THE INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER SERVING NOTRE DAME AND SAINT MARY'S

Because of U.S. inaction, hostage won't be released

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Pro-Iranian kidnappers said Thursday they postponed indefinitely the release of an American hostage because the United States refused to send a senior State Department official to Syria.

The Islamic Jihad for the Liberation of Palestine in a lengthy statement repeated its demand that John Kelly, U.S. assistant secretary of state for Near Eastern affairs, fly to Damascus.

It also renewed threats to attack jetliners and airports used to transport thousands of Soviet Jewish emigrants to Israel. Much of the 500-word communique was devoted to the rise in Jewish emigrants, who Arab leaders say could strengthen Israel and displace Palestinians from the occupied territories.

In Damascus, Syrian Foreign Minister Farouk al-Sharaa said his government has "been exerting a great deal of influence" to secure the hostage release by Sunday. He would not elaborate.

President Bush said the United States has "been disappointed before" by dashed hopes for the release of American hostages and repeated that he will not meet the demands of kidnappers.

"The United States does not knuckle under to demands," said Bush when asked why he did not dispatch Kelly to Damascus.

Bush's stand was criticized by an Arab-American leader and a relative of American hostage Terry Anderson.

Anderson's sister, Peggy Say, told CBS News she was "totally puzzled by the attitude of reluctance to move forward and get on with this. If they want John Kelly, send them John Kelly."

M.T. Mehdi, president of the American-Arab Relations Committee in New York, said in a statement that the United States "fumbled" the opportunity to help release a hostage.

The kidnappers' statement was accompanied by an instant photograph of Robert Polhill, one of three U.S. educators held by the group since Jan. 24, 1987. It was delivered to the Beirut newspaper an-Nahar and to a Western news agency.

In a communique Wednesday, the group said Kelly should go to Damascus "to coordinate some final steps to guarantee success within 48 hours." They said a hostage would be freed within that time frame but did not say which one.

The White House refused to dispatch Kelly. Doing so would either have engaged the United States in negotiations over the hostages or given that appearance, a senior U.S. official explained Wednesday night.

However, the U.S. Ambassador to Syria, Edward Djerjian, flew back to Damascus on Thursday. He and

Second ND student attacked

By MICHAEL OWEN
News Writer

A Notre Dame student was attacked Thursday at 2:10 a.m. in the D6 parking lot west of the ROTC building.

This is second attack on a female student in the past two days that has been reported to Notre Dame Security.

The victim was wearing stereo headphones as she walked east away from her parked car. She heard a voice she described as "deep" call her name, according to Mike Garvey, assistant director of Public Relations and Information.

At that point, the student was seized from behind by the left shoulder. She was able to free herself by struggling out of her jacket. She then fled to Lyons Hall where she reported the attack to a hall monitor who immediately notified Security, according to the report.

According to Chuck Hurley, assistant director of Security, there, "appear to be some similarities between the description of this attacker and the one from Easter Sunday." A Saint Mary's student reported Wednesday that she was attacked while on her way to Easter mass at Notre Dame.

When asked if there was the possibility that the attacker was a student, Hurley said,

Environmental protection 'profitable'

By JOHN FISCHER
News Writer

Environmental protection can be profitable for large corporations, Grant Smith said in a lecture Thursday concerning toxic waste in Indiana.

Smith, director of the Indiana Toxic Action Project, said that profitable environmental measures are dependent upon the shift in policy from waste man-

Corporations and the government currently focus their policies on toxic waste disposal, according to Smith. However, the most popular methods of disposal, incineration and landfill, do not prevent exposure to waste.

"Toxic waste cannot be completely destroyed; the public is exposed in one way or another," Smith said.

Landfills can leak and incineration releases toxic waste into the atmosphere, Smith said. Other methods of waste disposal pollute rivers and groundwater. Government and corporate support of off-site recycling of waste is not environmentally effective either, he said.

Pollution prevention can be profitable, according to Smith, because, "When an industry doesn't produce waste, it saves a tremendous amount of money," because transportation and disposal of waste as well as their liability would be eliminated.

Smith's group has proposed legislation making it mandatory for retailers to publicize the use of alternative products to ones that are potentially harmful to the atmosphere. He cited as an example the use of vinegar and water as a cleaning agent in place of one which contains chlorofluorocarbons (CFC's).

For farmers, low- or no-chemical agriculture can reduce their total output by as much as a third without substantially affecting the volume of the crop, he said.

Smith noted that currently food is being overproduced and left to rot in warehouses, so a slight decrease in production would not be a liability. Smith endorsed this solution particularly for independent farmers and secondarily for corporate farms.

"Smaller farms are more economically and environmentally efficient," he said.

The state of Indiana is in a particular bind, according to Smith, as it is currently the sixth largest emitter of toxic materials in the country and the sixteenth in toxic water emissions.

In addition, 37 off-site recycling areas in the state have been cited for Superfund cleanup efforts. While stating that the public supports environmental efforts, Smith said that lack of government interest on the state level has led to this situation.

Even on the national level, Smith said, a new EPA bill mixes preventive measures with waste management measures including off-site recycling, thus diluting the impact of the preventive legislation.

The Indiana Toxic Action Project is a member organization of the Citizens' Action Coalition (CAC). The CAC is comprised of unions and church, urban, and environmental groups, and is concerned with issues of energy conservation, health care, and the environment, among others.

Consisting of 150,000 members and founded in 1975, the CAC's primary purpose is to recommend legislation, and, according to Smith, "...to work on sensible policies for businesses and consumers."

Charity Ball is effort to alleviate world hunger

By KRISTIN BAZANY
News Writer

The 1990 Charity Ball, a joint effort by the Notre Dame and Saint Mary's communities to alleviate world hunger, will take place tonight in the North Dining Hall at Notre Dame.

The goal of the ball is to raise money to support both the Michiana Food Bank and the Catholic Relief Services.

The efforts of the Notre Dame and Saint Mary's communities began in 1983 when the first Charity Ball was held in response to the food crisis in Ethiopia. That year the event raised over $10,000 for the Catholic Relief Services. Last year the ball raised $5,000 which was divided between Catholic Relief Services and the Michiana Food Bank.

Catholic Relief Services is a non-profit organization which provides both development assistance and emergency relief to seventy countries and 15 million people world wide. The self-help programs provided include areas such as nutrition, mother and child health care, sanitation, food production and other long term community development activities.

The Michiana Food Bank is also a non-profit charity organization which acts as a bridge between the food industry and charity feeding programs. This bank is only one of 200 food banks which exist nationally and one of nine food banks located in Indiana, all of which are part of the Second Harvest National Food Bank Network.

Part of the money raised at the ball will go to the food bank which is currently serving 70 charitable agencies in five counties of northern Indiana. The warehouse in South Bend alone has distributed nearly 1.5 million pounds of food since it opened.

The cost to run the Charity Ball this year is $3,000 with a goal of $8,000 to be raised for Catholic Relief Services and the Michiana Food Bank.

The honorary chairman for this year's ball is Father Malloy. His efforts along with those of Notre Dame and Saint Mary's and the South Bend community have been strong so far and the volunteers hope to prove that strength by reaching their $8,000 goal this evening.

Other main contributors to the ball include the Notre Dame Credit Union, The Diploma fee proves nothing in life is free

Michael Owen
News Copy Editor

I was informed of a rather amazing occurrence at this university that I think many other people would find a bit tacky. It's not a major thing, like the new dining hall suggestion boards or opening day for the South Bend White Sox.

What I found out was that every senior this year will be billed for the printing of his or her diploma to the tune of $15.00.

I know - amazing subject for an Inside Column. It's not the amount that counts, though, it's the idea. After all they've been through and paid for, the university's last official document for them, the students' goal for four or more years, is being billed to their parents for $15.00.

Is nothing sacred? What's next? Appointments to take pictures of the Golden Dome for the bargain basement price of $4.99? Cut-out models of Monk Malloy and The Gipper on football weekends outside of the stadium?

Are we in such dire need of income that they really couldn't just give you the thing for free? I don't think the NBC contract is exactly shrinking the Golden Pot.

I've seen the elusive diploma. Three in fact. $15.00 is definitely not market value for these babies. They fit the right qualifications for a college diploma. They take up half of your office wall and have plenty of Latin written in New York Times Bold print. One of them had a nice sketch on it.

It was a Notre Dame nightlife theme (I think it came from the seventies). It had Bridget's, Theodore's night club, and Ramona's Car Wash all nicely blended in the background in various hues of Technicolor. O.K., that's fake but I might pay $15.00 for one of those.

Think about it. By the time we get out of here each one of us will have provided this school with at least $50,000. Cap and gown, maybe, but my diploma?

This brings up other heinous economic policies implemented at school. If you are in too good of a mood sometime stop by the Financial Aid Office and have a nice long appointment to look at a long-range portfolio of student loan payments. Twenty or more years of sheer bliss begins a few weeks after graduation.

This happens at every school. A decent education is expensive. We should have more aid, though. I recently went to a Financial Aid meeting for next year's sophomores. Their four-year study concluded that ND students need more scholarships. Hmmm.

I took economics in high school (not by choice). Our profound teacher Ronald T. Head told us to prepare for a semester of what economists like to call "the dismal science". You're right, Ron, it's dismal.

The views expressed in the Inside Column are those of the author and not necessarily those of The Observer.

More than 30,000 people in the Australian outback city of Brisbane have been isolated by near-record floods, police said Friday. Farming districts in central and southern Queensland state were hardest hit by rising flood waters that followed three weeks of heavy rain. Meteorologists said the flooding was the worst in the area for 40 years. Most of the normally dusty roads in the region were awash, forcing animals to high ground and many families from their homes.

Divers on thursday found 20 bodies in the wreckage of a twin-engine plane that crashed in the Pacific after takeoff from the resort island of Contadora, Panama's civil aviation director said. Four Americans, including two residents of Washington state, were among the victims of Wednesday's crash of an Aeroperlas Twin Otter carrying 22 people bound for Panama City. Only a 14-year-old French boy and a Swiss woman survived the crash. The wreckage was discovered in 90 feet of water about a mile off the island, said the Panamanian aviation official, Jamie Fabrega.

Production of a new Colt semiautomatic rifle prompted Sen. Howard Metzenbaum to urge President Bush on Thursday to support legislation banning domestically produced assault-style weapons. Colt Manufacturing Co. this month began producing a rifle called the "Sporter," which is just now arriving in stores. The company is the successor to the Colt Firearms Division of Colt Industries Inc. The gun will replace the AR-15 assault-style rifle which Colt Industries stopped producing for the civilian market in March 1989, a day after the Bush administration temporarily banned imports of similar weapons. The import ban was made permanent last July.

Senate Republicans said on Thursday they would write their own campaign finance reform bill to reduce the ability of labor unions and other groups to spend money on political activities, including voter registration. Republicans, however, were divided on how far to go beyond Democrats in restricting how much money candidates can take from labor, corporate and trade association political action committees that rely on voluntary contributions. "There was no resolution," Sen. John Danforth of Missouri said upon emerging from an hour-long meeting among more than half of the Senate's 45 Republicans in GOP Leader Bob Dole's office.

City officials are eager to snare an Amtrak passenger train route through Evansville, but the proposal's biggest booster may be a 15-year-old train buff who has launched his own campaign for the service. In recognition of his enthusiasm, Chris Ellison was named an honorary member of the local Amtrak Task Force Thursday. Since he was 5, Ellison has been fascinated by railroads, especially Amtrak. The high school freshman was delighted by the recent announcement that Amtrak would send a test train through Evansville to consider a route from Chicago to Florida.

Abortion debate is over, professor says

By L. PETER YOB
News Writer

The debate on abortion is over and the pro-life movement won years ago.

That is the view of Valparaiso Law Professor John Potts. To support his contention, Potts cites Webster's Collegiate Dictionary, the dictionary defines child as, "an unborn or recently born person."

Potts said that "the denial of the fact that unborn are human beings has the intellectual status of contending that the Earth is flat."

His comments came yesterday as part of Pro-Life Day at Notre Dame. Events and speakers were sponsored by ND/SMC Right to Life.

Potts focused on two issues as he discussed the future of the pro-life movement, local activity and an upcoming pro-life rally in Washington, D.C.

One area in which he believes the pro-life movement should focus is "increased political and local activity."

He said that this year there were attempts to pass a ban on sex-selected abortions, but that the legislation failed to be passed. There was a failed attempt to pass an informed consent law in Indiana.

Potts also discussed local pro-life activities in Northern Indiana.

He said that in Valparaiso, there are already seven buses going to the April 28 rally in Washington. Professor Potts appealed to students to go to the rally, and said that if any ND students are interested in attending, they should contact him through the Valparaiso Law School.

"In a non-musical sense, this is our Woodstock," he said, predicting that at least 200,000 would attend and it could be the largest rally ever.

Potts gave the last talk in a day of pro-life speeches and activities at ND.

Preceding Potts was a video titled "Champions for Life" and a speech by Chris Godfrey, a member of the 1986 New York Giants Super Bowl Championship Team.

A symbolic graveyard was set up near the LaFortune Student Center, made up of 100 small white crosses. Each cross represented 16,000 abortions conducted in the U.S. each year, according to Maria Rhomberg, one of the organizers of the day.

"The speakers were excellent," said Rhomberg, adding that she was disappointed with the turnout. She said that the low turnout was due to "a lot of factors," noting the time of year, the fact that people may not have known about the speakers and apathy as possible reasons.

She said that she hopes that ND/SMC Right to Life takes a more activist role next year on campus and in the community.

ND administration expresses optimism about recycling program

By FRANK RIVERA
News Writer

Despite operating at a loss, the Notre Dame administration has expressed optimism in the recycling process at the University in the following years.

"The costs have been higher than what we have been paid for the recycled items," said James Lyphout, assistant vice president for Business Affairs. "And that's because, as with any program, the starting costs were high."

According to Lyphout, revenues from the period of October 1989 to February 1990 were $7,677 while the costs for the same period have been $11,268, but should even out by next year.

"The routine operating costs are going to be a lot less, obviously, than the starting costs," said Lyphout. "When that happens, the revenues will start to outpace the costs."

Lyphout said the recycling is being handled by Superior Waste Systems of South Bend, in conjunction with the University and student groups. Janitors carry out the materials to be picked up by a University maintenance truck which, in turn, deposits them in a centrally located dumpster. Superior Waste Systems then picks up the container for processing and credits the University with the poundage.

"There's been no money received because we have been buying our boxes and liners from Superior Waste (Systems), so we're just having them credit our expenses with the revenue. So there's no money changing hands yet," said Lyphout.

"As a matter of fact," said Lyphout, "we still owe them about $2,000, but by the end of the year, we should be even."

The newspaper and glass recycling processes, according to Lyphout, have not been implemented to a great extent on campus.

"We've tried the most obvious things, and as we become more familiar with what it takes, we'll become a little more sophisticated in our efforts," said Lyphout.

The recycling of newspapers, according to Lyphout, is being done for ecological purposes rather than for the sake of financial gain resulting in the process.

"Unfortunately right now, there is no financial value for the newspapers," said Lyphout. "As a matter of fact, some recyclers are charging to pick up the papers. There is just no market for them."

There has been no major problem with the recycling process thus far, said Lyphout.

"I have had a couple of complaints from rectors who don't like the boxes in the residence halls. They think they are unattractive and a nuisance; however, they've all cooperated. There's been no real problem," said Lyphout.

Lyphout expressed confidence in the progress of the program in its inaugural year.

"I think, all things considered, it has been fairly successful," said Lyphout. "With the same kind of cooperation next year, I think we'll have a good program that might even turn a little bit of profit."

Eastern's day in court

Eastern Airlines President Phil Bakes, left, arrives for a bankruptcy hearing in New York Wednesday with attorney Bruce Zirinsky. Eastern is resisting requests by its unions and unsecured creditors to appoint a trustee for the financially sagging company and take control away from Frank Lorenzo and parent Texas Air Corporation.

Eastern strikers seek negotiation

MIAMI (AP) — Eastern Airlines' striking Machinists, victorious in their quest to oust last company boss Frank Lorenzo, looked ahead Thursday to negotiating a back-to-work pact that could include deep concessions.

"There obviously is going to be tremendous sacrifices over the next year, maybe two years or more, to bring us back to normalcy ... but it's not going to be done in the interest of Frank Lorenzo," Eastern Machinist president Charles Bryan told about 100 strikers gathered at union headquarters near Miami International Airport.

Lorenzo, chairman of Eastern's parent Texas Air Corp., was ousted from control of Eastern in New York late Wednesday by U.S. Bankruptcy Judge Burton Lifland, who named former airline executive Martin Shugrue as special trustee of the Miami-based carrier.

Eastern officials said Thursday they will not appeal the appointment. They applauded Lifland's indications that the airline can be reorganized rather than liquidated.

Lorenzo pledged to help Shugrue assume the helm "in all reasonable ways that we can."

Appointment of a trustee had been a major goal for striking workers, who contend Lorenzo has funneled valuable Eastern assets to the company's non-union sister carrier, Continental Airlines.

Lifland made the appointment after Eastern's unsecured creditors, who are owed $980 million, argued that present management was unable to bring the company out of its financial tailspin.

Eastern spokesman Bob Hunter said the court's decision to release $80 million from Eastern's escrow account will keep the carrier in operation through mid-1990.

"It's still business as usual," said Hunter.

But problems remain. Eastern lost $852.3 million last year, and creditors say the company has failed to regain the confidence of consumers and travel agents since the strike.

"It's difficult to say. There is no way of telling right now."

Hurley stated that an occurrence at Purdue University on April 17 may or may not be related to these attacks. At Purdue, an individual approached female students on campus claiming he was from "Exquisite Photography."

"He attempted to get the students names, addresses, and body measurements," Hurley said. He would then try and lure them over to his van and photograph them, according to Hurley.

Notre Dame Security is continuing its investigation of both cases. A composite sketch of the attacker or attackers is being put together with the help of the descriptions given by both victims, according to Hurley.

The Copy Shop, Jordan Motors, Price Waterhouse and Louie's Tux Shop.

Scheduled events for the evening include music from both The Groove and a local jazz band. Other events include expositional booths from 13 countries which will present unique facts about each culture to those attending the ball. There will also be hors d'oeuvres served which will be representative of each national cuisine.

Anyone interested may attend the ball. Expected attendance includes students, members of the South Bend community, 1,200 alumni and various members of Friends of the Snite. Tickets will be available at the door, and prices are $10 per student couple, $6 per single student, $20 per adult couple and $12 per single adult.

The event will begin at 9:30 p.m. and will run until 1:30 a.m. Any students interested in volunteering for next year's Charity Ball can contact JoBeth Hayes at 283-4128.

Kelly had been at a diplomatic meeting in West Germany.

Djerjian held a series of meetings at Syria's Foreign Ministry. He did not speak to reporters.

Informed sources in Damascus, speaking on condition of anonymity, confirmed the problem with the hostage-release centered on whether Kelly, the former U.S. ambassador to Lebanon, would go to Damascus.

The kidnapers had said Wednesday that a captive would be freed within 48 hours, or by Friday evening, in response to requests from Iran and Syria. Their leaders have encouraged an end to the hostage crisis. The group implied that some sort of exchange was involved.

That communique was accompanied by an instant photograph of Jesse Turner of Boise, Idaho — the first photo of him alone since three months after his abduction. The group also holds Alann Steen.

Toxic chemicals still prominent, EPA says

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's factories released 4.6 billion pounds of toxic chemicals, including scores of carcinogens, in 1988, the Environmental Protection Agency reported Thursday. More than half of the pollutants went into the air.

The pollution, emitted from 19,762 industrial plants nationwide, was 9 percent less than a year earlier, but the EPA said the decline may be a result of better record keeping.

EPA officials cautioned that they are unable from the raw figures, the latest available, to assess the health risks to individuals. The data do not take into account levels of toxicity, release concentrations and actual exposure.

Nevertheless, federal officials have been surprised at the high volume of releases of toxic chemicals in both 1987, when 5 billion pounds of pollution was reported, and 1988. The reporting requirement covers 332 toxic chemicals.

"The figures are absolutely shocking," declared Rep. Gerry Sikorski, D-Minn., who along with several other members of Congress obtained a special computer run on the EPA figures and provided additional details about the releases.

Among the chemicals routinely emitted from industrial sources were 77 carcinogens. The most widely released cancer-causing chemical—115 million pounds—was dichloromethane, a chemical often used as an industrial solvent and paint stripper.

Industry released a total of 281 million pounds of carcinogens, including chemicals such as arsenic, benzene and vinyl chloride.

"We've got to bring these pollution numbers down," EPA Administrator William Reilly said as he released the latest data.

Clean-air legislation that already has passed the Senate and is being considered in the House would impose stringent controls on toxic industrial chemicals and require companies to use the best available technology to curb releases.

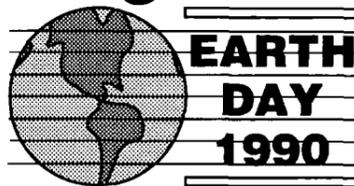

Under current law, the EPA is required to deal with each chemical separately. In more than a decade, it has placed controls on only eight of the hundreds of toxic chemicals in use. Many of the chemicals, however, are subject to local and state regulation.

The releases reported by industry, however, are legal and within federal standards, officials said.

Chemical and allied industries accounted for about half of the total releases. Two states with a concentration of petrochemical plants—Louisiana and Texas—accounted for more than one-fourth of the totals.

Earth Day is 'big event' this year

By CLAIRE ROBINSON
News Writer

Notre Dame will be holding a series of events this Sunday to observe the twentieth anniversary of National Earth Day.

The day begins at 9 a.m. with a five kilometer run through campus, the "Nature Streak," according to Michael Garvey, assistant director of the department of Public Relations and Information. Students may register in the dining halls.

Later a mass will take place at the Grotto at 11:30 a.m. Father Edward Malloy and Father Michael Himes will preside. Afterwards there will be a tree planting ceremony, at 12:30 p.m.

From noon until 7:30 p.m. there will be an Earth Day Fair on the Fieldhouse Mall. The fair will feature campus bands, refreshments and information on the environment. The afternoon will also include activities to heighten awareness of environmental issues, such as an Earth Day obstacle course, a Styrofoam sculpture building contest and a toxins scavenger hunt.

Malloy named to nationwide 'Points of Light' group, promoting social service

By John Cronin
News Writer

Father Edward Malloy has been selected as a founding director of a nationwide organization designed to promote community service.

The Points of Light Initiative, an organization inspired by President Bush's campaign theme, selected Malloy because of Notre Dame's reputation for weaving community service into its educational system.

Malloy and the twelve other directors met at the White House for lunch with the President and First Lady on March 30 to initiate the program. The private non-profit, non-partisan organization is composed of a cross-section of leaders from business, educational and volunteer organizations each having previous experience with promoting service. It includes the presidents and chief executive officers of IBM, Coca-Cola, Walt Disney, and NBC, and several other individuals involved in education and service organizations.

Dailey said that some money might go to the Catholic Relief Services, or to the American Heart Association, and a request has been made to put the money towards the environmental aspects of their programs.

Other universities will be holding special events as well, said Dailey. The University of Arizona will be having an "eco fair," a sunset concert, powered by solar panels. Stanford University is holding an "environmental fast," trying to use as little water and energy as possible. Students at Princeton University plan to hold a "trash in," during which they will gather trash and dump it on the steps of Memorial Chapel.

Dailey expects a thousand students to participate in the Fieldhouse Mall events. Petitions will be circulated at the mall addressing both national and local environmental concerns. One petition will ask the government to ban chlorofluorocarbons; another will ask the University to "adopt more sound environmental policies," according to Dailey.

Happy 21 years on the 21st

"When I went to the first meeting I discovered that we were going to be the umbrella which was going to try to spawn various kinds of efforts in service," said Malloy.

The next task of the group involves expanding the foundation board and beginning to subdivide the tasks and make some decision on how to proceed.

"All the people who are on the board are inclined to want to see things happen tomorrow. One of the reasons that this is a private foundation and not a government one is to give us the freedom to get started more quickly," added Malloy.

Norway will sell oil to Lithuania if necessary

OSLO, Norway (AP) — Norway said Thursday that Lithuania is free to buy its oil, but it urged Moscow to lift an energy embargo against the Baltic republic before outside supplies are needed.

A Lithuanian delegation led by Prime Minister Kazimiera Prunskiene sought support from Norwegian leaders, but there were no immediate contracts or offers of government aid, said Foreign Minister Kjell Magne Bondevik.

"Norway has not used, and will not use, oil as a foreign policy tool," Bondevik said, adding that it was up to the oil companies to decide whether to sell to Lithuania.

The Oslo trip, planned weeks ago, coincided with the decision by Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev to close the tap of crude oil and restrict natural gas supplies to Lithuania for refusing to scrap pro-independence laws.

"We were expecting this," Mrs. Prunskiene said when told by reporters of the cutback on natural gas. "We believe Lithuania will survive without natural gas, but life will be reduced, cut off from normal possibilities."

Norway pumps 1.5 million barrels a day from North Sea fields, making it the second-largest exporter outside the OPEC oil cartel. It also exports natural gas, but it has no way to deliver it to Lithuania.

Bondevik said he summoned Soviet Ambassador Alexandre Teterine to express Norway's opposition to the use of economic pressure to thwart Lithuania's independence drive.

He said Norway favored flexibility by both Moscow and Lithuania and urged negotiations without pressure or preconditions, before the conflict

USSR shuts off most of Baltic gas

VILNIUS, U.S.S.R. (AP) — The Kremlin tightened its economic squeeze Thursday on Lithuania by shutting off more than 80 percent of the Baltic republic's gas supply following a complete cutoff of oil the previous night.

The independence-minded republic promptly ordered that the first to lose their energy supplies will be Soviet military bases and factories run by Moscow, according to the parliament's press office.

Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev started his most drastic attempt to force Lithuania to retreat from its March 11 declaration of independence late Wednesday when a pipeline to Lithuania's only oil refinery was shut off.

Lithuanian Energy Minister Leonas Asmantas ordered immediate gasoline rationing of 30 liters per month for private cars, according to Daina Kalendra of the parliamentary press office. A liter is slightly more than one quart.

"Where we can give up the use of gas, gasoline, any heating or lighting, let us do this, and then we will be able to survive longer and, maybe, we will not be intimidated by these sanctions," government spokesman Ceslovas Juršenas said on Lithuanian radio.

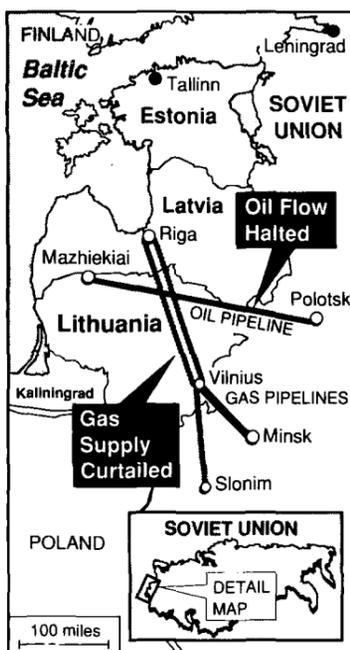

He said that in the areas of fuel and power, Lithuanians would be put on "a starvation diet."

Lithuania, forcibly incorporated into the Soviet Union in 1940, is entirely dependent on Moscow for its oil and gas, which it receives at below-market prices.

Soviet Foreign Ministry spokesman Vadim Perfiliev told reporters Thursday that Moscow "might have some other restrictions" to impose on Lithuania, but he refused to elaborate.

In Key Largo, Fla., President Bush and visiting French President Francois Mitterrand said they were both "deeply disturbed" by the Kremlin's recent steps regarding Lithuania. Bush told reporters he was "considering appropriate measures to be taken in light of Soviet actions."

Asmantas said the 96 factories in Lithuania run by Moscow ministries and Soviet military bases would be the first to feel the pinch of short supplies. He said hospitals would be last, Kalendra reported.

EPA rejects pesticide petition

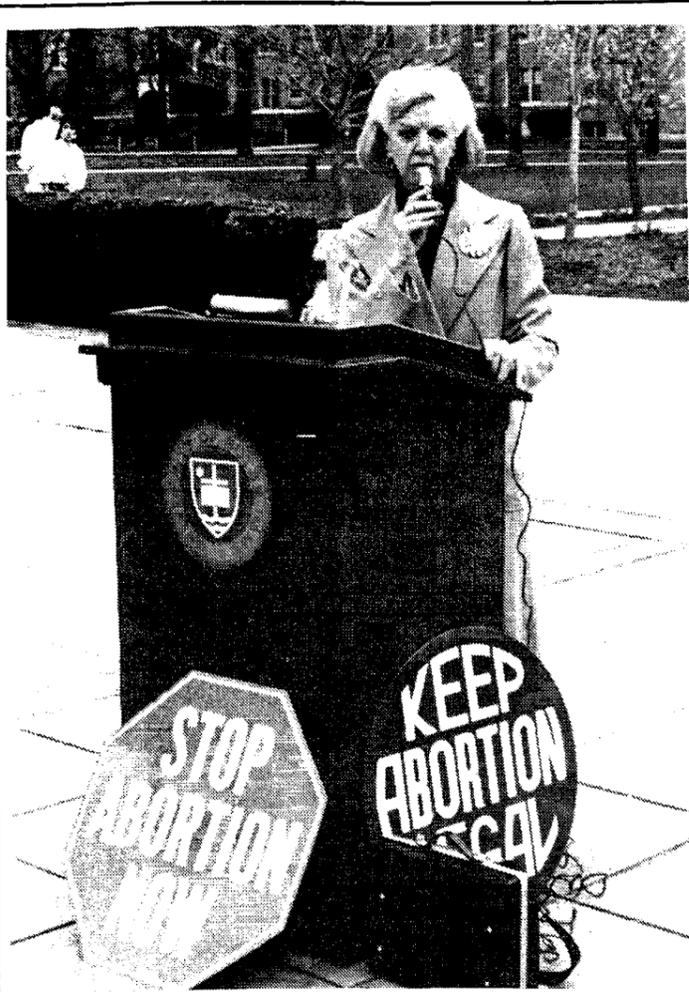

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Environmental Protection Agency on Thursday rejected a petition from environmentalists asking that any pesticide that poses even a slight cancer risk be prohibited for use on processed foods.

The EPA affirmed its intention not to use the "zero-tolerance" standard in cases where the cancer risk is considered negligible. Several suits are pending before various federal courts challenging the EPA position.

Under a provision of the federal pesticide laws, a cancer-causing pesticide must be prohibited for use on processed food products if even the slightest residue levels are found. The "zero tolerance" standard is called the Delaney Clause after the congressman who pushed for its enactment.

The EPA in 1988 concluded that because of modern techniques that can discern even exceedingly small amounts of pesticide residue, it would not invoke the Delaney Clause in cases where residue levels were "negligible."

That prompted several environmental groups, including the Natural Resources Defense Council, to file a petition challenging the EPA policy.

Bishop offers insight on Peruvian economic trials

By JOE MOODY
Assistant News Editor

Having lived in the economically and politically ravaged country of Peru, Bishop Juan Cipriani's lecture last night offered insights and perceptions, from the Church's point of view, on the state of this impoverished area in Latin America.

"The economic situation in Ayacucho (Peru) is horrible," said Cipriani, pointing out that the illiteracy rate there is close to 50 percent and the average salary is a meager $20 per month.

The Catholic Church, as far as day to day life, is taking care of almost 50,000 families in Ayacucho. "It is in an emergency situation." But the current aid is not the solution, but a bridge to the solution, said Cipriani.

The Church is caught between the violence of the terrorist guerrilla group known as "The Shining Path," the corruption of the state, and drug dealers. "I try not to have contact with the army or with the terrorists. But I try to let the people know that I stand for them," Cipriani noted. For fear of his own safety, Cipriani said, "I am in the hands of God. I have lots of peace."

On the controversial subject of Liberation Theology, Cipriani said, "I've studied it. I've read it. I've met with many of its influential authors." He said that though Liberation Theology has awakened many people up to the social problems of Latin America, and they definitely see the problems facing the country, they, however, do not have the means to actually solve the problems.

Liberation Theology has disqualified the social doctrines of the Church, said Cipriani, "And I for one could say that there is no institution in the world that has done more socially than the Catholic Church."

As for the internal situation, Cipriani expressed that he has grown weary of the "revolutionary movements" that spring up in Latin America, saying that they are short-lived and offer no permanent solution.

Cipriani offered hopes that an "International System" could be developed that could aid in stopping the financial wrongdoings and exuberant debts existent in Latin America.

Cipriani pointed out that many bishops or priests would not want to go to Ayacucho, but that in the Catholic Church we must obey the Pope, "so I went."

Cipriani is the auxiliary bishop of Ayacucho, Peru. His lecture, titled "The Catholic Church and Social Change in Latin America" was given last night in Notre Dame's Law School Courtroom.

He is touring the United States to speak about the Catholic Church's involvement in the social affairs of Latin America, according to Michael Garvey of Notre Dame's Department of Public Relations and Information.

Bishop Cipriani's lecture was sponsored by the Graduate Student Union Intellectual Life Committee and the Center for Social Concerns.

NATO summit on changing Europe possible this year

KEY LARGO, Fla. (AP) — French President Francois Mitterrand on Thursday proposed to President George Bush that the 16 NATO allies hold a summit before year's end to discuss the changing face of Europe.

Mitterrand, emerging from several hours of talks with Bush at a seaside resort, said Bush agreed with the idea.

The summit would discuss the "requirements of the new times ahead," Mitterrand said.

But although both men stressed the importance of maintaining cohesion within NATO and maintaining U.S. troops in Europe, Mitterrand appeared to place more emphasis on European self-reliance.

NATO must coordinate more closely "with the other bodies within which the allies find themselves together in Europe," including the 12-nation European Economic Community and the 35-nation Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe, the French president said.

"And I would add a very important additional note on this, to prepare the Europeans for the idea of playing an increased role in working for their own defense," said Mitterrand.

"And with that in mind, I suggested to President Bush, and he agreed, that we propose to our allies to hold a summit of the alliance before the end of the year," he said.

Mitterrand said Europeans should also speed up their economic and political union.

Half the decade's drug goals met Cocaine use rising among adolescents

ATLANTA (AP) — Nearly half of the U.S. government's decade-long goals for drug and alcohol abuse have been met, but others haven't been reached because of the spread of cocaine use, federal health researchers said Thursday.

Goals set in 1980 for curbing drunken-driving deaths, alcohol consumption and cirrhosis within the decade have been met, the national Centers for Disease Control reported Thursday.

But goals set for teen-age and young adult abstinence from drugs and booze have been met only in part, as cocaine use has increased dramatically, the CDC said.

"The percentage of persons using cocaine at least once a week has increased from 5.3 percent in 1985 to 10.5 percent in 1988," the Atlanta-based agency reported.

"Increased use of cocaine among adolescents is of particular concern," the CDC said, noting that previously published studies say people who are younger when they first try drugs or alcohol have more substance abuse problems as adults.

However, the CDC said, "Since 1980, substantial progress has been made toward increasing public knowledge and awareness of the adverse social and health consequences associated with the misuse of alcohol and drugs. Risk perception has generally increased."

The goals for the end of 1990 were outlined in a 1980 report from the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services. Of eight major goals for curbing drug and alcohol abuse, the CDC said, three have been met, one is likely to be met and four have been met only in part.

Already achieved, according to the what the CDC said was most recent data available:

•Fatalities from all alcohol-related car crashes should be less than 9.5 per 100,000 population per year. That level was reached in 1988, after years of decline.

•Cirrhosis deaths should be less than 12 per 100,000 per year. The rate fell from 13.5 in 1978 to less than 10 by 1986.

•Per capita consumption of alcohol should not exceed the 1978 level of 2.7 gallons. By 1987, it stood at less than 2.6 gallons, the lowest level since 1958.

Probable:

•More than nine in 10 women should be aware of the risks of pregnancy and drinking, specifically fetal alcohol syndrome. Such awareness, measured at 73 percent in a 1979 poll, had risen to 88 percent by 1985.

Achieved only in part:

•Adolescents ages 12-17 abstaining from alcohol or drugs should exceed 1977 levels. Alcohol abstinence rose from 69 percent in 1977 to 75 percent in 1988, and marijuana abstinence rose from 83 percent to 94 percent. But cocaine abstinence fell 0.3 percent, from 99.2 percent of adolescents to 98.9 percent.

•Young adults 18-25 reporting frequent drug use — five days a month — should not exceed 1977 levels. Frequent use of marijuana in this group declined from 19 percent in 1977 to 7 percent in 1988, but frequent use of other drugs rose.

Dear Mom and Dad,

There's something that I've been wanting to tell you. I'm telling you this because I love you, both very much and want to share this part of my with you.

I'm gay.

I guess you may be shocked or surprised, maybe angry or confused. I want you to know that you are in no way to blame for this. In fact, there is no blame to place -- I'm not ashamed or embarrassed about being gay. It isn't something that was caused by bad parenting, nor was I seduced or recruited or molested. It's not that I can't find girls that like me, or anything like that. Scientists and sociologists don't exactly know why I'm gay, but they almost all agree that it isn't a choice I made, that I just am and no amount of therapy or counselling will change that.

You may be wondering why I don't seem gay, why I don't fit the picture you have of gay people. You're probably thinking, "I don't want my son to become like those people." You guys should know that the stereotypes that you have been conditioned to accept about gay people simply don't hold -- nearly all gay people are indistinguishable from straights. We don't swish, we don't limp, we don't want to wear dresses. I'm the same person I always was, the same son you've loved and been proud of for over twenty years.

I hope that telling you this brings us closer together. I love you both and only told you this because I hoped you would want to know this way.

Love,

(Your name here)

Being gay can be tough. From as long back as you can remember, you have always felt these feelings that were never quite in sync with what society expects you to feel.

That's ok for a few years -- it's easy enough to hide and go on with your life. But then it starts to build up. You get discouraged and depressed because you're constantly trying to hide something, trying to deceive your family and friends -- the people closest to you.

Some gay people live their entire lives this way. Hiding, channeling all their energy into being someone they're not. Some straight people would like to keep it that way. But that's not right.

So you finally get up your courage and tell a friend or two. That is, unless you constantly hear them around the dorm and in classes talking about hating "fags." Maybe you even decide to tell your parents. Risking the chance that they may throw you out onto the street, and call you "anti-family."

Being gay isn't always easy. But with acceptance and understanding from straight people, it can be.

If you're straight and want to learn more about homosexuality and gay people, write or call us.

Dorms deserve option of two spring SYRs

On Wednesday, the Campus Life Council voted on recommendations suggested by the Student Government Committee's report on All-Hall Semi-Formals. At the meeting a recommendation concerning two semi-formals in the spring, if the halls can acquire the necessary attendance, was denied. This decision needs to be re-evaluated.

Though students, faculty and administrators on the Council said that semi-formals are positive aspects of students' social lives and opportunities for men and women to interact, members of the Administration and staff spoke against the idea of two semi-formals in the spring. They said that an additional semi-formal would suggest that semi-formals are the only opportunities for male/female interaction.

However, in the report, students showed great interest in increasing the number of semi-formals. Ninety-five percent of the students surveyed by the committee said that semi-formals were opportunities for positive interaction with the opposite sex and members of the hall and 80 percent stated that they would attend additional semi-formals. Furthermore, many students felt that the semi-formals serve a very important social function and also aids in dating.

Therefore, if the students desire more semi-formals, they should be granted the opportunity. If the halls have the adequate funds and the student support, there should be no reason why they cannot have more semi-formals. In addition, since the semi-formals are seen as positive interaction between men and women, additional semi-formals would give the men and women more opportunities to break down the barriers.

"The real issue is how to be more creative," as Father Michael Sullivan, rector of Carroll, said. His words serve as a challenge to student leaders in Student Government, Student Union Board, Student Senate and Hall government, to find ways for males and females to interact on campus.

Student leaders cannot let the issues brought up in this report die. If dorms have the support for two semi-formals in the spring, they should be able to hold the dances. Finally, students, faculty, staff and administrators need to make a commitment to improving male and female relations before students are completely driven off campus in search of a decent social life.

Environmental leaders may mislead followers

Dear Editor:

Over the past few weeks, our campus has been bombarded with Earth Day supporters at the dining halls and in the library concourse. I was pretty curious at first and wondered exactly what "Earth Day" was all about. I headed over to the library and did a little bit of investigating. I hope all of you out there who are signing pledges and making donations read what I discovered.

Paul Ehrlich, a director of Earth Day 1990 who is considered an "authority" on environmental issues, predicted that by 1979 all important animal life in the sea would be extinct and by 1984 the U.S. would literally be "dying of thirst." Ehrlich also proposed controlling the population through mandatory measures if necessary, "Abortion is a highly effective method in the armory of population control...Many of my colleagues feel that some sort of compulsory birth regulation would be necessary to achieve control." One plan often mentioned involves the addition of temporary sterilants to water supplies or staple food. Doses of the antidote would be carefully rationed by the government to produce the desired population size.

One of the past issues of "The Environmental Handbook" stated, "...at least 10 percent of the defense budget must be allocated to birth control and abortion in the United States and abroad."

In 1989 Ehrlich approved of a plan to raise the price of gasoline to at least $2.30 per gallon to limit its consumption.

Furthermore, "Handbook" contributor Keith Lampe stated, "Competition (capitalism) must be phased out and replaced with cooperative economic models."

Lynn White, another Earth Day activist and "Handbook" contributor, even goes so far as to attack Christianity, "More science and more technology are not going to get us out of the present ecologic crisis until we find a new religion, or rethink our old one...we shall continue to have a worsening ecologic crisis until we reject the Christian axiom that nature has no reason for existence save to serve man."

Gaylord Nelson claimed on a former Earth Day, "Man is just one of the creatures that the Lord put on this earth and is not more important than all the rest."

I could go on and on with my findings. The point is most of us are being misled and are not fully aware of what supporting Earth Day really means. By supporting Earth Day, you are supporting its leaders and activists who advocate extremist means for population control, compulsory "conservation," measures that infringe upon our constitutional rights and worldwide control of the environment through worldwide control of the people. Now, isn't this going just a little bit too far? Before you make a pledge and wear one of those cute little Earth Day pins, think about it.

Omitted words change intent of abortion letter

Dear Editor:

I appreciate the printing of my article "Pro-choicers Caricature of Pro-lifers Is Misleading." (The Observer, April 17) However, in the middle column, second full paragraph, the sentence should have read, "...if the imposition of moral decisions is what devalues women... and pro-lifers don't impose them, then pro-lifers don't devalue women" - not "pro-lifers impose them." The latter reading with the omission of "don't" seriously distorts my claim.

St. Ed's marks Earth Day with Carnival

 accent writer

Is the only reason you get outside these days to go from classroom to classroom, dorm to dining hall, the Rock for racquetball, LaFortune for laundry?

Well, in honor of Earth Week, why not take a chance and do something extraordinary: spend the day enjoying St. Ed's Charity Carnival. It will take place this Sunday from 11 a.m. to 8 p.m. at Fieldhouse Mall.

Thirteen dorms will each provide a booth for the carnival. Students can get their mugs drawn by a caricaturist or test their testosterone levels on the perennial favorite bell ringer. Students can challenge friends to a fierce game of ring toss, hockey shoot, basketball shoot, darts (at the target!), and the mighty bean-bag toss.

A virtual plethora of prizes will be at the disposal of all the winners. Besides the unadulterated joy of non-academic accomplishment, they can win a goldfish, shot-glasses, mini-basketballs, or the piece de resistance: a gift certificate to local restaurants.

The feature which most diligently attracts crowds year after year is the classic dunk-tank. Come and see Notre Dame celebrities at the mercy of a student's throwing arm. A Golden Dunk Award will be given to the dunkee who attracts the largest crowd. If anything, try to find some time to go out to cheer on your favorite drip.

The two coordinators of the second annual St. Ed's carnival are Jim Milligan and Tony Porcelli. When asked to give a comment he responded splendidly with "who says you can't change the world and have fun doing it too?" The proceeds will go to a local charity of each participating dorm's choice. Some representatives for Earth Day will be present to help increase environmental awareness.

Clowns and jugglers will appear from beginning to end, and there will be continuous music from various bands, including Boat House Blues, and St. Paul and the Martyrs. Both traditional carnival food and multi-cultural food will be served throughout the day. Admission and entertainment are free. Games are reasonably priced at one dollar, with all proceeds going to charity.

The fourth annual Fisher Regatta will take place this Saturday, April 21, at St. Mary's Lake. It began four years ago when Jay Farraher, now a senior, began what has become a "modern tradition" on the ND campus.

He felt a dorm event for Fisher would create dorm spirit and unity, not only for the dorm but for the ND community as well. Farraher decided it would be best if it worked as a charity event. Fisher Regatta supports Andre House of Hospitality, a food shelter sponsored by the brothers of the Holy Cross Order. Although Masses are dedicated to Andre House and many Fisher residents volunteer their time to it year round, this event calls for involvement of the entire campus.

All money raised by the Fisher Regatta has been donated to Andre House for the past three years. This year, however, it was decided that the money would be divided between Andre House of Hospitality and the South Bend Center for the Homeless. The latter will be donated in memory of the late William Hickey, the University Food Services director who was instrumental in giving Fisher Regatta a good

Holy Cross tries to bring ideals of 60's to ND with Hogstock

accent writer

After Woodstock there was no place left to grow, no way for things to get any bigger, nothing that could be more exciting or gargantuan." --Jon Landau, author of American Music: From Storyville to Woodstock

Obviously Mr. Landau has not heard about the festival known as Hogstock, which will transport the Notre Dame community back to the "Summer of Love." Holy Cross Hall has secured six local bands and accompanying livestock to perform Saturday following the Fischer Regatta from 2:30 to 8:30 pm on Holy Cross field.

"It will be an afternoon of flower power," promises Hogstock commissioner Andy Hilger.

While rumors of appearances by Jimi Hendrix and Janis Joplin are being vehemently denied, their music will be performed by the various bands. The "Woodstock" theme will be faithfully preserved by selections of the Grateful Dead and more recent works such as the Who's Tommy, presented by the Boathouse Blues.

The six local bands will create explosions of symphonic joy lasting 45 minutes each, interwoven with various individuals rollicking through folk favorites. Tie-dyed t-shirts will be sold for $10 as Hilger envisions "lots of hippies coming in from all over the country."

Holy Cross also hopes to acquire real-life mascots from a local farmer to complete the carnival-like atmosphere. Whether the swine will join in the climax of the show (a free-form jam odyssey) remains to be seen. Members of the Generics and the 5 o'clock Shadows, however, will make cameo appearances in the blazing apocalyptic finale.

The convergence of melodious melody makers is not intended to stuff the dorm's treasure vault, but, explains Hilger, "because this is the hall's last year, we wanted something that Holy Cross would be remembered by."

"Hopefully the festival will continue, maybe adopted by another hall or by the Hall President's Council," wishes Holy Cross Hall President Pete LaFleur.

A professionally-lighted stage and flaming torches will keep the festival going on until the musicians or audience tires. A concession stand will also be selling inexpensive food for the hungry concert attenders. "Hamburgers, hot dogs, and sodas will be offered at base cost, not to turn a profit, but just to keep people there," stated LaFleur.

In a world swamped by techno-pop, "New Kids," cas-singles and global doom, this celebration of authentic rock and brotherly love is a welcome respite. Hogstock promises to usher in radical changes of thought and healthy hedonism. As Andy remarks, "daisies will be handed out and free love encouraged."

ire to generate dorm results in a 'modern tradition' start its first year by offering to serve a cookout during the races.

The tradition has continued and will be repeated this year as the North Dining Hall closes, and the cookout will take place by St. Mary's Lake. Fisher will provide a live band, Mr. E, as lunchtime entertainment.

Farragher and a committee have worked to receive support from Domino's Pizza, Coca-Cola, and radio station WAOR, who will broadcast live from the event.

Awards from local merchants, such as Domino's, will be presented to the winners of the men's and women's final heats, as well as the Fisher Hall Regatta Cup, which is kept for one year.

Twenty-three boats are expected to race tomorrow with the competition open to all dorms, off-campus students, and Saint Mary's students. Fisher was the winner the first year. Cavanaugh and Lewis have both won for the past two years, and St. Edward's has been noted twice for most original design on its boats. Boats have ranged from elaborate to simple-paddlewheel boats, a viking ship, and even one of several kegs tied together.

The radio broadcast is expected to begin at 11am, and the races should commence at noon. Holy Cross's Hog Stock will begin on Holy Cross field around 2:30 pm after the races.

It's the biggest event this weekend, and Fisher Regatta committee members hope it will be the most successful one in its short history. Said committee member Dan McDevitt, "This is Jay's (Farragher's) last year, and since he's the founder I hope it can be a really big turnout. We want to see as many people there as possible."

Father 'Black Matt' Miceli finishes 27 years of helping out Cavanaugh students

accent writer

Last fall the incoming freshmen of Cavanaugh Hall filed into the hall chapel to receive Father Miceli's official welcome to Notre Dame Mass. It is likely that any of Cavanaugh's thousands of alumni from the last three decades would be able to recall Miceli's simple recipe for staying out of trouble as an undergraduate.

"You'll be all right," Miceli says as he peers down imposingly from the pulpit at the front of the chapel, "as long as you avoid the three 'W's': wine. . . women. . . and weed." He is always quick to add the corollary that only the last "W" need be avoided completely.

This year's freshmen were the final recipients of Miceli's unique brand of wisdom. After 30 years as a dorm rector and 27 years as rector of Cavanaugh, Father Matthew Miceli will be turning in his latchkeys and flashlight for a more quiet spot on campus.

Miceli, whose term as rector is almost double that of his nearest competitor, has become a permanent fixture in the annals of Notre Dame history. "Father Miceli is like a country pastor who knows his people and they know him," commented Father Theodore Hesburgh, University president emeritus, "and that's a pretty good thing to be as rector of a dorm."

Miceli, who was known as "Black Matt" in earlier days for his rather strict governance of dorm life, has never relinquished his firm control over Cavanaugh affairs. However, his nickname as of late, "The Moch," may reflect the fact that he has softened somewhat over the years.

"You can be a little tough with kids when they know you're interested in them," Hesburgh, a long-time friend of Miceli, observed. After a stream of thousands of students, Miceli is still quick to match a name with a face, even if that means memorizing the pictures that he takes of every freshman when they arrive at the dorm.

On virtually any night, Miceli's door is open, and his light is on, until 2 or 3 in the morning for anyone who might want to stop in and talk about a problem. "The most important aspect of being rector is just being there when you're needed," Miceli said.

Father Thomas Blantz, a fourth floor resident of

'You'll be all right. . . as long as you avoid the three "W's": wine. . . women. . . and weed.' He is always quick to add the corollary that only the last "W" be avoided completely.

Cavanaugh, said that Miceli likes to have another priest in the dorm precisely because he realizes that students may wish to talk to a religious figure that is not also their rector. "In that way Father is extremely conscientious," Blantz said, adding that Miceli makes it a point to visit students when they are hospitalized or ill and keeps in contact with many alumni and parents with whom he has grown close.

Miceli established the Andy Sowder Fund ten years ago in memory of the Cavanaugh Hall president who died of spinal meningitis during his senior year. With proceeds from the annual hall play and unsolicited donations, the fund now exceeds $21,000, and interest is currently used to help needy students in the dorm.

With Miceli's rather hard-line reputation, a lot of people are not aware of the number of times he has gone to bat for someone in his dorm, said Hesburgh, recalling a specific instance several years ago.

An incident came to Hesburgh's office in which there was little question that the student's offense was grounds for expulsion, Hesburgh said. On Miceli's plea the student was allowed to graduate. Miceli "didn't want a single incident" to spoil the student's life, Hesburgh said. "I know when Matt was talking about someone in his hall, he wasn't just blowing smoke. He really knew him," Hesburgh said.

"Above all, Matt has an enormous enthusiasm for his job," Hesburgh said, "I've talked with students in his dorm and I know that. It's easy to get very stale in that job," he added.

Miceli, who has been dean of rectors for the past 14 years, will continue to teach theology and live on campus, although he is not sure yet of the location. He hopes to use his spare time to write down his memoirs and perhaps publish a book on his experiences as rector of Cavanaugh.

In his last newsletter to the dorm, Father Miceli officially announced his plans to retire and wrote: "My proudest title, next to my priestly title, has been, and will continue to be, Rector of Cavanaugh." The students of Cavanaugh will honor Miceli's retirement with a catered banquet in North Dining Hall.

"The closer you get to him, the better you like him, and you can't say that about most people," Hesburgh said.

Three theories on why God created man

God created man, the rabbis say, because He loves stories; and man, in his turn, loves stories of God.

Here, for Eastertide, are three stories of God which you may have missed in your own reading. After all the "Letters to God" taken up with arguments, I hope these creation accounts will be like the taste of sherbert that cleanses the palate between the courses of a heavy dinner.

The first is from Kazantzaki's "Zorba the Greek." One morning God woke up feeling in the dumps. "What a devil of a God I am! I haven't even any men to burn incense to me and swear by my name to help pass the time away! I've had enough of living all alone like an old screech owl."

He spat on his hands, pulled up his sleeves, put on his glasses, took a piece of earth, spat on it, made mud of it, kneaded it well, and made it into a little man which he stuck in the sun. Seven days later he pulled it out of the sun. It was baked. God looked at it and began to split his sides with laughter.

God says, "It's a pig standing up on its hind legs. That's not what I wanted at all! There's no mistake, I've made a mess of things!" So he picks him up by the scruff of his neck and kicks his backside. "Go on, clear off! All you've got to do now is to make other little pigs. The earth is yours! Now jump to it. . ."

But it wasn't a pig at all! It was wearing a felt hat, well-creased trousers, and Turkish slippers with red tassels. And in its belt was a pointed dagger with the words: "I'LL GET

Father Robert Griffin

Letters to a Lonely God

YOU!" engraved on it. This was Adam! God held out his hand for the other to kiss, but man twirled up his moustache and said: "Come on, old one, out of the way! Let me pass!"

In T.H. White's "The Once and Future King," the badger has written a treatise for his doctor's degree, showing why Man has become the master of animals. Which came first, the chicken or the egg? The badger tells us, "The first thing created was the egg."

When God manufactured all the eggs out of which creatures come, he called the embryos before him. He said, "Now, you embryos, here you are, all looking exactly the same, and We are going to give you the choice of what you want to be. When you grow up you will get bigger anyway, but We are pleased to grant you another gift as well.

"For instance, at the moment you cannot dig. Anybody who would like to turn his hands into a pair of spades or garden forks is allowed to do so. At present you can only use your mouths for eating. Anybody who would like to use his mouth as an offensive weapon, can change it by asking."

All the embryos thought the matter over. They were allowed two or three specializations. Some chose to use their arms as flying machines, while others selected to use their bodies as boats and their hands as oars.

The asking and granting took up two long days. At the very end of the sixth day, they had gotten through all the little embryos except one. This embryo was Man. "Well, Our little man," said God. "What can We do for you?"

"Please God," said the embryo, "I think that You made me in the shape which I now have for reasons best known to Yourselves, and that it would be rude to change. If I am to have my choice, I will stay as I am. I will stay a defenceless embryo all my life, doing my best to make myself a few feeble implements out of wood, iron, and other materials. I hope that the feeble decision of this small innocent will find favour with Yourselves."

"Well done," exclaimed the delighted Creator. "Here, all you embryos with your beaks and whatnots, look upon Our first man. He is the only one who has guessed Our riddle, out of all of you, and We have great pleasure in conferring upon him Order of Diminution over the Fowls of the Air, and the Beasts of the Earth, and Fishes of the Sea. . ."

In the first of his "Stories of God," Rilke tells us of God's hands. God began the creation, Rilke says, by making the earth. As long as only things were being made, God did not need to watch the earth continuously, and He forgot it completely when He began to create man.

Eventually, though, he was reminded of His need to be watchful by an angel's song: "Thou who seest all. . ." and then found He was in no position to help a lost bird home, for He had not seen out of which forest the poor creature had come.

Deciding not to take His eyes off the earth anymore, He left the work of creation to His hands. Although He wanted to find out what man might look like, He continued to gaze down at the earth. However, He had bidden His hands to show Him man before they should deliver him over to life.

Then suddenly, He saw something dark falling through space. Filled with foreboding, he called to His hands. They appeared, blotched with clay. "Where is man?" God thundered. The right hand flew at the left, "You dropped him!" Then the two raced each other in saying: "Man was so impatient. He was in such a worry to live. . ."

But God was very angry. He pushed both hands away. "I've finished with both of you; go and do as you like." Now, they are on their knees all day, doing penance. It appears that God was resting because He was angry with His hands.

In his second story of God, Rilke tells us how God called His right hand, which had so long been banished. When God saw it before Him in its beauty, He was inclined to forgiveness.

But He remembered in time and commanded, without looking at it, "You are to go down to earth. You are to take on the form you will see there among men, and to stand, naked, upon a mountain. As soon as you arrive below, go to a young woman and say to her, but very gently, 'I want to live.'

"At first there will be a little darkness about you and then a great darkness, which is called childhood, and then you will be a man, and climb the mountain as I have commanded you."

This right hand then took leave of the left and, bowing down before it, said, "Hail, Holy Ghost." But here St. Paul stepped up and smote off God's right hand, and an archangel caught it and bore it away.

A short time after, God, watching attentively, saw that men wearing armor were busy-ing themselves about a particular mountain. God expected to see His hand climb up there. But there came only a man in, as it seemed, a red cloud, who was dragging upwards some black swaying thing. . ."

This second tale of Rilke's has the title "The Stranger." The stranger, who listens to the story of God's hands so understandingly, is probably the dark Russian Christ who wanders over the earth unrecognized and persecuted.

In her poem, "God Speaks," Stevie (christened Florence) Smith writes: "I made Man with too many faults./Yet I love him/And if he wishes, I have a home above for him./I should like him to be happy. I am genial.

"He should not paint me as if I were abominable./ As for instance, that I had a son and gave him for their salvation./ This is one of the faults I meant. It leads to nervous prostration./ All the same, there is a difficulty. I should like him to be happy in heaven here./ But he cannot come by wishing. Only by being already at home here."

Outdoor track races off to Kansas Relay

By SHANNON FAY
Sports Writer

Last weekend, the Notre Dame men's track team qualified four athletes for the IC4A Outdoor Championships. Head Coach Joe Piane is hoping to add to his list of qualifiers this weekend when he and his squad travel to Indianapolis to compete in the Indiana Intercollegiate Outdoor Championships.

The task will not be easy, however, as the Irish face some stiff competition. Their opponents include Big 10 indoor champions Indiana, Indiana Intercollegiate indoor champions Purdue, as well as two tough squads from Indiana State and Ball State, each leading their respective conferences. Purdue is noted especially for their strength in the field events.

Piane, however, is optimistic about the weekend and sees the meet as a good opportunity for individuals to qualify for the IC4A's.

Freshman John Coyle, who has already qualified for the IC4A's in the 10,000-meter event, is attempting to double-qualify this weekend when he competes in the Steeplechase.

Classmate J.T. Burke and sophomore Shawn Schneider are also looking for a bid to the IC4A's in the 1,500-meter event. Burke is coming off a season-best time in last weekend's Stanford Invitational.

The Irish have high hopes in the 800-meter event as well, in which sophomores Brian Peppard and Kevin Whelen are competing.

Irish athletes who meet qualifying regulations this weekend at Indianapolis will join teammates Coyle, senior co-captain Yan Searcy (400-meter), sophomore Ryan Mihalko (javelin), and junior John Cole (high jump), for the IC4A Championships in May.

Kelchner scored six points for Tequila, a team which features five players over 6-2.

"We played good man-to-man defense up front and got a lot of easy layups today," said Brian Ratigan of Tequila. "We worked the ball inside a little bit for some easy buckets as well. The strength of our team is going to be that we have five guys who can shoot outside or penetrate. Everybody can play inside and out."

Mike MacKinnon scored three points for Tequila, all of which came on dunks off of steals as Tequila's intense defense propelled it into the final 128.

Top 32 seed Multiple Scoregasms won easily over Everclear, but suffered some damage when Adam Spahn broke his middle finger late in the game.

"We ran a lot, kind of like Loyola-Marymount," said Craig Olkiewicz of Multiple Scoregasms. "We spread the ball around so everybody got their points, but losing Adam is going to hurt. He's a scrapper and he plays good defense, so we're going to miss him."

Reckless Abandon, lined up Irish football players Gene McGuire, Joe Allen and Lindsay Knapp against Chunks of Frog Feed and had little difficulty posting a 21-13 triumph.

"We shot pretty good, passed well, and we really came together during the game," said Knapp. "We have a lot of beef inside, but right now Gene McGuire is in a cast (with a torn ligament in his right thumb), so we'll be able to get the boards better once he gets the cast off."

Nubian Pharaohs, a team consisting entirely of seniors, also won easily yesterday, disposing of Fergusons by a score of 21-9. Pharaohs used a balanced attack to coast to victory as Bobby Allen scored six points and Rod West and Steve Bynum added five apiece.

"We were really psyched up today," said Pharaoh Carl Collins. "We got a few quick baskets, and the momentum just went our way."

Duke and current No. 8 Texas Christian before dropping a 5-4 decision to current No. 3 Pepperdine.

A victory over Ohio State on Sunday would greatly enhance Notre Dame's appeal to the NCAA Tournament selection committee. The committee selects 20 teams, but at least one team from each of eight regions must be selected.

The top contenders along with Notre Dame in this region include Ohio State, Northwestern and Ball State. The Irish have beaten Ball State, but will not play Northwestern. Ohio State and Northwestern have not lost in the region, but Notre Dame dropped a decision to Wisconsin two weeks ago.

Four of the regions do not have a team in the Top 20, so logic says an at-large team must be in the first 16. If Notre Dame fails to get the regional bid, the 17th ranking would put the Irish on the tourney bubble.

"The poll is just a poll," Bayliss said. "I don't think we'll drop unless we lose matches. I don't think this team will fall apart in the end. We've still got a chance."

And that's a chance few would have given the Irish after that 8-1 loss to Michigan last January.

ND softball No. 1 seed in MCC

Irish set out to prevent repeat performance from Detroit

By RICHARD MATHURIN
Sports Writer

The young Notre Dame softball team continues its march towards national prominence as it prepares for the MCC tournament at Dayton, Ohio, this weekend. The team enters as the number one seed and will look to wrest the title from defending champion, Detroit, which has won three straight titles.

As a result of the number one seed, the Irish gain a first round bye and will face the winner of the No.4 Dayton and No.5 Butler match-up. The Irish seem to match up better with the Flyers, having beaten them twice this season. Notre Dame has split its two games with Butler. The Irish have tentatively decided to start sophomore pitcher Missy Linn, who has had two strong outings in her last starts. Freshman Staci Alford will pitch the next game, if the Irish advance.

"We hit better against both team's best pitchers," said Irish coach Brian Boulac. "Against their number two pitchers, we tried to overpower the ball instead of just putting it in play."

"We can't afford to look ahead, you have to take each game as it comes. They both gave us some trouble."

The Irish enter the tournament riding a six game winning streak, in which the offense seems to be coming alive. The Irish put up 15 runs in a victory over Butler and 10 in another victory over St. Joseph's (IN).

"We're getting better every outing," said Boulac. "We're starting to hit. At the beginning of the year, we were hitting the ball well, but they were right at people. If we find some gaps, we should be okay."

In the other bracket of the tournament, No.3 Detroit will face No.6 Evansville and No.7 Loyola will square off against No.2 St. Louis.

Women's tennis team travels to Illinois State

By BARB MORAN
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame women's tennis team will embark on its final road trip of the season when it heads to Illinois State tomorrow to face Indiana State and Illinois State.

The 14-8 Irish will compete without the services of injured top singles player Tracy Barton, but will reinstate Kristy Doran to her fifth-seed spot. Doran has been absent for several weeks with a wrist injury.

Even with Barton out of the picture, Irish coach Jay Louderback expects a mild weekend for the Irish, comparing his team's opponents to Northern Illinois, a team which Notre Dame beat 9-0 earlier in the season.

"I haven't seen either team play this year, but I don't think they're really strong," said Louderback. "They're both pretty strong at the top, but then they drop off and aren't nearly as strong. They may be a notch above Northern Illinois."

Louderback has not yet decided where the newly-returned Doran will figure into the Irish lineup.

"I don't know what we're going to do yet," said the coach. "We're playing two matches, so we'll probably play her singles in one match and doubles in the other."

Kristy Doran

That way, she'll get both a singles and a doubles in without having to play four matches in her first time back."

After tomorrow's matches, the Irish have only one regular-season game left before the NCAA tournament begins. Barton, who is ranked 39th nationally, is the team's best shot for the tourney, but has not competed in several weeks. Louderback said that this fact may have an effect on her chances in the NCAA's.

"(Her absence) could have an effect on how she plays," said Louderback. "But what may hurt her more is that we usually don't get to play many Big Ten matches in April. Not playing these tough matches may hurt her."

Doran is expected to play in the team's last match of the season next Friday at home against Butler University.

Sixers clinch Atlantic Division title

Philadelphia returns to top with inspired win over Detroit

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. (AP) — The Philadelphia 76ers clinched their first Atlantic Division championship since 1983 Thursday night as Charles Barkley scored 36 points to pace a 107-97 victory over the Detroit Pistons in a game marred by a melee in the closing seconds.

When the 76ers won the division in 1983, they went on to win the NBA championship.

The triumph, Philadelphia's 13th in its last 15 games, gave the 76ers a 53-28 record and made Sunday's finale against the Boston Celtics meaningless. The 76ers, who won three of four from the Pistons this season, snapped a five-game losing streak on Detroit's home court, where they last won on Nov. 11, 1987.

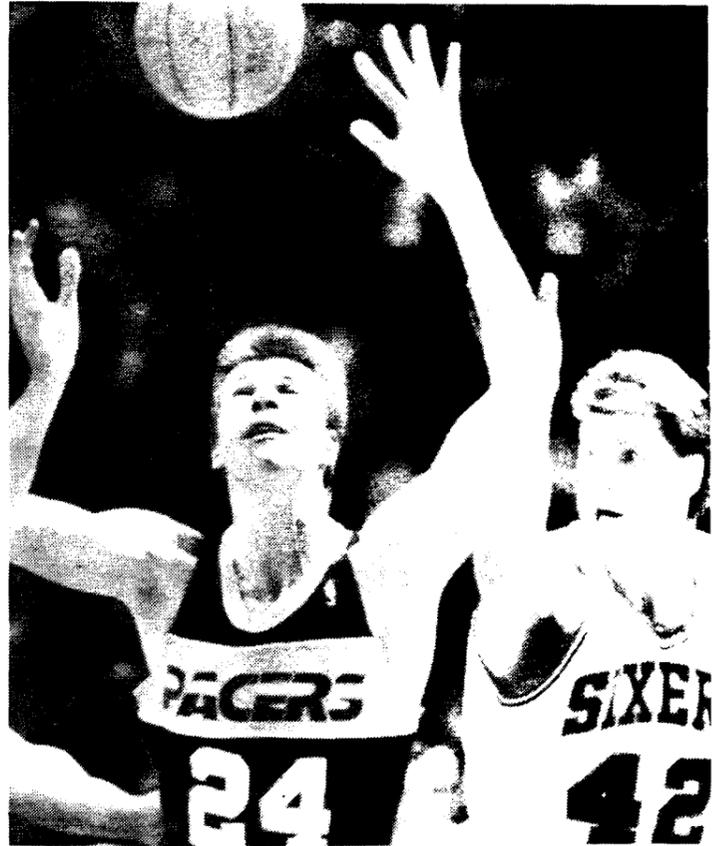

The altercation erupted with 14.8 seconds left and involved Barkley, Detroit's Bill Laimbeer and ex-Piston Rick Mahorn. At one point, Barkley, bleeding from a cut on his left temple, went to the bench and grabbed a metal chair before he was restrained by an assistant coach.

The melee broke out when Mahorn was fouled by Detroit's Dennis Rodman as he scored a basket. Mahorn started after Rodman, then Laimbeer and Barkley jumped in. Both benches emptied for several minutes before order was restored.

Bucks 96, Knicks 95

Jack Sikma made two free throws with 32 seconds left and the Milwaukee Bucks survived three last-second shots to beat the New York Knicks 96-95 Thursday night.

The victory boosted the Bucks' lead over Indiana for sixth place in the Eastern Conference to 1 1/2 games. The sixth-place team faces Chicago in the first round of the playoffs and No. 7 gets Atlantic Division champion Philadelphia.

Jay Humphries matched his season high with 29 points for Milwaukee and Kenny Walker had a season-high 24 to pace the Knicks, who played the final 14 1/2 minutes without center Patrick Ewing. Ewing was ejected with 2:31 left in the third quarter after picking up an unsportsmanlike elbowing foul and a technical.

Bulls 120, Bullets 117

Michael Jordan scored 32 points as the Chicago Bulls completed their home season with a best-ever 36-5 record by defeating the Washington Bullets 120-117 Thursday night.

The triumph assured Chicago of the home-court advantage in the first two rounds of the playoffs.

Ahead 118-117, the Bulls had the ball with Washington applying a full-court press. But Scottie Pippen's pass sailed over the head of John Paxson and the Bullets got the ball with seven seconds left.

tion, fluctuates from the completely inequitable to the incredibly adequate.

The top eight teams were seeded in the four brackets in no particular order. Nancy Rodrigue, this year's commissioner, said that she and her committee chose the top picks according to how the players did last year, as well as the number of varsity or former varsity athletes on each squad.

Returning from last year's championship team, Sandy Champman leads Five Girls Who Just Do It. Joining her are former volleyball player Rachel Hall as well as Missy Byrne, Jill Bodensteiner and Pandora Fecko. Five Girls opens play this Sunday at 4 p.m. on Lyons 11, just doing it against Knott Necessarily a B-Ball Team.

Other powerhouses to watch for include C.J.'s Gals, composed of Cathy Emigholz, a former Notre Dame varsity basketball player, as well as Maria Tettenborn, a St. Mary's hoopster. Former Irish walk-on Molly Mahoney and volleyball captain Kathy Cunningham lead The Meta Mucils as they try to go improve on last year's final eight finish. The team includes many of the member's of PE's interhall team that took second in this year's action. C.J. Gals takes on cheap entry Buck-45 Monday at 6 p.m. on Lyons 12 while The Meta Mucils open play as they attempt to regulate 5 Wild MBA Women Saturday at 4p.m.

Also starting action this Saturday on the Lyons Courts, the 5 Teenage Mutant Ninja Midgets will try to deny Denial of moving on to the second round and Slow Motion will try to pick up the speed as they prevent Jacks and the Beanstalk from climbing the tournament ladder.

Another final four team from last year's tourney, Hoosier Lawyers, should again look to vie for the title. The squad, comprised of five law students, lost to Muffet McGraw's second place team in the semis last year. While McGraw will be noticeably absent this spring as she prepares for motherhood, Hoosier Lawyers will begin play in the "Hammer, Nails, Guys...Tools?" Regional this Saturday at 6 p.m. on Lyons 12 as they try to put away Doin' Monroe Proud.

Lacrosse to face Ohio Wesleyan

Irish hope to maintain momentum following Cornell win

By DAVE DIETEMAN
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame lacrosse team dropped a 14-8 decision to the 16th-ranked Cornell Big Red last weekend, but it will attempt to rebound with a road match against traditional powerhouse Ohio Wesleyan on Saturday afternoon at 2 p.m.

The Irish, who fell to 7-5 on the season, performed admirably and are playing their best lacrosse of the season.

"I was pleased with three of the four quarters of action against Cornell," stated Notre Dame head coach Kevin Corrigan, "because we were playing very well - as well as we've ever played while I've been coaching here. It's encouraging to see that we are able to play that well, but we still haven't reached what we're looking for, which is winning games like that after sixty minutes of our best lacrosse."

The match was the first-ever lacrosse meeting between Notre Dame and Cornell, but the upcoming meeting with Ohio Wesleyan will be the tenth in the lifetime series between the Irish and the Battling Bishops. The Irish are at the bottom end of the series, with an 0-9 record against Ohio Wesleyan dating back to 1981.

The Battling Bishops, under the direction of Head Coach Mike Pressler, are 9-2 and were the NCAA Division III runner-up last season after posting a 13-4 record and seizing the Midwest Lacrosse Association championship. Ohio Wesleyan has 20 lettermen returning from last year's squad- four attackmen, nine midfielders, six defensemen and one goalkeeper.

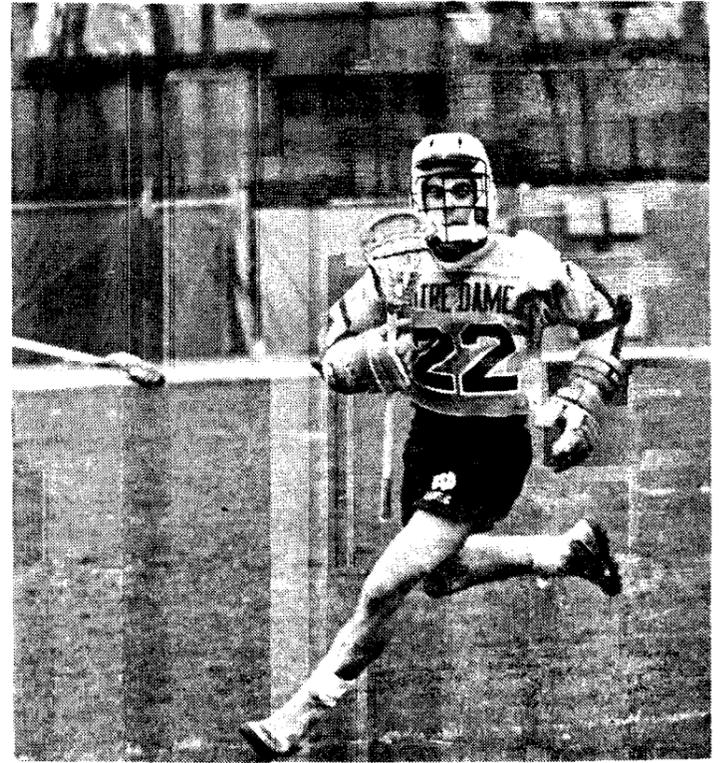

Last year, the Battling Bishops battered the Irish 18-5 at Notre Dame after posting a 17-1 win in 1988 and back-to-back 17-5 victories in 1986 and 1987.

Nonetheless, the Irish are firing on all cylinders at this point in the season and eagerly anticipate a chance to usurp nine years of dominance by the Battling Bishops.

"This is a team much like Cornell, because they have good players and good depth, but we can beat them. We know we can," said Corrigan. "We're going down there with every intention of beating them. This is not one of their greater teams, yet they're still winning. That's a tribute to strong discipline and coaching. But the big thing for us is probably that we know we can beat them. We're very capable of playing well against them, and we're excited to play now."

"We're peaking at the right time, and we're playing our best lacrosse now. What we need to do is dictate the tempo of the game to them, and force them to do things that they are not comfortable with. We really must take them out of their transition game."

ND men's golf team competes in Akron Invitational over weekend

By ANTHONY KING
Sports Writer

This weekend the Notre Dame men's golf team will travel to Ohio for the Akron Invitational tournament. The Irish will play 54 holes at the Firestone Country Club, a premiere club that hosts the World Series of Golf every year.

"Firestone is a premiere golf club, and we don't have too many chances where we play on premiere courses," said Notre Dame head coach George Thomas. "Because of this, our players will be enlightened as to what it is to be a good player."

The Irish will be competing against 35 teams from around the Midwest. It will be the biggest tourney the Irish will compete in this year, consisting of 54 holes of medal play on two courses. According to Irish co-captain Paul Nolta, this will be a great opportunity for the team.

"It will be the toughest competition we've had since playing Oklahoma State and the other big teams on our road trip," said Nolta. "A lot of the good small teams from the Midwest and Oklahoma will be there, so it really will be a good tourney."

Nolta and senior co-captain Pat Mohan will lead the Irish, after coming off a season-best finish of third at the Indianapolis Intercollegiate. Mohan is averaging 76.88 strokes this year, a career low. He is also coming off a career tying low round of 71 at Indianapolis. Freshman Chris Dayton, after sitting out last semester, has earned his way into the starting five, posting a 79.4 stroke average.

Baseball

Lund was beamed before Counsell laced a double to left-center to drive in two. One out later, Martinez ripped an inside curve into the leftfield corner for a double making it 7-5. Matt Krall stepped up and promptly fell behind 0-2. He battled to 2-2 and then smashed a homer to left just inside the foul pole to tie the score. Pinch-hit specialist Adam Maisano followed with a single, but the threat ended when Mike Miadich was thrown out stealing after missing three steal signs.

Todd Murphy started the Butler eighth with a line single to left. Pitching coach Mike Gibbons came out with the look for Livorsi who undeservedly was the losing pitcher. Mike Coffey gave up a hit to the first batter he faced and when Edwin Hartwell's throw went wild into the dugout, Butler had the lead.

"Two freshmen (Miadich and Hartwell) didn't execute, but they'll learn," commented Murphy.

The Irish had another chance to pull off the victory in the eighth, but Jason Martinez struck out on a 2-2 pitch with the bases loaded.

In game two, the Irish got back on the winning track with a strong pitching performance from Alan Walania. He threw a complete game, giving up 8 hits, 2 earned runs, and 2 walks. His ERA is now 2.97.

"Walania and Livorsi did a nice job today," said Murphy.

The game was 2-2 in the seventh when Irv Smith doubled with one out. Maisano was intentionally walked and Matt Krall singled off the pitchers glove to load the bases. Mike Rotkis pinch-hit for Kurtz and hit a sharp grounder up the middle. The shortstop fielded the ball to his left and threw high to the plate. As the catcher reached for the ball, Smith took his legs out. Although it appeared the catcher didn't have a foot on the plate, Smith was called out. With Craig Counsell at the plate, pinch-runner Mike Rooney scored the winning run as the next pitch went to the backstop.

The Irish will take on Big Ten power Michigan today at 3 p.m. at Covaleski. The Wolverines are 20-17 and always a contender for the Big Ten Championship. After the game, the team will bus to Dayton to take on the Flyers in four contests, a team they beat four times earlier this year.

NOTE: Joe Binkiewicz should be able to return from his ankle injury for next weekend's series with Detroit.

ND baseball splits pair with Butler University of Michigan, Dayton up next for Irish squad

By MIKE KAMRADT
Sports Writer

In yesterday's Observer, a writer who shall remain nameless called Butler one of the weak sisters of the MCC. Well, that Butler team acted more like a domineering mother yesterday, taking an 8-7 win over the Irish baseball team in extra innings. They didn't go away in the second game either, giving the Irish fits once again before falling 3-2 because of a wild pitch in the bottom of the seventh.

The last few days have been pretty dismal for the Irish. On Wednesday, the Irish were leading Northwestern 3-0 in the sixth when a near bench-clearing brawl broke out. The incident seemed to put a spell on the Irish while cats a fire under the Wildcats. They scored one in the seventh, two in the eighth, and then roughed up Mike Coffey for a four in the tenth on the way to a 7-3 win.

"Every team that plays 60 games is going to have a time like this," said Irish head coach Pat Murphy. "We're struggling. We're trying too hard. We're searching for answers. Now is the time to keep our composure and get back to basics. It's not just the team though," Murphy continued. "I've struggled as much as they have. I haven't been doing the job I'm capable of."

The Bulldogs jumped on the Irish early and often in the first game. Freshman left-hander Chad Hartvigston retired the first two batters he faced, but committed one of pitching's deadly sins by giving up a two-out walk. Catcher Joe Latty made him pay as he blasted a home run to left. After another single, Mike Coss booted an easy grounder to keep the inning alive.

"We sent Coss home during the game," said Murphy. "Mentally, he's a mess. He needs to get his thoughts together and come back."

Butler tallied four more times in the inning to extend the lead to 6-0. Matt Krall did a nice job preventing further damage by blocking numerous pitches.

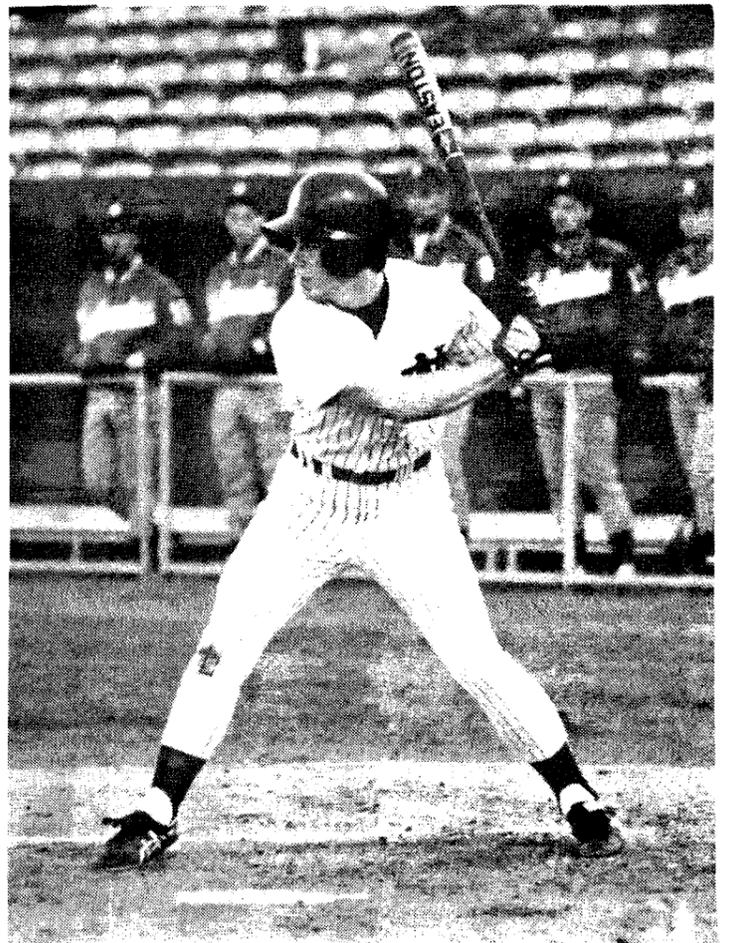

Chris Michalak came on to pitch the second. After one out, Raphael Coffee almost took out the new Band Building with a mammoth home run and Butler led 7-0. Michalak kept the Irish out of a further hole in the third when, following two rare errors by sure-handed Cory Mee, he pulled a "Mitch Williams" and picked the Irish scored one in the third on a Craig Counsell sacrifice fly and made it 7-2 on a Jason Martinez grounder in the fifth.

Meanwhile, Tony Livorsi had come on in the fourth and shut the Bulldogs down by spotting the ball well and using his good curve extensively to keep Butler off-balance. In the sixth, Butler's Coffee just missed his second homer of the day, sending Bob Kurtz to the warning track to haul it in. In four innings, Livorsi gave up four hits, no walks, and one unearned run.

The Irish made a great comeback, a trademark in the Murphy years, in the seventh to tie the game at 7. Bobby Kurtz started things with a walk. "He (Kurtz) did a good job," Murphy said. "He's had to overcome some injuries but he's a competitor and has a good knowledge of the game. We need his type of aggressiveness."

Mike Rotkis, who is hitting .294 with two home runs this season, will play a key role off the bench for the Irish when they face Michigan and Dayton this weekend.

66 teams open play as women begin Bookstore tourney action

By CHRIS COONEY
Assistant Sports Editor

While the men's tournament has been raging for weeks, women's bookstore basketball action is just getting under way. Although a few teams played preliminary rounds earlier this week, the bulk of the games will begin this Saturday and Sunday.

The 66 teams entered is a far cry from the over 700 that will participate in the men's championship, yet competition in the women's should be just as intense and varied. With eight seeded teams topping the list of contenders, the quality of play, and of creativity in name selec-

Bookstore Basketball begins round of 256

By KEN TYSIAC
Associate Sports Editor

Several high seeds advanced yesterday as the round of 256 got underway in Bookstore Basketball XIX yesterday on campus.

Sweet Scotty P. and the Dwarfs, Tequila White Lightning and Multiple Scoregasms all won with relative ease on a day when blustery conditions made good inside play crucial.

Former Notre Dame center Scott Paddock made his Bookstore debut for Sweet Scotty P. after missing his team's first game of the tournament Tuesday. Paddock took his 6-9 frame outside and pumped up some long jump shots in a 21-14 victory over Five Guys From Zahm Who Can't Win.

"It's good to have Paddock back," said Marty Falkenberg of Sweet Scotty P. "We want to get him inside a little more, but he showed us a lot with his outside shooting. Sure, he only went three for 10, but they were good shots. We didn't know he had that much range."

Jim McClellan of Five Guys From Zahm seemed impressed by Paddock's versatility.

"He stayed outside and took a lot of outside shots, and he handled the ball pretty well. We only stole it from him a couple of times. We managed to stay within 11-8 at halftime, but they came out and hit the first couple shots (in the second half) and that did it," McClellan said.

Bayliss' leadership propels men's tennis into spotlight

It was January of 1989 and Notre Dame men's tennis coach Bob Bayliss was just glad Michigan was playing in Eck Pavilion.

The final score didn't matter - 8-1 in favor of the Wolverines for those concerned with the particulars. These were the matches Bayliss wanted on the schedule, matches against top opponents on Notre Dame's home court.

"It wasn't really a priority for them to put Notre Dame on the schedule," Bayliss recalled. "It really helped us to play the toughest schedule possible. My feeling is you have to shoot for the high goals and accept what you get."

Bayliss knew the wins would come later after the Irish had played several of the opponents on that tough schedule. You can't learn to swim and win the gold medal in backstroke the same day.

schedule, the Irish played at Michigan Tuesday afternoon and came away with a dominating 6-0 victory. That was the first win over the Wolverines in 29 seasons.

But the key to understanding how far the tennis program has come is that the Irish expected to win in such convincing fashion.

"We did expect to win," Bayliss said. "We just went in and took care of business. This is kind of a down year for Michigan, but they'll be back."

The tough schedule has paid dividends for Notre Dame, which is ranked 17th in the latest poll. The Irish will get another tough test when Ohio State visits for a 1 p.m. match Sunday.

The road to the rankings was over a year in the making for Bayliss and the Irish. It began with the 1989 meeting with Michigan and then continued through a West Coast roadtrip in which they played well against some of the top teams in the country, including USC.

"It was exciting to be competing on the same court with those teams," Bayliss said. "We were never really in a position to win. It was just fun to be out there."

The next stage of the Irish climb was the Naval Academy Invite in September, where several Notre Dame players made impressive showings.

Then USC came to Notre Dame for an October match, and the perennially strong Trojans barely escaped with a 5-4 win. That match gave Notre Dame the confidence that it could compete with the top teams in the nation.

Said Bayliss, "After the match I thought, 'This is great. We were there with a traditional power.' We were really that close."

The Irish lost 6-3 to another powerhouse in Georgia with Notre Dame No. 1 singles player David DiLucia downing Al Parker, ranked first in nation at the time of the match.

Notre Dame then got big victories over West Virginia, Ball State and Minnesota.

"That's when I believed we had the makings of a top 25 team," Bayliss said.

The Irish were ranked 22nd in the next poll and traveled to Corpus Christi, Tex., for possibly their biggest weekend of the spring. They beat Oklahoma,
