Bush, Duke plan final day efforts

Associated Press

George Bush and Michael Dukakis sprinted for the finish line Monday in their marathon quest for the White House, the vice president confidently saying the nation was "coming in behind my candidacy" while his underdog rival vowed he'd spring a stunning "November surprise."

Both men raced across America in a final-day search for support while their campaigns spent nearly $1 million apiece on competing 30-minute evening appeals on network television. Bush, the leader in the polls, also aired a new five-minute commercial that sharply attacked his Democratic rival.

"It's in the hands of the gods and the American people," the vice president said before heading for Houston and the final rally of candidacy.

Dukakis was campaigning into overtime in a desperation drive for an upset. He told a crowd of 20,000 in California that voters would kick Bush "right out of our future."

Democrats expressed confidence they would command majorities in the 101st Congress that will govern alongside the new president. They also angled for modest gains in the dozen statehouse races on Tuesday's ballot.

The final day of America's longest, costliest and some said-nastiest presidential campaign left little room for sub-

Chinese quake registers 7.6, death toll hits 600

Associated Press

BEIJING-- A powerful earthquake struck just inside China's mountainous southern border, and two official radio stations reported Monday that 600 people were killed.

Radio Beijing and the Peoples' Central Broadcasting Station quoted the same reporter, Hu Jiaqi, about the death toll. Radio Beijing also quoted him as saying most of the dead were in Shanmato, a village in Yunnan province that was nearly wiped out by the earthquake, which registered 7.6 on the Richter scale.

Hu's account could not be confirmed independently. An earlier Radio Beijing report said total casualties were 600, including dead and injured.

The State Seismology Bureau in Beijing, which had reported 18 killed and 54 injured, said it had no new figures. Dispatches from the official news agency Xinhua said at least 37 people were dead and more than 100 injured.

No telephone service was available to the affected part of Yunnan province near the Burmese border. It is sparsely inhabited by farmers, many from the Lahu and Va minorities with their own languages and live in houses of wood and mud.

A Yunnan official reached by telephone said the provincial government had no idea how many people were killed. Asked whether 600 was a plausible, he said: "It might be. It might not be."

If the death toll of 600 is accurate, this would be China's worst earthquake since the 1978, when 242,000 people were killed in the northeastern city of Tangshan.

That quake measured 7.8 on the Richter scale, a gauge of the energy released by an earthquake. Each number on the scale indicates a tenfold increase in strength and a temblor of 7 can cause heavy damage in populated areas.

Following Sunday's quake, the State Seismology Bureau said dozens of aftershocks had struck the Yunnan region through Monday night, with the strongest measuring 7.2 but most ranging from 4.0 to 6.0.

Roads to the affected area were cut and Yunnan authorities ordered an airlift of food, medicine and other relief supplies. The provincial government said early Tuesday that doctors had set out for the area and the governor, He Zhiqiang, was en route.

The quake was centered in Yunnan's Lancang and Menglian counties, about 240 miles southwest of the provincial capital Kunming. Xinhua said most houses in the two counties were demolished and buildings were destroyed in 14 surrounding counties.

Seismologists in Kunming reported no damage in the city of 1.5 million. Three years ago, a quake of 6.3 on the Richter scale killed 22 people and injured 300 in Kunming.

Hiler encourages students to vote in third campus campaign visit

By REGIS COCCIA
Senior Staff Reporter

Rep. John Hiler of Indiana's 3rd Congressional District made one of his last campaign stops Monday night with a visit to Notre Dame to encourage students to vote.

The Republican stopped to shake hands with students at North and South Dining Halls, where more than 2,500 students were registered as Indiana voters by Notre Dame student government.

"I just wanted to let students know their votes are important and I like them. I think Notre Dame could play a big part in the vote," Hiler, 35, said. The campus visit was Hiler's third this year.

"You put a lot of significance on every vote and 2,500 registered voters could be very important. I think the student vote is very important and I think the Republicans can get that vote today," he said. "The decisions we make at the federal level will have impact on students on this campus today for a long time," Hiler said. "Yet the 18 to 25-year age group has the lowest voting attendance of any group. It's important that you vote."

Hiler said he thinks the 3rd District race will be close, but feels confident he will beat opponent Tom Ward, a Notre Dame graduate.

"Lines are pretty tightly drawn. We're cautiously optimistic. A lot is going to depend on voter turnout," he said. Hiler won the 3rd District race in 1986 by a mere 47 votes.

The race this year against Democrat Ward has gone very well, Hiler said. "We've done a lot of things we wanted to accomplish. When I wake up on Wednesday morning, win, lose or draw, I'm not going to say this was a bad race."

The large number of Notre Dame students registered to vote in Indiana could bring support for Republican presidential nominee George Bush and John Hiler, the incumbent congressman said.

"We view this as no different than any other of our key precincts. We just want to do really well out here," he said.

"Campuses are where folks often have the most passion about things. To me that's a significant thing," said Hiler, adding he thought Bush's Notre Dame visit last Tuesday was very good for students to see.

John Hiler visited ND last evening and shook students' hands as they passed to and from dinner at South Dining Hall.

IN BRIEF

Gertrude LaFortune, who with her late husband Joseph LaFortune donated funds that created and then remodeled the LaFortune Student Center at Notre Dame, died last Wednesday in Tulsa, Okla. The LaFortunes provided the money that originally remodeled the University's science building into a student center in 1953. They were also involved in minor renovations in 1975 and 1983, including the $5-million expansion completed in 1986. The LaFortunes were natives of South Bend. Joseph LaFortune, who attended Notre Dame as an undergraduate and received an honorary law degree in 1949, was in the oil business. -The Observer

Favorite pair of Keds die a slow and painful death

Last weekend, my tennis shoes finally bit the dust.

Although most shoes maintain a steady diet of dirt and debris, my "Keds" were different. They really kicked the bucket- you know, dropped dead, conked out, cashed in, cold turkey.

I can't honestly say it was a sudden death; it certainly wasn't unexpected anyway. Still, just last Friday, those old shoes were alive and kicking. . . sort of.

I bought my Keds the summer before my freshman year. Although my friends scoffed and snickered when I unveiled my "bargain", I was proud of my purchase. Maybe "Keds" couldn't hold a candle to Reeboks or Sperrys, but they were comfortable and more importantly- cheap. Being a part-time employee and a minimum wage victim, $4.99 suited my meager budget just fine.

Since that summer, my Keds have carried me through rain, sleet, and dead of night. . . and football games and snowball fights and barn dances.

As a result, they've taken quite a beating. My shoes have incurred more than a few battle scars over the past several months, and now they boast more interesting stains than the Shroud of Turin.

There's a small smudge of red paint on the right toe from dance decorating last year, and the sides sport several grass stains acquired playing "pile on" out on the quad. Random patches of grit and grime are a constant reminder of An Tostal mud pits and puddle jumping back in April.

But while analyzing my sneaker stains sends me soaring down memory lane, the shoes hold no such sentimental value for my family and friends. Every time my mom sees me in my "fetid footwear," for example, she buries her head in her hands and laments, "Your father works 60 hours a week so you don't have to wear shoes like that!"

My friends are equally unsympathetic. They're convinced the shoes house primitive life forms. Even my grandpa has threatened to fill this year's Christmas stocking with a year's supply of "Odor Eaters."

Admittedly, my tennis shoes aren't exactly in tip-top condition. Lately, they've been looking a little worse for the wear. I lost the laces long ago- after the second time they broke, I didn't bother buying new ones. After all, they're easier to slip on and off that way.

The soles have been shredded, and I'm convinced that impoverished African peasants have fewer holes in their shoes than I do. Still,

R.I.P.(P.E.D.)

I rationalize, lots of people pay big money for savvy sandals and "Nike Airs" with holes already built in. So actually my Keds are quite economical.

I'm not quite sure exactly when my fascination with soiled shoes began, but it must date back to my early childhood. As a kid, I detested new shoes even worse than spinach casserole or dentist appointments. Well. . . it was close anyway.

Some of my buddies would buy their "school shoes" in August, and in April, they'd STILL look like they'd just stepped out of the shoe store.

I, however, did not belong to this select breed.

Every mother's nightmare, I delighted in soiling these saps' brand-spankin' new shoes. After spotting a pair of spiffy new sneakers, I'd slyly sneak up on the unsuspecting victim and WHAM!- before they knew what hit 'em, they'd be "scuffed." Victory was sweet!

My aversion to shoe polish and stiff leather persisted as I grew older. In high school, I purposely left my new penny loafers out in the rain so they'd acquire the "worn-in" look. (I don't think Mom ever recovered from that one.)

Even today, no sooner do I break my shoes out of the box than they're scuffed and sullied.

Although I realize it's finally time to retire my Keds to that big shoe store in the sky, I hate to see them go. After all, it'll take me two more years to break a new pair in!

Senate welcomes apartheid opponent

By FLORENTINE HOELKER
Staff Reporter

Student Senate hosted a member of the campus anti-apartheid group in order to begin considering a resolution stating an official student government position on apartheid and divestment.

John Paul Checkett, a student leader of the anti-apartheid group, spoke to the senate Monday evening about the University's official policy of selective divestment. Checkett said that the policy is ineffective, and he criticized the University's Board of Trustees for their inactivity concerning the issue.

"Selective divestment relies on the subjective judgment of which companies aren't doing enough to end apartheid," Checkett said. "This is not good enough."

Checkett supports complete divestment, which he says is supported by all black civil rights leaders in South Africa but not by the University.

Checkett is asking the senate to write a resolution officially condemning apartheid and showing student opinion on divestment in South Africa.

Student senate plans to have an anti-divestment speaker in a future meeting to insure that they are fully informed before making a decision.

In other business, senate reported that the "Quest for the Crown" activities were a success, and that the event would likely continue next year. A seasonal pass for non-varsity activities like the Eck tennis pavilion is being investigated.

Senate is also hosting "Election Watch '88" which will show election coverage in Theodore's at 9 p.m. tonight.

Three professors share views on presidential election

By CHRISTINE WALSH
Staff Reporter

Three Notre Dame economics professors gave a critical look at the 1988 presidential candidates in a public discussion Monday night.

Sponsored by Omicron Delta Epsilon, a national economic honor society, the Presidential Election Forum featured professors David Betson, Kenneth Jameson and James Rakowski on economic issues in the presidential campaign.

The group discussed at length the deficit's role in economic growth during the last decade. They concluded the deficit has had a major impact on the economic expansion of the Reagan Administration.

Tax cuts and defense spending were cited as causes of the national debt, which have also reduced inflation and spurred growth.

The forum was moderated by senior Jeff Utz, president of Notre Dame's chapter of Omicron Delta Epsilon. He questioned the professors on Democratic Vice Presidential nominee Lloyd Bentsen's comment on the debt that the federal government wrote "$200 billion in hot checks."

"Calling them 'hot checks' is throwing 40 years of economics down the drain," Rakowski said. The deficit is not like writing bad checks because the deficit can be positive for the economy, he added.

The deficit is not necessarily a bad thing but should be limited by restricting consumption, Jameson said.

Remarking on the future of military spending, the panelists said they were concerned with the amount of spending and the way in which money was spent.

"Are we going to have SDI or CDI (Conventional Defense Initiative)? CDI is Mike Dukakis," Betson said, stressing the need to set priorities in defense strategies and conventional defense systems should take precedence over unproductive research.

The forum ended with a discussion of the United States as the "world's largest debtor nation."

Rakowski said it was not surprising that the country with the world's largest economy should also have the largest debt. The debt is not beyond what we can handle, and called it "equity investment," he added.

Other issues discussed in the forum included the employment rate and the polarization of class structures to rich and poor.

Peace is possible in a nuclear age

By ANGELA McDONALD
News Staff

Nations must change current policies if the world is to have peace, Prof. Robert Johansen said Monday night.

In lecture titled, "Keeping the Peace and Protecting National Security Without Nuclear Weapons," Johansen explored ways of obtaining world peace and alternatives to existing international peace policies.

Halting the present arms build-up and restructuring all nations' peace policies are important because "moments of peace can quickly disappear with a change in leadership or in a time of crisis and unless there are radical changes in our policy, war may very well take place," he said.

Johansen, Notre Dame professor of government and international studies, called world peace an imperative and listed practical reasons for attaining it.

If the current system continues, economic costs will continue to increase with fears, leading to irrational behavior and a problem economy. As fear grows, more money will be spent to build up nuclear weapons, Johansen said.

Johansen said some possible solutions to the peace problem are:

- Establishing peace zones.
- Instituting an international police force.

Peace zones might promote the expansion of demilitarized zones and an international police force could regulate and establish policies that operate under the auspices of the United Nations, he said.

"We have very few alternatives, except to change our international systems," Johansen said. "For the present generation it will be a compelling task for change."

Johansen, senior fellow at the University's Institute for International Peace Studies, is a member of the Board of Directors of Arms Control in Washington, D.C. and past president of the World Policy Institute.

Kennedy expert to talk at SMC

By JOANNA GRILLO
News Staff

An upcoming visit by John F. Kennedy expert John Gordon was the focus of the Saint Mary's Programming Board meeting Monday night. Gordon will be visiting the college on November 21, on the eve of the 25th anniversary of Kennedy's assassination.

"We are quite fortunate to have him here. He chose to come to Saint Mary's, and I think his speech will give us some new insight on the Kennedy assassination," said Lisa Hill, Vice President for student affairs.

According to Hill, talk speech will include a slide presentation and informative literature.

"Gordon is an expert on events leading up to and the assassination," said Hill.

Other topics of interest include the tentative visit of Gwendolyn Brooks, Pulitzer Prize winning poet. Student Government is in the process of negotiating a future date and time for Brooks' visit to campus.

Also announced was dorm picture night, which is set for November 9. Students are encouraged to participate and further information is located in all sections of all dorms.

Bayh, Mutz close in polls

Associated Press

Republican John Mutz and Democrat Evan Bayh dashed toward the finish line of their marathon campaign for governor Monday as a new poll showed the race could be close.

Mutz, bringing a two-year campaign to a close, claimed he was gaining momentum while Bayh remained confident he would hold the advantage he has enjoyed since the first public opinion polls were taken in the race.

The latest poll released on Monday showed Bayh favored by 50.1 percent and Mutz by 46.3 percent among those who said they will vote when contacted by university researchers.

The full sample of 1,069 registered voters contacted last Thursday through Saturday by the Public Opinion Laboratory at Indiana University-Purdue University at Indianapolis gave Bayh a 47.8 percent to 36.9 percent lead.

However, the margin narrowed when the poll was confined to the 87 percent of those surveyed who said they definitely intended to vote, said Brian Vargus, director of the poll.

The survey's margin of error was plus or minus 3.2 percent, Vargus said.

He said the results indicate that Mutz could make it a close race if turnout is low and sizable numbers of Republicans don't defect from the party to support Bayh.

The survey is unique in Indiana because it is conducted by telephoning the same group of voters interviewed by the public opinion laboratory in October. At that time, Bayh enjoyed a 45.2 to 31.8 lead among all questioned and a 45.5 to 34.2 advantage among those likely to vote.

An Indianapolis Star poll published Oct. 30 gave Bayh a 14-point lead and a Fort Wayne Journal-Gazette poll printed Sunday put the margin at 12 points.

Democratic vice presidential candidate Lloyd Bentsen appeared on stage in Texas with a caged quail- an obvious dig at his Republican rival, Dan Quayle.

Bush threw a stinging jab at Dukakis, saying, "We don't want to return to my opponent's favorite song: 'for all you do, this recession is for you.'"

Dukakis campaigned without letup on his pledge to stand up for "average working families." Grabbing rest when he could on his plane, he flew to a sunrise political service in Cleveland, then a rally in St. Louis, where he was greeted by a band playing "Rock Around the Clock." Still to come was more campaigning on the West Coast and then another middle-of-the-night flight to an Iowa rally and election-morning appearances in Michigan.

"I don't need sleep, I'm charging," he said in Ohio. "We're going to win," he added, predicting a "November surprise" that would land him in the White House.

The polls said otherwise, and few outside the Dukakis inner circle raised their voice to disagree. Pollster Lou Harris was one. He said Bush's margin was shrinking steadily.

The other late soundings gave Bush an edge, but by differing amounts. Gallup made it 11 points for the vice president. CBS said it was six. Both said there was an unusual potential for late shifts of opinion. Whatever the national sounding, most surveys made his advantage in the Electoral College handsome, indeed.

The Associated Press' tabulation showed Bush ahead in states with 356 electoral votes, although he could not count securely on the 270 needed for victory.

ELECTION BRIEFS

Maryland voters decide today whether to keep that state's pioneering new law effectively banning cheap handguns. Both sides predict the outcome could affect gun control legislation pending in states across the country. Also at issue on ballots around the nation are such issues as abortion, car insurance, lotteries and language. Pro-gun lobbyists have spent more than $4 million on Maryland's ballot issue, making it the most expensive campaign of any kind in the state.

Polls show George Bush concluded his campaign Monday by maintaining his months-old lead over Michael Dukakis, but his margin varied from four points in one survey to 11 in another. A CBS news poll found the race tightening somewhat, with Bush's lead slipping from nine points to six. A Harris poll said Dukakis had closed to within four, while Gallup found Bush solidly ahead. Twenty percent of the people in Gallup's final pre-election poll were undecided or said they could change their minds, easily enough to alter the outcome in the many key states where the election was close. -Associated Press

Voting booths in Connecticut, Kentucky, Ohio and Vermont close early and could provide the answer to the year-long presidential campaign. The winner could be known early if Republican George Bush is making a strong showing. But if Democrat Michael Dukakis is doing well, it could be a long night with the outcome dependent on returns from the West Coast. -Associated Press

P.O. Box Q

Who will take blame for Bush ticket affair?

Dear Editor:

As this wretched political season lurches to a close, all of us have much to regret. We should all regret that the enormous issues that face our nation have gone undebated. We are no clearer now as a polity on what to do about the national debt, junk bonds, ghetto poverty, Gorbachev, or mass starvation in Africa than we were a year ago.

We should all regret that the candidates have become the playthings of their campaign advisors. Roger Ailes and John Sasso have been more central to the campaign than have either Bush or Dukakis. We should regret that we have an elective process that drives away so many able people and that brings out the worst in the survivors. Bush and Dukakis may have had many fine hours in their lives, but those hours surely have not occurred in the past six months.

Most of all, however, we should regret that we as a political community have been so degraded. That the fact of Willie Horton has figured so prominently in the campaign speaks volumes for how mindless the "debate" over crime control has become—as if a redoubling of our prison population, or a resort to large-scale execution practices, could really recommend itself to an informed citizenry as the solution to the problem of violent crime.

Even here at Notre Dame, the rot that corrupts American political life is now evident. Last week Notre Dame played host to the vice president in hope that he would use his visit to this "hallowed" place to reflect on the basic philosophical differences between himself and Governor Dukakis. I will let those who heard or read his address decide for themselves how successful he was in that regard. I wish to focus my efforts here on what appears to have happened within this community in anticipation of the vice president's visit.

It now appears that some local Bush partisans deliberately exploited an ill-advised shift in the timing of the distribution of tickets to the speech to pack the hall with students sympathetic to the Republican side of the Great Divide that the vice president sketched in his talk. No great malice was involved in this, and no great harm was done. But surely it was wrong to conspire to pack the hall: common decency and an elemental sense of fairness both counsel that everyone on campus, regardless of his or her political sympathies, should have had an equal opportunity to get to the speech; and the packing of the hall surely contributed to the circus atmosphere that surrounded the event and to the rancor expressed so vituperatively by one student and so eloquently by others.

What the University administration has taken from the events of last week, I cannot say. Perhaps the University will simply distance itself from the idiocy of future political campaigns. What the rest of us should have learned is of more moment: how easy it is for us, in the heat of partisan rivalry, to rupture the bonds of trust that connect us to our fellows and to treat gross unfairness as a collective political coup. How adept we are at convincing ourselves that our self-serving meanness is somehow something different from what it plainly is.

Is it too much to hope that some, at least, of those responsible for the petty wrongs of ten days ago will step forward and express regret for what was done?

ND Republicans libeled by scandal

Dear Editor:

I write this in an attempt to clarify rumors and misconceptions surrounding the Bush ticket distribution. Tom Ehrhardt and I began organizing for the Bush visit the Saturday before the event. One of the first things I did was call Chris Devron and John Hamill of student government to inform them that a flier which had been put out was misleading in two ways, and thus should not be distributed. I then attempted to call three members of Student Activities, but was unable to contact any of them (remember it was late afternoon on Saturday).

The next afternoon, Sunday, the Bush campaign had a meeting with representatives of the University, including Mr. Conklin. At this meeting the early morning 8 a.m. distribution time was reiterated, not changed. Mr. Conklin agrees saying that "from the beginning" tickets were to be distributed as early as possible. It was the Bush campaign that informed the University of the misleading flier, and Mr. Conklin agreed it was indeed misleading. Mr. Conklin then made sincere attempts to notify the appropriate student representatives. Therefore the slanderous charges that Tom or I or the campaign tried to manipulate the process in order to unfairly "pack" the crowd is completely baseless. In The Observer article of Tuesday, Mr. Conklin goes on to say that "the whole scenario that there was a conspiracy is untrue."

Sunday, 7 p.m., was the time of our first general meeting. The chairman of the College Democrats tried to sneak into the meeting, and was therefore aware of the 8 a.m. distribution time. I also happen to know that the Dukakis campaign chairman on campus was called about the 8 a.m. distribution time directly after Mr. Conklin's meeting. This means that before 7 p.m. on the day before tickets were to be distributed, the College Democrats, the Dukakis campaign and other politically liberal organizations had the appropriate information.

There is no question that I believe it regrettable that the misleading flier was ever spread around, but I have detailed the steps I took to stop its distribution. However, I believe it even more regrettable that members of certain radical protest groups and others, even in student government, continue to spread disinformation concerning the BushQuayle campaign's activities in this matter. It has been printed and aired that my actions were unethical, or to quote Mr. Paese, "unfair and manipulative." I just hope the informed student can see the obvious sensationalism and partisanship behind such statements.

I regret the fact that everyone who wanted to see the vice president could not; however, the main reason behind this problem was the inability to rent the Joyce ACC, which had two concerts previously booked. Therefore we were left with Stepan Center and 900 student seats. With a student body of over 8,000 it was inevitable that thousands would be disappointed or upset. In the end the "typical" Domer who was never made aware of the situation, should be more displeased with the protesters who used tickets with clear intent to disrupt the address, than with the Republicans on campus. The protesters who went inside and who were disruptive only took seats away from students who truly wanted to listen respectfully to our vice president.

Administration exploited by Bush

Dear Editor:

As students of the University of Notre Dame, we wish to express the following to our administration.

In our opinion, the name, stature, population, and resources of this University were manipulated by the campaign of George Bush to his political advantage. We feel strongly that no political candidate, regardless of party preference, should ever be allowed to use Notre Dame in this way.

We do not object to having candidates for office speak at Notre Dame. The White Center invited Mr. Bush to deliver a lecture as part of their lecture series on government and law. Instead of using this event as a unique opportunity to share the wealth of his political experience, Mr. Bush staged a self-serving political rally.

Through a combination of factors including: distribution of tickets to ensure a strongly partisan crowd, presence of a pep band throughout the lecture, endorsement of other Republican candidates, and photographs with the football team, Mr. Bush created the image that the University endorsed his candidacy for president of the United States.

We hold the leaders of our University community accountable for not taking steps to prevent the manipulation of the University's name, or to dispel the notion that the University endorses Mr. Bush. Thus, we express our disappointment in the University's handling of George Bush's visit and urge the administration to take appropriate measures to avoid any candidate's appropriation of the University of Notre Dame's name in the future.

A petition expressing these feelings will be circulated through the dorms on campus this week and will be presented to Father Malloy on Friday.

"Campus' Largest Family"

accent writer

In the northeast corner of campus, across from North Dining Hall, and in the evening shadow of the Golden Dome, lies a haven for many of campus' unique features; In that spot lies Keenan Hall. It is a meeting place of the old and the new, as well as the traditional and the modern.

Ask anyone who lives there, it is the only place on campus to live, because it is the only place that is easily called "home." Even the hall's namesake, James F. Keenan, who never lived there, said it would "provide a home away from home for generations of young men who choose Our Lady's school."

The building itself was donated by James F. Keenan Sr. Keenan, a Notre Dame graduate from the class of 1913, donated the hall in memory of his son James F. Keenan Jr. The Keenan's, owners of a string of midwest hotels and members of the University Board of Trustees, saw their son tragically killed in a surfing accident at their summer home in 1941.

The son, before his death, had recently graduated from a military academy, and was preparing to enter the University of Notre Dame as a freshman. On November 23, 1957 the new Keenan Hall was dedicated to his memory in a ceremony presided over by the then Archbishop of Philadelphia and former President of Notre Dame (1934-39) John F. O'Hara. Thus bringing the Keenan-Stanford complex into the University family.

Presently, Keenan Hall houses over 300 undergraduate students under the careful guidance of Rector, Brother Bonaventure Scully. During the past summer it was fully renovated from its rather notorious, old image of a tenement hall. The rooms have been repainted, and the hallways sport new light fixtures, new wallpaper (yes wallpaper), and even new carpeting.

Yet even with all of the new beautifications, Keenan Hall, the youngest dorm other than the "Mod Quad" dorms, still possesses the traditional atmosphere that many claim the Mod Quad lacks.

The dorm isn't air conditioned, its rooms aren't carpeted, it even has an old, rickety elevator complete with graffiti. All of these traditional dorm "qualities" though, are secondary to Keenan residents' overwhelming spirit.

Another secret is hidden beneath the rooms of the hall. Most people don't realize that Keenan Hall has the largest basement on the Notre Dame campus. It is complete with two televisions, two pool-tables, two videogames, a library studyroom, a weightlifting room, a conference room, a music rehearsal room, and plenty of room to study, talk and lounge. Also in the basement is "Zaland" Not only is "Zaland" a five-star foodsales establishment, but it was recently rated as one of the two best on campus.

Two students walk towards the front entrance of Keenan Hall.

The Observer / Mike Moran

All of this helps set Keenan apart, but the one thing that truly sets it above other dorms, is "The Keenan Revue." The famed Keenan Revue has been the single largest entertainment event on campus every year for over a decade. It is Keenan's unique gift to the Notre Dame / St. Mary's communities. The show itself is written, directed and acted by Keenanites, and is a product of the Keenan Knights' spirit and enthusiasm.

Keenan Hall was the first dorm to have a study lounge and it has a famous mahogany crucifix sculpted by Ivan Mestrovic, in the chapel. It is as quiet or as noisy as any other dorm. It even got struck by lightning a month ago, but all of these things are just bits of trivia.

There is something very special about Keenan Hall that goes beyond the bricks, the renovations and the activities inside. It is the family spirit that exists there. When James F. Keenan Sr. called Keenan Hall a "home away from home," little did he know it would grow to house campus' largest family.

ND Gets Taste of Italian Life

KERRY COSTELLO

"All roads lead to Rome." This is the theme of Expo Roma 1988, which will last until the end of next week. Expo Roma is an annual exhibition of the efforts of third-year architecture students from their studies in Rome last year.

EXPO ROMA

According to Jose Pinto, a fourth-year architecture student, "This year's Expo Roma is one of the best so far. We worked hard-- in Rome and also here. It took a long time to organize and set everything up for the exhibition."

This year's show consists of many works such as watercolors, pencil and ink sketching, and urban projects. Field trips provided the opportunity for special projects in Venice, Naples, Pompei and Sicily.

Some of the urban works consist of twentieth century intervention, in historic context, in which the students compose an architectural plan for a section of a city, designing houses and buildings according to the personalities of the people who would live there. Pinto believes that this is a highlight of the year, because it expresses the student's understanding of Italian culture and allows for personal interpretation and expression.

The obelisk near South Dining Hall, he explained, resembles those brought from Egypt to Rome in ancient times. This year the architecture students imitated some of these and placed them strategically around campus, aligned with South Dining Hall, The Rockne Memorial and the Architecture Building.

Preparations for Expo Roma 1988 took a month, primarily under the direction of Pinto and Ellen Rauth, so be sure not to miss this unique glimpse into Italian culture and life.

Lewis will face the surging Breen-Phillips Blitz in the championship game after edging Pasquerilla West 8-6 in Sunday's second game at Loftus.

Kristy Alkidas set up the B-P touchdown in the first half with 35-yard run to the PW 10. After an incomplete pass, Alkidas ran the ball and dove over the goal line to put the Blitz up 6-0. Quarterback Teresa Coombs hit Shannon Thompson for the two-point conversion, to give the Blitz the edge would need. In the second half, PW scored but failed on the conversion, and Karen Marsh snared a key interception late in the game on the Blitz five to ensure the win.

"We weren't sure we could win, but we knew we could play with them," said Jill Adamondis. "They beat us 13-0 early in the year, but now we're playing better. Our freshmen have gotten used to the system, and we're doing better."

brand of soccer. They'll be prepared to play us."

Notre Dame's path to the NCAA Tournament included a stop at the MCC Tournament in St. Louis where the Irish shocked the host Billikens Sunday. The Irish also beat Evansville and Detroit (6-0) on their way to the title.

"What you've got to keep in mind about the MCC Tournament is that we're the team that played three days in a row and faced two of the top five teams in the country," said Grace. "We have a lot of confidence in ourselves, but we know that we must outwork people if we're going to win out there on the field."

"If anything, we've made a bigger challenge for ourselves (by qualifying for the NCAA tournament). But this team has never been afraid of a challenge."

SIDEKICKS-- A victory over SMU would result in a rematch of Sunday's MCC championship game against Saint Louis, which received a first-round bye.

USC gains ground, but Irish still No. 1

Associated Press

Notre Dame remained No. 1 in the Associated Press Top Twenty football poll following a 54-11 victory over winless Rice, receiving 42 of 59 first-place votes and 1,160 of a possible 1,180 points from a nationwide panel of sportswriters and sportscasters.

Second-ranked Southern California, which trounced California 35-3, gained some ground on the Irish. The Trojans, who host Notre Dame on Nov. 26, received 15 first-place votes and 1,122 points.

Last week, with 58 members of the 60-man panel participating, Notre Dame led 44-11 in first-place ballots and 1,144-1,097 in points.

Third-ranked Miami and No.

4 West Virginia each received one first-place vote. The Hurricanes, who beat Tulsa 34-3, had 1,065 points while the Mountaineers, who routed Cincinnati 51-13, had 979.

Rounding out the Top Ten are Florida State, UCLA, Nebraska, Oklahoma, Auburn and Wyoming.

The Second Ten consists of Arkansas, LSU, Michigan, Oklahoma State, Syracuse, Clemson, Georgia, Alabama, Colorado and Washington State.

Last week, it was Arkansas, Oklahoma State, LSU, Michigan, South Carolina, Syracuse, Clemson, Alabama and Georgia, with Brigham Young and Indiana tied for 20th.

Irish finish inaugural season

Women's soccer loses to MSU, sports 13-6-1 final mark

By COLLEEN HENNESSEY
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame women's soccer team played the final game of its first varsity season last Friday and came out with mixed results.

The Irish lost 3-0 at Michigan State and ended their successful year with a record of 13-6-1. The women were undefeated at home and outscored their opponents by a total of 53-23.

"Michigan State is the kind of team we'll be playing next season," said Irish assistant coach Neil Schmidt. "It is both good and bad to end with that kind of team—good for the experience but bad for the loss."

Schmidt stressed that Michigan State had been ranked in the top 20 several weeks ago, and he praised the Irish for their high quality of play under bad weather conditions and against such an established opponent.

"The score was 1-0 at halftime," said Schmidt. "We applied a lot of offensive pressure and thought it maybe should have been tied at the half."

"They came out frustrated and physical in the second half because they had thought they were going to walk all over us," Schmidt continued. "We hung in there with them, but we didn't have quite as much of an offensive push in the second half."

Despite the loss, Schmidt is enthusiastic about the team.

"It has been a very successful season," he said. "Look at our record—not many first-year teams can say they did that well."

Junior K.T. Sullivan, who played two years of varsity soccer at Canisius College before transferring to Notre Dame this fall, is pleased with the year's results as well.

"We had a great season," she said. "We worked really hard, and it is impressive that we did so well for a beginning program."

It's Dillon, Stanford in IH football finals

By DAVE McMAHON
Sports Writer

On a Sunday that included the prime element of winter football, Stanford and Dillon overcame poor weather and field conditions to plow into the Interhall men's football championship.

Stanford 13, Alumni 0—Sean Gilboy ended a 65-yard scoring drive in the first quarter with a one-yard run to lead Stanford to victory over Alumni in a light but steady snowshower.

"The snow was to our advantage," said Stanford captain Steve Wightkin. "We were strong tackle-to-tackle offensively, which opened up our running game. They (Alumni) never did get their passing game started."

The Studs added another score in the fourth quarter when Chris Westerfelt caught a 25-yard touchdown pass from quarterback Mike Busato.

The Dogs had won the first meeting between the two teams earlier in the season, 10-6.

"They capitalized on the pass during the first game," said Wightkin. "We pretty much blew it with four fumbles, but we won the game that we needed to win with mistake-free football."

Dillon 6, Fisher 2—Using a strong second effort, Pat Murphy plunged into the endzone from the six-yard line to give Dillon a 6-2 win, setting the stage for a rematch of last year's Interhall championship.

"We still had a lot of guys hurt from last week, but the subs played really well," said Dillon captain Paul Drey.

The snow kept passing to a minimum, as traction was virtually impossible for the receivers.

"Our defensive backs slipped on a couple of their passes, which turned out to be big plays," said Fisher captain Jim Turecek.

Fisher's only points were registered in the fourth quarter when Dillon intentionally downed the ball in its own endzone after getting poor field position.

Despite the loss, Turecek viewed the season as a success.

ND tennis meets top-flight foes

By CHRIS COONEY
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame women's tennis team displayed its increasing improvement last weekend with excellence performances against nationally-ranked teams at the Rice Tennis Classic in Houston, Tex.

The Irish faced No. 14 SMU, No. 19 Texas, No. 22 Texas A&M and No. 25 TCU as well as Rice, Houston, and LSU. The tournament was flighted so that members competed in individual tournaments at their own positions.

CeCe Cahill was the runner-up in the number-one singles spot. She lost to Diana Merritt 6-0, 6-0 in a championship match loaded with long rallies. Merritt is ranked 25th in the current national collegiate polls.

"CeCe played consistently throughout the weekend," said coach Michele Gelfman. "The score of the final was not at all indicative of the intense level of play."

Cahill was pleased with her performance, particularly because this was her first outdoor meet in two months.

"I was happy because I knew it was going to be windy and I adjusted well," Cahill commented. "In the final, I was in every point and although I would have liked to have done better, I was pleased with the tournament as a whole. It was great exposure, playing all the top Texas schools."

Cahill defeated Claire Sessions of SMU 7-5, 6-3 and Stina Ulmgren of Houston 6-4, 2-6, 6-3 to reach the finals.

Other players also fared well at the tournament. In the third singles slot, freshman Tracy Barton took third place, beating Cindy Crawford of Texas A&M 6-2, 7-6 (7-5) in the deciding match.

Two other freshmen, No. 6 Ann Bradshaw and No. 7 Tyler Musleh, both upset Chrissie Tee of TCU. Tee was the No. 1 seed at her position. Bradshaw won 6-2, 1-6, 6-2 to finish fourth in her draw. Musleh, bouncing back after a disappointing first-round loss, handled Tee 6-4, 6-4.

Gelfman was very encouraged by the play of the entire team.

"We played head to head with these teams, knocking off seeds and ranked players," said Gelfman. "I couldn't have asked for better play from the girls."

"Four years ago, when we switched to Division I, these teams would never have even played us," said Gelfman. "Our progress has skyrocketed, and the girls are very excited."

ND soccer team nabs 1st-ever NCAA bid

Irish face SMU at Dallas in opening round

By FRANK PASTOR
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame men's soccer team received its first-ever NCAA Tournament berth Monday in the wake of its surprising victory in the Midwestern Collegiate Conference tournament last weekend in St. Louis.

The 15th-ranked Irish (17-3-2) travel to Dallas Sunday to face 11th-ranked Southern Methodist University at Ownbey Field in the first round of the NCAA tournament.

"I couldn't be more ecstatic or excited for the kids," said Irish coach Dennis Grace. "They really worked hard and put in so much effort. Until we joined the MCC this year, we never had a conference championship to shoot for. The NCAA tournament has always been so out of reach. We've always aspired to get there--now we're there."

Notre Dame played havoc with the NCAA tournament voters this year by posting a 4-0-1 record against teams which qualified for the tournament. Irish victories over Boston University (5-1), Penn State (3-1), Evansville (2-0) and Saint Louis (2-0), coupled with a 1-1 tie against Indiana, forced the voters to reassess their qualifications.

"We really muddled the waters this year," said Grace. "We went down to Indiana, who was ranked No. 1 in the country, and tied them. We played No. 4 Evansville for the first time in three years and beat them 2-0. We just turned everything upside down this year. They (the NCAA voters) tried to keep us out, but really couldn't."

While the Irish were celebrating their first-ever NCAA tournament bid, traditional powers such as defending national champion Clemson, Duke, Rutgers and North Carolina State were denied admission to the tournament.

"I wasn't real happy that we weren't the No. 1 team in the region," said Grace, "but I was ecstatic when I heard of the teams that didn't get into the tournament. They are all outstanding teams."

Sunday marks the first time Notre Dame has played SMU in the 12-year history of the Irish soccer program. The Mustangs (10-2-6) have advanced to the NCAA tournament for the last six years, and eight of the last 10.

Although Notre Dame and SMU never have faced each other, they have played two common opponents--Wisconsin and Saint Louis. The Irish tied Wisconsin 0-0 earlier in the year and defeated Saint Louis 2-0 last Sunday in the championship game of the MCC tournament. The Mustangs tied Wisconsin 2-2 and played to a scoreless tie against Saint Louis.

"SMU is an outstanding team," said Grace. "They have been No. 1 in the country at times this year and last year. They play a good, aggressive

Randy Morris (5) and the Notre Dame soccer team are going to the NCAA tournament for the first time in the Irish program's 12-year history. The Irish, ranked 15th in the country, play No. 11 SMU Sunday at Dallas.

Lewis pops Farley in Interhall

By THERESA KELLY
Assistant Sports Editor

Farley's Finest blasted its way through the regular women's Interhall football season, giving up less than three points per contest and dominating on offense as well to compile a 5-0 record.

All that ended Sunday afternoon at Loftus Sports Center, when Lewis Hall upset Farley's Finest 14-6 in the first game of the Interhall playoffs. Lewis avenged a 6-0 overtime loss from earlier in the season and advanced to the finals, to be played against Breen-Phillips at a date and time to be announced.

"It was tough at times, but we played well," said Lewis offensive guard Jill Coakley. "We came close to beating them before, and we knew we had the potential to beat them. We just had to make sure we did."

Lewis did by holding the Farley offense to six points, which the Finest did in a quick offensive flurry to end the first half. Lewis had started the scoring when senior quarterback Ellen Mouch found an opening on the left side and sped 60 yards to give Lewis the early lead.

Both defenses played tough in the second half. Lewis reached the Farley 15-yard line, but the Finest defense pushed Lewis back to the 30. On fourth down with time running out, Mouch hit Sue Lipka with a touchdown pass to give Lewis a 12-6 lead.

Mouch converted the two-point try on a run up the middle, and Farley got the ball back to try to make a run on the Lewis defense and send the game into overtime.

Farley got to the Lewis 10-yard line, but the Lewis defense rose to the occasion and stopped Farley short in the biggest upset of the season.

Basketball season tickets still on sale at Joyce ACC

Special to the Observer

Student season tickets for the 1988-89 Notre Dame basketball season are still available at the Joyce ACC box office.

Athletic Department director of promotions Bubba Cunningham says that student ticket sales are down from last year, despite the improvements in the Irish home schedule.

"I can't figure out why they're not selling," Cunningham said. "I guess the students are still thinking about football, and not basketball."

A few lower arena seats are still available for student purchase at $85, half off the price for the general public. Plenty of bleacher seats are available to students at $68 for the season.

Students can purchase tickets from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the JACC ticket office until the Notre Dame-Yugoslavia game Nov. 18. This season's home schedule includes Syracuse, Indiana, Temple, Duke, USC, DePaul and Louisville.

The Notre Dame wrestling team opened its season last Sunday with a second-place finish in the Michigan State Invitational. Junior Andy Radenbaugh won his third consecutive individual championship in the 118-pound division.

ND places 2nd at MSU Invite

Wrestlers open season by falling just short of Edinboro

By GREG SCHECKENBACH
Sports Writer

The Irish wrestling team won a few battles, but lost the war.

That was the feeling of the Notre Dame squad after it brought home a hard-fought second-place finish Sunday in the Michigan State Invitational. The victor in the war was Edinboro, with a combined team total of 83 points. Edinboro finished seventh in the NCAA Tournament last season. Notre Dame, the defending MSU Invitational champion, finished the tournament with 78.25 points.

Despite an impressive performance, the Irish were unhappy after the match.

"I was a bit disappointed that we didn't outscore Edinboro for the title," said Irish coach Fran McCann. "We needed one more third-place finisher to win the tournament, and we just couldn't get one. I've got to be pleased with the way some of the team wrestled."

Freshman Marcus Gowens has yet to be defeated in his college career. He won all three of his matches en route to the title in the 126-pound division, making it three straight years that a Notre Dame freshman has won a title at the Michigan State Invitational.

"Gowens showed tremendous composure for a freshman, particularly in the final match," stated McCann.

Junior Andy Radenbaugh grabbed the championship trophy in the 118-pound division with a 3-2 defeat of Michigan State's Richard Flanders. Radenbaugh will be a top competitor for a NCAA tournament bid this year in the Western Region.

Senior co-captain Chris Geneser bruised his way to the 177-pound title. He crushed Doug Mooney of Ferris State 15-8 in the finals to win his third consecutive Michigan State Invitational title.

"What can I say about Geneser except that he could contend for an NCAA title this year," said McCann.

Other members of the Irish also had strong showings at Michigan State. Co-Captain Jerry Durso and sophomore Todd Layton both finished second in the 134-pound and 150-pound divisions respectively. Durso lost 10-8 in the finals to the third-place finisher in last year's NCAA Tournament.

Senior Pat Boyd made an impressive return to wrestling after missing most of last year with an injury. Boyd recorded two pins while placing third in the 142-pound division.

The Irish are a young team, wrestling three freshmen and three sophomores. Experience was a factor for some Irish, especially in the heavier weight divisions.

"Edinboro wrestled with a veteran squad while we are still a very young team," said McCann. "We are only going to get better."
