Bush budget to reduce ND financial aid

By JESSICA ZIEMBROSKI
News Writer

Students at Notre Dame and around the country could experience a drain on their financial aid this year due to the cuts in several programs, including the Pell Grant, as a result of President Bush's federal college budget cuts.

Joe Russo, director of financial aid at Notre Dame says "though it is a little premature to say to what extent the campus will be affected, the less than adequate funding from the Federal government that began three years ago continues."

The budget, which Bush approved November 21, could reduce federal program allocations for students by as much as $96 million, according to an article in U. Magazine. At Notre Dame, all five of the major financial aid programs will be cut, according to Russo, which include the Pell grant, the Stafford loan, the Perkins grant, the Supplementary Educational Opportunity grant and the work-study program.

Specifically, the cuts which

Report recommends changes in SYR policy

By KELLEY TUTHILL
News Editor

A Student Government report suggests several changes in the all-hall semi-formal policy, including a recommendation that students be allowed to drink alcoholic beverages in the hallways of their dorms at the dances.

Recommendations from the report include the following:

- The University should re-evaluate its commitment to the recommendations of the Task Force on Whole Health and the Use and Abuse of Alcohol (spring, 1988).

- As part of freshmen orientation at the University and hall level, there shall be a non-alcoholic semi-formal for only freshmen hosted by one to four halls within one month of the beginning of the fall semester.

- News rules be developed by the Office of Student Affairs to recognize and address cases of severe alcohol abuse at semi-formals.

- Halls should be permitted one on-campus semi-formal in the fall, and if they can get the minimum required attendance, two in the spring.

- A compromise between the students and the Administration be worked out to allow students to have drinks in the halls on the night of semi-formals.

On Monday the committee submitted the report to the Office of Student Affairs and the Student Senate. It will be presented to the Hall Presidents' Council tonight and on April 18 it goes to the Campus Life Council, according to Mike Carrigan, chairman of the year-long report.

A major issue brought up in the report was quality of male and female relations at Notre Dame. This issue came forth in a mail survey of 400 students representing a balance of years

The Observer/ Bradford J. Boehm in school, men and women, and majors.

When asked to rate the quality of male-female interaction the students' response was the following: one percent said it was very good; 19.6 percent circled good; 45.7 percent responded fair; 24.9 percent said it was poor; 7.5 percent circled very poor.

Another question asked juniors and seniors if the recent policy changes had had a positive or negative effect on semi-formals. Overall 8.8 percent said there was a positive effect; 86.3 said there was a negative effect; 4.8 percent had no opinion.

The report concluded that students believe "The responsible social drinking aspect of semi-formals has, in some respects, been replaced by closet alcohol abuse."

The rector survey, a three page essay-style survey, was returned by fourteen of the twenty six rectors. According to the report, "the rectors expressed a practical, if not enthusiastic, support of semi-formals in general."

The report concluded that although rectors are not enthusiastic about semi-formals, most see them as an opportunity for students to socialize, date and build hall unity. They also believe that semi-formals are an opportunity for positive interaction between males and females.

Finally, the report found that most rectors are happy with the present restrictions on semi-formals and have seen improvements in the quality of semi-formals in recent years.

Although most rectors are happy with only one semi-formal in the dorms a semester, the overwhelming majority of students said they would attend more, according to the report.

Junior Jim Blum served as the vice-chairman, and juniors Fred Tombar, Mick Meyer and Lora Kirchofer also worked on the report, said Carrigan.

Dark horse candidate sidetracks novelist Llosa in close Peruvian presidential race

LIMA, Peru (AP) — Novelist Mario Vargas Llosa, once considered a sure bet to become Peru's next president, has found himself sidetracked by the "Fujimori phenomenon."

Alberto Fujimori, the son of Japanese immigrants and a political unknown until a month ago, forced the country's most famous novelist into a runoff and is now favored to win the presidency.

Public opinion analysts say Fujimori's strong second-place finish in Sunday's election reflected Peruvians' alienation from the traditional political parties and their desire for "miraculous, painless" solutions to the country's ills.

"It was not a rational vote. It was a protest vote against the other candidates," said Alfredo Torres, media director for APOYO, a market research firm.

Fujimori, a 51-year-old agricultural engineer, received 29 percent of the vote Sunday to 33.9 percent for the 54-year-old Vargas Llosa, according to unofficial returns. The writer needed a majority of the votes cast to avoid a runoff, which now most likely will take place in early June.

Luis Alva Castro, candidate of the governing left-of-center Aprista Party, received 16.4 percent. Two Marxist candidates collected 11 percent of the vote between them. The remaining votes were divided among four minor candidates and blank and void ballots.

Official results will not be available for weeks. But the unofficial results represented a slap in the face to Vargas Llosa, who campaigned hard for two years and as late as mid-February had more than 50 percent support in polls.

Campaigning on a shoestring budget, Fujimori shot up from less than one percent in polls six weeks ago to nearly surpass Vargas Llosa.

Vargas Llosa's campaign often seemed like a crusade. Running on a free-market platform, he harshly attacked the "collectivist" programs of President Alan Garcia and the proposals of leftist candidates.

Many Peruvians blame Garcia for Peru's worst economic crisis of the century and the growing political violence that is tearing apart this Andean country of 22 million.

Inflation is running at more than 2,000 percent annually. More than 18,000 people, most of them civilians, have died violently in a decade-long struggle between Shining Path guerrillas and security forces.

Vargas Llosa was asking for a clear mandate from Peruvians to carry out radical reforms aimed at undoing two decades of socialist policies he blames for Peru's stagnation.

"I have put aside my career because I think there is a real chance to change the history of Peru," Vargas Llosa said in the closing days of the campaign.

Analysts say Peruvian voters, dismayed by two decades of economic decline and falling living standards, were looking for someone with "magical" solutions to the country's problems.

The spotlight fell on Fujimori, they say, after voters in recent weeks began to fear the economic shock therapy and harsh austerity measures advocated by Vargas Llosa.

"No one likes to go to the dentist even when his tooth hurts. And that's what Vargas Llosa offered," Manuel d'Ornellas, editor of the Expresso newspaper, wrote in a column Monday.

"Terrified by the government's disgraceful propaganda campaign against the so-called shock, many people have fled Vargas Llosa's proposed surgery to take shelter in Fujimori's oriental nirvana," d'Ornellas said.

Fujimori is an agronomist and former university rector. His campaign has stressed "honor, technology and work," qualities many here associate with his Japanese ancestry. Peru has a large number of people who trace their roots to Japanese immigrants.

Public opinion analysts say Fujimori has awakened hopes in voters that he will be able to attract massive Japanese aid and investment if elected.

Postal Service should face the FAX

It's amazing what can be done with a telephone today. They're in cars! They're in airplanes! And while I was in Washington D.C. last week, I saw a phone on a tour bus! Now there are video phones. With a new little gadget that is out now, you can find out who is calling before you answer. Even phone sex, (I don't want to know). But what I find really interesting is the FAX machine.

Watch out U.S. Postal Service, now there is tele-mail. For the price of a phone call, you can send pages over the phone lines to anywhere in the world. Rather than having to wait three days for a letter, it can come instantly.

This came in handy last year while I was in Angers, France. There were so many questions to be answered around registration time, making answering them over the phone unthinkable, that we just wrote all our questions down, FAXed them to the Foreign Study Office, and they FAXed us the answers back the next day. Think about all the money we saved.

Think about the way this is going to hurt the Postal Service. I remember the good old days when a local letter was delivered the next day. Now with FAXs they have no incentive to deliver mail promptly. Their reasoning will probably be "If it was important, they would have FAXed it."

With the drop in the amount of mail to deliver, the USPS will be forced to raise prices, not that they haven't already, to continue the present service. I wouldn't mind if they raised prices as long as service improved or at least stayed the same, but it doesn't.

And even worse, door to door delivery is being stopped. New neighborhoods are required to put in little postal centers where all the mail for the area is delivered to post office boxes. If I'm going to buy a new house and pay a hundred thousand dollars, I want my mail delivered to the door.

Now with this new wonderful invention, I won't even have to open the front door to get my mail. I'll just have a little black box with a red flag sitting next to my telephone for the FAXs to fall into. How convenient!

FAXs are everywhere! Even on the "Simpson's," they were FAXing photos of Homer Simpson and a bellydancer. I hadn't thought about pictures.

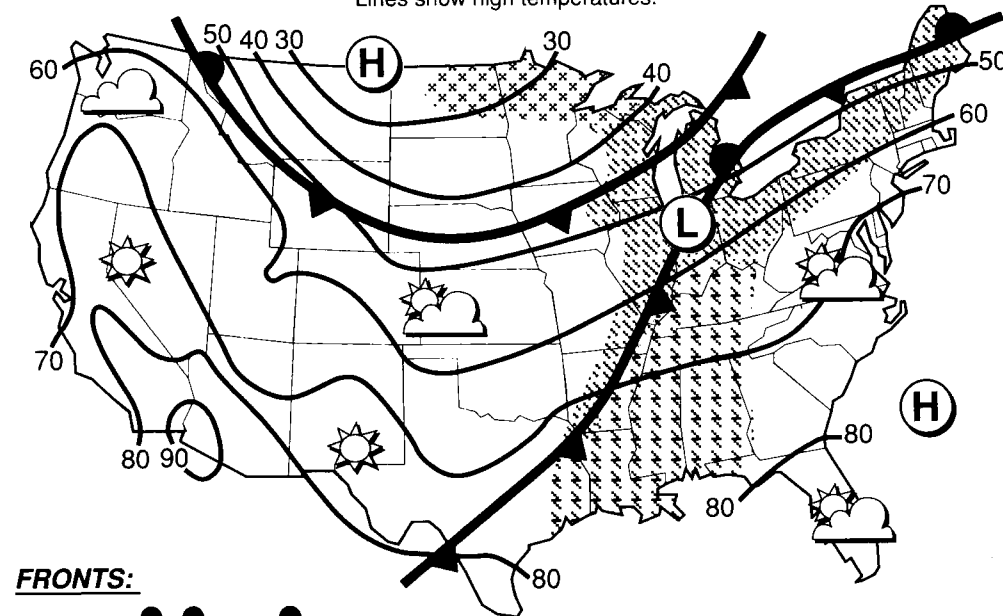

I did see something on my way back from Washington this weekend that I still haven't figured out. Somewhere in Northern Ohio (no comment I don't want anyone mad at me) at a "Comfort Station" on the toll road, there was a Pay FAX Machine. Go figure! You can both send and receive. I can picture this, "Hey Billy Bob, I'm lost up here on the toll road, FAX me the map!" "Sure Ted, just make sure you FAX it right back, I don't want to be lost myself."

Notice, If anyone would like to comment on this Inside Column, Please FAX it to me at 55N-SIDE.

There were approximately 1,500 no-shows from both the community and Notre Dame and Saint Mary's, for Christmas in April on Saturday, said Pat Doran, assistant director of Residence Life. However, he said, "We were successful at getting the work done," he said. The extra lunches and dinners were donated to the South Bend Center for the Homeless. Although this year's project was an improvement over last year's, Doran said that next year there may be a ceiling on the number of volunteers so that work sites may be pre-assigned. He added that the community lauded the efforts of the students.

The Notre Dame Tax Assistance Program will finish their services Wednesday. Until then, program centers will be open at the regular times and locations. The program, in which volunteers from the Notre Dame and Saint Mary's student bodies and area accounting firms assist low-income taxpayers with preparation of their state and federal tax returns, helped file 2,200 returns last year. Taxpayers with annual incomes at or below $20,000 are eligible for this free service.

Grouping of students is inevitable

Academic tracking also involves race, class size

By KATE MANUEL
News Writer

Elementary school teachers will group students whether they are on different academic levels or not, according to Maureen Hallinan.

Hallinan also noted the effects of racial composition and class size on academic tracking in a lecture which focused on the empirical ways in which schools differ in their tracking systems.

In "School Differences in Tracking and Learning Opportunities," Hallinan, a professor of sociology, said, "the empirical research on tracking has almost ignored the organization of tracking. It takes tracking as a basic assumption."

She described her research as differing from others' on the same subject because it focuses on the structure of tracking itself, specifically on how tracking comes to be, how students are assigned to tracks, and the range of student achievement within tracking levels.

"The school, because it is an organization, is faced with certain contingencies and constraints," said Hallinan, "yet, the most important compositional characteristic when creating a tracking system is the ability of the student body."

From her own research on fourth to sixth grade math groupings, Hallinan noted that most elementary school teachers will create three in-class ability groups regardless of student abilities.

She also observed, "the regular track in both English and math are the largest. This does not mean that these classes are the largest but that the most students are in that track."

Hallinan pointed out that racial composition has a direct and an indirect effect on tracking structure. Her research showed that classrooms with a larger number of minority students also had a larger number of higher ability groups. Hallinan concluded from this that teachers were creating a larger number of high ability groups to insure "racial heterogeneity" in the groups.

Hallinan is currently in the fourth year of a study following the progression and development of groups of students from the seventh to the tenth grades. Her lecture was part of the Conference on School Characteristics and Student Outcomes.

Senate resolution favors SYRs with social emphasis

By SANDRA WIEGAND
Assistant News Editor

Over 86 percent of juniors and seniors in an extended survey said that policy changes had a negative effect on hall semi-formals, according to a report presented at the Student Senate meeting Monday.

The senate unanimously passed a resolution encouraging a more widespread adoption of prior recommendations made by the Task Force on Whole Health and the Use and Abuse of Alcohol.

Although some recommendations by the Task Force were enacted, the resolution says, "the more important and fundamental changes have been ignored."

The changes that were made were intended in part to reduce emphasis on drinking at semi-formals, said Mike Carrigan of the University Documents Committee, but 33 percent of students polled said they thought there had been more drinking since the policy changes, and only 12.3 percent said they thought there had been less.

"The emphasis should be taken off drinking and put back on social interaction," Carrigan said.

Since only a portion of the Task Force's suggestions were implemented, he said, there has been more drinking behind closed doors. Further changes should include extended hours at the senior bar and Huddle, and accessible transportation, as advocated in the original report by the Task Force.

The resolution favored a non-alcoholic semi-formal for freshmen during orientation, to show them that "they can have a good time at Notre Dame without drinking," and helping to avoid the "social rut" of drinking that often occurs.

The resolution also encourages that students who "cannot drink socially" be given special attention.

Carrigan said that unlike the limited set of changes that was adopted, a multi-faceted new policy should "treat the disease itself rather than the symptoms."

The changes proposed in the senate resolution will be addressed by the Campus Life Council. The resolution was submitted by District 2 Senator Lisa Bostwick, and utilized information compiled by the Student Government Committee on All-hall Semi-formals.

Exxon says spill an 'accident'

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — Exxon and its subsidiary, Exxon Shipping Co., pleaded innocent Monday to five-count criminal indictments charging them with violating various federal laws in the nation's worst oil spill a year ago.

Exxon and Exxon Shipping entered their pleas in separate arraignments before U.S. District Judge John Roberts late Monday afternoon.

The two Feb. 27 indictments stem from the March 24, 1989, spill of nearly 11 million gallons of North Slope crude oil from the tanker Exxon Valdez, which ran aground and ripped its bottom open on a charted reef outside shipping lanes in Prince William Sound.

The oil coated hundreds of miles of coastline and killed countless fish, birds and other marine life.

Justice Department officials have said the indictments could result in penalties of $700 million or more. Exxon reportedly had been negotiating a plea agreement with the Justice Department which would have involved the creation of a $500 million environmental restoration fund.

Exxon said it would vigorously defend itself against the charges, which range from violating clean water and refuse acts to negligently and unlawfully discharging oil into a navigable waterway.

"The Exxon Valdez oil spill was tragic, but it was an accident," the company said in a statement.

"We have said that from the beginning because nobody willfully grounded the ship or caused the spill. We believe the conclusion is thoroughly supported by the testimony and the verdict in the trial of Captain Hazelwood."

Joseph Hazelwood was skipper of the Exxon Valdez at the time of the accident.

On March 22, a jury found Hazelwood guilty on a charge of negligent discharge of oil into state water. But he was acquitted of three other charges, including a felony, that he was reckless and drunk during the disaster.

Had he been convicted on all four counts, Hazelwood could have been sentenced to more than seven years in prison and fined $61,000.

Christian ideals clash with capitalist realism

By PETER AMEND
News Writer

Christian ideals of love, human dignity, and justice are not coexisting with the reality of capitalism, said Harlan Beckley, professor of religion at Washington and Lee University.

In his Monday lecture, Beckley discussed the conflict between this idealism and reality by comparing the works of three twentieth century theologians: John Ryan, Walter Rauschenbusch and Reinhold Niebuhr.

Beckley said both Rauschenbusch and Niebuhr's views are important to America because their works were influential to Martin Luther King's ideology of love and justice.

As a seminarian in the late 1960s, Beckley said he believed Rauschenbusch's hope to reform social institutions through the love Jesus taught was "naively optimistic about how to secure a just political economy."

Niebuhr offered a balance of ideas for Beckley in his appreciation for the depths of sin, which introduced a realism into Christian ethics. "Niebuhr was right in his view that Jesus' love must be compromised in order to obtain relevant justice," he said.

Besides the two protestant theologians, Beckley discussed the works of a Catholic theologian, Ryan. His work, "Protestant and Roman Catholic Ethics" shows how differently Protestants and Catholics address the issue of social justice.

According to Ryan, Catholics approach the problem in light of Catholic natural law. The Protestant writers founded their ideas on the Scriptures, said Beckley.

In regards to human dignity, Beckley said "justice requires institutions that afford individuals opportunities to develop their natural capacities for excellence in their character."

Beckley said that the theological liberalism of the 1960s had failed to impress Christian ideals onto American industry. According to Niebuhr, "Democracy and a mixed Capitalist economic system held the best hope for a relatively just, balanced power."

Beckley stressed human dignity as a final focal point for America rather than economic equality. Though Beckley discussed the pros and cons of Christian ideals applied to capitalism, he deferred from offering any concrete solutions.

will affect the Pell grant (which according to Russo serves students with the most need) will be of "phased impact" meaning that those needing the most financial aid will be least affected. "The reduced funding works on a linear reduction formula which

The reasons for the cuts, according to Russo, involve the immense budget deficit where the federal government, in trying to reduce spending, has cut educational funding. Alternatives for students include other loan programs, jobs on campus and work-study programs.

- $313,600 from the National Science Foundation for experimental research in elementary particle physics by William Shephard, Neal Cason and Randal Ruchti, professors of physics.

- $225,400 from the National Science Foundation for nuclear reaction and structure studies with heavy ions by James Kolata, professor of physics, and Umesh Garg, associate professor of physics.

- $220,104 from the National Science Foundation for x-ray and chemical studies of metalloporphyrins by W. Robert Scheidt, professor of chemistry and biochemistry.

- $150,000 from the U.S. Department of Energy for research in high energy physics by John LoSecco, associate professor of physics, and Randal Ruchti, professor of physics.

- $88,263 from the National Science Foundation for research by Dennis Jacobs, assistant professor of chemistry and biochemistry, on state selected ion reactions on surfaces.

- $33,000 from Lyonnaise de Eaux for research by William Gray, chairman and Massman professor of civil engineering, on treatment techniques and mechanisms for the removal of algal material.

- $30,000 from the Lynde and Harry Bradley Foundation for research by Ralph McInerney, Grace professor of medieval studies and director of the Jacques Maritain Center, on politics and the common good in the thought of M. Oakeshott.

- $27,500 from the National Endowment for the Humanities for research by Gerald Bruns, White professor of English, on the relations between philosophy and literature.

- $22,075 from Oregon State University for research by Gary Lamberti, assistant professor of biological sciences, subcontracted by the National Science Foundation.

- $23,000 from the city of Elkhart, Ind., for research by Lloyd Ketchum Jr., associate professor of civil engineering, for the Elkhart Environmental Center.

- $16,666 from the Oxychem Technology Center for research by Peter Diffley, assistant professor of biological sciences, on immunoassay to detect HET acid.

- $10,000 from the National Aeronautics and Space Administration Ames Research Center for research by Robert Nelson, professor of aerospace and mechanical engineering, on limit cycle roll oscillations.

- $9,000 from the Association of Theological Schools for research by Father James Burtchael on moral consistency.

- $6,000 from the National Institutes of Health for a research apprentice program for minority high school students headed by Mario Borelli, associate professor of mathematics and director of special instructional projects and activities.

- $4,000 from the National Science Foundation for research by Vicki Martin, assistant professor of biological sciences, on differentiation of cells.

- $3,500 from the National Endowment for the Humanities for research by Paul Griffiths, assistant professor of theology, on development of Yogacara Buddhist doctrine on being a Buddha.

- $750 from the Michiana Arts and Sciences Council for work by Victoria Chiang, assistant professor of music, on Project Outreach during the Great Lakes Festival of Music.

- Computer time from the National Center for Supercomputing for research by Samuel Paolucci, associate professor of aerospace and mechanical engineering, on direct simulation of turbulent natural convection.

- Awards for service programs totaled $41,529 from private benefactors for programs of the Institute for Pastoral and Social Ministry.

- Awards for other programs totaled $4,000 from the Wilbur Foundation for work on a program on liberalism, Catholicism and American culture by David Schindler, associate professor of Liberal Studies.

BUILDING THE KINGDOM

"The age of nations is past. The task before us now, if we would not perish, is to build the earth." - Teilhard de Chardin

"When you go out in the world, watch out for traffic, hold hands and stick together." - Robert Fulghum

The fullness of life, promised so dramatically in the approaching Easter season, is for everyone. It is not just for us or "our kind", them or their kind, but for all, no matter how deserving or undeserving any group might be considered to be.

In the tradition of almost all of the world's great religions, our compassion and mercy, our quest for justice and equity must be just as strong for those on the fringe as they are for those most fully encircled.

And yet in the same world where the words: "Be one for each other" are regularly proclaimed, so are words of division and separation: "Not in my backyard." "What are they doing here?" "Why don't they go back where they belong?" "They're just not our type."

Yes they are. They are precisely our type. Don't we all have eyes? Hands, organs, dimensions, senses, affections, passions? Fed with the same food, hurt with the same weapons, subject to the same diseases, healed by the same means, warmed and cooled by the same winter and summer..." (Merchant of Venice).

We are called, each of us, to be brother and sister with the whole planet. We are called to be a neighbor with those near-by and those far away. Yet too often we respond to that call by hardness of heart and sureness of mouth in proclaiming differences rather than similarities. The words dominate our language: "them", "gook", "fag", "bum", "fool", "chick", "hunk", etc., none of which acknowledges that we have any consciousness whatsoever that we are talking about a brother, a sister.

Foreign affairs of most countries are too often aimed at protecting one's own interests (nothing wrong with that) at the expense of someone else's (plenty wrong with that).

Our world was not created for division. It was created so that all may be one. Division of any sort is sin. Separation of any sort is sin. Isolation by nation or color or creed or any artificial device of created humanity is sin. Our task is to break down all walls, let all division cease and accept responsibility for the development of God's kingdom of love and acceptance on earth, as we believe it to be in heaven.

When we love our neighbor purely we love God. When we don't, we don't. -The good neighbor looks beyond the external accidents (eg: color, nationality, orientation, preference, ideology, politics, economic base, religion, etc.) and discerns those inner qualities that make all...human..." (Martin Luther King).

We also recommend personal involvement in some local effort directed at persons other than majority backgrounds, such as the El Caminito Day Care Center of St. Stephen's Parish.

To create heaven - that place where all division ceases - we need to transcend our artificial separations. We need to create a global consciousness that understands the inter-relatedness of all creation, including all created people.

Many of us spend a lot of our time, energy and resources trying to make sure that we don't have to experience the less pleasant aspects of life: "Let someone else experience it; not me."

A few years ago there was a beer commercial: "You only go around once in a lifetime, so grab for all the gusto you can." The problem with that sort of thinking is that if each of us grabs for all the gusto we can, there won't be enough gusto to go around.

This corollary might be equally true: There is suffering in the world. There is pain in the world. There is oppression in the world. Those things are real - those things are part of what is often referred to as the human condition.

There is enough for everyone, so if many of us spend our energy attempting to hide from our fair share of what we would consider to be life's unpleasantnesses, our fair share will be added to those less able or skilled or equipped in some substantial way.

If we each build our own secure environment that does not acknowledge the full reality of those environments outside of our security, we are separating, rather than dividing. If we join our brothers and sisters throughout the world in their reality, both physically and spiritually, then we are expressing a commonality and equality that goes beyond any artificial boundaries whatsoever.

But we can turn ourselves away from isolation and into solidarity with the entire world, which will result in our having to regard the experience of all human reality - with all joys and all pains - as our own, no matter who among us experiences it.

The point isn't to go out of our way to look for suffering or to take it on as if it were ours alone. There is little healthy found in such an approach.

In order to increase our consciousness of life beyond our artificial borders, the Office of Campus Ministry and the Center for Social Concerns suggest contributions to causes related to the third world. Proceeds from collections and contributions made to either office will be directed to a number of third world relief efforts, including a parish in El Salvador where a Notre Dame graduate is currently working.

UPCOMING EVENTS

Promise of democracy sparks celebration in Nepal, but violence still plagues nation

KATMANDU, Nepal (AP) — People smeared their faces with ceremonial red dust and burst firecrackers Monday in nationwide jubilation over the king's promise to re-establish a multiparty system in Nepal.

A left-wing radical group said Sunday's agreement between King Birendra and the leaders of a seven-week campaign for democracy did not go far enough. It pledged to continue the movement, using violence if necessary.

Before a curfew was lifted Monday, reports said troops shot and killed at least two people.

After curfew, hundreds of thousands of people marched through Katmandu and a half-dozen other towns in the Himalayan kingdom to celebrate the agreement, clinched by the Nepali Congress party and the United Left Front. The Front is a coalition of left-wing parties.

Laughing, whistling, clapping and chanting "Victory! Victory!" people wound their way through the streets on foot, cars, motor-powered rickshaws and tractors.

"Democracy, democracy, we have now democracy!" a man shouted in English into a megaphone. Boys with hand-screwed "I love democracy" posters pinned on their backs zipped around on bicycles.

"Today we will celebrate our freedom. We have no definite plan, but we only want to express our joy," said Yagya Nidhi Duhal, his face smeared with red powder used by Nepalese during celebrations.

Most other marchers, including several Western tourists, wore powder marks on their foreheads.

On Sunday, Birendra announced he was lifting a 29-year-old ban on political parties that has kept the Rashtriya Panchayat, or national assembly, non-partisan and allowed the king to rule through a largely rubber-stamp government.

The announcement came two days after the bloodiest day in modern Nepalese history. Witnesses said as many as 200 people were killed when security forces opened fire to prevent pro-democracy demonstrators from marching to the king's palace Friday. The government said 10 people were killed and 107 injured in nationwide violence that day.

Immediately after the royal proclamation, the Nepali Congress party and the United Left Front said they were suspending their movement.

"We will continue the movement until we achieve more. We won't propagate violence but we also do not rule it out," said party spokesman Babu Ram Bhattarai.

Culture, language bar ethnic assimilation

According to ancient Chinese legend, the dragon is not an evil creature, but is a god and a friend of men who worship him. He has the power to bring peace and prosperity. Ruling the waters and the winds, he sends the good rain, and is hence the symbol of fecundity. In the days before the dynasties, two dragons fought a great duel until both disappeared, leaving only a fertile foam from which the first Chinese appeared. Thus, the dragons came to be looked upon as the ancestors of a race.

When we Chinese children eavesdrop on adults talking, we learn that we have failed if we grow up to be but laborers or housewives. We should be pioneering doctors, learned physicists, or knowledgeable educators. Education is of the utmost importance in any respectable Chinese family.

Maybe that was why the midwife cut my tongue. She pushed my tongue up with a pair of scissors and sliced the frenum. I don't remember her doing it, only my mother talking about it.

"Why did she do that to me, Ma?"

"So that you would never be tongue tied. So that your tongue would be able to move in any language and you could pronounce anything and would never have trouble learning."

"But why did you allow it, Ma? Didn't I cry?"

"I didn't want to, but your grandma ordered it. Many Chinese grandparents believe it to be a blessing conferred to their grandchildren. Now enough of this nonsense."

I used to curl my tongue up in front of the mirror until my frenum was a thin white line. There was no scar in my mouth, perhaps I was born with two frenums. Sometimes, it made me proud that my grandma would allow such a powerful act to be committed to me. Other times, it terrified me to think that the first thing my grandma wanted to do when she saw me was cut my tongue.

'I remember the many times people would ask for my name and politely nod a "nice to meet you" when they couldn't say it. At that moment, I had learned to be ashamed of my un-American name.'

My first year in grade school is deeply ingrained in my mind. It was a routine that was to be repeated for most of my childhood years. In the mornings, I would go to a regular school, where I read, did math and learned the alphabet, all the essentials of modern living. After school, I would pick up my lunch box and head to the Chinese school, where I would recite the lessons of the day with other Chinese children. We would chant together, voices loud and soft, high and low, until the sun went down.

My first difficulty with being Chinese occurred when I was in high school. I had always gotten away with not speaking in class, but in speech class we had to introduce and talk about ourselves. One by one, each of us spoke. There were Davids and Mikes and Susans and Dianes. Then it was my turn. There was a giggle in the back of the room after I announced my name. A strong feeling of embarrassment overcame me. I have a name that comes out of the mouth more like a sound than a name. No matter that it means "warrior" in Chinese or that I was named after my great-grandfather. I remember the many times people would ask for my name and politely nod a "nice to meet you" when they couldn't say it. At that moment, I had learned to be ashamed of my un-American name.

"Couldn't I change my name, Ma?"

"Why would you want to change a name like that? You know that you are named after your great-grandfather and that his spirit will lead and protect you. No, don't change it!"

Or it may well be that my great-grandfather is resting happily in China, his spirit dispersed among the real Chinese, and not watching out for me as he should.

I came to Notre Dame in the fall of '86, despite protests from my mother that I should have gone to Berkeley, where I would fit in. I was a yellow boy entering a sea of whites, and she was fearful that I would be an outcast.

My freshman year was a silent one. I spoke to as few people as I could, afraid that my difference would be intensified by the sound of my voice. I liked and gravitated towards the students who talked and laughed the loudest, because they talked to me as if I, too, were a bold talker.

"Do you have many friends in school?"

"I have some, Ma."

"Are they Chinese? Chinese have to stay together. We are different, you know."

A searing, hot anger flashed through me.

"Ma, we are not that different from other people. We think and feel and have biases just like other people do. We are all human beings, Ma. If you didn't keep reminding me, maybe I wouldn't have felt so much of an outsider here."

"Don't talk back to me! Is this what you learned in school?"

That night as I lay in bed, a sense of guilt enveloped me. Maybe Chinese people are different. Who else but the Chinese would bind their womenfolk's feet to keep them home? Who else but they would sell their daughters as slaves simply because they would never carry on the family name? I have no answer.

Over the years, I have slowly begun to find a resolution for myself. I can understand why Chinese people would appear to have idiosyncrasies, but I believe that we are fundamentally the same as any other races.

Sometimes, when I hear a harmless joke about anything Chinese, I find myself getting angry, and I have to shut my ears and walk away, getting out of hating range. It is starting to affect me less. I am making progress, a little every day.

I am getting better about making friends. I have a friend here who I am fond of-- his hair is short and occasionally spiked like mine. I think of both of us as twins, except that his hair is many shades lighter and his skin is white, not yellow.

I spoke to my mother recently.

"You will be graduating this May, won't you?"

"Yes, Ma."

"If you want your name on the diploma to be an American name, I have no objection."

"That's okay, Ma. I think I will keep what I have. After all, it is my name."

"Do as you wish, Little Dragon."

She has not called me that endearment for years. My mother has the soul of a dragon, she being born in the Dragon Year. I am of her flesh. In essence, I, too, have the soul of a dragon.

"Yes, Ma."

"Take care, Little Dragon."

And she sends me on my way, both of us now older and changed, she still thinking of a Chinatown many times bigger than those I have known.

'Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles' Lean, green, and shouldn't be on the screen

accent writer

There are disadvantages to watching a film with hoards of chattering, freckle-faced children. I found out that Keith wants to go to Burger King and Marissa has a new Easter dress, but they all were there to see their amphibian heroes, the Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles. Yes, they have a movie.

"Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles" is, contrary to popular belief, a live-action motion picture. The main characters are played by puppets and men in green plastic costumes, designed and created in Jim Henson's Creature Shop. This film hauled in $25.4 million in its first weekend, largely due to the immense popularity of these characters among children. The Turtles were born in 1983 out of the minds of two starving artists, Kevin Eastman and Peter Laird. These two men created a sensation in the comic book industry with their unorthodox characters and drawing style. After that, their empire grew through action figure sales, a television series, and now the big screen.

The film revolves around Donatello, Leonardo, Raphael and Michelangelo's (turtles, not artists) search for their kidnapped mentor, Splinter, a mutated rat vaguely reminiscent of Mr. Miyagi. He has been abducted by the evil Foot clan, a gang that enlists children to do all the dirty work. The kids are wooed into crime by an underground Sodom and Gomorrah that serves as the gang's headquarters. The do-gooding turtles, on the other hand, live in the sewer tunnels beneath Manhattan and have the Domino's man drop their beloved pizza through the steam grates.

Raphael, the surly turtle with a Brooklyn attitude, feels that he is responsible for Splinter's kidnapping. He inadvertently led the evil ninja strike troop to the turtles' sewer tunnel, while rescuing the film's love interest, telejournalist April O'Neil, played by Judith Hoag. Raph's psychological struggle becomes a sub-plot, and he is clearly the most "human" of the turtles.

Another sub-plot concerns the juvenile delinquent son of April's boss, Danny (Dan to his friends) has been assumed into the gang of thieves, and is even stealing money from April! He betrays April when he leads the Foot gang to her apartment, where the turtles are hiding out. When he sees the consequences, he regrets his action. This lad is seen as a symbol for all young criminals, and he is rehabilitated through the wisdom of Splinter.

The movie is packed with violence; so much, in fact, that during the long struggles, the audience forgets why these latex warriors were fighting in the first place. The children in the theater laugh at every punch, the loudest roar coming when a villain gets sent across the room after being clubbed on the chin with a 1-wood. If a viewer follows the story closely, he will understand why the turtles are so violent. It has something to do with regaining lost honor and avenging a death, strictly Karate Kid stuff. We are supposed to learn that those who don't let the spirit triumph over the strength of the body, especially children, will never win. But if the story is so convoluted that a college sophomore has a hard time understanding it, how is a five year-old going to get the message? Wouldn't it be easier to have McGruff, the Crime Dog, tell kids not to steal and save everyone a lot of time and money?

This is not a message movie. It's all for kicks, as evidenced by the superficial and flighty acting, and the turtles' meaningless wisecracks. Fun is hard to find in the movie. It's hard to find anything, in fact, because the shots are so dark and Batman-esque. This is obviously an effort to maintain the mystical feel of the original comic book stories. As a matter of fact, Eastman and Laird list Batman artist Frank Miller as one of their influences. Many of the camera angles reflect that comic book feel, but that is as close to the comics as the film gets. The turtles were originally not the "Laugh-In" of crime-fighting.

The turtles are hard to recognize, except for Donatello, whose voice is that of teen heart-throb Corey Feldman. Their only distinguishing features are their different colored masks and their individual weapons. Viewers do, however, forget that these characters are puppets and costumes, because they exude personality. They exude that surfer/skate-rat personality that makes you want to slug them after their seventeenth "Bo-da-cious!" But the kids love it. If you feel you must see this film, please reconsider. It is not intended for mature audiences. Yet, if I were a parent, my child would not be allowed to see "Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles" alone, lest he come back with the idea that it's fine to throw someone off a building simply because they don't practice a certain form of ninjitsu. It is a painful film to watch; I got a headache trying to make out the action in all the dark fight scenes. Stick to the comic books, and pray that the next generation of kids doesn't grow up to think that Michelangelo, Raphael, Donatello and Leonardo are nothing more than names of Ninja Turtles.

Pig guts and realistic fish noises in Biology class

Biology is not my favorite class — not by a long shot. But I do learn a lot in it. For instance, in lab I learned that pig guts are every bit as disgusting as I'd imagined. It was great — my lab partner was making jokes like "So, you want to go outside and toss around the ol' pigskin?" while I did a pretty poor ventriloquism act with the pig's mouth. So obviously the lab sessions are beneficial.

My biology book, which, due to its size, would be legally classified in some states as "a piece of furniture," is filled with interesting pieces of information as well as truly frightening close-up micrographs in which insects appear to be as large as some western states. For starters, here's a Fascinating Fun Fact which I just flipped to at random from among several similarly scintillating pages:

"The feeding stage of cellular slime molds, division Acrasium, is a uninucleate myxamoeba, almost indistinguishable from a true amoeba."

In addition to putting random words in bold or italic type, this is also the kind of book which tries desperately to make the subject more interesting by giving the student reader a glimpse of the raging controversies which ignite the field of Biology:

"Some workers think the lophophorates, such as the Bryozoa, represent the common ancestor of many protostomes and the deuterostomes because their embryonic development shows similarities to both groups. Other disagree, considering the lophophorates a separate group, possibly derived from annelid ancestors." Boy, what a fierce argument that sounds like! It's disagreements like that which tear families apart as brother and sister choose sides on the "protostome vs. annelid" debate! Mark my words, this very well could be the spark that sets off World War III! Discuss-

Ian Mitchell
Lion Taming

Question: What does the author feel could "very well" cause World War III? Do you think he's maybe just a little bit on the goofy side? Explain.

A few weeks ago we had an assignment where we attempted to locate the sign stimulus which initiated the aggressive display of a male Betta splendens. (English translation: We made some drawings and showed them to a fighting fish in hopes of getting it mad.)

Like true scientists, we tried everything. While the lab group on the other side of the table tried to get responses by holding up a drawing of a police car or a sign reading, "If you can understand this, swim around in a circle three times," our group kept doggedly at its task, even accompanying the presentation of our drawings with some realistic fish noises. (This consisted mainly of saying, in a quiet, fish-like tone, "I'm a fish, I'm a fish. I'm certainly not just a drawing.")

By the end of the experiment, frustrated by the lack of positive responses, our simulated model fish was saying more inflammatory things like "I got your woman. I make more money than you. I killed your family. Now I'm coming for you." I'm not sure, but I think the fish began laughing at us. The fish in the lab group next to us seemed to be reacting to a Rolling Stones song.

Discussion Question: Would the fish have reacted to country music? Why or why not?

Despite the fun I have in Biology lab and the continual reading adventure that is the textbook, I'm pretty sure I made the right move in not choosing to be a biology major. As far as I can tell, biology majors are the kind of people that talk about unappetizing subjects like the intestinal tract with the same sort of enthusiasm that young boys use to discuss fast cars.

Last week one of our TAs thrilled the class by informing it that some tapeworms grew to 25 feet in length. And it's not just tapeworms that I have to worry about. Perhaps the single most important fact I've learned from Biology is that everything on the planet is out to get us. Threats to human life range from the Giant Squid (Squidus Really bigicus) to the friendly critters listed in "Table 28-4: Some Parasitic Worms Common in Humans." In a newspaper distributed at lunchtime, it would probably be untactful of me to say anything more along these lines, but I'm sure you get the idea.

Canadiens, Whalers, Devils gain, all 2-1 in NHL playoffs

MONTREAL (AP)—Brian Skrudland scored at 12:35 of overtime Monday night to give the Montreal Canadiens a 2-1 victory over the Buffalo Sabres and a 2-1 lead in their Adams Division semifinal series.

Skrudland took a passout from Shayne Corson at the right corner of the net and jammed the puck past Daren Puppa for his second career overtime goal.

The best-of-seven series resumes Wednesday night at the Forum.

The Canadiens tied the game midway through the second period on a brilliant individual effort by Stephane Richer.

Whalers 5, Bruins 3

HARTFORD, Conn.—Dave Babych scored the tie-breaking goal 36 seconds into the third period and Pat Verbeek had two goals Monday night as the Hartford Whalers beat Boston 5-3 in Game 3 of their Adams Division semifinal series.

Brad Shaw added a goal and three assists as the Whalers took a 2-1 lead in the best-of-7 series, which resumes Wednesday night in Hartford.

Babych snapped a 2-2 tie when he took a pass from Shaw, skated into the right circle and beat Andy Moog to the upper right corner with a slap shot.

Verbeek made it 4-2 at 2:13, sliding a pass from Shaw under Moog.

The Bruins narrowed the gap to 4-3 at 8:25 when Randy Burridge nudged Jim Wiemer's between-the-legs pass behind Peter Sidorkiewicz. But the Whalers held on and Kevin Dineen scored an empty-net goal with 18 seconds left.

The Bruins were without their top player, defenseman Ray

Bourque, who did not dress due to a hip pointer sustained late in Game 2.

Devils 2, Capitals 1

LANDOVER, Md.—Ken Daneyko and Brendan Shanahan scored goals and New Jersey smothered the Washington Capitals in a 2-1 victory Monday night that gave the Devils a 2-1 lead in their Patrick Division semifinal series.

Daneyko scored 4:51 into the game and the Devils spent the rest of the evening protecting the lead, taking only 10 shots on goal. But they held the Capitals to 21 shots and killed off seven of Washington's eight power plays.

The Devils survived a penalty for having too many men on the ice called with 2:39 left in the final period by holding the Capitals without a shot. Washington was not able to pull goalie Mike Liut until 35 seconds remained, but again was unable to get a shot on goal.

Chris Terreri made 20 saves, six in the final period, to win his second game since replacing Sean Burke.

White Sox win in final season opener at Comiskey Park

CHICAGO (AP)—The Chicago White Sox opened their final season at 80-year-old Comiskey Park with a victory, beating the Milwaukee Brewers 2-1 Monday on Scott Fletcher's sacrifice fly in the seventh inning.

The White Sox, who lost their first game at Comiskey 2-0 to the St. Louis Browns in 1910, will move across the street to a new stadium next year. A crowd of 40,008 at the 43,931-seat ballpark sat through a 21-minute rain delay at the start of the game and saw the White Sox win.

With the score tied at 1, Robin Ventura drew a leadoff walk from loser Tony Fossas in the seventh. Sammy Sosa bunted, and Ventura beat first baseman Greg Brock's throw to second.

After Ozzie Guillen bunted into a forceout at third, Lance Johnson's infield hit loaded the bases. Fletcher followed with his go-ahead sacrifice fly.

Barry Jones, 1-0, pitched 1 2-3 innings. Bobby Thigpen, Chicago's fifth pitcher, got two outs for a save.

Red Sox 5, Detroit 2

BOSTON—Baseball came a week late, but everything else stayed the same at Fenway Park: Wade Boggs got three hits, Roger Clemens won and the Detroit Tigers lost.

Opening day, delayed for only the second time in history, was even pushed back an extra 18 minutes because of festivities. When they finally played the first game of the season, the Boston Red Sox beat Detroit 5-2.

Clemens held the Tigers hitless until Tony Phillips singled to start the sixth inning, and allowed three hits, struck out five and walked two. He retired the first two batters in the seventh and then left the game after throwing 101 pitches.

"With all the opening day excitement, I got fired up the same as everyone else," Clemens said. "I threw the ball pretty well, but I overthrew a little at times."

Boggs got the first hit of the season and finished 3-for-4 with a walk. His leadoff single in the first inning helped set up Dwight Evans' three-run double off Jack Morris, and Boggs singled home a run in the second.

Dodgers 4, Padres 2

LOS ANGELES—Free agent Hubie Brooks broke up Bruce Hurst's no-hit bid in the seventh inning and hit a three-run homer in the eighth that rallied the Los Angeles Dodgers over the San Diego Padres 4-2 Monday in the delayed season opener.

Brooks, who left Montreal after last season, lined the first pitch from Hurst over the left-field fence with two outs, driving home Alfredo Griffin and Willie Randolph.

Winner John Wetteland allowed one run in two innings. He relieved starter Orel Hershisier, who gave up one run on three hits in six innings. Don Aase blanked the Padres in the ninth to earn the save.

Hurst wound up with a four-hitter. The 32-year-old left-hander walked two and struck out one.

Fred Lynn homered on his first National League at-bat to put the Padres ahead in the second.

Lynn, 38, played 15 full seasons in the American League before signing a free-agent contract with the Padres last December.

Pirates 12, Mets 3

NEW YORK—Baseball people predicted strange things because of an abbreviated spring training, and that's just what happened on opening day at Shea Stadium.

Try 17 hits and 12 runs off a pitching staff considered by most the best in the major leagues.

Pittsburgh ended the opening day magic for Dwight Gooden and the New York Mets as Andy Van Slyke homered twice and drove in four runs to help the Pirates to a 12-3 victory.

The nine-run margin of defeat was the Mets' largest ever on opening day and the 12 runs tied a high against New York.

"It was definitely a strange game," Mets manager Davey Johnson said. "Some of the players were overanxious."

The loss ended a streak of five straight opening-day victories for the Mets.

CLASS OF 1992

Tomorrow is the deadline for applications for Junior Advisory Council and Junior Class Commissioners. If you haven't picked up an application yet they are still available in the Sophomore Class Office.

Hurst eventually recovered to post a 15-11 record and a 2.69 ERA, but a slow start left his team in a hole, and despite a late season rally, the Padres were never able to catch the Giants, who cruised to the National League West title.

The two Giant wallbangers, meanwhile, had banner seasons. Clark finished second in league batting at .333 and drove in 111 runs, while Mitchell batted .291 with 47 homers and 125 RBIs, good enough for National League MVP.

That same day 45-year-old Tommy John allowed just two runs in seven innings as New York Yankees opened their season with a 4-2 win in Minnesota. John, who had not been invited to spring training, proved he still had some of his old stuff as he beat the Twins' Frank Viola, who had won the Cy Young Award the previous year, for his 287th career victory.

Little else went right for the Yankees last year, though. Their team ERA ballooned to 4.50 as they finished fifth in the AL East. Viola, meanwhile, was traded to the New York Mets in the middle of the season, bolstering a team which already had pitching staff but couldn't match the heart of the Chicago Cubs, who captured the NL East flag.

In Cincinnati, 55,385 fans celebrated Opening Day by chanting "Pete! Pete!" Reds owner Marge Schott planted a kiss on Charlie Hustle's cheek.

"I guess my favorite thing is just the fact that baseball's started again," Rose told the Associated Press at the time.

Baseball is starting again this year, but Pete will not be a part of it.

The defending World Series champs from Los Angeles were in town to play the Reds that day. The 6-4 score was uncharacteristically high for the Dodgers to open a season in which they allowed very few runs but usually scored even fewer. But the resulting tally in the s column would become all too familiar.

The Dodgers led the majors with a .95 team ERA but they also scored fewer runs than any other team in baseball, averaging just 3.42 scores per game. Kirk Gibson, who had delivered the dramatic game-winning home run in game one of the Series, began his season with an RBI single in the first inning and a solo homer in the fifth.

Like the rest of the Dodgers, however, Gibson had little to look forward to for the rest of the season. He finished with a .213 batting average and just 28 ribbies in 253 at bats. The Dodgers slipped to fourth place in the NL East with a 77-83 record.

The only thing any of this proves is that as baseball begins anew, there are bound to be surprises. There is still hope, even for the Chicago White Sox, whose diehard fans would love to see them win a pennant in their last season at Comiskey Park. Like the fans of the other 26 major league teams, they dream of a shining season.

So let's play ball.

Women's golf sluggish in starting

Irish victims of tough competition at Indiana Invitational

By JAMES NOLL
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame women's golf team struggled to a 15th place finish against fierce competition at the 54-hole Indiana University Women's Invitational last weekend.

In their first tournament of the season and competing mostly against Big Ten schools, the Irish had to contend with cold temperatures and strong winds as well as the talented 15-team field, most of which had played in several tournaments this spring. Host Indiana University won the team competition with 908 strokes, while the Irish finished with 1020.

"We played well at times, but we need to do it more consistently," said Head Coach Tom Hanlon. "I was encouraged by the play of Roberta Bryer and Cappy Mack. We'll get stronger, but it will take a while. We want to play the best in order to be the best."

Junior captain Roberta Bryer and freshman Cappy Mack, who played despite an eye injury, both fired scores of 248 to lead the Irish, while freshman Kathy Phares played a strong supporting role by shooting a 256 for the three rounds. Indiana University's Jen Myers won the tournament with a score of 224.

"Considering it was our first tournament, we played all right," said captain Roberta Bryer, who improved her score by 27 strokes from last year's tournament. "It's hard to get back into the swing of things after not playing for a while."

The Irish will have two weeks to practice before they tee up again in their second tournament, the Lady Boilermaker Spring Classic in West Lafayette, Ind. on April 28-29. Coach Hanlon looks for improvement.

"We're capable of scoring down in the 80's," Hanlon said, "and we need to correct our mistakes this week in order to reach those goals."

Fans flock to stadiums for openers

(AP)—Lockout? What lock-out?

Fans welcomed back baseball Monday with no sign of bitterness about the labor dispute that cut a huge chunk out of spring training and delayed opening day by a week.

There were full houses at Shea Stadium, Fenway Park and Royals Stadium, where the first games of the 1990 season were played. And some 35,000 fans braved rain in Chicago for the final opening day at Comiskey Park, the oldest stadium in the majors.

At Shea, concert violinist Itzhak Perlman played the national anthem and Commissioner Fay Vincent threw out the first ball on a sun-splashed afternoon.

"I am really excited," said Vincent, officiating at his first opener after six tumultuous months in office that began with the death of his friend, ex-commissioner Bart Giamatti, followed by the earthquake-delayed World Series and the labor battle.

"What a day," said the commissioner, who was seated in a golf cart near home plate. "As a fan I'm excited and being someone who is involved, I'm doubly excited. If it had not been for Bart, I wouldn't be here and that occurs to me."

In Boston, Toni Giammati, widow of the former commissioner, threw out the first ball. She lobbed the ball to Red Sox catcher Tony Pena, who then returned it and embraced her.

Fans in both parks gave warm greetings to the players. The biggest ovation in Boston went to Bill Buckner, the goat of the Red Sox' 1986 World Series loss to the Mets, who made the team in spring training as a 40-year-old non-roster player.

At Shea, the fans cheered slugger Darryl Strawberry, who spent a month in alcohol rehabilitation and expressed concern about how the home fans would greet him.

Both the Red Sox and Mets gave their fans reason to cheer early. In Boston, Dwight Evans delivered a three-run double in the first inning against Detroit's Jack Morris. Four years ago, Evans hit the first pitch of the season.

Softball finishes 5-1 for weekend, wins St. Francis Inv.

By RICHARD MATHURIN
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame softball team completed a very successful but grueling six games in a three-day schedule, compiling a 5-1 record.

On Friday, the team played a doubleheader on the road versus St. Louis. The Billikens took the controversial first game 3-2 in 10 innings. Megan Fay gave the Irish the early lead at 1-0 with her and the team's first home run of the season. Pitcher Missy Linn held the lead until the seventh, when she walked in the tying run on a 3-2 pitch. The teams stayed tied and went to extra innings.

In the top of the 10th, Debbie Boulac singled home Laurie Sommerlad to give Notre Dame the lead again. In the bottom of the 10th, St. Louis scored two runs on a bases-loaded single to win the game. Controversy followed, though, because Irish catcher Amy Folsom apparently tagged out the final runner on a close play at the plate, but the umpire ruled the runner safe. Linn went the entire 10 innings and suffered the loss to move her record to 5-5.

"It's a shame to lose a game that way because we played so

Notre Dame Sports Information

Sophomore second baseman Laurie Sommerlad and the Notre Dame softball team came out of an excruciating three-day schedule 5-1.

well," said Head Coach Brian Boulac.

In the second half of the doubleheader, the Irish came back to shut out St. Louis 2-0. Staci Alford pitched a three-hitter with nine strikeouts and no walks to improve her record to 6-5. Both Irish runs were unearned. Sommerlad led the offense with three of the team's six hits.

Boulac describes Alford's pitching style as, "Deceptively fast, she forces people to hit her pitch."

On Saturday the Irish moved to Joliet, Illinois to compete in the St. Francis Invitational.

In the first game, the Irish blanked Wisconsin-Parkside 2-0, behind the four-hit, six-strikeout performance of Linn (6-5). Fay paced the Irish on offense with a triple and two RBIs. Wisconsin-Parkside was ranked second in the preseason NAIA rankings.

Alford (7-5) was at it again in the second game as she blanked St. Francis 1-0 with a two-hitter. Alford struck out six, walked none, and had a no-hitter through 4 2/3 innings. Fay again provided the offense spark for the Irish, driving in the only run with an RBI triple. St. Francis was the NAIA champion in 1988.

"Pitching normally dominates fast pitch softball, so you have a lot of one-run, two-run games," said Boulac.

On Sunday, in what for all purposes was the championship game of the tournament, the Irish faced Mt. Mercy College, which also had won its two games in the tournament. The Irish pulled out a 3-2 victory.

Freshman Erinn Kelly was making her first start of the season for the Irish. She yielded only four hits, but tired in the fourth, allowing two runs to Mt. Mercy. She gave way to ace Alford, who proceeded to shut the door, pitching the remaining 3 1/3 innings for the win. She gave up only one hit and no runs to move her record to 8-5. Boulac drove in Carson with a single for Notre Dame's first run. Co-captain Kathy Verneti delivered a clutch two-run single to give the Irish the lead for good at 3-2.

"Erinn Kelly started the game and I wanted to win it for her. I tried to take the ball to right field and it dropped in," said Verneti, describing her winning hit.

The Irish travel to Depaul on Wednesday to face the Blue Demons. Again, the Irish will go with Linn and Alford in the doubleheader. The Blue Demons are 11-3 and defeated Notre Dame in all three meetings last year.

"The Depaul and Detroit games are very important for us. If we can win them, we will be in the right frame of mind going into the MCC tournament," said Boulac.

Navratilova says Capriati is for real

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (AP)—Martina Navratilova likes what she sees—on and off the court—in 14-year-old Jennifer Capriati.

"The thing that impresses me the most is her pace and her poise," Navratilova said. "But when you're 14, you don't know any better. You just hit the ball as hard as you can."

"If it goes in, great. If it doesn't, oh well, you've got 15 years ahead of you. So it's not that big a deal when you miss."

The 33-year-old Navratilova beat Capriati 6-2, 6-4 Sunday to win the $500,000 Family Circle Magazine Cup championship.

While it was Navratilova's 150th singles title, it was only Capriati's third tournament since turning pro last month.

After hearing Capriati refer to her as a legend, Navratilova called her young opponent a legend-in-the-making.

Navratilova said Capriati is "more polished" at this stage than Steffi Graf, ranked No. 1 in the world, or Andrea Jaeger or Tracy Austin, once seen as America's next great tennis stars.

"She's also physically closer to her potential than Andrea or Tracy or Steffi were at that age," Navratilova said. "She hits the ball harder on both sides. Steffi was hitting it hardest one way. But Jennifer hits it hard off both sides."

"She's pretty quick. I think Andrea was better at the net than Jennifer, but she's got all the shots—and the potential to master all of them."

Mattingly now highest paid

NEW YORK (AP)—Indiana-born Don Mattingly of the New York Yankees became the highest-paid player in baseball history Monday when he agreed to a $19.3 million, five-year contract extension through the 1995 season.

Mattingly, of Evansville, Ind., will make $2.5 million in 1990 during the final season of a three-year deal worth $6.7 million. He had threatened to become a free agent after the season unless he got an extension before opening day.

tory at the number six spot, and Ann Bradshaw snaring a win at number five.

Most of Notre Dame's singles losses came through narrow, three-set showdowns, and Louderback cited his team's lack of experience with close contests as a deciding factor in the loss.

"We haven't had a really tight match lately, and that hurt us," said the coach. "When you have them a lot, you get used to them, but when you don't, you get a little tense and it's a little tougher to play. We got into a tight match with them and we didn't play well."

The Irish will face their last big test of the season this Thursday, when they travel to Ann Arbor to take on the University of Michigan.

C.J.'s Bar advances in bookstore

By KEN TYSIAC
Associate Sports Editor

C.J.'s Pub. one of the top four seeds in Bookstore Basketball XIX, easily won its first game of the tournament over Arizona St., UPenn, Great Lakes, Murphy's Bar and 1 other team Kevin Warren Played For by a 21-11 score yesterday as action resumed across campus after a weekend respite.

C.J.'s was impressed with its opponents, who were members of the Breen-Phillips Interhall basketball championship squad.

"They played really well together and made a couple of really good shots," said Pete Graham of C.J.'s. "We had a good time with it."

Graham claimed that his team has a lot of work to do before it will be ready to challenge for the championship. Teammate Ken Boehner, who led C.J.'s with eight points yesterday, agrees.

"We haven't played together very much at all," Boehner said. "I would say that we have the talent to contend for the championship, but we have work to do yet. We'll probably be out there practicing Tuesday."

One of the best games of the day pitted Top 32 seed Peach's Late Nite All-Stars against Brick House. Brick House used superior quickness to storm out to lead 11-9 at halftime.

"They (Brick House) were a great team," said Tim Thompson of Peaches. "We were surprised to see such a quality team so early. But we were finally able to work it inside and use our size advantage to pull ahead."

Peach's managed to ride the muscle of 6-5 Craig Creamean, 6-4 Mark Walker and Thompson, who is 6-3, to a 21-16 victory.

Doz and Schoenbergians was only able to round up two players to challenge 5 Scrubs. Mike Tognarelli and Carl Vogel decided to give it a go despite the huge disadvantage, and wound up with a 21-0 skunking stuffed in their face.

"We just decided to go ahead and play," Tognarelli said. "We realized that there wasn't much of a chance. I would have considered one basket a victory, but it certainly is tough when your opponents have three guys open on offense all the time."

Body Fat won the closest matchup of the day over The Priest and 4 Guys Permitted to Score by a 26-24 margin. The game began at 6:15 on Bookstore Court 10 and didn't end until 7:30.

"It was close the whole way," said Rich Bonfiglio of Body Fat. "It was a pretty physical game, and there weren't a lot of fouls called at all. They (The Priest) had the big inside game, while most of our points came from the outside."

The game seesawed back and forth until the score was tied at 24 and Body Fat was able to deliver the knockout punch. Bonfiglio, who finished with seven points, knocked home a bucket to put his team ahead by a point, and then Steve Baumer, who led all scorers with 10 points, hit from the top of the key to end the marathon.

University President Fr. Edward Malloy's All the President's Men squad advanced by a forfeit when If This was Nintendo We Would Kick Your Butts decided to stay home and play Super Mario Brothers.

Vinnie McFrog Wop, which previously won 21-1 in its first outing of the season, lost a 21-19 heartbreaker to Pierre and 4 Other Guys yesterday. Dan Renouard tallied nine points for the victors.

In other games, Eric Reuscher went 9-for-10 from the field and grabbed eight rebounds for Earl Dippold's Tavern in a 21-5 victory over

Women's tennis team cruises, then loses to Ohio State

Irish fall victim to letdown vs. OSU

By BARBARA MORAN
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame women's tennis team cruised to two 9-0 victories over Northern Illinois and Ball State last weekend, but ended its road trip on a sour note, failing their Big Ten test by losing 7-2 to Ohio State on Sunday.

The Irish hadn't expected much competition from their first two opponents, and didn't get much, but the Ohio State loss was a bitter one for the 14-7 squad.

"Ohio State isn't any better than we are," said Notre Dame coach Jay Louderback. "We just didn't play as well as we could."

Playing without top singles seed Tracy Barton and fifth seed Kristy Doran, the Irish lost several key matches in singles competition, entering doubles play down 4-2. The Buckeyes sealed their win with a 6-2, 6-3 victory over Notre Dame's top doubles squad of Katie Clark and Alice Lohrer. The only wins for the Irish came in singles competition, with Kim Pacella taking a vic-

Lacrosse team looking to recoup

Irish face Lake Forest after a tough 7-6 loss to Kenyon

By DAVE DIETEMAN
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame lacrosse team looks to get its season back on track today as it takes on the Lake Forest Foresters at 3:30 p.m. at Moose Krause Stadium.

The Irish are coming off a 7-6 defeat at the hands of the Denison Big Red at Moose Krause last Saturday, and are hoping for a win to prepare themselves for their upcoming matchups with Midwest powers Michigan State and Ohio State.

"We have four very important games coming up," said Notre Dame head coach Kevin Corrigan, "and we need to get ourselves on track so that we can play our best lacrosse through the end of the season."

"Where Lake Forest is concerned, what is most important to us is that we concentrate on ourselves and play at our best level, because then the rest will take care of itself. That is what we need to do to be successful for the rest of the year."

The Irish, now 6-4 on the season, continue to record sparkling defensive efforts. Yet it is the offense which must come together before the Irish can realize their tremendous potential down the stretch.

"Defensively, we have had a couple of very good performances back-to-back," explained Kevin Corrigan. "Individually and in terms of executing our game plans, we have been playing great team defense. Certainly, it is important that we play good defense tomorrow (Tuesday)."

"It is also important that we have success offensively against Lake Forest. We did not play poorly against Denison—we just didn't make the plays that we needed to make. We didn't convert some plays for scores which we must do to win games. To put the ball in the cage we have got to have confidence, and right now we must work on building our confidence."

Notre Dame owns an 8-0 overall advantage against Lake Forest, with the most recent victory coming last year on the Foresters' home field.

NOTES: Senior attackman Brian McHugh of Parsippany, New Jersey, raised his career point total to 98 in weekend action against Denison. This puts him sixth on the Notre Dame all-time scoring list, behind John Olmstead (class of 1988), who is fifth with 105 career points.

Expect unexpected during Opening Day

Take me out to the ballgame.

As Opening Day results come in, you can't help but wonder what the baseball season has in stock for America besides watered-down beer and cool summer nights at the ballpark. The nightmare of an impending strike is behind us now; it's time to play ball, and you need only look at last year's Opening Day to realize that only the unexpected should be expected.

On Opening Day last year, the Baltimore Orioles, who had been the laughingstock of the league the previous year, went up against fiery Roger Clemens and the Boston Red Sox. Clemens was expected to shut the Orioles down in their first outing of the year, but Frank Robinson's ballclub had other ideas.

The Orioles rallied to defeat the Sox 5-4 in 11 innings, making their first stride in a season which had them in a pennant race until their final series of the season. Baltimore's complete reversal from a 54-107 record the previous year was nothing short of incredible. As for Clemens, he had a subpar season, going 17-11 as Boston finished third in the American League East.

The following day Bruce Hurst, who had been 18-6 for Boston in 1988, made his San Diego Padre debut against the San Francisco Giants. Hurst became the first of many victims of the one-two Giant tandem of Will Clark and Kevin Mitchell. The San Francisco sluggers smashed consecutive home runs in a six-run third inning as the Giants cruised to an 8-3 victory.
