Explorer discusses journeys to ends of the earth

By SHANNON RYAN
News Writer

Explorer Ann Bancroft will become the first woman in history to reach both the North and South Poles on foot upon successful completion of the 1992 American Women's Trans-Arctic Expedition (AWE), which she discussed in a lecture Wednesday.

An accompanying slide show depicted the 1986 Steger International Expedition to the North Pole, on which Bancroft served as the photographer for National Geographic.

"From there (the North Pole), it was a very natural progression for me to want to see the South Pole. ...truly, the fulfillment of a childhood dream," she said. "This trip should not present as many physical barriers (as the Steger Expedition); it will be far more a mental than a physical exercise."

The five-member group will be the first all-female team to cross the Antarctic and the first Antarctic expedition to forego motorized vehicles and dogsleds. According to Bancroft, "Not taking the dogs means cutting our (2 million dollar) budget in half."

The women will traverse the fifth largest continent on skis while pulling 200 pound sleds of provisions. When the wind is at their backs, the group will utilize up-ski canopies, parachute-like devices that catch the wind and propel them across the ice. The 1700 mile trek is expected to take four months.

Bancroft, a former physical education and special education teacher, stresses AWE's educational and environmental commitment. "Antarctica is a politically unique, environmental hotbed. It is crucial that we bring back this trip and make it a closer part of our lives," she said. "We need to take what we learn into the classroom."

During the trip, the group will conduct medical research about women's psychological and physiological changes under such extreme conditions. "It (the research) is our way of saying thank you for the support we have received," said Bancroft. "Scientific research on females has been minimal to date."

The women will be monitored for hormonal, lipid and menstrual cycle changes, variations in immune system functioning and changes attributed to biorythmic effects. Attention will also be focused on any measurable effects of large doses of ultraviolet radiation from the depleted ozone layer of Antarctica.

Bancroft's appearance at the Loftus Center was sponsored by The Year of Women, The Saint Mary's Women's Studies Program and student government, the IUSB Women Studies Program, and the St. Joseph County YWCA.

U.N. military observers open first posts in southern Iraq

SAFWAN, Iraq (AP) — Unarmed U.N. military observers opened their first posts Wednesday in southern Iraq, but a U.S. Army colonel said his troops would stay on indefinitely to protect Iraqi refugees.

The U.S. flag was lowered and a blue United Nations flag raised in its place during a brief noontime ceremony in 100-degree heat at a checkpoint vacated by about a dozen

U.S. soldiers.

However, Col. Bill Nash of the 3rd Armored Division's 1st Brigade, said roughly 5,000 troops under his command would remain in southern Iraq to provide security and humanitarian aid to thousands of Iraqi refugees. Many of the Iraqis supported a failed uprising against Saddam Hussein and fear reprisals from his security forces after U.S.

withdrawal.

"We're not moving out, we've just handing over this spot," said Nash, of Hayden, Ariz.

After the Stars and Stripes were lowered, Nash turned to the U.N. area commander, Lt. Col. Peter Feely, and said: "We will continue to protect the refugees."

The U.N. peacekeepers have no mandate to conduct humanitarian operations for the estimated 40,000 displaced people at camps run by the Americans, Saudi Arabia and the Kuwaiti Red Crescent Society.

But the Saudi government Wednesday completed a camp that can accommodate up to 30,000 people and said it will accept and shelter all Iraqi refugees, The New York Times reported in Thursday editions.

Saudi Lt. Gen. Khalid Sultan, who commanded Arab forces during the Gulf War, was quoted as saying he informed the United Nations and the U.S. military of plans to take the refugees.

The first refugees could be transferred Sunday from Safwan to the Saudi camp, near the border town of Rafha, which may be expanded to hold 50,000 people, the newspaper reported.

Brother Scully is 'Rector of the Year'

Special to The Observer

Brother Bonaventure Scully, rector of Keenan Hall, has been named Rector of the Year by the Hall Presidents Council at Notre Dame.

Among the most popular residence hall rectors, Scully has been an enthusiastic supporter of spiritual retreats and social service projects for Keenan Hall residents.

In addition to his assistance in organizing these and other hall activities, Scully was responsible for what one student recommendation called the transformation of "an abandoned dungeon of a basement into a bright, well decorated and much-used social area with drop-ceilings, piped-in music, televisions, pool tables, video games and study space."

Brother Scully

Also, largely through Scully's efforts, Keenan Hall boasts a small library and the only music room in any campus residence hall. "Quite simply," wrote the student, "he has made the hall itself a more comfortable place to live."

A native of Baltimore, Md., Scully graduated from Catholic University of America and professed vows in the Xaverian Brothers in 1951. He holds a master's degree in chemistry from the University of Detroit and a master's degree in religious education from Loyola University in Chicago.

Before becoming Keenan Hall's rector in 1985, Scully taught science and religion and served as counselor, retreat director, and principal for Xaverian Catholic high schools in Massachusetts, Kentucky and New York.

He has also served the Catholic school systems in Denver, Colo. and Memphis, Tenn. as superintendent and his religious order as its provincial vocation counselor. In 1971, he became the first president of the National Association of Religious Brothers.

Gorbachev defeats attempt to oust him

MOSCOW (AP) — President Mikhail Gorbachev on Wednesday quashed an attempt by hard-line Communists to oust him as party leader, claiming his departure would create an "explosive power vacuum" and lead to dictatorship.

Strengthened by a last-minute agreement by leaders of nine Soviet republics to back his economic "anti-crisis" plan, Gorbachev outmaneuvered his critics at a closed meeting of the party's 410-member Central Committee.

In the process, he again demonstrated the political skills that brought him from a minor post in the provinces to the top of the party and have allowed him to survive six years of turbulent reforms.

The agreement with the republics was reached late Tuesday after the republic's leaders were reportedly brought to Gorbachev's dacha, or country home, in southwestern Moscow.

Gorbachev's concessions to the reformist leaders — including dropping an unpopular tax and a possible cost-of-living wage index — gave him the backing to thwart the hard-liners.

Among those at the meeting was Gorbachev's chief political rival, Russian Federation President Boris Yeltsin, whose supporters have staged recent rallies demanding Gorbachev's ouster.

Toying with the idea of marriage

One of my best friends will soon be, quite frankly, going to the Chapel of Love.

In the immortal words of the Dixie Cups, they're "gonna get ma-a-rried."

It all happened at Fat Shirley's. Fat Shirley's is a diner highly acclaimed for their very functional coffee mugs, and cursed for their sticky stools.

We were all sitting at the counter, and, not yet realizing that we had become one with the marmalade on our seats, we were rhapsodizing about how exceedingly comfortable it was to grip these mugs (they were ideal, really), when I suddenly noticed the couple immediately to my left.

She was weeping.

He was sweating.

They were engaged.

My mind whirled with a thousand questions. Did I get to throw the shower? What would I wear? Could I possibly talk her into having fuchsia and teal as her wedding colors?

How much did the ring cost? When it's my turn, will I settle for anything less than nine carats (the rock, not the gold)? If she had said no, would he have been able to return the ring? Or only exchange it? Would the salesclerks snicker and suggest cufflinks as consolation?

More importantly, did she have to get married? After all, it all comes down to babies. I can't imagine any good reason to get married except to have babies.

To be honest, I've toyed with the idea of having a child out of wedlock, eliminating the annoying male counterpart altogether. Actually, I've toyed with the idea of having a child out of wedlock every two years, maybe trading them in or something — they're only cute for so long. But I know it's something I could never follow through on. I might lose my credibility.

Our waitress (who, being only mildly corpulent, couldn't possibly have been the Fat Shirley. I wouldn't call her svelte, though, either. Let's call her Well-Fed Willa) interrupted the blissful reverie to ceremoniously announce her preference of being paid before the actual digestion process begins.

We showed W. F. Willa the ring, but she didn't seem to be too surprised. "Oh, that happens here all the time."

Shocking, but true. Fat Shirley's is South Bend's very own love shack.

I'm afraid this recent betrothal might have affected me. For example, during room picks, I opted to live on the "garden level" (most conducive to being serenaded).

Every time I encounter a child-person under the age of two, I involuntarily blather in nonsensical monosyllables (also, sometimes if you poke their little tummies, they'll cover up their eyes with their chubby hands).

Perhaps one of the most awkward developments is that lately, whenever someone approaches me and says, "Paige, will you—" I throw my arms around the speaker and shriek, "Yes O YES, a thousand times YES!"

And I must admit that I've become a regular at Fat Shirley's. (I can't help it. I love their mugs.)

Antarctic mining talks deadlocked

■MADRID, Spain — Talks aimed at protecting the fragile Antarctic environment were at an impasse today over the issue of mining on the continent, the leader of the U.S. delegation said. The United States is among the 38 nations that signed the 1959 Antarctic Treaty and are attending a special conference on the Antarctic environment. The treaty banned military bases and nuclear and other weapons testing, but did not address mining and drilling for oil on the frozen continent. All signatories support at least a limited moratorium on these practices. More than a dozen nations including France, Australia and New Zealand go even further and favor a permanent ban. The United States, Britain, Chile, China and Brazil are the strongest opponents of this permanent ban.

Rooney's new book spares no one

■LOS ANGELES — Mickey Rooney was posing for a nostalgic photo outside his old home grounds, MGM studios, now occupied by Sony-owned Columbia Pictures, when a minor official questioned his presence. Rooney was understandably upset. "Young lady, I spent 14 years of my life at this studio when it was MGM," he snapped. "I made $6 billion for this studio." Rooney covers his MGM heyday as well as the rest of his tumultuous 70 years in his new autobiography, "Life Is Too Short." The author spares no one, especially himself. Each of his eight marriages is covered, and Rooney blames his own inattention and infidelity for the breakup of most of them. His sexual activity seems a compensation for his stature (5-foot-3). A youthful fling with Lana Turner resulted in her pregnancy and an ensuing abortion, he reports. Despite his closeness to Garland, about whom he writes tenderly, there was no sexual spark between them.

Quayle urges anti-missile defense

■WASHINGTON — Vice President Dan Quayle, hailing the success of the Patriot missile in the Persian Gulf War, says U.S. anti-missile defenses offer the best antidote for Third World aggressors. Citing Quayle's articles, speeches and letters, Republicans say Quayle led the crusade for investing in anti-tactical ballistic missiles in the late 1980s while serving in the Senate. In a recent interview with USA Today, Quayle said he originally thought that the first Strategic Defense Initiative-type system deployed would be an anti-tactical ballistic missile system in Europe. He said he now believes the first system will be in Israel, which sees a particular threat from the proliferation of Third World missiles.

SMC justice and peace program marks 10th birthday

By KIM MYLES
News Writer

Ten years ago, an ad hoc group of Saint Mary's students and faculty voluntarily met to discuss issues of justice and peace.

This week, the commitment to peace continues as The Saint Mary's Justice Education program celebrates a decade of existence.

Justice education coordinator, Esmee Bellalta, defines The Saint Mary's Justice minor program as "infusive, pervasive in the college."

A diverse group of disciplines are involved in the justice minor. Religious studies, business, political science, and philosophy represent only a few of the departments which sponsor courses emphasizing justice issues.

"In justice education, faculty learn and students understand concepts that they take to other classes; attitudinal changes develop," said Bellalta.

"Most of all, the measurement of justice education is invisible. Justice is almost like prayer; fairly invisible but the input it has is very powerful," Bellalta added.

"It is the goal of the department to grow, to pass on the awareness of justice from year to year and to work with a community of specific needs through collaboration," Bellalta concluded.

Bellalta, the founder of the Justice Education program, said her own experience as an educator in politically unstable Chile gave her contact with injustice. She said she sought an outlet to "help students to be leaders of a personal understanding of what more can be done."

She sees this as "an effort to collaborate with others. To join together, on a human level, to enact changes in society which no government will (have the personal insight to) do."

The week long Justice Anniversary celebration concludes with a peace tree planting and raffle for El Campito Day Care Center outside Madeleva Hall Thursday at 4:15 p.m. "In the King of Prussia," a film about peace activists in western Pennsylvania, will also be shown at 7 p.m.

On Friday, the lecture, "To act justly—the goal of all education," will be presented by Father Michael Himes of Notre Dame in Stapleton Lounge. A wine and cheese reception will follow.

Coffey selected head of Honor Code committee

Special to The Observer

John Coffey, a junior from Alumni Hall, has been selected to chair the University Academic Code of Honor Committee for the 1991-92 academic year.

Coffey, a member of the Committee for three years, will also serve as Student Body Treasurer next year.

The University Academic Code of Honor Committee, as commissioned in 1987 by the University Academic Council (comprised of faculty, administrators and students) is responsible for establishing Honor Code guidelines, educating the Notre Dame community about the Code of Honor, and promoting high standards of ethical and moral integrity in academics.

The membership of the University Academic Code of Honor Committee is comprised of both students and faculty members from each of the four colleges and the Freshman Year of Studies, along with an administrative member representing the Office of the Provost. The faculty are selected by the dean of the college for a two-year term.

Student representatives to the committee, comprising no less than 50 percent of membership, are selected by the student members of the individual College Councils. An undergraduate student, selected by the committee members, serves as chairperson of the committee for a one-year term.

Members of the Committee for next year include: Professor Stephen Batill, College of Engineering; Kami Benson, Knott Hall; Debra Heerensperger, Farley Hall; Professor Gerald Jones, College of Science; Professor Edward Kline, College of Arts and Letters.

Also, Ed Lavelle, Zahm Hall; Professor Kevin Misiewicz, College of Business Administration; Raymond Sepeta, Freshman Year of Studies Office; Jay Stone, Fisher Hall; Jennifer Switzer, BreenPhillips Hall; Gary Larson, Dillon Hall; and Father Oliver Williams, Associate Provost. Additional student members will be added next semester.

Death row inmate may not be sane enough

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Michael Owen Perry becomes aggressive and hostile when he hears about pop singer Olivia Newton-John, who he thinks is a goddess living under the Louisiana town where he killed five relatives.

He also has shaved his eyebrows so his brain can get more oxygen.

The issue isn't whether Perry is insane. It's whether Perry should be medicated to make him coherent enough to be executed.

The state wants to force Perry to take Haldol, a powerful mind-altering drug, so it can strap him in the electric chair. Defense attorneys say the plan, once tossed out by the U.S. Supreme Court, is cruel and unusual.

State District Judge L.J. Hymel is scheduled to take another look at the case on Thursday.

"It is contrary to what we have said we are going to do with the death penalty," said Perry's attorney, Keith Nordyke. "As a society, we have decided that we are going to have the death penalty for certain crimes, but we are not going to execute certain people. That includes the insane."

A 1986 U.S. Supreme Court ruling bars states from executing anyone who is insane.

Perry, now 36, was convicted of first-degree murder in the 1983 shootings of his parents, brother, cousin and 2-year-old nephew in the small south Louisiana town of Lake Arthur. Perry lived in a trailer behind his parent's home.

According to authorities, Perry said he first used a pistol to shoot the victims, then returned later with a shotgun.

During a police hunt for Perry, authorities said they had learned he had written fan letters telling Newton-John that he thought she was a goddess who lived beneath the town. Police also said Perry was turned back by security guards when he tried to visit her California home.

Perry's mental state rapidly fell apart after he went to death row. In October 1988, Hymel ruled that Perry's mental illness rendered him incompetent for execution. But Hymel also ordered that Perry receive medication — against his will if necessary — so he could regain competence and be executed.

"Louisiana's interest in the execution of that jury's verdict overrides those rights of Perry," Hymel said.

But last November, the U.S. Supreme Court in November set aside Hymel's ruling. The high court ordered the judge to restudy the case in light of another ruling that gave prison officials the right to force inmates to take drugs — provided that it was in the prisoner's best medical interest and if the inmate posed a threat to himself or another.

Nordyke said that even with the drugs, Perry "is never really coherent." However, the state attorney general's office said the drugs help Perry and the state has a legitimate interest in seeing that he becomes sane enough to execute.

During arguments before the Supreme Court, Justice Thurgood Marshall, who opposes capital punishment under all circumstances, asked state attorneys why Perry was not simply given enough mind-altering drugs to kill him.

"It would be cheaper," Marshall said caustically.

Medical resident suspended for AIDS mishap

CHICAGO (AP) — A first-year medical resident was relieved of his duties after giving a woman a gynecological exam with a swab that may have been used on a patient with the AIDS virus, a hospital spokesman said Wednesday.

Officials at Illinois Masonic Hospital refused to discuss details, except to say that Dr. Omar Gaeda, a resident in internal medicine was suspended pending an internal investigation.

The hospital planned to release a more complete statement Thursday, said a nursing supervisor, who asked that her name not be used.

The woman was inadvertently tested with the used swab last week during a routine test for cervical cancer and has been advised by doctors to take the drug AZT, her lawyer, Philip Corboy, said Tuesday.

AZT, or zidovudine, is used to combat AIDS.

"The terrible aspect of this is that she's in doubt; she doesn't know where she stands," Corboy said. "This woman ... has been faced with the possibility of a disease that she never had to face before."

"They've protected her as much as possible by prescribing the AZT. But she's a mother and a wife with two children and a husband ... she's scared as hell," he said.

The woman, identified only as Jane Doe, filed a lawsuit Tuesday against the hospital and Gaeda in Cook County Circuit Court. The suit says they were negligent and failed to take appropriate precautions.

There was no telephone listing for Gaeda in Chicago or its suburbs.

Corboy said his client, who is in her early 30s, was referred to Illinois Masonic by her health maintenance organization for a medical checkup, which included a Pap test.

The Pap test for cervical cancer involves scraping cells from the cervix, which are examined for signs of abnormal development.

The woman said Gaeda returned to the room a few minutes after the exam and told her he mistakenly used a swab that had been used on a person with an infection, according to Corboy.

Corboy said the hospital wouldn't comment about the infection, but two other staff doctors told her to immediately begin taking AZT, which she did. Corboy said the prescription of AZT led him to believe the other patient has the AIDS virus.

The state Department of Public Health, which regulates and licenses hospitals, is investigating the matter, said department spokeswoman Pam Locklin.

the Kremlin tried to force Gorbachev to give an account of his handling of the embattled party and crumbling economy. That would have opened the way for stinging criticism and a move to force Gorbachev to step down as party leader.

In recent weeks, some hardliners have demanded separating Gorbachev's dual posts of general secretary of the 18 million-member Communist Party and president of the country.

Also, Gorbachev has faced resignation calls from reformists who believe he has betrayed his original democratic vision.

The effort to make Gorbachev give an account of his government was defeated by a show of hands, with the overwhelming majority supporting Gorbachev, Central Committee member and historian Roy Medvedev said in an interview with The Associated Press.

The official news agency Tass said before the meeting began that Gorbachev was "under attack by the party apparatus, the so-called conservative forces, which are seeking revenge for the perestroika (reforms) that he started in 1985."

Because the Central Committee meeting was closed, details of Gorbachev's maneuvering were unknown.

But his main thrusts were clear: He brandished the agreement with republic leaders as evidence that he was taking resolute steps to halt the country's economic collapse, and painted a dire picture of the power struggle that would occur if he stepped down.

"Let's soberly imagine what would happen if these demands are fulfilled: The destruction of the lawful state structure would inevitably create an explosive power vacuum," Gorbachev told the plenum, according to Tass.

"And no matter who were to come out on top, in place of democratic institutions would come arbitrary rule — to put it simply, a very real dictatorship, and not the imaginary one that some people see in the current constitutional regime," he said.

Gorbachev hailed the signing of a joint statement by the leaders of nine Soviet republics as "the start of a turning point" for the nation.

There, he made several concessions to the reformist leaders, offering to cancel an unpopular, new 5 percent sales tax on everyday goods and to consider a nationwide wage indexation program.

The republics that did not take part in the agreement were the three Baltic states, as well as Georgia, Armenia and Moldavia.

Religions focus attention on sex

NEW YORK (AP) — Sex, often called an obsession of modern society and its mass media, also is attracting concentrated attention by religious organizations.

Four major Protestant denominations have had special task forces probing the subject, and Roman Catholic bishops recently issued their first comprehensive guidelines about it.

But this shouldn't suggest "it is some form of fixation," distracting the church from its work of evangelism and service, says an Episcopal commission's report on human sexuality.

"There is too much else to be done for God."

Nevertheless, special panels of two denominations — the Episcopal Church and the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) are recommending basic changes in church stances about sex, particularly homosexuality.

Indications of wide opposition cast doubt on whether church conventions this summer would approve the reports and made sharp controversy about them inevitable.

In both cases, recommendations are being made that would allow ordination of active or non-celibate homosexuals to the clergy, and also would ask consideration of blessing same-sex unions.

"Coming of age about sexuality requires affirming a diversity of responsible sexualities in the church, including the lives of gay men and lesbians," says the Presbyterian report.

In a third denomination, the United Methodist Church, a study committee also has tentatively decided to recommend dropping its condemnation of homosexual practice as "incompatible with Christian teaching."

The Rev. William Mason of Tulsa, Okla., chairman of an evangelical wing, Good News, sees "absolute indignation" among both clergy and laity as the result.

The issue, however, won't be acted on by that denomination until its next general conference in 1992.

A fourth denomination, the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America, also has a special sexuality study under way, but its conclusions won't be ready in time for the biennial church assembly in August.

Still another religious body, the Central Conference of American Rabbis, representing Reform Judaism, last fall acted to allow ordination of active homosexuals as rabbis.

Roman Catholicism's sexual education guidelines, approved by U.S. bishops and published in February, uphold traditional positions limiting sex relations to marriage and requiring celibacy in singleness and the clergy.

However, recommendations by the Episcopal and Presbyterian panels would condone sexual relationships of homosexuals, and allow ordination of those involved in such unions.

All "persons can benefit from the comfort and support of close relationships," says the Episcopal report. "We agree that homosexual relationships often provide such comfort and support and exhibit commendable love and commitment."

It is recommended that "the church be open to ordaining gay men and lesbians otherwise qualified who display the same integrity in their sexual relationships which we ask of our heterosexual ordinands."

The Presbyterian study panel was sharply divided, 10 to six, in its majority conclusions that acceptable sex relations need not always be confined to marriage — the traditional church position.

Stanford pres. addresses drug-promoting professor

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — A Stanford University instructor who boasted of carrying drugs on campus may have committed professional misconduct, the school's president said in a letter to the campus newspaper.

Stanford President Donald Kennedy called it "unconscionable for responsible persons on this campus to recommend the use of illicit drugs."

Kennedy wrote to the Stanford Daily in response to the paper's editorial Tuesday accusing the administration of threatening Stuart Reges' right to free speech by suspending him during an investigation.

The investigation was begun after Reges wrote to federal drug czar Bob Martinez saying he carried drugs in his backpack and once advised a student about experimenting with the drug MDA, an amphetamine that produces euphoria.

The award-winning computer science lecturer said his statements were a protest against Stanford's compliance with a new federal law requiring schools to fight illegal drug use on campus if they get government money. He described the law as government "coercion" and an invasion of privacy inappropriate to an institution of higher learning.

Martinez responded with a letter to Kennedy pointing out that Stanford risks losing federal funding if it violates a federal directive banning drug use and underage drinking on campus.

Kennedy defended the investigation.

"Criminal conspiracy, incitement, and other long-established crimes are primarily verbal, but that does not protect those who commit them from prosecution and punishment," Kennedy wrote.

Bush promises review of staff travel policy

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush said Wednesday he would review the White House travel policy, suggesting Chief of Staff John Sununu's extensive travel aboard government planes has left a "perception problem."

However, Bush said Sununu had his "full confidence."

"I don't like this jumping all over Gov. Sununu when he has complied with the policy and he's made full disclosure. What more can you ask for?" Bush said in impromptu comments to reporters after a send-off for Djibouti President Hassan Gouled Aptidon.

Sununu and the Republican Party reimbursed the government $47,044 for his private travels — a rate equaling the cost of commercial plane tickets, plus $1.

It costs $3,945 an hour to operate the 12-passenger C-20 plane that Sununu usually uses. Because of that cost, it has been estimated Sununu's trips have cost taxpayers more than $500,000.

Documents released by the White House showed Sununu had taken 77 trips on military planes from the spring of 1989 until last weekend. Sununu said most of his travel, including visits to Colorado ski resorts and repeated visits to his home state of New Hampshire, were official business.

Asked if Sununu had gotten a bum rap in extensive reports on his personal and political, as well as official, travel aboard military jets, Bush said:

"I'm not saying what the rap is. But as one who's vowed to stay above even the appearance of impropriety, perhaps it is appropriate to review the policy."

Reporter ordered to jail but court delays

WASHINGTON (AP) — Washington Post reporter Linda Wheeler was ordered to jail Wednesday for contempt of court after refusing to identify a news source, but an appeals court quickly granted a delay allowing her to remain free.

Wheeler cited the First Amendment guarantee of freedom of the press in refusing to testify who gave her a confidential police handbook. But Superior Court Judge Richard Levie said that if the amendment had given her any protection she "blew it" in revealing her source outside court.

Levie ordered that Wheeler, called as the first witness in a civil case against the D.C. police department, be jailed until she testifies or until testimony is completed in the case.

However, the District of Columbia Court of Appeals granted a postponement of the contempt of court citation until further notice, and gave lawyers until Friday to submit papers for a hearing.

Levie ruled Monday that Wheeler waived her right to keep her source's identity confidential when she revealed the name to two U.S. Park Police officers — one of whom has since become her husband.

Those two testified last week that she told them the source was Washington D.C. Police Chief Isaac Fulwood Jr., who was assistant chief at the time. Fulwood denied in a sworn deposition giving Wheeler the handbook that is at issue in the lawsuit.

"Whatever privilege may have existed, Miss Wheeler blew it" by revealing the name to others, Levie said Wednesday.

Leonard Downie, the Post's

managing editor, said after the court hearing, "We're happy she's not in jail. We've got a long road to go."

"This remains a very important case because if reporters are not able to protect their confidential sources it will frighten the confidential sources in the future and it will frighten reporters in the future," Downie said.

Wheeler appeared nervous at first as she refused, 31 times, to answer questions put to her by attorneys for the plaintiffs and defense.

"I respectfully decline to answer that question based on the protection given me by the First Amendment," she repeated.

Downie said Wheeler had arrived at the courthouse prepared to go to jail and added, "She's determined to act responsibly and professionally."

Future of Little 500 in question after revelry

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — City officials, Indiana University administrators and students and apartment owners and managers are trying to figure out how to stop the troubling associated with the Little 500 bicycle race.

In a news release, IU President Thomas Ehrlich said he is "keenly disappointed with the harmful and even violent conduct of those individuals whose behavior has cast a shadow over the Little 500 weekend."

Countless hours of hard work by thousands of IU students to make the Little 500 weekend successful were quickly subsumed by the disgusting actions of those who chose to break the law and violate the rights of others.

Off-campus revelry led to hundreds of alcohol-related arrests after the bicycle race this past weekend. Officials have questioned whether the annual event should be canceled or held at a different time.

"Police officers and our innocent citizens should not be subjected to the kind of abuse they received last weekend," said Kirk White, an IU public relations official, former IU Student Association president and City Council member for the area where much of the rioting occurred.

"Steve Sharp should not have to worry about someone trying to beat him with a pole," White said of the city's police chief. "There's no excuse for that. It should not be tolerated in our city, and if we can't figure out a way to get this under control, then we should consider not having the race."

Sharp, who was threatened with a stick in a riot at the Varsity Villas complex where hundreds of students live, isn't calling for the race to be canceled. But he agrees changes must be made.

Sharp said he will propose changing the race from spring to fall, when students would not be celebrating the end of the school year, and to a week-day rather than weekend. He also suggests giving it more local focus and discouraging out-of-town attendance.

"They're coming in to have a good time, and they're very destructive too," Sharp said.

IU Foundation President Curtis Simic said Little 500 does "a heck of a lot of good" and should not be canceled "just because a few people are living outside of the law" any more than should football or basketball games.

Simic, who would have final say on any changes, does not see how changing the season would help, but is "willing to listen" to all proposals. He said he would consult with city and IU officials before making decisions.

City officials say off-campus partying has escalated since the Bloomington campus dean of students cracked down on alcohol use on campus.

Indiana pilot may have a clue to Earhart's vanishing

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — A museum worker who combed through Purdue University's archives believes he has found the clue that could tell the world once and for all what really happened to pioneer aviator Amelia Earhart.

Gary Quigg, who is a pilot himself, says the clue lies in two old photos of Earhart, who disappeared over the South Pacific during an around-the-world flight 54 years ago.

Quigg, 28, discovered the photos last month in a Purdue library. Earhart was a women's career counselor at Purdue in 1935.

The photos show her and navigator Fred Noonan standing in front of the open cockpit door of their twin-engine Lockheed 10-E Electra a few days before their July 7, 1937, disappearance.

Also visible in the photos is an object resembling an aluminum box that Quigg said looks like a bookcase used to hold navigation records. He believes it is the same one found in 1989 on Nikumaroro, an uninhabited island in the South Pacific.

The box was found on the island by members of The International Group for Historic Aircraft Recovery, of which Quigg is a member.

It has been identified through its serial number as an aviator's bookcase, and FBI tests dated it to the 1930s. But it wasn't linked to Earhart's plane before Quigg found the photos.

"That makes me feel good," he said in a recent interview. "I feel like I contributed something."

Now, recovering the plane and solving the mystery is his next goal.

Earhart, already one of the most prominent celebrities of the 1930s, became a cult figure after disappearing about 3,000 miles north of New Zealand, somewhere between Lae, New Guinea, and Howland Island.

She had become the first woman to cross the Atlantic alone in 1932 and the also the first woman to fly solo across the United States that same year. In January 1935 she became the first woman to fly from Hawaii to the U.S. mainland.

Her disappearance triggered a massive search, and has led to speculation ever since. Among the theories put forth was that she was spying on the Japanese for the United States and was captured and died in captivity. Other theorists assume she simply became lost and ran out of fuel over the ocean.

TIGHAR's theory of what happened to Earhart and Noonan goes like this:

The pair became lost and crash-landed on a coral shelf extending from Nikumaroro, which was once known as Gardner's Island. The shelf was exposed because the tide was low, but the plane was probably washed away within a few days when the tide came in.

Meanwhile, Earhart and Noonan set up a camp on the island but died, probably from thirst, before rescuers could reach them.

The U.S. Navy dispatched the battleship USS Colorado to the area. But the ship, traveling from Hawaii, took a week to reach the remote island 2,000 miles away.

Lt. John O. Lambrecht, the Colorado's senior aviator, reported seeing signs of recent habitation on the island, but no people.

Homelessness exists a few miles beyond the Golden Dome

By COLLEEN GANNON
Business Editor

The comfort of dormitory rooms makes the problem of homelessness seem distant. People often picture the down-trodden lining streets and subway stations in large cities, but not in South Bend.

Reality shows the homeless scrape for survival only a few miles beyond the Golden Dome.

The Hope Rescue Mission, 532 South Michigan, provided 16,046 beds for the homeless last year. The Center for the Homeless, 813 South Michigan, provided 1,903 beds last month.

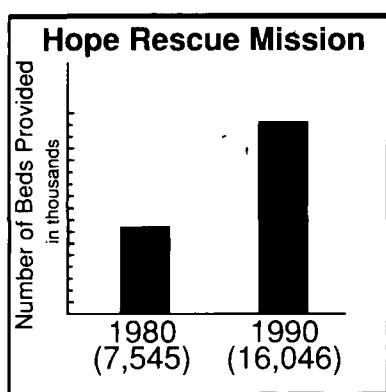

The U.S. Census Bureau counted 236 homeless people in the shelters or visible on the streets of South Bend in 1990.

The Center for the Homeless provides shelter and services that help reintegrate the homeless into society.

A major expansion to the Center included 13 family rooms and a dormitory which can accommodate 40 women. It also included a playroom, triple the office space for Madison Center programs in support of addicts and the mentally ill, and expanded office space for a legal aid clinic staffed by ND law students.

The Center has the capacity to accommodate 150 guests and currently has 60 to 70 residents. The number of beds provided for March 1991 decreased to 1,903 from the 3,540 provided in March 1990.

The Center encourages its residents to set goals and helps them find employment.

The Observer/Ann-Marie Conrado

The Hope Rescue Mission also works to meet the needs of South Bend's homeless.

The numbers at the Mission have increased dramatically. Between 1980 and 1990, the number of beds rose from 7,545 to 16,046.

The numbers have not only risen but the composition of the population has also changed. Ninety-five percent of the Mission's homeless population was male in 1954. Forty-five percent of the beds have been for women and family groups in the last four years.

Guests must tie in with a caseworker upon arrival at the Hope Rescue Mission. "One of the first things we require a person to do is to set up some goals," said Bert Harrison, executive director.

The Mission also provides Bible studies, chapel services, emergency transportation help, emergency medical help, a G.E.D. program and meals.

The Advocacy Center, 117 North Lafayette Blvd., also helps South Bend's needy, the extremely poor.

"We'll try to help anybody that comes through the door, but it may not be financial. It might be just to listen to them, but at the very least, anybody that comes through that door will be treated with dignity and respect," stated Sara Goetz, coordinator.

The Advocacy Center has also observed a rise in the number of its clients. "From just 1989 to 1990, it went from 1,300 cases a year to over 1,600 cases, and it is not dropping," Goetz said.

Broadway Christian Parish United Methodist Church, 1412 South Carroll St., provides a community meal every Sunday for its congregation and the Southeast Side neighborhood of South Bend.

"We feel that what we are about is promoting fellowship in the neighborhood. We have round tables for the symbolism of everyone being equal," said Pastor Sara Webb Phillips.

The Church also has a food pantry open five days a week, which serves approximately 250 people a month.

"We are not fooled into believing we are doing a great work, because it is really Band-Aid ministry," said Phillips. "I don't discount that, because when you are cut and bleeding you need some immediate attention," she said.

The numbers served at the meal peaked a year and a half ago at approximately 120, but now average 60 to 70 people.

Something needs to be done to help the homeless in a permanent way. "We need to approach this through the three major institutions: labor, social welfare and housing," said ND Professor Benedict Giamo.

Goetz mentioned the merit of scattered housing. "The idea is that if you put lower income people into a normal neighborhood rather than red-lining them or putting them into a section of a lot of poor people, they start to feel a greater sense of community."

"We need to build more housing. We need to be smarter about the housing we already have that has just gone to ruin," said Giamo.

An income problem combines with a lack of affordable housing to perpetuate homelessness. We can build units, but the homeless cannot afford them, said Giamo.

Many of the homeless have limited abilities, such as lack of proper education, but can still contribute to society.

Broadway Christian Parish has begun an innovative project that creates jobs, The Southeast Side Neighborhood Summer Gardening Project.

The project will employ 20 young people, provide fresh produce for the feeding programs of the parish and clean up five vacant lots.

Welfare reform will also be necessary in combatting homelessness and extreme poverty in South Bend and in the nation.

A single mother with one child in South Bend currently receives $229 a month. "Women are not having babies so they can get a lot of money because that is just not true in this state," said Goetz.

National health insurance would benefit the poor, according to Goetz. "With the resources we have in this country, there is no reason why one child out of eight goes hungry. There is no reason for people not to be able to access affordable health care."

A final problem needed to be approached is drug and alcohol abuse, said Goetz. "I don't think the answer is in prisons. I think the answer is in treatment centers," she said.

"People like people" was the lesson of the day etched on the blackboard of the Advocacy Center.

Maybe if Americans could remember this simple lesson, children would not go hungry, the sick and mentally ill would not want for treatment, and the homeless would not roam the streets of South Bend.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

First ND women faced sexism

Dear Editor:

I'm visiting the campus for the weekend and have read with great interest your articles on the SUFR group and it's complaints against the University. I empathize with the group as I, too, was part of a minority when I studied at Notre Dame. I was discriminated against and made to feel unwelcome and unwanted on campus by the student body. Their feelings were justified in some cases.

For instance, hundreds of students received letters during the summer break in which they were told they'd been "littered" off campus; that the University needed their dorm rooms for an expanded incoming freshman class. Naturally, the upperclassmen took their frustrations out on us. I regularly heard remarks in the dining hall or on South Quad like, "You don't belong here" and "Why don't you go to a school where you belong?"

The University discriminated against us. While the rest of the student body had diversions and clubs in which they could compete and socialize, we had none. While more than 95 percent of the undergraduate students on campus had maid service, laundry service and dry cleaning service, we had none. While we were supposedly an important part of the University's make-up, we were ignored. Similar groups from other colleges were regularly invited to participate in social events. We weren't excluded per se, but we felt the University had made a statement that we weren't good enough for these events.

Most of us didn't understand why our fellow students resented us and most of us didn't understand why the social atmosphere was so difficult. On top of the academic and psychological challenges of a freshman year at college were added the emotional problems of feeling singled out, not fitting in and always wondering why.

Through all of this I don't believe I or anyone else in my group truly faulted the University administrators for the situation. Their intentions and goals were righteous. My astonishment was simply that the management of a major institution could have so poorly forecasted and planned the giant change they were attempting in the make-up of the student body.

But we didn't demonstrate; we didn't hold sit-ins; we didn't retaliate with harassment. We organized regular meetings with our rectors and our professors. When things got to the "ridiculous" stage we held meetings in our halls with Father Burtchaell and Sister Miriam John. We worked with the University to make their original plan a success.

It wasn't easy, smooth, nor without arguments. Having made the decision to create an enrollment that more realistically reflected the national picture, the University officials never stopped or refused to discuss how to develop an atmosphere that would encourage others like myself to attend the school.

The experiences I had at Notre Dame are with me every day of my life. The difficulties taught me how to change the status quo from within and how to compromise. The years at Notre Dame, however, could never fully prepare me for the prejudices in the real world of industry, but it was a good start. I might have been part of a minority group and we might have been unintentionally discriminated against, but women were a new phenomenon at Notre Dame in 1973.

The one thing that was always apparent was that the University was committed to making the transition work and I believe they are equally committed to making a success of a more diverse student body. The commitment is 90 percent of the battle: the 10 percent usually work themselves out.

Keenan crew offers apology for actions

Dear Editor:

The Keenan Hall Regatta Crew would like to formally apologize to St. Ed's Regatta Crew for hitting their boat with water balloons. We did not know that they had requested that they not be hit with water balloons and that they did not want to join in the revelry (or chaos as some people would call it). When asked by Fisher Regatta officials to stop

"offensive actions against St. Ed's," we did.

We should also like to remind Zahm and Stanford that the statements carried by our boat were in jest and in the spirit of inter-dorm rivalry. We are sorry for any misunderstandings.

Anti-nuclear letter used flawed logic

Dear Editor:

The recent letter by K. Kelly Hartman (The Observer, April 16, 1991) exemplifies the typically flawed arguments of the anti-nuclear community.

While announcing a supposedly objective discussion entitled "Nuclear Energy: Promise or Peril?" Hartman asserts that nuclear power is not the "best alternative". Likewise, she links increased use of nuclear power with increased environmental and health risks.

I am waiting for the day when a detractor presents a viable alternative and a workable plan for its implementation. The risk argument is moot- we all arrived on this campus via automobiles or airplanes.

Students should take action to end campus apathy

Does it ever bother any of you that we are growing up in the most apathetic time in history? Sometimes it seems like no one cares anymore.

Here we are, content to sit at good ol' Notre Dame as we work away on our homework, making sure that we get our good grades so that we can get a good job or get into a good school when we graduate. Some people around here are so stressed out about making the Dean's List that they never stop to laugh at a good joke (or at life) once in a while.

We'll end up in our nice careers, we'll raise our families, and then we'll all die, and we'll all be forgotten without having actually achieved anything. Face it: most of us won't really make it into the history texts, and you sure can't avoid death. It's coming, like it or not, and you can't do a damn thing about it.

Matthew Miller
Column O' Thrills

Doesn't it bother you that, with a very few exceptions, that's what we'll all end up doing? Granted, there will be some of us who end up as politicians (and what an impact they do make!) or great scientists. But, for the most part, we're stuck into that rut because that's just what everyone before us has done.

Nicely put, our world is screwed. Man has single-handedly destroyed the environment (which, incidentally, doesn't belong to him in the first place), causing huge health risks for future generations. One in every thirty African-American males will die a violent death. There have been over 120 wars on earth since 1945, and they are the cause of over 3 million deaths. Despots all over the world are killing people by the millions.

So what do we do about it? How do we escape the pattern of complacency? How do we improve the world which we complain about daily in The Observer? Get involved. If you're worried about the thousands of political prisoners being tortured all around the globe, join Amnesty International. If you're worried about the environment, talk to Earth First!, an environmental action group that's not afraid to take a stand. Concerned about the homeless? Help at a soup kitchen. Do you want to help America's poor? Join the Appalachia service trip. Never think that your little bit won't help. If everyone thought that, no one would get anything done.

If there's something you don't like about the University, go out and try to change it. Believe me: people do listen to what you have to say. Do you think that Notre Dame doesn't give out enough financial aid to its students? Do you feel that the University should recognize the gay & lesbian group on campus? Don't like parietals? Do you think that DART is woefully inadequate? Write a letter, circulate a petition, do something. If you don't bring the issue into a public forum, no one will know how you feel.

So don't just sit there, reading this semi-aimless column over your lunch tray. Think, just for a moment, about what really isn't just in this world, and think of a way that you can work toward a solution. Never stop striving for justice. If there's something wrong, it is our duty to put an end to it. You've got a voice—use it.

ND student unfairly ejected from North Dining Hall

Dear Editor:

Poor weather conditions in South Bend tend to affect many aspects of our lives, but whether or not we eat shouldn't be one of them. However, if you decide to eat in North Dining Hall on a rainy day—BEWARE! Last Friday afternoon, after playing soccer for a couple of hours, a friend and I realized that we had lost track of time and that it was 6:40 p.m. We hurried to the dining hall to get something to drink and eat.

Admittedly, our clothes were a bit muddy (mine more than hers as I was the goalie), though we did wash off and wipe our shoes before we went in. After accepting our IDs and agreeing to watch the soccer ball, and without so much as a look of disapproval, we were allowed in and served. Seated on the far side of the dining hall (which was practically empty) I rose to get something to drink when the bouncer—I mean the dining hall worker—approached me.

Without bothering to pull me aside, she stated in a LOUD, clear voice "You can't be in here looking like that." Thinking that this was a joke or a misunderstanding, I laughed, "What are you talking about?" She raised her nose a few more inches in the air and replied in an incredibly snotty tone, "You can't be in here that dirty," as if the dining hall were a four star restaurant.

At a loss for words (besides being an incredibly funny situation, it was also a little humiliating and, as mad as I was, I wasn't sure what would come out if I did open my mouth), I turned to my friend to pass the message on. She laughed so hard, she almost dropped her tray. After disposing of the uneaten meals, we retrieved the soccer ball and headed back to the dorm without the meal for which we had already paid $6.50.

If there is a dress code in the dining hall, I guess that I was never informed of it. I must have missed the "Please shower before entering" signs at the door. All right, if I'd been dripping and tracking mud through that impeccably clean dining hall, I'd understand their rather forceful request. However, this was not the case. We were muddy, but no more so than we'd been after dorm football games when the entire team would go. I would have even been a little more understanding if we'd been informed of our "unsanitary conditions" at the door instead of in the middle of the dining hall part-way through our meal.

The majority of Notre Dame students are athletic, and South Bend is not the driest city, so this presents a problem for those of us who eat. I suppose a solution could be to install showers at the entrance along with a snobby worker to inspect those questionable areas such as behind the ears and under the fingernails. The way I see it, though, this may tend to adversely affect that dining hall efficiency which just continues to improve every year, and we wouldn't want that to happen. The only other suggestion I have is: lighten up! Even at McDonald's the sign just reads "Shirt and shoes required."

Reader finds professor's stipend proposal insulting

Dear Editor:

Professor Kmiec asks us if "the only measure of success in a Catholic University"...is "the material rewards of the marketplace". (The Observer, April 22). Ironically, the proposal he submitted to the University, and so artfully failed to show his readers, does just that; it attempts to legitimize motherhood on the basis of the "rewards of the marketplace." The resolution that Professor Kmiec and his colleagues presented asked the University to "award an additional and significant per child stipend to any married faculty or staff member whose family, in the previous academic year, included a mother who was at home and not employed for compensation with children under 18 years of age."

The resolution was careful to mention, in a footnote, that federal law may require the extension of this benefit to men as well as women. But the document goes on to assure the reader that, being a private University, we can dispense with such trivial notions of equality.

As a faculty wife, a law student, and a mother, I would like this opportunity to explain to Professor Kmiec why this proposal is insulting to mothers, fathers and human beings in general. I agree that women who choose to stay at home to care for their children do not always receive the respect they deserve. (I would like to add that men who stay home to take care of their children receive even less respect.) Kmiec's solution, however, is embarrassing. I can only hope that he never thought of its implications.

It occurred to me and my husband, Chris, that had we known of this wonderful proposition 15 years ago, we should have come to Notre Dame sooner. We never imagined a University where Chris could be paid not for his skill in the classroom, but his accuracy in the bedroom. It is certainly a novel idea. Instead of all those hours preparing his classes, researching, writing and publishing, we should have been practicing our route to the OB ward.

Imagine the thrill felt by all the students of Notre Dame (and their parents) when they discover that our faculty has the highest birthrate of any major University. Who needs academic achievement? Professor Kmiec has relieved the University of a great responsibility. Notre Dame no longer needs to recruit qualified employees. Just line them up for a fertility test!

Of course, paying my husband for my birthrate will make me more fulfilled as a woman. My husband's paycheck will now be a reminder of my contribution to society. Who needs the joy of seeing your son take his first step? Why should I find fulfillment in my daughter's first day of school? What accomplishment is there in watching my child graduate from college? No, success as a mother is seen through my husband's paycheck. In order to make a woman feel fulfilled, we will reinforce the myth that fulfillment only comes in monetary terms.

I am afraid that Professor Kmiec misses the point. "Advancement and achievement for women" is not synonymous with "out of the home and away from the family." I am no less a mother for being in law school than a wife is less a woman for staying at home.

However, individuals need to be rewarded for their own accomplishments. To reward my husband because I stay home is not to reward me. If Kmiec really cares about mothers, he needs to respect that we are individuals just like him. If he really cares about the place of women at Notre Dame, he needs to support all women, despite the choices we make. Some women are happy at home, and therefore good mothers. Some women are happy at work and at home, and therefore good mothers. (No woman works away from home and not at home, as well.)

If he really cares about the "Notre Dame Family", Professor Kmiec should support the family a family with a father and a mother who raise a family together. How we choose to divide our roles in that family is an individual and private thing. This University, or any University, has no right to dictate my lifestyle. Kmiec has no right to impose his idea of "family" on the faculty and staff of this University.

I am not, as Kmiec says, "antagonistic to the family." I am antagonistic to a view that allows only one kind of family—his kind.

Notre Dame-Australia created with help from Notre Dame, U.S.A.

By BRIAN POSNANSKI
Accent Writer

The University of Notre Dame, Australia, located in the city of Fremantle on the country's western coast, begins its inaugural term in August of this year with Notre Dame Law School's Dean David Link serving as the school's first president.

NDA will only be the second private university and the first Catholic one in a country the size of the continental United States but with a population of only 17 million people. All of the other schools in Australia are federally funded.

Located on the western coast of Australia at Fremantle, Link says the school will draw most of its students from the Pacific rim.

Places such as Japan, Taiwan, and Singapore will be sending students there, but for the first year nearly all of the students will be native Australians.

Old buildings once used by the America's Cup yacht race association will house the University until it moves to a 300 acre site in the city of Perth, just North of Fremantle. Presently the prospective site is bush country.

Link, who will be in Australia for one year before returning to Notre Dame Law School, is a 1958 graduate of Notre Dame and a 1961 graduate of Notre Dame Law School.

Along with Link, University President Edward Malloy, Provost Timothy O'Meara, and Executive Vice President E. William Beauchamp serve on NDA's Board of Trustees. All of them will travel to Fremantle in July for the school's inaugural board meeting.

Why a private Catholic university in Australia? The native Australians that comprise NDA's current Board of Trustees, one of them the Archbishop of Perth, became frustrated with Australia's federally funded universities.

This group was influenced by Father Theodore Hesburgh, president emeritus of the University and former Executive Vice-President Father Edmund Joyce when the two visited Perth, Australia four years ago. This group, not government related, decided to travel to America in 1989, and visited 12 different universities.

After visiting the Notre Dame campus, the group agreed with the things Hesburgh and Joyce said about Notre Dame and decided to model their prospective school after it.

According to Link, the group thought that Notre Dame was "everything a university should be." The group was impressed by Notre Dame's size, the collegiality of the students, and most of all a residentiality that would be unique to Australia.

The group, which was to evolve into NDA's eventual Board of Trustees, then asked to use the same name. "From the outset, all the interest was from their (the Australians') side," Link says. NDA will start with "at least five and probably six schools," says Link. Australia has a large need for teachers and an educational school will be the first part of the University to be incorporated. An arts and sciences college will follow, then a business school, then a law school or a medical school.

Link says he didn't know whether the law school or the medical school would be first, but both will eventually be offered. Last will be an engineering school.

Within three years the University will have all six schools to offer. "Australia is a great place with tremendous natural resources," Link says. "They need the business and engineering schools to support their economy." Australia also has a large market for doctors and nurses.

And of what caliber will the school be? "To get it where it's a viable school will take 20 years," says Link.

"Our motto is 'two thousand (students) by (the year) 2000,'" says Link. By the year 2010 Link hopes to have 10,000 students at the school. He noted that NDA could have many more students to start out with but the focus will be on the quality of the students.

This year Link has been meeting with and interviewing prospective faculty and students in Australia. Most of the faculty will come from the Pacific rim.

The historic west end area of Fremantle, Australia (above) is the sight of Notre Dame—Australia. NDA, Australia's first private university, was set up with the help of Notre Dame—of America.

Some Notre Dame faculty members will travel to Australia for the beginning of the January to October 1992 session but Link was "not at liberty to say" who they were. Link also said he has received calls from college faculty all over the country expressing interest in teaching at the school.

Link himself will only be staying in Australia one year. One of Link's primary goals is to find a permanent president for the school, preferably a native Australian. He said it was "very important to have an Australian president. But right now nobody there has much experience in Catholic tertiary education."

A little over one-third of the country is Roman Catholic but the ratio is slightly higher in the western part of the country, where the school is located.

To emphasize NDA's wish to be a fixture in the Pacific rim, the school was located on the western coast instead of near Sydney or Melbourne, Australia's two major cities.

Link, a "great believer in private universities," said "it's hard to imagine a country of that size with only one private university." There are no legal or financial bonds between the two schools but Notre Dame will offer NDA guidance in its first years.

Student and faculty exchanges will be the main part of this relationship. Stressing gradual growth for the school, Notre Dame students will not be able to visit the Australian campus until the August 1992 term.

Dancecappella has got the beat

By RENEE YOUNG
Accent Writer

Saint Mary's College Repertory Performance Workshop received the Outstanding Artistic Achievement Award at the Great Lakes Regional American College Dance Festival, held March 7-9 in Mount Pleasant, Michigan.

The dance group received the award for its performance of "Dancecappella," choreographed by Sue Cherry, visiting assistant professor of dance at Saint Mary's.

Cherry, who received a M.F.A. for dance in 1988 from the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign, has been with Saint Mary's for the past year. Along with choreographing "Dancecappella," Cherry also served as a guest instructor for the festival in modern dance technique based on the work of Jose Limon and Bill Evans, among others.

In the fall semester, auditions were held for the Repertory Performance Workshop over which Cherry presides.

Saint Mary's and Notre Dame students in the workshop include: Ann-Marie Amicarelli, Mary Drumm, Kjirsten Hanson, Doyle Harless, Andrea Matovina, Laura Michaels, Kathy Mulrooney, Lori Nagy, Susan Olney, Maria Perantinides, Nikki Weber, and Karen Yuen. Valuable technical support was given by faculty member Julia Mayer and student assistant Michelle Rogers.

These performers, along with Cherry, created "Dancecappella," a dance without music. The only sound in the piece comes from the dancers themselves. With the use of their bodies, their voices, and sticks, the dancers accompany their movements. The rhythms and sounds they produce represent the actions they express.

The sticks used to mark rhythm are also used to create intricate patterns which glow in the dark in the finale of the piece.

The costumes worn in the 12 minute long dance are vivid screen painted T-shirts that match the leotards underneath. Matovina said that "auditions were held for this particular piece in September and we have been working on it since."

"Dancecappella" was one of 32 pieces judged, with a total of 27 colleges participating in the festival. Each school was allowed two pieces to be judged, but Saint Mary's only piece, "Dancecappella," received one of the nine awards given at the festival.

Of the festival itself, Repertory Performance Workshop member Michaels said, "It was helpful to talk with dancers from other colleges, my peers, and hear their opinion on the dance...because they are studying a variety of styles, I got a good idea of what is out there."

Matovina would not divulge all the details about the performance tomorrow night. "The end is kind of unexpected," she said mysteriously.

"Dancecappella" will be performed as the finale in the "Spring Forward/Fall Back" concert along with other works by Cherry, Mayer and selected student choreography, in the Little Theater, Moreau Hall on Friday, April 26.

The Observer / Marguerite Schropp

Members of Saint Mary's College Repertory Performance Workshop (above), will perform "Dancecappella," and other dances, this Friday.

Potential for laughs on 'STAT' falls flat

8:15 p.m. on a Tuesday evening is the prime time for studying. In 45 minutes "thirtysomething" will flash onto the tube on ABC, and the future yuppies of this campus cannot wait to discover the fun that the problems of upper-middle class life will present them.

No, this program cannot be written off so easily, and many students do attempt to complete tomorrow's 10 page paper in the 90 minutes between "Cheers" and "thirtysomething."

On one particular Tuesday, I found myself with a small amount of work to do and decided to flip on the television 45 minutes early. After watching "Roseanne" until 8:30 p.m., I viewed the world premiere of "STAT," and I almost wished I had another ten-page paper.

"STAT" is the creation of the same people who developed "Barney Miller." Even if a viewer did not follow this series religiously, its theme song must be one of the most popular tunes to hum in the shower. If "STAT" did not leave a comic impression, perhaps it could leave a musical one.

With these meager expectations, I watched the series unfold. "STAT" was billed as "a comedy set in a New York City trauma center staffed by some of the best and most compulsively paranoid doctors and nurses in the world."

Whenever a character is described as "paranoid," the program in which this character appears had better be funny.

Richard Lewis is the classic example of how an actor should portray a paranoid character. "Anything But Love" portrays Lewis as so completely neurotic that the daily paranoid sufferings by viewers seem very bearable.

Marc Johnson

The doctors of "STAT" do not create nearly the same effect. The unproven team of Allison LaPlaca and Dennis Boutsikaris portray the fictional hospital team of Dr. Hillary and Dr. Menzez, but the paranoid natures of these characters are not funny.

They are simply annoying people who worry far too much, and students do not need to empathize with such characters—they have roommates who perform these functions.

An example of an annoying paranoia was found in Dr. Hillary's admission of a patient who complained of terrible chest pains.

The patient felt fine when she examined him, and his test results were inconclusive. Dr. Hillary wanted to keep the patient in the hospital, but Dr. Menzez did not. "He's alive, this is an emergency room, let's get him out."

Believe it or not, this "joke" had the laugh track on overdrive, but what real viewer would find this comment funny enough to laugh about for five minutes?

Another supposedly humorous situation involved a doctor who was forced to operate on a lawyer. Two out of three students on this campus are geared towards these professions, and "STAT" had the opportunity to create some great jokes between roommates, but it failed miserably. The laugh track did not seem to notice and babbled on until the end of the program.

A second method by which "STAT" attempts to get some laughs is through sexual innuendos. None were very offensive, but maybe they would have been funnier if they were.

Dr. Hillary was hit on by an orderly who complained about the amount of work he had to do. "You have to do everything yourself," he complained as he gazed at Dr. Hillary. "Of course, there are some things you can't do yourself." "Are you sure I'm the one you should be talking to?" "Maybe not," was the definitely not funny response.

What is the moral of this story? Since finals week has appeared on the horizon, this article has hopefully saved some valuable time. Not that time saved is time spent studying, but hopefully the reader realizes that there are much better ways to waste time than watching "STAT."

"My daddy makes the best ice cream!"

Bobby Cremins remains silent about Irish vacancy

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — The clamor of speculation is rising, but Georgia Tech basketball coach Bobby Cremins is keeping his silence.

Broadcast reports suggested that Cremins would be named Notre Dame basketball coach this week to replace Digger Phelps, who retired April 15 after 20 seasons.

Cremins, in Columbia, S.C., for his induction Thursday into the state's Athletic Hall of Fame, wouldn't talk about the Notre Dame job.

Asked about the Notre Dame job Wednesday at a reception for him, Cremins said: "This is a private party. I don't have any comment now."

ESPN reported Tuesday night that Cremins is the leading candidate to replace Phelps. Prime Ticket, a Southern California-based cable TV service, cited unidentified sources in reporting Cremins would be named today.

But Notre Dame athletic director Dick Rosenthal said the school probably won't name a coach this week.

Two of Phelps' former assistants emerged Wednesday as possible replacements.

John Shumate of Southern Methodist said he has accepted Notre Dame's invitation to discuss the job, The Dallas Morning News reported.

"Whether I'm offered the job or not offered the job, I'm happy where I am," said Shumate, a former Phelps assistant.

Nebraska's Danny Nee, another former assistant under Phelps, has also been mentioned as a candidate. Nee says Notre Dame hasn't contacted him.

"All I'm doing is recruiting and working for Nebraska," he said.

Former Virginia coach Terry Holland, now athletic director at Davidson, has been included as well.

"If they wanted to talk, I would certainly consider a situation like this," Holland said.

Al McGuire, a former Marquette coach, says Notre Dame's decision to stay outside a conference hurts the Irish attempts to find a new coach.

"Some of the big names that came up right away, like Cremins and P.J. Carlesimo (of Seton Hall), have great setups in their conferences," McGuire told the South Bend Tribune. "I mean, why would you want to leave that, although I think Cremins would listen."

"But Notre Dame is going to have to jump to a conference. They're having problems already, not just with this but with scheduling. And it's going to get worse."

When Phelps retired, he said he doubted the school could continue as an independent.

The timing of Phelps' retirement was nobody's fault, McGuire said.

"But the best time to fill a job is just before the Final Four," he said. "Then you can go to the coaches' convention, get all your ducks in a row.

"But now people have made a commitment to their recruits, to next year."

McGuire speculated the Irish probably wouldn't consider anyone who offers the slim credentials Phelps brought in 1971 — a single, although successful, season at Fordham with a 26-3 record.

"I don't think they would take a chance that like, because of Gerry Faust," McGuire said.

Faust, a former Notre Dame football coach, had no college experience when he came to the Irish from Moeller High School in Cincinnati. He left for Akron after a disappointing five-year tenure.

Falcons continue to have trouble on and off the field

ATLANTA (AP) — Events have not gone well for the Atlanta Falcons over the past few years — on or off the field.

The Falcons latest problem involves Walter Sutton, the team's 10th-round pick in Monday's NFL draft. Turns out Sutton, a wide receiver from Southwest State (Minn.), is a convicted crack dealer. And the Falcons knew it.

"He saw his wrongdoing and turned himself — and the others who got him involved — in to the proper authorities," Ken Herock, Falcons vice president of player personnel, said Wednesday. "That's why the judge let him continue to go to college and why he's been a model citizen through a parole officer program since his arrest."

"At this time, I think the judge is the only one who can pass judgment on Walter, and so far it's been favorable. Our understanding and feeling is that there's not going to be any jail term."

Controversy is nothing new to the Falcons, who hired tough-talking Jerry Glanville to coach the team back to respectability. In his two seasons, the Falcons won just eight games.

Off the field, there has been tragedy and run-ins with the law involving players and a coach:

—In 1988, defensive back David Croudpie died of a cocaine overdose.

—In 1989, two Falcons were killed in car crashes — tight end Brad Beckman (in December) and rookie tackle Ralph Norwood a month earlier.

—In 1990, draft picks Steve Broussard and Mike Pringle were involved in a barroom brawl at college but never charged; linebacker Aundray Bruce was placed on probation for allegedly threatening a pizza deliveryman with a BB gun; interim coach Jim Hanifan was arrested and charged with drunken driving and simple battery for allegedly striking an officer.

And now Sutton, who is from Fort Myers, Fla., the same hometown as Falcons cornerback Deion Sanders.

Last September, Sutton pleaded guilty in U.S. District Court in Fort Myers to two counts of conspiracy to possess and distribute more than 50 grams of crack cocaine between 1986 and 1988, federal court records show.

U.S. District Judge Elizabeth Kovachevich sentenced Sutton in February to nine years in prison, but she allowed him to return to college to get his degree in sociology before reporting to prison on Jan. 28, 1992.

NFL communications director Greg Aiello said the league did not know about Sutton's conviction and added that he didn't believe any exceptions were made to allow Sutton to enter the draft. Aiello would not say if the NFL excludes convicted felons from its draft.

Sutton's Fort Myers lawyer,

Bob Coleman, said the judge's order requires him to stay in school until he graduates, then go to prison. Sutton was released from custody on a $100,000 bond posted by his parents, records show.

But Sutton's lawyer in Minnesota, Roy Henline, said the player might be able to attend the Falcons' training camp this summer, and then finish his college education in the fall. Sutton is scheduled to graduate in November.

"It is my understanding that if I continue to do the positive things that I have been doing ... they will take into account how I have been progressing," Sutton said Wednesday in an interview with the Independent of Marshall.

"I can't speak for the judge, but I feel I have changed since then, and the way I have been carrying myself will determine whether I go to prison or not," Sutton said.

Sutton had been in trouble before. In 1987, he was sentenced to 18 months probation on state drug possession charges. He said Wednesday that he had learned from his mistakes.

"I was young, and it was a way to make some fast money," he said. "I never sold it out on the streets. I just took it to a person. I got involved because my girlfriend's brother was a big dealer. I just helped him deliver it and that led to other things. I left Fort Myers because I knew that wasn't for me. I have never done drugs in my life. But what I did was wrong, and I can't change that."

His college football offensive coordinator, Brent Jeffers, said both the Falcons and the league were told of Sutton's conviction and sentencing before the team drafted him.

"They were never misled," Jeffers said. "He's always been real up front with us about his situation. He's very honest."

Holyfield-Foreman fight expected to gross $75 million

NEW YORK (AP) — The Evander Holyfield-George Foreman fight will gross an estimated $75 million worldwide, record revenues that bode well not only for boxing but also for the pay-per-view television business.

On Wednesday, TVKO announced figures that represent industry records not only for gross revenues but also for viewership.

With 75 percent of the 1,200 cable systems reporting, TVKO projected total U.S. revenues of about $55 million, based on sales to 1.5 million or more homes at $35.95 apiece.

According to figures compiled by industry analyst Paul Kagan, the next highest-grossing event in pay-per-view history was the Holyfield-Buster Douglas fight last October at $38.6 million.

The fight was seen in 62 countries, and they should help bring the total to $75 million, Abraham said, of which about $38 million to $40 million goes to the promotion team of TVKO, Bob Arum and Dan Duva.

TVKO's next show on May 10 will feature IBF middleweight champion Michael Nunn and Olympic silver medalist Michael Carbajal in a pair of fights. The summer programs will be devoted to heavyweights and could provide a challenger for Holyfield should negotiations between Holyfield's promoter, Duva, and Don King fall through for a fight with Mike Tyson.

The IBF and WBA have called for a June 11 deadline for King and Duva to come to agreement on terms for a fight since Tyson, the former champion, is the No. 1-ranked contender. If they have not come to terms by then, the fight will go to purse bids.

Asked about King's suggestion for a winner-take-all fight, Duva said:

"Evander doesn't want Mike to have to fight that hard and earn nothing."

Former champ fined for brawl

■STOCKHOLM, Sweden— Former heavyweight champion Ingemar Johansson was fined $1,200 Wednesday for his part in a brawl in a restaurant last year. Johansson, 58, told Swedish radio he had a quarrel with a group of people who insisted on discussing boxing with him. "They would not leave me alone and became obtrusive and I pushed them away," Johansson said. "It isn't funny when things like this happen but it can't be helped." Johansson said he might appeal the fine. The former Swedish fighter, who trained harness racing horses in Pompano Beach, Fla., defeated Floyd Patterson in 1959 to capture the heavyweight title. Patterson took it back the following year.

Mimi Mann receives award for service

■BOYS TOWN, NE— Nebraska defensive tackle Kenny Walker, who earned All-American honors despite his deafness, said thanks to a friend who helped him along the way. Walker, who lost his hearing to a high fever associated with spinal meningitis at age 2, presented an award for outstanding service to Mimi Mann at the Boys Town National Research Hospital on Tuesday night. Mann's association with Walker began in 1986 when he made a recruiting visit to Nebraska. She signed and interpreted for him throughout his career at Nebraska. Walker also received an award for being an inspiration to youth and deaf children. Walker was picked by the Denver Broncos in the eighth round of the NFL draft. He was the first deaf player ever chosen.

Favre may join 'Rocket' in Toronto

■HATTIESBURG, Miss.— Quarterback Brett Favre's agent, upset that his client was passed up in the first round of the NFL draft, is looking into Canadian Football. James Cook has talked with the Toronto Argonauts. The Atlanta Falcons made the Southern Mississippi quarterback the sixth choice of the second round. "We're certainly not trying to send him north," said Cook, a Hattiesburg attorney whose only sports client is Favre. "Right now Brett wants to play in the NFL." The issue is money, he said. Favre was the third quarterback selected, with Dan McGwire going to Seattle and Todd Marinovich to the Los Angeles Raiders in the first round on Sunday.

Lockhart heading north

■IRVING, Texas— As Dallas Cowboys' linebacker Eugene Lockhart cleaned out his locker, he bitterly lamented the end of his career with the team and worried about the weather in the northeast. "It's a cold business — a cold, cold business," the 30-year-old middle linebacker said Tuesday. "And it's even colder in New England." Cowboys' coach Jimmy Johnson traded Lockhart to the Patriots as part of the deal that Dallas used to select defensive tackle Russell Maryland with the first pick in Sunday's NFL draft. "I'm hurt; believe me, I'm devastated, but I guess (Johnson) did what he had to do and he thinks this will make the team better," Lockhart said. "I'll leave here not knowing exactly why I'm not ending my career as a Dallas Cowboy." Lockhart made the comments as he unceremoniously tossed away remnants of his seven-year Cowboys career in a plastic trash bag.

Problems result from parents

■FORT WAYNE, IN— Youngsters have tougher choices to make today, and many juvenile problems result from a lack of adult guidance, Indiana coach Bob Knight says. Knight spoke at a Boys and Girls Club of Fort Wayne dinner Tuesday and said he doesn't believe kids have changed. "Adults have changed," he said. "Kids today don't have the same kind of guidance we had. Kids today don't have the same kind of leadership we had." Knight urged greater adult involvement "through whatever means of support you can. It could be financial. It could be your time. The more we take an interest in what kids are doing and what confronts them, the less we'll hear that kids have changed."

Penn Relays begin as Hytten wins decathlon

PHILADELPHIA — Even Hytten won three events to beat Mount St. Mary's teammate Rob Pendergast by 34 points for the men's decathlon title Wednesday night at the Penn Relays.

Hytten's finished with 7,366 points after winning the discus

Wednesday to go with his victories in the shot put and the 100-meter dash Tuesday.

Pendergast, who was leading the event by 48 points after the first day, won four events — the 110-meter hurdles, the javelin, the 1500-meter run and the long jump.

Interhall baseball hurt by nature

By Brian Dineen
Sports Writer

"The games must go on, rain or shine!" While this phrase fits Bookstore Basketball well, it certainly has not been the case for the spring Interhall baseball schedule. Mother Nature's showers have made shambles out of the season, leaving nearly 60% of the games unplayed and forcing cancellation of any type of post-season.

"Since most teams have only one or two games in the books as of now, we have no idea who deserves to be in a playoff," a spokesperson for Non-Varsity Athletics said. "As far as we can tell there will be no playoff and no named champion this year."

The abbreviated season thus far has seen some great action with many teams remaining undefeated. Among the tightest divisional races is the green division, with traditional rivals

Alumni and Dillon each sporting 2-0 records. Alumni's captain Jim Blum cites his team's strong offense as the biggest factor in its success. "Offensive output has been our main asset this year. I think that's the key to success in interhall," Blum said.

In the blue division, Flanner A (2-0) holds the slight edge over Pangborn A (1-0) while the B teams of Alumni and Flanner are battling for top spot in the red division. "We're what I'd call an average team. But being a freshman-oriented team we've done what we have to do to win" said Flanner's captain Lou Medeiros. The showdown between the Dawgs and Gamecocks was scheduled for last night but a wet field prevented play.

In other divisions, Cavanaugh and Holy Cross both stand at 2-0 while St. Ed's stands atop the white division, also at 2-0. After winning an early game 19-0, and then upsetting defending champions Grace 2-1, St. Ed's captain Joe Dailor was disappointed that a post season would not be possible. "I, along with some of the other coaches, think we should play three games, then have a playoff. We would have brought a real good team to the post-season" Dailor said. Dave Pasquale of Dillon agrees. "I guess we'll play out the schedule, see if we can go 4-0, and I guess we'll just have to settle for that. We'd be all for a playoff, but what can you do?" he said.

With a handful of games remaining tonight and next week, top spots in many divisions are still up for grabs. But as far as crowning a 1991 baseball champion goes, wet fields and too little time before finals have put a damper on NVA's version of America's pastime.

Runnin' Rebels to admit to some NCAA allegations

LAS VEGAS (AP) — UNLV will admit to some allegations leveled by the NCAA in a 29-count complaint charging violations in the Runnin' Rebel basketball program, the university's legal counsel said Wednesday.

Brad Boone said the university does not plan to contest certain charges in a reply it has until June 1 to send to the NCAA.

"Clearly there are some allegations in the official inquiry that are accurate," Boone said. "We tried to look at the facts alleged and investigate them as best we could and make an objective determination if the facts were accurate. In some instances I find the facts to be accurate."

Boone, who is handling UNLV's response to the NCAA charges, declined to say which of the allegations will not be contested, or to say how serious he viewed them.

But he said steps have already been taken to make sure the violations don't occur again.

"They're for the most part problems that can be solved with management systems," Boone said. "These systems have been put in place to solve those problems."

A Las Vegas television station, KVBC-TV, quoted sources as saying the violations UNLV will admit to include setting up a system to give players rides to class and arranging a plan for players to pay their rent and utilities for off-campus apartments.

The station said the university will also admit to violations in setting up tutoring programs for recruits Barry Young and Lloyd Daniels.

The NCAA charged UNLV in a December complaint with 29 different violations, many of them stemming from the recruitment of Daniels, a former New York City prep star.

Among the allegations are that convicted points shaver Richard "The Fixer" Perry acted as an agent for UNLV and paid Daniels air fare and other costs for a trip to the university in 1986.

Daniels was arrested at a crack house in February 1987 and never played for UNLV.

Boone said he has completed all but one interview as part of UNLV's response to the allegations and is now in the process of preparing the university's formal reply.

Boone said he attempted to interview Perry, but that Perry would not cooperate in the probe.

"His attorney advised me that Richard Perry would not talk to us," Boone said.

Boone said he expected UNLV to go before the NCAA's Committee on Infractions in August or September, with a determination by the committee sometime in the fall whether the basketball program will face sanctions stemming from the probe.

He would not speculate on what penalties, if any, the university expects to receive from the NCAA.

"I learned long ago in law school that smart lawyers never make prediction," Boone said.

UNLV is already banned from live television and from appearing in the postseason tournament next season, the result of a settlement of a 13-year effort by the NCAA to suspend coach Jerry Tarkanian.

The current probe has stirred speculation that Tarkanian might either be forced out of his job or leave for an NBA coaching position, but Tarkanian has insisted he plans to stay at UNLV.

Men's baseball defeats Indiana State in dramatic ninth

By JIM VOGL
Sports Writer

The 20th ranked Notre Dame baseball team squared off against the 25th ranked Indiana State Sycamores and were locked in a 5-5 tie, before a Mike Coss single won it for the Irish with two out in the ninth.

The victory extended Notre Dame's win streak to 13 games. The results were certainly not unusual, but the game itself was.

After these two heavyweights traded punches in the first four innings, Alan Walania relieved Irish starting pitcher David Sinnes, while second-string catcher Ed Keaffaber relieved Chuck Smith for the Sycamores.

They both left without yielding earned runs.

But John Trisler, Indiana State's ace reliever, came on in the eighth and later suffered Coss's knockout blow. In that inning, Irish power hitter and former tight end Frank Jacobs led off with a lumbering infield single.

Notre Dame Coach Pat Murphy looked to the bench for more speed, deciding on Irv Smith, a current Irish tight-end, to pinch run. After a sacrifice by Eric Danapilis and an intentional walk to .400 hitter Binkiewicz, Murphy called for the hit-and-run.

Cory Mee came up empty, and Smith was gunned down at third. Sycamores Coach Bob Warn, praying for a double play to bail out Trisler, put Mee on with the inning's second intentional walk.

But the strategy backfired, as Coss lines the second pitch to right, bringing Binkiewicz around from second base with the game winner.

For Trisler, nicknamed "the Terminator" for his habit of putting an end the opponents hopes, it was an unfamiliar feeling. After being named the Missouri Valley Conference "Pitcher of the Week," the intimidating 6-foot-4, 225 pound hurler who owned a stingy 1.25 ERA along with 22 K's in 21 1/3 innings and 11 saves in 17 appearances, took his first loss of the season.

Trisler's failure was not the only oddity of the contest. Notre Dame's steady freshman lead-off hitter, Greg Layson, singled in the bottom of the first. Nothing unusual. But Smith's pick-off attempt was errant, allowing Layson to motor all the way to third. Craig Counsell promptly drove in the run with a sacrifice fly.

The Sycamores answered in the next frame in a wacky sequence. Dave Doster's perfectly placed grounder left first base uncovered. Second baseman Layson's attempted toss to Binkiewicz went in the dugout, and Doster took second. Doster then committed the Sycamores first of many base-running blunders, getting thrown out at third on a grounder to short. Two batters later, the next blunder occurs—a missed sacrifice squeeze by Stoney Burke. But Burke partially redeems himself, singling in the runner at second on the following pitch.

The Irish countered in the third. Jacobs, Counsell, Binkiewicz and Mee waited patiently, taking advantage of Smith's wildness, and scored one without the benefit of a base hit.

In the fourth, the Sycamores tallied on a bases loaded wild pitch. ISU again called upon Burke to attempt the squeeze play, but again he failed. Sinnes, in his last play of the game, fielded the bunt swiftly and trapped the runner trying to score.

Walania then yielded an RBI single to Todd Hobson, followed by another run off a wild pitch to bring the Sycamore lead to 5-2.

Once again, the Irish offense responded when they were down, and once again Layson was the spark-plug. He singled with two outs and advanced to third on a well executed hit and run by Counsell. Jacobs became the beneficiary of yet another Sycamore mishap, as his towering fly ball to center dropped between three defenders, scoring Layson.

Danapilis followed by crushing a pitch off the left field wall. While the Irish coaching staff disputed in favor of a home run, the umpires ruled that the ball stayed in play for a two-RBI triple.

Ironically, Danapilis, the cleanup hitter who keyed the ninth inning run with a sacrifice, also earned the victory. The right fielder, who threw three pitches to get the final out in the top of the ninth, raised his record to 1-1.

While the game had an abundance of comical or confusing moments, it also had a few highlights expected of two nationally rated teams. One example, besides Danapilis, Layson, and Coss, was the defensive play of Dan Bautch, who graciously toured the spacious center-field area at Coveleski Stadium to make several breathtaking catches.

Another example was crowd itself, which set a Notre Dame home attendance record (4,027), most of which were admitted free with coupons courtesy of the Teamsters Union of South Bend, most of which stuck around until the end.

Bookstore hits Sweet 16; Tequila number one seed

By DAVE McMAHON
Associate Sports Editor

About 350 games ago, close to 700 teams started with the dream of journeying to the finals of Bookstore Basketball XX. As the intensity level increased in visible form Wednesday during Bookstore Basketball XX action, the teams decreased, leaving only the Sweet 16 to vie for the coveted title for the annual rite of spring.

Top-seeded "Tequila White Lightning X" put on its best show of the tournament, as sophomore Eric Jones, against a man-to-man defense, took control with 12 points in a 21-8 win over "Shoot or Get Off."

"Eric Jones had one of the best games I've ever seen from a big man," said "Tequila's" Shannon Cullinan. "He's the quickest big guy on campus, and it's great to have Jim Dolan contributing, too."

Primarily a team that relies on strong inside play from Jones, "Tequila" has been wont to increase the offensive tempo.

"Although some people don't consider us a running team, we like to turn it up when we can," said Cullinan.

"Tequila" faces 16th-seed "Julius and 4 Other Guys" in their Sweet 16 opener.

While Cullinan was surprised at the top ranking due to a few close games in the opening round, he feels that at least one other team has dominated from the outset.

"We've had some pretty tough games, and 'Adworks' has been nothing short of phenomenal in their games, so we didn't really expect the top spot."

After taking an 11-10 lead at the beginning of the second half, "Adworks" put on a pressure defense that virtually shut down "Culliflower, Crud, Silk of Magnesia, Chief, and Doctor Dumb" in a 21-14 win.

Dorsey Levins (seven points) and Derrick Johnson (six) paced the All-Stars.

"Malicious Prosecution" snagged the third seed with an impressive 21-15 victory over Kevin Ellery's "X-Force" squad. "Gaucho's", behind the most balanced scoring effort of Wednesday's action, rolled past "Commons Club", 21-12.

Dave Bose contributed five points, while Pete DiGiovanni, Tom O'Connell, and Rob Vasquez each had four points for the winners.

"Bose is pretty much carrying us right now," said DiGiovanni. "We play our best when we run, and he's been holding us together when we've had to rely on outside shooting."

After losing in the Round of 16 last year, "Gaucho's" is hoping for a longer stay this time around.

"We're pretty excited to be seeded fifth," said Mike Toner. "We expected to make the top ten, but four really came as a surprise."

Fifth seed "Gina's Pizza" benefitted from 12-of-23 shooting from Kyle and Chris Garlitz in rolling to a 21-6 win over "No Clue", which played with only four players for about three-quarters of the game.

"Gina's", after a trip to the Final 32 last year, expected at least an equal performance in this year's Bookstore tournament.

"We knew we could do a little bit better this year," said Chris Garlitz. "We've got three guards who shoot well from the outside, but our defense is what really carries us."

The combination of two consecutive quality Bookstore tournaments likely played a role in their ranking.

"We ended up higher than we thought we would," said Garlitz. "We figured we'd be around 10th, so we're pretty happy with our position."

John Rapchinski poured in seven points and Demetrius DuBose added five as "4 Men With an Attitude" outlasted "Off Campus Crime", 21-18.

Seeded sixth, "4 Men" are on a mission that they anticipate will last for a few more games.

"We're not in it to lose," said Rapchinski. "Everything's coming together for us right now. There are a lot of great teams out there, but I haven't seen anyone that we wouldn't be able to match up against."

While "4 Men" uses DuBose as their "go to" man, they have played together long enough to know that someone will step forward when the pressure moments come.

After falling in last year's Round of 64 to "Just Chillin'", the nucleus of the team is satisfied with their sixth seed, but is by no means content.

"Bareback Cowboys" rode their way into the seventh seed with a 21-16 win over veterans "V's Revenge". Seniors Stu Healy and Pete Parten pumped out six points each and Corey Lawrence pulled down eight rebounds, leading the Alumni Hall

Women capture Midwest, qualify for NCAAs

By DAN PIER
Sports Writer

As if the midwest's best competition couldn't provide an adequate challenge for the Notre Dame/Saint Mary's sailing team, Mother Nature made things even more difficult this weekend.

The Irish met both challenges to win the Midwestern Collegiate Sailing Association championship and qualify for the national regatta.

Snow was falling on Michigan State's Lake Lansing when the Irish women arrived Saturday. The snow turned to rain, which combined with 25-30 knot winds to make sailing conditions miserable. Officials postponed some races until Sunday, but stiff winds continued to blow.

In the B division, skipper Lisa Fox led Notre Dame/Saint Mary's to a first place finish. Commodore Moira Sullivan crewed five of those races, while Adrienne Briggs crewed the other two. Patti Losinske skippered the Irish to second place in the A division. Laura Scully crewed four of the races and Briggs crewed three.

Notre Dame/Saint Mary's defeated runner-up Wisconsin by an impressive nine point margin. The rest of the eight team field included host Michigan State, Michigan, Western Michigan, Miami of Ohio, Ohio State, and Illinois Wesleyan.

The winners owe much of their success to the two senior skippers, both of whom have qualified for nationals before. "It got so bad that some teams couldn't handle it and had to drop out," said Sullivan, "but Patti and Lisa's experience showed. They had great control."

The victory qualified the team for the national competition in New Orleans, May 29-31. There they expect the weather to be better, but they know the 16 team field will provide much stiffer competition. "The east coast schools are usually the best," explained Sullivan. "They have coaches and we don't, and they can practice on more difficult lakes. We have a good chance to be in the top ten."

squad into today's matchup against "McCormick's Coney Island."

"Bareback" strives for an up-tempo offensive show, complemented with a strong performance on the boards.

Eighth-seeded "Just Chillin'" a Final 8 participant last year, strengthened their defensive game en route to a 21-8 win against "Barking Cliff Chickens".

"We played well as a team, and our passing was better than it has been," said "Chillin'" junior Joe Fulton.

"Fighting Kernal's II", behind eight points from Russ Allegrette and six from Brad Leshnock sailed past "I'd Rather be Skiing...", 21-10, to grab the 14th seed.

"We full court pressed them into a lot of mistakes," said sophomore Pete Tulchinsky. "Today was our best played game of the tournament. Our goal was to make the Sweet 16, and now we hope we can take that a little farther."

Raghib 'Rocket' Ismail didn't back up accusation

When Raghib Ismail launched himself toward Canada over the weekend, he made every effort to make the New England Patriots choke on his exhaust fumes.

Through his agent, Ed Abram, Ismail accused the Patriots' director of player relations, Joe Mendes, of making a racist remark. The Associated Press reports that Mendes suggested that Ismail lower his asking price in preliminary contact talks with the ex-Irish superstar.

When Ismail looked away from Mendes, the Patriots' executed allegedly told Ismail that he had the attention span of Tim Worley. Worley, a running back for the Pittsburgh Steelers, is black, as is Ismail.

How do the above statements add up to a racist remark? Good question. Perhaps Ismail would like to explain it himself.

The fact of the matter is that Worley, in negotiations with the Steelers, held out for a substantial amount of money and has been criticized for being lazy and unproductive. It is possible that the Rocket might have suffered from an attention deficit similar to Worley's when he found out that nobody in the National Football League was prepared to pay him the type of money commanded by Jeff George and Troy Aikman, the top picks in the past two drafts.

If that was the case, Mendes would have been justified in comparing Ismail to Worley. It may have been merely a coincidence that they are both black. After all, approximately 60 percent of the players in the NFL are black.

If Ismail is going to accuse Mendes, or anybody, for that matter, of racism, he owes it to them to back it up. In this case it doesn't appear that he did.

As for jumping for the big bucks and going to Canada, it appears that Ismail is convinced that money can buy happiness for him. The 26 million dollars he is likely to earn in his contract with the Toronto Argonauts of the Canadian Football League will make him a very wealthy man.

Maybe it will. If it does, we should all wish him the best of luck. Toronto is a great city, although it may not be the apex of cultural diversity that Ismail believes it is. If he enjoys himself there, that's all that matters.

But if he ever had any concern about proving his doubters wrong, the CFL is not the place to do that. All of the critics who say that he will never be an impact player in the NFL will be right if he spends the rest of his career in Canada.

If the added financial incentive eliminates Ismail's desire to prove he can play with the best, then the Canadian route is the best one for him. If not, let's hope somebody in the United States welcomes him back to the negotiating table after he saddled one NFL negotiator with an unsubstantiated charge of racism.

Men's lacrosse hammers Lake Forest 18-4 on road

By MIKE SCRUDATO
Sports Writer

Win, loss, win, loss, win, loss. The Notre Dame lacrosse team continued this familiar pattern by bouncing back from last weekend's home loss to Ohio-Wesleyan with an 18-4 trouncing of the Division III Lake Forest Foresters on Tuesday in Lake Forest, Illinois. With this victory the Irish raised their record to 6-6.

"We played pretty well, and we did what we needed to do," Irish coach Kevin Corrigan said. "Basically, we were a better team than them."

The Irish attack was extremely well-balanced, with 13 separate players scoring goals. The charge was led by a couple of freshmen attackmen, Rob Snyder, who scored two goals and had two assists, and Mark Hexamer, who netted two goals and added an assist. Junior attackman Mike Sullivan also chipped in to the barrage with two goals and an assist. The Irish also outshot the over-matched Lake Forest squad, 51-17.

"We felt pretty confident going into the game. We had scrimmaged them and knew that we should beat them. This game allowed us to do some preparations for Ohio State and get everyone, especially some of the younger guys, some playing time," Corrigan added.

Coach Corrigan was referring to this Saturday's crucial matchup at Ohio State. This game, along with the May 4 contest at Michigan State, will determine the recipient of the automatic Midwest berth into the NCAA tournament. If Notre Dame wins both of these games, it should receive its second straight NCAA bid.

"We are a young team that has gone through a lot of adversity. We've lost a lot of key players due to injury, but we've continued to improve throughout the year. I am confident that we'll play well [against Ohio State and Michigan State]. I know we won't beat beat ourselves; someone is going to have to come out and beat us," Corrigan said.

Men's tennis loses to Badgers 6-3 in final regular match

By ANTHONY KING
Assistant Sports Editor

The Notre Dame men's tennis team had their opportunities.

A win against the Wisconsin Badgers would have solidified a NCAA tourney spot for the Irish. But on a rainy day in Madison, Wisconsin, the Badgers stormed out to an early lead and never looked back, beating the Irish 6-3.

Because of the weather, the Irish were confined to playing in the Nielson Tennis Center. Though the Irish prefer the outdoor environment, coach Bob Bayliss quickly pointed out that the weather was not a factor.

"We can't argue about the conditions," said Bayliss. "The courts are all the same dimensions and we both had to play under the conditions."

The Badgers came out smoking, winning the top four singles matches. This put the Irish in a deficit that they would never recover from. Irish star Dave DiLucia lost a close match to Jack Waite, 6-2, 6-7, 7-6.

"Waite played an inspired and gutsy match," commented Bayliss. "He deserves a lot of credit."

The Irish had their chances all day, but just couldn't convert. They lost three matches in the third set by the score of 7-6. DiLucia had two match points, but couldn't convert. Chuck Coleman, who lost 6-3, 4-6, 7-6, served for the match at 5-4 and was up 4-2 in the tiebreaker, but he too failed to capitalize.

Two bright spots for the Irish were Andy Zurcher and Ron Rosas. Zurcher and Rosas were the only winners in the singles, and Zurcher also was victorious in his doubles match.

"Zurcher played very well," explained Bayliss. "He was our best competitor yesterday. Rosas started out sluggishly, but pulled himself together and played solidly."

Overall, Bayliss did not feel that the Irish played up to their capabilities. Poor first services haunted the Irish in singles and doubles play. Bayliss was encouraged by the play of the number two doubles, stating it the best match of the year for them.

The Irish are still in the hunt for a NCAA tourney spot, but they are forced to sit and wait for the selections of the committee. Bayliss feels that their strength of schedule should help.

"We've played 26 teams in the top 25 and nine teams in the top 10," said Bayliss. "We have wins over the number 12, 13, 19, 21, and 22 teams. So if we get the chance to play, no one is going to scare us."

At the least, the Irish had another great season, and will have 11 of their top 12 players returning. This includes all of the top six singles players. Bayliss is excited by this, but warned the summer months will determine how good this team will be.

"It depends on what kind of commitment we have over the summer," explained Bayliss. "Last year we didn't have that commitment. We need to play in the summer more this year."

Irish softball takes two from MCC rival Butler, 1-0

By JENNIFER MARTEN
Sports Writer

The sun was hot yesterday, but the bats were lukewarm for the Notre Dame softball team. The team took two close ones from Midwestern Collegiate Conference rival Butler winning both 1-0.

In the first game, the Irish scored the only run of the game in the third inning. Senior Rachel Crosson reached first on an error and senior Kathy Verneti sacrificed her to second. Sophomore Ronny Alvarez's single put runners on the corners for the Irish with two outs. Alvarez then stole second giving Notre Dame two runners in scoring position. Crosson scored on sophomore Ruth Kmak's single, but Alvarez was thrown out at the plate trying to score on the play.

The Irish collected six hits over the course of the game off Bulldog pitcher Stacey Wilson whose record fell to 8-8. Kmak led the team with two hits and an RBI. Alvarez also singled twice for the Irish.

The Bulldogs were shut out by strong pitching of Missy Linn. The junior struck out a season high ten batters and walked no one in her seven inning stint on the mound. Giving up only two hits, Linn boosted her record to 11-10.

Coach Boulac was happy with his pitching staff. "Our pitchers did a great job today allowing only four hits over two games. They did everything we asked of them. I hope we continue to get that kind of pitching," said Boulac.

Sophomore Staci Alford continued the quality Irish pitching in the second game which Notre Dame also won 1-0. Alford gave up only two hits and no Bulldog reached second base in the seven inning game. Her record now stands at 10-4.

"I felt good out there and the defense played well," said Alford of her victory.

At the start, it looked like the Irish offense might be back in the swing of things with the Irish jumping out to an early lead. Alvarez beat out a dribbler to first to lead off the first and moved to second on a throwing error by shortstop Kathy Book. Junior Laurie Sommerlad hit the ball to Mary Dury at third base and Dury overthrew first allowing Alvarez to score and putting Sommerlad on first.

Kmak was thrown out at first in fielder's choice that moved Sommerlad to second. Senior Megan Fay struck out and Sommerlad was thrown out trying to advance to third on a passed ball to end the inning.

The Irish threatened again in the second and fourth innings with runners on third, but could not get them across the plate.

"We were hitting the ball well, but we hit at people and weren't scoring runs," said Boulac. "We have to hit in groups now."

The victories moved the Irish to 27-19 for the season and 12-2 against conference teams.
