Breslin and Kinkopf win run-off election

Frigon wins in District 1 run-off

By JEFF SWANSON
Staff Reporter

Matt Breslin and Dave Kinkopf defeated Tom Rask and Melissa Smith in the student body president run-off election Wednesday.

"I'm ecstatic to win convincingly. It shows that there's a lot of support for this administration," said Breslin. "We feel that we will be able to go to the (University) Administration stronger," he said.

The Breslin/Kinkopf ticket won with 2,225 votes (69.38 percent) while the Rask/Smith ticket received 982 votes (30.62 percent.)

"The experience issue was blown out of proportion," Rask said. "We had real experience. If you look at the debates, we should have won," he said.

"We couldn't give our side of the story because it is against Observer policy to print letters to the editor or Viewpoints concerning candidates. Once they (The Observer) make an endorsement people should be allowed to respond to it," he said.

Regarding The Observer's policy not to print responses to its endorsement, Breslin said "I respect the policy of The Observer if they feel that it is fair."

In the District One Student Senate runoff Chris Frigon received 464 votes (57.28 percent) to defeat Scott Murray's 346 votes (42.72 percent).

"Since it was a run-off, I thought turn-out would be important. Keenan turned out to be a key dorm," Frigon said.

"I want to commend Scott (Murray) and Jim (Nelis). They did a great job organizing their races. I don't want to take anything away from them," said Frigon.

Breslin said that he wished to continue programs of student government and to expand student services. "We are looking forward to a smooth transition and to get a quick start on things," he said.

ND senior files suit against University over dismissal

Associated Press

SOUTH BEND- A Notre Dame senior and former football player has gone to court to fight his dismissal from the university after a woman alleged he attempted to rape her, according to court documents.

Daniel Quinn, 21, of Encinitas, Calif., has sued Notre Dame for breach of contract. He filed a second suit Tuesday against the woman, a student at Saint Mary's College, alleging slander.

St. Joseph Circuit Court Judge Terry Crone denied Quinn's request Friday for a preliminary injunction to block his dismissal.

Patrick Doran, the university's assistant director of residence life, had ordered Quinn to leave his dormitory room and the campus by 5 p.m. Friday, court documents show.

"Our only comment is that we, in fact, believe we breached no contract," said Notre Dame Assistant General Council Carol Kaesebier. University Director of Public Relations and Information Rich-Charges filed against Brooks; no charges filed against Stonebreaker as of Wed.

SOUTH BEND- Notre Dame tailback Tony Brooks was charged Wednesday with two misdemeanor criminal violations in connection with a hit-and-run accident last weekend, according to court records.

Charges of driving with a suspended license and leaving the scene of an accident were filed by St. Joseph County Prosecutor Michael Barnes in the Misdemeanor and Traffic Division of Superior Court.

Both violations are Class A misdemeanors and carry maximum penalties of one year in jail and a $5,000 fine upon conviction. No date has been set for a court appearance.

Brooks, 19, of Tulsa, Okla., has remained free since city police cited him Sunday, several hours after a car driven by a South Bend man was sideswiped. Brooks was driving on a suspended Oklahoma license, said Lt. Larry Bloom.

Brooks has not been available for comment.

Police had requested a certified copy of Brooks' driving record from Oklahoma and referred questions about the suspension to the prosecutor's office, where no one was available for comment.

Bloom said the accident resulting in charges against Brooks occurred shortly after 3 a.m. on a city street when a car driven by Kevin Coleman, 39, of South Bend, was struck as a car traveling ahead of him attempted a U-turn. The auto struck Coleman's car on the right side, causing at least $1,000 damage, and fled the scene, he said.

Police matched a description of the car given by Coleman with a damaged car discovered by Notre Dame security on the campus. Notre Dame Director of Security Rex Rakow said city police found Brooks cleaning out the car when they arrived to investigate. Brooks admitted to being involved in an accident, Rakow said.

A teammate, Michael Stonebreaker, remained in good condition Wednesday at Memorial Hospital of South Bend, where he has been hospitalized five days following a

Two computers stolen from O'Shaughnessy

Two Macintosh SE computers, six hard disks and miscellaneous items were stolen from eight College of Arts and Letters offices in O'Shaughnessy Hall this past weekend.

According to the police report, the burglary occurred sometime between 4 p.m. on Saturday, Feb. 25, and 4 p.m. Sunday, Feb. 26.

"Forced entry was used to enter the offices. We have collected all the evidence and the case is currently under investigation," said Phillip Johnson, assistant director of security.

According to Roger Skurski, associate dean of the college of arts and letters, the six stolen disks contained vast amounts of information.

"One of the stolen disks holds 40 megabytes of information while the other five hold up to 20 megabytes. Each 40 megabyte disk holds up to the equivalent of 50 floppy disks of information," Skurski said.

According to a member of the philosophy department, the data on some of the stolen disks cannot be retrieved because no back up disks exist.

Almost every office on the third floor of O'Shaughnessy was burglarized.

Five Macintosh computers valued at $15,000 were stolen from the computer lab on the second floor O'Shaughnessy on Feb. 2.

Skurski said, "The University is currently embarking on a $17 million project to expand the computer net-

LAST ISSUE

This is the last regular issue of The Observer before Spring Break. The Observer will resume publication on Tuesday, Mar. 14. The Observer wishes every one a fun and safe Spring Break.

IN BRIEF

Two Hoosiers were among 19 people awarded the Carnegie Medal for Heroism at ceremonies in Pittsburgh Wednesday. Karl Schreiner, 75, of Indianapolis rescued a 6-year-old boy from an attack by two pit bull terriers, while Randolph Macyauski, 30, of Greensburg saved a 6-year-old girl from drowning. Schreiner stepped in to help stop the attack in Indianapolis on Oct. 3, 1988. Macyauski saved the girl when her car was swept from a bridge and carried downstream in rain-swollen Salt Creek in Oldenburg, Ind., on Aug. 19, 1988. Grants totaling $47,500 were given to Wednesday's awardees and the widow of a man who died in his rescue attempt. -Associated Press

David Letterman invited the entire population of Bolan, Iowa--six Bolanites and 10 from the "suburbs" to visit New York City. Letterman, prompted by a staffer intrigued by Bolan, paid for the Iowans to come to New York for three days and appear on his show, "Late Night with David Letterman." "We wave at everybody. They give each other the bird," said Daryl McCready, comparing motorists in Bolan and Manhattan. McCready said he and his neighbors are enjoying the trip even though they know some people are poking fun at them. But he added, "When we see the mess and utter confusion of New York City, I wouldn't sell my 88 acres for 88 acres in Manhattan, unless I could sell it and move back to peace and quiet." -Associated Press

Gunnison, Colo has been named the nation's coldest community for the fourth straight year, while Palm Springs, Calif., moved up to capture honors as the warmest in 1988. Gunnison recorded the nation's lowest temperature 93 times last year. Palm Springs was the warmest community on 43 days. Overall the nation's average temperature last year, calculated by averaging the highs and lows, was 53 degrees Fahrenheit-- the same as the year before and 1 degree colder than in 1986. -Associated Press

INSIDE COLUMN

Editor-in-chief bids farewell to The Observer

"One generation passes away and another generation cometh but the earth abideth...all the rivers run into the sea; yet the sea is not full; unto the place from whence the rivers come, thither they return again." -Ecclesiastes

Chris Murphy

Editor-in-Chief

It's difficult, I suppose, for anyone to say goodbye to an organization that he or she has been closely associated with for four years.

It's especially difficult when you realize that organization and its people are going to continue on without you. It can lead one to think that he or she hasn't made a difference.

I have enjoyed leading The Observer for the past year in what I see as a positive direction. Though things have been difficult at times, our staff has worked diligently to put out a quality newspaper for our community. Without the work of over 175 student employees, most of whom are paid miserably, The Observer would not be circulated everyday.

And now that my job is done, I can honestly say that it is a miracle that there is a newspaper everyday with the possibility of things going wrong all the time. The people who don't take this for granted are the ones who appreciate The Observer the most.

As a staff member, I feel lucky to have been a part of The Observer this year. A wide range of newsworthy events has made it the most interesting in recent years at Notre Dame. Some of these events were the National Championship football season, the Hiler/Ward Congressional debate brought by student government, and the George Bush visit and the ensuing controversy.

Recently, however, some events take away from the fun of putting out a newspaper. The deaths of Bob Satterfield, Richard Macrina and Pat McManus are a grim reminder that we have a duty to report the news that we don't want to read.

Regarding the future of The Observer, it's important to remember that we are the voice of the community. The Observer is the most visible link between students, faculty, administrators, family and the community at large. This link is as important as any in the Notre Dame "family."

If The Observer is the link in the community, however, then it has a responsibility to serve the interests of all members of that community. Because The Observer serves as the voice of the community, that voice is important. The Observer's new general board must realize the importance of that voice and the responsibility it carries.

The Observer needs more student, faculty and administrative input. In an academic year that has been labelled the "Year of Cultural Diversity," this University needs diverse input on all issues pertaining to our academic, social and cultural lives. The Observer should be the forum for these thoughts.

At the same time, our community needs a challenge. The Observer can only serve a limited function in creating an intellectual forum for diverse thought. The community at this University is uncommonly silent; the community can blame only itself for this silence.

After a year at the top, I've learned to realize that The Observer, much like our community, is not perfect and probably never will be.

But striving to serve the community's interests is the ultimate goal of any newspaper. And I'm pleased with the way we've served our community this year.

Cabinet Meeting

President Bush and Defense Secretary-designate John Tower confer before a Cabinet meeting at the White House Tuesday. The Senate is expected to consider Tower's nomination later this week.

New riots break out in Venezuela

Associated Press

CARACAS, Venezuela- New riots broke out in the western slums Wednesday despite martial law imposed because of two days of disturbances, and at least one person was reported killed.

Venezuelans jammed the few remaining food stores, guarded by soldiers, to stock up after two days of riots and looting over price increases in which more than 100 people have been reported killed and 800 injured.

Witnesses in outlying areas of Caracas said police exchanged gunfire with snipers and drove mobs away from stores. Other witnesses said a woman had been killed by police early Wednesday in the town of Catia as she tried to loot a store.

Radio reporters said delinquents tried to break into homes in Guarenas, 30 miles west of Caracas, while homeowners were defending themselves with guns.

President Carlos Andres Peres declared martial law late Tuesday, saying the "incredible tragedy" of the violence threatened Venezuela's "consolidation of democracy." His spokesman said people must realize the rich years of the oil boom are over.

The president also announced an agreement between industry and labor for an immediate wage increase that would raise the pay of those earning the minimum wage by more than 50 percent.

Downtown Caracas was calm Wednesday. Most banks remained closed and those that opened let customers in one at a time. Office workers returned to work and some buses began to operate.

Tower publicly admits extramarital affair

Associated Press

WASHINGTON- John Tower made an extraordinary public admission of marital infidelity Wednesday but vowed to keep fighting for Senate confirmation as defense secretary.

President Bush continued to court Democrats in a last-ditch effort to save the appointment, and spokesman Marlin Fitzwater asserted, "We'll just keep up the good fight."

But Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell further dampened Tower's chances by declaring his opposition, even as Vice President Dan Quayle conceded the administration still lacks the votes needed for Senate approval.

The president said his appeal to senators has been, "Look, do what you've got to do, but remember fair play, remember decency and honor, and then remember also historically the concept of advise and consent where reasonable doubt is given historically to the president of the United States who after all is responsible for the executive branch of this government."

Tower said he regards his weekend vow to quit drinking if he wins confirmation as "sacred ... and I can assure you I will abide by it."

Asked whether he had ever broken his wedding vows, the twice-divorced Tower said, "As a matter of fact, I have broken wedding vows. I think I am probably not alone in that connection."

Tower's second wife, Lilla Burt Cummings, alleged "marital misconduct" in court papers in the couple's divorce case.

Bush dispatched Quayle to Capitol Hill to lobby for the nomination.

"We hope the prospects improve. We don't have 50 votes yet. But we're moving in that direction," Quayle told a White House photo session.

Tower showed flashes of grit and humor as he fielded questions at the National Press Club about allegations concerning excessive drinking, womanizing and lucrative consulting fees he received from defense contractors.

Asked whether he would ask that his name be withdrawn, he replied by quoting from the last letter written by Col. William Barrett Travis, the leader of the Texans who fought and died at the Alamo: "I shall never surrender or retreat."

The former Texas senator paused briefly and said, "I am a little sorry I brought up the Alamo analogy. It just occurred to me what happened at the Alamo just 10 days after Travis wrote that letter." Texas defenders were wiped out by the Mexicans.

Republicans were trying to decide whether to seek a delay in the beginning of the debate on the nomination, which has drawn widespread opposition from Democrats.

ard Conklin said Quinn has left campus.

Quinn was recruited by former head coach Gerry Faust and was a reserve outside linebacker for the 1985 and 1986 seasons, according to the documents and Notre Dame football guides.

Notre Dame Sports Information Director John Heisler said Quinn was suspended from the team by Head Coach Lou Holtz in the spring of 1987 for undisclosed reasons.

Quinn did not return to the team but remained on athletic scholarship in the 1987-88 academic year, Heisler said. He saw no playing time his freshman year under Faust and played in five games under Holtz in 1986, making four tackles, according to the football guides.

Heisler said Quinn was suspended from the university last spring for an undisclosed reason and was not permitted to return last fall. Quinn was permitted to re-enroll in January but was not on athletic scholarship, he said.

In his suit against the female student, Quinn alleged the woman made untrue, slanderous claims when she told officials he attempted to have sex against her will, and that he beat her and confined her, court documents show. The suit says Quinn met the student at a social gathering Feb. 3 on the Notre Dame campus.

No criminal charges have been filed.

In the suit against Notre Dame, Quinn alleged breach of contract in that the university failed to allow him to complete his degree after signing him to an athletic scholarship. He asks the court to order Notre Dame to permit him to return and finish school.

Quinn has asked for compensatory and punitive damages in both lawsuits, claiming in each that he has suffered emotional distress. He claims the Notre Dame action will cause him economic injury by denying him a degree and forcing him to return to California.

Honor Code has no place at ND

About 20 years ago, the first honor code at Notre Dame was abolished because of its unpopularity among the students who refused to report cheaters. The people who dissolved that code said that students must be willing to accept and support the non-tolerance policy for the Honor Code to succeed. It is an indisputable fact that the vast majority of the students here will not report another student for cheating on an exam or an assignment. Unfortunately, the administration views this loyalty as a shortcoming.

Jason Carroll

guest column

"Squealers" destroy the unity of the "Notre Dame family." The Honor code would be more in place in schools with cut-throat competition, like at Stanford or an ivy league school, where people reportedly steal notes from their classmates to lower the curve. The administration said it was influenced by other prestigious schools with honor codes, but we are different; we are ND. The University's greatest strength, the camaraderie of everyone in the community, is disturbed by this Honor Code.

The administration contradicts itself by saying that non-tolerance is necessary to the Honor Code, and realizes that the students will not report each other, yet implements the code anyway. By approving a rule which is merely disregarded by most of the students, the administration sets a negative precedent. The students learn disrespect for a distant, deaf group of oppressors. Students begin to feel that the administration does not care for anything but the precious University image. The Honor Code is, therefore, actually detrimental to the formation of the students' attitudes toward the administration. This imminent violation of the Code also demonstrates to students an unethical philosophy: break the law when it is convenient. Although widespread disobedience, per se, is not reason enough to eliminate a rule, it should be considered in the decision to establish and enforce the law.

Another of the Honor Code's negative effects is that it is a burden on the honest, while the dishonest are unaffected. A conscientious student will face an undesired dilemma if he witnesses an act in violation of the Code. One option is to report his fellow student. The result would be guilt for harming a neighbor, as well as likely ostracism, regardless of promises for anonymity. These predicaments are magnified if the offender is a close friend. The innocent observer could also remain silent, but his silence would be an offense in itself, which would create even more guilt. The virtuous student is, therefore, placed in a no-win situation.

Contrarily the dishonest student's burdens are removed. The obvious reluctance of other students to "narc," combined with the unproctored (at least officially) exams, presents new opportunities to cheat. This student would not care if he were breaking another rule. But both the administration and the student body realize that the Honor Code does not reduce cheating; the point here is simply that only the blameless suffer.

But still some of you might not be convinced. Those few believers argue that the administration must have their reasons to support an Honor Code that destroys unity, fosters disrespect, does not reduce cheating, and harms honest students. The official goal of the Honor Code is "to increase the students' pride, integrity and involvement in their own education." No survey is needed to see that the Honor code does not fulfill that purpose. The authors, unfortunately, disregarded their worthwhile motives as being mere rhetoric, and opted for the image-boosting mandate which is currently in effect.

It is sad that the University had to waste resources on a trial period, when the Honor Code's inevitable conclusion could have been discovered had the administration simply consulted the students or the faculty. Instead we have a code which is mocked as it dies out.

The only saving grace of this Honor Code is that it is fading away. I asked six sophomores about their 200-level courses which are all supposedly under the policies of the Honor Code. Only in five of their collective 30 classes did the teacher even mention the Honor Code, and two of those were votes, in which, it was voted down. The other 25 classes were exactly as before the Honor Code was instituted. Four of the six students said that they have yet to sign any sort of a pledge this semester but they have all turned in at least five tests or papers. A student reported that one of his teachers said, "I don't care if there is an Honor Code. I'm going to proctor this exam anyway." It is obvious from this limited, unofficial survey, that the teachers here, like the students, have no respect for this code.

With this multitude of significant, insurmountable shortcomings, it should be clear to all, including the administration, that the Honor Code does not belong here at Notre Dame.

Status of world needs attention

Dear Editor:

Time magazine declared 1988 the year of Planet Earth. In doing so they recognized the growing importance of environmental concerns in terms of social, economic and political considerations. Almost daily we are bombarded with new revelations about humanity's destruction of the environment. To name some current events: CFC's and ozone depletion, greenhouse effect, massive deforestation of the Amazon, chemical dumping in the Mississippi, and polluted tap water in Granger Indiana (to bring it nearer to Notre Dame).

There is a tendency, given the enormity of the problems, to shake your head, concluding that it is all out of your control, and after all you have an exam tomorrow. However, these issues aren't likely to go away and sooner or later we will be forced to address them. At the very least we will have to pay higher costs in garbage disposal, higher taxes for toxic waste cleanup, and greater medical/insurance costs as a greater portion of the populace requires medical care because of man-made environmental effects. In addition, there will most likely be enormous costs in human terms as people are adversely affected by pollutants and harmful environmental policies.

Last week, an article in The Observer concerning recycling program at Rutgers University spelled out the need for a recycling program at Notre Dame. As a member of the recently formed Notre Dame Environmental Action Club I believe that an in-depth exploration of the recycling issue at Notre Dame with all concerned is a step in the right direction. In the coming weeks we will be researching what types of recycling at Notre Dame could be appropriate and thus, we will be actively seeking input from students, staff, and faculty. But beyond the recycling policy (which is only one pertinent issue), we hope to address a wide range of environmental issues and concerns through sponsoring discussions, speakers, and educational information. Please come out for the meetings of the Notre Dame Environmental Action Club every Tuesday at 9 p.m. in the Center for Social Concerns.

ND students need global awareness

Dear Editor:

On Feb. 28 I wrote a Viewpoint article concerning the topic of globalization and the need for cultural and intellectual diversity within the college of Business Administration. The purpose of that article was to bring awareness to the student body and the faculty on an issue that is ever-present in the world today. Globalization pervades every aspect of our lives, whether it be making a major investment decision, buying an automobile, or simply going to the corner store-- and we, as future leaders, must be educated and well-informed to make responsible decisions in a global world. Notre Dame, as the premier academic and ethical institution in the country, has the capacity to step to the forefront and be a leader in the global movement.

The first step in this movement will be realized on Wednesday, March 15 with the First Annual Student Globalization Forum. This forum has the blessing of the University, and while the College of Business Administration is the focus of this forum, we hope to bring together students from all colleges within the University to integrate our different ideas and experiences.

This forum is unique in that we the students will be the principle speakers and will provide our perspectives on globalization. Father Hesburgh will also be speaking and relating his personal experiences as they pertain to globalization.

The purpose of the forum is to seek an understanding of the global economy; to define the theme of confidence in America, which is needed to sustain global prosperity; to address the issues of education, politics, ethics, and military strength in the global economy; and to provide insight into the role Notre Dame should play in globalization.

We, as students of the University, are anxious for Notre Dame to provide leadership in the area of global education. With the help of the student body, we hope to make our aspirations known to the administration and faculty and to propel Notre Dame to its rightful position at the head of America's academic institutions.

Champ clears up boxing motives

Dear Editor:

I am writing in response to Michael Schadek's article regarding the Notre Dame Bengal Bouts (The Observer, Feb. 28). Mr. Schadek stated that the motive of the boxers was to "beat the hell out of each other" and "leave the competition lying on the floor, preferably bleeding." I have been affiliated with the boxing club for four years and therefore feel more qualified to comment on the motives of the boxing club members' participation in the Bengal Bouts.

The judging of the Bouts is based on a scoring system; whoever scores the most points wins the match. I always take offense when someone says that we are trying to "beat the hell out of each other," especially when it is someone who knows nothing about our program. Mr. Schadek knows nothing about the camaraderie we all share in the boxing club. We all train together and are great friends. He makes grand statements about our motives and about our program, yet he has never once seen the Bengal Bouts. He says all that is required to enter the ring is a little ignorance. To me ignorance is condemning something you know nothing about. Mr. Schadek says that men must fight to prove their self-worth. What a distorted view of self-worth this statement demonstrates! We do not need to fight to prove our self-worth just as someone else should not need to write to prove his self-worth.

Mr. Schadek states that "there are countless non-violent events which could raise as much if not more money than a boxing event." Why then does he not take his time to organize them instead of condemning us? It is very easy to come up with grand ideas, but it is not so easy to carry them through.

The Bouts raise about $20,000 annually for starving people. If Mr. Schadek came to the Bengal Bouts he would see that we do not "beat the hell out of each other." The referees are all professionals and would not let anyone get hurt.

There is so much more to our program than just what people see during that one week out of the year. I do not expect Mr. Schadek to understand that, because he has made no effort to see the true meaning behind the Bengal Bouts. It is easy to view them this way if you have never taken the time to see them from the inside, or from any side for that matter.

Support of Contras promotes brutality

Dear Editor:

Some failed policies long outlive their usefulness and just refuse to die. Kevin Smant's exhortation for renewed support for the Contras is a case in point and deserves a more balanced, less hysterical reply than his treatment of this issue offered.

There is good reason to be concerned for the repression and human rights violations perpetrated by the Sandinistas, and I am glad that Mr. Smant is concerned for prisoners of conscience in Nicaragua. However, it should be noted that while the Sandinistas imprison dissenters and censor the press, the military of El Salvador which has received enthusiastic U.S. support deals with dissenters in a different way: it has gunned down tens of thousands of its own citizens who were not guerrillas, but human rights workers, priests and nuns, or those involved in grassroots development. Despite the best efforts of U.S. policy there, the activities of right wing death squads are on the rise. If we cannot assume a peaceful posture towards the Sandinistas, why should we be so tolerant of their neighbors? Is there a double standard whereby mistreatment of people by communist governments is intolerable, while the same atrocities when committed by friendly governments are to be overlooked?

While being concerned with stupidities of the Sandinistas is legitimate, posing the Contras as a viable solution to our security concerns in Central America is uncreative, short-sighted, and counter-productive. The Contras can never accomplish the moral and strategically questionable goals U.S. policy makers want them to. They cannot hold territory, and they certainly have not given the Sandinistas any reason to ease their grip on Nicaraguan society. In fact the Sandinistas use the existence of the Contras to justify curtailing civil liberties.

I also wonder if there is equal concern by Mr. Smant for the victims of the Contras. These mercenaries, who are more of a U.S. creation than an indigenous force responding to injustice, seem to be capable of vicious attacks on civilians and villages. Is the conscious policy of assassination of medical workers, teachers, and grassroots leaders, as well as the demise of our own standards of respect for human life the price we Americans must pay to secure ourselves from our own hysterical fear of communism? If these 'freedom fighters' are the 'moral equivalent of our founding fathers,' then I must be inadequately acquainted with the biographies of Washington, Jefferson, and Adams in light of the brutal behavior of the contras.

Perhaps the most dismaying aspect of Mr. Smant's column is his 'win' mentality. He puts forward several dubious propositions that we are engaged in relentless competition with communism. We must play out this contest until there is a winner, preferably the U.S. His assumption is that if we don't act with equal force, the world will be dominated by the U.S.S.R. It is difficult to refute rationally this fear tactic in such a short space, largely because it is based on a conjecture of what might happen, not what is likely to happen. Unfortunately, this sort of irrationality gets translated into policies where people are tortured or pay for our fear either with their own blood or the lives of their loved ones in the mountains of Central America.

Honor code survey found misleading

Dear Editor:

The article on the honor code survey (The Observer, Feb. 22, 1989), and the remarks of Associate Provost Father Oliver Williams missed some pretty glaring facts. The article reports that 800 surveys were sent out to students, yet only 148 were returned. Of these, 57 students voiced their approval of the honor code. The way I figure it, that means slightly more than seven percent of those polled want to continue the code.

I disagree with Father Williams that these numbers are "positive." Granted, not every student survey needs to be returned to gauge student opinion, but there was only a 16.4 percent return on this survey. An honor code, in my opinion, needs more interest- good, bad, or indifferent- to work. The benefits of an honor code are worth considering only if there is widespread student support, and the survey does not demonstrate that such support is there.

Further, an honor code should be for students, and as such should be run and supervised by students, not imposed in any way. Father Williams' remarks about the statistic that more underclassmen are in favor of the code because more "education" was directed their way is, in this respect, particularly galling.

Finally, I regret that, as Father Williams says, the faculty view the honor code as a "tool" for moral education. It is not a way to educate, it is a way of education. The distinction is a fine one, but until that distinction is realized the honor code will never work.

Spreading faith is a task for all

Dear Editor:

I feel compelled to respond to the "Letters to a Lonely God" article by Father Robert Griffin (The Observer, Feb. 24), in which he criticizes the evangelistic efforts of Christian groups, specifically denouncing the group known as Jews for Jesus. While I have no affiliation with this group and I don't speak for them, I resent the misleading way in which Griffin uses them as an example to negatively portray evangelical Christians.

First, in his article Griffin never explains to his readers what this group of people called Jews for Jesus really is, instead he dismisses them as "zealots (who) try to brainwash scarcely grown children with propaganda full of distortions and lies." He suggests that they try to tear Jews away from their rich history, culture, and tradition. This could not be more incorrect. Jews for Jesus was started by and is comprised of, as the name suggests, people who were born and raised in the Jewish faith and have since come to know Jesus Christ. They are Christians, because they have accepted Jesus as the Son of God and as their Savior. They are also Jews, because they maintain their devotion to their Jewish tradition and heritage. If that seems a strange combination, one need only consider the twelve apostles, who were Jews from birth, yet also devoted Christians. It is no wonder then, and no clever disguise, that members of Jews for Jesus are seen "sporting yarmulkes and displaying the Star of David." Like any other Jew, this is what they wear.

There is a difference between proselytizing and evangelizing, but Griffin likes to use the two interchangeably. Proselytizing implies coercion and brainwashing; the removal of the individual's free choice to decide what to believe. This is what Griffin actually tries to discuss in his article. The harassment of a person to try to force him to accept a particular set of views is worthy of denunciation. He is justified in condemning this activity.

Griffin goes further in what he says, however. In reference again to Jews for Jesus he says, "...they begin hyping the Gospel as though they would be doing the child a favor if they could persuade him to become a Christian. . . ." I was amazed to hear this from a Christian clergyman. Being Christian myself, I would think that bringing the Gospel (literally "Good News") of Jesus Christ to someone who has never heard it is a favor indeed.

The importance to a Christian of knowing and accepting Jesus cannot be overestimated, since "He who has the Son has life; he who has not the Son of God has not life" (1 John 5:12). Doesn't that give a sense of importance to the task of spreading the Gospel to those who don't know it? According to the Christian faith, a person's very life and soul depend upon salvation through the Son of God. A person cannot be forced to become a Christian. It is up to the individual to decide whether to accept or reject the Gospel but they should at least be exposed to it so they have a choice. Griffin says that "the conversion (of a Jewish child to Christianity) would break the hearts of the members of the family." Perhaps so. Does that mean that Christians should just shut up and keep their religion to themselves? Perhaps instead the family will also come to know Christ. It has happened before. It has to start somewhere.

Morrissey films start tradition

Dear Editor:

We wish to acknowledge and thank the many students who participated in and supported last week's Morrissey Film Festival. Eleven halls contributed films and a standing-room-only crowd attended the event- with all proceeds going to the Hogar Santa Cruz in Santiago, Chile. Thanks are especially due to Tom King, Leo Tighe and the entire committee who organized and ran the event. Great start to a new tradition.

Power of Wonderstuff

accent writer

I saw Wonderstuff in London a year and a half ago. The group killed Big Country, who was opening, but I couldn't find any records by it.

So I was pretty interested when I found one of its U.S. releases. It's called The Eight Legged Groove Machine, and it proves that Wonderstuff is one of the best bands to come out of England since The Smiths. Those wanting proof of Wonderstuff's angry power pop stance need to look no further than the song titles-- "No For The 13th Time," "Unbearable," and "Poison."

The sound suggests an unholy marriage of the melody and vocals of Let's Active with the guitar attack and energy of The Jam. Most of the band's material comes from railing against the materialism of our day. In "It's Yer Money I'm After, Baby," the members sing "Forget your heart/ It's your bank I want to break." The first single off the album is "Give Give Give Me More More More."

The CD gives you four extra tracks, including the soon-to-be-classic, "Astley In The Noose," which calls for Rick Astley's death. The shining "Rue The Day" is the successful slow song that just adds to the anger of the rest of the album.

The evidence on Eight Legged Groove Machine seems to point to Wonderstuff as the first great British band of the 90s. Keep an eye on it.

The success of British Wonderstuff is spreading with the help of Eight Legged Groove Machine.

Columnist looks at Common Sense

As The Observer staff once again undergoes the changing of the guard, I want to thank Beth Healy, the features editor, and all the other features editors who preceded her, for their kindness to me as a columnist.

I used to have many dreams of achieving greatness; but now that I'm older, peace, instead of setting myself as a target for the fastest guns in the Midwest; but maybe this is the year I should start living dangerously. Last night, Ken, a senior living down the hall from me in Stanford, brought me the latest edition of Common Sense, Notre Dame's independent weekly, which, to my wandering through the wasteland in search of the Holy Grail, and not finding it. "How can you say that?" he raged. "Compared to Common Sense, The Observer, The Scholastic, and the Notre Dame Magazine are trash." That kid knows The Observer is my lifeline to survival, but he doesn't mind breaking an old priest's heart.

I said: "Would you be willing to send an issue of Common Sense, labelled as ND's finest publication, to the faculties of the law school to which you are applying? Would you really want to send it home to your mother?"

God bless the lad! He could have said that he wouldn't want to label "Arounds To A Lonely God" around the country, either. He was too kind to do that, though I'm sure he thought of it.

I said: "H.L. Mencken was once asked: 'If you find so much that is unworthy of reverence in America, then why do you live here?' Mencken's reply was: 'Why do men go to zoos?' Is that why some of our resident cynics stay here: because they are entertained by Notre Dame as a Catholic zoo?"

In the February issue of Common Sense, an alumnus of the University who is also a faculty wife tells us: "The dirty little secret which men and women hide from themselves is that men as a species have never liked women or much wished them well... Feminists have written reams trying to uncover the reasons why men elect to lord it over women, instead of befriending them. Perhaps the answer to this great historical teaser is simply an awful, original jealousy. Womb envy, a male classmate called it..."

You wonder why editors put stuff in magazines that belongs in toilets?

Couldn't we also ask why men also lord it over other men weaker than themselves? The answer, probably, is that males belong to a rotten, bullying gender. Sometimes, attempting to accommodate themselves to their women-folk, they castrate themselves psychologically, to pay for the sins of their sex. Neutering is an effective way of slowing down machoism that's gone out of control, but I doubt that neutering has ever brought peace to the home.

As you can see, I have no trouble in accepting her opinion, but is this exchange of dreary ideas all I really want to say to the delightful Ann Pettifer? Are the complaints in her column all she wants to say to me? Doesn't she know that constantly giving hell to the males species, for their share in the original sin of womb envy, will never lead them to a thousand points of light, or to a gentler, kinder America?

An ad on page eight of Common Sense asks: "Have you read Christopher Hitchens on Defenester Defenders? Were you challenged? Outraged? Interested?" Actually, I was only depressed, like Holden Caulfield, like the four-letter words on walls where children could see them. The children will survive the obscenities. You wonder what happens to graffiti artists who leave messages in toilets. You wonder why editors put stuff in magazines that belong in toilets.

A beloved professor emeritus of theology wrote a letter to Common Sense, and a priest in graduate studies wrote an article: both promoting gay liberation. In my early years with The Observer, I wrote a number of articles promoting gay liberation. Eventually I found out that the "homophobes" aren't the gay persons enemy, because "homophobes" can't lead them into self-destruction, but older gays do, and have.

Dr. Storey is one of Notre Dame's all-time great teachers; during the 70s, he was practically the father-confessor of the anti-war movement. In his current ministry to gays, I wonder if he's helping students by continuously repeating arguments that many hard-shelled gays don't believe themselves. I think the world of Bill Storey. At one time, when we were close, I loved, respected, and trusted him more than I did some of the priests who were my lifelong friends. From the sadness I feel when I read his pieces in Common Sense, I know that I care deeply about him still. Doesn't he know he may be hurting gays more than he's helping them?

Many years ago, a Holy Cross priest named McNally said: "Griffin, it's barely possible that you're a charismatic figure, but there's not a doubt in the world that you're also a big pain the in a--." Notre Dame is a precious jewel in the diadem of Catholic education; but it is also a sacred cow that can get on Catholic nerves. Assailing its pieties in print may make the Ann Pettifers much more likely to talk to us about their negativities. Maybe the Ann Pettifers could put their space in Common Sense to better use.

Believe it or not, it took courage for me to write all this. I may need a lot of grace under pressure to survive the trouble I've caused myself.

Father Robert Griffin

Letters to a Lonely God

my dreams have dwindled to a precious few. The one dream I have that keeps me awake at night no longer seems like an impossible dream: I would like to survive for at least one more year as an Observer columnist; for if I can reach that happy plateau, I will celebrate my 20th anniversary of writing for the campus newspaper. Maybe then I can start setting my sights on a 25th anniversary, if my editors don't retire me before then, after presenting me with a gold watch and a pension.

I've always been dependent on the kindness of strangers; some of them were editors-in-chiefs whom I rarely saw. I'm grateful for their tolerance, whoever they are; but I'm especially grateful to features editors like Beth, who often, by their editing, helped me put my best foot forward.

Wanting to survive, I would probably be wise to keep the regret, I don't often see, though I always enjoy finding out where the bodies are buried.

"Isn't it wonderful?" Ken kept chortling. "Isn't it brilliant? Isn't it the best publication produced on this campus?"

I finally told him: "Considering the great talent of the writers who appear regularly, Common Sense is probably the most immature publication in sight. I can accept, if you want me to, the major premise on which the paper is based: namely that Notre Dame is a priest-ridden institution which propagates all the typically Catholic hangups in a hypocritical way. But why should brilliant people turn themselves into Johnny-and-Joanie-One-Note, telling us so, month after month?"

Ken is a burgeoning intellectual whom I admire and respect for his grade-point average; but sometimes he reminds me of the fisher-king

Judge rules to proceed with sports agents case

Associated Press

CHICAGO—A federal judge Wednesday gave the final go-ahead to the trial of two sports agents accused of using payoffs and threats to get college athletes to signing contracts with them.

After rejecting a defense attorney's request to have Norby Walters and Lloyd Bloom tried separately, U.S. district judge George Marovich ordered jury selection to begin.

"There will be only one trial and it will involve both defendants," Marovich said.

The government contends the two New York-based agents offered dozens of college athletes money, cars, clothes, concert tickets and trips in exchange for signed—and usually post-dated—agreements giving them exclusive rights to represent the athletes in professional contract negotiations.

Walters, 58, and Bloom, 29, have both pleaded innocent to charges of racketeering, mail fraud, wire fraud and extortion in the case.

Bloom's attorney, former federal prosecutor Dan Webb, said he wanted his client tried separately from Walters because their defenses could conflict.

The trial is expected to provide an inside look at what prosecutors say is the seamier side of college sports and prosecutors' plans called for testimony from several professional athletes who dealt with the two agents.

The sports world is closely monitoring the case because it raises serious questions about the structure and practice of big-money college athletics, especially lucrative football programs.

But Marovich said he did not want the trial to become a morality play.

"The system is not on trial," he said.

The judge cautioned attorneys that he would forbid testimony and questioning that was irrelevant to the criminal charges against the two agents.

"I am only going to allow evidence in this courtroom that is relevant in this courtroom," he said to the attorneys. "You're going to put certain balls into play and I'm going to sit up here and call them fair or foul."

Prosecutors had indicated earlier this week that they might file new charges against Walters, but U.S. attorney Anton Valukas said Wednesday he instead would use the evidence collected for additional charges to support this case.

A letter from Irish basketball

Dear Notre Dame Student Body:

This weekend, as you're well aware, is the start of spring break. Most of you will be fortunate enough to take a week off and head home, to the mountains to ski or to the beaches to roast. But this weekend is also very important for the basketball team. We'll be playing Louisville on Saturday afternoon in the Joyce Center, and we need the students' help.

If you can, stick around. We'd like your vocal support Saturday as we continue to battle for an NCAA tournament bid. Not everyone is leaving before the game, so if you have tickets, give them away to someone that's going to be on campus. We still need vocal student support to help knock off the Cardinals. We're sure that everyone who's left will find a television Saturday afternoon to watch the game, and we want to let you know that we appreciate your support this season. We travel across the country, and it seems like the arenas are always packed and people are always cheering extra hard against Notre Dame, but even then they can't match our student body.

If you're in town, then come to the game. If you're in town and don't have a ticket, check around and find one. If you're leaving town, then find someone that needs a ticket. Let's just keep the tradition alive Saturday afternoon and have a wild student section.

Fencers busy over break

By CHRIS FILLIO
Sports Writer

A week after this year's spring break, the Irish men's and women's fencing teams will know their competitors in this year's NCAA tournament.

But first they must compete in this weekend's Great Lakes Championship and the Midwest Regional Championship next weekend.

The Great Lakes, to be held at the Wayne State campus in Detroit, will feature the top three fencers in each weapon from several Midwest schools. Qualifiers will travel the following weekend to the Midwest Regionals to be held at the University of Chicago.

"I think it's conceivable that we could end up with more finalists this year at the NAAs than anyone," said head coach DeCicco. "Coming out of this weekend, I'll be anxious to see how high a seed we get."

In foil the Irish will send Derek Holeman (25-1), Yehuda Kovacs (31-1), and Phil Leary (22-3). All three have legitimate chances of battling their way to the Midwest Regional.

The sabre team will present a strong compliment of fencers as well. Sophomore Leszek Nowosielski (24-0) posted his second undefeated record in as many years at Notre Dame. Classmate David Kirby (17-1) will join Nowosielski along with freshman Ed Bager (20-4). Bager, who is coming off a recent hamstring injury, should be at least at 75 percent strength. Senior undefeated sabreman Tim Collins (16-0) will have to sit out the tourney due to an ankle injury which he suffered several weeks ago.

"I don't see anyone challenging us in sabre," said DeCicco. "I think that we have the best sabre team in the Midwest."

The epee team will consist of senior captain Ted Fay (33-2), last year's NCAA silver medalist Todd Griffiee (39-8), and freshman Englishman David Calderhead (31-10). Both Fay and Griffiee have extensive tournament experience, while Calderhead boasts an impressive first year record.

The women's foil team is coming off an excellent regular season in which they suffered only one loss at the hands of Ohio State while also defeating the defending national champions from Wayne State twice this year.

Senior captain Janice Hynes (30-6) will be joined by freshman Heidi Piper (30-5), senior Kristin Kralicek (27-6) and sophomore Lynn Kadri (38-8). The women as well have a very strong field, and will seek to recapture the nation title which they won two years ago.

"It was a lot easier to beat Wayne State this year with Lynn Kadri," stated DeCicco. "In order to beat the top schools in the nation, you have to get that one bout from the number four spot. It's very, very critical."

This weekend will also feature the Big Ten tournament for those schools. Qualifiers from that competition will join the Great Lakes qualifiers in the Midwest Regionals next weekend. At the end of this month, the Midwest qualifiers will travel to Northwestern University, the site of this year's NCAA tournament.

Women's basketball faces tough challenge in Loyola

By FRANK PASTOR
Sports Writer

A rematch with Midwestern Collegiate Conference-leading Loyola that could determine the number-one seed in the first-ever MCC Women's Basketball Tournament highlights the final week of regular-season play for Notre Dame.

The Irish (10-2 in the MCC, 16-9 overall) square off against Loyola tonight at 7:30 and then play Butler at 2 p.m. Sunday in the Joyce ACC to cap another fine MCC season.

Loyola (11-1 in the MCC) and Notre Dame locked up the top two spots in the tournament field with victories last Saturday. The Irish's 69-56 victory over Xavier in Cincinnati was the 200th all-time win for the Notre Dame women's hoops program.

Loyola can sew up the top seed in the tourney by defeating the Irish tonight. A Notre Dame victory, on the other hand, would leave both teams with identical conference records going into their final regular season games.

Evansville, Detroit and Dayton remain in contention for the final two spots in the tournament. Evansville and Detroit look to be the frontrunners with 7-6 conference records. Dayton currently holds a 6-7 conference mark.

Butler is in seventh place in the MCC with a 3-9 record but is the only team to have beaten Loyola in conference play. Three sophomores will have to continue their strong play this weekend if Notre Dame is to come away with a pair of wins.

Irish point guard Karen Robinson has been on an assist tear of late, averaging 7.2 assists over the past five games. She has dished out 5.6 assists per game this season.

Krissi Davis, who scored a career-high 22 points last Saturday against Xavier, leads the Irish in steals from her low post position. The sophomore forward has 67 thefts in 25 games this year for an average of 2.7 per game.

Guards Sara Liebscher and Robinson are currently tied for the lead in freethrow percentage with a .836 mark. Liebscher has converted 56 of 67 attempts, while Robinson has made good on 61 of 73 foul shots.

Women's tennis goes West

Irish netters to compete with several California schools

By CHRIS COONEY
Sports Writer

While the typical Notre Dame student will be spending spring break relaxing and avoiding any activity that even remotely resembles work, the Notre Dame women's tennis team will battle five squads that should challenge it with a style of play very different than what the Irish usually face.

The Irish travel to California next week where they will meet some of the tougher additions to their improved schedule. The teams all tend to attack with an aggressive tempo and more net play than most Mid-western schools are used to seeing. That variety and the overall strength of the squads caused Irish head coach Michele Gelfman to decide to add these schools to this year's itinerary.

"All the teams have good programs," said Gelfman, "and they are always known for having excellent players."

"The California schools usually have a variety of different types of match play than we normally see," Gelfman continued. "They hit the ball with lots of slice and use a greater selection of shots."

Gelfman explained that the Irish normally compete against more conservative players who hit the ball with less spin and are less apt to approach the net.

Notre Dame's greatest challenge should occur on Tuesday when they face San Diego State, currently ranked 18th in the national polls. The team boasts the country's No. 62 collegiate player, Aby Brayton, who is just behind Irish leader CeCe Cahill, presently occupying the 61st position.

"Those two should be right on par with each other," said Gelfman.

Brayton also pairs with Jennifer Larking in doubles. The duo is ranked 29th in the nation.

Notre Dame will face three schools before and after the San Diego meet. They play Cal State Long Beach on Sunday, Cal State Fullerton on Thursday and UC Irvine on Friday. The Irish finish the week by playing Pennsylvania who will also be in California.

"It should be a great experience for us," commented Gelfman. "There will be no pressures from school and the girls are really excited to finally play outdoors."

While the natural environment will be a welcome change from a winter of indoor practices, Gelfman is concerned about her team's adjustment to the climate.

"We'll have one day to practice outside and then we have a match. That should be a tremendous challenge," Gelfman said.

The Irish should return to their normal roster, after illness and injury hampered Kim Pacella and Kristy Doran in last weekend's loss to Miami of Ohio.

Gelfman feels that her team has the right attitude going into the competition.

"I would like to think that we could beat any team on a given day if the competition is equal. It's hard to predict how we'll do since we've never played them before, but I hope that we can stay up and aggressive," Gelfman commented. "We just need to play our own game and control the tempo."

Swimmers face intercollegiates

By MARY GARINO
Sports Writer

Last week the women's swim team placed fifth in the Eastern Intercollegiate Championships, and this weekend the men's team will get its turn in the same meet.

This will be the 15th annual Eastern Intercollegiate for men's teams, and the second year that Notre Dame has participated. The Irish will be racing against several quality teams including St. Bonaventure, the defending champion, and Cleveland State, the host school, both of which Notre Dame has faced earlier this year.

Head Coach Tim Welsh anticipates that the Irish will finish somewhere in the middle of the pack of ten teams, but the priority for the team will be performance, not winning.

"We're confident that anyone who swims well will score," Welsh said. "If we swim our best, then the points will come, and whatever comes after that will be fine."

One of the goals for the Irish is to break as many University records as possible at the meet. It's also a chance for the team to evaluate their season.

"Championship meets are a culmination of everything we've been working on all season," Welsh said. "It demonstrates how good we've become."

The Irish will take 18 swimmers to participate in the championships, including five seniors who will be racing for the last time for Notre Dame. This will be Welsh's first graduating class.

Several NCAA qualifiers are expected to be produced at the meet, and although the Irish are not expected to qualify anyone, Welsh emphasized that the standards for the NCAA meet are very high.

"We're a couple of years away from national standards," Welsh noted. "But we have something to aspire to."

Key to tournament this week

Notre Dame faces Louisville and DePaul over break

By THERESA KELLY
Assistant Sports Editor

In the 1980s, the Louisville Cardinals have been known as a team that may start slow, but always finishes strong.

On Saturday, the Notre Dame men's basketball team will try to turn that around.

Head Coach Denny Crum's teams have been in the NCAA Final Four four times during the past decade, winning the championship twice.

Digger Phelps and his team need to win, and keep winning over spring break, to make the NCAA's Final 64 this year.

"Every game is important to us," Phelps said. "The trend has been to send two independents in the tournament. We hope that continues. DePaul is a very good team that deserves to go. I think each school would like to see the other go."

Louisville, however, is not the late-season team it usually is, having lost five of their eight games, including their last two. Wednesday's shocking home loss to Cincinnati sends the Cardinals into the Joyce ACC looking for a win in a big way.

The Cardinals are keeping with the style they have set this season, facing some of the country's top teams (like Duke, Syracuse and Georgia Tech) when the opponent needs a big win.

Pervis Ellison leads the Cardinals with 17.7 points and 8.6 rebounds per game. Ellison, a 6-9 center, is only the second player in Louisville history to score over 2,000 points, with a total of 2,102 prior to the Cincinnati game.

Other probable starters for the Cardinals are 6-8 forward Kenny Payne, averaging 14.3 points and 5.9 rebounds per contest. Forward Tony Kimbro and guard LaBradford Smith also score in double figures, at 10.8 and 10.7, respectively.

The Irish got a chance to scout the Cardinals at the Big Four Classic in Indianapolis Dec. 3, when the Irish beat Kentucky 81-65 and Louisville defeated Indiana 101-79. Ellison scored 19 points in the win, and teammate Smith added 17.

The Louisville game is the last of the season for the Irish in the Joyce ACC. On Monday, March 6, the Irish embark on what Phelps has called "our conference tournament," made up of three consecutive road games.

Phelps has said that other teams, who have conference affiliations, use conference tournaments to warm up for post season play. This season, the Irish have a trip to Butler and road rematches with Marquette and DePaul.

Butler is lead by 6-6 senior forward Darren Fowlkes, who averages 18.8 points and 7.9 rebounds per game. Guard Jody Littrell adds 13.6 points per game for the Bulldogs.

Notre Dame holds a 69-25 advantage over Butler, winning last season's contest 85-66. The game, at Hinkle Fieldhouse in Indianapolis, is at 7:35 p.m. and will be televised by WGN.

The Irish travel into Milwaukee March 8 to face Marquette at Bradley Center for a rematch of the 83-68 Irish victory Feb. 2. The Irish are 28-16 on the road against the Warriors. The game is at 8:30 and will be televised on WGN.

The NCAA tournament bid may be on the line when the Irish play fellow independent and old rival DePaul at the Rosemont Horizon, Rosemont, Ill., on March 11. By that time, both Notre Dame and DePaul may be looking for the victory that will get one of them off the fence and into the tournament. The Irish beat the Blue Demons 66-60 Wednesday night.

"DePaul is not an 18-11 team," Phelps said after Wednesday's win. "With all the power games they played early, they deserve to go."

"Every game is a must," said DePaul head coach Joey Meyer. "If we win now, we sweat less on Sunday (of tournament picks). All we can do now is not count losses, just go win two games."

Robinson had enough time on the foul line to build a house during that first half. He went into the lockerroom with nine rebounds and 12 points on 8-of-9 foul shooting.

"It was very physical inside," said the 6-9 Irish forward, who finished with 11 rebounds and 17 points. "That was a big part of the game, to keep them off the offensive boards."

The Irish especially wanted to contain DePaul forward Stanley Brundy, who had hurt the Irish in DePaul's two wins over Notre Dame last season.

DePaul's 6-7 senior scored just three second-half points after a 10-point first half. He pulled down 11 rebounds, but only two of them came on the offensive end.

"We played him very aggressively this time," said Robinson. "We didn't want to let him get in position for rebounds because he scores most of his points off offensive rebounds."

"We had to do an excellent job of keeping them from getting offensive rebounds," said Irish coach Digger Phelps. "That's their second best offense. When they're shooting the ball well, they really pound the boards, and when they're not, they're a great offensive rebounding team."

LaPhonso Ellis also had a lot to do with Notre Dame's success inside. The 6-9 freshman forward pulled down a game-high 12 rebounds, and his 17 points tied Robinson for top honors on the team.

"I think we boxed out pretty well tonight, and that was the key to beating them on the boards," said Ellis.

DePaul actually out-rebounded the Irish 20-19 in the second half but continually had trouble getting second shots. The Blue Demons only recorded eight rebounds during the entire game.

"LaPhonso and Keith really established themselves early," said Irish guard Joe Fredrick, whose 10 points were well below his 17.2 scoring average. "We needed that because Jamere (Jackson) and myself were really struggling. We played bad, Jamere and myself shot bad, but our big guys played very well."

Hoops

against 7-1 center James Hamby. Singleton drew a foul, hit the off-balance shot and then nailed the free throw for a three-point play that put the Irish on top 52-48.

"I looked up and Brundy was right in my face to block the first shot," Singleton said. "I was really determined to score after that. I just went up, made sure I made contact, and luckily I hit it."

Brundy, who scored 10 first-half points, was held to just three in the second period by Notre Dame's match-up zone.

Greene was 3-of-11 from the field and 1-of-5 from three-point range. Neimann, who came into the game hitting 45.8 percent of his three-pointers, was 1-of-6 from beyond the stripe.

The Irish outrebounded DePaul 40-38.

"Defensively, we showed a lot of maturity tonight," Phelps said. "I thought we did an excellent job on their big guys. I told the kids, 'You don't know how big this win is tonight.' We're 18-6 and still the best independent team in the country."

Track faces championships

IC4A's, NCAA championships on immediate agenda

By SCOTT BRUTOCAO
Sports Writer

Now that the regular season is over the men's track team travels to Princeton, NJ to take part in the IC4A Championships, which Head Coach Joe Piane calls "the premier meet on the East Coast."

Notre Dame will be sending 17 athletes who have qualified to the championships in 10 events.

The meet, officially called the Intercollegiate Association of Amateur Athletes of America Championships, will host more than 100 schools throughout the East Coast.

"This meet gives us the opportunity to run against all the Big East schools, the Atlantic 10 schools, and anyone you can imagine on the East Coast," said Piane. "It's a great meet."

Notre Dame's 17 qualifiers will travel to Princeton on Friday and participate in the two-day meet over the weekend. Then, for the Irish two-mile relay squad and anyone else who qualifies at the IC4A's, the trip continues to Indianapolis for the NCAA Championships on March 10-11.

Entered in the 55-meter dash will be Raghieb "Rocket" Ismail and Rusty Setzer. Ismail, 0.03 seconds away from a NCAA qualifying time, is the Irish favorite to qualify for NCAA's at the IC4A's.

"I think this meet will probably be a good opportunity for me because I'll be running against a lot of runners who already qualified to the NCAA's," said Ismail. "I hope with me trying to catch them I'll be able to reduce my time and qualify."

Ismail and Setzer will also be running in the 200 meters, along with Peter DeMeo.

Co-captain Jan Searcy, who has had leg problems this season, will be participating in the 500 meters.

Kevin Whelan, who just qualified last weekend at the Alex Wilson Invitational, will be entered in the 800 meter race.

Mark Lavery and David Warth, two members of the NCAA-bound two-mile relay squad, both qualified to the 1000 meters.

Glen Watson, rebounding from a slow start, will be competing in the 55-meter high hurdles.

Cross country and track All-American Dan Garrett and sophomore Ryan Cahill are slated for competition in the 3000. Garrett earned All-America honors in the 5000 last year.

Cross country All-American Ron Markezich and junior Tom O'Rourke will be entered in the 5000-meter distance event.

Richard Culp, Brian Peppard, Mike Rogan, and Sean Schneider, who make up the Irish Distance Medley Relay Squad, are set to compete in that event. Peppard and Rogan comprise the other half of the two-mile relay team.

John Cole, the only Notre Dame athlete entered in a field event, will be participating in the high jump.

"I think it's certainly within our capabilities to finish in the top 10 or higher," Piane said.

One particular team that stands out among the 100-plus at the IC4A's is George Mason University. This team is likely to finish high in the meet, and almost all of its athletes are from abroad.

"You need a passport to be on their team," Piane quipped. George Mason sports athletes from Hungary, England and West Germany, and has the best U.S.-Somalia connection east of the Mississippi. Piane likes Notre Dame's chances of finishing high in the two-mile relay at the NCAA's.

"These guys (Peppard, Rogan, Lavery, and Warth) have to enter the competition with the intention to win," said the 14th-year Head Coach. "You can't enter these races any other way."

Baseball team faces Miami over break in Florida road trip

By FRANK PASTOR
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame baseball team (4-1) has the opportunity to upset the third-ranked team in the country for the second time in as many weeks when it faces Miami on March 8, highlighting a six-game road trip to Florida over Spring Break.

The Irish defeated Texas (currently ranked fourth) 12-9 last Friday in Austin, a win that turned a lot of heads in the collegiate baseball world.

"This is the ultimate road game," said Head Coach Pat Murphy of the matchup expected to draw over 10,000 spectators. "This is the first time somebody of the caliber of Miami has been all fired up about playing Notre Dame."

Last fall Notre Dame swept the Hurricanes in a two-game series played at Stanley Coveleski Stadium in South Bend. Clearly, Miami has more at stake in the March 8 matchup than simply its number-three ranking.

"We're going to concentrate on performance," added Murphy. "The odds are going to be against us, but we're going to maintain our team identity and we're going to believe in ourselves."

Notre Dame will open the trip against Pittsburgh on March 5 in Orlando. The Irish will also face Rollins on March 6, Vanderbilt on March 9, Pennsylvania on March 10 and Columbia on March 11. Despite the obvious importance of the Miami game, Murphy warns that the other five teams should not be overlooked.

"We're trying to concentrate on Pittsburgh and Rollins right now," said Murphy. "Pittsburgh has a good program, and Rollins is one of the best teams in Division II. We can't overlook those teams."

"Vanderbilt is a perennial powerhouse, and Pennsylvania was an NCAA regional team last year. We have six tough games in a week, and it's going to be demanding on our pitching staff. We better be ready."

Notre Dame opened its season with a doubleheader sweep of Trinity on Feb. 23.

Following the Texas win, the Irish ended their five-game trip to Texas by splitting a doubleheader with St. Mary's (Texas).

Interhall

"We didn't run the fast break as well as we wanted," said the Manor's Tom Veltz.

When pressure situations arose, Morrissey looked for one player.

"Kevin Keyes did everything for us offensively and defensively," said Veltz. But Keyes had a championship performance because of his unselfish teammates.

"They (Fisher) were focusing on the other guys and I had some openings, so I just took the shots and they were falling," said Keyes.

The overtime shot selection was the key to the victory.

"We didn't hit the big shots at the big times," said Wagenblast.

ND beats DePaul, tops independents

By MARTY STRASEN
Sports Editor

What Notre Dame's 18th victory lacked in beauty, it made up for in significance.

The Irish claimed their stake as the nation's top independent and took a giant step toward gaining an NCAA tournament bid with Wednesday's 67-60 victory over rival DePaul at the Joyce ACC.

"It certainly wasn't an artistic achievement," said DePaul coach Joey Meyer, whose Blue Demons fell to 18-11 and hurt their own chances of gaining a bid. "I don't think either team played the kind of game they're capable of playing."

Irish coach Digger Phelps called Thursday's game a must-win situation, and his 18-6 squad did the job with aggressive, switching defense and a slow tempo. DePaul shot a dismal 39.7 percent from the field. The Irish hit only 43.1 percent of their shots, but managed to pound the ball inside and earn 26 free throws, hitting 19.

Freshman forward LaPhonso Ellis and junior Keith Robinson led the Irish with 17 points each. Robinson, who missed a pair of potential game-winning free throws at DePaul last year as Notre Dame lost 73-69 in overtime, was 9-of-10 from the stripe this time.

"I had to prove myself after last year," said Robinson, who scored 12 of his points in the first half. "I just concentrated more. I'm in a rhythm at the line. I knew I'd make them."

The Irish missed consecutive front ends of one-and-one opportunities down the stretch, allowing DePaul to threaten one last time in a game the Demons had trailed since late in the first half.

But after DePaul climbed to within four points at 64-60, Stanley Brundy missed a layup that could have cut the lead to two and Brad Neimann missed a three-point bomb that would have sliced it to one.

Irish guard Tim Singleton hit a free throw with 12 seconds left and rounded out the scoring with a dunk at the buzzer.

"Even though we didn't shoot the fouls like we wanted to down the stretch, we didn't lose our composure," Phelps said. "We did an excellent job of stopping their transition tonight."

Freshman David Booth, a 6-7 forward, outshone seniors Terence Greene and Brundy with 23 points off the DePaul bench.

Notre Dame scored the last 10 points of an otherwise close first half to take a 35-29 lead at the intermission.

DePaul cut the lead to 49-48 with seven minutes to play, but Singleton's hustle gave Notre Dame a much-needed lift.

After his shot was blocked by Brundy, the 6-1 sophomore went to the floor for the loose rebound and went back up

Rebounds the key in Irish victory

Both coaches said beforehand that rebounding would decide Wednesday night's Notre Dame-DePaul basketball game at the Joyce ACC.

To the dismay of DePaul coach Joey Meyer, that's exactly how things worked out. The Irish outrebounded the Blue Demons 40-38 and won 67-60 in the showdown between the nation's top two independents.

"Notre Dame did a hell of a job on the boards," said Meyer. "The final stats show we only lost by two (rebounds), but it seems like we lost by more."

"We stressed all week that rebounding was key, and we didn't do the job."

Both teams came into the game with strong rebound margins, with Notre Dame at plus-9.8 and DePaul at plus-4.9.

Rebounds played a particularly important role Wednesday, since both teams shot well below 50 percent.

The Irish established their inside strength in the first half. Notre Dame only outrebounded DePaul by three boards (21-18), but the Irish took advantage of the physical inside play by shooting 13-of-15 from the foul line.

Belles lose to Purdue-Calumet in NAIA tourney

By HEATHER ATKINSON

The Saint Mary's basketball team failed to "make good choices under pressure" against Purdue University-Calumet, according to Head Coach Marvin Wood, in the opening round of the NAIA District tournament Tuesday and was defeated 65-63.

Freshman Catherine Restovich got the Belles fired up with a break-away basket from the tip-off. Travelling calls caused Saint Mary's to turn over the ball several times in the first 10 minutes, but throughout the first half its strong defense caused forced, sloppy shots that resulted in Purdue turnovers.

The score remained close for the entire half with the lead changing hands several times. At the half the teams were tied up 32-32.

Purdue broke the tie within the first minute of play. This basket was answered with a three-pointer by Dawn Brohman to put Saint Mary's on top again.

However, improved defense by the Lakers caused the Belles to make rushed passes and sloppy shots that resulted in more turnovers.

Purdue rallied during the first seven minutes and gained an eight-point lead. The Lakers' fast breaks and overall quickness broke Saint Mary's defense and they were able to make their shots.

During the final four minutes of the game, increased rebounds and fouls drawn by Saint Mary's allowed them to close the margin. Once again the teams took turns leading the ballgame.

With 19 seconds remaining the score was tied 63-63 and the Belles had captured possession of the ball from a missed field goal by the Lakers. After a time-out, they ran the clock down but with three seconds left a foul by a Saint Mary's player sent Purdue's Vicky Baker to the free throw line. Baker made both attempts and won the game as Saint Mary's was unable to get a shot off before the clock ran out.

Junior Julie Radke was the leading scorer for Saint Mary's with 13 points, followed by Dawn Brohman with 12. Radke also had nine assists. Amy Baranko and Linda Garrett led in rebounding with 9 and 7, respectively.

"They just got some good bounces and took advantage of them," said coach Wood. "They made really good choices under pressure."

Saint Mary's Athletic Director, JoAnn Nester, added, "This has been the best win-loss season in the history of Saint Mary's. We are very fortunate to have such a first-class team and coaching staff. We are very proud of them despite their loss."

In men's Interhall basketball, Morrissey defeated Fisher on Wednesday night in double-overtime by a score of 54-52 to win championship.

Morrissey beats Fisher in IH finals

After three straight years of losing in the playoffs, Morrissey finally captured the men's Interhall basketball title last night with a 54-52 double overtime victory over Fisher.

The Manor took an early 8-4 lead before ending the first quarter at 12-10. Fisher jumped to an 18-15 lead midway through the second quarter and attempted to slow down the pace, but Morrissey's Derrick Johnson and Rod Culver had other ideas, fastbreaking with perfection on an 8-0 run. The Green Wave retaliated with five unanswered points including a three point play to go into halftime with the score tied at 23.

Todd Wagenblast was three-for-three from the three-point line in the third quarter to propel Fisher to a 38-34 lead. Wagenblast nailed another three in the fourth before Morrissey tied at 46. Tom Veltz put the Manor up 48-46 with 24 seconds left in regulation, but a two shot foul allowed the Green Wave to tie. Wagenblast found nothing but net on both shots, sending the game into the first overtime.

Johnson put in a shot from the paint and Fisher's Paul Fulling scored with 1:02 remaining for the only points of the first overtime. A flick of the light switch caused a temporary delay in the action, but the teams refused to slow down.

Going into the second overtime at 50-50, Morrissey jumped to a 54-50 advantage with the help of buckets by Kevin Keyes and Johnson. The Green Wave, which finishes the season 11-2, stuck to their game plan but fell just short of ending the season on a high note.

"We did every thing we wanted to do except win the game," said Wagenblast.

Morrissey, despite playing in a gym that was unfavorable to its style of play, never let up. About 100 fans managed to cram into gym two of the Joyce ACC, which offered little space around the court.
