McFarlane defends U.S. Iran/Contra affair

By MATTHEW GALLAGHER
Senior Staff Reporter

Former Reagan Administration National Security Advisor Robert McFarlane said the U.S. involvement in the Iran/Contra affair was aimed at the right ends, but the means used were wrong.

■ McFarlane Lecture / page 3

In a press conference Tuesday, McFarlane said the U.S. may have achieved some of its goals in the scheme to arm the Nicaraguan Contra rebels with profits derived from arm sales to Iran.

"It isn't clear now...that, since those in power now in Iran, who are seeking to break out of their isolation and restore a normal, peaceful relationship, the same people the Reagan Administration was seeking to reach, that it was a wrong-headed idea in the first place," McFarlane said.

McFarlane also defended the Reagan Administration's support of the Contra rebels, but said that covert action was an inappropriate means of aiding them.

"At the core of the problem was the failure of our leadership...to recognize that you can never undertake any policy unless the American people understand it and support it, and it is the responsibility of the president to help them understand it," McFarlane said.

"Relying on covert activity to pursue your policy means you're never going to have Americans understand what it's all about, and thus they will never support it," McFarlane

DC-10 airliner bound for Paris missing with 170 on board

Associated Press

PARIS— A DC-10 airliner bound from the Congo to Paris with 170 people aboard disappeared on Tuesday, probably over the West African country of Niger, the French airline UTA said.

A U.S. ambassador's wife was among the passengers, and a Chadian Cabinet minister also was reported on board.

UTA said there was no sign of the plane's fate by nightfall, more than five hours after contact was lost.

Bonnie Pugh, wife of U.S. Ambassador to Chad Robert Pugh, was aboard, according to Robert Ayling, the deputy chief of mission, reached by telephone in N'Djamena, Chad. He said it appeared a full-scale search would have to wait until daylight Wednesday.

A State Department source in Washington, who spoke on condition of anonymity, confirmed Mrs. Pugh was aboard.

The French news agency Agence France-Presse, quoting unidentified sources, said Chadian Planning Minister Mahamat Soumahila was also aboard, bound for the annual meeting of the International Monetary Fund in Washington.

The report was not confirmed, and UTA did not immediately issue a passenger list.

UTA Flight 772, with 155 passengers and 15 crew, originated in the Congolese capital of Brazzaville and made a stopover in N'Djamena.

The airline said it believed the search focused on Niger, along the path the plane would have taken, and could involve military forces from Chad, Niger and France, which has a small force in Chad.

The last radio contact between the plane and air traffic controllers, 40 to 50 minutes after leaving the airport at N'Djamena, indicated everything was normal, the airline said.

UTA said that would be enough flight time to take the plane over the border into neighboring Niger. It reported no unusual weather in the area at the time.

The French navy dispatched a Dassault-Breguet Atlantique patrol aircraft from Dakar, Senegal, to join the search, the Defense Ministry said.

The Foreign Ministry formed a crisis team to maintain contact with the countries over which the plane could have flown, including Niger and Algeria, a ministry spokesman said, speaking on condition of anonymity.

The flight left N'Djamena at 1:13 p.m. (8:13 a.m. EDT) and should have arrived at Charles De Gaulle-Roissy International Airport at 7:15 p.m. (1:15 p.m. EDT).

UTA purchased the aircraft in 1973 and it logged 60,000 hours in the air. No indications of mechanical failure surfaced before the plane left Chad, UTA said.

Keith Takahashi, a spokesman for the Douglas Aircraft Co. in Long Beach, Calif., identified the aircraft as a DC-10-30, a popular model in the DC-10 series.

The disappearance came the same day the Federal Aviation Authority in Washington ordered a detailed inspection in the fan disks of all DC-10 engines.

An explosion in the tail engine of a United Airlines DC-10 on July 19 severed hydraulic lines operating the airplane's controls, forcing the pilots to make an emergency landing near Sioux City, Iowa, in which 112 people died.

Both FAA Administrator James Busey and National Transportation Safety Board Chairman James Kolstad declared the DC-10 to be safe.

A Korean Air Lines DC-10 crashed on landing July 27 at Tripoli, Libya, killing 78 passengers and four people on the ground.

Northern Chad was long the scene of battles between government forces and Libyan-backed rebels, but has been calm for two years. Chad and Libya have restored diplomatic relations and agreed to settle their territorial dispute.

DART registration to begin for 1990 spring semester

By KELLEY TUTHILL
Senior Staff Reporter

This fall students will register for their spring classes using the new on-line telephone registration system.

The system, called Direct Access Registration by Telephone (DART), is still in its final stages of testing, but Daniel Winicur, dean of administration and registrar said he is confident DART will be ready for registration.

Registration for the 1990 spring semester will take place between October 30 and November 17, 1989, said Winicur.

After this time DART will continue to be available for adding and dropping courses through January 25, the first week of spring semester, said Winicur.

Winicur said a 10 minute video will be presented to all students between September 25 and October 11. He said a question/answer period will follow the video.

Winicur said each student will receive a schedule of video presentations in the mail. He said that there are copies of the video available in the Registrar's office that will be available to any group that would like a private showing.

The Schedule of Courses and Student Academic Information booklet contains all the information necessary to register, said Winicur. He said the booklet will be available on October 9.

Senior registration will be on October 30-November 3. Juniors register November 6-10 and sophomores on November 13-17.

Each student will be assigned an appointment for access to DART and a personal identification

Hurricane Hugo nears Florida

Associated Press

MIAMI— Hurricane Hugo, the Caribbean killer blamed for 25 deaths, seethed past the Bahamas Tuesday on an uncertain path that threatens an area from Florida to North Carolina by Friday.

■ Hurricane history / page 5

Disaster teams found death and destruction in Puerto Rico and a string of resort islands clobbered by the mightiest storm in a decade in the northeastern Caribbean. More than 50,000 people were homeless, and military planes ferried radios, drinking water, generators, chainsaws and other equipment to stricken areas that pleaded for more help.

"Whole buildings just picked up and left," said James Grisim, a resident of St. Thomas. He recalled "sheet metal roofing flying through the air, singing as it went, and glass, the sound of glass breaking all over the place."

Forecasters used computers, satellites and charts of old storms but could not predict Hugo's wobbly path. It lurched to the north and west because other weather systems seemed to be blocking it from heading into the open Atlantic.

At 6 p.m. EDT, the hurricane's center was near latitude 23.3 degrees north and longitude 68.9 west, about 185 miles east-northeast of Grand Turk Island, a British island in the southern Bahamas, according to the National Weather Service.

It had maximum sustained winds of 105 mph and was moving northwest at 12 mph, forecasters said. But Hugo was re-organizing over open seas where warm tropical air fueled its engine, and forecasters expected fluctuations in strength.

Hurricane warnings were downgraded to storm warnings for the southern Bahamas as Hugo skirted past, but the Bahamian government issued warnings for the central islands of the archipelago. Islanders boarded up their homes as a precaution.

"No one is relaxing their vigil because it can change direction," said Bill Kalis, press secretary for the government's information office.

In Florida, NASA officials said they would wait until Wednesday before deciding to move the space shuttle Atlantis, scheduled for launch Oct. 12, from its launch pad and into shelter. They also put off a decision on whether to remove a Navy communications satellite from an Atlas-Centaur rocket on another launch pad until more is known about Hugo's path.

"I think Hugo has certainly got people nervous," said Kathleen Hale, director of the Dade County Office of Emergency Management.

WORLD BRIEFS

Cambodia's rulers decorated departing Vietnamese military chiefs Tuesday and said Vietnam's 11-year occupation was not only legal but also "humanitarian" because it stopped massacres by the Khmer Rouge. In a ceremony, authorities presented the Angkor Order — a top Cambodian military distinction — to commanders of the eight army, navy and air force units that are to begin leaving Thursday in what Vietnam says will be the pullout of its last 26,000 troops. Chea Sim, the No. 2 man in Phnom Penh's ruling Communist Party, praised the officers for having toppled the fanatical Communist Khmer Rouge regime in late 1978.

The Vatican said Tuesday that a convent on the site of the Auschwitz death camp that has offended Jewish groups should be moved and that it would help pay to construct a new prayer center outside the camp. The statement from the Vatican's Commission for Religious Relations with Judaism was the first public declaration by the Roman Catholic Church hierarchy and clearly had the approval of Pope John Paul II. The controversy has severely strained Catholic-Jewish relations and resulted in a highly unusual public split among Catholic cardinals. In its communique, the Vatican diplomatically but firmly rejected the position held by Poland's primate, Cardinal Jozef Glemp, who has been accused of making anti-Semitic remarks recently and has called the proposed removal of the nuns "a scandal."

NATIONAL BRIEFS

President Bush, sharing a platform with House Speaker Tom Foley at a centennial tree-planting ceremony in Spokane, Wash. on Tuesday prodded the Democratic-controlled Congress to move more quickly on his clean-air proposals. Bush challenged Democratic leaders to finish work on his proposed overhaul of the Clean Air Act of 1974 this year—a target Foley, the nation's top-ranking elected Democrat, had called possible but "unlikely." Suggesting his legislation had been languishing in House and Senate committees, Bush declared, "Every day that passes is another day we're postponing progress on clean air."

The Warsaw Community School Board has dropped a program that awarded students with perfect attendance with a 2 percent increase in grades. Students who attend every class instead will receive free merchandise from the school bookstore. The school board approved the 2 percent increase to encourage students to stop skipping class, but the policy was attacked by some of the top students who said they could be unfairly penalized by the policy. Excused absences for illness or other reasons were still counted as missed days and disqualified a student from receiving the grade bonus. A committee of administrators and school board members recommended the 2 percent policy be dropped.

Molly Yard, president of the National Organization for Women, will speak Thursday at a rally in Anderson to inform the public on the recent U.S. Supreme Court decision on abortion. The rally for "Reproductive Freedom: Every Body's Choice," also will include speeches by Jane Stout, president of the Indiana Pro-Choice Action League and the director of the Women's Clinic in Indianapolis; Pamela Hall-Morrison, director of human services, housing and economic development for the Indianapolis Urban League; and Jill Chambers, president of the Indiana NOW Political Action League. The rally will be at noon at State Theatre.

Change hard but necessary at Notre Dame

NEWS FLASH: ND GOES COED

Don't count on it— Poor Father Sorin would roll over in his grave.

In 1972, the University took the boldest move since its founding in 1842 by allowing females to join the Notre Dame family. Women suddenly could be an integral part of the rich tradition built by Father Sorin nearly 150 years ago, and passed on through legends like Knute Rockne, and protected by the likes of Father Theodore Hesburgh. Our Lady should be proud indeed.

Unfortunately, change at Notre Dame is the exception, and by no means a rule (unless of course we include the University's never-ending construction plans).

Some call it tradition. Sadly, tradition has become the guise for the arcane rules and regulations imposed on this student body by the University supposedly in loco parentis. It's nice to know that we will be looked after, when many of us are far away from home. But, when was the last time you had to kick a member of the opposite sex out of your house because the 2 o'clock alarm went off?

Parietals are an easy target, but certainly not the only remaining bastion of archaic ideas and forms of Catholic suppression to remain intact beneath the glow of the Dome as we approach the 1990s.

And it's not just that the University needs to change its attitude with regard to male/female relations. They need to reassess the charter of a Catholic institution of higher education in a world that is undoubtedly more complex than the one that existed when classes were regularly conducted in Old College. It's one thing to develop in a caring Catholic environment, and quite another to be stifled by a well-meaning authority.

The University has declared this the Year of the Family, and with it, is hoping to foster the special spirit of the 'Notre Dame family' among all members of the Notre Dame/Saint Mary's community. For this, the University should be commended. I know of no other school who tries so earnestly to make her students feel such a strong sense of belonging.

However, I wonder whether all of this talk about the Notre Dame family will ever develop into anything concrete.

Saint Mary's is right across the street, and yet in my three years here, I could count the number of times that I have been on that campus on one hand. Saint Mary's students are often treated like second-class citizens, with regard to everything from purchasing football tickets, to getting coverage in this very paper. There must be a better way to unite the two campuses to truly make us a singular Notre Dame/Saint Mary's community.

Are we really a united community, or has the administration and the student body gone their separate ways? This is evident in the adoption of an honor code that students had little, if any, say in, but were then expected to follow. It's not convincing enough simply to tell us, "It's for your own good." This is not the way strong relationships are maintained.

Furthermore, the idea of residentiality does help to foster lasting relationships and a dorm identity. We are expected to live in the same place for our stay at the University. Friendships formed within the dorm have the potential to last a lifetime. The University discourages inter-dorm transfers for fear that this sense of fraternity will be lost. However, judging by all of the alumni who proudly give tours of all their former rooms to their children on football weekends, I don't think they are any the worse for the former housing arrangements. Once again, the University has some idea of how we should live, and what they say goes.

Although undergraduates number only about 8,000, it's hard to remember at times that we are indeed more than our student I.D. numbers. It would be ridiculous for me to address my sister as 104-29-2886, but the registrar's office knows us in no other way. I need my student I.D. for everything from cashing a check to eating a meal to registering for classes.

Maybe there is not a more efficient way of dealing with such a large number of students, but certainly there must be a more personal approach out there worth pursuing. The officers of this University should not have to be bureaucratic policemen, and we as young adults should not be treated like bands of unwitting children. It would be fitting that the nation's most prestigious Catholic college strive to make this the most caring place that it can without making this like Catholic grammar school revisited.

Somewhere along the way, Notre Dame has failed to keep up with the changing needs of her students. We have rules that were originally designed to ensure the best living and academic environment possible for all of Our Lady's children. However, as we approach a new decade I think it's imperative that the administration reconsider its objectives in student-student and student-University relations.

Change is never easy, especially when we fear that our identity and treasured traditions may be lost in the process. There is always a better way— And it's the responsibility of everyone at this university to help find it.

Recyclin' Irish will meet at 7 p.m. today in the Dooley Room, LaFortune. All dorm representatives and commissioners should attend.

Notre Dame Security will hold an open forum for students concerned about security today at 7 p.m. in Theodore's.

Clubs wishing to appeal the Budget Committee's decision on funding must return their appeal forms by Friday. Forms are still available at the Treasurer's Office, LaFortune, from noon to 4 p.m.

Freshmen are asked to please pick up their Freshman Registrar (Dog Book) in Room 315 LaFortune as soon as possible.

McFarlane says U.S. contributed to evolution of global power

By MICHELLE DALL

News Editor

Robert McFarlane, who served as National Security Advisor under Ronald Reagan between 1983 and 1985, spoke about the changing distribution of global power at a lecture in Washington Hall last night.

The evolution of global power, McFarlane said, "represents one of the most important ideological changes in modern history."

He used three Second-World regions to illustrate the "profound evolution" of global power: China, the Soviet Union, and Eastern Europe.

"The world is collectively moving from a period in which international tensions threatened the possible annihilation of mankind to a time in which peaceful discourse between nations in solving their differences has become the norm," he said.

McFarlane attributed this trend toward peace to several factors, including communist leaders gradually coming to the realization that alternative systems of governance have yielded more prosperity than their own. "They have awakened to the realization that the U.S. system is better than theirs in regard to new ideas, new technologies and the welfare of all its citizens," McFarlane said.

Furthermore, "(Communist) leaders have recognized the condition of their own countries is worsening, and there is no feasible way to hide this fact from their citizens," he said.

The U.S. has also contributed to this increasing level of awareness, McFarlane said. "The United States has been influential due to a conscious set of policies designed to encourage change in the USSR," he said. One of these policies, in which McFarlane himself is involved, is an investment strategy, in which the United States would invest money in businesses in the USSR. The purpose of this strategy, McFarlane said, is to demonstrate to Soviet leaders that, unless they remain open to the possibility of U.S. investment in their country, they could go down in history as presiding over the inevitable decline of Soviet global power.

While McFarlane said he was generally optimistic about the prospects of success in China and Eastern Europe, he said his confidence did not extend to the Soviet Union. He cited internal opposition by party machinery and the government establishment in both Moscow itself and the individual republics as obstacles to successful reform.

"The Soviet state must appease the status quo," according to McFarlane. The people need some assurance that their standards of living will improve over the course of their lifetimes, he said.

The inability of the government to establish a stable and reliable set of prices has undermined economic reform in the area, he said.

Another impediment to Soviet prosperity, according to McFarlane, is its Slavic history. In such a society, he explained, "Change constitutes a threat.... These people's lives, throughout history, have largely been dictated by higher authorities.... From the cradle to the grave, their decisions have basically been made for them.... When they realize they may have to compete for jobs, organize themselves into primaries for voting and discover that not everyone will automatically be guaranteed housing and food, the system doesn't seem as attractive, he said.

McFarlane said he felt the possibilities for successful reform in both China and Eastern Europe were generally optimistic. China has developed a solid strategy to improve the nation's productivity - through manufacturing, services, and - most importantly - agriculture, McFarlane said.

The main problem in China, according to McFarlane, is corruption in the public sector. McFarlane said this was the primary contributing factor in the student protests in the region last spring.

McFarlane said that, although the Chinese Army may be able to maintain order in the country for a short period, reform will eventually triumph. He said this is largely because the Chinese economy will begin to suffer as foreign countries, protesting Chinese policies, divest from the area.

McFarlane predicted that, by the turn of the century, China will adopt a mixed economy, as well as a more liberal administration.

Bostwick wins District One seat with 51% of votes

By SANDRA WIEGAND
Staff Reporter

Sophomore Lisa Bostwick was elected the new District One student senator Tuesday, receiving 51.38% of the votes.

"I'm really excited. I was expecting to have a run-off election. I thought it would be really close," Bostwick said.

The other candidates were Zachary Hudgins and Joseph Lacher. The halls in District One include: Alumni, Holy Cross, Lewis, Keenan, Sorin, Stanford, and Walsh.

Bostwick received a total of 390 of the 759 votes cast.

"One thing I was not happy about was the low turnout of voters," she said. "I wish more people took an interest; there are a lot of issues for which much more student impact is possible," she said.

Bostwick's campaign platform included a plan for an alternative meal plan, and a plan for a security escort service on campus.

The alternative meal plan would allow students to buy a lesser number of meals on campus. The present plan includes 21 meals per week; according to Bostwick, most students only eat about 14 meals in the dining halls.

In her plan for a security escort service, Bostwick urged the hall presidents of male dorms to offer their services as security escorts, stressing that the plan cannot work without student support.

As a student senator, Bostwick plans on playing a strong roll in the student government duties of providing a forum for student body discussion, helping students to obtain funding for activities, and serving as a medium between students and administration.

Hall Presidents discuss phone line and Irish Insanity

By ANGELA MCDONALD
Staff Reporter

Irish Insanity's promotion of school spirit, the HPC phone line and the Campus Challenge contest were the main topics of discussion at Tuesday's Hall Presidents' Council meeting.

Irish Insanity urged people to wear blue to this Saturday's home game, and to take advantage of the free face painting that will be offered to students from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the flag pole near the Law School Building. They also encouraged the students to support the football team by placing the posters that were distributed this week in the windows of their respective dorms.

Irish Insanity meets every Monday at 7:30 p.m. in the Montgomery Room of LaFortune.

The recent incidents of students being attacked on campus sparked the idea of HPC phone lines. This was created so that if an incident happened during the weekend, each of the hall presidents will be notified and they in turn will notify the residents of their hall.

Brian O'Gara, marketing assistant in the athletic department, discussed the campus challenge contest. The contest is geared to promote some of the sports that get little attention. "Some of our less recog-

Man who killed, boiled lover reveals locale of body parts

Associated Press

NEW YORK—A man accused of killing his girlfriend, then dismembering and boiling some of her remains, calmly told investigators where to find a bucket filled with her body parts, detectives said Tuesday.

Daniel Rakowitz, 28, awaited arraignment later Tuesday on a charge of murdering Swiss dancer Monika Beerle, said police Sgt. John Clifford, a department spokesman.

The victim's remains, reduced to a skull and bones left in a five-gallon bucket, were found in the baggage claim of the Port Authority bus terminal and handed over to the medical examiner. No findings were expected before Wednesday.

Beerle, 26, came to New York last year from St. Gallen, Switzerland, to study with the Martha Graham School of Contemporary Dance and took up residence in east Greenwich Village.

Rakowitz, a short-order cook who drifted from job to job, moved in with Beerle about two months ago and they shared the apartment with another woman, said Deputy Chief Ronald Fenrich, commander of Manhattan detectives.

He declined to say where the other woman was or what she saw.

When Beerle decided to break off with Rakowitz and told him to leave on Aug. 19, Rakowitz beat and stabbed her to death, then worked for the next week at disposing of the body, Fenrich said.

He boiled the parts to separate flesh from bone and "flushed the skin down the toilet," Clifford said. Word of the grisly killing got around the neighborhood and eventually reached police, Fenrich said.

One of Rakowitz's neighbors said Rakowitz had bragged that he would kill his girlfriend.

Each of the dorms decided on a designated night to attend a sporting event and will compete against other dorms to see who has the highest percentage of attendance.

The three dorms with the highest percentage will win sporting goods equipment for their respective dorms.

"I think it is fair to criticize, and it should be criticized, the internal political abuses within the government on how the decisions were made, but as for the motives of President Reagan, I don't think they can be criticized in the least."

McFarlane also defended his personal role in the Iran/Contra affair, and he said that former Marine Lt. Col. Oliver North was not used as a fall guy for administration officials.

"I have acknowledged my own errors, and in the case of the North trial, I have taken responsibility for whatever it was he did," McFarlane said.

McFarlane said he believes the Iran/Contra affair will not be a significant blemish on the Reagan Administration's historical legacy.

"Over time, I think that episode will not appear to be as serious a problem as in the present day."

The Reagan administration's two greatest contributions were its improvement of American economy and the reduction in world tensions, McFarlane said.

"This change that is occurring...away from a cold-war position...toward peace, and where peaceful discourse between our countries can reach peace, has proven that things have gotten better, and the Reagan administration can take credit for that, although surely much of the credit can be taken on the Soviet side," McFarlane said.

The Reagan years will also be remembered for "fixing the economy. That, too, has made a big difference in our ability to lead internationally."

The new Bush administration has "perhaps the most talented collection of advisors in the foreign policy area that we have seen for a long, long time."

McFarlane said "competence and experience makes a difference", and the Bush administration has the opportunity to make a substantial impact on foreign policy, although it is too early in his term to point to specific accomplishments.

McFarlane said speaking at a university was particularly appropriate for a former government official.

"We are privileged to live in a time of incredible change and evolution... in which the face and character of what to follow is going to vary in China, in Moscow and in Eastern Europe," McFarlane said.

"It is the students that will take part in shaping the face of change...Each will have in his own way the ability to influence what kind of relationship between the United States and these countries, which are in such flux, will take place."

McFarlane emphasized the importance of the study of comparative politics, history and economics for current students.

Notre Dame already possesses strong programs in these areas, McFarlane said.

He also said a "strong emphasis on religious training, an indoctrination to Judeo-Christian values must forever have a solid place in any institution."

McFarlane said it was important for all students to receive a strong education in these areas, as many will be future leaders of the nation. "Government is not the only place you can serve, although it is a worthy calling."

"They understand one system works better than another, and they want to be a part of the one that works better: the West."

The changes taking place in Eastern Europe are encouraging for the United States, McFarlane said.

"The United States recognizes the core problem of Soviet life today is the unworkability of its economy." He recommended joint business ventures as the best way for Americans to support the change currently underway in the Soviet Union.

ASSIGNMENT BELIZE:
TEACHING MATH MAY ALSO INVOLVE GROWING VEGETABLES TO IMPROVE STUDENTS' NUTRITION.

Teaching math or science as a Peace Corps Volunteer will develop your professional skills in the classroom and beyond. You might teach basic math to rural students in Belize... and after school set up a vegetable garden to improve nutrition. Or be assigned as a physics teacher in Lesotho. In addition, help local women market handicrafts to earn school fees. As a Peace Corps Volunteer, you will handle responsibilities and meet challenges far greater than those that might be offered in a starting position in the United States. When you return, your Peace Corps experience may open new doors to you. Educational institutions, international firms and government agencies value someone with your experience.

Hurricanes have history of threatening East Coast

Associated Press

Hurricanes that ravage the Caribbean tend to spin into the Gulf of Mexico or north into the Atlantic along the East Coast of the United States. Here is a list of some of the worst storms that, like Hugo, have threatened the Eastern seaboard:

Sept. 12-17, 1928 — Called the Lake Okeechobee hurricane, this storm killed 5,000 people in the Caribbean before moving into Florida. Lake Okeechobee, Florida's largest lake, whipped by 160 mph winds, overflowed into populated areas, killing 1,836 more people.

Sept. 21, 1938 — This fast-moving storm attacked with little warning, hitting Cape Hatteras, N.C., early in the morning. With winds clocked at more than 180 mph, it rampaged northward along the coast into New England, killing more than 600 people across seven states and destroying over 20,000 buildings.

Sept. 12-16, 1944 — When this storm struck from North Carolina to New England, 40 people were killed on land, and some 350 drowned when the high winds and seas devastated wartime shipping.

CAROL: Aug. 30, 1954 — This storm left a trail of 68 dead from Cape Hatteras to Quebec. Wind gusts of 135 mph ripped off the steeple of Boston's Old North Church, where lanterns were hung to signal Paul Revere's famous ride.

HAZEL: Oct. 12-13, 1954 — Hazel hit North and South Carolina after killing hundreds in Haiti. A total of 347 people died, 95 of them in the United States.

CONNIE: Aug. 12-13, 1955 — Hurricane Connie struck North Carolina, veered northward into Virginia and Maryland, and finally moved out to sea after brushing Long Island. Forty-three people died in the United States.

DIANE: Aug. 18-19, 1955 — Diane struck a week after Connie and although it was a weaker storm, killed 184 people, dumping heavy rains and causing extensive flooding from North Carolina to New England.

DONNA: Sept. 4-12, 1960 — Hurricane Donna crossed the Florida Keys, savaged North Carolina, bounced back to sea, and then turned again to hit New York City with the strongest winds the city had ever experienced. Manhattan was inundated with 10-foot tides. An estimated 148 people died.

DAVID: Aug. 30-Sept. 13, 1979 — Traveling from the Dominican Republic to Florida up to eastern Canada, Hurricane David killed 1,200 people, 19 of them in the United States.

GLORIA: Sept. 16-27, 1985 — Gloria struck the mid-Atlantic coast, came ashore on Long Island, N.Y., and swept through New England to Canada. More than 200,000 people in the nation's most populated area were evacuated in preparation for what was billed as "the storm of the century." However Gloria came ashore at low tide with diminished winds, so damage was moderate and only two deaths were attributed to the storm.

New bill may ease up on abortion in Pa.

Associated Press

HARRISBURG, Pa. — A coalition of pro-choice lawmakers Tuesday proposed legislation designed to strengthen women's rights to abortion in Pennsylvania and to preempt a planned attempt to toughen existing laws restricting abortion.

Pennsylvania is widely viewed as a key battleground state following the U.S. Supreme Court decision in July that gave states more leeway in addressing the abortion issue. Historically, the state General Assembly has overwhelmingly approved bills restricting abortions, but many of the provisions have been struck down in court.

The new nine-bill package includes measures calling for a state constitutional amendment giving women the right to an abortion, restoring state-subsidized funding for all "medically necessary" abortions, and wiping out an existing law requiring rape and incest victims to file a police report before receiving subsidized abortions.

The centerpiece bill, sponsored by state Rep. Karen Ritter, says government should not interfere with "a woman's personal choice to commence, prevent or continue a pregnancy or have an abortion" before the fetus is viable.

The proposal mirrors existing law in saying an abortion on a viable fetus is allowed only if the mother's life or health is threatened by the pregnancy. Under the proposal, a fetus is considered viable if the woman's doctor rules there is "a reasonable likelihood of sustained survival ... outside the woman's uterus."

In an attempt to placate some abortion opponents, Ritter said the bill would also require doctors to ask teen-age patients to notify at least one parent before having an abortion.

MAY IS JUST AROUND

Here we are talking about May and Lou hasn't played USC. Digger has yet to hold a basketball practice. And you haven't a single clue where you'll spend Spring Break.

The hard reality of life is that your senior year will be over before you realize it (Doesn't it seem like just yesterday that you were wandering around South Pend as a freshman?)

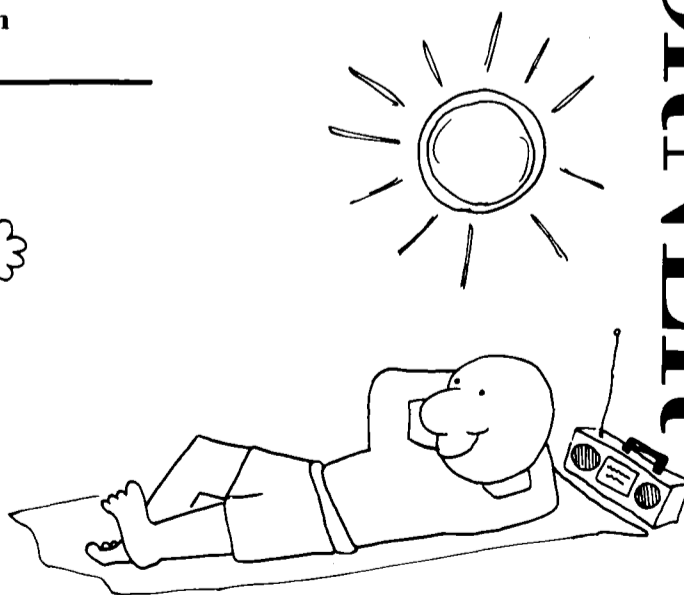

That's where we come in. Each year The May Department Stores Company hires bright, energetic, successful seniors from schools like Penn, Berkeley and Notre Dame. And we'd really like to meet you.

Wednesday, September 20, we'll be in the Dooley Room of the LaFortune Student Center (first floor) from 10:00 to 4:00.

We'll answer questions like: What will I do on a typical day? Will you train me? Can I use my major in this job?

And maybe most importantly, you'll meet a bunch of folks, who this time last year were worried about how they were going to get to the Fiesta Bowl and where they were going to spend Spring Break!

number (PIN), said Winicur. He said the registrar will mail the student's appointment time on October 16.

Winicur said the computer assigns access times when students do not have scheduled classes.

Individual departments will be responsible for handing out PIN numbers to their students, said Winicur. He said that some departments may elect to combine academic counseling with the distribution of PINs.

Certain classes will be "by permission only," meaning that students must get permission from the department offering the class. The department will give students an authorization number that is necessary when registering for permission only classes, Winicur said.

Once students have read the schedule of courses and retrieved their PIN and any necessary permission for authorization only classes, they can fill out the DART worksheet.

Winicur said the DART worksheet is designed to make using DART easier. Students write out course numbers and alternates prior to calling the system, he said.

Students are all assigned to a 15 minute session to register between 9 a.m. and 6 p.m. Students may register at their assigned time from any touchtone telephone or a terminal in the Registrar's Office, said Winicur.

Students will call DART and they will be asked to enter their nine-digit student identification number, their four-digit PIN number, and the semester code, Winicur said.

Next, students will enter the call number for each of their courses, said Winicur. He said the number will be listed in the Course Selection Booklet.

The computer will tell the student immediately whether he or she got the class or not, said Winicur. "DART will eliminate the problem of not knowing what you've got until six weeks later," Winicur said.

The computer also calculates the student's total credit hours and will not let students register for more than their college allows, Winicur said.

If students are unable to register at the assigned time or want to add or drop a class, they may call back DART during the unrestricted call-back times—Monday-Friday 7 p.m. to 2 a.m. beginning the first day of registration and continuing through the first week of spring semester, said Winicur.

Winicur said that students may not use the call-back option until after their scheduled time. According to Winicur, the computer will not allow a student access until their scheduled time.

Each day during registration the courses and sections which are closed, added or reopened will be published in The Observer, in the Registrar's Office and in the departmental offices, said Winicur.

The DART system has several features that will require some changes in the way that courses are set up, said Winicur in a letter to department Chairmen.

The DART system will automatically cut off enrollment at the maximum set by the Department, said Winicur. He said that Chairmen will not have the chance to review the class list as in the past.

In the letter Winicur said DART will automatically allocate the students into sections in multi-section courses. He said it will no longer be necessary to use checkmarking for multi-section courses.

Winicur said if Departments still want to maintain control over students who enroll in a course they may designate the class "Registration by Permission."

"I won't approve a permission only course unless there is a good reason," said Winicur. He said he expects there will be less "permission only" courses than there were checkmarked classes in the past.

The letter also said that DART can automatically exclude any group of students from a course. For example, a class that requires a pre-requisite or is for seniors only.

"We will need the cooperation of departments and students," said Winicur. "We need people to tell us how to make it (DART) better. We want feedback from those who have tried the system."

After registration both students and their advisors will receive a paper copy of the student's schedule, said Winicur. "Anytime a student wants to see what courses they registered for, they can call up the system," he said.

Winicur said that he will ask students to write their final schedules on a form so that his office will have the schedules on paper in case any problems should arise.

He said that this will probably be the only semester that students have to make a hard copy as this is the first time the computer has been used for registration.

Winicur stressed the importance of students attending the scheduled video presentation and reading the information in the Course Selection booklet as the system will be easier to use if students know how to use it correctly.

Fred Krouse, spokesman at Brevard County's emergency management office in Rockledge, Fla., said volunteers were getting 100 telephone calls an hour.

Cruise ships steamed out of the way, while American Airlines' heavy Caribbean service, which uses San Juan as its hub, was suspended.

In San Juan, National Guardsmen with automatic rifles patrolled streets to help police with rescue and to prevent looting. Police spokesman Tony Santiago said 40 businesses reported looting, much of which occurred at the height of the storm. Police had arrested 30 people on looting charge, he said.

Looting by machete-wielding mobs was also reported on the island of St. Thomas in the U.S.

Virgin Islands.

Relief officials asked for cots and plastic sheetings to use for shelters for the thousands of islanders whose homes were crumpled by Hugo, the fourth hurricane of the season and the first to hit Puerto Rico since 1956.

Coast Guard vessels from Puerto Rico would scour the waters off the island because of reports "there are a lot of people stranded (on boats) out in the water," said Coast Guard Lt. Stan Douglas.

Hugo walloped the northeastern part of the island, then skirted its populous northern coast on Monday. It churned on to the northwest and toward open water. It whirled past but missed the Dominican Republic.

At least 25 people in the Caribbean died from the storm, said Cizanette Rivera, a spokeswoman for the Civil Defense in Puerto Rico.

prospects of success are also encouraging, according to McFarlane. This is due to the region's solid infrastructure and the availability of Western aid. A literate population comprised largely of relatively skilled workers who are well-educated will also aid the effort, said McFarlane.

As a result of the changing global power structures, McFarlane also predicted the Soviet Union's international influence will decline and the United States will emerge as the sole super-power by the turn of the century. He questioned whether the United States was ready for this power shift and also wondered how foreign countries - particularly U.S. allies - would react to this situation. "Will they be comfortable with the U.S. as the biggest tiger on the block?" he asked.

Foremost among these priorities are the Third World debt crisis, the drug problem, the nuclear issue and environmental concerns, he said.

McFarlane has worked in diplomatic and policy spheres for the past 30 years. He served as a commander in Vietnam, as the military assistant to former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, as a senior staff advisor to the Senate Armed Services Committee, as an assistant to Alexander Haig in the State Department, and as a deputy advisor under National Security Advisor William Clark.

He is currently the director of the Strategic Policy Discussion Group, a bi-partisan group of international affairs experts and statesmen that provides policy recommendations for deterring nuclear war to the Bush administration.

McFarlane's lecture was sponsored by the Ideas and Issues Committee of the Student Union Board

Shakespeare translation takes to the streets

Recently it has been brought to my attention by a professor of English that Barron's, the company that prints guide-books to just about everything, has unveiled the latest marvel of the age: street-English translations of Shakespeare's major works. The brochure, which pushes these latest capitulations to the world of literary barbarism, claims that the Barron play translations, free of 'confusing' meter, verse and archaic language, are in use in a high percentage of American high schools in lieu of the real thing.

Ruminating over the logical conclusions of such a step by the good people at Barron's, I came upon an interesting thought. If Shakespeare may be thus rendered 'easy to digest' for the general public, play by play, why not make it even easier to digest by creating 'regional translations' and combine all his plays and characters in one small volume? As a result, people would really be able to feel that the events therein were taking place right in their own colorful environs, say, for instance, in the apartment hallway or the room of some noisy neighbors. The language, moreover, would be in their own tongue, and much tedious reading would be spared by the synthesis of plays. As a case in point, a Canadian edition would go something like this: "It's the winter of our discontent, you hoser, eh?"

Very often I have been wrongly accused of having a 'New Jersey' accent, when in fact no such thing exists. Back before the dawn of history, immigrants from the Far East, namely Brooklyn and Staten Island, invaded New Jersey, destroying the Garden State's semantic splendor. Thus, the accent would better be labelled

Glenn G. Fogarty

With No Apologies

the 'New York Metropolitan Area' or 'Brooklyn' accent. Feeling superbly qualified in the nuances of this dialect, I have set about writing, in hope of securing big bucks from Barron's, the greatest translation of them all, 'Shakespeare in Brooklyn' and am releasing this excerpt to whet the appetites of those untold millions who have been waiting for something just like it.

(Scene: Somewhere in Brooklyn. Enter Hamlet.)

Hamlet: Is I to be, or is I ain't? That's what I's askin. Is it better to sits here like a couch potato or somethin', or go down like to Prospect Park and mug those two little punks, Rosen and Gildenstein? Whats do I do, you know? This conscience stuff makes....

(Enter Macbeth)
Macbeth: Life ain't nothin' but a walkin' shadow, a lousy actor who struts around like he was John Travolta or somethin', worries a lot, and then ya don't hear of him no more. It's a tale told by a guy from Bedford-Stuyvesant, chock-full of noise and stuff, signifyin' nothin'.

Hamlet: Yo, you in the plaid dress. Who in the hell is you? Like, dis is my solioqueasy, ya know.

Macbeth: It's in the script, pal. Barronspeare says I's supposed to come in. Chill, man.

Hamlet: Well, whad'ys expects me to do. It's my big scene, likes. Bys the way, yous speakin' it all wrong. Ya gotta do it with feelin'. Dis is hi-cultoor stuff, ya knows.

(Enter Ophelia)
Ophelia: My lawd, I gots stuff of yus that I's been waitins to delivus.

Hamlet: You ain't supposed to come in yet. I ain't done! Go down, Gina, and do some more manicures on those babes with the blue hair.

Ophelia: You know, Vinny, I is gettin' sick of bein' yelled at by youse. I is gonna be an artiste, a great actress, like Madonnas or somethin'. Ya know?

Hamlet: You? You are nothin'. Nothin' but a big mouth with teased hair.

Ophelia: Just go on with da play, Vinny.

Hamlet: Okay. Yo, Ophelia, babe, gets yusef to a convent. And get that mouse out of ya hair. Go to the Joisey shore or Lawng lliind or somethin'.

Ophelia: Vinny, ya know, you is gonna be the next Lorance Ollyvey or somethin'.

Hamlet: Who's he? Was he the guy on Cheers?

Macbeth: Who's this?
(Enter Richard III)

Richard: Now is the winter of our discontent made glorious summer by this son of York.

And all the clouds that loured upon our house

In the deep bosom of the ocean buried.

Macbeth: Just what, ya know, do ya think he says by that?

Hamlet: I ain't got no clue, what, so, or ever.

Ophelia: He's like speakin' in eye-amm-buck pentimimeters or somethin'. Barronspeare says we ain't to do that, you know?

Richard: (Turns to Ophelia) Was ever woman in this humor wooed? Was ever woman in this humor won?

Ophelia: Yo, Vinny! I thinks this creep is makin' a pass at me or somethin'. Call Bellevue.

Richard: Have done thy charms, thou hateful moussed hag.

(Enter Ralph Kramden and Ed Norton, from The Honeymooners)

Ed: Hey, Hey, Ralphy boy! Who are these people?

Ralph: Probably Alice's friends, Norton. One of these days... Alice... Pow! Right in the Kisser!

Hamlet: This ain't in the script! Let's get out of here, ya know!

(Exeunt Hamlet, Macbeth, Ophelia)

I couldn't think of a good ending, so I'm stopping here for now. That is, until a big check from the people at Barron's (those literary dynamos) arrives in the mail.

SMC students unfairly afflicted by vaccination problem

Dear Editor:

On Sept. 8, The Observer ran a front page headline concerning the measles emergency and free immunizations offered at Notre Dame. Being a Saint Mary's senior nursing student, I have never felt more compelled to write and express my frustration at the way this emergency was and is continuing to be taken care of.

Since the CDC determined that "more than 10,000 cases of measles have been reported (key word here) in the U.S. since January," perhaps Health Services at Saint Mary's might have slightly anticipated an outbreak. Granted, a notice was sent home to all students alerting us to have our measles vaccinations updated. That's great.

My concern is for how the emergency is being handled now. Health Services offered free vaccinations last Monday for an hour and a half for 1800 women. When I proceeded to call for information, I was told that they are "Out...today and tomorrow, and you can't go to Notre Dame either." Now it's going to cost us $30.00 and we don't know when we'll have them--maybe sometime next week. "First come, first serve."

We are a community, or so I thought. Why can't Notre Dame and Saint Mary's Health Services work together on this issue? I don't mind paying the extra $25.00 for the football tickets, but $30.00 because Saint Mary's wasn't, as one nurse at Saint Mary's said, "lucky enough, like Notre Dame was, to receive ample amounts of the vaccine." To my knowledge, Saint Mary's hasn't had an outbreak yet, but it's only a matter of time.

We socialize, take classes, communicate, and have family over at Notre Dame. Instead of having more luck, let's just prevent the spread by lengthening the vaccination times available and continuing to provide current, accurate information so rumors of quarantine won't continue.

Or haven't you heard the latest?

BATTLE SCARS

'The movies don't give you any sense of the terror and the fatalism of combat. They certainly don't give you any sense of what it's like to kill another human being.'

ROBYN SIMMONS
assistant accent editor

John Powers still remembers Sept. 1, 1939—the day World War II broke out.

"I was just a kid pushing twelve, but that's the kind of thing you don't forget," he said. "The thing was so encompassing and millions died that a kid who was 11 pushing 12 was in it before it was over."

By the end of the war, Powers was a 17-year-old paratrooper. "Paratroopers tend to be very disciplined units," he explained. "I did it rather well, and that's what bothers you for the rest of your life."

Now an adjunct associate professor of American Studies and executive editor of the South Bend Tribune, Powers is one of several Notre Dame faculty members who served in World War II. The experiences Powers recalls from the war hardly resemble the glorified tales of courage depicted in the John Wayne war movies.

"[The movies] don't give you any sense of the terror and the fatalism of combat. They certainly don't give you any sense of what it's like to kill another human being," said Powers.

Howard Saz, a professor of biological sciences, also had war experiences which in no way parallel Hollywood's treatment of World War II. Saz was missing in action (MIA) for four months and a prisoner of war (POW) for six months in a German camp.

Saz was captured along with six other members of his infantry unit in late 1944 close to the French-Austrian border. "Our patrol started to come through this opening. . .the Germans were on both flanks upon a hill, a platoon of them, and they pinned us down. So we destroyed our radio and we were captured."

For any American soldier captured by the Germans, the outlook was certainly grim, but Saz was in even greater danger: he was Jewish.

"One of the first things I did was to destroy my dog tags (because) they have your religion on it," said Saz. "I claimed I was Presbyterian; I didn't even know what it meant."

"One of the people was a fellow from the Bronx, New York, who unfortunately was also Jewish," he said. "They interrogated all of us, and we all went to prison camp together except for him. We never saw him again. Maybe he didn't throw away his dog tags—I don't know."

WORLD W*A*R

THE 50th ANNIVERSARY

"We were moved around and moved in those big freight cars. They took us to Stalag 12A and Stalag 3A. Stalag 3A was close to the Polish border. And they actually marched us, and this was in the winter."

"They marched us by foot to Stalag 3B which was a little bit south of Berlin," said Saz. "I know it took many days. I don't know whether it was one week or two weeks. . .a lot of prisoners never made it."

Saz was still in Stalag 3B when President Franklin D. Roosevelt died. "That's when the German guards came in and announced to us that America's number one Jewish gangster had died. They called him Rosenfeld instead of Roosevelt," he said.

Both Saz and Powers have vivid recollections of the end of the war in both the European and Pacific theaters.

Saz and his fellow prisoners were liberated when the Russian tanks rolled into their camp. "They held us for a couple of weeks before they made contact with the American lines, and they treated us very well," said Saz. "They were very sympathetic."

"They finally did make contact to the American lines. . .I was under 90 pounds. The Germans barely fed us, and when we got to the American lines we were deloused and our clothes were burned."

Saz was taken to Camp Lucky Strike in Southern France before returning home. "They wouldn't take us home because we were so malnourished," he said. "They were afraid that people in the states would see what we looked like. We finally put on enough weight and they shipped us home."

Thousands of miles away and a few months later, the war ended in Japan.

"Most of us—let me shock you—welcomed the news of the bomb," said Powers. "The war was over and we felt very relieved."

"When we saw Japan and what they had waiting for us, it reinforced our view that we were glad they dropped the bomb," said Powers.

"Those of us who were young enough to stay for the occupation had a pretty terrible opinion about the Japanese," said Powers. "But when you stay two and a half years. . .(we) wound up with a very interesting love/hate relationship with the Japanese."

Now, almost 50 years after the war's end, the images of World War II still remain in the memories of those who fought in it. For these men, the reality of war proved to be more horrible than any battle recreated for the big screen.

"The best way to see the downside of war is to look at a soldier that just stepped on a land mine," said Powers. "You either start to believe in God or blow your brains out. And both happened."

"We all thought we were all doing the right thing," said Powers. "Basically, the whole country was for it, the whole mood was different. . .Maybe the way we look at 'Nam is the way we should look at war. It's just a bad way to settle anything."

Red Sox 6, Blue Jays 3

The Boston Red Sox, unable to defeat Toronto at home since 1987, beat the first-place Blue Jays as Nick Esasky homered during a five-run third inning.

Toronto had its three-game winning streak stopped and its lead in the American League East cut to two games over Baltimore. The Red Sox won their fourth straight and pulled to 8 1/2 back.

White Sox 4, Royals 2

Reliever Jeff Montgomery's

throwing error helped the Chicago White Sox rally for three runs in the ninth inning and beat Kansas City, dropping the Royals 3 1/2 games back in the American League West.

Kansas City fell farther behind first-place Oakland, which beat Cleveland 4-2 in 10 innings. California won and stayed in second place, 2 1/2 games back.

Angels 6, Twins 3

Bert Blyleven pitched eight strong innings and the California Angels remained 2 1/2 games back in the American League West, beating the Minnesota Twins.

Chili Davis hit a three-run homer as California won for the eighth time in 11 games and kept pace with first-place Oakland. The Twins were mathematically eliminated from the race.

Rangers 5, Mariners 2

Fred Manrique's tiebreaking, two-run double in the eighth inning sent the Texas Rangers over the Seattle Mariners.

Texas' Nolan Ryan got a no-decision, giving up two runs on three hits in 7 1-3 innings. The all-time strikeout leader fanned just two, his lowest total since Aug. 15, 1988.

Rugby team loses, ties Wolverines

The weekend in Ann Arbor was a huge success for the football team and the students who roadtripped to the game. For the Rugby Club, though, the weekend wasn't as good as they had hoped. The A side finished in a 10-10 tie with the Wolverines while the B side lost 18-12. Michigan was supposed to put up three sides against the Irish, but they could only manage two teams.

Mike Kamradt Club Corner

The A game started out promising for Notre Dame, but didn't end that way.

"We were disappointed in the quality of their team," said club president and A side starter Mike Smiggen. "We put some big hits on them early and we intimidated them."

Bob McGuire scored the first four point try early in the match. An omen of bad things to come happened ten minutes into the match when starter Mike Smiggen was hurt and taken to the hospital. Later in the half Vic "Hardo" Pisani bulled his way for a four point score. Shaun McNamarra added the two point conversion kick to make the score 10-0.

The score was the same as the second 40 minute half got under way, but things soon turned against the Irish. The main blow was delivered not by the Wolverine attack, but by injuries.

"We lost three more starters to injury. Without these key positions we didn't have the team we thought we needed to compete with them," said Smiggen.

A few penalties swung the momentum in Michigan's favor and the Wolverines were able to scratch for the tie.

The B side lost a hard fought battle 18-12. Since Michigan couldn't put up a C side, Notre Dame played its B side in the first half and the C in the second. Smiggen was pleased with the second game.

"It was a good experience for our guys especially because it was the first action in a real game for a lot of them. They just out-experienced us."

Mike O'Connell scored for the B side in the first half.

The Rugby Club will have its first home match of the year this Sunday at Stepan Field at 2 p.m. The Irish will send three sides against top five rated Bowling Green.

"We're looking forward to playing them," commented Smiggen. "Before last year they'd been to the nationals two years in a row."

After last weekend's 8th place finish in the 14 team Irish Invitational, the key word for the Sailing Club this weekend was improvement. The Irish took great strides to becoming a force on the water with a 3rd place finish in the Davis Cup Regatta at the University of Iowa and a 2nd overall finish at the Forrester Memorial Regatta at Lake Forest College (north of Chicago).

At the Iowa regatta, the Irish finished behind Purdue and Western Michigan. The Irish beat out Wisconsin for 4th place and also placed ahead of Michigan (what else will we beat them in?), Iowa State, and Illinois Wesleyan.

The A team, which finished 2nd overall, was skippered by Paige Cooper and had Tom Wiltberger for the crew.

"I really hoped we'd do well and I was excited we did as well as we did," said Cooper.

The B team, skippered by Lisa Fox and crewed by Moira Sullivan, finished 4th in the two day event. After four races on Saturday, Notre Dame was 4th overall.

"Saturday was a tough day to sail because there was light air," observed Cooper. Sunday proved to be a better day as the sunny skies of Saturday were accompanied by better winds. The Irish did well enough in the 5 races to improve to a 3rd place overall finish and take home a trophy.

Notre Dame also sent two teams to the regatta at Lake Forest. Notre Dame brought home a 2nd place finish after being edged out by Wisconsin by 3 points. The Irish finished ahead of Marquette, Lake Forest and Wabash. Skipper Watts Hudgens and crew Kathleen Hallorhan brought home a first place in the A division. Margie Meagher (skipper) and Chris Knapp (crew) finished 3rd overall in the B division.

"We expected to do well," said Hudgens. "This was the first regatta that Lake Forest has had and it wasn't as big as the regatta at Iowa."

The Sailing club will hope to continue its success this weekend as they host Michigan and Western Michigan in preparation for their next big regatta at Michigan on October 1. Hudgens thinks that the past weekend will be important to the future success of the Sailing Club.

"We're getting people with experience in racing and that will be a key in the future."

The Crew Team will have its Alumni row this Saturday. The first big regatta of the year will be the Head of the Ohio on Saturday, September 30th in Pittsburgh.

gain 99 yards on 16 rushes.

It's the physical strength of Michigan State that impresses Holtz.

"I don't know of any team that's so strong year in and year out," said Holtz. "We know they'll control the line of scrimmage."

The Notre Dame lines may have something to say about that.

Notre Dame has a couple of winning streaks on the line Saturday. Dating back to last year, the Irish have won 14 consecutive games for the sixth-longest winning string in school history. The record is a 21-game streak from 1946 to 1948.

The Irish also have won 12 home games in a row. The last time they lost at Notre Dame Stadium was a 24-19 decision to eventual national champion Penn State in the last home game of the 1986 season. Notre Dame has a 15-3 home record during the Holtz tenure.

trampled for a total of 146 yards on 38 carries for a 3.8 average, including 80 yards on 20 carries against the much heralded Michigan defensive line. Not only is Johnson the Irish leading ground gainer but he is once again resuming the role of the go-to man on the goaline situations. Johnson has plowed over the touchdown line twice this season and is on the track to lead the Irish in touchdowns for the second straight season. Last year, Johnson plunged in 11 touchdowns, four more than any other Irish player. But Johnson's duties do not end on the field.

"No doubt, he is the guy who everyone looks to because he has been in all the big games," gleeed Strong. "He is the spokesman of the group. He is a very mature person on and off the field."

There is little question about Johnson's importance to the 1989 squad. But what would happen if Johnson could not fulfill his duties? Coming into the season, the Irish coaching staff was looking to junior Ryan Mihalko to fill the second team slot upon hearing that Braxton Banks was not physically fit to play. However, the 6-2, 234 pound New Hampshire native has not quite nailed down the slot. In fact he has only carried the ball once in two games.

"What we are doing right now is rotating guys," said Strong. "You could say that the search is still on. Mihalko is running some second team but we tried Reggie Brooks and Rusty Setzer today at fullback. We are still looking for the right chemistry, someone to be productive. Nobody has come to the forefront as of yet and said 'this is my job, this is my position.'"

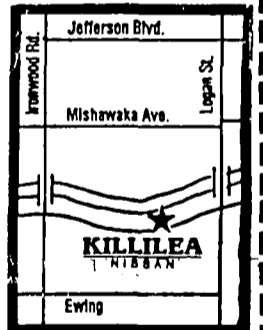

At the tailback position, Strong is faced with a pleasurable dilemma. Strong has the privilege to call on the elusive Reggie Watters or the more physical Rodney Culver to fill the slot vacated by the talented Mark Green. At this point in the season, Watters is first on the Irish depth chart and deservedly so. In the Virginia game, the Harrisburg Pa. native scampered for 80 yards on only 12 carries while scoring one touchdown. As for Culver, the hard-nose tailback has rumbled for 82 yards on 16 carries against the Irish's two opponents. Although Watters and Culver may battle for the starting spot the entire year, they will undoubtedly combine to provide the consistency and dependability that Strong is longing for.

Anthony Johnson and the rest of the Irish backfield were successful against Michigan but will have their work cut out for them as they face Michigan State Saturday. The Spartan defense allowed only 53 rushing yards against Miami (Ohio) last weekend.

Taking it on the run ND depends on its backs

By BOB MITCHELL
Sports Writer

It was 6:25 p.m. on Cartier field and Coach Holtz had just dismissed the players from practice when offensive coordinator and backfield coach Jim Strong called the running backs over to the side for a small talk. Or that is what it appeared to be. Within minutes all the running backs were hurling their bodies at tackling dummies and landing flat on their stomachs. So much for the notion that running backs have it easy.

"Here at Notre Dame, we strive that they become better players without the ball," explained Strong. "We work each week so that the individual gets better and as each player gets better the team gets better."

So far this season, the Notre Dame backfield has done quite well with the ball. In the first two games the running backs have accounted for 513 of the 696 total offensive yards, including 213 out of 219 total offensive yards in the Michigan contest. One wonders if the Irish backfield can keep carrying the offensive load.

"When you are a running football team you should be productive," said Strong, who is in his second year at Notre Dame. "Our players are willing to do anything it takes to win, if it is a running back gaining 100 yards or laying three critical blocks. Whatever our role is we must execute."

At this early stage of the season the lead executioner seems to be tri-captain/fullback Anthony Johnson. Johnson, renowned for his bulldozing running style and quiet demeanor on and off the field, is the leading rusher in the Irish backfield except for quarterback Tony Rice. Johnson has

Mets mark Gooden's return with 5-2 win over Chicago

Associated Press

CHICAGO — Gary Carter hit his first home run in five months and Dwight Gooden earned his first major-league save as the New York Mets kept their slim title hopes alive Tuesday with a 5-2 victory over the Chicago Cubs.

The victory ended a three-game losing streak and pulled the third-place Mets within 5 1/2 games of the first-place Cubs in the National League East.

Bob Ojeda, 13-10, pitched five innings. Gooden, who came off the disabled list two weeks ago, pitched the final four. Mets manager Davey Johnson benched Darryl Strawberry and Kevin McReynolds for leaving the dugout in the ninth inning of Monday night's loss. Keith Miller replaced Strawberry and hit a solo homer in the third.

Cardinals 5, Expos 0

Bob Tewksbury, recalled from the minors Sept. 2, pitched a four-hitter and singled in a run as second-place St. Louis moved within four games of Chicago.

The Cardinals have 11 games left, including three with the Cubs in St. Louis to finish the season. The fourth-place Expos remained seven games behind Chicago.

Padres 5, Reds 1

Rookie Andy Benes won his fifth straight decision as surging San Diego helped its cause in the West by beating punchless Cincinnati.

The victory, coupled with Houston's 3-0 loss to Atlanta, gave San Diego sole possession of second place. The Padres and Astros entered play five games behind front-running San Francisco, which played Los Angeles in a late game.

Braves 3, Astros 0

Gary Eave, making his first major-league start, outpitched 20-game winner Mike Scott as Atlanta topped Houston, ending the Astros' five-game winning streak.

Pirates 4, Phillies 2

Jose Lind and Gary Redus had three hits apiece as Pittsburgh won for the ninth time in 10 games.

Lind had two RBIs and Redus scored two runs in support of Jeff Robinson, 7-11. Robinson allowed five hits in five innings. Bill Landrum, the fourth Pittsburgh pitcher, worked the ninth for his 24th save.

A's 4, Indians 2

Dave Stewart must be wondering what it's going to take to win one more game. So is Dennis Eckersley.

For the second straight time, Eckersley blew a chance in the ninth inning for Stewart's 20th victory of the season and 100th of his career.

He's no dummy: Perles won't kick to Rocket

Michigan State football coach George Perles has a pretty good idea about his kickoff strategy for this weekend.

After watching Notre Dame's Raghib "Rocket" Ismail score two touchdowns in last Saturday's 24-19 Irish win over Michigan, the Spartan coach has all but made up his mind.

"The question arises, 'Are you going to kick it off to Rocket Ismail?' Of course I'm not," said Perles. "I've seen enough from that last game."

Perles did agree with Michigan coach Bo Schembechler's decision to kick it off to Ismail again in the second half after the Wolverines had cut Notre Dame's lead to 17-13.

Ismail returned the ensuing kickoff 92 yards for another Irish score, and Schembechler has been criticized for not calling a squib kick in that instance.

"If you ask me would I have kicked it to him (Ismail) again like Bo did, I probably would have," said Perles. "I wouldn't think he had a magic wand and could do it every time."

Holtz used Tuesday's press conference as an opportunity to praise the entire kickoff return team, which also includes Pat Eilers, Frank Jacobs, Anthony Johnson, Eric Jones, Scott Kowalkowski, Ryan Mihalko, Stan Smagala, Michael Smalls, Irv Smith and Shawn Smith.

"They really take pride in what they do," said Holtz, "and if you have an outstanding returner, the rest of the football players are anxious to block because they know there's a chance something good will happen."

The Notre Dame-Michigan State contest will mark the homecoming of Jeff Pearson, the former Irish offensive guard who transferred to the East Lansing campus.

Pearson started as a sophomore in 1987 on a senior-dominated offensive line that helped lead the Irish to an 8-4 record and Cotton Bowl appearance. He left for Michigan State the next year, citing personal reasons.

"There were two seniors on the second team that year, but he started for us," said Irish coach Lou Holtz. "I think that says it enough, when you start on a team that goes to the Cotton Bowl with four seniors on the line."

Forced to sit out the 1988 season as a transfer, Pearson has moved to center at Michigan State. Perles calls the 6-foot-3, 265-pound junior the strongest player on his team. According to Perles, Pearson can bench-press up to 500 pounds.

Michigan State comes into this weekend as something of a mystery team. It's tough to rate a squad when its only game has come against a team as weak as Miami of Ohio.

The Spartans' statistics certainly looked impressive in their 49-0 season-opening win. Starting tailback Blake Ezor gained 130 yards on 18 carries, and reserve Scott Selzer came off the sidelines to
