepted me here, they didn't try to isolate me. At another University, I would have gotten a different reaction."

Narciso plans on continuing his education at the University of California at Berkeley in the fall. He received a three-year tenure fellowship there and plans to continue Computer Science and Artificial Intelligence Research. He will also hold a graduate student teaching position. At Berkeley, he hopes to earn a Masters Degree and get his PhD. He would ultimately like to work in the corporate world involved on research.

Narciso plans on returning to Notre Dame soon. "I'll definitely come back for a football game," he says. "I'll come back in the plaid pants, singing the fight song at the fifty-yard line." No more need be said.

A Raising of Spirits

accent writer

After four years of Notre Dame living, this graduating senior ponders, "What is the one word that describes life under the Dome?" The answer: Spirit reigns supreme at Notre Dame.

It flows through all special and everyday events here. Spirit is what makes the people and the place. And once the two meet, they are never the same. It is in this meeting of spirits that gives Notre Dame its essence. Notre Dame is rejuvenated year by year by new freshmen faces and continual alumni pilgrimages.

The Spirit of Notre Dame is most professed in its Catholic tradition: the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit. At Notre Dame, student faith is evident in the interest in dorm masses and participation in choirs at Sacred Heart Church.

Another spirit honored at Notre Dame is the famous Fightin' Irish football Spirit. This March, President Reagan, who played Notre Dame legend George Gipp, honored another legend Coach Knute Rockne, "Who did more spiritual good than a thousand preachers."

In his speech commemorating the Rockne Memorial Stamp, Reagan called to Rockne's great faith. "On or off the field, it is faith that makes the difference. It is faith that makes things happen."

A powerful moment descended upon the South Dome of the Joyce ACC almost four years ago. Parents were asked to raise their hands and invoke their blessing over their new-fledged freshmen sons and daughters. This spiritual act symbolized the parents' sending off their children to the Notre Dame life.

Notre Dame's legendary School Spirit is intricately linked to her Sports Spirit. Even the International Special Olympics made its way to Notre Dame last summer. The Spirit of Legends calls these names to mind: Hesburgh, Joyce, Moose, Rockne, and the Four Horsemen. The Gipper is not only football legend, but a spirit in Notre Dame lore. The ghost of George Gipp is said to roam Washington Hall.

Our Lady, Mary, raises her hands over all at Notre Dame. Symbolically, the Spirit is invoked in the raising of hands. The Sacred Heart statue raises its hands to Our Lady, atop of the Golden Dome. "Touch Down Jesus" raises his hands over Knute Rockne's stadium to hail the winning play. The 132-foot library stone mosaic is patterned after Millard Sheet's "Word of Life" painting. Jesus calls us to search for the truth. Students raise the hands in class in hopes for the truth.

The raising of hands is combined in the raising of voices during Notre Dame football games. A blanket of hopeful spirit falls upon the stadium as Irish fans raise their arms and shake their hands to the monotone hum of "Ahmmmm." The invoking of the Fighting Irish Spirit sounds like an ancient Celtic chant.

The raising of voices calls the Spirit of Notre Dame, whether in the sports crowd's chanting "We are, ND. We are, ND."

Strong loyalty to Notre Dame embodies her Spirit. Along with her teams, Notre Dame's students, alumni and fans display their fierce Fightin' Irish Spirit by their resolute conviction to carry on the fight. "What though the odds be great or small? Old Notre Dame will win over all."

Perhaps, during our Baccalaureate Mass on Saturday, our parents will be joined by Notre Dame's clergy, officers and faculty in sending us off into life by again raising their arms and invoking their blessing. Again, we will be under the invoking of the Spirit. The Spirit of Notre Dame will always sparkle in their hearts and inspire them to bring love into their lives.

Campus golf course due for summer renovations

By MARTY STRASEN
Sports Editor

Student play always has been the top priority at Notre Dame's Burke Memorial Golf Course. That's not changing.

But the course itself is on the move, as added funds and a little more attention should be providing students with better golfing and the school with more revenue from its 18-hole course in the near future.

"We're doing some things to make it more enjoyable," said Sally Derengoski, who took the post of director of operations last year.

Dale Getz began as course superintendent last year, and works with Derengoski on a daily basis under the authority of Dr. Tom Kelly of Non-Varsity Athletics. The Athletic Department began running the course two-and-a-half years ago under former Athletic Director Gene Corrigan.

"Gene Corrigan decided we could make some major course improvements to accomplish two things," Derengoski said. "It gives the students a better golf course, and also makes the course a better revenue source. Hopefully we can attract more public golfers over the summer months, because public golfing is our main source of revenue."

An $80,000 project to rebuild all the tees and implement a computer-controlled irrigation system was one of the first improvements.

"We started that a year ago," Getz noted. "There are 18 new tees in play this year, and automatic irrigation on the tees and greens. That's a big help. If you can't control water, you're going to have problems. Now we can do that by pushing a few buttons.

The Observer / Dan MacDonald

Burke Memorial Golf Course will undergo several improvements over the summer and coming years.

"We also re-landscaped the No. 1 tee. Most golf courses will tell you that the first tee is always in the worst shape, because that's where traffic backs up the most. We've redesigned it so traffic is filtered around the tee area instead of over it."

Other projects in the works include "edging" and replacing sand in the sand traps, and the replacement of hundreds of trees which have been lost to disease over the years.

"Trees have been lost by the hundred without a major replanting," Getz said. "Last fall we planted 40 and 10 more this spring. I'd like to plant 40-50 trees a year for at least five or 10 years.

"There are so many things you can do with trees to make the course more strategic. We hope to make it more challenging for the better golfer, without discouraging the novice or the student who hasn't played much by making it too difficult an experience. We feel we can make a course like that."

A bridge will be built in mid-summer over an area on the seventh fairway which collects most of the course's water, Getz added.

"It all starts with (University Vice President) Fr. (William) Beauchamp," Derengoski said. "He recognizes that, as a business venture, this is a great opportunity. And when you can do something like that and also provide the students with a better service, it's worth putting some money into."

The Pro Shop in Rockne

teams are pretty tough, and Evansville will be especially hard to beat. But in a double-elimination tournament and with only four teams, we've got a great shot at it.

"We realize now that we can win and the chemistry is there. We believe in ourselves, and we're going to be a tough team for people to beat."

Since final exam week, the Irish have swept five twinbills in five days. Notre Dame swept Valparaiso twice, Tri-State and Illinois-Chicago in addition to Ball State.

Notre Dame faces the University of Chicago in a doubleheader on Tuesday in the final regular-season games.

everything fell into place."

Pat Pesavento led off the sixth inning with a triple and scored on a single by Steve Skupien to give Piotrowicz all the support he needed from the plate.

Tim Hutson, Dan Peltier and Ed Lund each homered for Notre Dame in the first game. The Irish play host to the four-team MCC tournament one week from today, the winner of which earns a spot in the NCAA Regionals. Notre Dame opens against Butler, while Detroit and Evansville meet in the first game at Jake Kline Field Friday. The Saturday and Sunday games of the double-elimination tournament are scheduled for Coveleski Stadium.

"We are really excited about having the opportunity to host the conference tournament," Murphy said. "The chance to win a conference title has been what we have been working for all year. From what I understand, Evansville is loaded. We know how tough Detroit is from our earlier series. We were able to beat Butler twice early on in the year, but each one of those games was a dogfight."

"We're really confident right now," Piotrowicz said. "It's going to be tough to win the MCC tournament. All the ball every year we were here, led by another of our classmates, David Rivers.

Rivers' graduation is itself a near miracle considering that at the halfway point of his and our college years, he lay in a hospital near death. He and the Irish came back from that brink, upsetting three top 20 teams in the span of a month, beginning with one of the greatest moments we saw - an upset of top-ranked North Carolina.

The Observer / Trey Raymond

From a mishandled kickoff in the opener in 1984 memories the Class of 1988 takes with them after returning punts for touchdowns, Tim Brown's graduation. Dennis Corrigan looks back at four Heisman Trophy chase is one of the many fond years of Irish athletics beginning on page 20.

In the past four years, the women's basketball team went from regional heavyweight to the brink of national recognition. Yes, two seniors, Mary Gavin and Sandy Botham were instrumental in this rebirth. Often overlooked, this squad began to assert itself as more than just the "other" basketball team on campus.

Our first fall under the Dome was also the first fall for Art Lambert and Dennis Grace. Over the course of our stay, they brought the volleyball and soccer teams to the edge of the national scene. Both squads have put together back-to-back record seasons. While Lambert's squads made double-figure winning streaks the norm, Grace's teams were pulling off upsets of perennial powerhouse Indiana. But if you had to use one word to describe these teams, it would be "snubbed." Both teams deserved post-season berths but were denied.

Fran McCann was also a rookie coach when the Class of 1988 arrived on campus. Steadily, McCann's records rose, culminating this year with school-record six berths in the NCAA Wrestling Championships. Another surprising NCAA bid this year went to the Irish Cross Country squad under Joe Piane. In our sophomore year, the two-mile relay team of John McNelis, Robert Nobles, Jeff Van Wie and Jim Tyler set a school record time of 7:21.11, the sixth-best time in NCAA history.

On a different kind of court, the men's and women's tennis teams kept on rolling. The end of one era ended when Tom Fallon, who coached the squad for 32 seasons, retired after last year but under new head coach Bob Baylis, the team has shown no signs of departing from the winning legacy of Fallon's squads.

There were two squads which didn't need to wake up any echoes - the men's and women's fencing teams. In fact they were responsible for two National Championships. They posted the best records of any Irish squads in continuing their long winning tradition. Molly Sullivan captured two individual titles.

Another team that put wins on ice was the Irish hockey team. When we arrived in 1984, the team had just been re-elevated to varsity status. After three years of struggling, the squad put together its finest season ever under new head coach Ric Schafer. Another new coach is still in the process of completing his squads' finest season. Pat Murphy has his Irish baseball team riding a 13-game winning streak heading into next week's Midwestern Collegiate Conference playoffs. The winner advances to the NCAA Tournament.

The seniors of 1988 were present at a time when Notre Dame's athletic programs emerged from the long shadow cast by the successes of football teams past. They are shaking down their own thunder and creating echoes for future teams to wake. It's been an exciting time.

Oh, and don't feel too bad for that freshman who fumbled on his first chance. Unless you slept through your four years, you know how his story ended - in a Heisman Trophy.

Holtz to host call-in show in the fall

Associated Press

Irish head coach Lou Holtz will host his own weekly call-in radio show about Notre Dame football beginning in September, it was announced Wednesday.

"The Lou Holtz Show" will air on 13 consecutive Tuesday nights starting Sept. 6 on the Mutual Broadcasting System.

The hour-long show, featuring opposing coaches, players and Holtz' own players as guests, will be broadcast live via satellite from South Bend. Larry Michael, director of sports for Mutual, will serve as co-host from the network's studios in Arlington, Va.

Callers from around the country will be able to talk with Holtz by dialing a toll-free number.

The 51-year-old Holtz is entering his third year as coach of the Fighting Irish.

ND baseball signs eight prep stars

Special to The Observer

Eight high school seniors have signed national letters of intent to play baseball at Notre Dame next season.

The eight signees are: Joe Binkiewicz, a pitcher from Wintersville High School in Wintersville, Ohio; Bob Cataldo, an infielder from Dowling High School in Norwalk, Iowa; Brian Conway, a pitcher from Cathedral High School in Indianapolis; Craig Counsell, a third baseman from Whitefish Bay High School in Whitefish Bay, Wisc.; Jason Martinez, a second baseman from Richland High School in Richland, Wash.; Cory Mee, an infielder from Central High School in Hilton, N.Y.; Korey Wroblewski, a catcher from LaPorte High School in LaPorte, Ind.; and Joe Zebrowski, a pitcher from Colonia High School in Colonia, N.J.

"We have some outstanding student-athletes coming in next year and a few of them should get a chance to play very quickly," said first-year Irish coach Pat Murphy. "We believe that this group of freshmen will give us a solid foundation to build on over the next four years."

"At the same time, while I am pleased with our recruiting efforts, we have to realize that we still have a long way to go in developing a more competitive baseball program. We still have to work hard every day to develop a better team, but this recruiting class is getting us closer to where we want to be."

WAC wants Bobby Knight

Associated Press

DENVER - Western Athletic Conference coaches and executives alike say they would welcome Bob Knight as the new University of New Mexico basketball coach because it would bring increased exposure and credibility to the league.

"I'd give my right arm to see him come into our league," said Wyoming coach Benny Dees on Wednesday. "I've never coached against him before but I'd love to give it a shot. Having Bobby Knight come in would just be a great boost."

"He's one of the greatest coaches this game's ever seen and I think maybe a change would be good for him. He's done everything he can do at Indiana," said Utah's Lynn Archibald.

"He's been a great influence in my life," said Colorado

State's Boyd Grant. "I have great respect for him as one of the best teachers in the game."

Grant said the defensive philosophy he used to take his Rams to the National Invitation Tournament this spring was greatly influenced by Knight's book, "Let's Play Defense."

"He's an exceptional coach... there's no question he'd bring publicity to the WAC 8 and certainly to New Mexico," said Brigham Young's Ladell Andersen.

Air Force's Reggie Minton said Knight would "bring a lot of notoriety to the league because he's a marquee name and a great coach."

Despite Knight's history of exasperating administrators, WAC commissioner Joe Kearney said Knight would be a positive presence in the league.

ND's Fallon selected

Special to The Observer

Former longtime Notre Dame men's tennis coach Tom Fallon is one of seven new members to be inducted into the Collegiate Tennis Hall of Fame on May 24, announced the International Tennis Coaches Association recently.

The group will be enshrined at the annual Hall of Fame banquet in Athens, Ga.

Fallon amassed a 517-200 record in his 31-year career as head coach of the Fighting Irish. In only his third year at the helm Notre Dame shared the National Championship with Tulane on the strength of its 14-0 season.

Fallon guided the Irish to another unblemished record in 1966, capturing the first of three consecutive Eastern Collegiate Championships as the Notre Dame program continued to gain respect on the national level. In 1971, following its first 20-win campaign (26-5), Notre Dame was selected as host for the NCAA Championships.

Twenty-victory seasons became the rule rather than the exception under Fallon. In 1980

Notre Dame posted its best regular-season finish since 1966, going 20-3 and earning its fifth Eastern Collegiate crown. A 17-12 mark in 1985 ended a string of six consecutive 20-win seasons, but Fallon closed out his career by going 22-9 in 1986 and 23-10 in 1987, his final season at the helm. All told, he suffered through two losing seasons in 31 years as coach.

His retirement following the 1987 season ended an association with Notre Dame which goes back to 1938, when he enrolled as a freshman. Upon graduation, the native of Long Island, N.Y., native spent four years as a Navy officer during World War II. After gaining his master's and doctoral degrees in physical education at Columbia, Fallon returned to his alma mater.

In 1969 he was named chairman of the physical education department and subsequently gave up his duties as wrestling coach. He currently holds the rank of associate professor and is the director of activities in the Rockne Memorial Fieldhouse.

CeCe Cahill, the Volvo Rookie of the Year in the Midwest, heads to Los Angeles to compete in the NCAA Championships. Cahill is Notre Dame's first female tennis player to be invited to the NCAA Championships at the Division I level.

Cahill gets bid to NCAA tourney

By BRIAN O'GARA
Sports Writer

On May 6, Notre Dame women's tennis player CeCe Cahill finished her final exams as a freshman at Notre Dame, then discovered that had been chosen to take a test of a different sort.

On that day, Cahill received an invitation to the fitting conclusion to her outstanding freshman season—the NCAA Championships. The 64-player tournament, which will feature the top four players from each region of the country, gets underway Monday in Los Angeles.

En route to becoming the first Irish player to reach the NCAA Tournament at the Division I level, Cahill was named Midwest Rookie of the Year by Volvo and is in the running with seven other freshmen for national Rookie of the Year honors. She is currently ranked 52nd among Division I players in the latest national VolvoITCA poll.

The Hinsdale, Ill., native is ranked third in the VolvoITCA Midwest rankings behind two Indiana players. Her 36 wins on the season set a school record, eclipsing Susie Panther's record of 34 set during the 1983-84 season.

And she's just a freshman. "I'm very excited for CeCe," said Notre Dame women's tennis coach Michele Gelfman. "I think she is very deserving of the bid and she's proven it this year."

"It's been a challenge for her to juggle the pressures of being a freshman, the academic workload and the responsibility of being the No. 1 player on the team, but she's handled it very well."

Cahill will be seeking to improve on her showing in another top-flight tournament in the fall, the Rolex Regional qualifier, where she had an early exit after dropping her first-round match.

"I think CeCe has learned a lot this year," continued Gelfman. "The experience of going to the Rolex Qualifier will benefit her at the NCAAs. She's more aware of the level of competition and the effort it takes to succeed."

Notre Dame signs six for hockey

Special to The Observer

Six high school seniors have signed national letters of intent to attend Notre Dame and play hockey, marking the first hockey scholarships offered by the Irish in five years.

The signees are: Lou Zadra, a left wing from Catholic Memorial High School in Stoughton, Mass.; Mark McClew, a right wing from Upper Canada College in Toronto, Ontario; Pat Arent, a center from Lourdes High School in Rochester, Minn.; David Bankoske, a center from Nichols High School in Buffalo, N.Y.; Mike Curry, a center from John Marshall High School in Rochester, Minn.; and Kevin Patrick, a defenseman from Deerfield (Mass.) Academy and a resident of Schenectady, N.Y.

"We have some very good players coming in next year and I think they can contribute right away," said first-year Irish coach Ric Schafer, who led Notre Dame to a best-ever 27-4-1 record last season. "I'm very pleased that we now have scholarships to offer. We didn't find out until mid-December that we would be in that situation, so a lot of other schools really had a head start on us last year in that respect."

looks to be a permanent one, although Holtz said he could line the sophomore up at tail-back on any given play. Watters has the hands and all the natural talent to be very productive at the flanker position.

Converted strong safety Pat Eilers and senior Aaron Robb are backing up Watters. Robb caught a 25-yard pass in the Blue-Gold game.

The split end job is up for grabs. Ray Dumas missed the spring because of a knee injury, and sophomores Bobby Carpenter and Pierre Martin each saw work at split end. Pat Terrell was moved to the defensive secondary early in the spring, so it looks to be a three-way battle for the No. 1 position there.

Carpenter spent the most time with the No. 1 unit, while Martin made the best catch of the spring in a mid-session scrimmage as he held onto a ball while a D'Juan Francisco hit sent him somersaulting.

Sophomore Frank Jacobs has taken over for Heck. The 6-5, 234-pound Jacobs has the size and skill to enhance Notre Dame's offensive attack, and will be backed up by 6-5 senior Mike Brennan, who missed the Blue-Gold game because of an injury suffered earlier that week. Jacobs caught one pass in the contest.

Offensive Line -This has been the trouble spot all spring for Holtz' squad, which lost four fifth-year seniors from last season. The defense took advantage of the inexperience up front on offense and dominated most of the spring scrimmages.

"The possibility exists that all five of the starters on the offensive line will be at positions that are new to them," said Holtz, who spent much of the spring looking for the right combination up front.

Heck (6-6, 246 pounds) looks to start at one tackle, while Dean Brown (6-2, 283), Marty Lippincott (6-5, 293) and Peter Rausch (6-6, 244) are strong candidates for the other tackle spot.

Three players have spent time at center this spring. Former guard and long-snapper junior Tim Grunhard (6-3, 283) could play either center or guard, while sophomores Mike Heldt (6-4, 265) and Tim Ryan (6-4, 240) also have snapped the ball.

The guard candidates include returning starter junior Jeff Pearson (6-2, 254) and possibly Grunhard if he stays at guard. Junior Jim Dadiotis (6-2, 237), sophomore Winston Sandri (6-4, 247) and junior Ted Healy (6-4, 263) are also in the hunt for playing time at guard.

DEFENSE

Defensive Line -The defensive line has had less trouble than its offensive counterpart finding replacements for its graduating seniors, but there will be positions to be won once fall workouts begin.

Returning starter and senior Tom Gorman (6-6, 258) will fill one tackle position, and a lot of talent will be vying for the other two slots. Juniors Bryan Flannery (6-3, 249) and Jeff Alm (6-6, 248) have been pleasant surprises all spring, while junior John Foley will continue his transition from linebacker to the line.

A pair of sophomores have looked solid on the line as well. George Williams (6-4, 285) and George Marshall (6-3, 240) are expected to play large roles this fall. Williams probably will line up at noseguard, where he saw action in seven games last year.

Senior Rich Morrison (6-3, 245), junior Michael Crouse (6-2, 266), junior Ted FitzGerald (6-5, 267) and sophomores Steve Roddy (6-2, 237), Brian Shannon (6-5, 244) and Chris Zorich (6-1, 260) round out the group of candidates for tackle positions.

The Observer / Trey Raymond

Linebackers -The Irish are chocked full of talent at linebacker, especially at the inside linebacker position.

With the return of junior Mike Stonebreaker from a year of academic ineligibility, Notre Dame has three solid inside 'backers to put on the field in 1988. Stonebreaker joins last year's two top tacklers in junior Ned Bolcar (106 tackles) and 6-5 senior Wes Pritchett (70).

Also at inside linebacker are senior Greg Hudson and sophomore Donn Grimm.

Fifth-year senior Darrell "Flash" Gordon returns to anchor the outside linebacking corps. Gordon will be expected to provide a pass rush which the Irish have been lacking over the past few years. At the other outside position will be either fifth-year senior Frank Stams or sophomore Andre Jones, both of whom had impressive spring workouts.

Scott Kowalkowski, Kevin McShane and Kurt Zackrisson also will vie for time.

Secondary -The Notre Dame secondary, under new coach

Chuck Heater, has continued its improvement over the last two seasons. Senior Corny Southall leads the returning starters at the safety positions. Southall calls the defensive signals and has dished out some solid hits at free safety, while senior George Streeter returns to start at strong safety. Streeter was named the Defensive Player of the Blue-Gold game.

Senior D'Juan Francisco appears to have won a starting spot at cornerback, alongside either junior Stan Smagala or sophomore Todd Lyght.

Other hopefuls in the secondary include Terrell and Bob Satterfield.

Notre Dame's Brian Piotrowicz tossed a no-hitter on Wednesday as the Irish baseball team defeated Ball State 2-0. Marty Strasen has the game highlights and preview the MCC championship, which Notre Dame will host next week, beginning on page 20.

Piotrowicz no-hits as ND wins again

By MARTY STRASEN
Sports Editor

There was no reason for sophomore right-hander Brian Piotrowicz to think he would lose the seven-inning no-hitter he threw at Ball State Wednesday.

After all, Notre Dame's 2-0 victory over the Cardinals was the squad's 13th in a row (a school record) and its 10th in five days. The Irish are hosting the Midwestern Collegiate Conference baseball tournament in a week, and their 36-20 record under first-year head coach Pat Murphy already marks the most victories in Notre Dame history. In short, just about everything is going right for the Notre Dame baseball team lately.

But while you're in the middle of your first-ever no-hitter, your mind tends to play tricks on you.

"I've had quite a few one-hitters in high school," Piotrowicz recalled, "but never a no-hitter. I started thinking about it in about the fifth inning. My mind just started wondering if I could really get it.

"You don't want to make any mistakes at that point. I started trying to be a little too perfect and ended up walking two guys in the seventh."

But the sophomore held on for his seventh win in a row, boosting his season record to 7-3. He struck out four and lost three in the contest, which was the second game in a doubleheader against Ball State.

Mike Pasilla, 6-4, won the first game for the Irish by a 13-4 score.

"It's a great feeling, to say the least," Piotrowicz added. "My sinker was keeping them off the plate, and that made my slider and fastball more effective. I just got some good calls when I needed them, some great defense behind me and

A look at the returnees Irish, Holtz look to '88 season

By MARTY STRASEN
Sports Editor

Irish head coach Lou Holtz hopes to follow a spring of changes with a fall season filled with evidence that those changes have paid off.

The annual Blue-Gold game in late April confirmed that Holtz' latest move might be a good one, as sophomore Ricky Watters played flanker and earned co-Offensive Player of the Game honors along with quarterback Steve Belles. Watters, who gained 373 yards on 69 carries as a tailback in 1987, looks to be Tim Brown's replacement as a punt and kick-return man as well.

"He has good hands and has the knack for catching the ball," Holtz said after the game, in which Watters caught a nine-yard touchdown pass. "He must get his hands on the ball 12-14 times a game. He's a Tim Brown-type player, but I don't want to compare him to Tim Brown. That wouldn't be fair."

Former tight end Andy Heck made the move to tackle in an effort to strengthen an offensive line which could not find any consistency following the loss of four fifth-year seniors from last year's squad. Heck could be the only senior starter on the line when the Irish take the field at home against Michigan on Sept. 10.

"If you look at our two-deep, you'll find 15 or 16 freshmen (now sophomores)," Holtz noted. "That scares you going into a season."

Here's how the team looks, position-by-position, going into the fall (excluding incoming freshmen):

OFFENSE

Quarterbacks -Junior Tony Rice has secured the No. 1 quarterback spot entering 1988, and has looked impressive moving the ball. Rice still needs to sharpen his passing game, something none of the Irish quarterbacks managed to perfect in the spring.

Sophomore Kent Graham is No. 2, but the play of Steve Belles in the Blue-Gold game (leading two long touchdown drives) has left room for either Belles or Pete Graham to earn some playing time in the fall.

Running Backs -Mark Green is back. After leading Notre Dame in rushing in 1987 with 861 yards and spending most of the spring at flanker, Green made the move back to tailback when Watters was moved to flanker in the last week of the spring. The senior gained 70 yards on 13 carries in the Blue-Gold game, and should be carrying the ball quite often in 1988.

Sophomore Tony Brooks capped an impressive spring session with 69 yards on 17 carries and a touchdown in the Blue-Gold game, and also will see plenty of playing time.

At fullback, juniors Anthony Johnson and Braxton Banks are proven players. Johnson enters the fall No. 1, while Banks scored a touchdown and gained 50 yards on 12 tries to lead the Gold to a 27-9 victory.

Seniors look back at years of sports

It all started with an early morning bus ride - and a fumble. There we were, stuck in the endzone of the Hoosier Dome for our first Notre Dame football game. One of our own, a freshman, stood before us waiting to field a Purdue kickoff that would begin our four years of Irish athletics.

We rose our arms, twirled them and hummed. The kickoff came straight at us. Our classmate settled beneath it and . . . promptly fumbled it. The Boiler-makers recovered and kicked field goal. The Irish went on to lose.

From that moment, there would be many more disheartening losses, including a 58-7 thrashing at Miami. We saw one coach resign under pressure and another come in, anointed as a messiah before even stalking a sideline. One more year filled with heartbreaking losses ensued, but in our final chance at glory, Lou Holtz put together a squad that at one point was a serious contender for National Championship honors. The Irish went to the Cotton Bowl, the first bowl that we could travel to easily. Notre Dame lost, but we knew that we would leave a football team that was back on the tracks.

That idea of being back on track applies to all the Irish programs. The class of 1988 witnessed a four span that gave meaning to the familiar adage "wake up the echoes." A basketball team that had been absent from NCAA play for the three years before we got here made it to the big
