Three killed in Beirut skirmishes death toll at 850 and 2,545 wounded in 6 months

Associated Press

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Syrian and Christian forces battled in and around Beirut on Wednesday, killing three people and wounding 17. Arab mediators met in an attempt to revive their stalled peace effort.

Police said the casualties raised the toll from six months of fighting to at least 850 killed and 2,545 wounded.

A spokesman, who cannot be named under standing regulations, said Syrians and Christians clashed with artillery, mortars and machine guns in Beirut, north Lebanon and the mountains on the eastern edge of the Christian heartland.

He said residential sectors of the capital, badly hammered since fighting erupted March 8, were spared in the sporadic clashes.

The foreign ministers of Saudi Arabia, Morocco and Algeria began meeting in Saudi Arabia's Red Sea port of Jiddah to discuss resuming a peace effort that ran out of steam six weeks ago.

The envoys on July 31 blamed Syria for refusing to accept a timetable for pulling its 40,000 troops from Lebanon.

Christian leader Gen. Michel Aoun, in what appeared to be a compromise proposal, said even a partial Syrian withdrawal would open the way for negotiations on political reforms to end the 14-year-old civil war.

The Syrians, who consider Lebanon vital to their strategic defense against Israel, have refused to withdraw.

Informed sources in Jiddah, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the Arab mediation committee was considering a peace plan that calls for a cease-fire and the lifting of blockades by both sides.

Beirut's independent An-Nahar daily, the leftist As-Safir as well as Moslem and Christian radio stations said the committee will declare a cease-fire shortly.

Several cease-fires called by the Arab League and others have collapsed amid fierce artillery battles that have driven an estimated 90 percent of Beirut's 1.5 million people from the city.

An-Nahar said the nationalist front, a coalition of 18 leftist and Moslem groups allied with Syria and Iran, was expected to facilitate the committee's effort by proclaiming a cease-fire in "the coming hours."

The front, formed more than a month ago in an attempt by Syria and Iran to intensify the pressure on Aoun, generally reflects Syrian President Hafez Assad's policy in Lebanon.

N.D. prof : Pension system failing

By NATASHA WILSON
Senior Staff Reporter

The employer-provided pension system in the United States ironically fails in its most fundamental goal, that of providing adequate retirement income security for the nation's workers, according to Teresa Ghilarducci, assistant professor of economics at Notre Dame.

A new Congressional bill, however, may help reform the impotent 120-year old system, Ghilarducci said.

A major flaw in the pension system is the frequent "raiding" and termination of pension plans by corporations, she said. The pension money, according to Ghilarducci, is the largest single source of funds for U.S. capital markets.

"Because of a loophole in present law, companies have been permitted to strip plans down to bare bone assets, robbing workers and retirees of expected benefits and cost of living adjustments," Ghilarducci said. Some workers have lost almost 40 percent of their expected retirement benefits as a result of pension plan raiding, she added.

The Employee Pension Protection Act of 1989, introduced to Congress on April 4, seeks to curb the practice of siphoning pension money for corporate profit. The bill, submitted by Senator Howard Metzenbaum (D-Ohio) and Congressman William Clay (D-Mo.), would ensure that workers' benefits are properly protected and that retirees receive a one-time pension adjustment before companies can use pension assets.

"A good portion of so-called surplus money in a pension plan is really needed to prudently fund the ongoing benefits of active workers, to shield against stock market tumbles, and to restore the value of retiree' pensions eroded by inflation," said Karen Friedman, education director of the Pension Rights Center in Washington, D.C.

"The courts and the IRS in recent years have given companies a lot of leeway on how much they can claim as excess pension funds. The laws are not strong enough to counteract that laxity," Ghilarducci said.

Under the Metzenbaum-Clay bill, companies would be able to claim only the "true surplus," Friedman said. The bill, she said, solves the problem of insufficient retirement funds by defining in detail what is considered a surplus in pension plans and regulating access to those funds.

Two new cases of measles diagnosed on N.D. campus

By SARA MARLEY
Senior Staff Reporter

At least one and possibly two new cases of measles have been diagnosed at the University Health Center.

According to Dr. James Moriarity, University physician, there is "one case for sure, probably two. I am almost sure they are measles, although they haven't been definitely confirmed."

Moriarity expects more cases as the incubation period for the disease is 10 to 14 days and many people were exposed before the vaccination effort began last Friday.

"I wouldn't be surprised if we see measles here for the next month," said Moriarity.

"There will be a lot less because everybody was so cooperative about getting their vaccinations. That was very impressive on the part of the student body," he said.

The University, in conjunction with the Public Health Service, gave 6,416 injections against the disease on Friday and Monday.

Vaccines are still available at the Health Center for all faculty, staff and students who were born after 1957 but not vaccinated against the disease since Jan. 1, 1980.

WORLD BRIEFS

The presidents of the three Andean nations to receive U.S. funds to fight cocaine trafficking will meet later this month to discuss President Bush's anti-drug plan, a government spokesman said Wednesday. Foreign Minister Guillermo Larco said President Alan Garcia had confirmed the meeting with Colombian President Virgilio Barco and Bolivia's president, Jaime Paz Zamora. Larco said the three will discuss the Bush plan, which includes $261 million in aid to fight cocaine trafficking in the three countries over the next five years.

A moderate earthquake jolted an area of northern Iran on Wednesday, the official Islamic Republic News Agency reported. There were no reports of damage or injuries. IRNA said the quake measured 5.2 on the Richter scale and hit near Gorgan, at the southeast corner of the Caspian Sea. The Tehran University Geophysics Center, which measured the strength of the quake, said it occurred at 10:32 a.m.

An English firm could be charged with cruelty to animals after 79 beagles suffocated on a ferry from England to Sweden, police said Wednesday. Passengers appealed to the ship's crew to find out why the dogs were crying, but nothing was done. Bengt Inaeus, a detective in Sodertalje south of Stockholm, said 100 beagles were put in a van on the ferry from Harwich to the Swedish port of Goteborg on Sept. 6. The Swedish pharmaceutical company Astra planned to use the dogs, obtained from a kennel in England, to test drugs. Inaeus said when a kennel worker went to check on the dogs after six hours, 79 were dead.

Japan, the world's largest consumer of ivory, will ban ivory imports from Africa next week, the International Trade and Industry Ministry said Wednesday. Masahiko Isono, a ministry official, said the ban will last at least until the end of the year. Japan has been under pressure to ban imports of ivory products to protect elephants, which are hunted for their ivory tusks. The United States, Britain, France and West Germany have banned ivory imports. Isono said Japan imported 106 tons of ivory last year, compared with 143 tons in 1987. In 1983, Japan imported 475 tons, Isono said.

Sweden is offering courses to Soviet government officials and businessmen in Western-style economics, the Foreign Ministry said Wednesday. The Soviets "would learn how to run companies and to introduce a market economy," said spokeswoman Ranveig Jacobsson, of the foreign trade department. The proposal was presented Wednesday in Moscow by a visiting group of Swedish economists and government officials, she said. "We would like to respond to the positive Soviet interest in Swedish solutions to economic and social questions," the undersecretary of state, Michael Sohlman, said in a statement released by the Swedish Embassy in Moscow.

NATIONAL BRIEFS

A San Antonio television station inadvertently aired several seconds of the final strobe-lit rape scene from the movie "Looking for Mr. Goodbar" during a morning children's program. The scene was broadcast Tuesday on KABB-TV in the middle of "Real Ghostbusters," a program that airs from 7 a.m. to 7:30 a.m. Apparently one of KABB's producers was editing the rape scene last week to air at night while the station was receiving a satellite feed of the cartoon.

About 200 people who thought they had won free tickets for the California lottery and to professional sports games actually won a trip to jail, courtesy of a police sting operation. Letters from an official-sounding but entirely fictitious "Bakersfield Area Department of Lottery" were mailed to misdemeanor and felony suspects who police had been unable to arrest.

INDIANA BRIEFS

A powerful bomb exploded while a construction union official was starting his truck Wednesday, killing the man and hurling his body about 50 feet, police said. Joseph Bova, 43, was financial secretary and a part-time field representative for Laborers Local 81 in Valparaiso. His truck had been parked outside his home, said police Chief Jerry McCarty. Arcine Cook Sr., president of the local, said he knew of no problems or threats against Bova.

Being a lifeguard is not all sunshine and babes

A couple of weeks back, a column by Colleen Cronin appeared in this space. She detailed the trials and tribulations of working in a White Hen, where people run to when they run out. As I read the column, I realized that my summer job would also be worthy of discussing.

Yes, I know the "What I did over my summer vacation" thing is getting a little old. All I can say is, TOUGH LUCK, if you don't like it, you can stop reading this paper and be forced to engage in stilted conversation with the person who is sitting across from you—a person who, at this very moment, is probably belching and emptying the sugar container into his grape juice.

This past summer marked my fourth summer as a member of the Chicago Park District Lifeguard Service. The members of this prestigious organization are well trained, competent, and have enough connections to get a job in which they are grossly over-paid to guard the lives of the people of the Windy City.

I would like to start by defending the lifeguard profession in general. Most people have a distorted and glorified view of a lifeguard's job. This is mostly because of Hollywood's portrayal of guards as muscular Frankie Avalon-types who are surrounded by luscious babes covering them with natural oils and herbs. This, of course, is exactly correct. But seriously, the job is a lot harder than you'd think.

As anyone who knows me would attest, I am far from a bronze god. I probably resemble Mr. Salty a lot more than Mr. Universe. If you were to look at my co-workers, you'd see that there are few Greek Adonis among us. The number of well-defined biceps is far less than the number of well-defined beer bellies.

Also, we don't get paid to lounge around the shores of Lake Michigan to sit in big chairs looking like L.L. Cool J. in his "I'm That Type of Guy" video. We have to stand on 10-foot perches, balancing precariously in an attempt to dodge insults, thrown objects, and even seagull artillery. Balancing is a job in itself on windy days or on Saturday mornings when you're suffering from Bottle Fatigue (or so my friends tell me, Mom.)

In addition, my beach seems to have forgotten to employ any bathing beauties. Most of the female patrons are 3,000-pound sunburned senior citizens who always say, in their sexy raspy voice:

"Hey lifeguard, if I drown, will YOU save me? (belch!)"

Yeah, sure thing lady.

The rest of our patrons are part of several youth organizations that frequent low-income neighborhoods. The Latin Kings, The Wanderers, and The Bad Boys always frequent the beach after their ice cream socials and s'mores parties. They often bring the switchblades that were used to cut the s'mores or the lead pipes necessary to scoop ice cream.

Prof. Delgado-Gomez would be happy to know that I had plenty of practice with my Spanish. Here's a typical example:

Me: Hey, move in, you're out too far.

Smiling Gang Member: *!#@/> ... Gringo! (This, translated into English means, "Thank you for your concern, I will move in promptly, sir.")

Me: No problem, that's my job.

Despite the several death threats I received this summer, the greatest danger I faced was from the future of our nation: the children.

On one occasion, it was about 100 degrees, we had over 75,000 patrons, and I had just entered the comfortable fiberglass rowboat for a 3 hour shift. Immediately, a group of shrieking 6-year olds approached me and said, "You're ugly!" I, of course, did my job and ignored them. Soon the insults drifted to comments about my sexual orientation as well as my lack of several essential reproductive organs.

As if their articulate criticisms of my personality weren't enough, they began to hurl huge chunks of sand and seaweed, with deadly accuracy. When we are harassed by a patron, we are instructed to blow the whistle twice and assistance will come. Sure, like I'm going to call my boss and have him run down the beach to find me being attacked by Toot and the Killer Munchkins. I merely sat in the boat fantasizing what terrible things I could do to these punks with common power tools.

Just then, a light drizzle began. So I'm sitting in a boat, trying to guard the lives of the people of the fine city of Chicago and I'm being pelted by organic material, discovering new things about my mother's dating habits, and getting drenched with acid rain. What else could go wrong? I asked.

I found out. I was then hit by a barrage of Ballistic Heat-Seeking Seagull Turds. Life lost its meaning. I cleaned myself off, and waited to get off duty. Eventually I did. On my way in, I spotted the little sprites who had terrorized me so. Being mature I turned my back and left, only to return and club them mercilessly like baby seals. Satisfied, I signed out and went home.

Therefore, you can see that my summer job is not as easy as it may seem. Despite all of the trouble I got, I will return to it next year. C'mon, where else can you get so much and have so much fun, free tan included?

61,000 flee Vietnam in 8 months

Associated Press

GENEVA — More than 61,000 boat people fled Vietnam in the first eight months of this year, a figure higher than any full year since 1981, and Hong Kong is bearing the brunt of the influx, a U.N. group said Wednesday.

"The situation in Hong Kong continues to look very worrying," said Raymond Hall, a spokesman for the Office of the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees.

The office registered 61,345 arrivals in countries of first asylum in South East Asia and Japan from January through August, just before seasonal conditions traditionally slow down the exodus.

The outflow compared with 45,500 for last year and 74,000 in 1981. Hong Kong reported 32,000 arrivals during the first eight months, almost twice the 1988 total of 18,400, the U.N. group said.

In recent weeks, there have been numerous fights in the crowded Hong Kong camps, and cholera has broken out among other Vietnamese refugees living in primitive conditions on outlying islands.

Most of the newcomers in the British colony face forced repatriation as "economic migrants" because only those boat people who arrived before June 16, 1988, were automatically considered to be fleeing political persecution and thus eligible for refugee status.

In June, a 60-nation conference in Geneva formally endorsed a plan to curb the outflow but did not commit itself on how to deal with economic refugees.

Hall said it was still too early to assess the impact of the conference, saying there were "definite signs of abatement" in some regions.

The measures adopted by the Geneva conference call for efforts to encourage the voluntary return of migrants who are refused refugee status. So far, only 260 have gone back despite formal assurances by Communist Vietnam that they are welcome and need not fear any reprisals.

Vietnam's foreign minister, Nguyen Co Thach, said Wednesday that Vietnam remains opposed to any forced return of the boat people.

The Vietnamese official also said negotiations with Washington were continuing regarding the 94,000 former detainees of Vietnamese "re-education" camps

20,000 protest police brutality in South Africa

Associated Press

CAPE TOWN, South Africa — More than 20,000 peaceful protesters sang songs of freedom and waved banners denouncing police brutality on Wednesday in the biggest anti-government march ever permitted in this country.

Police stayed out of sight as marchers, led by black leaders and Cape Town's white mayor, clogged a mile-long route leading from St. George's Anglican Cathedral to City Hall.

Organizers described the march as a historic occurrence in this racially divided nation.

"We have scored a great victory for justice and peace," Anglican Archbishop Desmond Tutu told a crowd of 1,800 black, white and mixed-race marchers who packed City Hall while thousands of others stood outside.

He said acting President F.W. de Klerk should have been present "to see what this country is going to become ... a technicolor country."

The absence of police contrasted sharply with protest marches two weeks ago in Cape Town that were broken up by riot squads using whips, batons and a water cannon that sprayed purple water.

"It is important to know we could have this peaceful march toward our freedom," said the Rev. Frank Chikane, secretary-general of the South African Council of Churches. "Once that has started today, no one can ever stop it again."

Protest demonstrations normally are illegal in South Africa, and the Cape Town police commander, Maj. Gen. Phillipus Fourie, said last week he would stop Wednesday's march. But de Klerk announced Tuesday evening that the protest could proceed because he had been assured it would be peaceful.

The far-right Conservative Party, the largest white opposition group in Parliament, said Wednesday that approval of the march was "capitulation" to radicals.

Koop criticizes U.S. tobacco marketing

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Surgeon General C. Everett Koop criticized U.S. tobacco marketing at home and abroad Wednesday, backing a bill to keep cigarette machines away from minors and declaring America is not respected overseas "because of the manner in which we export disease and death."

Koop said the epithet "ugly American" will "indeed come home to roost in a decade or two when the developing countries of today realize what we did to them."

He said the wide availability of cigarette vending machines in the United States makes a mockery of laws forbidding minors to buy cigarettes.

He said the machines give youngsters easy access to tobacco and send a message that this country isn't worried that they will become addicted.

"Would we tolerate the sale of alcoholic beverages through vending machines?" he asked. "Would we allow free samples of alcoholic beverages to be sent through the mail or passed out on public property? Of course not."

Namibian nationalist set to end 30-year exile

Associated Press

WINDHOEK, Namibia — The president of Namibia's independence movement will end a 30-year exile and return to his homeland despite the assassination of another nationalist leader, officials said Wednesday.

A Namibian newspaper on Wednesday said callers claiming to represent a white supremacist group claimed responsibility for the killing Tuesday of Anton Lubowski, an official of the South-West Africa People's Organization.

Sam Nujoma, president of the nationalist group, will return Thursday even though there have been threats against his life, the organization said in a statement. Nujoma has lived principally in Angola during his self-imposed exile.

Posters appeared in Windhoek on Wednesday with a photograph of Nujoma and a target superimposed on his face.

Nujoma is returning to Namibia to take charge of his group's campaign for elections scheduled for early November, a prelude to Namibian independence from South Africa.

South Africa, which ruled Namibia 74 years, has agreed to implement independence in the territory under United Nations supervision. Independence is expected early next year.

Lubowski, a Namibian lawyer and the nationalist group's top-ranking white official, was shot in the head outside his home in a Windhoek suburb.

The 37-year-old Lubowski was widely known abroad, and his killing was condemned by officials from the United States, Britain, West Germany, Norway, Sweden, and Zambia, among others.

Gwen Lister, editor of The Namibian, said she received two phone calls Wednesday from men saying they belonged to the White Wolves and that the white supremacist organization killed Lubowski.

Ms. Lister said one of the callers also threatened her for supporting the South-West Africa People's Organization, the black-dominated movement that waged a 23-year guerrilla war against South African rule of Namibia.

Men identifying themselves as Whites Wolves have carried out several attacks on blacks and anti-apartheid activists in South Africa.

Democrats challenge drug plan

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Senate Democrats, courting a showdown with the White House, said Wednesday that President Bush's $7.9 billion anti-drug package was inadequate and vowed to press their own more costly plan unless Republicans agreed to major expansions.

The Democrats made their decision in a closed strategy session as drug coordinator William Bennett continued his defense of the administration's plan, saying the blueprint was "our best assessment" of what is needed to combat illegal drugs.

"Is it impossible to spend more? No," Bennett told a House committee, but added it is unclear where more money could be used effectively. The Democrats want to up the spending by $2.2 billion.

Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine, said Democrats have offered to negotiate on a compromise with the White House and Republicans.

"The president's plan must be improved," Mitchell told reporters. "Its goals must be set higher. Its strategies to meet the goals must be changed."

Democrats emerged from their meetings saying the proposal by Sen. Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., to add the $2.2 billion to Bush's total by cutting a half percent from the budgets of other programs had their support.

"If we can't find that in everybody's department, we're not serious about fighting the war on drugs," said Sen. John Breaux, D-La., predicting that most Democrats would fall into line behind Byrd's plan.

"I think the Democrats want to do something on drugs and they want to do it now," said Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz.

Pension

"The problems of pension termination and skimming show the fatal flaw in a privatized social insurance system," Ghilarducci said. "Since the pension system is set up on a voluntary basis, companies facing severe competition or cash flow problems will take money from the plan to support other business opportunities."

The economist advocates retirement income security and public-provided and public-directed capital investment through an expanded Social Security System.

The government, Ghilarducci said, should revise the system to include mandatory pension plans with guaranteed funds for employees, tight regulation of the use of excess assets and plans which are sensitive to various occupational needs.

A coal miner who may prefer early retirement for health reasons and an older professor who might want to draw partial pension while teaching part-time are not differentiated in the present system, she explained.

U.S. and Soviets seek weapons agreement

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The United States and the Soviet Union, working together on a major arms-control front, are close to a landmark agreement to disclose their stockpiles of chemical weapons and permit inspection of their production facilities, Bush administration officials said Wednesday.

The goal is to announce the agreement at the Sept. 22-23 meeting at Jackson Hole, Wyo., between Secretary of State James A. Baker III and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze.

President Bush will see Shevardnadze in Washington on Sept. 21, an administration official said.

Officials cautioned that final details remain to be worked out by U.S. and Soviet experts here next Monday and Tuesday.

"We are certainly close," a U.S. official told The Associated Press. He said the memorandum of understanding would permit each side to conduct short-notice inspection of the other's facilities. Also, the two sides would exchange data on their chemical weapons arsenals.

The unfinished details include the extent of the information to be disclosed to each other, said the official, who spoke on the condition of anonymity. Two other U.S. officials confirmed that an accord seemed to be close to completion.

Soviet authorities consider ethnic demands in Baku

Associated Press

MOSCOW — Tens of thousands of people were told at a Wednesday night rally in Baku, Azerbaijan, that communist authorities had agreed to consider ethnic demands that touched off a widespread strike, a witness said.

Ali Aliev, a member of the grass-roots People's Front group who attended the rally in the southern republic's capital, said speakers announced that Azerbaijan's Supreme Soviet, the legislature, will review the demands Friday.

He said in a telephone interview that the legislature will consider pressing for an end to the special status given to the disputed Nagorno-Karabakh region in January; adopting a law on the republic's sovereignty; pressing for release of "political prisoners;" and granting the People's Front legal status.

Patients must have patience in nation's emergency rooms

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — People seeking treatment in emergency rooms in many areas of the country are finding a medical gridlock that keeps patients waiting hours, even days, for hospital beds, emergency physicians said Wednesday.

"We are on the verge of a major crisis," said Dr. Stephan Lynn, chairman of an American College of Emergency Physicians task force on hospital overcrowding and director of emergency medicine at St. Luke's-Roosevelt Hospital Center in New York City.

The pressure on hospital emergency rooms is coming from the growing AIDS epidemic, increased illegal drug use and an estimated 37 million Americans who have no health insurance and for whom the emergency room is often their only entry to the health care system, he said.

This burden is exacerbated by medical staff shortages, financial pressures that are leading a growing number of hospitals to close their doors, and an inadequate number of nursing home beds, Lynn said.

In some cases, patients in emergency rooms in New York City have waited for in-patient hospital beds for more than a week, Lynn said. And though the problem is most critical in the Northeast and on the West Coast, a survey shows emergency rooms across the country are backed up.

In a survey, 41 state chapters of the American College of Emergency Physicians reported overcrowding problems in emergency rooms in their states. Nine reported no backup problems: Idaho, Minnesota, Nebraska, New Hampshire, New Mexico, North Dakota, Oregon, Utah and Wyoming.

"This is affecting everybody, from the drug abuser to the homeless to the business executive," said Dr. Charlotte Yeh, who sits on the college's board and is chief of emergency medicine at the Newton-Wellesley Hospital in Newton, Mass.

Lynn and Yeh said it is not known whether extended emergency room stays have led to more patient deaths, but they said the quality of care these patients receive often is marginal.

"The lights never go out. The noise never turns off. Meals are served, but on an irregular basis and rarely are as palatable or warm as they are on the in-patient side," Lynn said.

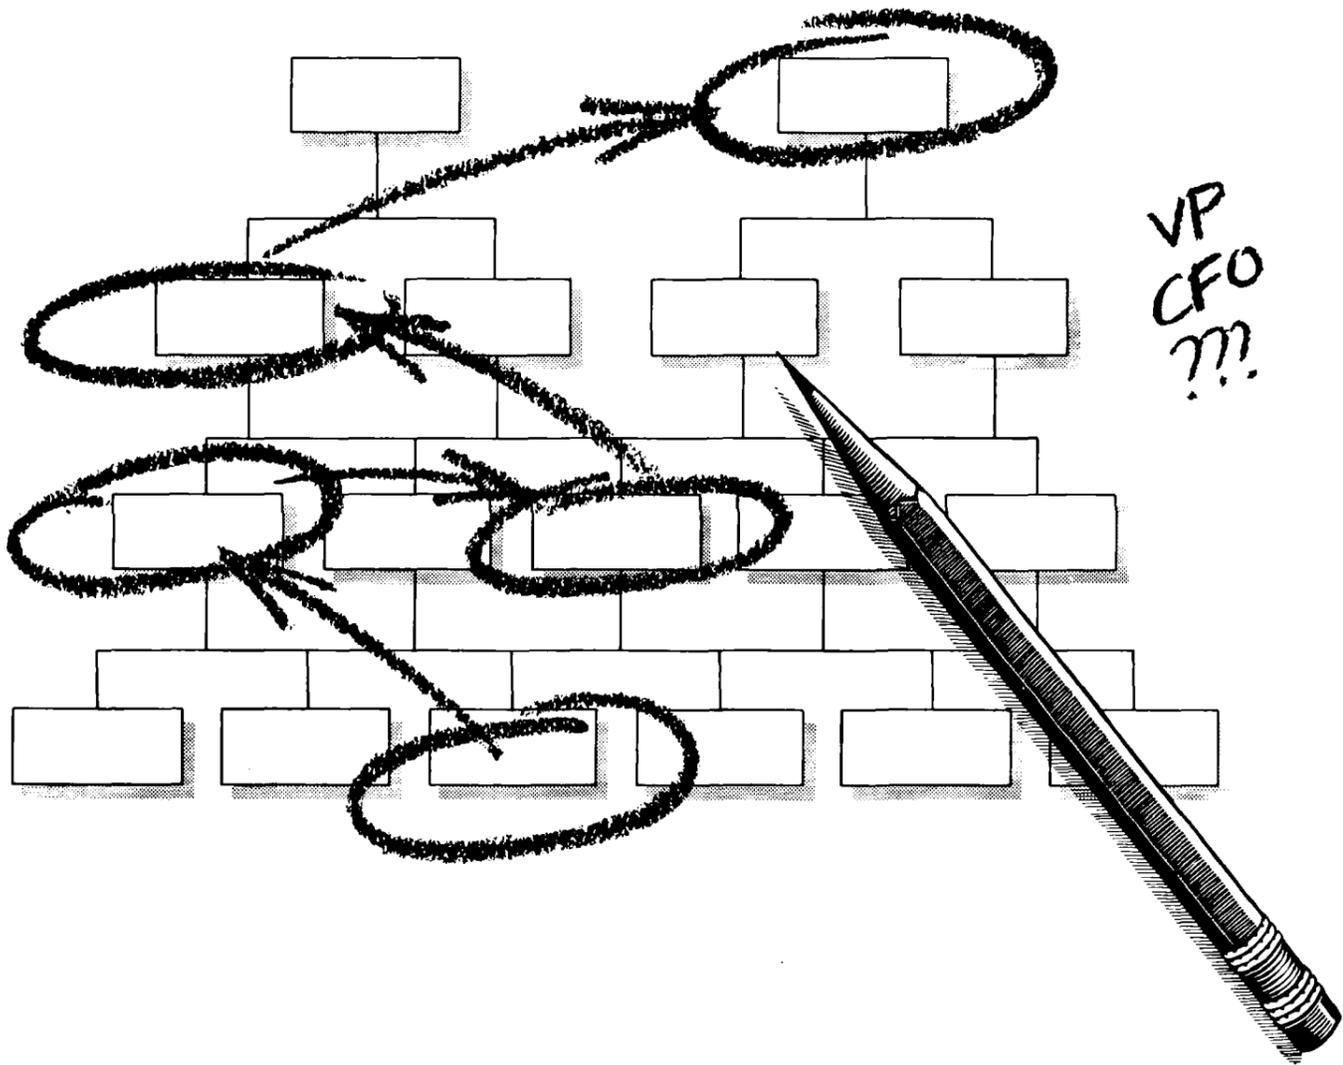

"The patient has no access to a telephone, and access to a TV is beyond thought," he said. "The patient is lucky if they are able to see their visitors, and they spend their entire stay lying on a stretcher with a mattress that is two-inches thick."

"That level of care is inadequate," he said. "Emergency departments were not designed and are not equipped or staffed to provide intensive care services or in-patient services."

At Harbor UCLA Medical Center in Los Angeles, the emergency room is so overcrowded it is closed to ambulance traffic 25 percent of the time, said Dr. Robert Hockberger, chairman of the Department of Emergency Medicine.

"That results in ambulances wandering around the city trying to find emergency departments that are open," he said.

Where can Morgan's Audit-Plus Training Program lead you?

Each year we hire a small team of college graduates to participate in a unique management training program. Our program, Audit-Plus, offers a career path in either financial or general management at J.P. Morgan.

J.P. Morgan develops and executes complex financial transactions for the world's leading corporations and governments. Our business requires specialized support in areas such as risk analysis, control evaluation, accounting policies, and taxation. As an Audit-Plus trainee, your role will be vital in providing this essential management support.

To qualify, graduates with concentrations in accounting, finance, economics, or other business subjects should have at least two courses in accounting for the general management path and four courses for the financial management path.

Please plan to attend our upcoming information session. Watch for the time and location on campus. Or contact Judith Lannin, Financial Recruiting,

MBA program applications rise, majority possess work experience

By LIZ PANZICA
Business Editor

The Master of Business Administration school at Notre Dame received 611 applicants for the 1989 school year, said Larry Ballinger, director of the MBA program. Ballinger added applications were up 12 percent from the previous year. In 1988 applications had increased by 18 percent.

Ballinger claimed that following the lead of larger business schools, Notre Dame has accepted a greater number of students with previous work experience. He said, "In our three-semester program, 70 percent have work experience. In our two-year program, 60 percent have work experience."

The average length of time spent in the work force is three years.

The school accepted 233 students to the University's two-year program and 119 to the accelerated three-semester program, said Ballinger. Out of that group, 103 enrolled in the two-year program, and 73 into the shortened program.

The MBA program draws from some 76 undergraduate institutions in 20 states. But, Ballinger said, the school is still "Midwestern and Eastern oriented, but California has provided a great number of students," as has Texas. He added that 17 percent of the MBA student body is foreign, coming from 13 different countries, including Japan and Taiwan.

The MBA program is relatively young at Notre Dame, having graduated only 23 classes. Ballinger said the program has "put a concentrated effort in recruitment with mailings and career days." The program has not been mentioned among the top 10 or 20 MBA programs in the last couple of years. But, said Ballinger, the situation is changing. "Momentum is beginning to happen which is a combination of efforts," he said. "Quality has improved with the last couple of years."

Ballinger doesn't foresee any large growth in the student body population any time soon. He added that the school is striving "basically to increase the quality of the student, then look at increasing the size."

Secretary Mosbacher calls for changes in Japanese economy

Associated Press

TOKYO —U.S. Commerce Secretary Robert Mosbacher called Wednesday for structural changes in Japan's economy and fewer trade barriers to allow the United States to compete with Japan and to benefit Japanese consumers.

The plight of Japanese consumers, who pay among the highest prices in the world for housing and food, results directly from the country's closed market, Mosbacher said.

"All we're doing is asking for the right to come here and compete," he told reporters during a 15-day trip to Asia and Eastern Europe.

Aides traveling with Mosbacher said his meetings Wednesday with officials of the Posts and Telecommunications Ministry produced "non-responses to a number of concerns" of the United States, among them access to the market for satellites, digital switching equipment and optical fibers.

Mosbacher also joined a government-sponsored meeting of 83 foreign companies doing business in Japan. It was the first in a series of forums meant to expand imports.

Hikaru Matsunaga, Japan's minister of international trade and industry, told the group that imports rose 11.3 percent in the first half of 1989.

Mosbacher acknowledged several areas in which Japan voluntarily has limited its exports to the United States — steel, textiles, semiconductors and machine tools. But he said these are the exception.

"The United States is the largest and the most open market in the world and, unfortunately, Japan is among the most closed," he said.

He said the $52 billion U.S. merchandise trade deficit with Japan last year was "still far too high," but noted it had declined 32 percent from its peak in the third quarter of 1987.

Mosbacher said the United States is working to reduce its federal budget deficit, increase domestic savings to lower the cost of capital, and emphasize long-term business planning.

But he asked Japan to produce urgently some "made in Japan" solutions to the problems its export-led economic success has caused the United States.

The Observer is the independent newspaper published by the students of the University of Notre Dame du Lac and Saint Mary's College. It does not necessarily reflect the policies of the administration of either institution. The news is reported as accurately and objectively as possible. Unsigned editorials represent the opinion of the majority of the following: Editor-in-Chief, Managing Editor, Executive News Editor, Viewpoint Editor, Sports Editor, Accent Editor, Photo Editor, Saint Mary's Editor. Commentaries, letters, and the Inside Column present the views of their authors. Column space is available to all members of the community and the free expression of varying opinions on campus, through letters, is encouraged.

Damaging ripple effects in national security

By Tony Lang

As a result of the recent student government initiative to increase intellectual life on campus outside of the classroom, the Student Union Board, through the Ideas and Issues Commission, has begun this column in the Observer in order to encourage discussion and debate on various issues facing the ND/SMC community. We hope to coordinate this column with the various intellectual events going on throughout the campus, whether they be sponsored by SUB, student government, or any other organization.

Although this column is written under the aegis of the Ideas and Issues Commission, it is important to realize that the opinions offered here do not reflect those of SUB or even the commission. By means of this column we hope to begin a dialogue on different topics and we encourage a response, either through the Observer or by participation on our commission.

During the week of September 18-22, SUB will offer a series of lectures and debates on the topic of foreign relations, with a special emphasis on the place of the United States in a changing world. Designated as Foreign Policy Week, it will be the result of cooperation between SUB, the CSC, student government, and certain academic departments.

The two keynote speakers of the week will be Robert McFarlane and Daniel Ellsberg. McFarlane has worked in military and diplomatic circles for the past 30 years, culminating in his tenure as National Security Advisor to the president from 1983-1985. Daniel Ellsberg was a high-ranking military analyst when, in 1969, he decided to release a top-secret study of the U.S. involvement in Vietnam, resulting in his indictment by the Nixon administration, which was later thrown out of court due to government misconduct.

Both McFarlane and Ellsberg hold impressive records as national security analysts and policy makers, a fact often clouded over by their involvement in the Iran/Contra scandal and the Pentagon Papers, respectively. The emotions surrounding both of these events run high, having chased Ellsberg for the past 20 years. In order to compare the two men, one must look objectively at those events, without the political ideologies which usually surface.

McFarlane did not begin his secret overtures to Iran as a neofascist U.S. imperialist out to subvert the Congress by diverting funds to the Contras. His initial motivation was to open up diplomatic channels to moderates in Iran in order to prepare for a post-Khomeini Iran. And, despite the Reagan administration's tough talk, the release of the hostages in Lebanon was also an overriding factor. Upon reading the Tower Commission Report, it seems evident that McFarlane never intended, nor was even aware of the diversion of funds to the Contras (although the same cannot be said for North and Poindexter).

Ellsberg, on the other hand, did not decide to release the Pentagon Papers to the New York Times because he was a communist sympathizer hoping to undermine national security. As an analyst to the Pentagon during the administrations of Kennedy, Johnson, and Nixon, Ellsberg witnessed a decision-making process characterized by short-term analysis, strident anti-communism, and perverted ideas of U.S. nationalism. Reading over the reports of various advisors, he also began to see a picture of three presidents who did not want to go down in history as "being the first to lose a U.S. war" (paraphrase of President Johnson).

So it seems that both had good intentions. But in matters as delicate and vital as national security, good intentions simply are not enough. The national security analyst or policy maker must always realize the ripple effects of any decision he makes. He must be fully aware of the history of any situation he enters into, as well as the subtle nuances of diplomacy and military endeavors.

In the case of the Iranian initiative, it is more than obvious that the process was mishandled. The U.S. dealt mainly with a Mr. Ghorbanifar, an Iranian arms dealer, who turned out to be a deceiving middle man only out for his own aggrandizement. The effect of Iran on the kidnappers in Lebanon was also underestimated, with only one hostage being released due to their efforts. There was a clear misunderstanding on the part of the U.S. as to the moderate element in Iran and what could be accomplished through an arms transfer. Not only did the U.S. miscalculate the situation in Iran, but they also did not expect the negative reaction from the public and other governments to the U.S.' supposedly neutral policy in the Iran/Iraq war.

Ellsberg's decision, on the other hand, was a well thought out response to an obviously disastrous situation. As an analyst who, time and time again, had advised against further involvement in Vietnam, Ellsberg realized that the personalities of those in control and the importance which they put on public opinion would prevent him from having any effect as an analyst. Not only did the U.S. government deceive the public as to its actual involvement and chances for success; it was also being deceived by members of its own military and bureaucracy. Ellsberg, along with others, realized this deception and did what he had to in order to bring to light the egregious policies which were being followed.

The actions of these two men and the events which surround them are not indicative of the two political parties for which they worked, so this column should not be viewed as a condemnation or laudation of either party. Neither should it be seen as a judgement of either individual. However, if we are able to take seriously the words of philosophers and theologians concerning ethical action, it is our duty to identify the good and the bad. From this brief analysis, it seems clear that the actions of McFarlane deserve our criticism and those of Ellsberg our praise. In making this judgement, we can only hope that those who protect our national security will learn from the mistakes of McFarlane and emulate the honesty of Ellsberg.

Tony Lang, the Ideas and Issues Commissioner of Student Union Board, is a philosophy/PPE/peace studies major.

Lack of democratic principles instills respect for university authority

Dear Editor:

Astonished indeed am I to read Mark Derwent's article in the August 31 issue of The Observer. As a graduate of the University of Notre Dame and a 28 year participant in the legal-judicial system of the United States, I would like to point out to Mr. Derwent that comparing a private Catholic University to a democratic government in a pluralistic society is like comparing apples and oranges. There is no comparison, and there should be no comparison.

The most important lesson that I learned at the University of Notre Dame was discipline and respect for authority. These lessons have served me well throughout my professional career which has included 30 years of service in the United States Army Reserve. The fact that Mr. Derwent complains is some proof that he is learning these lessons at Notre Dame.

POTAWATOMI ZOO

Giant Hissing Cockroaches, Bear Chow-eating bears, and Neo-Tropical Fruit Bats

Remember thumping on the glass trying to wake up the Argentine Horned Frog? And imitating the guttural snorts of the pigs?

PAIGE SMORON
assistant accent editor

If you think you've seen all South Bend has to offer—you've mini-golfed through countless windmills, you've hung out at both major malls, you've even bowled without beer—then you need a trip to the zoo.

For only $2 and a quick trip off campus to the Potawatomi Zoo, you can relive those exotic thrills you probably last experienced in fifth grade. Remember thumping on the glass trying to wake up the Argentine Horned Frog? And imitating the guttural snorts of the pigs to the great amusement of your classmates? It can all be yours again, and more, because the beauty of the zoo is that every time you go, you find something new.

The Potawatomi experience begins in the Learning Center, which houses, among many other exhibits, the Neo-Tropical Fruit Bat, and elaborate faux swamp settings. From there, the zoo-goer, with the aid of a free map (one per group, please), can explore the fauna of Eurasia, Africa, Australia, South or North America. The Cats, Bears, and Old World Monkeys can be visited at stops along the way. Chimpanzee Island, near the Africa section, draws a large crowd, and Zoofarm is always a favorite.

If you like to be at one with nature, the Potawatomi Zoo provides opportunities to interact with the wildlife. Some animals, like the buffalo in "North America," come close enough to pet through the fence (if you really want to); the Contact Corral affords the chance to tease live goats; and during the summer, pony rides are available at $1 per child.

Throughout the zoo are slide presentations, most of them free, like Sir Malcolm Mallory's introduction to Old World Monkeys. But even the Mishawaka "Alive With Pride" filmstrip is (with Don Gardner on piano) worth the 25 cents, if for nothing else than the concluding "startling effects in 3-D."

As you wander the Potawatomi world, there are endless signs to guide you. "Vanishing Animal" indicates any near-extinct species (so take a good look), and the friendly "Look What's New In Your Zoo!" sign alerts you to the latest animal additions (it's customary to welcome them). There's also the vaguely threatening, "Please leave the flowers so that others may enjoy them." And with every animal is a helpful identifying plaque that reveals a few interesting and sometimes highly disturbing facts about it. For instance, did you know that the Giant Hissing Cockroach is willing to breed in captivity? That the bears eat Bear Chow? That termites salivate?

If all this is overwhelming you, take a break and stop by Barnyard Gifts for fake animal snouts and all your "I (heart) Potawatomi Zoo" bumper-sticker needs. Or try the concession stand featuring (the inevitable) hot dogs.

The zoo is also of great historical significance. It began in 1917 with some buffalo, making it Indiana's first zoo.

Today the Potawatomi Zoo is home to more than 400 mammals, birds, and reptiles. It's open year-round, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily, and also provides a picnic area. If you really enjoy your visit, you might even want to join the Potawatomi Zoological Society, Inc., which offers, among other tempting benefits, free admission, an issue of Zoo's News, and the Special Members' window decal (not found in stores).

At the end of a day at the zoo, you should be exhausted, feel closer to nature, and smell faintly of guinea pigs. You're sad to leave, but you know you'll be back—to see the American Prairie Exhibit under development, to buy an inflatable boa constrictor, and to keep an eye on those Giant Hissing Cockroaches.

loves to win, probably more than anybody else in the country. He just wants to do it the right way. He swears Michigan has never cheated, and one would be hard-pressed to find someone to argue with that.

Born on April 1, 1929, Glenn Edward Schembechler spent his youth in Barberton, Ohio, a small town with a Mayberry-like atmosphere. His father was a fireman and Bo spent his childhood chasing his dad on every assignment.

It was in Barberton that Glenn became Bo, and it wasn't football prowess or knowledge which initiated that change. Instead of saying "brother," his younger sister could say only "Bobo." That was shortened to Bo and it replaced Glenn, just like Bear replaced Paul, Pop replaced Glen and Digger replaced Richard.

Bo was an all-state offensive lineman at Barberton High School where he dreamed of playing collegiate football for Notre Dame. That didn't work out and Schembechler attended Miami of Ohio on a scholarship.

Before Bo's junior year, Sid Gillman left for Cincinnati and the Redskins brought in a young coach named Woody Hayes, a man Schembechler would come to cherish and exemplify in many ways. But the first impression was not complimentary.

Says Schembechler in "Bo," his new autobiography, "...back then, I despised him. Most of us did. He had just been announced as our new football coach—much to our surprise—and he was tough and nasty. He looked like a naval officer, with perfect posture and broad shoulders."

That nasty man would become one of Bo's greatest friends, greatest teacher and his greatest inspiration. After Bo's senior season, Hayes took the head spot at Ohio State and he took Bo with him as a graduate assistant.

Bo stayed there one year, served a stint in the U.S. Army and then coached the line at Presbyterian College in 1954. He held the same position at Bowling Green in 1955 before joining Ara Parseghian's staff at Northwestern in 1958.

Bo stayed with Ara just one year, a season where the Wildcats did not win a game, before joining Hayes as a full-time assistant the following year. He stayed with Hayes for five years, a time in which he learned more about football than he could ever imagine.

It was probably also from Hayes that Bo gained his legendary temper, a temper that demonstrated the intensity with which Bo coached and loved the game. He and Hayes wanted the same thing—perfection whether it be from the star quarterback in the Rose Bowl or the third-string cornerback on a Wednesday afternoon.

Bo left Ohio State for Miami in 1963, the same place Hayes used as a stepping stone to the Big Ten. Bo coached the Redskins for six years and compiled a 40-17-3 ledger. Then came the call from the big time.

Bielecki an unlikely star for Cubs

30-year old emerges as one of season's big surprises

Associated Press

CHICAGO — The Chicago Cubs have been full of surprises this crazy season. But, other than themselves, the biggest surprise of all could be pitcher Mike Bielecki.

Before this season, the 30-year-old right-hander had only 12 major league victories in parts of four seasons with Pittsburgh and another with the Cubs. But this year, Bielecki has blossomed into a bonafide star.

Bielecki pitched the finest game of his career Tuesday night, two-hitting the Montreal Expos in a 2-0 victory that boosted the surprising, yes surprising, Cubs' lead to 4 1/2 games in the National League East.

In winning the eighth of his last nine decisions, Bielecki improved his record to 16-6.

Bielecki did not allow a hit after the second inning, did not allow a runner to reach second, walked three and struck out seven.

He ended the game by striking out Andres Galarraga with a runner on first.

"I've never pitched a better game," said Bielecki, whose previous best effort was a three-hit, 4-0 victory against Los Angeles July 19.

"I had some luck, but you have to have luck to pitch a shutout," Bielecki said. "There were some hard hit balls in the early innings, but I had a great defense behind me."

Despite his effort, Bielecki was afraid he might not get to finish the game after walking Marquis Grissom with two out in the ninth.

"I didn't want the walk to upset me," Bielecki said. "I gathered myself because I knew Galarraga would be my last hitter."

"Not so," Manager Don Zimmer said with a wink. "The thought never crossed my mind."

It was Bielecki's fourth complete game and third shutout of the season. He had not had a complete game since his shutout against Los Angeles.

But Zimmer said he was not surprised.

"He was in a rut for a while like the rest of our staff, but his last outing was good," Zimmer said. "This one was exceptional."

The last Cub to pitch a two-hitter was Jamie Moyer, against Montreal Aug. 16, 1986.

"Mike Bielecki pitched a heckuva game, the best I've ever seen him pitch," Montreal manager Buck Rodgers said. "He never gave us a shot."

Bielecki came to the Cubs in a trade with Pittsburgh during spring training of 1988.

He started the 1988 season with the Cubs, but soon was sent to Iowa.

AP Photo Chicago Cubs catcher Rick Wrona congratulates pitcher Mike Bielecki after Tuesday's 2-0 win over Montreal. As the amazing Cubs strengthen their lead in the National League East, Bielecki finds himself a major force in the starting rotation.

Vincent elected as commissioner

Associated Press

MILWAUKEE — Fay Vincent was elected to a 4 1/2-year term as baseball commissioner on Wednesday and immediately pledged to continue the course set by A. Bartlett Giamatti.

Vincent, 51, had been deputy commissioner under Giamatti, who died of a heart attack on Sept. 1. Vincent said that he knew of no differences between his agenda and Giamatti's.

"I take this job. I do not replace Bart," Vincent said. "I know that this is not the way to get this job."

He said he considers himself a traditionalist who will try to keep baseball from changing.

"I don't like the designated hitter. I don't like aluminum bats," Vincent said. "I do like grass. I do like baseball as you and I knew it growing up."

Vincent spoke reverentially of Giamatti during a news conference after his election.

"I think about Bart a lot," he said, bowing his head with a sad look in his eyes.

Vincent, a former securities lawyer who ran Columbia Pictures Industries Inc. for nearly 10 years, received a congratulatory telephone call from President Bush within his first hour as commissioner.

"It's wonderful for you to call," Vincent said, surrounded by reporters. "It's a very special moment for me."

Giamatti, who became commissioner just last April, brought Vincent to baseball as the first deputy commissioner and they worked as a team on virtually all issues. Vincent said he, too, likes consensus management.

"There's very likely to be a deputy commissioner," he said, projecting what his administration would be like. "I don't have any candidates in mind."

and serious threats from Suba, Sullivan and sophomore forward Susie Zilvitis, the Irish were incapable of scoring.

Minnesota's Lisa Schingen finally took it upon herself to end the agony at 41:35 of the second half with a long hard shot that beat Irish keeper Michelle Lodyga in the high left corner.

Despite the goal, Lodyga played a brilliantly aggressive game and was an important factor in the stable Notre Dame defense.

"We marked really well on defense," said Sullivan. "And our restarts were great too. We just have to keep our heads down, and keep the ball down and not bang it over the net."

The Irish will soon have the opportunity to apply the lessons they learned last night when they return to Krause Stadium Friday and take on IU-South Bend.

Gooden effective in relief as Mets top Phils

Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA — Dwight Gooden made his first appearance since July 1 and pitched three scoreless innings as the New York Mets beat the Philadelphia Phillies 10-4 Wednesday night.

The third-place Mets, however, remained 5 1/2 games behind Chicago in the National League East as the Cubs beat Montreal. New York has 17 games left.

Gooden, who was placed on the disabled list July 3 with a muscle tear under his right armpit, allowed two hits, struck out four and walked one.

The relief appearance snapped a streak of 175 consecutive starts for Gooden.

Cubs 3, Expos 1

Scott Sanderson, making his first start since Aug. 18, allowed no runs in 5 1-3 innings, and Chicago completed a three-game sweep against Montreal.

It was the first-place Cubs' fifth straight victory and dropped the fourth-place Expos seven games out in the NL East.

Sanderson allowed six hits, all singles, and struck out three to improve to 11-8. Les Lancaster finished for his seventh save, allowing three hits in 3 2-3 innings.

The Expos snapped a string of 19 consecutive scoreless innings in the eighth inning when Dave Martinez singled, moved to second on a grounder and scored on Tom Foley's double.

A's 7, Brewers 6

Dave Henderson led off the bottom of the ninth inning with a homer after Greg Vaughn's two-run homer in the top of the inning spoiled Dave Stewart's bid for his 20th win.

Henderson hit a 1-0 pitch off Chuck Crim, 9-6, just over the center-field fence for his 12th homer of the season, snapping the Brewers' six-game winning streak.

Stewart appeared certain to reach the 20-victory plateau for the third straight season when he turned over a 6-4 lead to Eckersley in the eighth inning.

Twins 3, Blue Jays 2

Hot-hitting Kent Hrbek drove in two runs and rookie Kevin Tapani pitched 7 2-3 strong innings Wednesday night as the Minnesota Twins beat the American League East leaders.

Royals 3, Rangers 2

Bret Saberhagen got his 19th victory when Frank White hit his first home run at Royals Stadium in more than a year Wednesday night as Kansas City kept pace in the American League West.

The Royals remained three games behind first-place Oakland, which beat Milwaukee 7-6 earlier in the day.

Mariners 7, Bosox 4

Jay Buhner and Alvin Davis hit home runs and the Seattle Mariners completed their first-ever sweep against Boston, sending the Red Sox to their eighth straight loss.

Seattle won three consecutive games against the Red Sox. Boston's slide is its worst since an eight-game losing streak in 1984.

Jerry Reed, 6-6, pitched 1 1-3 innings for the victory. Mike Schooler got two outs for his 29th save.

Mike Boddicker, 12-11, gave up six runs on nine hits in 5 1-3 innings.

Harold Reynolds' leadoff double keyed a four-run first inning.

Tigers 3, Indians 1

Jack Morris pitched a five-hitter and won his third straight start as Detroit recorded its ninth victory in 11 games.

Morris, 6-11, struck out six and walked two in his eighth complete game. Morris is 3-1 against the Indians this season and 25-8 versus them in his career.

Cleveland lost for the 13th time in 18 games. The Indians are 1-1 under interim manager John Hart.

Tom Candiotti, 12-9, took the loss. He allowed three runs on nine hits in 6 2-3 innings.

Gary Pettis led off the first with a single and stole second, and scored when catcher Joel

Chisox 3, Orioles 0

On his 25th birthday, rookie Greg Hibbard got 25 outs. Not quite the complete game he wanted, but close enough.

Hibbard pitched four-hit ball for 8 1-3 innings and the Chicago White Sox took advantage of a sloppy field and Baltimore's shoddy fielding Wednesday night to beat the Orioles 3-0 in a rain-delayed game.

had made a great move to draw the keeper out directly to the right of the goal. Kern's cross deflected off teammate Tom Crowe right to Stebbins, who punched the ball home from the left-hand side.

With the 3-0 lead, the Irish let down a little bit, and Detroit managed to take advantage of an Irish defensive lapse. The Titans' Pete Tangalos hammered home a goal from directly in front of the net.

Grace said that his team's second half letdown was the by-product of having a young team.

"These are things that only Mother Nature and Father Time and experience can take care of," said Grace. "We have to learn to keep it on for 90 minutes."

The game became a bit rough in the second half, and Grace said he was afraid that one of his players might be injured. But he said he was "proud that our kids didn't let down and retaliate."

Mitch Kern led an Irish midfield which kept pressure on Detroit for most of the game. Kern assisted on Stebbins' goal, and also hopped up on the right wing to divert the attention of the defense on Pendergast's goal.

"Mitch played his best game of the season tonight," said Grace, "This should help him gain some momentum."

"Battle for Number One" and the much-ballyhooed Kickoff Classic.

"Here at Notre Dame, you expect to play these types of games," said linebacker and tri-captain Ned Bolcar. "You always talk about hype, the hype for this game is nothing compared to the hype for the Kickoff Classic. That was two to three days at New York - the media capital of the world. It was like a bowl."

Men's soccer wins, women lose in Krause twinbill

Irish take 3-0 lead, then outlast Detroit

By KEN TYSIAC
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame men's soccer team beat the University of Detroit for the second time in one week with a 3-1 victory Wednesday night at Krause Stadium.

The Midwestern Collegiate Conference triumph came much more easily for the Irish than last week's 4-3 overtime marathon in Detroit.

"Overall as a team I thought we played much better," said Irish coach Dennis Grace, whose team upped its record to 2-2 (2-0 in the MCC). "I thought our midfielders played better and our backs matched up better."

Notre Dame started out strong, as Steve LaVigne converted his own rebound for his third goal of the season 26:43 into the game to give Notre Dame a 1-0 lead.

Although the Irish dominated the first stanza, LaVigne's goal was all they were able to tally on the scoreboard before halftime.

The men in blue and gold struck quickly in the second half. Tom Connaghan carried the ball from midfield to a 4-on-2 break and punched the ball outside to Kevin Pendergast inside the penalty area.

Pendergast wasted no time in sliding the ball along the ground past a sprawling Detroit keeper Don Koontz and into the net just 3:25 into the second half.

Less than eight minutes later, Danny Stebbins converted a nifty cross from Mitch Kern, who Despite having plenty of opportunities, the Notre Dame women's soccer team couldn't come up with any goals Wednesday night at Krause Stadium. Wisconsin recorded a 1-0 victory over the Irish, who fell to 1-3 on the young season.

Minnesota trips ND in low-scoring battle

By COLLEEN HENNESSEY
Sports Writer

It was only a matter of time. Someone had to score in the women's soccer game Wednesday night between Notre Dame and Minnesota, but no one wanted to take responsibility.

Despite creating numerous opportunities the Irish came up empty-handed against the Golden Gophers, losing the game 1-0 and dropping their record to 1-3.

An uneventful first half produced very little beside missed opportunities.

"We had no trouble getting it up there," said Irish captain K. T. Sullivan. "We just couldn't finish."

That was pretty much the story of the game. Notre Dame applied persistent pressure to the Minnesota defense, but the Irish were unable to execute.

"We were working on getting to the ball," said junior forward Mimi Suba. "And we did win the ball much better tonight."

There is no question that Notre Dame had the ball last night; they just couldn't do anything with it.

"The field was really slick," said Suba. "We had great crosses and perfect chances, but we just couldn't hit the goal."

Undaunted, the Irish came out determined in the second half, effectively dominating the Golden Gopher defense. But despite good play-making by freshman midfielder Margaret Jarce

'Bo' - The first name says it all

By GREG GUFFEY
Assistant Sports Editor

This is the first of a two-part story on Michigan football coach Bo Schembechler.

Identification with the first name is one of the most unique characteristics of sports, and his name may be the best known in his field.

There was Mickey and Willie, O.J. and Broadway Joe, Bjorn and Chrissie, Kareem and Wilt. But they don't have anything on Bo Schembechler, the football genius who has guided the Michigan football program for the past 21 years.

Bo. The name connotes winning, tradition, excellence, everything that is right in a college football world full of steroids, cheating and playing the spread. He is the patriarch of collegiate coaches, the dean of a group he fears is taking football in the wrong direction.

Forget Bo Jackson in Kansas City—or whatever city his sport carnival is in this season. Bo Schembechler has forgotten more than Jackson could ever hope to know. Bo knew the intricacies of football before Jackson's parents were born.

Bo's record speaks for itself. He has a career mark of 224-63-8 in six years at Miami of Ohio and 20 seasons at Michigan. He has won more games than any other active NCAA I-A coach and ranks fifth on the all-time list behind a formidable quartet—Bear Bryant of Alabama, Amos Alonzo Stagg of Chicago and Woody Hayes of Ohio State.

Bo sports a 135-24-3 mark in the Big Ten, a conference Michigan and Ohio State have dominated over the years. Under Bo, the Wolverines have won or tied for the league title in 12 seasons. He has taken 16 teams to bowl games, including nine trips to the Rose Bowl, and has finished in The Associated Press Top Ten 16 times.

A legend at Michigan as well as across the country, Bo is unwilling to compromise his old-fashioned ideas. He is a member of the old school of football, the school where recruiting was fun instead of broken promises and slick Corvettes, the school that concentrated on principles instead of points, the school where the alumni were supporters instead of coaches.

Don't get the wrong idea. Bo

Although his teams have never won a national championship, Michigan football coach Bo Schembechler is fifth on the all-time career victory list with a career record of 224-63-8. Schembechler's second-ranked Wolverines open their season at home Saturday against defending national champion and top-ranked Notre Dame.

Irish feel confident against Michigan's big offensive line

Heading into Saturday's showdown with second-ranked Michigan, one of Notre Dame's biggest concerns has been the size of the Wolverine offensive line.

Michigan's average weight among starters on the offensive line is 293 pounds, larger than any Notre Dame offensive lineman and some 30 pounds per man heavier than the Irish defensive line.

Sophomore tackle Greg Skrepenak is the largest of the large, tipping the scales at 320 pounds.

"He's a big person," Irish defensive end Scott Kowalkowski said in perhaps the most obvious understatement of the decade. "I look at it as a challenge. With a person that big, I'll try to use my quickness and speed."

"I think it all evens out with our quickness, speed and the scheme we're going to use."

Michigan's offensive line was much bigger than Notre Dame's defensive line last year, but the Irish held the Wolverines to 139 rushing yards on 52 carries.

In the midst of a lackadaisical workout Monday, several seniors conducted a brief meeting for the Notre Dame offense.

"What happened was we were just to the point

Steve Megargee

where everybody was going through the motions," said sophomore flanker Raghieb "Rocket" Ismail. "I didn't know if everyone was drained from class or what. It got to point where we thought, 'Hey, everybody can practice good when they're feeling good, but the sign of great players and a team destined to be great is when they're not feeling good and still come out and have a good practice.'"

"Any time the seniors come out and take the initiative, it always helps."

The meeting seemed to result in better practices the following day.

"It went pretty well," said fullback and tri-captain Anthony Johnson. "We needed to be a little more intense; not everyone was clicking on all cylinders. But everybody met their assignments for the most part."

Ismail said he will not be intimidated by the crowd of 105,000 at Michigan Stadium. The big crowd certainly had an effect when he played his first collegiate game last fall at Notre Dame Stadium.

"It was crazy," recalled the flanker/kick returner. "I was supposed to return the opening kickoff, then the coaches thought it would be unfair for me to return the opening kickoff because they had just put me on the spot all of a sudden and I'd never been in a college game before."

"At first, I was like, 'Aww, okay.' Then I went out there and looked at the stands and thought, 'Whew.' And I was glad I was on the sideline."

Considering it's the week of a matchup between the nation's two top-ranked teams, the Notre Dame players seemed remarkably relaxed at press conferences this week.

That shouldn't come as too much of a surprise. These big games are becoming old hat for the Irish. Dating to last year, Notre Dame's last three games have been a number-one vs. number-two matchup at Southern California, the Sunbiter Fiesta Bowl's
