Miami shirts sold without approval

By NATASHA WILSON
Senior Staff Reporter

Although only one T-shirt with the Notre Dame versus the University of Miami theme has university approval, at least 14 shirt designs have been sold on campus.

The shirts feature a variety of jokes about the University of Miami and the school's head football coach Jimmy Johnson.

Gerry Quinn, a resident assistant in Morrissey Hall, said he ordered 200 shirts and has sold all but 40.

Quinn decided to sell T-shirts as a hall fundraiser and submitted an application to Student Activities.

He said his dorm would be able to sell more shirts if they were not restricted by some of the permit regulations.

"A lot of people selling underground have unloaded 500 and 600 shirts. But we can't go door-to-door like they can so it's hard to compete with all the other shirts in the market."

Quinn said he and his dormmates sell the shirts in the dining hall. They also sold several to alumni and visitors at their concession stand on the day of the Stanford game.

"You can sell shirts to students, but we wanted to cater to alumni and parents too," he said.

According to Du Lac, University recognized student organizations and campus residence halls are eligible to apply for a permit allowing them to engage in a merchandising activity on the Notre Dame campus.

Individual students representing only their own interests are prohibited from selling products on campus unless they receive special permission from the University.

Eligible groups must submit a merchandising application to the Student Activities Office.

Applications are considered by the director of Student Activities on the basis of benefit to the students, the uniqueness of the service to be offered, and the credibility of the organization involved to deliver a quality product.

There are additional regulations for imprinted items which contain the words, pictures, symbols or logos representing "Notre Dame," "Irish," "Fightin' Irish," the Leprechaun, Golden Dome or school seal must be approved by the Hammes Notre Dame Bookstore and the Student Activities Office.

Merchandising permit holders are prohibited from door-to-door sales or solicitation in the residence halls.

Organizations or dorms which fail to comply with the guidelines face penalties that may include a fine, revocation of the vendor's permit and/or suspension or probation of the student organization. In the past, violations have also resulted in the confiscation of several groups' merchandise, said Joe Cassidy, director of the Office of Student Activities.

Cassidy said merchandising infractions are handled by the Office of Residence Life.

No students have been penalized so far for selling T-shirts related to the Miami game, according to Dr. Ann Firth, director of Residence Life.

Only two Miami theme products currently have merchandising permits, Cassidy said.

As the countdown to Miami runs out, students find themselves selling, buying and sporting all sorts of Miami wear--of the hateful kind."

The sophomore, junior and senior classes received permission to sell postcards for students to send to Miami students. Morrissey Hall has a permit to sell T-shirts which say "Once and For All, ND vs. U Miami."

Quinn said he had anticipated a lot of red tape, but the application process "was much more simple than I imagined."

Cassidy said his office usually responds to the applications within 24 hours.

The Morrissey presidents decided that 10 percent of the gross profits should be given to the dorm, Quinn said. The money will be used to buy a second dorm computer and to pay for SYRs and section events.

"It has become one of our better fundraisers for the dorm," he said.

Four N.D. students considered for Rhodes

By DAN MURPHY
Senior Staff Reporter

Five Notre Dame students have the intellectual capacity, sense of purpose, and potential for leadership necessary to win Rhodes and Marshall scholarships, according to Donald Sniegowski, chairman of the Notre Dame Selection Committee for the Rhodes and Marshall scholarships.

Seniors Eric Lanciault, Milda Palubinskas, Robert Raphael and Theresa Rice gained the selection committee's endorsement for both scholarships. Senior Heather Ingraham, who did not apply for the Rhodes Scholarship, was endorsed for the Marshall Scholarship.

With the endorsements the five students will move on to state or regional competition and if chosen will compete on the national level for a chance to study in Great Britain for two years. Winners of the Rhodes Scholarship study at the University of Oxford while Marshall Scholarship recipients study a pursue a proposed course of study at one of forty-five universities, chosen by the candidates in the initial application.

"I'm quite pleased, but it's a bit intimidating, because along with the scholarship endorsement you carry with you," said Lanciault, an architecture and art history major. "I'm up against kids from the Ivy League schools, in no way do I feel confident," he said.

Sniegowski is more confident of the Notre Dame nominees. "It was a very difficult decision

'Quarter Mile' to fund United Way charities

By KATHY RYAN
News Staff

Hall Presidents' Council will be hosting "The Quarter Mile," a fundraiser for the United Way, tomorrow from 9 a.m.-5 p.m. on South Quad.

A mile of tape will be set up in front of the bookstore for students and passers-by to attach quarters.

Tom King, president of Morrissey Hall, is credited with bringing "The Quarter Mile" to Notre Dame. King was first introduced to "The Quarter Mile" by a friend from Purdue University.

The maximum amount of money that can be made is $13,000 although Michelle Larose, Co-Chairman of HPC, said they expect to make $1000-$1500 for the United Way, given that one of four students donates.

"I encourage everybody to come down. Just give one quarter. It could really be a good thing," said Larose.

Larose also commented that all hall presidents participated in finding volunteers to work on shifts to oversee the event. They will also be supplying change for bills and accepting donations.

Why will we beat Miami? 'Cause this is Notre Dame

Beat the rush.
Hate Miami now.

Mark McLaughlin

News Editor

Four years and a month or two ago, lots of Notre Dame people got on buses and rode three hours to a concrete tent in Indianapolis. Here I was, a psyched-up freshman, awaiting my first Notre Dame victory. Since we lost to Purdue that day, it was a long, quiet ride home. On the way back, someone laughed and said "Oh well, so we lost. Don't get so uptight."

At least four people told her to shut her mouth. "You don't understand," they said. "This is Notre Dame."

Three years back I flew down to Miami to vacation with my family and catch the Miami game. We had had a mediocre season but hoped to give Miami a battle. That was the famed 58-7 debacle. Beating their basketball team by 51 didn't help. Being spat on by Miami fans didn't help either. I'm told they urinate on fans too, but I missed that.

I've never seen Notre Dame fans physically abuse other schools' fans in four and a half years of tailgating and roadtripping. That's because this is Notre Dame.

Last year some friends and I drove the nineteen hours to Miami to bake in the sun and watch the game. We were abused by Miami fans on the way there and had to put up with microphoned cheerleaders and a fake CO2 hurricane. But we sat in the top row and cheered on our team.

Jimmy Johnson supposedly said after that loss to Miami that he "couldn't wait for October 15th." We don't bother badmouthing teams we've just defeated here. This is Notre Dame.

At Michigan State the Notre Dame student section of about 500 stood for the entire game and made about as much noise as the entire Michigan State crowd. Meanwhile, we were yelled at by an old man to "stop standing up so much. It's annoying."

He didn't understand. This is Notre Dame.

Last week's Pitt game was soaking wet and fairly cold for most of the game. We sat through it and watched in the Notre Dame section along with the marching band and some of the more die-hard roadtrip veterans on campus. Meanwhile, three sections of the Pitt student area were empty by halftime. We remarked on this only to be told by a Pitt fan that "most of the students are here."

Most isn't good enough here. This is Notre Dame.

In the thirteen years plus I've been watching Notre Dame football (I'm an alumni kid) I have never seen a game as big as this one. You can see it all over campus, on peoples' T-shirts, on banners, in the 'ND' signs in the windows, in newspapers all over the country, in classifieds like the one above.

JOHNSON WILL HAVE

Notre Dame fans have been given lots of publicity for their interest in this game, and for their sometimes Miamiesque behavior. Let's face it, cursing out Jimmy's secretary is uncool. But by and large, Notre Dame students are psyched for the game. As far as hatred goes: hey, God hates things, too.

There was a special on one of the TV halftime shows last year rating the most difficult stadiums to win in. Notre Dame, sad to say, was ranked only second. We've won there lately, but to be acclaimed the best, we will simply have to beat the best of the rest.

This Saturday, we will go to the most hyped football game any of us have probably seen at Notre Dame. We will yell and scream and chant S-C-U-M and give Jimmy a headache. We will make noise for the entire game, not just the first drive and the last quarter. And we will win.

Because this is Notre Dame.

Don't just beat the rush.
Beat Miami.

Novak: Symbolism needed in '88 race

By REGIS COCCIA
Senior Staff Reporter

The 1988 presidential election will be determined by the extent to which the candidates identify with the American people, a noted political observer said Wednesday night in the second of a three-lecture series.

Michael Novak, visiting Welch professor of American studies, told an audience in the Center for Continuing Education that the presidential election is about how Americans view themselves and their country.

In the series titled, "Choosing Our King: A Monthly Election Watch" Novak said the campaign of Republican presidential nominee George Bush has succeeded in projecting an image the people can identify with. But Democratic nominee Michael Dukakis has not, he said.

"The presidents are the main hooks on which we hang our national identity," Novak said. "We're electing someone who carries with him, in literary symbols or otherwise, the symbol of our peoplehood."

Polls early in the race indicated a wide lead for Dukakis, but recent polls show a much closer race between the two candidates, with some giving Bush an edge, said Novak, director of social and political studies at the American Enterprise Institute in Washington, D.C.

"It's been a curious reversal, but I think the Bush campaign has realized that becoming king involves assembling a majority who want to say, 'He's one of us, he's what we want the country to become like,'" said Novak.

Campaign issues such as the Pledge of Allegiance have been treated as trivial but are actually very important to the symbolic reality of the presidency, Novak said.

"The issues, in short, are not trivial, though the experts and the journalists think they are. Bush seems to be where the people are, and Dukakis seems to be where the experts are," he said.

"It has to do with whether you believe in the Constitution, whether you believe in the power of the office of the president, whether you want values in education, values that support the Constitution," Novak said.

"Dukakis does not understand symbols, and to that extent he's falling behind in the polls," Novak said. "He didn't grasp the importance of the presidency as the main vehicle for what I would call symbolic realism," he said.

Another factor which will affect the election is seven "swing states": California, Illinois, Michigan, New Jersey, Ohio, Pennsylvania and Texas, six of which lean toward Bush, Novak said. Combined, these states have a total of 184 electoral votes, he said.

and I am very confident about the people we have chosen," he said. "The candidates are very strong, they were rigorously selected," he added. The Notre Dame selection committee, which consists of eight members, deliberated for a total of almost 13 hours before choosing the five nominees, according to Sniegowski.

Past Notre Dame students have fared well in the scholarship competitions, said Sniegowski. Three Notre Dame students won Rhodes Scholarships and one was awarded a Marshall Scholarship in the last four years, according to Sniegowski.

A combined background in science and humanities impressed the selection committee, said Raphael, a physics and philosophy major. "I was surprised and delighted (by the endorsement)," said Raphael, "but there's a long way to go."

The committee interviewed 11 of 37 applicants and nominated five students for the scholarships. Rhodes Scholarships will be awarded to 32 university students nationwide, and up to 30 students will be selected for the Marshall Scholarship.

"I'm pleased I got this far," said Lanciault, "it's probably going to be a lot harder before it gets easier. I'm taking one day at a time," he said.

Polls show Bush holds lead

Associated Press

NEW YORK -- A state-by-state poll of nearly 10,000 likely voters released Wednesday rated George Bush solidly ahead in the race for the presidency, saying he held a huge lead in the contest for electoral votes.

Although polls of the nation as a whole indicate a close race between Bush and Michael Dukakis, the ABC News-Washington Post survey of the standings in each state -- where the election actually is decided -- put Bush firmly ahead.

ABC reported that Bush led solidly in 21 states with a total of 220 electoral votes -- just 50 short of the total needed to win. Dukakis was firmly ahead in three states and Washington, D.C., for 30 electoral votes.

With the election nearly a month off, voter sentiments can change. But the ABC-Post poll, the only public survey of its size this year, was the first recent poll to indicate a significant advantage for either candidate.

The poll was conducted from Sept. 21 through Monday among 9,778 likely voters in the 50 states and the District of Columbia. ABC said it had a margin of error of plus or minus three percentage points.

ABC and the Post also conducted a standard national survey that put the race at 51 percent for Bush to 45 percent for Dukakis.

Direct Track Access - One of the nicest conveniences of a CD player is the instant access you have to any song on a disc. You don't have to manually fast-forward or move a tonearm; just push a button.

Dynamic Range - Like actual live music, a CD player is capable of reproducing a very wide range of sound levels, from the very softest solo violin to the full force of an entire orchestra. The absence of background noise and the fact that digital recordings don't require signal compression help make these ultra-wide dynamic range values possible.

Fast Search - At up to 3 different speeds, you can audibly scan a disc to find a particular selection. The pitch of the sound remains normal because brief samples are played at a fast rate.

Filter Type - All CD players require filters to remove unwanted super-sonic high frequency noise. Analog filters require very steep slopes than can introduce phase-shift distortion. The newer digital filters operate on the signal while it's still in binary numeric form, before being converted back to an analog audio signal.

Frequency Response - CD players are capable of reproducing, with unequal accuracy, a range of frequencies that is wider than the range of human hearing (20 to 20,000 Hz).

Headphone Volume Control - Many of the players have built-in headphone outputs with their own volume control for private listening.

Number of Program Tracks - All of our CD players allow you to program in a sequence of songs you want to hear, skipping or repeating songs at will. This number tells you how many selections the player can remember.

Over-Sampling Rate - CD players which feature Digital Filtering use a technique which doubles or quadruples the normal sampling rate. Player with 2X over-sampling have an 88.2k Hz sampling frequency, while 4X players have a 176.4k Hz rate.

Remote Control - For the ultimate in ease of use, wireless remote is included with many models. Most remote controls include direct track access.

Subcode Output - In the future, CDs will contain additional test information, such as liner notes and lyrics. This special output jack is already built into several current models.

Signal-To-Noise Ratio - Unlike tape decks and turntables, a CD player's background noise is virtually non-existent. These very large S/N values indicate a huge difference between the level of the audio signal and any internal noise.

Total Harmonic Distortion - This measure of accuracy shows you how just a tiny percentage of harmonics (or frequency multiples) are generated by the CD player.

Track Repeat - This function gives you non-stop replay of the disc at the touch of a button.

Wow and Flutter - While speed fluctuations can noticeably alter the pitch of a cassette deck or turntable, the CD system is so precise that Wow and Flutter are beneath the limits of measurement.

LaFortune computer lab opens

By JIM LANG
News Staff

The LaFortune Computer Lab is now available to students on a test basis until its October 24th grand opening, according to Scott Cowdrey, director of User Services.

The lab, located in the basement of the LaFortune Student Center, is equipped with 50 Macintosh SE computers. All are connected to the lab's two laser printers, enabling a student to print from any terminal, Cowdrey said.

Certainly one of the objectives of the lab is to give students easier access to computing, Cowdrey said, but a more long term objective is to increase the usage of computing in the teaching curriculum.

Cowdrey hopes that with the opening of this new lab, and a remodeled lab in O'Shaughnessy, "the faculty will make more use of computing in the way they teach."

The lab's hours match LaFortune's, and Cowdrey said that there will always be a consultant available to assist students who may be having problems or are unfamiliar with the system.

One consultant, senior Gary Wong, said that since the lab's preliminary opening on Monday response has been "moderate", but he thinks that the lab will fill up as the semester goes on.

Computers will be available to the students on a first-come, first-served basis, said Cowdrey, and if no terminals are available, a student can take a number and wait.

Security anticipates no problems

By CINDY PETRITES
Staff Reporter

The University will not increase security over next week's fall break, despite the huge turnout expected for Saturday's football game against the University of Miami.

"We're not anticipating any particular problems," said Notre Dame assistant security director Phillip Johnson, who also indicated that security will be maintained for the duration of the break.

Johnson does not foresee the football game posing any special threat to the security of the dorms.

"We expect a lot of energy and extra exuberance this weekend with the Miami game," Johnson said, "but Security is prepared to handle any 'misfocused energy'."

Johnson did, however, recommend that students take a few necessary precautions before they leave for break.

"Never leave anything that can't be replaced in your room. Make sure your windows and doors are locked and your shades are closed," he said.

Johnson also requested that students staying on campus be sure to report any suspicious activity, stressing that security is "only a phone call away," and "never too busy to check out a call."

Johnson added, "We all have to work together to make Notre Dame a safe place."

Though the dorms will be locked for the duration of break, students who are staying on campus will have access to their dorms by key or Detex.

"It's up to each individual hall as to how they secure the hall during break," said Evelyn Reinebold, director of Student Residences.

Reduced student population and reduced legitimate space use are some factors which contribute to crime during breaks, but, says Johnson, break-ins on campus are rare.

"Most crimes on campus are crimes of opportunity," said Johnson, "like stealing a book-bag from the dining hall."

The only theft reported during a vacation break last year happened during October break. A Keenan Hall resident reported to Security the theft of 15-20 compact disks worth $250 from his room to last fall.

Pope's first decade reviewed

By NATE FITZGERALD
News Staff

Pope John Paul II will celebrate his 10th anniversary as the earthly head of the Roman Catholic Church this Saturday.

During these ten years he has travelled around the world speaking on the doctrine of the Catholic Church, and acted as the voice of the oppressed in various third world nations.

Notre Dame faculty see him as a complex pope, and hold different opinions of his doctrine.

Father Robert Pelton, director of the Institute for Pastoral and Social Ministry, said that John Paul "has a concern for the millions of poor people throughout the world."

Pelton sees this as one of the pope's best attributes, and said John Paul's social awareness works as a starting point for social programs around the globe. According to Pelton "the Pope has issued documents that are very articulate in regard to the needs of the third world."

During his ten years, the Pope has steadfastly upheld church doctrine on various controversial issues.

Father Charles Curran, a tenured Catholic University professor had his Canonical Mission withdrawn because he disagreed with some of the Church's practical moral teaching in areas such as contraception, homosexuality, and divorce and remarriage.

Father Richard McCormick, a professor of Christian Ethics, said that this issue came down to "whether or not it is permissible to publicly dissent from those (church) teachings."

McCormick also said that the Pope is a master at using the media to his advantage. He also praised the Pope's "energy, prayerfulness, and his vitality," saying that "he has been a wonderful minister of the gospel." At the same time, McCormick also said that John Paul is "obviously tightening the screws on moral disagreements."

To do this, the Pope has kept strict control over the appointment of bishops, "We are seeing increasingly conservative and unimaginative bishops across the country," McCormick said, and as a result, "an awful lot of Catholics feel abandoned and alienated by their bishops."

Ellen Weaver, Assistant Chairman of the Theology department, described Pope John Paul as a very complex person. "Some see this pope as very radical in his social views," Weaver said, "because they see his doctrine as critical of capitalism."

At the same time, Weaver said, "some accuse him of being far to the right." Weaver cited as an example, John Paul's firm stance requiring that religious garb be worn.

Yet, in Poland, where Catholics are a minority and a voice against communism, Weaver said that "wearing religious garb is a sign of defiance of the government."

"The Church's concerns could be formulated more accurately," Weaver said.

The Pope's stance on artificial birth control has often been questioned during recent years.

"There are very few Catholic couples that don't use some form of artificial birth control and are still good practicing Catholics," Weaver said.

The prospect of female priests has also been a subject of debate under Pope John Paul. He has stood firm in not allowing women to become priests, though many feel that he has not fully justified this stance.

"I don't know of any solid biblical or theological reason for excluding women from the priesthood," Father McCormick said.

The question of female priests has been researched and reported on by committees of both the Catholic Biblical Association and the Catholic Theological Society. Neither of these found that there was anything biblical or theological standing in the way, according to McCormick. "I think we ought to have women priests," McCormick said, "and probably will under a different pontiff."

NEW YORK -The best place to live in the United States, in terms of psychological well-being, is State College, Pa., and the worst place is Reno, Nev., according to a researcher writing in Psychology Today magazine.

Bloomington and Lafayette-West Lafayette, Ind., also were among the 25 best places to live, the magazine said.

Robert Levine, a psychologist at California State University in Fresno, ranked 286 metropolitan areas based on rates of crime, suicide, alcoholism and divorce rates.

Levine said he was surprised that "the West and South, known for their mild climates and easy living, ranked highest and second highest respectively on all four types of pathology."

He said the 25 best places were: State College; Grand Forks, N.D.; St. Cloud, Minn.; Rochester, Minn.; McAllen-Pharr-Edinburg, Texas; Altoona, Pa.; Bloomington, Ind.; Provo-Orem, Utah; Utica, N.Y.; Akron, Ohio; Sheboygan, Wis.; Lancaster, Pa.; Paterson-Clifton-Passaic, N.J.; Bismarck, N.D.; Allentown-Bethlehem-Easton, Pa.; Lafayette-West Lafayette, Ind.; Long Island in New York; Poughkeepsie, N.Y.; Albany-Schenectady-Troy, N.Y.; Lawrence, Kan.; New Bedford-Fall River, Mass.; Bloomington-Normal, Ill.; Wheeling, W.Va.; Cumberland, Md., and Wausau, Wis.

The 25 worst were: Reno; Las Vegas, Nev.; Miami; Lakeland-Winter Haven, Fla.; North Little Rock-Little Rock, Ark.; Panama City, Fla.; Odessa, Texas; Jacksonville, Fla.; San Francisco-Oakland; Los Angeles-Long Beach; West Palm Beach-Boca Raton, Fla.; Fort Lauderdale-Hollywood, Fla.; Phoenix, Ariz.; Oklahoma City; Orlando, Fla.; Sacramento, Calif.; Ocala, Fla.; Bakersfield, Calif.; Tampa-St. Petersburg-Clearwater, Fla.; New York; Houston; Riverside-San Bernardino, Calif.; Stockton, Calif.; Tacoma, Wash., and Tucson, Ariz.

Soviets may implement income tax

Associated Press

MOSCOW -Another Western institution may soon follow rock music and fast food into Soviet society: the ritual of filing annual financial returns and paying a progressive income tax.

A pair of economists said in articles published Wednesday that a complete reform of the Soviet tax system is necessary to expose those who have made fortunes in the multibillion dollar black market, and spread income more equitably.

"To search for some kind of scientific approach in our system of taxation is useless," Deputy Finance Minister Viktor Semenov told the weekly Moscow News.

Semenov and economist V. Yaroshenko, writing in the Communist Party daily newspaper Pravda, both said a yearly statement of income and expenditures was essential.

Yaroshenko added that the income tax should be made more progressive, as it is in many other countries, to be fairer to poor people.

Currently, Soviets pay a flat 10 percent of their income in tax if they make less than $320 a month, the average industrial wage. The rate increases a few percentage points for higher incomes. Most taxes are deducted at the work place and workers don't need to file annual tax returns.

"Declarations of income and light industry and food processing, two areas of the economy Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev is urgently trying to reform to provide a better life for Soviet citizens.

Taxes significantly raise the retail price of refrigerators, vacuum cleaners, TV sets and tape recorders, he said.

The wholesale price of a Volga, the largest standard passenger car produced in the country, is $5,460. After indirect taxes are added, however, the final retail price is more than $25,600.

Black marketeering and other organized crime sap the economy of more money every year than is paid out in benefits to pensioners, invalids, students, families with many children and orphans, he said.

It is so well-organized that it constitutes a "government within the government," he said.

The current economic and tax structure hurts the poor, Yaroshenko said. He suggested the government impose more progressive income taxes, and that illegal millionaires be allowed to give their ill-gotten wealth to state-run charities anonymously before filing their financial statements.

Yaroshenko's article was the second published in Pravda in two days to address the effects of economic reforms on the Soviet poor.

In an article published Tuesday, a farm economist said increasing food prices would be an unacceptable way to eliminate the $105 billion the government pays every year in subsidies. Instead, Kim. N.

Khmelkov said the Soviet Union must make farming much more efficient.

In yet another article printed Wednesday, Moscow News said that in the first half of the year, $130,000 was confiscated in the Soviet capital from people illegally trading rubles for hard currencies. But it said police are nowhere near able to control the problem.

Western tourists are approached near hotels and tourist sites in large cities by hordes of people offering to exchange money. Such exchanges are illegal and give the Soviets access to goods they cannot buy in the official economy.

Candidates brace for debate

Associated Press

Neither George Bush nor Michael Dukakis came in contact with the voters on Wednesday, huddling instead with their handlers to go over lines for Thursday's second and final presidential debate of the campaign.

Bush staged a brief made-for-television event before disappearing into his debate preparation meetings. He invited Los Angeles Police Chief Daryl Gates in for breakfast in a subtle continuation of his effort to make crime control a central theme of his candidacy.

The vice president told reporters he intended to show the country "what my heartbeat is" during his face-to-face clash with Dukakis and said he would continue depicting his rival as a liberal.

Bush also arranged to attend the National League playoff game between the Los Angeles Dodgers and New York Mets after wrapping up his debate preparation for the day.

Democratic candidate Dukakis had baseball on his mind as well, as he interrupted his debate homework to play catch with an aide while photographers recorded the scene.

Referring to the first presidential debate and the one last week between running mates, he said, "We're ahead 2-0; we're going to make it a clean sweep."

He described his debate repertoire in baseball lingo, as well, saying he would use a "fastball, curve, slider—maybe a knuckler" during his 90 minutes on stage.

Workers in Los Angeles erected a debate-night set—wooden lecterns, red carpet and telegenic blue background—that was trucked in from Omaha, where it was used in last week's vice presidential debate.

The debate begins at 9 p.m. EDT on the UCLA campus in Los Angeles.

Bush goes into the 90-minute encounter with a modest lead in the public opinion polls, although Dukakis appears to have cut into the Republican advantage since last week's vice presidential debate.

Republican vice presidential candidate Dan Quayle, the subject of anonymous criticism from senior Bush advisers since that debate, said as he set out on his daily campaign rounds that if he finds out who was talking, "I think there will be staff changes."

Quayle uttered a seeming declaration of independence after saying his campaign appearances had been so tightly scripted by Bush advisers that he was told when he could wave as he got off his campaign plane.

"That's all been thrown away," he said. "I am my own handler, and if you have any questions, ask me." He said he would take advice from Bush's aides "under consideration."

Congress votes to close military bases

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Congress overwhelmingly passed legislation Wednesday authorizing the Pentagon to close unneeded military bases at a savings of up to $5 billion a year.

The Senate approved the bill 82-7 and the House followed shortly afterward with a 370-31 vote, which sent the measure to President Reagan. He is expected to sign it.

The Defense Department estimates that between $2 billion and $5 billion a year can be saved if it is permitted to pare down the list of 3,800 U.S. military installations.

"We are addressing one of the great sacred cows in this country and in this body," said Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas.

The bill sets up a complicated base-closing procedure which essentially cuts through the thicket of laws enacted by Congress in the past decade to thwart Pentagon efforts to shut down bases.

Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., chairman of the Armed Services Committee, said, "We know we cannot afford excess bases that we don't need, (but) we all also understand the reality and the sensitivity of the communities in America that are so dependent, in some cases, on these bases, at least in the short run, and we know that reflects itself here in the Congress."

The bill endorses a Pentagon-appointed commission which has been meeting for months, trying to put together a list of bases to be closed. The current panel will be expanded to 12 members by the bill.

The panel will make its recommendations by Dec. 31. Defense Secretary Frank Carlucci would have until Jan. 15—five days before he leaves office—to either accept or reject the entire list. He could not change the list.

If Carlucci approves the list, Congress would have until mid-April to overturn the proposal, but it could only do that by approving a resolution which could then be vetoed by the incoming president.

No base closures would begin before 1990.

Nunn and Sen. John Warner, R-Va., ranking Republican on the Armed Services panel, said they have talked with commission members and no list of bases to be closed has yet been prepared.

But if some of Virginia's numerous bases are on the list, Warner said, "I'm willing to take the heat, if it becomes a matter of necessity, in my own state in order to cut waste from the national defense."

"If we're going to do something about balancing the budget, the way to do it is to eliminate unnecessary spending and bases," said Sen. William Roth, R-Del.

Commercial plane nears Air Force One

Associated Press

WASHINGTON - A commuter plane and Air Force One may have flown too close to one another yesterday while President Reagan was traveling from Philadelphia to Newark, N.J.

But, the president was in no danger, officials said.

The two planes came no closer than two miles horizontally and 500 feet vertically, according to a preliminary report from the Federal Aviation Administration.

"The president was not in danger at any point," said White House spokesman Mark Weinberg. Spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said the president was not aware of the incident until later.

FAA spokesman Bob Buckhorn said the incident occurred at 2:35 p.m. EDT, northwest of Trenton, N.J.

"We're investigating a possible operational error with a Bar Harbor Airlines aircraft," Buckhorn said. "We are not talking about a near miss. Preliminary reports indicate there may have been an operational error."

Buckhorn said the error involved a "separation violation. In that particular area the separation should have been three miles and it was allowed to close to two miles."

Weinberg said Air Force One pilot Col. Robert Ruddick felt that the president was not endangered, nor were any passengers.

Bar Harbor Airlines spokesman Steve Mason said Continental Express flight 3494, an ATR-42 aircraft, was en route from Baltimore to Newark with 33 passengers and three crewmembers aboard when the incident occurred.

One killed, 124 injured in Rio de Janeiro blaze

Associated Press

RIO de JANEIRO, Brazil - Workers trapped in a 22-story building hung out of windows and shouted to be rescued from flames and thick smoke Wednesday in a fire that officials said killed one person and injured 124 others.

It took two hours to put out the blaze at the government-run Banco de Brasil building, located in the busiest intersection of downtown Rio.

Firefighters broke through walls of adjacent buildings to pull people to safety. Hundreds of office workers fled in panic.

The fire was confined to the bottom three floors of the bank building, but enormous amounts of heavy smoke billowed from every floor, casting a haze for blocks over the congested business district.

The cause of the fire was undetermined.

Ex-firefighter accused of arson

Associated Press

JEFFERSON, n.h. — Authorities said Wednesday a former volunteer firefighter is suspected of setting 16 suspicious blazes that have terrified this town since May, prompting residents to sleep in shifts and form night patrols.

Plainclothes police officers hustled Lance Lalumiere, 23, into the police station in neighboring Lancaster, where he was arraigned on one felony arson charge stemming from a fire at his brother's cabin. Bail was set at $50,000.

State Safety Commissioner Richard Flynn said the state will seek indictments against Lalumiere, charging him with setting 15 other fires.

Five of the 21 suspicious fires apparently were set by others, said state Police Lt. Gary Sloper, who declined to give details, including how many suspects there are and whether any of the suspects acted in concert.

The fire for which Lalumiere was charged occurred Aug. 23 at his brother's cabin. It was the 19th suspicious blaze to break out.

Lance Lalumiere reported the fire and was trying to extinguish it when firefighters arrived. He was questioned for eight hours afterward and police searched his home and car.

In an interview two days later, Lalumiere told the Democrat: "All I tried to do was save my brother's house and this is the thanks I get."

The weekly Coos County Democrat reported Wednesday that LaLumiere's brother, Michael, said Lance Lalumiere had been taken Tuesday to the Twin Mountain police barracks in neighboring Carroll.

"He is upset," the brother told the paper. "There's a definite mental strain; there's no doubt about that."

Jefferson, a quiet hamlet of 850 people, has had 21 suspious or confirmed arson fires since a May 5 grass fire. A barn was the next target, then empty homes and later occupied ones. Most of the fires were set late at night, many at the back of buildings.

No one has been killed or seriously hurt, although some people barely escaped and lost their homes.

As the toll of scorched structures mounted, many families began sleeping in shifts and abandoned vacation plans. Some residents began night patrols. Police feared vigilante violence.

Network President responds to charges

Dear Editor:

I found Rev. Oliver Williams' Oct. 7 Viewpoint column "Shell Article Disregards Facts" disturbing. While Rev. Williams consistently characterizes my Oct. 5 article on the PaganShell initiative as a collection of "rumors, . . . half-truths, innuendo and ad hominem arguments," he fails to mention that all of the information presented in my article is quoted directly from a series of reports issued by the Interfaith Center on Corporate Responsibility. Rev. Williams attempts to refute the credibility of my article without once offering any evidence as to why the ICCR report should be considered invalid. Is simply ignoring the sources of my argument a reflection of the "intellectual competence" which is the "coin of the realm" here at Notre Dame?

Even more disturbing are Rev. Williams' statements concerning a discussion he had about an institute for the study of post apartheid South Africa with James Armstrong. After stating that "The University of Notre Dame is not now considering such an institute and has never considered any such project," Rev. Williams goes on to state that "on a number of occasions, ethicists have approached me with a suggestion for a center to study the transition to a black-controlled South Africa. One strong advocate is James Armstrong . . ." If I am not mistaken, this statement implies that Rev. Williams has had previous communications about such an institute.

An October, 1987 report prepared by ICCR Executive Director Timothy Smith lists James Armstrong as the individual "assigned responsibility for (the PaganShell) 'religious strategy.'" The report continues: "(Armstrong) argued persuasively within Pagan and to Shell that the religious community could be a key actor in any Shell campaign, that the churches' positions needed to be carefully monitored, and that their joining the boycott could create a 'critical mass' against Shell's South African presence." The report then outlines several actions taken by Armstrong which are consistent with the Neptune Strategy. Thus, Rev. Williams in his own words presents evidence that an institute reflecting the PaganShell initiative had indeed been discussed with at least one Notre Dame official -- Rev. Oliver Williams.

Finally, I would like to respond to the charge of intellectual incompetence leveled against me in the final paragraph of Rev. Williams' article. On Oct. 5, The Observer printed my article which contained extensive quotes from a very reliable source -- the ICCR. In the past, nineteen Catholic orders have divested from certain corporations on the basis of reports issued by the ICCR. I assume Williams knew this and that is why he chose not to address my source directly, though he has presented me with his original manuscript, which separated certain quotes from my article into blocks -- signifying that they were taken from another source.

Instead, he strongly suggests that my article is a collection of rumors, seemingly the product of my imagination. This approach does not reflect my conception of "intellectual competence." Neither, Rev. Williams, does linking your name and your views with leaders such as Archbishop Desmond Tutu and Rev. Beyers Naude -- leaders who vehemently oppose the constructive engagement plan outlined in your book. I am not now, nor have I ever been, one to engage in ad hominem arguments--a point that is clear upon consideration of the validity of my sources, a validity that embraces the spirit of "intellectual competence" which all hope to preserve at this university.

Alumni deserve students' respect

Dear Editor:

I am writing in response to a Viewpoint column which appeared in an early September issue of The Observer. I realize that this letter comes a little belatedly, but since the column concerned the behavior of alumni at home football games, and four home games remain on this year's schedule, I wished to give a student's response to the article's distasteful implications.

The article was directed specifically against a small group of alumni, the "rotten apples" who apparently spoil the campus for the rest of us. These rotten apples flaunt the alcohol policy, disrupt the study atmosphere of the library, and make general nuisances of themselves about campus. The article concluded that alumni should think of themselves as guests, and should behave accordingly upon visits to our campus.

This attitude towards the large body of Notre Dame alumni is offensive, obnoxious, and sorely deserving of reproach. When a student chooses to enroll at Notre Dame, he is doing more than simply selecting a convenient location at which to complete his studies. He is choosing to enter himself into a community rich in academic, spiritual and athletic tradition and excellence. This community is comprised not exclusively of students, but of faculty, administrators, students and yes, alumni. I will never think of myself as a guest in my own community, be it two weeks or 20 years from my graduation, and I would hope that no alumni think of themselves as guests of their alma mater.

As for the fact that alumni disregard the policies which govern students, it is important to keep in mind that while the alumni are members (the largest group, in fact) of our community, they are not students, and do not deserve to be treated as such. Next football weekend, be mindful of the fact that we are students at this University for four years, we are alumni for the rest of our lives, and treat the alumni with the respect they deserve.

United Way Quarter Mile October 14

Dear Editor:

The local United Way chapter supports more than forty agencies of community service. Big Brothers/Big Sisters, the Boys Club, Catholic Social Services, the Red Cross, and the Urban League, to name a few, all derive support from the proceeds that are generated in the yearly fund-raising campaign. These agencies provide a valuable and often necessary service to those in the South Bend community who are less fortunate.

As members of a Christian community dedicated to service to others, and also as members of the South Bend community, it is only natural that Notre Dame should become involved in the United Way campaign. In the past the major focus of the campus fund-raising drive has been through dorm representatives who go from door-to-door in their individual halls asking for donations. This will take place in the next few weeks. However, this year we are going one step further with a special fund-raising event.

From 9 a.m. until 5 p.m. on Friday, Oct. 14, anyone walking by South Quad will notice a mile of tape on the quad outside the Bookstore. On your way to the Dining Hall, on your way to class, on your way to the Rock, stop by and stick a quarter up on our mile of tape. You don't have to run, or swim, or bike. It's probably the easiest way to give.

We thank you for your support and generosity in advance and look forward to seeing you on Friday.

Hit the box and rail before hitting the road

Times have changed, haven't they? I'm a campus minister, and you're a senior heading off into the sunset as the driver of a jalopy with a set of bad tires that you're hoping will last for a thousand-mile trip, home and back. Forty years ago, the campus minister would be on your back like Karl Malden, warning you how your holiday could be spoiled; but the priest's ad-

Vatican II agrees that it's a misuse of the Eucharist to treat it like magic. So, with a smile and a handshake, we priests, who laugh at the old hocus-pocus, say goodbye to a student who climbs behind the wheel of a piece of junk. Halfway home, he has a head-on collision with another car, and is instantly killed. When the priest gets the bad news, he says a prayer for the student's soul; and if the solution to a trapped worker afraid of dying in a state of mortal sin. Perhaps priests still endanger themselves to deliver the sacraments; but when they do, it's hushed up, as though they were guilty of a lapse of good taste which encourages superstition.

Contemporary Catholics, drunk on the new sense of freedom that comes from an unrestrained reliance on the mercy of God, dull their consciences with an indifference toward sin: they are warmed by the hope that their infidelities and betrayals are regarded by the Father as endearing eccentricities, at which the Father winks out of love for the Son Who died to save sinners. It seems quite modern to regard God as the Senior Member of the club Who murmurs "Boys will be boys," when He hears of highjinks that violate the commandments.

As campus ministers, many of us tend to love, trust, and admire Notre Dame students so much for their obvious good manners, generosity, amiability, sensitivity, intelligence, and all-around good looks that we fail to notice when they've lost touch with God. This is not because they've become bad or wicked, but because they are so full of exuberance at being young, beautiful, and lust, as well as so charming that they blind themselves to the direction in which their excesses are taking them. What if some of the students who are setting off for home with breakneck speed have bad consciences? If some of them don't have bad consciences, maybe they should have if they've dealt with their temptation by giving into them until they have a track record in shame that a libertine could be proud of.

We treat all these outward signs of American students being themselves in a care-free way as though they were proofs of an inner grace, which is the seed of everlasting life. We're so pleased with the seed of everlasting life. We're so pleased with the sight of good-hearted youngsters keeping busy in the service of the poor, the neglected, the forgotten and the helpless that we forget to warn them that the devil, like a roaring lion, is on the prowl, seeking the champions he can easily devour.

As campus minister, we can approve everything about the golden lads and girls whom we're trying to help mature as Christians, except their consciences. The conscience is a private place that offers no admittance to outsiders, except maybe God, and He's not outsider. What else is the conscience but His still, small voice?

I didn't invent the admonitions to vigilance, and I have not intention of exaggerating the warnings which lie side by side in the Gospels with the premises of unconditional love; but no campus minister can promise students that they don't have a reckoning to make with the Giver of all good gifts. I was a student myself when I was struck by the words: "What does it profit a man if, in gaining in the world, he loses his soul?" For if there is a final rejection, it will be because I have first rejected Him when, with the self-insight that comes at the judgement, I see myself as a hypocrite who chose to live untrammelled by His grace, which would have kept me honest.

Even then, I will not have lost Him forever if His love is able to defeat my despair. If not, as Mencken said: "One of the crying needs of the time if for a suitable burial service for the admittedly damned," which preachers who are castaways need for themselves. What should I think of myself as a campus minister if I told Christians, dead in their sins: "You're a-okay with the Lord."?

Break begins tomorrow. Why not hit the box and hit the rail before you hit the road home...and before the road for home can hit you back, God forbid! Even if you think I'm reviving Catholic folklore as I echo the exhortations of priests who helped Notre Dame stay Catholic in the recent dark ages, that's my advice to you as a modern campus minister.

I don't think God is waiting to catch you in sin so that He can zap you to hell. However, He's offering you His grace so that you can straighten out your life, so that you can have peace of mind as long as you live, and receive His praise at the end. That's the only kind of folk religion I have to offer you, and it's an older tradition at Notre Dame than football or the stadium. Whether you accept it or not, before you set out for home, why don't you ask the folks to buy you a new set of tires?

Father Robert Griffin

Letters to a Lonely God

vice would be: "Hit the box and the rail before hitting the road." Translation: "Make a good confession and receive the Eucharist before starting your trip."

That old-fashioned priest was a folk Catholic, as you can tell from his jargon. He offered the sacraments as though they were more useful than condoms; as though your soul could be in danger instead of your health.

Whatever the up-to-date minister wishes on you, it's not apt to be the sacraments. "The sacrament of Reconciliation is for the turning point in your life or in your year, whichever comes first," he may say, "and the Eucharist shouldn't be received as though the communion bread and wine have the efficacy of a St. Christopher's medal." Does this mean he thinks more or less of the Eucharist than the old-time priests did?

Any Catholic who has worn out a set of the documents of priest is my age, he hopes to God the victim was in a state of grace when he died.

What in the devil does any of us know about the state of grace? When Joan of Arc was asked by her judges: "Are you in a state of grace?" She answered: "If I am in a state of grace, I pray God will keep me there; if I'm not, I pray that He'll put me there." Her answer is the only answer, perhaps, that you can give if you're asked: "Are you in a state of grace?" For God alone knows the truth about the state of your soul. If you're not in a state of grace, you could be in a state of mortal sin; but that's too dismal to talk about, unless you want to give yourself nightmares. Is there a hell? Does God send anyone there? If not, what do you mean by mortal sin?

Catholics my age were raised on the fear of mortal sin. Priests of my generation would crawl down a dangerous mineshaft, to offer ab-

Nothing but 'Nunsense'

Special to The Observer

The hilarious nonsense of "Nunsense" is coming to the Morris Civic Auditorium in South Bend on Oct. 21 and 22 at 8 p.m. This rollicking winner of four 1986 Outer Critics' Circle Awards including Best Off-Broadway Musical, stars Broadway, television and film actress/comedienne, Dody Goodman.

This long-running, off-Broadway musical hit is the story of the Little Sisters of Hoboken (affectionately known as "The Little Hobos") who have a very serious problem. Their well-intentioned convent chef, Sister Julia, Child of God, accidentally poisons 52 members of the order who contract botulism after sampling her vischysoise.

Forty-eight Sisters have been properly buried, but there are no funds to bury the rest because Mother Superior spent the money to buy a VCR for the convent. The deceased Sisters have been stored in the deep-freeze until the funds can be raised, and the city health inspector is, unfortunately, beginning to get nosy.

The five remaining Sisters, spared only because they had gone to another parish to play Bingo and thus missed the fatal dinner, decide to stage a benefit to raise the money needed. The variety show, includes Sister Mary Leo's, "Dying Nun Ballet," and songs such as, "We've got to clean out the freezer."

Dan Goggin, creator and director of "Nunsense," is a former seminarian and has great regard for his Catholic roots. The show is non-controversial, and has delighted nuns and priests as well as audiences of all beliefs.

Tickets for "Nunsense" may be purchased at the LaFortune Center information desk or by contacting the Broadway Theatre League of South Bend at 234-4044.

ND's Green sets sights on sports broadcasting

By THERESA KELLY

Assistant Sports Editor

Behind the quarterback in the Notre Dame backfield, Mark Green's actions speak louder than words, but one day Green's words are going to have to stand alone.

The senior leader in the talented Irish backfield is interested in getting behind a microphone instead of a quarterback one day, and hopes to make a career out of broadcasting when his football career ends.

"I'm interested in going into broadcasting," Green says. "Maybe some news and sports, not necessarily commenting, but broadcasting in general. I talk about it all the time to the (broadcasters) who come around here.

"Every time one of the guys (broadcasters) comes around, they give me a hard time about it. They say 'Hey what about your day show, no, no, your night show, no, I think we'll have a midday show for you.' They give me a bunch of trouble, but that's OK. I really want to give it a shot."

Green's interest in public speaking began his junior year at Riverside Poly High School in Riverside, Calif., where he was commissioner of publicity. His tasks included leading the entire school in the Pledge of Allegiance and reading the daily announcements.

"One day, I was leading the Pledge, but I was reading over the announcements," Green said, "but saying the Pledge at the same time. It's second nature, you know, you don't think about the Pledge of Allegiance. But all of a sudden I forgot the words. I just blanked out. I had no idea where I was. It was one of the more embarrassing moments of my life.

"Of course, everyone finished and just sat down, but then I remembered the words, and I said, 'With liberty and justice for all,' and everyone just looked up at the P.A. system and probably wondered where I was that morning."

No one is wondering where Mark Green is now. He's been in the Notre Dame backfield for three seasons after coming to Notre Dame as a flanker, and he is one of three captains of the 1988 Irish squad, along with tackle Andy Heck and linebacker Ned Bolcar.

Green's upbeat personality is a perfect leadership trait for the team.

"I think it has to do with the attitude," Green says. "When I come into the locker room I'm always smiling. I'm a bubbly kind of person. I go out with a good attitude every day. I don't complain about the things we have to do at practice, work hard all the time and do what I have to do. People respect me and I give respect back, and that is what counts.

"I guess you can really tell if a person is doing the right thing if they don't get yelled at. I don't get yelled at that much, so I've got to be doing something right."

Notre Dame student body hyped up to 'Hate Miami'

By PETE GEGEN
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame athletic department, accused last year of being one big hype machine as Tim Brown won the Heisman Trophy, may have met its match this weekend.

Meet the Miami haters. "I personally hate Miami," says John Smith, sporting an "Unfinished Business-- Catholics vs. Convicts" t-shirt. "I think the players are a bunch of thugs."

Moderate to extreme forms of this viewpoint are shared by a majority of the Notre Dame student body, which blames Miami and Jimmy Johnson in particular for "running up the score on us" in the last two meetings. Apparently those blowouts left deep emotional scars in Irish fans, who have whipped up such a frenzy nationwide that it even has the athletic department worried.

"I understand Miami coach Jimmy Johnson has been the recipient of several phone calls and letters from Notre Dame students," wrote Irish coach Lou Holtz in a letter to students in the Oct. 6 issue of The Observer. "It seems to me that if we want to display our intelligence, we ought to show a great deal of respect to Miami."

Holtz also mentioned in a press conference this week that he doesn't believe the student body really hates Miami. But he also has said that he has not seen the students wearing those Hate Miami t-shirts, printed with messages ranging from "Even God Hates Miami" to "Canes Blow."

As students will attest, there is more to the shirts than their novelty.

"These people seriously hate Miami," says one t-shirt vendor, describing the type of people buying his "Catholics vs. Convicts" t-shirt. "It's really crazy. Even alumni clubs want them--one club has asked us for between 50-100 t-shirts."

The t-shirts are big business for vendors, and a big symbol of the hype for the national media to concentrate on. The athletic department is hoping that, other than the t-shirts, the media will not have any Hate Miami incidents to write about. The students, it appears, are not concerned about how the media will portray the hype.

To their credit, however, Notre Dame students appear to be concerned about the issue of class.

"We've got to stay in the bounds of class," says freshman Nick Campanella. "We're on the borderline. I mean, how much more not in taste can you be than the t-shirts referring to Jimmy Johnson's anatomy?"

"I think there's room for more," responds sophomore Jeff Racho, "but we're going to be on the borderline during the game."

As of Wednesday, CBS had no definite plans for covering the Hate Miami hype, though the network does plan to concentrate on the root of it all.

"During the game the announcers will make references to the blowouts, accompanied by footage," says Susan Kerr, Associate Director of Sports Information for CBS.

The most interesting result of this hype will be the students' behavior at the game.

"I think the people are smart enough to just have a good time," says sophomore Rob Thompson.

Something has to give.

There will be an awful lot at stake Saturday afternoon with the much-anticipated arrival of a team of Hurricanes to Notre Dame Stadium—streaks, a No. 1 ranking and a whole lot of pride.

Top-ranked and defending national champion Miami (4-0) and fourth-ranked Notre Dame (5-0) will meet in a super-hyped, nationally-televised contest (CBS) with a scheduled kickoff of 1:30 p.m.

The Hurricanes enter the matchup riding the wave of a 36-game regular-season win streak, the longest such streak since Oklahoma won 45 straight in the 1950s. That Sooner streak ended in 1957 at the hands of Notre Dame. Miami has also won 20 consecutive away games. The Irish carry their own streak into the matchup, winning their last eight games in Notre Dame Stadium.

Notre Dame is coming off a 30-20 win at Pittsburgh while Miami had an off week to prepare for the game, after crushing Missouri two weeks ago by a 55-0 score.

"You like an off week when people are hurt," said Hurricane head coach Jimmy Johnson. "But we're healthy. Sometimes you may be less sharp after a layoff than before. When you're on a roll like this, you'd just as soon play the next week rather than waiting. But we've had good practices this week."

And as much as both coaches deny it, there is the lingering memory of recent Hurricane runaways, including last year's 24-0 whitewash of the Irish and a 58-7 thrashing in 1985. Notre Dame fans have not forgotten.

But the numbers, too, cannot be forgotten. Under Johnson, who came to the helm on June 5, 1984, Miami is 45-8 and has played for the national championship three of the last four years.

"This is great to have this type of game," said Notre Dame head coach Lou Holtz, "for our student body, for our fans, players and for us. It is a big football game, but I think we have to keep in mind that this is a football game—we're not talking about World War II here. It's a game that you'll remember all your life, but still it's just a simple old football game."

The Irish are trying to pull off a feat that they've accomplished five times in the last 17 years—knocking off number one. The last time was in 1982 in a 31-16 upset of Pittsburgh.

"This is what Notre Dame is all about," said Holtz as he closed his weekly press conference on Tuesday. "Notre Dame has a history of beating the No. 1 teams in all sports. It has a history of doing the impossible, a history of coming up with an unexpected performance by people you never dreamed of. I think that is what we'll need, but I think history is on our side."

Miami has beaten the nation's top-ranked team six times in this decade, including each of the last three seasons (28-16 over Oklahoma in 1986, 20-14 over the Sooners in the 1988 Orange Bowl and 31-0 over Florida State in the 1988 season-opener for both teams.

Notre Dame defense

The Hurricanes boast an explosive passing game behind the arm of junior quarterback Steve Walsh, who masterfully directed the Hurricanes back to score two touchdowns late in the fourth quarter to hold off Michigan 31-30. Walsh has thrown for 1,037 yards and 10 touchdowns and Miami is 16-0 with Walsh as the starting quarterback.

"Offensively, they've really refined their pro-style attack," said Holtz, "and Walsh is as good as anyone you'll find running it. He never gets sacked and he's got great receivers and they've just got so much confidence in him. He's been there before in games like this, and we haven't."

The Miami offense averages 451 yards a game, more than 300 of those yards via the air. But its productivity has at times been hampered by turnovers. The 'Canes have fumbled the ball 14 times, losing 10, and have been victims of four interceptions.

Walsh's passing efficiency is complemented by its variety—the junior Heisman trophy candidate has averaged passing to more than six receivers a game. Five Hurricanes have caught 10 or more passes on the season. Running back Cleveland Gary, who leads the team in rushing with 189 yards on 38 rushes, also leads all receivers with 19 receptions for 270 yards.

Last year's Miami receiving corps of Michael Irvin, Brian

Senior cornerback Donald Ellis returns the ball after one of his eight career interceptions for the Hurricanes.

Blades and Brett Perriman, all drafted in the first two rounds of the 1988 NFL draft, have been replaced by the trio of Dale Dawkins, Randal Hill and Andre Brown, which is proving itself equally competent.

The Irish are strongest at the linebacker slot, where Ned Bolcar, Mike Stonebreaker and Wes Pritchett possess hard-hitting experience and know-how. The defensive line is young, with George Williams, Jeff Alm and Chris Zorich all seeing their first career start in the opener against Michigan. Flash Gordon and Frank Stams have been steady on the outside and will need to join the line in putting pressure on Walsh—otherwise it could be a long afternoon.

"We competed awfully well against Pittsburgh," said Holtz, "but we did not get the things done that we need to do on defense, and that can be deadly against a team like Miami's."

The secondary will likely face more artillery from Walsh than it has seen from any other quarterback this season and will need to rise to the task, led by safeties George Streeter and Pat Terrell, with Stan Smagala and Todd Lyght at the corners. Walk-on freshman kicker Carlos Huerta is 7-of-10 for the season, including the game-winner against Michigan.

Notre Dame offense
vs.
Miami defense

The Irish have recently added an effective passing threat to an already powerful running game.

The Irish average 287 yards rushing per outing. Junior quarterback Tony Rice has rushed for nearly eight yards a carry, primarily on option keepers, en route to 353 yards and five touchdowns.

"Without question Tony Rice gives us a great deal of concern," said Johnson. "He is playing more aggressively this year and really attacks the corners well on the option. He may be the key."

Senior tailback Mark Green (367 yards on 76 carries) and sophomore Tony Brooks (58 carries for 384 yards) have paced the Irish running attack along with Rice.

The focus of much attention in the preseason and early games, the passing game has picked up in recent weeks as Rice develops more confidence. Flanker Ricky Watters leads all receivers with six catches for 63 yards while freshman tight end Derek Brown has pulled down two touchdown passes. Rice also has been effective finding his running backs on short passes, which could come in handy against the quick-blitzing Hurricane defense.

Defensively, the Hurricanes have been just as dominating as they have been on offense. Miami opponents are averaging just over eight points and 240 total yards a game. Miami has forced 13 turnovers in four games, including seven interceptions.

"The thing that makes Miami awfully good on offense is they are a great defensive team," said Holtz.

The matchup also will feature a war in the trenches as Miami has not given up a rushing touchdown in six games dating back to last season.

Middle linebacker Bernard Clark has led the Hurricane defense this year, punishing runners and leading the team in tackles with 51.

Miami also boasts a swarming pass rush, sacking the quarterback 17 times this season, 15 in its last three games. All-America candidate Bill Hawkins, a defensive end, and defensive tackle Russell Maryland are tied with three sacks each.

"We have rushed passers very well this year," said Johnson, "but our scheme of defense is set up for that. We spend a great amount of time on that, but you sacrifice things sometimes when you do that. It makes you vulnerable to a scrambling quarterback and play-action passes."

Punter Tim Kalal averages only 37 yards a kick, but the longest punt return on Miami this season is eight yards. Ricky Watters, third in the nation in punt returns with 19 yards per attempt and two touchdowns, will try to change that.

Next QB up: Steve Walsh

Junior follows rich Miami QB tradition

By MARTY STRASEN

Jim Kelly, Bernie Kosar, Vinny Testaverde... and Steve Walsh.

The fourth name on the above list of recent Miami quarterback greats could hardly have been expected to earn the distinction of the first three when he headed south from St. Paul, Minn., in 1985. In fact, the only schools that showed much interest in Walsh out of high school were Miami, Louisville and Iowa State.

But the school that produced the three current NFL stars who preceded Walsh obviously knew something about the junior who led the Hurricanes to the national championship last year and is gunning for the Heisman Trophy this season.

"I wasn't looking to throw for 4,000 yards and set all kinds of records like the guys before me," said Walsh in a telephone interview Tuesday. "The only thing I wanted to do that they did was win football games."

Walsh wasted little time in achieving that goal, as he won his opening game last year against Florida on national television. Neither Kosar nor Testaverde managed to win his debut, each losing to the former arch-rival Gators, who recently dropped Miami from their schedule.

Walsh threw the Hurricanes to a 12-0 record last season, including a 20-14 victory over Oklahoma in the Orange Bowl for the national championship, and already has Miami off to a 4-0 start and the No. 1 ranking this year.

"Steve Walsh may be the best college quarterback Miami has ever had," Notre Dame head coach Lou Holtz said.

"He may not have the strongest arm and he may not have the best statistics of the ones who played there before him, but he does what needs to be done to win. He's exceptionally football smart."

"They've really refined their pro-style attack, and Walsh is as good as anyone you'll find running it," Holtz continued. "He never gets sacked, he's got great receivers and they've got so much confidence in him. You just can't stop Miami's passing game."

Even the loss of the top three receivers from last year's Miami squad did not stop Walsh and his aerial attack. Michael Irvin, Brett Perriman and Brian Blades all were drafted within the first two rounds of last year's NFL draft.

"It was sort of a tough adjustment, but these guys haven't been doing any worse than the other guys," said Walsh, who hooks up with an average of six different Hurricanes each game. The three receivers replacing last year's trio, as a group, have two more receptions than Irvin, Perriman and Blades had at this point in the 1988 season.

All five Miami offensive skill positions have starters with at least 10 receptions in four games this year. Fullback Cleveland Gary leads the team with 19 catches for 270 yards. In contrast, Ricky Watters is leads Notre Dame with six catches for 63 yards in five games.

"The reason we recruited him is he was a very intelligent quarterback who was a winner and who could throw the football," Miami head coach Jimmy Johnson explained. "He was not highly-recruited, but the qualities he possesses are what we look for in a quarterback."

Jimmy Johnson has led Miami to 36 consecutive regular-season victories, including 20 on the road and a 20-14 triumph over Oklahoma in the Orange Bowl for the 1987 national title.

Johnson has 'Canes rolling

Controversy, winning always follow Miami coach

By STEVE MEGARGEE
Assistant Sports Editor

During his four-year tenure at the University of Miami, Jimmy Johnson has not exactly gone out of his way to build up his public image.

But when you look at his record, it's difficult to think how much more he needs to do to become recognized as one of the truly outstanding coaches in recent college football history.

With Johnson at the helm, the Hurricanes boast a 45-8 record, one national championship, four consecutive New Year's Day bowl appearances, a 36-game regular-season winning streak and a 20-game road winning streak.

Johnson didn't exactly arrive at the Coral Gables, Fla., school like a hurricane. Previous Miami coach Howard Schnellenberger had resigned in 1983 to take a job coaching a United States Football League team in Miami. That franchise never became a reality, and Schnellenberger eventually took a job coaching the University of Louisville near his hometown.

Schnellenberger was Miami's darling after the Hurricanes upset Nebraska 31-30 in the 1983 Orange Bowl to win the national championship.

Johnson had compiled a 30-25-2 record in five years at Oklahoma State, not bad for a team used to finishing in the middle of the Big Eight, but a little too ordinary for a school coming off a national championship season.

"There was a lot of pressure on Johnson," said Greg Cote, who covers Hurricane football for The Miami Herald. "Schnellenberger was a popular coach who had just delivered a national championship. Expectations were high, and Johnson came into that situation."

His first year at Miami featured the talents of quarterback Bernie Kosar, but the Hurricanes were only 8-5 because of a weak defense. The last three games of that 1984 season were a 42-40 loss to Maryland, a 47-45 loss to Boston College and a 39-37 Fiesta Bowl loss to UCLA.

Miami then lost its opening game of the 1985 season, falling 35-23 to then arch-rival Florida.

That's the last time the Hurricanes have lost a regular season game.

That also was the year the Hurricanes disposed of Notre Dame 58-7 in Gerry Faust's last game coaching the Irish, and in which Johnson was accused of running up the score. Miami blocked a punt to score its last touchdown and ran a reverse in the final minute of the game.

"You stay in the offense you run," Johnson said at the time. "We're a passing team. Everybody knows that. We school our quarterbacks to take advantage of what defenses the opponents run, not to be governed by the scoreboard."

Miami was hoping to impress the pollsters, as Johnson was upset that an Oklahoma-Penn State Orange Bowl matchup was determining the national champion that year. Miami had defeated Oklahoma 27-14 earlier that season. Johnson had to eat his words because Tennessee ended up trouncing the Hurricanes 31-7 in the Sugar Bowl.

Behind Heisman Trophy winner Vinny Testaverde, Miami again had an undefeated regular season in 1986. But in a celebrated Fiesta Bowl with Penn State, the Hurricanes were upset 14-10 in a game that decided the national champion.

The pre-game festivities did not help Miami's image with the public at all. The most memorable event had the Hurricane players walk out of an activity dressed in fatigues after the Penn State players presented a mildly offensive skit concerning the Miami team. The press billed the game as a "good guys vs. bad guys" showdown, always making sure to contrast the styles of Penn State coach Joe Paterno and Johnson, who didn't help matters by sarcastically referring to Paterno as "St. Joe."

The Macintosh SE, powerful and expandable

Here's a multiple choice quiz you really can't fail. In fact, it may even improve your G.P.A.:

Should you buy one of our Macintosh™ Plus personal computers? Or one of our Macintosh SE personal computers?

The answer, of course, depends.

If you've been holding out for that ever-elusive combination of high performance and affordability, you'll very likely want our Macintosh Plus. It has one full megabyte of RAM. 128K of ROM. And a double-sided 800K internal disk drive.

Translated, that means the Macintosh Plus can plot a statistical formula or repaginate a report in the time it took you to read this sentence.

But—if you truly want to expand your horizons—we suggest the Macintosh SE. It has all the attributes of the Plus, plus a little more. Like one megabyte of RAM, expandable to four megabytes. A walloping 256K of ROM. As well as an expansion slot that lets you customize the system for your particular needs.

And to ensure you have plenty of space for your growing intellect, the SE gives you a choice of two storage options. Either two built-in 800K disk drives. Or one built-in 800K disk drive along with an internal 20-megabyte hard disk.

So even if your term paper begins to reach epic proportions, you can rest assured you'll have room for the whole thing. All six hundred footnotes included.

Green

Green has been doing something right during Irish football games, having missed only two since coming to Notre Dame in 1985 as a consensus prep All-American. The six-foot, 184-pound tailback finds himself sharing the backfield with some talented runners.

"I think it's great for the team," Green says. "I'm in some good company. You see Anthony Johnson, Tony Brooks and Braxton Banks and you think 'Wow, those guys are good, those are football players.' We're all spoken of in the same breath, and that's really a compliment to me."

Green led the Irish with 861 yards rushing last year, including three straight 100-yard rushing games against Navy (102 yards), Boston College (a team single-game high 152) and Alabama (149). He ran for six touchdowns, including two against the Eagles, and had 13 pass receptions for 98 yards.

Green does not like to talk about personal goals, but does numerate the four goals set by the team before the season.

"We sat down in the spring and jotted down what we wanted to accomplish," Green says. "The first goal was a winning season. If we got that, the second goal was a bowl game. Even better was the third goal, to be playing in a bowl game on New Year's Day, and the fourth, of course, to be playing for the National Championship."

Barring an Irish collapse, the first two would seem to be in the bag, with the Irish standing at 5-0 heading into Saturday's matchup with the Miami Hurricanes.

This year, Green has led the team in rushing twice, against Michigan and Michigan State. On 76 carries, he has netted 367 yards for an average of 4.8 yards per carry, and has scored three touchdowns. He also has three receptions for 44 yards.

Green ranks second on the team, behind quarterback Tony Rice, in total offense with 77.6 yards per game, and second to Tony Brooks in all-purpose running with 436 total yards.

The numbers reflect a balanced offensive attack, which Green says is a real advantage for the Irish.

"The defense never knows who is going to get the ball," Green says. "We can go to a lot of people and be successful, and that is a real advantage to our offense."

Former Notre Dame field goal kicker Mike Johnston is swept up by his jubilant teammates after kicking the game-winning field goal against Miami in 1982. Vic Lombardi recalls that game, which was the last time the Irish beat the Hurricanes, in "Time Capsule" below.

Johnston rallies Irish in '82

Six years.

It has been six long years since the Irish have last defeated the Miami Hurricanes, when Mike Johnston nailed the dramatic 32-yard field goal that sealed a 16-14 Irish victory.

"Machine Gun" Kelly. The 'Canes were looking for their first victory in five winless confrontations at Notre Dame Stadium.

After a scoreless first quarter, Blair Kiel scurried into the end zone on a quarterback bootleg for a 7-0 Irish advantage. But this would be the only Irish touchdown of the day. The Notre Dame defense, which was rated first in the nation, held quarterback Mark Richt and the Miami offense to a squeamish 63 first-half yards.

The fireworks began in the second half when the Hurricanes drove 74 yards on the opening drive and tied the score. Then, Johnston booted a 42-yard field goal for a three-point Irish lead.

But in the fourth quarter, the winds changed as the Hurricanes took a 14-10 lead. On first-and-10 at the 21, Richt hit wide receiver Rocky Belk on a 79-yard touchdown pass down the sideline. Notre Dame cut the lead to a point as Johnston connected on field goal No. 2, a 42-yarder with 8:27 left.

The Irish got the ball back and executed a 49-yard drive that featured several long runs by tailback Phil Carter. With the ball on the Miami 6-yard line, the Irish were in a favorable position to retake the lead. But Kiel lost his primary receiver and heaved a pass into the crowded corner of the end zone. Miami defensive back Rodney Bellinger leaped into the air and pulled down a one-handed interception to give Miami the ball with only 2:58 left.

"Their nose guard (Tony Fitzpatrick) came up to me and said, 'It's over,' " said Irish center Tom Thayer. "I said, 'Excuse me?' He said, 'It's over.' Then I looked at him and said, 'Over? This is Notre Dame.' "

The defense did its part and stopped Miami cold on their next possession, forcing them to punt. The Irish offense, under the direction of Kiel, shifted into their two-minute offense and drove the ball down to the Miami 15 with only 11 ticks left on the clock.

Miami pulled the old "give him time to think about it" stunt, calling a timeout right before Johnston's kick.

"During the timeouts, I just kept looking at the tee," Johnston said.

"He was thinking about losing his scholarship," Faust kidded.

With the tee lined up on the left hash-mark, Johnston gracefully booted the ball through the uprights to give the Irish a 16-14 victory. The players, coaches, as well as some frenzied fans, smothered the field to congratulate their newest hero.

"I can't take anything away from that little No. 4," said Faust. "I told him, 'Hey, I'm glad I gave you that scholarship. You earned it.' "

Mark Green turns upfield in Notre Dame's 42-14 rout over Stanford earlier this season.

Time Capsule

Like the other memorable kickers in Irish lore—Joe Perkowski, Bobby Thomas, Chuck Male, Joe Unis and Harry Oliver—Johnston was almost certain to add his name to the list.

His was a fairytale story. He was a walk-on who earned his first scholarship in his senior season. He came into the game six-of-six on field-goal attempts. He became the hero by splitting the uprights for the third consecutive time during the game, the final one with only 11 seconds remaining.

Sound familiar?

"I'm sure glad I gave him a scholarship this year," said a jubilant Gerry Faust. "He's worth every penny of it."

The 17th-ranked Hurricanes, who were then coached by Howard Schnellenberger, were forced to play without injured starting quarterback, Jim

But Johnson has to be doing something right on road trips if his Hurricanes have won 20 straight as the visitors.

"It's a question of being in the right frame of mind to win," said Johnson. "We're strict with our itinerary on our players when we're on the road. We truly treat it like a business trip."

And as for the accusations that his players show too much cockiness and too little class on the field, Johnson thinks he's just allowing his men to undergo the learning process.

"We really don't put a muzzle on our players as most everyone knows by now," said Johnson. "We talk to our players throughout the year that it'd be in their best interest to talk positive and talk about our team rather than our opponent, but occasionally someone will say things. That's part of the learning experience. I don't try to restrict what they say, I just give advice."

Steve Walsh, the latest in the string of great Miami quarterbacks, is one of many Hurricanes favorable to the Johnson approach.

"His style of coaching is very laid back," said Walsh. "He's not the kind of coach who tells you what to do, like making sure you're going to church, like other coaches I've played for. He's got rules you've got to follow... but he doesn't pull the reins too tight."

"I enjoy playing for him," Walsh continued. "He's the kind of guy who, if you get in a jam, he's going to help you out as much as he can."

Oklahoma State coach Pat Jones, who worked under Johnson during his days at the Stillwater, Okla., school, also likes the Miami coach's style.

"I know this, Jimmy Johnson has never let his kids run around," said Jones. "I know that stuff at Miami was blown out of proportion. It's a lot different coaching kids at Stillwater or Arkansas than at Miami."

Johnson finally got his bowl victory and national title last year with Walsh as his quarterback. And it appeared Johnson also had received his own learning experience. Before facing Oklahoma in the Orange Bowl, there were no words like antics like before the Fiesta Bowl. There was only normal game preparation, a 20-14 victory and a national title.

"This (Miami) football team looks better than last year's, and that's saying something," said Notre Dame football coach Lou Holtz. "I think you have to give the Miami coaches a lot of credit for putting together what is undoubtedly the best football team in the country."

Maybe a second straight national title finally will have people comparing Johnson with the Paternos, rather than contrasting the two.

The man behind the message

MATTHEW SPATZ
accent writer

May I have your attention please? This is Sergeant Tim McCarthy of the Indiana State Police...

These phrases have quieted the Notre Dame crowd in Rockne Stadium for over twenty-five years. Like followers in a ritual, the fans hush for thirty seconds late in the fourth quarter to listen to the guru of traffic safety.

He speaks, a faceless name, with words of caution and comedy, and the fans love him. Who is he? Born in Fort Wayne, and raised an Irish Catholic, Tim McCarthy admired his father's dedication as a city policeman and joined the force in 1953. He served the Indiana State Police for twenty-five years, and then retired briefly. In 1979, he became sheriff of Porter County for eight years. Now he is the Porter County Assessor. He lives with his wife and two children in Westville, Indiana.

The big question on everyone's mind is "Does he write his own material?" The answer is yes, for the most part. "It's sort of an obsession with me. I watch the whole year for puns and catalog the words." Later, he works them into a pun for the announcement.

In 1960, he was made the announcer with two games left in the season. "At first, I was very straight and sincere," said McCarthy. "But people didn't want to hear someone telling them to be careful driving." He needed something to attract people's attention. In 1961, the pun was born.

His first pieces were borrowed from the traffic announcer from Chicago's WGN radio. The very first pun was appropriately historic in its tone as McCarthy said: "So remember, the automobile has replaced the horse, but the driver should stay on the wagon." From then on, McCarthy has reminded the Irish fans of his vehicular sense of humor at all but eight games.

He generally keeps in the background in the pressbox. He prefers the upper deck. "Inside is like a giant TV screen with the glass in front of you. I like it outside where you are more a part of the action." He likes to talk to the old sports writers and ushers. "They can tell you about Bertelli and Lujack because they saw them." McCarthy recalls some of his own Notre Dame moments like "when Tim Brown ran back those returns. You just don't see that very often. And the USC game when Dan Devine brought out those green and gold jerseys. I'll never forget that."

He loves the fans at the games as well. A cameraman a few years ago remarked that he had never seen such a crowd reaction. McCarthy replied, "Wait 'til kickoff."

According to McCarthy, "The rush comes when Mike Collins hands me the mike, but I concentrate on the delivery." He is pretty nervous at that time. "I even put my own name down so I don't forget it." And when he finishes, "then comes the hooting and the hollering and the groans."

McCarthy is enthusiastic about this year's team. "I don't think I've ever seen a backfield or defense so fast." Does he think we can do it this year? "You bet we can do it. The whole team works together well. It's like they have the same mind."

McCarthy has enjoyed announcing the past twenty-seven seasons. "I'd pay them to do it," he said. Unfortunately, he occasionally finds himself in need of material. Informally, he finds an occasional letter from a student with a suggestion. He thought about hosting a contest where the authors of the three best entries would win hams. "Good hams, too. You supply the jokes, I'll supply the hams. After all, these things are corny. But people will remember the lines. It's a gimmick that worked."

Some of McCarthy classics include:

"Drunk drivers aren't very funny, but they can still crack you up."

"You're at the end of your rope if you tie one on."

"There will be more people left if you drive right."

"If you try to paint the town red, you may have the blues tomorrow."

And the famous, "Too many bottles can make a case in court."

McCarthy won't use some puns because of their questionable interpretation. In fact, he realized that the 1986 Air Force remark, "If you don't rub people the wrong way, they'll get a better feeling," could be taken the wrong way.

Though he loves the games and the puns, McCarthy takes his messages seriously. He implores the commuter to watch the drinking, watch the excessive speed, and stay alert. He is, however, pleased with the traffic leaving the game. The accident rate is much lower than it used to be. "There is a trend, not a fear of arrest, but a concern about safety." McCarthy also said that South Bend now has the best reputation of any stadium for traffic control. "We have the best fans and the best drivers."

Fans, there is a person behind the voice. So remember, if you don't listen to the Sergeant, you may end up in Major trouble.

Successful blend of Furs

accent writer

It is a wonder indeed when a record company releases a compilation album that really does justice to a band. All Of This And Nothing is an album that should please both neophytes and dedicated Psychedelic Furs fans.

The 12 cuts on this Columbia release are representative of all previous Furs albums from its self-entitled first album in 1980 to 1986's popular offering Midnight To Midnight. There is also a new track called "All that Money Wants."

This new song proves to be danceable as John Ashton's guitar mumbles its high pitched droning while Richard Butler intones his bitter words: "I don't believe that I believed in you." The Psychedelic Furs has perfected their surrealistic sound and intriguing lyrics since their beginning eight years ago.

The other 11 songs provide a fantastic "best of" selection. Slow, sensitive ballads, sneering social commentaries, and some fine dance tunes are included.

"Imitation of Christ" is characteristic of the Furs' first album. A scourging chant that bashes religious hypocrisy, it has the thick melody and impassioned lyrics that the Psychedelic Furs has continued to develop since.

The band's greatest hit comes from Talk Talk Talk, released in 1981. "Pretty in Pink" has little to do with the movie that later adopted it as its theme song and title. It is actually an unflattering and sad commentary on a superficial and promiscuous girl, Caroline. Butler sings, "All of her lovers/ All talk of her notes/ And the flowers that they never sent/ And wasn't she easy/ Isn't she pretty in pink?"

"Love, My Way" is a beautiful, yearning love song from the 1982 release, Forever Now. It is similar to "The Ghost in You" which is from 1984's Mirror Moves. The lyrics are sweet and understanding: "A race is on/ I'm on your side/ And here in you my engines die/ I'm in a mood for you."

From the most recent album, Midnight to Midnight, "Heartbreak Beat" dances bold and certain and revels in the power and pleasure of youth.

All Of This And Nothing is a responsible album and more. Not only does it present some of the best Psychedelic Furs songs from the past, but the new track assures that the Furs will continue to push its own unique sound to greater heights.

Murphy is quite a few years behind Fraser in terms of experience, but he posted some impressive records of his own in his debut season at Notre Dame last year.

The Irish set a school record in posting 39 wins, including a 16-game winning streak late in the season, as the Irish posted a best-ever 39-22 record.

Notre Dame returns many of its top players, including shortstop Pat Pesavento and outfielder Dan Peltier.

Pesavento, who turned down the Toronto Blue Jays after being drafted in the 11th round last spring, holds school records for career runs, hits and stolen bases. The shortstop from Lockport, Ill., currently working toward a master's degree in Science Administration, compiled a .385 batting average last season with a school-record 38 stolen bases.

Peltier moves from right field to centerfield this season after earning Academic All-America honors last year. He led the Irish last season with a .414 batting average, and the junior from Clifton Park, N.Y., also hit drove in 70 runs. Peltier also set a school record with 21 doubles last year.

Notre Dame figures to start a pair of freshmen this year. Joe Binkiewicz of Wintersville, Ohio, figures to replace the graduated Tim Hutson at first base, and Craig Counsell of Whitefish Bay, Wis., will play left field.

Other prospective Irish starters include catcher Ed Lund, second baseman Mike Moshier, third baseman Mike Coss and right fielder James Sass. Erik Madsen, Mike Passilla and Brian Piotrowicz. Mike Coffey replaces the graduated Mike Harmon as the short relief, and Tony Livorsi will work in long relief.

Miami's returnees include three top-flight pitchers. Joe Grahe, a fifth-round selection by Oakland last spring, posted a 13-5 record with a 154-37 strikeout-walk ratio last season. Fellow righthander Greg Knowles earned freshman All-America honors last spring after recording a 9-2 record. Steve Tucker, a lefthander, had a 6-1 record with a 2.73 earned run average during the 1988 season.

Outfielders Ray Noriega and Will Vespe also come back from last year's 52-14-1 team. Noriega batted .301 with 43 RBI and 19 stolen bases last season, while Vespe batted .297 with 39 RBI. Vespe also had a 5-1 record in occasional pitching stints.

But the biggest name on this year's Hurricane squad may be a freshman. Alex Fernandez was drafted in the first round by the Milwaukee Brewers last spring after leading Miami Pace High to a state championship. The righthander, who had a 47-4 career record with 601 strikeouts while during his high school days, turned down Milwaukee's offer to play for Miami.

First baseman-designated hitter Jorge Fabregas is another freshman Hurricane playing in his hometown. Fabregas was drafted in the 10th round by Cleveland after batting .400 for Miami Columbus High last spring. Junior shortstop F.P. Santangelo, who earned first-team junior college All-America recognition while playing for Sacramento City College last season, is another newcomer to the Hurricanes.

Pitcher/outfielder Will Vespe and the Miami Hurricanes will invade Stanley Coveleski Stadium tonight and tomorrow night for a pair of games with the Notre Dame baseball team.

Dodgers

previously has an NL team finished 15 games or more below .500 one season, and rallied to finish 20 games or more above .500 the next. The Dodgers were also 73-89 in 1986.

Ironically, the Mets were 73-89 in 1968 and went on to win the World Series in five games against Baltimore a year later.

In 1960, Cincinnati finished 67-87 and rallied to win the NL flag with a 93-61 record in 1961. Last season, Minnesota won the American League pennant and World Series after finishing 71-91 in 1986.

Steve Sax, 12-for-40 lifetime against Darling, got the Dodgers started with a single and moved to third on Mickey Hatcher's double down the left-field line. Kirk Gibson, hamstrung with a pulled left hamstring, then hit a sacrifice fly to deep center field.

The Mets and Darling self-destructed in the Dodgers' big second inning.

Mike Scioscia and Jeff Hamilton led off with singles and Darling misjudged Alfredo Griffin's bunt, allowing it to fall in for a single to load the bases.

CHURCH
AWARENESS WEEK

Consider Ministry

Consider Ministry, a dream worth living.

When the Great American Dream isn't Great Enough

The American Dream has always been one of promise. In the 80's promise has given way to promises. It is no longer important to achieve but only to possess what success can bring. The implied promise: "the more you get and spend the happier you will be" is an empty one.

Success in life isn't how much we can get but what kind of difference we can make in the lives of people. To be a priest, deacon, sister or brother in today's world is to touch the very heart of life, to enable people to grow into the fullness of who they are meant to be.

Through Church ministry you experience the fullness of faith, hope, belonging and love. You carry Christ's message of good news. You reach out to those who are hurting. You stand for justice and mercy in a world that's not just a little crazy. You realize you don't have to buy the mountain to climb it. The climb is a tough one. One which will take faith and determination.

The first step is always the hardest; you should speak with someone who once was exactly where you are today. Someone who had the same doubts and fears. Someone who has been there, someone who won't make any promises but who might help you ask the right questions.

Irish face DePaul after suffering year's 1st loss at Akron

By CHRIS FILLIO
Sports Writer

Today the Notre Dame soccer team will attempt to get back on track as they face the DePaul Blue Demons at Moose Krause Stadium.

The Irish (10-1-2) are coming off their first loss of the year, dealt to them by the Akron Zips last Sunday in a tightly contested overtime game.

As has been the case in the last few weeks, the Irish are hard-pressed to post tallies in the win column as they search for their first-ever NCAA playoff berth. In light of this, every game becomes a crucial one for the Irish.

"We can't afford to look past DePaul," said Irish head soccer coach Dennis Grace. "After coming off the loss to Akron, that is the last thing we can do. We have to recognize that DePaul had a good recruiting year, and they have some great talent. They could very easily beat us."

The Blue Demons may very well be better than their season record (2-8-2) indicates. A victory over Notre Dame could be the sweetest one this year for DePaul second-year head coach Dan Coughlin. The name should ring a bell for Irish soccer fans. Coughlin is an '85 graduate of Notre Dame and earned three monograms while tending goal for the Irish.

For Coughlin, one point of concern with the Irish is appropriately the recent stellar performance of Irish goalkeeper Danny Lyons. The Albuquerque, N.M., native is currently fifth in the Great Lakes Region in goals-against average with an even 1.00. A two-year All-State selection out of high school, Lyons really came on as a sophomore and since then has been the Irish ironman on defense.

"Right now, Danny Lyons has as much if not more ability than any goalie I've seen," said Grace. "I wouldn't trade him for any other goalkeeper in the country."

Indeed, Lyons has turned some games around for the Irish this season. Lyons was key in the Irish win over Detroit and held the Zips in check after spotting them two early goals, only to be felled by a perfectly-placed direct kick with eight minutes left in overtime.

"I think that the whole team feels pretty confident," said Lyons. "The entire defense has been playing well. After the Akron game, we're looking for a big win. It's really important that we beat DePaul."

While the team's health has sagged, Lyons has escaped the injury-bug for the most part. And in regards to DePaul's hopes of a pivotal upset against Notre Dame, the Irish see things differently.

"The NCAA is really going to be looking at goals scored and shutouts, so it's important that we try to get four or five goals against DePaul and work for the shutout."

The game's scheduled kickoff is 7:00 p.m. at Moose Krause Stadium.

Bremner, Irish to meet ranked foes on trip West

By MOLLY MAHONEY
Sports Writer

She puts in at least three hours a day with the Notre Dame women's volleyball team, an extra hour or more before and after practice and even comes in Tuesdays and Thursdays with junior Kathy Cunningham to work a little more.

So one would think that when game time rolls around, Bremner would be pleased with the results. But being good isn't good enough.

"I just can't go in there and be mediocre," said Bremner. "If I don't give 100 percent, I feel guilty. I just try to keep on pushing myself to get better."

It is this willingness to spend long hours on the court honing her skills that has allowed Bremner to step into a starting position in her first season with the Irish and perhaps help the team break into the national top 20 for the first time ever.

As Notre Dame's newest blue (and gold) collar worker, Bremner has been silent but deadly thus far in the season, both offensively and defensively.

She has already tallied 573 assists for a .388 setting percentage and has utilized timing and placement to set up the Irish hitters one-on-one against their blocking opponents whenever possible.

Bremner also has an usually high number of digs, 145, which is second highest on the team behind senior Whitney Shewman.

This statistic is startling because traditionally, the setter takes the second and not the first ball over the net. Yet Bremner often picks up the opponent's attack to get the Irish offense rolling.

Bremner's play has not been limited to these duties alone, though.

She has tallied 55 total blocks for the Irish to help seniors Mary Kay Waller, Maureen Shea and Zanette Bennett patrol the net.

And Bremner has also stepped in to register 47 kills for a .293 hitting percentage, to make herself a threat when she's not threading the needle for her teammates.

But this versatile play hasn't quenched Bremner's thirst to improve.

"I need a lot of work on my hitting," said Bremner, "and I think I need to improve my blocking and defensive skills as well. To do that I'll have to work extra hard on my positioning and be more aggressive."

This work ethic springs from seven years of exposure to the sport and the almost tortuous training she received during high school as a member of an elite volleyball club called Sports Performance.

She chose to practice with the club for four hours, plus an extra one or two hours on her own, each day instead of maintaining the normal life of a high school student.

"Sports Performance was the best thing I ever did," said Bremner. "I haven't encountered a single situation that I haven't been prepared for in Sports Performance. When you see the play developing you know you've been there before, so it's made college an easy adjustment."

Bremner would eventually like to use the skills and experience she gained at Sports Performance and here at Notre Dame to earn herself a spot on the United States national team, but for now that goal takes a back seat to more important things.

"I would love to play on the Olympic team," said Bremner, "but I don't think about that right now. I just worry about the team for now and winning games."

She cites her teammates as a major reason for her success and insists there is no substitute for hard work.

"I play with the greatest bunch of young ladies," said

Bremner. "They keep me going and never let me forget that the only way to get anywhere in life is by hard work. I know that you have to make opportunities for yourself—to be your own opportunity—and that always makes me work harder."

Bremner and her Irish teammates will need to keep this work ethic alive during October break as they head into a challenging four-match roadtrip.

The Irish will face 15th-ranked Pacific first on Oct. 18 and then 12th-ranked San Jose State on Oct. 19.

Pacific has consistently been a national powerhouse and is led by two-time All American and 1985 Conference Player of the Year Elaina Oden.

The Irish won't even get a day break before facing San Jose State, so they will have to be ready to deal with seniors Kari Roberson and Kim Hicks, both middle blockers.

Two days after taking on two of the west coast's best, the Irish will return to the Midwest to face two Big Ten teams, Minnesota and Iowa on Oct. 21 and 22 before heading back to the friendly confines of the JACC for three matches on their home court.

Carney Lansford of the Oakland A's makes a diving stop against Boston in the American League Championship Series. The A's are on a mission led by manager Tony LaRussa to take the World Series from newly-crowned National League champs, the L. A. Dodgers. A story on the A's appears below.

A's not satisfied with AL title

Sweep gives LaRussa extra time to prepare for Series

Associated Press

OAKLAND -One look at the dark, fiery eyes of Tony La Russa or a view of the Oakland Athletics' workout is enough to wipe out any notion the American League champs are settling into smugness before the World Series.

No team in 19 years of major league playoffs has had five days off before the start of the World Series -five days to get bloated with self-satisfaction and stale on the field.

The Athletics worked out for the second straight day Wednesday, determined to keep the edge that enabled them to win eight of 11 after they clinched the division title Sept. 19, then swept the Red Sox in four straight.

The team is relaxed and loose. No one is pressing or looking anxious. But there is no mistaking the determination to complete the goal La Russa and the players set early in the season: to win the World Series and not just the division or pennant.

Or, as La Russa describes it, to negotiate the final side of "the pyramid."

La Russa never let this team ease up, not when it won 14 straight and 18 of 19 early in the season and not when it was breezing to the AL west championship.

His players maintain the same focus on winning the World Series and proving they are the best in baseball.

The champagne party after the victory over Boston was brief and somewhat restrained. Jose Canseco had a few sips of bubbly and declined another round. Carney Lansford sat by his locker, utterly happy but holding back a little.

"I can remember winning a division title with the '79 (California) Angels," said Lansford. "We were so satisfied with that, we died in the playoffs (against the Baltimore Orioles).

"This year, nobody has said anything about being satisfied. That includes right now. We still have a job to do."

Canseco is working out this week as if he still had a lot to prove, despite his three homers in the playoffs, 42 during the season and 40 stolen bases.

Tix deadline Friday

Special to The Observer

The application deadline for students wishing to purchase 1988-89 basketball season tickets is tomorrow.

Tickets will be distributed by class beginning Oct. 31 to only those who apply for tickets. If fewer than 4,300 students apply for tickets, then an extra distribution day open to all students who did not apply will be held after the freshman distribution.

Students must go to Gate 10 of the Joyce ACC between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. to fill out an application for season tickets. At this time students will have to specify if they will want lower arena or bleacher seats, and must pay a deposit on the ticket.

Ticket prices for 17 home games are $85 for lower arena seating and $68 for bleachers. A deposit of $45 for lower arena seats or $40 for bleachers is required during this application period.

The balance of the ticket price is due at the ticket distribution.

At least one report confirms that writers from The Hurricane, Miami's student newspaper, have been calling Notre Dame students on the telephone to get some dirt on how the campus feels about the Miami football team. You can bet that story will appear in print before the team flies to Notre Dame for the game, if it doesn't find its way into a few Miami lockers on game day.

Florida papers are covering the student sentiment so much that Miami quarterback Steve Walsh already has prepared a defense for what has been portrayed in Miami as a somewhat hostile Irish crowd.

"I'm going to make sure I keep my helmet on," Walsh said Tuesday. "I don't want to get hit in the head with any oranges."

Irish head coach Lou Holtz wrote a letter to the student body that appeared in The Observer last week, urging classy support of the team, and today's Observer features a similar letter from the Notre Dame tri-captains. That doesn't happen every day.

Dan Jansen set the pep rally, a midnight basketball scrimmage, a CBS Sports seminar, Whole Health dinner in the dining halls... well, OK, skip that last one.

The point is, mid-term exams or not, a week like this comes along once in a lifetime. This might be the most important football game, perhaps the most important sporting event, you'll ever see.

That's not hype. It's the truth.

But you'll still have a hard time convincing Ellis of that.

"Hey, we're not worried about them or their crowd," Ellis said. "We thrive on that atmosphere. They say Notre Dame is America's college football team? I think we're America's team."

IH soccer filling playoff slots

Off-Campus Hoobers favored to repeat as champions

By RICK CONDON
Sports Writer

Although regular season games still remain for several Interhall soccer teams, playoff spots are all but set heading into fall break.

Five of the eight possible slots are filled and the Off-Campus Hoobers, last year's champions, are once again the heavy favorites. Coach Pat Marshall, also the goalkeeper for the team, does not seem to mind the front-running label.

"It doesn't bother us," said Marshall. "We're kind of cocky and want people to come after us."

The Hoobers dominated the tough South American division this year, outscoring their opponents 26-1. Marshall credits field players Mike Johnson and Jim McKeon with holding the team together on defense.

Mike Mahelick, coach of the Dillon Big Red who were early losers to the Hoobers, also likes his team's chances.

"I think we can do some damage in the playoffs," he said.

The surprise team of the year is Carroll, led by their coach, Chris Fillio, and leading scorer, Mark Heilman. Heilman recently scored two goals, including the game winner, late in the second half as Carroll came from behind to defeat Dillon BMF 4-3.

L'equipe Vermin, as they are known, are undefeated at this point, a far cry from last year's 1-5 record. In fact, this is only Carroll's third year in Interhall soccer play.

Other teams appeared headed for postseason action include Flanner A, Stanford A1, and Keenen who is enjoying a great season under the direction of Pat McClanahan. McClanahan points to a 4-3 overtime victory over North American division rivals Flanner A as the turning point, and cites keeper Mike Peeney and striker John McConville as key contributors this season.

The last two places to be decided involve three teams battling for second place in both the European and Western European divisions. Critical games between the Off-Campus Spleips and Zahm A2 and between Stanford A and Alumni still remain and will decide the fate of those teams still in contention.

Belles blank Manchester, finish 18-1

By HEATHER ATKINSON
Sports Writer

The Saint Mary's tennis team brought its fall season to a close with a 9-0 victory at Manchester College Tuesday, raising its season record to 18-1.

The Belles braved the windy and overall bad weather conditions to overcome their opponents quite easily.

"I was very pleased with everyone's performances," said Head Coach Deb Laverie. "I was interested with how intensely they went out and beat them. It was good to see the spark in them after last week's loss."

Sophomore Michelle Chaney got some playing time as she moved up into the lineup for both singles and doubles play.

"She is a very dedicated player and has always played hard," said Laverie. "I was very happy with her achievements."

Charlene Szjako moved up to the number one position to fill in for Jen Block who is still out of action. Szjako turned in a good performance, defeating her opponent 6-2, 6-2. Szjako's performance reflected her outstanding 11-0 season-end statistics where she did not lose a match in the number two spot. Her only losses were handed to her during some of her matches at the number one position. Block, who missed a few matches, finished well with a 14-3 record.

The best overall statistics at the season's end were from sophomore Sarah Mayer who lost only one match for a 18-1 record.

"The reason Sarah finished so well was because of her heart and desire to play hard and win," said Laverie. "Even when you put her on the court with people who are at a higher skill level, she is bound to win because she's more dedicated."

Freshman Marie Koscielski also finished with an 18-1 record for her play at the number five position.

As the Belles enjoy the memories of their excellent season, they will now look ahead to the District tournament held this weekend in Anderson. Their goal, of course, is to win and qualify for Nationals in May.

Irish on the run to USC

Women's squad gearing up for MCC meet

By MARY GARINO
Sports Writer

The next couple of weeks will be crunch time for the women's cross country team as it prepares for a dual meet with USC on Oct. 22 and the Midwestern Collegiate Conference Championships on the 29th.

This will be an important period for the Irish as they will try to prove that they can run competitively together against quality teams.

Women's coach Tim Connelly believes that it is not unrealistic for the squad to beat USC and win the MCC Championships, provided some of Notre Dame's runners improve over their previous performances. He is hopeful that Jenny Ledrick and Terry Kibelstis will be healthy and ready to help the team, although he doubts they will be fully recovered.

Despite being impeded by injuries during the first half of the season, two senior members of the team agree that the Irish have been generally running better than last year.

"As a whole we've obviously improved," said captain Theresa Rice, "and we haven't even reached our potential yet because some people have been hurt."

Rice admits that the team has had trouble racing as a pack, but she also points out that the fourth, fifth and sixth runners are faster and better than last year.

Senior Terry Kibelstis has noticed a different attitude in her teammates this season. She says it has helped the team to face challenges.

"We're a lot more determined and confident and it shows," said Kibelstis. "We know that we can run competitively even against schools with scholarship programs."

The coaches have been more respectful of the talent on the team this year, according to the Kibelstis, especially compared with the first season of varsity cross country at Notre Dame.

"They put more trust in our ability now," she said. "That first year we were just a mish-mash of people but now we're a group of strong individuals."

"The opposition used to say, 'Who is that girl from Notre Dame?'" Rice says. "Now they expect to see us doing well."

No. 5 men look to rebound from ND Invite

By SCOTT BRUTOCAO
Sports Writer

The biggest news this week for the cross country team was the first national coaches' poll of the year. In a survey of 15 coaches across the country concerning Division I schools, Notre Dame was ranked fifth.

While this is very exciting news for the Irish, they have bigger things to worry about, including a dual meet with USC in Southern California on Oct. 22.

This is only the second meeting between the two schools, with the first taking place last year at Notre Dame. The Irish whipped the Trojans 17-41, so why does a meet with the Trojans nine days off worry them?

The first reason is that the Irish have to get healthy, and in a hurry. At last Friday's Invitational at Notre Dame, the Irish performance was severely hampered by injuries.

Both fifth-year senior Rick Mulvey and junior Mike O'Connor ran with injuries last week. O'Connor, bothered by a leg injury, was unable to finish the race, while Mulvey's sprained ankle kept him from running as well as he could have.

"Our most pressing concern right now is trying to get healthy," said 14th-year head coach Joe Piane. "I think we will. Mulvey is doing quite well and O'Connor is making improvements."

Piane hopes both will race at USC, based on what he has seen so far.

A second reason why the Irish have to train hard is because of the poor performance last week.

"Quite honestly we have to bounce back," said Piane. "We have to have some good training this week and we really need to run a good race at USC."

The team's fourth-place tie last week was a big disappointment, with the only bright spot coming from its top two runners, captain Dan Garrett and Ron Markezich. Their times for five miles were both under 24 minutes, and they finished second and third in the meet, respectively.

"USC was the most improved team in the Pac 10 last year," said Piane. "They finished fourth in a very strong conference."

The meet last year was at Notre Dame, and this year it's away at Southern California. If you think "home turf" is not a significant advantage in cross country, think again.

"Last year it was 35-40 degrees outside and it was raining," said Piane. "They guaranteed us smog and an earthquake when we go out there," said Piane. "I guess what's fair is fair."

OPEN LETTER TO THE NOTRE DAME STUDENT BODY:

For most of us on the Notre Dame football team, our game Saturday against top-rated Miami will be the biggest thing that's happened in our football careers. These are the games we dreamed about playing in when we came to Notre Dame.

The entire college football world will be watching Saturday, and we hope that visitors, fans and others who haven't been exposed to Notre Dame will gain an appreciation for what Notre Dame spirit is all about.

We've seen the various T-shirts on campus, and we appreciate the spirit in which they've been done and the great interest in the game from fans everywhere. We've also heard rumors, unfounded or otherwise, that students plan to throw oranges on the field Saturday. That's exactly the kind of support we don't need.

We've worked long and hard to see our football program reach its current level--and we hope to take another step forward on Saturday. Please help by supporting us in a positive manner. Notre Dame students and fans have gained a reputation for classy behavior--and we don't expect that to change this week.

Thanks for all your support--and we look forward to seeing you Saturday at the Stadium. Let's all work together to make it a day to remember for a lifetime.

After six tense seesaw games in the National League Championship Series, there was little drama after the second inning last night as Kirk Gibson and the Los Angeles Dodgers beat the

LA gives Mets 'Orel' surgery

Hershiser's 6-0 shutout sends Dodgers to World Series

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES--The Los Angeles Dodgers won the National League pennant Wednesday night by beating the favored New York Mets 6-0 in Game 7 behind Orel Hershiser's five-hitter, completing one of the greatest turnarounds in major league history.

The Dodgers will host Game 1 of the 85th World Series Saturday against Oakland in a rematch of the 1974 Series won by the Athletics in five games.

Hershiser, who finished the season with a record 59 consecutive scoreless innings, started Games 1 and 3 without getting a decision and saved Game 4. Of the 65 innings pitched by the Dodgers, Hershiser accounting for 24 2/3.

He broke the major league playoff mark of 22 2/3 innings, set in 1986 by Boston's Roger Clemens. The old NL playoff mark was 18 innings by Mike Scott of Houston, also in 1986.

It is the Dodgers' ninth pennant since moving to Los Angeles in 1958 and their first since 1981, when they went on to beat the New York Yankees in the World Series.

The Dodgers scored first in six of the seven games against the Mets and made things easy for Hershiser by scoring a run in the first off loser Ron Darling. Los Angeles then chased him with five runs in the second as New York made three sloppy fielding plays.

The Dodgers finished the regular season 94-67, a 43-game improvement over last year's 73-89 record. Only six times

These activities are part of Notre Dame Spirit Week, which culminates with Saturday afternoon football game between Notre Dame and Miami.

Hurricane warning is in effect at Covo

By STEVE MEGARGEE
Assistant Sports Editor

The Notre Dame baseball team is following its most successful season ever with what may be the biggest series in the team's history.

Miami brings its model baseball program to town tonight to start a two-game series with the Irish. Tonight's game starts at 7 p.m., while Friday's matchup is scheduled for 8:30 p.m. Shuttle buses will be running to Coveleski after the football pep rally Friday, and they will return to campus after the baseball game.

Chicago Cubs pitcher Jamie Moyer will throw out the first pitch Thursday, and renowned Cubs announcer Harry Caray will do the honors before Friday's game. The Miami Maniac, probably the most recognized mascot in college baseball, will be present at Coveleski Stadium for both games.

The Hurricanes return only three starters from last year's College World Series team, but if history is any indication, Miami again should be one of the nation's top teams.

Under veteran coach Ron Fraser, the Hurricanes have reached the NCAA Tournament for an NCAA-record 16 consecutive times. Miami has gone to the College World Series nine of the last 11 years, and the Hurricanes won the national title in 1982 and 1985.

Fraser, directing Miami for the 27th year, is the winningest active coach in college baseball with a career record of 1,069-380-9.

Game has to be good to outdo all the hype

People say 'Notre Dame,' and it's like that's supposed to mean something. I don't see Notre Dame as greater than Toledo or Wisconsin or anybody else. I don't see them as being any different than Central Florida.

--Miami cornerback Donald Ellis

Perhaps Donald Ellis really feels that way about Saturday's game between the fourth-ranked Irish and No. 1 Miami, but I doubt it.

Marty Strasen

Sports Editor

The less outspoken Hurricanes know the importance of this game—a game Notre Dame has been anticipating for a long time after suffering painful losses to Miami in the last three meetings between the two schools. Take a look at the Notre Dame student body, the media attention surrounding the game, and the national pollsters who might make the winner the No. 1 team in the nation, and you get a feel for how big this game really is.

Like you really need a newspaper column to tell you that. The Game. The War. Once and For All. Those are only a few of the labels being pinned on this one, and the game itself is going to have to be outstanding if it's going to match the hype surrounding it.

Reporters from all over the country have been around this week, and more are bound to be flying in over the next few days to cover everything from rumors about orange-throwing to campus T-shirts displaying vulgarities about the Hurricanes.
