Interior of Sacred Heart to be renovated

By MICHAEL WELLS
News Staff

A small crew of designers and craftsmen began work this past Monday on a sample of the interior restoration work they hope to do for Sacred Heart Church in the near future.

Scaffolding reaches from floor to ceiling between two of the columns on the right hand side of the church, as the group tries to "seek what was the decor of the church" in decades past, says decorating foreman Ronald Gruenke.

According to Gruenke and head interior decorator Sue Konet, both with Conrad Schmitt Studios, their company has not yet been contracted for the extensive renovation job, but is only at this point submitting a sample. "We're basically putting back stencils where there were stencils, gold where there was gold,...a sample of the murals," said Konet. "We're submitting a color scheme from old photographs."

Conrad Schmitt Studios is the same firm which is handling the nearly completed re-gilding of the golden dome, as well as the refurbishing of the stained glass windows in Sacred Heart. According to Gruenke, the interior restoration of the church is a separate job from the stained glass, and would possibly involve replacing the pews, carpeting and altar, in addition to the refinishing of the walls.

Don Dedrick, director of the Notre Dame physical plant, said that the Conrad Schmitt firm was presenting their ideas for the job because of their experience in the two previous restorations of the church, and because "there aren't a lot of people doing this kind of thing."

Although work in the church began on Monday, research on the previous design of the building's interior was begun two months before, said Konet. "Prior to this Monday, the studio has been doing research from old photographs, the Notre Dame archives here, and studying the techniques of Gregori."

$8 Billion damage in Jamaica

Associated Press

KINGSTON, Jamaica- Prime Minister Edward Seaga estimated Hurricane Gilbert's damage in Jamaica at $8 billion, and relief supplies began arriving yesterday for some of this Caribbean island nation's half-million homeless.

Sports stadiums, churches, government buildings and movie theaters were used to house an estimated 150,000 people, the government said.

Seaga, who flew across the island to inspect damage Wednesday, said entire towns were wiped out and that the government's priority was to rebuild housing.

The government's Jamaica Broadcasting Corp. reported at least 19 dead and officials feared the death toll would mount as communication was reestablished with the interior.

Five people were reported killed in the Dominican Republic and 10 in Haiti, where the military government declared a state of emergency yesterday on its hard-hit southern peninsula.

Four days after the hurricane's passing, electricity was still out over much of the country, including Kingston.

Yesterday only 10 percent of Jamaica's telephones were back in service, said Marge Boberschmidt, a spokeswoman for American Telephone and Telegraph.

AT&T secured a single telephone line in Jamaica Wednesday night and began relaying one-page messages from stranded Americans to worried friends and relatives back home.

The Jamaica Information Service said Seaga was accompanied on his tour of the island by U.S. ambassador Michael Sotirhos and William Joslyn, director of the U.S. Agency for International Development.

They flew aboard a U.S. Air Force C-130 aircraft, stopping in Montego Bay on the north coast, to deliver plastic tarpaulins donated by the United BROWNSVILLE, Texas- Thousands of coastal residents from Mexico to Louisiana fled to higher ground yesterday as fierce Hurricane Gilbert sent the first of its storms against Texas after thrashing the Yucatan Peninsula.

"This is a killer storm," said Gordon Guthrie, director of the Florida Division of Emergency of Management. "I feel sorry for anybody wherever this hits."

The death toll from the storm's onslaught through the Caribbean islands and the Yucatan was at least 36, and damage estimates reached $8 billion.

By early evening, the first thunderstorms and showers in the outermost spiral bands of the storm had reached southeast Texas, forecasters said.

Texas Gov. Bill Clements issued an emergency proclamation allowing local authorities to suspend laws "to preserve the health, safety and welfare of the public," including such things as the direction of travel on highways.

Grocery stores ran low on bottled water, batteries, canned tuna and bread as people laid in supplies. Homeowners covered windows and doors with plywood and shatter-proofing hurricane tape. Offshore oil workers left their rigs in the Gulf of Mexico.

Bob Sheets, director of the National Hurricane Center in Miami, said the 450-mile wide storm would likely make landfall this afternoon along the northern coast of Mexico or southern Texas.

In Brownsville, Texas' southernmost city, winds began to pick up around noon under overcast skies.

Lorena Curry, who has lived in Brownsville since 1935, said she plans to ride out the storm. "I've been through them before. I'm going to stick around at my home."

At 5 p.m. CDT, the storm center was about 340 miles southeast of Brownsville, moving west-northwest at about 15 mph and dumping about 10 inches of rain, according to the National Weather Service.

The weather service issued a hurricane warning for Mexico's northern coast and the southern half of the 370-mile Texas coast from Brownsville

INSIDE COLUMN

Some things makesense, but then again ...

No criminal charges will be filed against the owner of a 400-pound black bear that mauled a father and his two sons, the Hamilton County prosecutor said. Prosecutor Steven Nation said Thursday a review of police records shows no evidence of criminal negligence, but he said the bear's owner, Ron Miller, had agreed to build a more secure cage for his pet. William Wiley, 35, and his 11- and 4-year-old sons were injured Saturday night when they went to feed Miller's animals while Miller was out of town. The bear squeezed under a chain link fence and bounded toward them. -Associated Press.

A federal office of rural mental health should be established to address an increase in suicide, family violence, depression and emotional problems in rural America, according to a study released Thursday by the National Mental Health Association. The study, entitled "Rural Mental Health: the Time for Action Is Now," also recommends a $50 million annual increase in funding for a federal alcohol, drug abuse and mental health services block grant program and a broader crisis counseling network for farmers. "We're fighting a myth that rural America is a healthier place to live. If that was ever true, it's not true today," said Dr. Peter G. Beeson, director of planning for the Nebraska Department of Public Institutions -Associated Press.

Sometimes, things seem to make a lot of sense. Then again, sometimes, everything seems to make absolutely no sense.

Some of the newsworthy events of the week prove the aforementioned theory's utility.

For example, isn't it great that U.S.A. Today now has a television show? It's shown on WSJV, the ABC affiliate in Elkhart, at 6:30 p.m. My question to the producer Steve Friedman is which came first, the chicken or the egg.

U.S.A. Today, the newspaper, certainly has found its place among the country's more useful newspapers. The weather page, the sports wrap-ups, and the state-by-state round-up are superb ideas for a national newspaper. But the brevity and lack of insight in the articles remind one observer of a television show in print. The newspaper concentrates on a "television news style" that usually publishes human interest events as their top story.

Just in case you missed the first week of U.S.A. Today, the television show, here's a wrap of some of the more "U.S.A. Today-ish" stories.

First, the sports department enlightened the viewers as to why the Russians claim they invented the sport of baseball. In their promo sheet, the headline read, "Cooperstown is being threatened by the Russians." I'm sort of surprised this didn't make at least the cover story of U.S.A. Today, the newspaper.

Other innovative ideas are the 30 second debates with George Bush and Mike Dukakis. The U.S.A. Today reporter asks each of the candidates on the screen what he would say to the other. Also, don't miss the new financiers, the "Buck family, a cartoon bunch who tackle money problems on their own, while real life experts give financial advice." Sounds rather U.S.A. Today-ish. I'm waiting for the Jose Canseco graphic in which Jose comes through the set to step on the 40-40 record book in your living room. The U.S.A. Today debut makes sense. So did the results of another debut this week, this one in the Arizona desert.

The Monday Night Football game this week marked the Phoenix Cardinals' home debut in Sun Devil Stadium. This fits into the "no matter how much things change, they stay the same" category.

The Cardinals have gone through nine coaches in the last twenty-seven years. They've gone through high draft choices that don't produce, and they've gone through a city that supports winning franchises.

Throughout all these troubled times, one

Chris
Murphy

Editor-in-Chief

thing remains constant—the ownership. This ownership left a city that supports winning franchises and has drawn crowds the comparable to New York and Los Angeles. But when things go bad for a team and crowds start dwindling, the owner just picks up and leaves town. Oh well, I hope Phoenix fans are patient. Twenty-seven years of losses, most by seven points or less, become very frustrating.

Speaking of frustrating, how about the latest booklet mysteriously circulating our campus grounds. This fits into the "things making absolutely no sense (or do they?)" group.

For those of you who haven't seen "the student guide," it's a student's joy. The booklet lists advertisers from the South Bend community and encourages students to frequent their establishments. One interesting advertisement that should draw your attention is the liquor store ad on page 31.

To this writer, it's interesting that student publications can no longer print alcohol advertisements, but a student guide out of Indianapolis, with no previous circulation on campus, makes a mysterious appearance and can print whatever they want. And, yes, the cover has the University of Notre Dame and Saint Mary's College stamped right on it:

I guess some things do and don't make sense.

House votes to eliminate waiting period for handguns

Associated Press

WASHINGTON- The pro-gun lobby won a major victory yesterday when the House eliminated from a major anti-drug bill a seven-day waiting period for handgun purchases.

The 228-182 vote substituted a plan - still to be established - that would allow gun dealers to identify convicted felons seeking to buy handguns.

The margin showed the National Rifle Association was able to outmuscle a coalition of handgun control organizations and allies from all the nation's major law enforcement groups. Both sides brought rank-and-file law enforcement officers to the Capitol to lobby for their cause.

Voting for the substitute sponsored by Rep. Bill McCollum, R-Fla., were 101 Democrats and 127 Republicans. Opposing were 137 Democrats and 45 Republicans.

The overall drug bill would add some $2 billion to the nation's $3.9 billion drug fighting effort. A final House vote is expected next week. The Senate still has to consider its own drug-fighting bill.

The waiting period would have permitted police where the purchaser lives to conduct a background check, but would not have required one.

In the closing moments of debate, waiting period supporter William J. Hughes, D-N.J., urged members to "show how tough we are when it comes to bucking the National Rifle Association and the gun lobby."

NRA backer Rep. Harold Volkmer, D-Mo., said after the vote that those comments backfired.

"Taking on the NRA is one thing and taking on gun owners is another," Volkmer said. "There's no question the NRA had a lot to do with it," he said.

Student Senate runoff on Monday

Observer Staff Report

A runoff election will be held on Monday between the two top vote-getters in the special District Two Student Senate election, said John Wilson, director of Ombudsman.

The runoff election will be between Jim McCarthy and Brian McCarthy, two unrelated residents of Zahm Hall. The runoff election will be held Monday, with voting taking place from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. and from 5 to 7 p.m., Wilson said.

Out of a total of 627 votes cast, Jim McCarthy got 271 votes, or 43.4 percent. Brian McCarthy was just behind, with 251 votes or 40 percent of votes cast.

James Robertson of Cavanaugh Hall got 89 votes, or 14.2 percent. Dustin Klinger, also of Cavanaugh Hall, got 16 votes, or 2.4 percent.

Jim McCarthy said there would be little confusion between the two runoff candidates because "there's no confusion between issues. I'm the only one addressing the concerns of the students," he said.

Brian McCarthy was not available for comment.

"It was a small election," said Wilson. "There were no campaign violations."

Campaigning begins Saturday night at midnight and continues until Sunday at midnight.

Malloy meets with local businessmen

By FLORENTINE HOELKER

Hundreds of Michiana business executives sat down to lunch yesterday with University President Father Edward Malloy, who encouraged local businesses to be a part of Notre Dame's future.

The University has a "priority to provide an environment of cooperation and support" for the area and area businesses, Malloy told nearly 300 executives from 24 companies in the Michiana area.

"May we find ways of supporting one another in the days ahead," Malloy said, adding he hopes the University and area businesses can "cooperate in mutual research."

Malloy highlighted undergraduate scholarships, graduate fellowships and library collections as areas in which the University needs support.

Malloy said that he wants local businesses "to be a part of our efforts as we look into the future."

As Michiana's largest employer, the University contributes nearly $1 million to the area daily, Malloy said. He cited students' efforts at the Center for Social Concerns and neighborhood tutoring as other ways the University contributes to the area.

"It really is important that together we work to promote good relationships with the community," Malloy said of students.

Malloy said he was happy that student government has organized efforts to get help to areas such as the north-east side of South Bend.

A video was shown which detailed highlights of last year such as the Knute Rockne stamp, the football team's 100th anniversary and President Reagan's visit.

Several executives said they were pleased with the program. They expressed interest in Malloy's appeal and said they were glad to see the University concentrate on academic as well as athletic programs.

Several also said they were somewhat surprised to see the turnout for the event.

The University plans to contact the executives and companies who attended the luncheon within two weeks to see whether they have an interest in providing support.

Walesa, Polish officials meet

Associated Press

WARSAW, Poland - Lech Walesa met for four hours yesterday with government officials and stuck to his position that "there is no freedom without Solidarity."

Walesa, the chairman of the banned independent union movement, and Interior Minister Gen. Czeslaw Kiszczak agreed to continue working toward an early start of talks on the future of Poland.

"The problems are very difficult but the atmosphere is encouraging," a smiling Walesa told reporters after his second meeting with senior government officials in more than six years.

The government agreed to the talks after Walesa agreed to halt a wave of strikes last month that posed the most serious threat to the government since Solidarity was crushed in 1981.

After the meeting, Krzysztof Sliwinski, a journalist close to Solidarity, said "both sides are not terribly far apart as far as the basic things are concerned."

But he said the two sides still must negotiate how a relegalized Solidarity would differ from the Solidarity of the early 1980s, and under what conditions it would operate.

Kiszczak and Walesa scheduled another meeting for today with an expanded group of people to agree on topics, composition and the work schedule for the meeting, the state-run PAP news service said.

Walesa, Kiszczak, alternate Politburo member Stanislaw Ciosek, church representative the Rev. Alojzy Orszulik and mediator Andrzej Stelmachowski met from noon until about 4:30 p.m. at a government guest house in Warsaw.

"The talks were long," Walesa said. "We are keeping our position which I have always put forward, 'There is no freedom without Solidarity.'"

Walesa said that even though Poland faces many problems, he believes that the relegalization of Solidarity is the most important.

13 year-old sentenced to 60 days

Associated Press

CROWN POINT, Ind.- A 13-year-old Hammond boy will be eating lunch with jailmates instead of classmates for the next 60 days, a judge says.

Hammond City Judge Peter Katic placed the youth under court supervision after the boy pleaded guilty to speeding and reckless driving earlier this year.

The boy, who was 12 at the time of his Jan. 21 arrest, also was ordered to keep his grades above a C.

Court records indicate that the boy, who had no offenses prior to his January arrest, scored Ds in three subjects and Fs in eight others. He also skipped several classes and didn't re-enroll in school this month, the records said.

Katic ordered the jail term Wednesday, after the grade reports were turned in and the youngster bragged about using marijuana.

"It was very active, frequent and recent drug use. He said he used marijuana the night before court," said Katic, who has been a subject of controversy because of his policy of jailing teens who get bad grades while under court supervision for minor offenses.

"The judge was going to give him just two weekends originally but changed his mind after asking the boy how long he had been on marijuana," said Bobby Costa, the judge's aide. "The boy said he's been on marijuana since he was 11 years old, and two weeks ago he did cocaine."

Katic said he didn't have a blood or urine test to confirm the boy's drug use, but he felt certain the boy wouldn't lie about such a matter in open court.

Eggers Middle School Principal Jane Kendrick said Wednesday that she believes "the incarceration of a minor in Lake County Jail is inappropriate."

Gary attorney Eric Clark said the boy will be segregated from adults in the jail but will be in contact with juveniles accused of committing adult offenses.

Beauchamp chairs United Way

By JOHN O'BRIEN
News Staff

The United Way of St. Joseph County launched its 1988 fundraising drive on Wednesday with a speech by Campaign Chairman Father William Beauchamp, Notre Dame's executive vice president, at a rally at South Bend's Union Station.

"The goal this year is to raise $3,405,000," said Beauchamp, adding this reflects a 5.6 percent increase from last year, United Way's 100th anniversary.

The money from this drive will be used to support 36 health and human service agencies such as the American Red Cross, Boy's Clubs, and Logan Center, Beauchamp said.

The University, which has been involved in United Way fundraising for years, will kick off its own fund drive at a luncheon on Sept. 22. Director of Community Relations Jim Roemer will head the drive.

"This year, the drive will be a major effort on campus for faculty, staff, and students," Beauchamp said.

Dean of Freshman Year of Studies Emil Hofman will be the faculty chairman, while the staff chairman is Monica Jeffers, special projects coordinator for the university.

"As in the past, the student government will be in charge of the student portion of the drive," said Beauchamp.

Beauchamp was asked to serve as campaign chairman in only his second year with the United Way of St. Joseph County. He had supervised the United Way's fundraising for institutions of higher learning last year.

This year's drive is staffed by 2,000 volunteers and has already raised $571,000, which is 17 percent of the community goal. "We're hoping it will be successful, but it's going to take a lot of work," Beauchamp said.

FBI investigates shuttle o-ring sabotage

Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY- The FBI is investigating at least one person in the apparent sabotage of O-rings used on space shuttle rocket motors, and an arrest or indictment is imminent, an agent said yesterday.

HydraPak, which manufactures the O-rings in West Jordan, Utah, discovered in June that a small number of the rubber-like seals had been deliberately cut. Officials immediately notified rocket maker Morton Thiokol, the FBI and the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, and the federal agencies began a joint investigation.

"We do have suspects and the case will be prosecutable," said FBI Special Agent Cal Clegg. "Right from the inception, we have been discussing the case with the U.S. attorney's office, and we feel that arrests or indictments will be imminent."

Clegg said he did not know whether more than one person was suspected, but the number "could expand ... it depends on the evidence that is gathered."

Charges could be filed within the month, he said.

James Dockstader, HydraPak vice president of production, said earlier that none of the damaged seals had been shipped to Morton Thiokol, which manufactures the rockets at its northern Utah plant.

Quayle says he is fit to be Vice President

Associated Press

OKLAHOMA CITY, OK- Republican Dan Quayle dismissed concerns about his fitness to serve as vice president and predicted Thursday that "in due time, the American people will see the real Dan Quayle" and make their own judgments.

At his first news conference in two weeks, the Indiana senator shrugged off as "irrelevant" questions about his past, including his mediocre academic record.

"Winston Churchill was not a great student. He was a great leader. FDR (Franklin D. Roosevelt) failed the bar examination a number of times. He turned out to be a great president," Quayle said.

The vice presidential nominee said his refusal to make public his academic records was "an irrelevant issue." He previously had said he did not want reporters scrutinizing his less than stellar grades.

Referring to controversies over his military service during the Vietnam War, his academic performance and his personal life, Quayle said he was "not going to focus on what I have done in the past" but on "what I stand for, what I articulate to the American people."

"The American people will judge me on what I am saying and what I have done in the last 12 years in the Congress," he said.

Quayle spoke to reporters during a campaign tour that took him to rallies in Tulsa, Okla., Moore, near Oklahoma City, and Wichita, Kan. In Tulsa, he was met by a noisy group of Dukakis supporters who chanted "Duke! Duke!"

A CBS-New York Times poll found that one-third of those responding said Quayle was qualified to be president compared with three-fifths who said the same of his Democratic counterpart, Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas.

States for use as temporary roofing.

Supplies first began arriving from the United States on Wednesday. The Federal Aviation Administration in Atlanta reported Kingston's Norman Manley International Airport was open to relief flights only, but commercial and private flights were landing at Montego Bay.

The government said about 500,000, or more than one-fifth of the country's 2.3 million people were homeless. Seaga estimated 100,000 of the island's 500,000 homes were wiped out and another 300,000 had roofs ripped off or other severe damage.

The prime minister said there was massive damage in Portland and Saint Thomas parishes on the east coast, where two districts were completely devastated and coconut groves flattened.

Winds from Hurricane Gilbert upturned this airplane near the Norman Manley Airport in Kingston, Jamaica on Monday.

to Port O'Connor, including 250,000-resident Corpus Christi. A hurricane watch remained in effect for the remainder of the Texas coast, from Port O'Connor north to Port Arthur near the Louisiana border.

The weather service said warnings might be extended northward, depending upon Gilbert's path.

Gilbert surged into the gulf after battering the Yucatan Peninsula in Mexico with 160 mph winds, forcing tens of thousands to flee.

After crossing the peninsula, Gilbert's winds weakened to 120 mph, but forecasters predicted the storm would intensify again as it moves over open water.

"The shower and thunderstorm activity that we see taking place around the hurricane itself is getting better organized, more vigorous, so we think it's starting to strengthen," said Sheets at the Hurricane Center.

In the coastal resort of South Padre Island, about 25 miles southeast of Brownsville, the mayor ordered its 1,000 residents to evacuate.

"We can't force them to leave, but it doesn't make any sense to stay," said Mayor Bob Pinkerton Jr., adding that water and electricity were turned off yesterday.

Tropical storm force winds, at least 39 mph, extended outward up to 250 miles to the north and 200 miles to the south of the center.

The storm's first landfall earlier this week left at least 19 people dead in Jamaica, five in the Dominican Republic, 10 in Haiti and two in Mexico. It also left a half-million people homeless in Jamaica and caused widespread damage to the Cayman Islands.

HEART

Gregori was the Italian artist invited by Father Sorin in 1874 to paint the murals in Sacred Heart, along with the paintings on the inside of the golden dome and the Columbus series in the Administration building. His murals on the church ceiling and his stations of the cross are among the more time consuming aspects of the restoration agenda, said Konet. "The restoration of the murals takes an extremely long time. There are normally not this many murals to restore."

Gruenke classified the type of work Conrad Schmitt does as primarily decorating. "We're working in Minneapolis, Madison, Chicago and Vermont," said Gruenke. "Our main jobs are churches, hotels, anything with historical significance."

According to Dedrick, the interior restoration of Sacred Heart is the final stage in its complete renovation begun two years ago under Father Joyce, and being continued by Father Beauchamp. The new roof and weatherproofing of the building needed to be completed first, said Dedrick, before interior could begin. "I think we reached a point where the church needed restoration, and it's a matter of systematically attacking the different areas," he said.

The sampling and research work should be completed in another two weeks, said Konet and Gruenke. If they are indeed commissioned for the main restoration project, however, work should begin in May and continue through August of 1990. "I think it's going to be a very exciting project," said Dedrick. "I think everyone will be very pleased when its finished."

Father claims son is not a traitor

Associated Press

SOUTH BEND- A former naval analyst convicted of passing classified information to Israel was wrongly portrayed by Reagan administration officials and the media as a traitor, his father says.

Dr. Morris Pollard, professor of biological sciences at Notre Dame, told a group of journalists that the media, steered by then-Attorney General Edwin Meese and Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger, implied the actions of his son, Jonathan Jay Pollard, were traitorous. The U.S. Constitution defines treason as making war against the United States or aiding its enemies.

"The United States was never harmed by this," Dr. Pollard told members of the Society of Professional Journalists, Sigma Delta Chi at a meeting Wednesday evening.

Pollard said his son had been charged with violating national security laws, but the charge was dropped for lack of evidence.

The younger Pollard, 33, was sentenced to life in prison in 1987 after pleading guilty to passing secrets to Israel. His wife, Anne Henderson-Pollard, was sentenced to five years in prison after pleading guilty to conspiring to receive embezzled government property and being an accessory after the fact to the possession of defense secrets.

Dr. Pollard said he had declined to speak publicly about his son's case on the advice of a defense attorney. He quoted an attorney as warning that "the press could not be trusted." Dr. Pollard said he regrets following the advice.

Pollard began helping Israel when he learned the U.S. government had deliberately passed false intelligence to the Israeli government, said Dr. Pollard. "It's a decision he made on his own, and I suspect it's one he now regrets," he said.

Reagan denies rumors of incompetence during Iran crisis

Associated Press

WASHINGTON- President Reagan said yesterday there is "no truth" to a suggestion that he was inattentive to his duties during the Iran-Contra crisis, and the White House denied any serious thought was given to removing him from office by constitutional means.

"It's total nonsense," said White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater. "It speaks more to the state of mind of some of the staff here than it does about the president."

Fitzwater was referring to White House aides who were interviewed by James Cannon, a longtime associate of Howard H. Baker Jr., on the weekend in 1987 when Baker replaced Donald T. Regan as White House chief of staff.

In a new book by two newspaper reporters, Cannon is quoted as saying that after interviewing 15 to 20 White House aides, he wrote a memo to Baker that began: "Consider the possibility that section four of the 25th Amendment might be applied."

The 25th Amendment, added to the Constitution in 1967, provides the president may be removed if the vice president and a majority of the cabinet declare him "unable to discharge the powers and duties of his office."

Reagan, returning to the White House after speaking in a nearby building, was asked what he thought of Cannon's story. When he appeared not to understand the question, another reporter shouted, "25th Amendment."

"There's no truth to any of this," the president responded.

Cannon, in an interview with Cable News Network, said that of the staffers he talked to "not all but most said in one way or another that the president was inattentive, that he had lost interest in his job."

"There's nothing to this," said Fitzwater. "This is fiction by staff people who for their own reasons chose to say this. It was dismissed immediately by those who heard it. It was never taken seriously."

Cannon also said he concluded after seeing Reagan that there was no reason to invoke the amendment and said he assumed the aides were motivated by loyalty to Regan, who had been removed by the president and replaced with Baker.

Cannon and Fitzwater differed, however, over how long the matter was under consideration.

According to Cannon, he interviewed the White House staffers on Friday, Feb. 27, 1987, and the following day and wrote his memo on Sunday. Then on Monday, he said that Baker and he and others had a working lunch with the president.

"To our obvious delight, President Reagan was dandy," he said. "I thought, 'This man is fine and what are these guys talking about?'"

Fitzwater, however, said Cannon "raised the question and Senator Baker said, 'That's not the president I talked to,' and that was the end of it."

WASHINGTON- Retail sales declined in August for only the second time this year, the government said yesterday, indicating to analysts that inflationary pressures in the economy are easing.

The Commerce Department said sales fell by 0.2 percent last month to $133.5 billion, adjusted for seasonal variations but not for price increases.

Economists have been worried since the spring that rising export sales coupled with strong demand from U.S. consumers would put too much strain on the economy and fuel inflation.

The small drop in retail sales is an indication that American consumers are curbing their appetite for goods enough to allow factories to make more for sale abroad, analysts said.

The Federal Reserve, in an effort to slow the economy by curbing domestic demand, has been pushing interest rates higher since late March, and economists say the Fed tightening may be beginning to take hold.

"I think things are looking just fine inflationwise," said Michael Evans, head of Evans Economics, a Washington consulting firm. "I think the Fed deserves an A. I think they tightened just enough to slow down the economy without sending it into a tailspin."

Graduates deserve equal privileges

The first couple weeks or so of being an Irish have been great. Walking on campus and around the lakes, seeing the Golden Dome, the statue of Our Lady, Sacred Heart, Touchdown Jesus and No. 1 Moses, hearing the band play the most famous fight song in the world—all these things certainly get the blood flowing and reinforce the pride felt in being here. Classes have begun, we're getting in the swing of things

guest column

As graduate students, we're all feeling something else, too, and we're not quite sure how to adjust. We are not here as undergraduates, yet many of us just graduated from college a few months ago, so we still feel like undergrads, and perhaps even wish we could be a part of undergraduate life on campus right now. We are not students in the same way that we were, and one of the reasons for this is that we are experiencing the other side of the academic fence—we are teachers, too.

There is another thing that contributes to our ambivalence concerning our newfound state—Notre Dame is primarily an undergraduate institution, and I have been reminded of that by more than one occasion.

First of all, new graduate students have not been afforded much in the way of orientational activities in past years; it was only for the first time this year that we had the opportunity to take part in any type of quality inaugural events such as the brunch, the forums on University services, the tours, the GSU dance, etc., and this was because of the work of the Graduate Student Union. I thought these programs were quite helpful insofar as letting us know all the different things that are going on at the University and in the South Bend area, and it was also nice to meet other grads who are in other fields of study.

Secondly, we don't seem to rate very highly on the caste system here; i.e., we pick our football tickets with the sophomores. Some might think that this isn't such a big deal, but in a place where football is the stuff of legends, the parallel to where we stand in the scheme of things is inescapable to a new graduate student (at least to one who loves football).

I hope that this statement is not indicative of an attitude around here which relegates us to second-class citizens, because we're not and we don't want to be treated like we are. Intellectually, we're as gifted as anyone here; the two of my classmates whom I know the best were accepted at Harvard and MIT, but they turned down Ivy League & Associates to come to Notre Dame.

Our football coach himself said on "The Lou Holtz Show" that it is an honor and a privilege to represent Notre Dame, and although he may have been saying this in the context of football, these words apply to the undergraduate students, the other athletes, the faculty and staff, and certainly to the graduate students also.

The Olympics: more than us against them

Four years ago Southern California was bracing for the onslaught of the 23rd Summer Olympics. We had heard horror stories for years about high costs, traffic jams, ticket shortages, and so forth. It is an understatement to say that locals such as myself were apprehensive about the coming of the games.

Richard Beatty

Nevertheless, when I was asked to sing in the festival chorus for the opening ceremonies, I eagerly accepted the offer. While I realized that it would probably not be an artistically satisfying experience, I knew that it was going to be an important occasion. As July 28 drew nearer, I too became excited about the games.

The ceremonies themselves were meticulously planned and executed: 10,000 performers and athletes had to be moved into the Los Angeles Coliseum at the right times during the show, and all under intense security. For several hours before going on, we were kept in formation in the Sports Arena next door. The atmosphere was electric: we performers, on the floor of the arena, were about to have the largest audience of our lives; the athletes, seated in the balcony completely around the arena, would be facing the ultimate challenge over the next two weeks.

Suddenly an inflatable beach ball appeared. Security guards ran towards it as it emerged from the bleachers, but after a few minutes realized that it was harmless. Soon every eye in the room was riveted on the ball, its zig-zag path cheered on at every bounce. Eventually it made its way up to the balcony where it engaged the talents of some of the world's finest athletes. From Japan to Honduras, back to Laos and Morocco, over to Nigeria and Paraguay, the little ball was on a world tour. Soon everyone began pointing the way for the next shot: we all wanted to see the ball go completely around the arena (and thus around the world) before we moved into the Coliseum. Sadly, the ball sprung a leak and deflated, but was nonetheless passed from hand to hand for the rest of its journey. For a brief moment, everyone in the arena was united in a simple little game where everyone plays, and everyone wins. The fierce competitiveness of the coming weeks was replaced by the common hope of a symbolic journey across the earth. Silence filled the room, and we knew that the real spirit of the Olympics had visited us.

But is this what really goes on at the games? In 1984, the Soviets, and most of the Eastern bloc countries, did not participate, just as the U.S. refused to go to Moscow in 1980 for its own political reasons—both parties forgetting that the game of detente can hardly be played if one of the teams stays off the field.

Even when the Olympics are in progress, we seem caught up with "going for the gold," and our newspapers (even this one) carry daily tally boxes keeping track of how many medals "we" are getting compared with how many "they" get. We tell ourselves that the real fruits of the games are international cooperation and brotherhood, but the immediate goal in each competition is to make sure that the U.S. flag is raised just a bit higher than any other during the medals ceremony. It is hard to see how this kind of unvarnished nationalism contributes to a better and more peaceful world.

Yet there is so much potential for good from the games. Any event that brings people together from around the world in a common pursuit has value. The athletes themselves are probably less concerned with conquest than are the fans back home; perhaps they recall the Olympic motto itself, "Citius, altius, fortius" (faster, higher, stronger)—wanting simply to better their own performance and, incidentally, to carry home a medal. Looked at this way, an athlete competes only with herself, not with another person or nation. Competitors can support each other, and eight people can win in the same race.

Furthermore, we can see the unity and diversity of our world in the faces and lives of the athletes. People of many descriptions are together on the playing field, and show an equality of talent transcending their differences. Even the U.S. team covers a broad spectrum: Consider how few athletes (and fewer medals) we would have if we limited our delegation to white heterosexual men.

I am hopeful for the Olympics. They have great potential for building world peace through shared experience and understanding, but they can also undermine it if we persist in the mentality of "us against them." By all means, we should "go for the gold," but it should be the precious gold of a just world community born from a realization that the similarities that unite us far outweigh the differences that divide us.

This weekend the 24th summer games will begin. I won't be in Seoul for the opening ceremonies, and I don't even know what they have planned. But I truly hope that somebody smuggles a beach ball into the staging area, and gives everyone there a glimpse of how wonderful the games can be.

There are two types of people at Michigan State, the hippies and the straights. The hippies hang out in hippy bars, do hippy dances, and drink hippy drinks. The straights go to the corner bars, drink beer, and carouse, talk and wander around East Lansing. Upon arrival here, the roadtripping Notre Dame student must make a decision: it's either hippy or straight.

Thus reported The Observer before the MSU game in 1966. Of course, things have changed a bit since then. Twenty years ago, the Michigan State campus and its environs were dry, and students were forced to go to the other side of town for a beer. Paul Revere's Tavern was "the high place for the holy hips...where the 'in' can intrigue each other."

The popular place for "straights" was a dance bar called the Coral Gables Show Bar, where "male straights can get acquainted with girl straights. However, straights in the know do not venture downstairs into the Rathskellar, for that was hippy territory and is sometimes occupied by a way-out pianist."

Today, Paul Revere's is a definitely local bar, the kind of place where everyone turns around and looks at you when you walk in. Coral Gables is more of an adult dinner place now, with live swing and jazz bands for entertainment. Both places are located relatively far off campus.

Luckily, for the present-day Notre Dame roadtripper, the Michigan State campus is no longer dry, and a good number of student bars have since popped up nearby, north of the stadium. (See map below.)

Rick's American Cafe on Abbott St. is a small, often crowded bar, but it has a dance floor and plays a very good selection of modern new-wave music. Rick's is also host to great live bands on weekends. Rick's serves food until 9 and does have a cover charge.

Dooley's, upstairs on Albert Ave., is a very collegiate bar, complete with pool tables, football, and crew memorabilia. Serving great pub grub all night, it is a popular place among both students and alumni. There is no cover charge.

Underneath Dooley's is Sensations, a dance bar with music of the urban contemporary genre, but it caters to the same crowd as Dooley's. And, like all dance bars here, Sensations has a cover charge.

The America's Cup is located in a smallish street mall on M.A.C. Ave. It serves food until 9:00 and caters to a laid-back, student crowd. There is no cover charge.

Downstairs from the Cup is a bigger dance bar called B'zar. A really "boppy" place with neon lights and waitresses dressed up in different costumes, B'zar seems to attract a younger, under-age crowd. Music is appropriate.

In the mood for a quieter place to drink? The Riviera is located at the corner of M.A.C. and Albert. It's a dark, casual place with tables, booths, and a jukebox. Food till 9.

If you're looking for some of your Greek friends, head towards the corner of Abbott and Grand River Ave. for the Land Shark, a bar very popular with fraternity/sorority types. The Land Shark also features an oyster bar. You do have to pay cover, though; and, sorry, no 19s allowed here.

But if you really feel you'd rather be at Paul Revere's back in 1966, Hobie's across from the Cup on M.A.C. Ave. is the place for you. More of a restaurant than a bar, Hobie's pub-like atmosphere attracts '60s throwbacks and flower children, complete with tie-dyes and bandanas. The music is live, usually one man and his guitar playing Bob Dylan songs. No Republicans, please.

As we conclude this brief overview of the MSU bar scene, let me offer a word of caution to under-21s: Since 19-year-olds are permitted to enter most bars, do not attempt to use a fake ID in order to drink. Bouncers are very tough and mean. So stay "straight" this weekend and you'll be "hip." And have a good time, kids!

What do sculpture, acrobatics, pantomime, cinema and, most importantly, dance all have in common? Momix. Momix is an eclectic modern dance company which will be performing this Sunday, Sept. 18, in Washington Hall.

The group was founded in 1980 by dancer and choreographer Moses Pendelton. An offshoot of Pilobolus, a sister dance company Pendelton co-founded in 1971, Momix was originally the duo of Pendelton and another dancer, Alison Chase. The troupe now consists of seven additional members.

Momix performs such a unique form of dance that Pendelton describes it as "something that refuses to be categorized." Even the source of their name is unusual; it's taken from a milk supplement for veal calves.

Momix has toured virtually all over Europe and in Japan, Israel and Brazil. They have had repeated engagements in almost every major city in North America. A recent project included a U.S. tour with the New Age rock band Shadowfax.

Many of Momix's dances use what Pendelton calls "the poor man's theater approach." This means the troupe uses simple props such as a balloon or a cane. Another important part of the

The odds are good that you'll probably recognize some of yourself in his very humorous anecdotes. In fact it's just that recognition which gives him such a good rapport with the audience, and made him the recipient of the 1988 Comedian of the Year award (as determined

Notre Dame inside linebacker Mike Stonebreaker has returned from a year of academic ineligibility to spearhead the Irish defense and a solid inside linebacking corps.

Stonebreaker is back in action

Junior inside linebacker is racking up tackles again

By THERESA KELLY
Assistant Sports Editor

Welcome back, Mike Stonebreaker.

After an impressive freshman campaign, the junior from River Ridge, La., made his mark in spring practice and was predicted to start at eagle linebacker when he returned for his sophomore season in 1987.

The real world got in the way of his plans.

Stonebreaker (with a name like that, he had to play football) was academically ineligible his sophomore year, and he makes no bones about it. He makes no excuses, either.

"I failed a class in summer school," Stonebreaker, who also had ear surgery that summer, said. "I'd like to use that (the surgery) as an excuse, but it was just academics."

"I was upset, but it was done and there was nothing I could do about it. I had to learn from my mistakes and go on. I had to get my priorities back together and realize that it was a little glimpse that there is life after football, and football is not real life."

Football was real life for Stonebreaker Saturday night against Michigan, when he had 17 assisted tackles and two solos while sharing time with Ned Bolcar and Wes Pritchett at linebacker. The 17 assists was five more than he had had in 10 games as a freshman.

Mike Stonebreaker

"He's got great speed and he's very strong," said Irish defensive coordinator and linebacker coach Barry Alvarez. "But his best attribute is that he has a great nose for football. He always finds the ball and is there to make the play."

For his efforts Saturday, he was named defensive player of the week by the Sporting News.

"The defense as a whole played really well," Stonebreaker said of the Michigan victory. "Everyone was just flying to the ball. It was my best game since I graduated from high school."

"I didn't really realize it, but I was going into my first real season. That was the first big game that I was really going to be a part of."

The unexpected and unwanted year off was a learning experience for Stonebreaker.

"It was hard to watch them play without me," he said, "but once I accepted the fact and it was over, then I watched the team and tried to learn from what they were doing and put myself in game situations."

Stonebreaker was learning from fifth-year senior Pritchett and Notre Dame tri-captain Bolcar, and all three linebackers will see their share of playing time.

According to Alvarez, two will be designated to start depending on their performance the previous game. The starters will play three or four series, then be replaced by the third linebacker.

Big Ten off to little start

By GREG GUFFEY
Sports Writer

After having two teams ranked No. 1 in preseason annuals, the Big Ten Conference is off to one of its worst starts in recent history.

Michigan and Iowa garnered the top spot in The Sporting News and Sport magazine polls. Both dropped their first game, while the conference as a whole is 3-9 two weeks into the 1988 season. Ohio State and Indiana are the only undefeated teams.

The league that used to dominate non-conference foes has hit a dry spell, leaving coaches with plenty of time to ponder their woes and concerns.

"Obviously, we have some problems," Iowa coach Haden Fry said during the Big Ten teleconference. "(The league) is off to one of the slowest starts I can remember. But it's like this every year. Out of 150 teams, I don't think there's but one that goes undefeated."

There may be only one undefeated team each season. The Big Ten squads, however, are falling to foes they should beat—at least on paper. Two prime examples were Iowa's 27-24 loss to Hawaii and Michigan State falling 17-13 at the hands of Rutgers.

"Anytime you lose it's disappointing," Spartan coach George Perles said, "but they all count just one. There's nothing good coming from losing. Players are only as good as their last play and coaches are only as good as their last game."

A comparison with the other conferences makes the Big Ten look even weaker. The Southeastern Conference is 7-1 against non-conference foes, while the Pac-10 sports a 13-2 ledger thus far.

The Big Ten has three teams (Michigan, Ohio State and Iowa) still in the AP rankings, but all are in the bottom quarter. Those other two conferences boast five of the top nine teams in the country. With the recent play of UCLA and USC, the roses may not smell sweet for the Big Ten in January.

Ohio State coach John Cooper, though, says the poor record is misleading.

"I don't put much stock in these early-season games," Cooper said. "I had the chance to watch Michigan against Notre Dame, and Michigan impressed John Cooper. They make the field goal and they're

Michigan State coach George Perles will be smiling only if his Spartans can overcome a 17-13 opening-game loss to Rutgers with a victory over Notre Dame on Saturday.

By STEVE MEGARGEE
Assistant Sports Editor

Pardon the pun, but 1987 safely can be considered the rosiest year for Michigan State football in some time.

After surviving a brutal opening five games with a 3-2 record (losing 31-8 to Notre Dame and 31-3 to Florida State), the Spartans did not lose another game all season. Led by tailback Lorenzo White, who finished fourth in the Heisman Trophy balloting, George Perles' squad won the Big Ten title and entered the Rose Bowl for the first time in 22 years.

The Spartans then defeated Southern California 20-17 in the Rose Bowl, marking just the second time in 14 seasons that the Big Ten champ had won its annual showdown with the best of the Pac-10 Conference. Michigan State ended the season with a 9-2-1 record and a No. 8 ranking.

But it didn't take long for Perles' 1988 squad to develop the first thorn in its side. Rutgers stunned the Spartans 17-13 last weekend in Michigan State's season-opener. Irish coach Lou Holtz is well aware he will be running into an angry football team Saturday when Notre Dame enters Spartan Stadium.

"I listened to the Michigan State postgame radio show on the way to the Stadium for our game (last) Saturday, and I certainly got the feeling that Michigan State will be ready for us Saturday," said Holtz. "I'm sure that would have been true anyway given the rivalry between the two schools, but I'm certain they'll want to prove they are a better football team than they showed against Rutgers. They'll be determined to bounce back, and that won't be easy for us to overcome."

Michigan State again has a tough first five games on its schedule. After facing Notre Dame, Perles' team spends the next three weekends entertaining Florida State, Iowa and Michigan. The Spartans are well aware they need to get a win fast before the roses of 1987 become the dandelions of 1988.

Notre Dame offense vs. Michigan State defense

Before Notre Dame's season-opening 19-17 win over Michigan last weekend, the popular opinion was that Notre Dame's offensive line was in for a hard time. With four players starting their first games at their positions, the Irish line was faced with the task of stopping a Wolverine defensive line rated as one of the best in the country.

The Irish line responded by opening up enough holes to allow Notre Dame to rush for 226 net yards, and over five yards per carry.

But the experienced line faces another huge test this weekend as the Spartans return three of their four starters (left end Jim Szymanski, right tackle Travis Davis and right end John Budde) from a line that only allowed 2.1 yards per carry and 61.5 rushing yards per game last season. Butkus Award candidate Percy Snow, with 17 tackles last weekend, leads a solid linebacking corps on the defensive unit that was first in the country against the run and second overall last season.

In the Rutgers game, the Scarlet Knights gained 94 yards on 33 carries.

"Nobody's been able to run the ball on Michigan State's defense," said Holtz. "Michigan State has been as strong against the run as any team in the country the last few years, and that's not going to make it easy for our offensive line and the inexperience we have."

Of course, Notre Dame has a slightly more powerful running attack than Rutgers. Tailback Mark Green and fullback Braxton Banks plan to start Saturday's game, but sophomore tailback Tony Brooks and junior fullback Anthony Johnson also figure to see action for an offensive backfield rated the best in the country by The Sporting News.

Rutgers' key to defeating the Spartans last weekend was the passing game. Scott Erney completed 25-of-36 passes for 239 yards and two touchdowns last Saturday to help the Scarlet Knights take an early 17-0 lead.

But the Irish looked anything but effective throwing the football against Michigan. Junior Tony Rice went 3-of-12, passing for 40 yards and throwing one interception. The interception, however, bounced off flanker Ricky Watters, and Rice was victimized by a few other dropped passes as well.

Rice will start at quarterback Saturday, with Steve Alaniz at split end and Watters at flanker. Frank Jacobs will start at tight end.

Irish nemesis Todd Krumm has graduated out of the Spartan secondary, but Michigan State does return its two safeties from last year in Mike Iaquaniello and John Miller.

In the Irish kicking game, Reggie Ho, a mini-celebrity after his four-field goal performance against Michigan, will kick the extra points and short field goals. Billy Hackett will handle the kickoffs and long field goals. Jim Sexton, who averaged 43 yards a punt in his first college game last weekend, has the punting job.

Michigan State offense vs. Notre Dame defense

White, the heart of Michigan State's offense for the last three years, has moved on to the NFL's Houston Oilers. It certainly did not take long for Perles to find his replacement.

Blake Ezor, a 5-10, 180-pound junior tailback from Las Vegas, Nev., rushed for 196 yards on 33 carries against Rutgers. And even though his fumble late in the game sealed the upset for the Scarlet Knights, he obviously has overcome the stigma of downing the ball in the end zone to give Notre Dame a freak safety on the opening play of last season's game.

"Blake is as tough as there is pound for pound," said Perles, who turned down an off-season offer to coach the Green Bay Packers. "He's a slashing type of runner that gets six yards per carry. We think he can be one of the outstanding backs in the country."

Multi-dimensional Spartan quarter-

Butkus Award candidate Percy Snow is one of the top linebackers in the nation, and will be looking to take out the frustration of a 17-13 opening-game loss to Rutgers on the Notre Dame offense Saturday. Snow led the Spartans with 17 tackles last week.

back Bobby McAllister also had his share of success running the ball, gaining 58 yards on just seven carries. He did not have nearly as much success throwing the ball, completing 8-of-18 passes for 80 yards.

McAllister does have an excellent receiver in All-America candidate Andre Rison, who caught 34 passes for 785 yards at the split end position last season.

James Moore starts at fullback for Michigan State, while Willie Bouyer lines up at flanker.

The Michigan State offensive line will be missing Outland Trophy candidate Tony Mandarich, who has been suspended for the first three games of the season for a letter he wrote to the NFL concerning a supplemental draft. The Spartans still have plenty of experience on the line as sophomore Eric Moten is the only non-senior starter.

Notre Dame's defensive line, like its counterparts on the offense, did surprisingly well against a highly-regarded Michigan unit. The front three of George Williams, Chris Zorich and Jeff Alm had the Wolverines averaging less than three yards per carry. Tackles Bob Dahl and Tom Gorman, who both missed the Michigan game with injuries, are probable for Saturday.

The linebacking corps, rotating Ned Bolcar, Wes Pritchett and Mike Stonebreaker on the inside, turned in a standout performance worthy of its pre-season acclaim. Stonebreaker, returning after a year of academic ineligibility, was in on 19 tackles last weekend.

Andre Jones and Frank Stams will start at outside linebacker.

In the secondary, D'Juan Francisco and Stan Smagala start at cornerback. The senior tandem of Corny Southall and George Streeter will start at free safety and strong safety, respectively.

Michigan State's kicking game has freshman Josh Butland replacing graduated All-American Greg Montgomery at punter. Sophomore John Langeloh, who was 17-of-24 with field goals last year (7-of-9 from 40-49 yards), continues to hold the placekicking job.

SPARTANS TO WATCH

Blake Ezor (TB)

A tough, slashing runner who hits the line quickly. Ezor gained 196 yards on 33 carries in MSU's opening game against Rutgers.

Percy Snow (MLB)

The 1988 Rose Bowl MVP and contender for this year's Butkus Award has great speed and hits hard. Snow led the team with 127 tackles last year.

Andre Rison (SE)

The senior All-America candidate is a constant big-play threat. Rison is only 11 catches shy of the Spartan career record.

John Budde (DE)

Returns for his third year starting at right end and should be in the hunt for All-Big Ten honors. His 4.88-second time in the 40 is tops on the MSU line.

Bobby McAllister (QB)

McAllister combines speed and a strong arm, and should prove tough to contain. The senior led the Spartans to a 9-2-1 record last year.

Big Ten

sitting on top of the Big Ten with a victory against Notre Dame."

Cooper and his Buckeyes did salvage some pride for the conference with a 26-9 victory over Syracuse, ending what at the time was the longest unbeaten streak in the country. It was Cooper's first game as coach of the Buckeyes in front of the largest opening crowd in the storied program's history.

Indiana, a team that was 0-11 in 1984, opened with a convincing 41-14 win at Rice. The Hawkeyes downed Kansas State 45-10 to even their record at 1-1.

Things don't get any easier this week. In Michigan, the Spartans host No. 8 Notre Dame and the Wolverines entertain No. 1 Miami. Michigan will be trying to end Miami's 19-game road winning streak. The visiting Hurricanes have won 33 consecutive regular-season games.

"That's a tough assignment," Wolverine coach Bo Schembechler said. "I have not seen the quickness and ability of a defense like this. Coach Johnson is worried about the offense, but he shouldn't be with a defense like that."

Six of the remaining eight teams play at home. Wisconsin hosts Northern Illinois, Iowa meets Colorado, Indiana meets Kentucky, Illinois meets Utah, Purdue tangles with Ohio University and Minnesota plays Miami (Ohio). In a big contest, Ohio State travels to Pittsburgh, while Northwestern journeys to Air Force.

There is relief from the dismal start for the league, however. The Big Ten was 8-14 against non-conference foes in 1982, but sent five teams to bowls. In 1984 the league was 11-10 and six teams went on to post-season play.

While still concentrating on the non-conference games, the coaches have the league schedule, and a trip to the Rose Bowl, in the back of their minds.

"We were in a position like this last year," Perles said. "We came into the conference after winning only one game."

"I think Michigan, Iowa and Michigan State are the teams most people picked to win and I haven't seen anything to change my mind," Cooper said.

Mike Stonebreaker (42) looks in on the action as the Irish defense comes up with another big play against Michigan in the season-opening victory for Notre Dame.

Welcome

"Things are going good for the linebackers," Stonebreaker said. "We're rotating, and we're all taking that in stride, because that can be difficult. We're helping each other out, encouraging each other. When we come off the field, we tell each other what happened and who's blocking who."

"The whole defense has a lot of confidence," Stonebreaker continued. "We've been well prepared, but we're also really fired up."

Football runs in the Stonebreaker family. Mike's father Steve played linebacker for the Baltimore Colts from 1964-66 after playing college football at Detroit.

In his freshman season, the younger Stonebreaker made a name for himself with over 70 minutes of playing time in 10 games, including a starting job against LSU. He had nine solo tackles in addition to his 12 assists, and had one interception, setting up an Irish touchdown against SMU. The only game in which he did not see time in 1987 was the Michigan State game, and that discrepancy will be erased Saturday in East Lansing.

As for his return this year, if the Michigan performance is any indication, Stonebreaker will be getting his chances to add to those statistics.

"You never know what's going to happen in a game," he said. "If one of the linebackers is having a good game, he'll get the most playing time. We're not always all going to be playing at the same level."

At the level Stonebreaker has been playing, the Irish are happy to have him back.

Ara goes for 10-10 tie in 1966 with hobbled Irish

By VIC LOMBARDI
Sports Writer

It took Ara Parseghian only three years to win his first national championship at Notre

Time Capsule

Dame. That season of 1966, the Irish outscored their opponents 362-38 on their way to an undefeated 9-0-1 record. Yet many fans were indignant for that one ugly blemish on their record.

That's nine wins, no losses and one memorable tie.

It was a 10-10 bump-and-grind stalemate against Michigan State. The game was dubbed the "Poll Bowl" because of the teams' top rankings and undefeated marks. It was definitely a defensive game, as the teams punted a total of 16 times and compiled six turnovers.

The Spartans struck first, scoring all 10 of their points in the second quarter. Their first touchdown was a 4-yard plunge by fullback Regis Cavendar that capped a 73-yard drive. Then, kicker Dick Kenney split the posts from 47 yards out to make it a 10-0 Michigan State advantage.

The Irish had to play without the use of halfback phenom Nick Eddy, who was injured after tripping down the stairs of a train. Irish quarterback Terry Hanratty suffered a separated shoulder in the first quarter as he was trampled by the Spartans' 225-pound manchild Bubba Smith. The ball was then in the hands of sophomore quarterback Coley O'Brien, who was receiving treatment for diabetes.

O'Brien cut the Spartan lead to three when he found backup halfback Bob Gladieux wide open on a post pattern. In the fourth quarter, the Irish tied the game on a 28-yard field goal by Joe Azzaro.

On Michigan State's following series, Notre Dame's Tom Schoen intercepted a Michigan State pass and Notre Dame took over at the Spartan 18-yard line. The Irish lost eight yards on three downs and Azzaro came in to attempt a 24-yarder. Notre Dame's bid to take the lead failed when Azzaro's kick sailed wide right.

The Irish had one more chance to win on the final drive of the game. But instead of aggressively attacking, Notre Dame kept the ball on the ground until the clock finally expired for a 10-10 draw.

"I simply wasn't going to give away cheaply the tie our crippled team fought so hard to obtain," Parseghian said after the game. "If we had been in the middle of the field it might have been different. But with the ball on our 35, I wasn't going to risk a pass interception because of the great kicking ability of Michigan State's Dick Kenney."

Michigan State's Smith saw the logic in Parseghian's decision.

"You know, as a strategy, the move was brilliant, just brilliant," said the man who later starred for the Baltimore Colts. "After all, if you tie Notre Dame, you lose. Why? Because they're Notre Dame."

But with a 10-10 deadlock leaving both teams undefeated, who receives the No. 1 ranking?

United Press International gave it to the Spartans on the basis that they topped the Irish in rushing, passing and first downs. The Associated Press awarded the top spot to Notre Dame.

The Irish proved they were worthy of that No. 1 billing by pulverizing USC the following week, 51-0, and winning the national championship in both polls.

PROGNOSTICATORS

Each week, The Observer sports staff, a random student picked by the sports department and some well-known figure in the Notre Dame community predict the outcome of the week's major college football games. Records are compiled as to how each person does against the spread. In other words, it isn't enough to pick the winner of a given game. The person must pick the winner and give the underdog points. Home team is in CAPS.

Cole wants his comedy to move you so much that you'd want to get to know him more, or as he puts it, "want to go talk and have a beer with him."

He has a busy and successful career, touring comedy clubs across the States and about 150 campuses a year.
Not to mention appearances on television and as the opening act for groups such as the Talking Heads.

Considering himself to be very lucky in life, he wants to show appreciation for his suc-

people laugh as possible."

So, go tonight, relax and get ready for some great laughs with your "Pal Al."

A four dance program by the Ohio Ballet opens the 1988-89 Saint Mary's College Performing Arts Series tomorrow night at 8 p.m. in O'Laughlin Auditorium.

Blending classical and modern styles, the troupe exists in a state of constant evolution, according to its founder and artistic director,
Heinz Poll. Based in Akron,
Ohio, the group's home since its beginning in 1968, Poll looks for dancers with strong classical technique and an emphasis on vitality, athleticism and personality.

Praised by critics for its speed, precision and "eminently All-American style," the Ohio offers selections that expand the dancers as artists. At the same time, Poll says there must be "something kinetic that the audience can respond to" as well.

Leading off the program is the Pilobolus work "Untitled," highlighted by towering females (actually individual dancers atop the shoulders of their colleagues) racing about the stage. "Summer Night," a more lyrical piece, with choreography by Poll and music by Chopin follows.

"Gravity," with music and choreography by Laura Dean, one of modern dance's brightest stars, is the third work, followed by the evening's finale, the playfully-danced
"Games." Mozart's Piano
Concerto No. 19 in F Major provides the music for the piece, choreographed by Poll and first performed less than a year ago.

Tickets for the Ohio Ballet are priced at $7.50, $6.50, and $5.50, and are available at the O'Laughlin Auditorium box office. Visa and MasterCard are accepted by calling 284-

A goodbye letter to Pasquerilla West

Everybody in PW knew that the priest and his dog, living behind the door marked "CHAPLAIN," were moving to Stanford. Last Tuesday, I finally put the last dusty book in a box, the last tired-looking T-shirt in a shopping bag, handed in the key, and announced that I was finished vacating the premises.

I felt sad to be leaving and expect to stay bereaved for some time to come. I loved of an incident, unabashedly sentimental, that happened in 1980. My first dog, my original Darby O'Gill, got sick, and I had to feed him digitalis for his tired heart. Every night, I took him to the Grotto, praying to keep him with me a little longer. After a month, it became clear he wasn't going to make it. It was as though Our Lady were telling me: "Your dog is tired now and needs to rest. Don't grieve when he goes to sleep.

chaplain is, I think, the sooner the bridges will be built.

None of this means that I'm over the hill, ready to start pushing up daisies. I was a little outdated when I went to PW, disappointed to find out that I wasn't to be the regular celebrant of the Sunday liturgy. That's the way the cookie crumbled in all the women's dorms: having no resident priests, they invited guest celebrants and enjoyed having a variety of priests saying Mass.

In the old days in Keenan, I said the 5 p.m. Mass every Sunday for many years; and for 12 of those years, I said Mass for the children on Sunday mornings. I made a virtue out of being there faithfully, come hell or high water, even when I was tempted to be elsewhere.

In PW, I asked the favor of saying the Sunday Mass at least twice a month. The then-rector replied that the liturgy committee already had a guest list of celebrants they were anxious to welcome. By the end, I was lucky to say the Sunday Mass twice in a semester, and the guests were more visible in the chapel than I was. Eventually, something of the same kind started happening with the weekday Masses, and I wondered what I was supposed to be doing as the faithful chaplain.

If you perceive pain behind my words, that doesn't mean

I'm complaining. New styles and models of ministry are evolving at Notre Dame. Students are encouraged to help plan the hall liturgies, and they do so with an increasing eye on the richness of worship and the meaningfulness of the Sabbath gathering. They shouldn't have to worry if a slightly pre-Vatican II style of cleric has his nose out of joint on Sunday nights when a Young Darby O'Gill-model priest is preaching the Gospel to them.

Another problem that I had as a priest in residence in PW was that of living away from the student sections. It was the same way in the years I spent occupying rooms in Keenan's lobby. Those rooms have been converted into a ladies' facility, because they are too far out of touch to be suitable housing for a resident assistant.

In 116 PW, Darby and I had no neighbors on the entire floor except the field mice that climbed in the window to visit food sales, and Our Lord in the Blessed Sacrament, tabernacled in the chapel down the hall. When the door of 116 was open, the place was too public, like Grand Central Station. When the door was closed, it was too private, and it could get quite lonely.

I felt embarrassed to be seen moving from PW, not knowing what to tell students. Who could explain it? Who could tell them why? Fools gave them reasons; wise men never tried. As the priest asked to initiate an experiment in hall life, I feel like a failure.

Part of what I was dealing with has to do with the expanding role women are taking in the ministry of the Church. I have no problem sharing a pastoral role with women; but some of the brightest and best women, I suspect, and maybe some of the men, would have a problem sharing a pastoral role with an old relic of tradition like me. Eventually, we will work it all out at Notre Dame; but it will have to be worked out with someone more promising than I am.

When asked if I wanted to move back to Keenan-Stanford, I felt I should move for the sake of whatever fulfillment awaits me in my remaining years in a dorm where nobody minds if I'm old-fashioned in my expectations as a chaplain. I hope Stanfordites will not feel they're getting the short end of the stick in allowing me back. I may be singing the September Song, but as Sinatra reminds us: "The autumn weather turns the leaves to flame." I hope that applies to ministry.

Perhaps PW will invite me back as a guest celebrant at a Sunday liturgy, though the experience could be bitersweet when I remember

see, GRIFFIN, page 15

Letters to a Lonely God

living in PW; it was the nicest home I have had up to now, and the people there are among the most wonderful I have ever met.

When I went there in the second semester of the hall's existence, I felt I had been given a specialized mission: the first priest (with one exception) to live in a dorm for women at Notre Dame. The expectation was that within the year more priests would be moving into women's dorms; and maybe women religious could move into guys' dorms as chaplains. Eventually, it was hoped, married couples would be invited to make their homes in the student residences at Notre Dame.

When asked, "Why are you leaving PW?" I'm reminded You'll have as his replacement a newer, younger version to be your sidekick in campus ministry."

The day after the first Darby died, the second Darby, nine weeks old, arrived. The old dog's ashes are buried in the Grotto.

I promise the women of PW: I have not left you orphans. A fresh, new chaplain will come: whether man or woman, priest, sister, brother, or lay person, I can't predict. Whoever it is will be a regular young pup of a chaplain, aggressive in getting the attention of strangers, like a dog who makes friends easily. No dog is an island, and neither is the chaplain who wants to build bridges between young adults and Christ. The younger the

Koreans shoot for the majors

Associated Press

SEOUL, South Korea - If young Cho Pang Heang trains hard, keeps his nose clean and avoids sam jin, he could realize every American kid's dream and become a pro yagu sunsu - a major leaguer.

"Yes," said Cho, an 18-year-old senior at Seoul National High School, the city's largest, "it is my dream, too."

"First, I aim for the national team and Olympics. Then," he said, wiping the sweat from his chin with a practiced hand, "I wish to attain the highest point as a player."

It is possible, but not easy, to become a major leaguer in Korea. Even when one begins, as Cho has, with a running start.

Cho was already a star yu kyook su - shortstop - at his middle school, and like all 19 of his teammates, was recruited by one of the countless scouts Coach Lee Tong Soo employs to bring the talent to him.

Even if he has to dig into his pocket - he makes slightly less than $1,000 a month - to do so.

There is no object lesson in Korea that parallels exactly the American fascination with opportunity, the notion that Johnny - or in this case Kim - through sheer dint of hard work, can grow up to be anything.

Koreans, after all, already work six days a week, from the cradle to the grave, and only one expatriate freedom fighter and a trio of ex-generals have gone on to become president.

Which may explain why the 30-year-old Lee considers tryouts a waste of time, a sin when 42 million people are working overtime to make up decades-old deficits in everything from curveballs to computers overnight.

Baseball is a demonstration sport in Seoul, and the South Koreans, like fellow little league power Taiwan and the United States, already are considered medal favorites.

But they are already planning for the 1992 Games, when real gold will be handed out, and beyond, to the day when the homegrown are better than the few Japanese imported for Korean pro teams and equal with the front-running Americans.

Baseball may have started in America, but its neighbors to the East and South - notably Cuba and Nicaragua - are coming up quickly and bat is meeting ball even in the Soviet Union.

And as it is, Lee has only four hours each day in which to meld a team that will uphold the glorious tradition of Seoul High.

U.S. Olympians greeted by crowds in Seoul

Associated Press

SEOUL, South Korea - Mobbed like a movie queen and smiling for the cameras, Florence Griffith Joyner led the cast of U.S. track and field stars to the Olympics on Thursday, while leading man

Carl Lewis went into hiding after a cocky vow of victory.

Grand Slam tennis champion Steffi Graf, not quite used to her sudden celebrity, recoiled in fear and shed a few tears when engulfed by a sea of shoving, stumbling reporters, photographers and television crews at the airport.

"I've never had a reception like this anywhere before," Graf said breathlessly. "I'm very excited but it's a little frightening. I hope it's not going to be like this all the time."

It won't be for everyone, but the superstars at the Games might as well get used to the crush.

Hurdler Edwin Moses, too fast to let age catch up with him, flew in from Japan with Griffith Joyner, more than 90 teammates and U.S. wrestlers, kayakers and synchronized swimmers.

World-record triple jumper Willie Banks, sprinter Calvin Smith and miler Steve Scott, named captains of the men's track team earlier in the day, also arrived, along with the women's captains, sprinter Evelyn Ashford and high jumper Louise Ritter.

None of them, however, had the glamour of Griffith Joyner, in her unique brand of high fashion as always. None drew as much attention as the lady who is favored to win at 100 and 200 meters. On the arm of her husband, Al Joyner, she breezed to the bus silently.

Lewis made his grand entrance a day earlier, garbed in a white silk suit and boldly vowing to reclaim the title of fastest man alive. Lewis is seeking to match the four golds he won in 1984 in the 100, 200, 400 relay and long jump.

"The gold medal for the 100-meter race is mine," Lewis declared, dismissing rival Ben Johnson of Canada, who holds the world record at 9.83 seconds and has beaten Lewis in six of their last eight races outdoors. "I will never again lose to Johnson."

Lewis said he wouldn't allow further interviews before his events and huffed that he would go home if reporters bothered him. Unlike most of the other 12,000 athletes and officials already in Seoul, Lewis has two houses he can stay in outside the Olympic Village.

He also is the only athlete with his own glossy guide listing his achievements.

Political issues still were nudging sports for top billing with the start of the Games two days away.

Norway wins '94 vote

Associated Press

SEOUL, South Korea - The Norwegian ski resort of Lillehammer scored a stunning upset of sports and tradition over money and politics Thursday when it won the right to stage the 1994 Winter Olympics.

Anchorage, Alaska, finished third in the balloting, behind Ostersund, Sweden. Sofia, Bulgaria, the favorite at the start of the week, was the first city eliminated and said it was upset at not getting more support from its East-bloc allies.

A town of just 21,000 people about 110 miles north of Oslo, Lillehammer used a history of winter sports excellence, a solid collection of existing facilities and an impressive performance by Prime Minister Gro Harlem Brundtland in its final presentation to persuade the International Olympic Committee it was the best choice.

The city also focused on having its venues concentrated in a small area and on its proven organizing experience. Lillehammer bidders, successful in their second try for the Winter Games, said that may have been the turning point.

"When they put the athletes in focus, that was the key moment for us," said Sigmund Thue, general manager of the Lillehammer Olympic Association.

McElreavy has high hopes for -- Columbia (?)

Associated Press

Bear Bryant used to lament that Alabama would have trouble making a first down against the Little Sisters of the Poor.

The Bear was famous for his crying towel as well as his houndstooth hat.

Legions of coaches have poor-mouthed like the Bear but without coming close to his 323 victories and five national championships.

Keeping that in mind, guess which coach made the following positive comments this week:

"We have athletes who can run. Our offense looks as if it's going to be very explosive. I think we're going to have the capability of scoring from any place on the field.

"Whether a team is punting to us or kicking off to us, we'll have the capability of breaking it any time we touch it."

The speaker? none other than Larry McElreavy, whose Columbia University Lions will take a 41-game losing streak, an NCAA division I record for futility, into Saturday's game at Harvard.

"They're not going up to Harvard to compete, they're going up to win, and they're talking about winning big," said McElreavy, who is 0-20 at Columbia, which hasn't won a game since 1983. "There's something to be said for confidence, and God love 'em for that."

Columbia may not beat Harvard (the Lions are 22-point underdogs) but McElreavy fully expects to win some games this year.

"It's the first football team since I've been at Columbia that feels that they can go out on the field and actually line up with somebody and play," he said. "That's a good feeling."

Vanderbilt hasn't been known for stopping people in recent years so Coach Watson Brown sent his staff to Michigan State last spring to learn Coach George Perles' stunt 4-3 defense.

Perles was the architect of the "steel curtain" defense that helped the Pittsburgh Steelers win four Super Bowls in the 1970s.

"We totally took their package," Brown says.

On Saturday, Vanderbilt plays Rutgers, which upset Michigan State last week.

the nights I stood outside the chapel, envying the celebrant. I hope PW will remember I consider myself the chaplain in absentia, not further than a phone call or short walk away. I am not leaving PW without many a sad look behind.

I am grateful to the women of PW for their kindness, patience and tolerance toward Darby and me. I want to thank the rector, Sister Jo, for being good to me and never complaining, even when I played the stereo loud at 3 a.m. in the room below hers. With Sister Jo in PW as a campus minister, I feel safe in saying that I'm not leaving the PW women as orphans.

Finally, I want to express my deep affection for Donna, the housekeeper who watched lovingly over my animal and me, and the rooms we lived in, for so many years, and I want to say how happy I am to be friends with the lovely women who worked with Donna--Bev, Vi and Donna Marie.

Olympic

"It is definitely an uphill battle for a medal performance," stated DeCicco. "In the past fifty years or so, the United States has won only two medals in the fencing competitions."

As a member of the United States Olympic Committee, DeCicco has good reason to base his claims, for he has seen the wealth of talent emerging from Europe.

"The top teams will be from the Soviet Union, Italy, France, West Germany, Poland, and Hungary," stated DeCicco.

"They will probably account for ninety percent of the medals in the fencing competitions."

The intensity level is definitely turned up a notch for the 1988 Summer Games. The Europeans will enter as the overwhelming favorites.

But while the chances are slim for any medals by the Irish contingency, there is always a chance of some reverberating upsets, which certain Notre Dame sports teams have been known to accomplish from time to time.

It's a wonderful life!

Men's tennis team faces tough tourney schedule

By CHRIS COONEY
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame men's tennis team will face challenging opposition this fall, participating in at least five national-level meets as it prepares for an improved regular season schedule next spring.

The Irish will travel to the Naval Academy National Conference Tournament Sept. 23-25 at which they will play eight teams, including four of last year's top 25 teams. The top eight Notre Dame players will attend, playing both singles and doubles in separate tournaments.

Coach Bob Bayliss has had the team practicing 2 1/2 hours a day, five days a week, including two to three weightlifting sessions each week.

The seedings have yet to be made, but Bayliss says team captain Brian Kalbas, freshman standout Dave DiLucia and transfer student Walter Dohlare should vie for the top spots. According to Bayliss, DiLucia, who recently competed at the U.S. Open, has a ranking of 49 in the preseason poll of the best college players. In addition, Dohlare practiced with the Argentinian Davis Cup team this summer.

"He has the potential to be an All-American," says Bayliss of junior newcomer Dohlare.

After the Navy tournament, the tennis team will travel to Ball State Oct. 7-8 where they will battle the Big Ten. Then, on Oct. 15, the top eight players will attend the Volvo All-American, the largest collegiate tennis meet in the nation.

The Irish host the 12-team Tom Fallon Invitational Oct. 28-30 and, on Nov. 18-21, they will go to the Rolex Regional Qualifier in Bloomington, Ind. where they will play Big Ten and Middle American Conference teams to determine who will represent the region at the National Indoor Championships.

Bayliss calls the schedule "ambitious."

"It's a big step up in terms of the kind of competition we faced compared to last fall," the second-year coach says.

The team has definitely improved since last season, although Dohlare has just returned from an injury and DiLucia took a week off after the U.S. Open to catch up on school work. Bayliss says he cannot predict how they will do this fall, but he hopes the level of competition will prepare the team for the spring, when they face last year's No. 3 team, Michigan, and other top 20 schools.

"We may not be able to beat all of them," says Bayliss, "but we can definitely compete with them."

as our overall defense," stated captain Greg Golonka.

A team effort is a key to winning for Off-Campus. "Quarterback Brendon Max and running back John Diebel key the offense," said captain Pete Walsh.

The kicking game will be an advantage as Tim Healy has kicked forty-five yard field goals in practice.

In the Leahy League, Stanford has its entire offensive line returning, which should boost its chances of repeating as division champs.

Cavanaugh hopes to gain some respect by winning its first game since 1986, when Reggie Ho kicked a field goal to win 3-0.

"I can guarantee that we'll score and we may even win a game or two," said Cavanaugh captain Ken Cotter. "We have an extremely young team, but there's a lot of enthusiasm. We should be able to compete with every team."

A bye Sunday will allow Alumni to get more work in with its freshman.

"It's taken some time for them to learn the plays, but everything's beginning to come together," said captain Mike Brcik.

Returning upperclassmen is Zahm's greatest attribute.

"Mike Davis and John Zabierek will go wild on defense, but our offense could use some improvement," commented captain Mike Gaetti.

Pangborn will use its first game of the year as a measuring stick for the rest of the season.

"We were hit pretty hard by graduation so we won't have much depth," said captain Ed Cosgrove. "Bill Fazzlaro, Pete Lusey, and Rob Thompson will anchor the offensive line."

Injuries in the backfield could cause Sorin some trouble according to captain Dave Cardinale.

The games get underway Sunday beginning at 1 p.m. at the Stepan fields and 7 p.m. at Cartier.

Baseball roundup Pags hits Yanks over Boston

Associated Press

BOSTON - Mike Pagliarulo homered, doubled and hit an RBI single as the New York Yankees beat Roger Clemens and the Red Sox 5-3 Thursday night, cutting Boston's lead to 3 1/2 games in the American League East.

Clemens, 6-3 lifetime against the Yankees but 1-2 this season, lost for the sixth time in his last seven decisions, dropping his record to 16-11. The two-time Cy Young Award winner, who pitched a one-hitter against Cleveland last Saturday, allowed nine hits and walked four in 6 1/3 innings despite striking out eight, raising his major League-leading total to 277.

Rick Rhoden, 11-10, won his fourth consecutive start and led the Yankees to their seventh victory in eight games.

Mets 4, Cubs 1

NEW YORK - David Cone won for the eighth time in nine decisions and Kevin McReynolds hit a two-run homer Thursday, leading the Mets past the Chicago Cubs 4-1 for their seventh victory in eight games.

The Mets, who lead the National League East by 10 1-2 games, lowered their magic number to eight, pending Thursday night's game between Pittsburgh and Montreal. New York has won 17 of its last 22.

Cone, 17-3, struck out 10 in seven innings for his sixth double-digit strikeout game this season.

Rick Sutcliffe, 12-13, pitched a six-hitter, striking out five and walking three in his 11th complete game.

Athletics 6, Rangers 2

OAKLAND, Calif. - Dave Parker drove in three runs with a pair of singles as the Oakland Athletics beat the Texas Rangers 6-2 Thursday, moving another step closer to the American League West title.

The A's magic number for clinching the division race was cut to five. They began the day with lead of 11 1-2 games over second-place Minnesota, which played Chicago at night.

Reds 7 Astros 5

CINCINNATI - Eric Davis and Barry Larkin drove in two runs apiece to lead the Cincinnati Reds to a 7-5 victory over the Houston Astros Thursday night.

The Astros rallied from a 6-2 deficit on sixth-inning homers by Billy Hatcher and reliever Danny Darwin off starter Norm Charlton, but were shut down by the Reds' bullpen over the last three innings.

The loss dropped the second-place Astros to seven games behind Los Angeles in the National League West.

Cardinals 3, Phillies 1

PHILADELPHIA - Scott Terry won his seventh straight decision and the St. Louis Cardinals beat the Philadelphia Phillies 3-1 Thursday, snapping a three-game losing streak.

Irish women's soccer team faces W. Michigan

By COLLEEN
HENNESSEY
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame women's soccer team, which started the 1988 season strongly by winning its first two games impressively, dropped two games over the weekend, evening out its record to 2-2. The losses did, however, provide an opportunity for the team and its coaches to focus on several fundamental aspects of its game.

"We weren't particularly sharp as a team in Friday's game (a 2-0 loss to Indiana)," said Irish assistant coach Neil Schmidt, who accompanied the women on the two road trips, because of conflicts in Head Coach Dennis Grace's schedule. "Right now we need to work on defensive responsibilities, as well as offensive finishing. We're getting to the goal, we're just not sticking it in the net."

Schmidt did emphasize that the team played much better on Sunday, in a 1-0 loss to Lake Forest, saying that "we were a completely different team."

The statistics show that Schmidt's assessment of the offense as "knocking at the door, but not being able to find the net" is accurate. According to Schmidt the Irish completely dominated the game, outshooting Lake Forest 22-6, and tallying 14 corner kicks to none for the Foresters. Despite their persistence in creating opportunities, Notre Dame was shut out in both games, prompting Schmidt to emphasize the importance of fundamental skills. "As a young team in its first season," Schmidt said, "we are more concerned with the basics of good soccer than with putting in a lot of different types of plays."

The team was not discouraged by the outcome of the recent games. Instead they are looking ahead positively to their next match, against Western Michigan on Sunday at 11 a.m. at Krause Stadium.

"We've had a week to rest and to practice, to get ourselves back together after the long weekend," said freshman striker Susie Zilvitis.

Schmidt credits the women with intense determination and an enthusiastic spirit, an important factor in the success of any team.

"They're working even harder after the losses," he said.

Senior Debbie Ho echoed his sentiments: "We've been working really hard this week, mostly on our offense. We're still trying to become familiar with each other and see how we fit together as a team."

Irish head coach Dennis Grace, who divides his time between the men's and women's soccer teams, stressed the statistical aspects of last Sunday's game, and looked confidently ahead to Western Michigan.

"We had a good week of practice. We're going to play hard and do everything we can to achieve a victory. It's all there. We just have to put it together."

Both Grace and Schmidt seem to want to focus on progress and development, rather than individual outcome. They have adopted a patient attitude, recognizing that it will take time and experience to coordinate and organize the talent and capability of the team into a comfortable, effective unit.

"The spirit of the girls is good," said Schmidt. "They're always fired up and ready to go. We'll give the teams down the road a very, very tough time."

Dent suspension lifted

Associated Press

LAKE FOREST, Ill. —The NFL on Thursday lifted the 30-day suspension imposed on Richard Dent for refusing to take a drug test, and the Chicago Bears' defensive end says he'll be glad to put the matter behind him.

"I'm just glad everything is over, that everything is said and done," said Dent, who appeared with his agent, Steve Zucker, at a news conference at training camp.

"I just want to get back to work in a proper way. Life is full of chances. Nothing is promised to you. Sometimes you have to do more to get things done," he said.

"I think the commissioner has a good, fair drug policy and I support him on that," Zucker said.

Interhall season starts with key games Sunday

Dillon begins title defense vs. O.C.

By DAVE MCMAHON
Sports Writer

Defending Interhall football champion Dillon will begin its quest of the 1988 title Sunday when it faces Off-Campus.

With the bulk of the team back and a desire to get the season underway, defending Parseghian League champion Dillon is ready to defend the title.

"This is the biggest team we've had in the four years that I've been here," said Dillon captain Paul Drey. "Our guys are hungry and have a pretty good attitude. We're ready to play."

Because of the intense hitting that has been prevalent in its practices, Flanner chose not to schedule any scrimmages in the preseason. Dave Cane anchors the offense at wide receiver, while Brian Friessen will go both ways, playing offensive tackle and middle linebacker.

"We have a young quarterback and an injured fullback in Dave Janyja, so we'll be looking for the defense to cause some turnovers to get us in scoring position," said Flanner captain Dave Kelly.

Grace Hall will be sporting a strong freshman class, according to captain Robert Sedlack.

"We have a few big freshman on the offensive line," Sedlack said. Defense will also be a key for Grace. Rick Granger, Tom Doyle, and Pat Cook, who, according to Sedlack, "will be able to devote full time to Grace football," will lead the defense.

With over half the team returning, experience will be a plus for Morrissey.

Breen-Phillips, Farley favored again

By ARTHUR
GOLLWITZER
Sports Writer

Sunday night at Cartier Field marks the beginning of the 1988 women's Interhall football season. Breen-Phillips will try to defend its crown at 9 p.m. after runner-up Farley plays Siegfried.

This season contains several changes from the past. With the addition of Knott and Siegfried, teams will no longer play every dorm. The schedule calls for games against eight of the ten possible opponents. Some games will now be played on Wednesday night. Depending on the varsity football team's practice schedule, there is also a chance that some late season Interhall games will be played indoors at Loftus Sports Center in order to avoid the cold.

Will there be a repeat of last year's 24-18 win by BP over Farley in the championship? Captain Karen Marsh of Breen-Phillips is cautious. She says they have a very young team with only three seniors returning, but they are looking forward to a successful season.

Karen Lynch of Farley is a little more optimistic.

"We lost a few key players, but we are building strong and working hard," Lynch said.

Chris Finn, Siegfried's captain, is looking forward to establishing a winning tradition in the new dorm. The team has a lot of freshmen, but the coaches have been quietly impressed by their athletic ability and teamwork.

Finally, Coach Brian Miller is looking ahead to another season leading Badin Hall. This year Badin's participation is way up and the future looks encouraging for the perennial Interhall underdog.

1988 graduate Molly Sullivan is one of five Notre Dame alumni participating with the United States team in the Olympics in Seoul, South Korea. Chris Fillio has details below.

Five represent ND at Olympics

By CHRIS FILLIO
Sports Writer

When the Games of the XXIV Olympiad open in Seoul, South Korea this weekend, the Fighting Irish of Notre Dame will be well represented on the United States squad.

Three Notre Dame alumni and two coaches will participate in one way or another for the U.S. team in the 1988 Summer Games.

The most prominent of these Irish athletes will be 1988 graduate Molly Sullivan. The four-time monogram winner and former NCAA foil champion from North Andover, MA., will compete in the foil event in the fourth or fifth spot.

Sullivan's coach for the Irish women's team, Yves Auriol, will help out as one of three coaches for the Olympians in the fencing competition. Two years ago, Auriol led the Irish women's fencing squad to an NCAA National Championship.

Another Irish coach present in Seoul for the Summer Games will be assistant coach Mike Marx. However, as one of the premier foilists in the United States, Marx will leave his coaching duties at home as he will participate against the world's best for Olympic gold.

The two final representatives for Notre Dame will be alumni Mike Gostigian ('86) and Bob Niemann ('78). Both will be participating in the modern pentathlon, an event consisting of five separate competitions in fencing, swimming, running, shooting, and horseback riding. The veteran Niemann boasts a gold medal at the 1978 World Championships in Hungary. In an evaluation of the team's prospects, Irish head fencing coach Michael DeCicco spoke quite realistically.

Hate Miami later, hate Rutgers now

Avoid the rush. Hate Rutgers early.

Don't feel compelled to call Rutgers head coach Dick Anderson and tell him how much you hate his Scarlet Knights. Save those calls for Miami head coach Jimmy Johnson.

But Notre Dame fans have every right to hate Rutgers for its 17-13 upset of Michigan State last Saturday in East Lansing, Mich.

Try to count the times you've heard something like this since Notre Dame's 19-17 victory over Michigan:

"If Rutgers beat Michigan State, there's no way we can lose."

But the Knights' victory over the Spartans does not mean Michigan State is a bad team. It means Michigan State is a mad team. And the Spartans would love nothing better than to take out their frustrations on the Irish in Spartan Stadium on Saturday.

Don't fool yourself. Michigan State can win this ballgame.

The Las Vegas odds made Notre Dame a one-point favorite early this week. But now they've dropped to "pick'em." The odds are even. It's a toss up in the eyes (and wallets) of the bettors.

For all those who insist on believing Notre Dame is going to walk into East Lansing and walk out with an easy victory, you might want to take note of just how the Knights beat the Spartans.

They passed the ball, plain and simple.

They scored both touchdowns and all 17 of their points in the second quarter. One touchdown came on a 61-yard pass and the other on a pass that was tipped by a Michigan State defender and could have been intercepted.

Marty Strasen

Sports Editor

The Spartans roared back from the 17-0 deficit to make the score 17-13. They were on their way to scoring the go-ahead touchdown in the fourth quarter when tailback Blake Ezor, the same Blake Ezor who stepped into the end zone on the opening kickoff to give Notre Dame a safety last year, fumbled the ball deep in Scarlet Knight territory.

Ezor gained 196 yards on 33 carries in the game.

More importantly, the Michigan State defense held Rutgers to 2.9 yards per carry. In 1987 the Spartans ranked No. 1 in the nation in rushing defense by keeping the opposition to 2.1 yards per rush, and eight starters from that defensive unit return in 1988.

Rutgers won by throwing the ball. The Knights were 25-of-36 passing for 239 yards and two touchdowns via the air.

In case you forgot, Irish quarterback Tony Rice was 3-of-12 for 40 yards. That just won't cut it against the Spartans.

"I told Tony Rice that we can't play against the people we're playing if we can't throw the ball consistently," Notre Dame head coach Lou Holtz said. "He did not throw the ball like I expected him to throw it, and you're not going to run the ball against Michigan State."

But there's no need to panic. Rice can throw the ball, and he can throw it well. He's thrown well in practice all fall.

What Irish fans might want to worry about more than Rice's arm is the anger with which Michigan State will take the field. The Spartans have two losses to avenge—the Rutgers debacle and the 31-8 beating they took at the hands of the Irish and Tim Brown last year.

"This will be another tough, physical football game," Holtz said. "I'm just afraid we're going to run into a team that's in a rather angry mood." Don't you just hate Rutgers?
