Kerrey wins in South Dakota

Bush faces surprisingly large number of 'uncommitted'

SIoux FALLS, S.D. (AP) — Sen. Bob Kerrey won the South Dakota primary Tuesday, boosting his standing in the Democratic presidential race. President Bush, the unopposed Republican winner, was buffeted by a protest vote.

Kerrey's farm-state rival, Sen. Tom Harkin, was running second and looking ahead to the burst of primaries in March. "I'm still in this race," Harkin said as the votes were being counted. "It's a national campaign."

The Republican results had to be sobering to the White House. With 90 percent of the precincts reporting, Bush had 69 percent of the total and 31 percent chose uncommitted. Conservative Patrick Buchanan was not on the ballot.

Kerrey was gaining 40 percent of the Democratic vote in South Dakota, compared to 26 percent for Harkin and 19 percent for Clinton. Paul Tsongas trailed with 9 percent, and Jerry Brown had 4 percent.

South Dakota thus was extending a trend of regional favoritism among the Democrats, and of a strong challenge to Bush among the Republicans.

"I think it's just confirmation of what we've been saying. The president has been in a free-fall for months now and there's no indication that he's levelling off," said outspoken conservative activist Richard Viguerie, a supporter of Buchanan.

With 15 Democratic delegates and 19 GOP delegates at stake, South Dakota marked the end of a preliminary round of single-state contests. More than 1200 Democratic delegates are up for grabs in a string of contests over the next two weeks.

CNN projected a Kerrey victory based on exit polls, broadcasting the result with almost a third of the polling places still open.

Kerrey, a former Nebraska governor and first-term senator, campaigned as a Farm Belt neighbor to South Dakota, pressing his call for national health insurance. The exit polls said the health issue was popular with voters, especially among the elderly.

Kerrey campaign manager Tad Devine called the South Dakota vote an "impressive victory" and said he hoped it could be parlayed into campaign momentum in Colorado, Georgia and South Carolina, all of which vote in the next week.

Tsongas offered Kerrey congratulations — but it was tempered. "It's obvious that the negative advertising worked, and we'll take that into consideration," he said. Tsongas got one bit of bright news — an endorsement from Gov. William Donald Schaefer one week ahead of Maryland's primary.

Harkin disputed any suggestion that he might drop out of the race if he lost South Dakota. Even so, the political pundits predicted in advance that if either Kerrey or Harkin was defeated, their fundraising would dry up.

But so far, none of the regional winners has been able to parlay his home-field advantage into broader success.

Tsongas, the winner in last week's New Hampshire primary, stumbled to a dead heat with Brown in Maine. Harkin won his home-state Iowa caucuses earlier in the month, but finished fourth in New Hampshire and trailed badly in Maine. Clinton has yet to win, despite his pre-primary status as front-runner, but primaries in his native South begin next week.

Lopez: U.S. may have acted unethically during Gulf War

By JAY STONE

News Writer

The U.S.-led coalition's actions during the last few weeks of the Gulf War and the consequent effects on the Iraqis raised serious moral questions about the ethics of war, said Professor George Lopez Tuesday.

In his lecture titled "Quotable Quotes, Slippery Slopes and the Search for Ethics in War: Fighting in the Persian Gulf," Lopez, associate professor of government and international studies and faculty fellow in the Kroc Institute for International Peace Studies, examined whether the U.S. forces in the Gulf War acted unethically.

Lopez said that his main goal was "to establish whether our behavior matched our best intentions. If and where it did not, I wish to identify why that may have been so."

According to Lopez, the allied forces delivered more "explosive tonnage in Kuwait and Iraq in 110 days than was dropped by all sides during World War II."

Lopez added that the kill ratio of enemy forces to coalition forces was the largest in the twentieth century and that the environmental and infrastructure damage in Iraq and Kuwait will effect "people and resources for years to come."

Lopez also expressed concern regarding the future of war-fighting strategies, particularly about the use of air power. Lopez saw the air-land strategy employed in the Gulf War as "the wave of the future."

The political dialogue of the Iraqi invasion, Desert Shield and Desert Storm were "intermeshed" with ethical principles, Lopez added. From the very beginning of the Gulf War, U.S. strategists focused on a war-fighting policy which would limit civilian casualties. According to Lopez, "unlike previous wars," U.S. leaders, even during the Gulf War, emphasized this commitment.

Although Lopez admitted that U.S.-led forces attempted to minimize civilian casualties by attacking military, strategic targets with precision-guided munitions, he said that this practice was "more true in Baghdad than it was in Basra and other cities."

Lopez added that the final coalition bombings of city infrastructure "contributed little or nothing to stated U.S. war goals: the liberation of Kuwait and the destruction of Saddam Hussein's military capacity.... Nor did these attacks alter the military capacity of Iraq to determine when and how the war would come" to an end.

Lopez said that these bombings of the U.S.-led coalition raise the question of whether a fighting power has the responsibility to allow the enemy to meet the basic needs of its populace after the war has ended. Subsequently, Lopez said that the Iraqi people continue to suffer "disproportionately" from

Alumni defeats Grace, reaches Iceberg final

By AMY SANTANGELO

News Writer

Alumni Hall advances to the finals of the 1992 Iceberg Debates after defeating Grace Hall by successfully defending the position that the media should not invade the privacy of public figures and government officials.

The Alumni team, represented by speakers freshman Sean Dempsey and junior David Certo, took the affirmative side, while the negative view was held by senior Grace Hall debaters David Frye and John Albers. Alumni won the debate in a 2-1 split decision.

Dempsey, who spoke first for Alumni, said that the team's main premise was that "all people have a fundamental right to privacy." The team said that they believed that information about certain matters, especially concerning an individual's health and family, should not be released to the general public.

Teammate Certo emphasized the point that the debate was one of ethics and values, or what people should and should not do. He said that there are "certain sectors of lives so private and so fundamental that they should not be invaded."

Albers was Grace's first speaker to refute Alumni's arguments. The Grace team's position was that freedom of the press is one of the cornerstones of democracy. He said that "officials are held accountable to people through the media."

Grace's second speaker specifically attacked Alumni's stand on the issue of health and family matters. He said that these issues are important to the public so they should be made known.

Alumni's rebuttal was simply

INSIDE COLUMN

Notre Dame needs to clean out its closets

Sir John Harrington, an English poet of the 17th century, once wrote "Treason doth never prosper: What's the reason? For if treason ever prosper, none dare call it treason."

Treason, taken quite literally, is a crime of limited dimensions, involving nations and politicians. Yet interpreted broadly, treason can be called not just politics, but business. It's lies, deception, misinformation and all the good stuff that comes along with big business, big government and big educational institutions.

At Notre Dame, treason is commonly referred to as "personnel matters" or "university business." How many things go on at Notre Dame that the community is kept in the dark about? Cable television on campus two years ago? Mysterious disappearances of athletes from active lineups? Lawsuits against the university? Students forced to petition to Board of Trustees in order to obtain hiring information for classes?

It is not simply that Notre Dame chooses not to do its laundry in public. The University could not do so, as the world does not have enough detergent or washing machines to cleanse Notre Dame's soiled rags of their horrid iniquities.

In Roman times, it was said that Caesar's wife must not only be virtuous, her virtue must be unquestioned. The same can be said of Notre Dame (Caesar's wife). Although the University maintains (without documentation) that it is virtuous, its virtue has been convincingly and repeatedly questioned. Singing the Alma Mater is difficult at an institution which spouts on and on about how it has nothing to hide but nonetheless acts like it has the skeletons of South African blacks, functionally illiterate athletes and other non-entities in its mammoth closets.

Notre Dame ought to be thankful for the myths of virtue and goodness which surround it. Were it not for these myths of virtue and for the fact that such myths make people generally unwilling to believe scandalous tales of Notre Dame, this University would find itself as well-respected as UNLV or the University of Miami (Fla.). Instead, an institution which is, as far as anyone knows, as crooked as any other allows itself to be passed off as holier-than-thou.

Are the men and women under the dome wearing blinders, or are they merely callous? Are they active accomplices to the crimes of which they stand accused, or are they, in their silence, accomplices after the fact?

Task forces on diversity and crime are a waste of time and resources. What Notre Dame needs, if it is to survive for another 150 years, is an ethical and charismatic leader to purge the charlatans from its inner sanctums. It needs a willingness to defend its virtue, openly and honestly responding to accusations. For if she is virtuous, why does she behave like a tart, sneaking around at night and working deals behind closed doors? Arrangements with NBC and Edward DeBartolo, Sr. doth surely prosper, and none dare call them treason.

The views are those of the author and not necessarily those of The Observer.

First Ladies address female poverty

■ GENEVA — About 70 queens and presidents' wives gathered Tuesday for a conference to draw attention to the squalor and deprivation of rural women in the Third World. Ana Milena Munoz de Gaviria, the Colombian First Lady, said participants at the conference at U.N. European headquarters wanted to use their "privileged position" to plant the plight of rural women firmly on the international agenda. "To speak about the rural woman is to mention 550 million women, one out of 10 inhabitants of this planet," she said. "It is to speak of the poorest among the poor." The U.N.'s International Fund for Agricultural Development predicts an additional 15 million women each year will fall into poverty unless urgent action is taken by the international community.

Synar has represented Oklahoma's 2nd Congressional District since 1979. Edmondson is challenging Synar in the Aug. 25 Democratic primary. The prosecutor said Monday he wanted to photograph the home to illustrate his contention that Synar has property in Washington but owns none in his home district.

Greywind became the center of a bitter abortion dispute that drew widespread attention after she was charged with recklessly endangering the fetus. Abortion opponents offered her $12,000 to carry her pregnancy to term, and an anonymous donor offered to pay for the abortion she said she wanted.

HPC asked to support co-ed Pangborn move

By BECKY BARNES
News Writer

Hall Presidents' Council (HPC) was asked to support the committee to convert Pangborn into a co-educational, chemical-free dormitory at Tuesday's meeting.

James Gannon, a Pangborn senior and a member of the committee, said that now is the time to make the change since Pangborn is already to be converted to a women's dorm, and students will not have to worry about losing their own residence.

In a letter to HPC, Gannon said that a chemical-free, co-ed Pangborn "would serve as a model facility and provide impetus for the future creation of a real co-ed housing option."

If Pangborn is converted, Gannon hopes to see more dorms slowly going co-ed in the future. With the continuing increase of women to the University, Gannon said that he thinks it will be possible to easily make the transition.

Gannon believes the administration will be receptive to the group, which has sent mailings to all University groups, rectors and assistant rectors asking for advice in addition to letters to The Observer and Scholastic, he said.

One HPC member raised questions about parietals, and Gannon said that parietals would probably be determined by the administration.

HPC members showed support for the group, and discussed proposing a resolution at their next meeting.

Joe Cassidy, Director of Student Affairs, also discussed the possibility of changing the hall storage procedures to a University-wide use of storage trailers. Cassidy asked HPC members to examine the costs of the procedure they have used in the past, and a decision will be made in the future.

Cassidy also spoke about the Colloquy 2000, which will be sending various sub-committees to HPC and Student Senate meetings. Cassidy said that this study by the administration is the first to ask for student input, and he stressed the importance of making contributions.

Palestinian calls Israeli peace proposals 'preposterous'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Israeli negotiators insisted Tuesday they were prepared to work out terms of a self-rule plan for Palestinians. But a Palestinian spokeswoman ridiculed Israeli proposals as "preposterous" and in the nature of apartheid.

The sharp disagreement, alongside a red-hot U.S.-Israeli dispute over Jewish settlements, slowed the peacemaking process. Even selecting the site for the next round ran into trouble. Chief Israeli negotiator Elyakim Rubinstein said only his government had responded to a U.S. request for suggested locations.

"It's a pity time has to be wasted on such things," Rubinstein said at a news conference.

Across town, Hanan Ashrawi, spokeswoman for the Palestinians, described documents submitted by Israel Monday night as "an insult to our intelligence" because they perpetuated the Israeli occupation of the West Bank and Gaza and endorsed continued Jewish settlements of the disputed territories.

Rubinstein said the "really elaborate ideas" did not amount to a blueprint for self-rule, but dealt with giving Palestinians who live under Israeli control considerable control over their day-to-day activities.

"We hope the Palestinians will be seriously considering them," he said.

Eventually, Rubinstein said, "they should be elaborated further into a more detailed model" for self-rule.

Meanwhile, Rubinstein said, the issue of Jewish settlements should be deferred until territorial problems are taken up later in the negotiations.

But Ashrawi said the Palestinian negotiators would refuse to discuss self-rule until the issues of settlements and human rights in lands the Arabs lost in the 1967 Six-Day War are resolved.

The day's bargaining at the State Department mostly dealt inconclusively with a procedural issue, where the next round of talks would be held. Jordan proposed extending the current sessions here until March 11 and Israel agreed to consider the suggestion.

But Rubinstein said he doubted it would be accepted. After two weeks of bargaining the Israeli negotiators must consult with their government in Jerusalem, he said.

The three main goals of the talks are to find a formula for Palestinians to run their own day-to-day lives, resolve territorial differences between Israel and the Arabs and establish the legitimacy of Israel as a Jewish state in a predominantly Muslim part of the world.

Israel came under public pressure on Monday from Secretary of State James Baker to stop settlements in the West Bank, Gaza and other disputed territories or give up on getting U.S. backing for $10 billion in bank loans Israel has sought since last fall to help it absorb tens of thousands of refugees from the former Soviet Union and Ethiopia.

Baker's threat bolstered the Arabs' position, and Israel responded by reiterating its determination to keep settling the territories and to come to terms with the Palestinians and surrounding Arab nations.

The U.S.-Israel dispute came amid disclosures that the Bush administration proposes to sell 72 advanced fighter jets and long-range antitank missiles to Saudi Arabia. Israel has long opposed U.S. sales of advanced weaponry to Arab states out of concern it will lose its qualitative military advantage.

Israeli officials said specialists on health, economics, taxation and other functions the Palestinians would take over had come here to take up a self-rule plan for the 1.7 million Palestinians living under Israeli military government in the West Bank and Gaza.

"They're here as proof we come with the full intentional of talking substance," said an Israeli official, insisted on anonymity.

Ashrawi said the Israeli plan envisions an "apartheid" legal system where Jews are treated differently from Arabs and says Jews have the right to continue settling in Judea and Samaria, traditional Jewish names for the West Bank. "The document in itself is preposterous," she said, "but that doesn't mean we'll just throw it in the wastebasket" when substantive discussions on self-rule begin.

The Palestinians on Monday presented Israel with a lengthy document detailing why the settlements, in their view, violate international law and must be stopped.

"While the settlements are going on, while the bulldozers are leveling our land, it is very clear that Israel is trying to dig the grave of the peace process," Ashrawi said.

Forums will focus on racial issues

By ANDREW RUNKLE
News Writer

Weekly forums will be sponsored by the Multicultural Executive Council (MEC) and the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP) to discuss gender and race issues this semester, according to Nicole Farmer, member of the MEC.

These forums will be held every Tuesday night for the rest of the semester, Farmer said. Farmer and Michael Swanson, campus president of the NAACP, are planning the weekly forums.

"We are trying to combat ignorance on campus, take an active role," she said.

According to Farmer, these meetings are a result of a recent forum held by the NAACP on racism. The weekly forums "are needed as a follow-up to take a pro-active, rather than reactive position," Farmer said. After the first meeting on racism, "people walked away feeling good, but we need follow-ups," she said to combat the problems.

"The forums will focus not only on black/white issues, but on any gender or race issues. We plan to make the discussions more broad," she said.

Possible discussion topics for the forums include: stereotypes at Notre Dame, sexism, racism, and discrimination in the classroom, Farmer said.

Farmer also hopes to schedule a forum in which a panel of student leaders would answer questions about organizational policies within campus groups for which they are responsible.

Bush attacks Democrats' proposed defense cuts

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — President Bush accused Democrats on Tuesday of trying to "open a bidding war to see who can gut defense the fastest" as he campaigned in a defense industry state ravaged by recession and shifting national priorities.

Bush said Democratic plans to reduce defense spending beyond his recommended $50 billion in cuts amount to "a Democratic double-play; cripple our defenses and the economy, all at the same time."

"We can reduce defense spending substantially," he said in a fund-raising speech at the St. Francis Hotel. "But there are Democrats with a different plan in mind. They want to use the end of the Cold war to open a bidding war to see who can gut the defense the fastest."

Bush, hoping to overcome his slump in California polls, was just starting a six-day trip combining politics in California and next week's primary state of Georgia with a drug summit and other matters in his home state of Texas.

The president came here while South Dakotans were holding a primary. Bush was without opposition on the Republican ballot there and thus expected to win easily, although uncommitted delegates were also running.

Mindful of California's foundering defense and aerospace industry and crippled real estate market, Bush noted that $1 out of every $5 is spent on defense is spent in California.

dimensions to warfare. According to Lopez, the air-land strategy of the US-led coalition raised four main ethical issues:

- The traditional definition of civilian, or collateral, damage is an inadequate measure of the sufferings of the populace.
- Precision-guided munitions alone will not allow combatants to avoid civilian casualties. These munitions could actually destroy the necessary facilities, such as energy and sewage plants, to meet civilians' basic needs.
- The most successful U.S. war in the last 40 years had the largest kill ratio of enemy to U.S. troops.
- U.S. leadership tended to emphasize the amount of military hardware destroyed rather than the deaths of Iraqi troops.

Grace Hall held that their opposition offered no single idea why the media should not have invaded the public or governmental officials' private lives in examples presented during the debate.

Frye said that "the right to privacy (of such officials) was invaded because of the public good involved." He reemphasized Grace's point that the media has a special role in the government as a "watch dog."

President Bush

Bush said a Democratic proposal to cut defense by $200 billion would send "shock waves" into the construction and electronics and aerospace industries. He said there would be aftershocks in real estate markets and laborers would be "thrown out of work and onto welfare."

He portrayed the Republicans as defenders against "a dangerous enemy abroad," in years past when "irresponsible Democrats ... would have stripped this nation of the strength it needed to defend itself."

Invoking the popularity of the state's one-time governor, he added, "No one understood that better than my predecessor, Ronald Reagan."

Meanwhile, GOP challenger Patrick Buchanan began a swing through Tennessee, Mississippi, Alabama and Louisiana in search of Super Tuesday votes on March 10.

In Nashville, Buchanan told Vanderbilt University students that his "America First" platform does not mean he is anti-Japanese. But he said the Japanese government "looks out for Japan first. We need a government that looks out for America first."

Buchanan state chairman

Lyle Simpson of Lewisburg said the candidate had planned to tour the Saturn auto plant at Spring Hill to show support for American-made products. But Simpson said plant officials told the campaign on Thursday that the tour would be canceled. He said they gave no reason.

Bush only indirectly fired at Buchanan.

"American's future lies in open markets. But our opponents aren't about to let fact intrude on fantasy," Bush said. He said trade barriers and isolationism amount to "an economic retreat."

Bush earlier Tuesday predicted that despite polls to the contrary, "I think we'll be all right in California."

Even Reagan, however, was quoted in The Washington Post on Tuesday as telling friends he was worried Bush was in trouble because, "he doesn't seem to stand for anything."

In addition to the last city bombings, Lopez said that the U.S. attacks on Iraqi troops retreating to Basra on the Jahra road implied that the U.S. may have behaved unethically. Jahra road has become known as the "highway to hell," Lopez said.

The U.S. forces, Lopez added, were assigned "kill zones" after they created a "traffic jam" along the road. Lopez said that the retreating Iraqi troops became "a shooting gallery" for U.S. air attacks.

Senate puts restrictions on China

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate voted Tuesday to slap new conditions on renewing normal trade relations with China but fell well short of the two-thirds necessary to override President Bush's promised veto.

The 59-39 vote followed an unusual secret session of the full Senate to review intelligence about Beijing's arms sales to the Middle East.

The compromise bill would require "substantial progress" by China in the areas of human rights, trade and weapons proliferation before most-favored-nation trade status could be renewed. That trade status expires in June.

The House approved the conditional measure 409-21 last November, and it now goes to the White House. The Senate tally was eight votes short of the two-thirds that would be needed to override a veto if all senators voted.

The Beijing government Tuesday, in official reports coinciding with the Senate vote, spoke of unspecified "major breakthroughs" in U.S.-China trade talks now going on in the Chinese capital. China at the same time revealed the convictions of seven more dissidents from the 1989 pro-democracy movement.

After fervent debate last summer, the issue of U.S. policy toward China had lain dormant for months. Action by the Senate's Democratic leaders to revive it now was seen at least in part as an election-year effort to embarrass the administration by highlighting what has been an unpopular policy.

"There is potential on the part of the Democratic leadership to try to undermine the foreign policy leadership of President Bush," said Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind.

Administration officials, including Secretary of State James Baker and his Deputy Lawrence Eagleburger, had made numerous lobbying visits to Capitol Hill in recent days.

The matter was driven, as well, by intelligence reports that despite earlier Chinese assurances on curtailing overseas weapons sales, missiles and other items continue to flow to such volatile areas as Syria, Libya, Iran, Iraq and Pakistan.

The CIA told lawmakers behind closed doors last week of evidence that China has shipped some $250 million in missiles, nuclear technology and related goods to those countries over the past year or so, sources said.

In addition, Chinese weapons makers have contracts or sales plans worth another $1 billion stretching years into the future, said the officials, speaking only on condition of anonymity.

"There was a lot of panic" resulting from the CIA briefing, said one senior administration official.

To air those issues, senators retired for nearly two hours to the small, ornate Old Senate Chamber. The closed session, required because of the sensitivity of intelligence sources involved, was the first since an arms control treaty was debated in 1988.

Japan's former leader testifies in scandal

TOKYO (AP) — One of Japan's most powerful elder statesmen on Tuesday denied receiving bribe money from a now-defunct company, in parliamentary testimony aimed at ending political paralysis over the scandal.

Another former Cabinet minister, Jun Shiozaki, also testified on his role in the affair. He admitted receiving $155,000 from the steel frame manufacturer Kyowa Corp., but denied providing any favors in return.

The governing Liberal Democrats had reluctantly asked former Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki and Shiozaki to testify to end a political impasse over the scandal.

Opposition parties had boycotted critical budget proceedings for two weeks, demanding the testimony.

Senior politicians occasionally testify to respond publicly to charges of wrongdoing, in what is often little more than a ritual. This, coupled with the absence of new disclosures, seemed likely to end the impasse. Lawmakers were to resume debate Wednesday on the budget for the fiscal year beginning April 1.

But Japan's political problems run deeper than the budget debate. Prime Minister Kiichi Miyazawa faces heavy pressure to carry out reforms aimed at cleaning up Japan's money politics, the factor underlying a slew of major political scandals in recent years.

The Kyowa case comes amid allegations of another even larger scandal involving Tokyo Sagawa Kyubin, a major trucking firm.

Media reports allege Shiozaki received $155,000, and that Suzuki $77,000 from Kyowa in return for political favors.

In two hours of heated testimony, the 81-year-old Suzuki rejected allegations that he took money from Kyowa.

"I have absolutely not received any funds connected with Kyowa and I would hereby like to clearly state that before the people," said Suzuki, who was prime minister from 1989-82.

He has retired from Parliament, but remains an influential party elder.

He admitted accepting $77,000 from Fumio Abe, a top associate of Miyazawa, soon after Abe was given his first Cabinet post in 1989 in thanks for Suzuki's support. But he said he returned the entire amount to Abe last year.

Abe has been charged with accepting $703,000 in bribes from Kyowa. He has admitted taking money from Kyowa but has denied providing any favors in return.

Suzuki also acknowledged becoming honorary director of a resort being developed by Kyowa "as a favor to Abe" but said he was not paid for the post.

Shiozaki, a Miyazawa ally and former head of the Management and Coordination Agency, apologized for taking money from Kyowa, saying: "I am sorry for my lack of virtue and my careless acts."

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Thank you to ND family from parents of student

Dear Editor:

Prior to January 24, 1992, the concept of a "Notre Dame Family" meant little to us. We had heard the phrase used during the freshmen orientation activities and had seen it in University literature. But only since the early morning hours of January 24, 1992, and the accident that has forever changed our lives and the life of our daughter, Haley, have we learned firsthand that there really is a "Notre Dame Family" and what it means to be part of that family. Certainly, we were not the only family affected by the accident. Our hearts go out to the Beeler and Hipp families for the tragic loss of Meghan and Colleen. And every other person on that bus, whether physically injured or not, was traumatized by the terrifying experience. However, the purpose of this letter is not to discuss the accident or assess blame. Rather, we want to begin to sincerely thank the thousands of people who have prayed for Haley's recovery. We have never before experienced such an outpouring of genuine love and support as we have received from family and friends everywhere, and particularly the students, faculty, administration and alumni of Notre Dame.

We were pleased when Haley chose to attend Notre Dame; but now, having personally experienced the warmth and caring of the Notre Dame Family, we cannot imagine her being anywhere else. Thank you, Notre Dame, for your prayers, love and support. You have truly made a difference in Haley's continuing recovery.

Hoops fans should not be disrespectful

Dear Editor:

What a game! This sentiment seemed to sum up the feeling of the majority of the fans leaving the JACC after Saturday's basketball game against the UCLA Bruins.

Unfortunately, I didn't feel like participating in everyone's excitement. Instead my regard for the abilities, courage, and overall determination of the Notre Dame men's team became overshadowed by the rudeness and disrespectful actions of a few of my fellow students here at this university.

During Saturday's game, I was fortunate enough to sit behind the UCLA visitor bench as I am a student manager and was assisting in this game. I was looking forward to being so close to the action, surrounded by thousands of avid fans. From the first moments, however, my enthusiasm became tainted.

I soon learned what it felt like to be a visiting opponent here at Notre Dame. A barrage of insults fell upon my back, directed at the team in front of me. I could not believe some of the harsh words aimed at the Bruin's players and coaches. These few, who stood directly behind the bench, attacked many aspects of this team, intending to intimidate and demean. Yet they were degrading not only to the UCLA players and coaches, but also to this university.

Even during half-time they staked themselves out in the tunnel by the visitor's locker room and again verbally assaulted the players when they returned to the court. These students had no respect. An usher, who was in charge of this area, did nothing to curb their remarks.

Yet why should he? He expects that we are adults and behave civilly. These members of a Catholic University, however, displayed no maturity or Christian attitudes. I didn't expect them to go out and hug the opponent, but I also didn't expect an incessant badgering either. The entire game I felt sick to my stomach, probably suffering from a extreme case of embarrassment.

Insults were directed at me when I was a high school athlete and I can only say that I empathized with this fine team from California. For despite losing to a team that just recently broke even and suffering an onslaught of ugly comments, they displayed a great deal of class.

I just hope that in the future the fans' enthusiasm and loyalty will be directed positively and respectfully, so that all can enjoy the game.

Random hazards on the way to class

I'm late... I'm late... I'm late...
I'm going to rush in, and he's going to look at me, and he's going to say, "Miss Smoron! How nice of you to decide to join us!" and I'm just going to stare him down, and tell him exactly what I—

OUCH.

Dammit.

A scuffmark. Like I'm going to be able to find teal shoe polish in South Bend—

"Hi."

"Hi."

Who was that?

Why didn't I wear my glasses?

I won't be able to see the slides in class, either. But then again, if he's just going to be showing examples of abstract expressionism, will it really make a difference? I mean, everything will just be a little abstracter for me, that's all—

"Hi."

"Hi."

Oh shoot, I never gave her back her notes, did I? Well, is it my fault she takes reams of notes? She had like four footnotes from one day's lecture. Who can possibly find that much to say about minimalism? Doesn't that kind of defeat the purpose?

I'm late... I'm late... I'm late...

Dammit.

I know this guy. He was in my social dance class three years ago. He yelled at me for not taking the fox trot seriously—

Please don't see me. Please don't see me.

Look down. I am looking at my shoes. I cannot possibly notice you because I am too preoccupied with this scuffmark which is just screaming for teal Kiwi polish, although I might be able to get away with something with more of a forest tint...

Okay. He's past.

Oh wait—that wasn't him.

Why didn't I wear my glasses?

I'm late... I'm late... I'm late...

"Hi."

"Hi."

"Hi."

Oh, how cute. They wear their backpacks the same way. Do couples start to look alike, like when poodle owners look like poodles? They kind of walk alike. I wonder what I look like when I walk...

Dammit.

Now I'm thinking about it.

Now I'm definitely walking funny.

Okay, think about something else. My, what a darling squirrel. And you scamper so naturally. Do you have rabies, Mr. Squirrel?—

"Hi, Paige. Why are you walking funny?"

Dammit.

I'm late... I'm late... I'm late...

I didn't even do the reading. Maybe I can skim a little now. "In order to fully appreciate Andy Warhol's innovative film, which focuses on a man receiving a—"

Whoops! Here we are.

"Sorry I'm late..."

"Hi, Paige. Wrong room."

Dammit.

Why didn't I wear my glasses?

OUCH.

"Hi, Paige. You know, I've never seen anyone fall up stairs before."

Dammit.

And it's all because I'm probably still walking funny—

I'm going to have to buy new shoes, and I'll never find teal and end up compromising with kelly green—

"Sorry I'm late..."

Don't say it. Please don't say it—

"Miss Smoron! So nice of you to decide to join us."

Dammit.

'Stepping Out' displays the best and worst of tap dancing

By MAGGIE HELLRUNG
Accent Writer

"A Chorus Line" in disguise?

Possibly—but with a lot less singing, and a lot more laughs.

"Stepping Out," presented by the Saint Mary's College Department of Communication, Dance, and Theater, is a display of both the best and the worst amateur tap dancing ever viewed on the Notre Dame/Saint Mary's campus.

'I think it's probably the next best thing to a musical.'

—Keri Latherow

"Stepping Out" opens tonight at 8 p.m. at the Little Theater, located at Saint Mary's. The performances will continue through Saturday, Feb. 29, with a Sunday matinee at 2:30 p.m. on March 1.

"Stepping Out" follows the lives of eight women and one man who try to conquer their inhibitions and clumsy feet in order to learn to tap dance. The wacky group of left feet create a hilarious setting for the play.

When they are not fooling around, fighting amongst themselves, or when their instructor, Mavis, isn't attempting to teach them, the ragged crew is learning more about themselves and each other.

Each member of the class manages to bring in personal problems and work through them together in tap class, finally working towards a tap triumph in their dance recital.

"Stepping Out" doesn't just have a diverse combination of dancers on stage, but off as well. The cast consists of seven Saint Mary's students, two Notre Dame law students, and one Notre Dame student.

After casting for the production in Nov., the group of dedicated students went to work with the director, producer, and especially the choreographer, Julia Mayer McCarthy. Only three actors out of the ten had prior tap experience, so the crew immediately enrolled in a tap class which met twice a week.

When the team was not in class, they were practicing long hours on stage. "It got to the point where some of us were so good at tapping that we had to 'fake' screwing up on the stage," explained Keri Latherow, one of the cast members. "I think it's probably the next best thing to a musical."

Philip Patnaude has designed the set for "Stepping Out," and David Corothers is in charge of costume design. The groups of actors that will be tapping away this week include Kim Tomko, Jill Hotek, Brynn Umhofer, Susan Toth, Keri Latherow, Cecelia Martin, Stephen Zayko, Alyssa Moehle, Dianne Reed, and Shayla Richards.

Tickets are available at the Saint Mary's box office located in O'Laughlin Auditorium, open from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., Monday through Friday. General Admission tickets are $6, $5 for students, and $3 for Saint Mary's students. Visa and Master Card orders are accepted by phone at (219) 284-4626.

Kravitz, Cult invade the JACC

By Fran Moyer
Accent writer

It was an odd evening at the JACC last night as Lenny Kravitz and the Cult invaded our placid campus.

The concert started off with Lenny Kravitz taking the stage and attempting to take all of us back to the Sixties. After all was said and done, he did an alright job.

Kravitz's performance was interrupted a few times by the Cult's Ian Astbury, who paraded around a sign stating things not able to mentioned in a politically-correct Catholic university's newspaper.

Despite Astbury antics, Kravitz was able to end his performance on a cheerful note by singing his hit, "Let Love Rule." Before finishing this song, however, the ever-so righteous Kravitz began to spout his "love" line.

After a few minutes of hearing how beautiful we all were and how much he loved God, people and the planet, he led the crowd in a massive show of positive energy by urging everyone to hold hands. I couldn't help but have flashbacks to We Are the World.

As the crowd was still reveling in the moment created by Kravitz, the Cult took the stage. In my opinion, the crowd was not ready for the assault that lay ahead.

Performing mostly songs from their recent Ceremony, the Cult played as loud and hard as they have in the past. In fact, their intensity on this tour appeared to be much higher than it had on previous tours.

Asbury was in control from the beginning as he took the stage in his typical black outfit. Throughout the show, he danced around stage like a banshee on acid.

Although watching Astbury stage performance was very enjoyable, it was the heavy music of the Cult that truly made the concert worth my $12.

O.K., I admit "heavy" is an overused word in a music critic's vocabulary, but I know no other way to describe their music.

During the concert, I felt like someone was slowly drilling a hole in my skull. For some odd reason, however I liked that feeling and wanted desperately for the crowd to feel the same way.

The crowd did not seem to take as enthusiastically to the Cult's music as I would have liked. I admit that it is an acquired taste, but how can you not react like a lunatic when you see the Cult perform.

As the cult performed such classics as "She Sells Sanctuary" and "Peace Dog," a majority of the crowd barely reacted, only bopping their heads to the groovy beat.

One of the strongest reactions by the crowd to the Cult's music was during the encore, if you want to call it that, when the band played "Firewoman" and "Love Removal Machine."

Perhaps the largest reaction by the crowd all night occurred when Kravitz ran out on stage in an outfit that revealed his butt. It is a shame that this got the most reaction out of the crowd. There was so much more to react to, like the music of the Cult.

Syracuse asks booster to 'step away'

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — A car dealer who allegedly gave Syracuse basketball players Christmas cards containing $50 says school officials have asked him to "step away" from the program.

Bill Rapp, who denies the charges, said he is willing to abide by the request of Syracuse administrators. Rapp is a close friend of coach Jim Boeheim and has acted in the past as Syracuse's official scorer.

"They've asked me to step away for awhile, which is OK," Rapp said in Tuesday's editions of the Syracuse Herald-Journal. "This is the most sensitive time right now."

Rapp was accused of giving cash to players in a 500-page report the university has presented to the NCAA Association. The 13-month probe found 15 violations of NCAA rules.

The university expects the NCAA to issue a preliminary letter of inquiry within the next month, which would indicate a formal investigation is under way.

Rapp did not use the word "disassociate," a term that describes the university's official severing of a relationship with an individual thought to have violated NCAA rules.

The university has acknowledged disassociating Joseph Gianuzzi, the ousted president of the Hardwood Club who housed Syracuse players during the summer, and Fred Grimaldi, owner of a restaurant where players ate for free.

Syracuse spokesman Robert Hill was unavailable for comment. His office released a statement last week saying it would have no further comment on Syracuse's basketball investigation.

Rapp also declined to discuss the specifics of the charges against him because of the possible NCAA investigation. Rapp said he cooperated with university investigators and will cooperate with the NCAA.

He said investigators told him five players testified Rapp gave them cash inside Christmas cards. Rapp noted each of the five had been a disgruntled former player.

Coaches support Yoder

CHICAGO (AP) — Steve Yoder's fellow Big Ten basketball coaches were shocked and supportive following his forced resignation after 10 years at Wisconsin.

"I guarantee you they will not hire a better coach than Steve Yoder," said Lou Henson of Illinois Tuesday in the Big Ten's weekly teleconference of coaches. "But we're all grown up and know what happens."

Yoder resigned Monday effective at the end of the season when athletic director Pat Richter told Yoder he would not recommend renewing his contract, which had one year remaining.

"I'm absolutely disappointed at what happened," Yoder said. "It's a situation where Pat wants his own man. That's his prerogative, it's an athletic director's decision."

Yoder said the players were "shocked and disappointed and didn't anticipate this at this time of the year. But they'll bounce back. Yesterday was 24 hours but it seemed like a week."

Some of the coaches said winning at Wisconsin was difficult because of a lack of basketball tradition and an ancient fieldhouse that makes recruiting all the more difficult. They also felt Yoder had turned the corner with some good young talent in Tracy Webster and freshman Michael Finley.

"It's an insult to the Big Ten and the coaching profession," Jud Heathcote of Michigan State said. "He did an outstanding job with limited resources and a facility that is difficult to recruit to. We had the same problem (recruiting) with Jenison Fieldhouse."

Clem Haskins of Minnesota said, "People want to say winning isn't important and money isn't important. I felt Steve was doing a good job."

nine rebounds against Kalamazoo on Saturday.

"This is the last game of my first season," joked Mulhern. "It's going to be real hard because I've made a lot of real good friends. It's been a good experience."

Although Mulhern and Cook did not play in the Calvin game, both are excited for the matchup, not just because of the revenge element, but because it is their last home game.

"It's going to be difficult. It's your senior year, you played high school sports and college sports and this is the finale," Cook remarked. "The game will be emotional because there are seniors on both teams."

Cook took a year off last season, but came back to the basketball team for her senior year. The five-foot-nine guard has come off the bench to score 1.9 ppg and snag 1.7 rebounds per game.

"We know that Kelly's going to help us and Kate is going to help us as well," added Cromer.

Missing from tonight's lineup will be forward Janet Libbing, who was forced to sit on the sidelines during the Beloit matchup. Although the team's leading rebounder and second leading scorer (14.7 ppg, 7.8 rpg) will have to watch from the bench, the game is still difficult for Libbing to think about. "Don't expect me to be holding up. In a way, I think I may have already had to deal with that. But I just don't know."

Despite her absence on the court, Libbing is confident in her teammates ability to take Calvin. Libbing's perspective from the bench has given her opportunities to see the growth in her teammates, including the underclassmen.

"We're going to be a completely different team than what they saw at Calvin. They'll see confidence in everyone one of the players," Libbing added, commenting on the transition of leadership on the team, "In the beginning of the year, seniors took control. Now juniors are making moves to be where they need to be to take charge. It's really a mature basketball team."

Although the team is determined to win tonight, they must first shut down Calvin's big three. Kim Bartman (16.9 ppg) manhandled the Belles defense the first time, dominating all scoring with 27 points. Teammate LeAnne Bajema (10.9 ppg) added 13 points to her team's winning efforts. Julie Overway (8.4ppg, 9.2rpg) is also expected to be aggressive underneath as the team's leading rebounder. However, both players and Cromer are confident they will disassemble Calvin's big three with their defense.

"We played a lot of zone against them the first time. We won't be playing a zone tonight," said Cromer. "Our whole game is run, gun and have fun. As long as we run it, we're all right. It's when we slow it down that we get into trouble. We're going to see a lot of man-to-man."

Assistant coach Joanne Nester agreed, adding, "We've gotten better and tighter at the man-to-man and switching to the fast break."

As for the emotion of a last home game, Cromer sees this game as perhaps the most emotional for his seniors. It is in this perspective that he exhibits the most pride in his girls for the efforts they have made throughout their collegiate careers.

"I think what the seniors will have to do is look back at their years at Saint Mary's and look at the good things. A good education. And I think the competition in basketball makes it easier to deal with the business world outside. It's not easy like it used to be."

PRINCIPLES of SOUND RETIREMENT INVESTING

WHY YOU SHOULD START PLANNING FOR RETIREMENT WITH YOUR EYES CLOSED.

For retirement to be the time of your life, you have to dream a little—about the things you've always wanted to do: travel, explore, start a business. Just imagine...

With a dream and a plan, you can make it happen. Your pension and Social Security should provide a good basic retirement income, but what about all those extras that make your dreams possible? You'll probably need some additional savings.

can add up quickly.

What else makes SRAs so special? A broad range of allocation choices, from the safety of TIAA to the investment accounts of CREF's variable annuity; no sales charges; a variety of ways to receive income, including annuities, payments over a fixed period, or cash. You may also be able to borrow against your SRA accumulation before you retire.*

All this, plus the top investment management that has helped make TIAA-CREF the largest retirement system in the country.

So start dreaming and planning for the time of your life. Because the sooner you start your SRA, the greater your savings and your retirement will be.

Rosenthal promotes O'Brien

Observer Staff Report

Joe O'Brien, who has directed the business end of the University of Notre Dame's athletic department since 1976, has been promoted to senior associate athletic director. The announcement was made today by Notre Dame athletic director Dick Rosenthal.

O'Brien first joined the Irish athletic staff in 1976 as business manager and assistant athletic director. He was promoted to associate athletic director in 1983 and now has handled personnel, budgetary, purchasing, travel and other internal affairs for nearly 16 years.

"This assignment is a tribute to the scope of Joe's involvement in virtually every aspect of our athletic department," says Rosenthal.

"There isn't an event we host, a trip we plan or a major project we undertake in which Joe is not an integral part of its implementation. He has been an invaluable aide to me in the five years I've been at Notre Dame."

A longtime employee of the University, O'Brien served as director of Notre Dame's personnel department for 21 years prior to joining the athletic staff in '76. He has orchestrated the details of 11 major bowl trips and the same number of NCAA tournament appearances in basketball. He served as tournament director for both the '85 and '88 NCAA first and second-round basketball tournament games held at Notre Dame.

The Philadelphia, Pa., native was honored with the Edward "Moose" Krause Award Friday night by the Notre Dame Club of Chicago for his dedicated service to the University. He served as president of the College Athletic Business Managers Association in '83 and also was inducted into the First Interstate Bank Athletic Hall of Fame.

O'Brien previously worked in personnel service for both the Whirlpool Corporation and the O'Brien Corporation in South Bend before moving to Notre Dame in 1955.

A 1949 Notre Dame graduate, O'Brien and his wife, Betty, are parents of a daughter Susan, a '76 Notre Dame graduate.

Tark says he's not finished

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Attorneys for Jerry Tarkanian say they'll go to court if the UNLV coach is not allowed to rescind his resignation and coach the Runnin' Rebels next year.

Meanwhile, a UNLV professor has joined in the call for a two-year suspension of the basketball program, a suggestion first made last week by a Las Vegas newspaper columnist.

Attorneys for the coach delivered a letter to UNLV president Robert Maxson on Tuesday, declaring Tarkanian's resignation of June 6, 1991 to be null and void. The resignation was to have been effective July 1, 1992, but Tarkanian told supporters Sunday night that he was withdrawing it.

The five-page letter to Maxson said Tarkanian was "coerced and pressured" into signing the resignation agreement.

Both Maxson and Don Klasic, legal counsel for the Nevada University System, have said the resignation is legal and binding. Maxson has called Tarkanian's resignation a dead issue.

Attorneys Chuck Thompson and Alan Jones contend a "civility agreement," which was part of the resignation was violated by UNLV officials. University officials have confirmed the civility agreement, but say it was violated by Tarkanian, not UNLV.

Dayton

room tonight was a real thrill. I'm very proud of my team tonight."

Notre Dame started the second half with a 6-0 run, which resulted in a 40-29 lead with 19:05 left. However, Dayton regrouped after a timeout and countered with a 23-12 spurt, which started at 15:42 with a Robertson three-pointer. Chip Hare tied the game at 57 with 4:54 left on two free throws.

Down the stretch, both teams showed a combination of good defense and sloppy play. Duke's layup was the only field goal by either team.

At 4:18, LaPhonso Ellis put the Irish up 58-57 with one-of-two foul shots, and then stuffed Wes Coffee at the other end to give the Irish a chance to stretch the lead. However, Billy Taylor traveled to give the ball back to Dayton.

Following a Flyer miss, Bennett was fouled, but missed the front end of a one-and-one at 3:11. Neither team scored over the next minute and a half and Notre Dame had the ball and a one point lead with 1:32 remaining. At this point the Irish, who were wearing last year's uniforms due to a laundry problem, went into a style of play that was similar to last year's team—the prevent offense.

After 40 seconds had elapsed, Keith Tower missed a 15-foot jumper, which led to Robertson's free throw that tied the game.

Notre Dame set the early tone off the opening tip. Ellis won the jump, Keith Tower gained control of it and fed it to Billy Taylor, who set up Daimon Sweet for a slam.

Elmer Bennett's hot hand then helped the Irish open up a 21-8 lead in the first six and a half minutes of the game.

However, Notre Dame could not hold off Dayton. Despite Bennett's 20 first half points, on 7-of-11 shooting, the Flyers fought their way back into the contest by holding the Irish to only 13 points in the final 13 minutes of the half.

With the Irish running down the clock, Bennett lost the ball and Flyer guard Derrick Dukes started the fast break. Boyer fouled him on a layup. Dukes hit both free throws to cut the Notre Dame lead to five, 34-29, at the half.

Despite the loss, MacLeod did not feel the season was over.

"We'll come back. We have three games at home, but none of them will be easy," MacLeod said. "We are a target and we have to deal with that."

four in the first half and only grabbed 18 rebounds out of 41 in the second half. Dayton, on the other hand, improved both its three-pointer and rebounding totals in the latter half.

But the numbers only tell half the story. The Irish looked sloppy, missing rebounds and passing out of reach. Balls bounced out of their own hands and out of bounds due to hurried passing and poor timing. Visually, this wasn't the same Notre Dame basketball team that upset UCLA a few days ago.

Due to an accident at Saint

Michael's Laundry, the Irish were forced to wear last year's blue road jerseys, which say "Irish" across the front. This led to a few number changes. LaPhonso Ellis wore Kevin Ellery's number 35, Malik Russell had on ex-basketball player and current defensive lineman/linebacker Oliver Gibson's number 34, Nathion Gilmore sported number one, Jason Williams wore number 11, Brendan Tully donned number three and Matt Adamson displayed number 23.

The overall series with the Flyers now stands at 26-11, in favor of Notre Dame. (However, the Flyers hold a 10-9 advantage in Dayton).

Seniors Ellis, Elmer Bennett and Daimon Sweet are moving up on the all-time Notre Dame career scoring list. Bennett is currently tied for 12th with 1334 points; Ellis' 10 points moved him to 14th place with 1319 points and Sweet's 1247 points place him 18th on the list.

Wrestlers host Purdue in seniors' home finale

By JIM VOGL
Sports Writer

When the Notre Dame wrestling team steps onto the Joyce ACC floor against Purdue at 7:30 tonight, it will be the last time for four Irish seniors—Marcus Gowens, Todd Tomazic, Tom Salvino and Chuck Weaver.

Irish head coach Fran McCann, who described this year's 17th ranked Boilermaker squad as one of their best he's seen, said, "We've always had great meets. This one should be the same."

The Irish lost at Purdue last season, 24-11.

Notre Dame hopes the match will be an emotional send-off, and will build momentum going into the NCAA tournament. But McCann hopes his team can focus on one thing at a time.

"At the end of the year, it becomes a mental thing," said McCann. "Whoever is in the best frame of mind should come out on top."

So the Irish will count on their core of seniors to show maturity and poise.

Gowens, a four-year starter at 126, clearly established himself as the team leader. With consistent 24-win performances in his first three years and currently holding a 21-4 record, he could become the ninth Irish wrestler to eclipse the 100-victory plateau. To do so, he would need a win against Purdue and a strong showing in the NCAA tournament.

Weaver, the heavyweight from Gowens' hometown of Del City, Okla., also hopes to return to his home state for the NCAA championships. Weaver took a bit more time to develop at the college level. But after a mediocre 34-39 record through his first three seasons, he has come on strong, going 16-5 this year.

However, Weaver can hardly look past today's match, when he'll face a tough customer in Purdue's heavyweight, a 31-year old Marine Corps master sergeant.

"He's not that much bigger than Chuck, but he's a physical specimen," explained McCann. "He's experienced and tough. Chuck lost pretty bad to him

The Irish hope to climb all over 17th-ranked Purdue in their final dual meet of the season.

two years ago, but (Weaver) is a different wrestler now. What you concern yourself with is intimidation. This time around I think things will be different."

At 167, Todd Tomazic (11-10)

looks to cap off a solid career. His 72 career wins are second only to Gowens, with no other Irish wrestler even close. Tomazic, from Placentia, Calif., is an MBA student taking advantage of his final year of eligibility.

Salvino (190), plagued by injuries throughout his career, will be trying to make up for lost time.

Nebraska football players arrested at baseball party

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Seven Nebraska football players have been cited for assault, trespassing and other violations in what police say was a fight with members of the school's baseball team at a house party.

The seven are scheduled to appear in Lancaster County Court over a three-day period beginning March 11. City Attorney Bill Austin said Tuesday no formal charges had been filed.

Police Lt. David Beggs said a group including some baseball players forced two football players to leave a house party

Friday night because they wouldn't pay a cover charge for beer.

The two came back later with other members of the football team and a fight allegedly ensued, Beggs said.

Six members of the baseball team and one former player were injured, Beggs said. Several of them were treated and released from Lincoln General Hospital.

Police identified the football players as:

— Brian Havens, 19, cited for disturbing the peace and trespassing. Havens, a scholarship linebacker, is from Los Alamitos, Calif.

— Jeffery Hughes, 20, cited for assault and trespassing. Hughes, a walk-on receiver, is from Norfolk.

— Lance Gray, 21, cited for assault and disturbing the peace. Gray, a walk-on linebacker, is from Oswego, N.Y.

— Zach Wiegert, 19, cited for trespassing and assault. Wiegert, a scholarship lineman, is from Fremont.

— Raymond Reifenrath, 23, cited for assault and criminal mischief. Reifenrath, a walk-on lineman, is from Dakota City.

— Todd Gragnano, 20, cited for trespassing. Gragnano, a scholarship quarterback, is from Fountain Valley, Calif.

— Terry Connealy, 19, cited for trespassing. Connealy, a scholarship lineman, is from Hyannis.

Lt. Lee Wagner said he did not know which two players initially visited the party.

"It was completely out of line to go back," football coach Tom Osborne said. "We've always told them that they have to walk away from these kinds of things, because they never win."

Osborne said the players would be punished but wouldn't elaborate on how.

"This is embarrassing to the program, to the team and to me," he said. "There will be some pretty severe discipline."

Dayton slims Irish chances of attaining NCAA bid Fly over ND, 60-58

By MIKE SCRUDATO
Sports Writer

DAYTON—Alex Robertson and the Dayton Flyers (14-13) dealt a serious blow to the NCAA Tournament hopes of the Notre Dame's men's basketball team (11-12) last night at the University of Dayton Arena with a 60-58 win.

The Flyers were able to overcome quick Irish starts in both halves. Dayton took their first lead with 6.9 seconds left in the game when Derrick Dukes finished a fast break, which was started by Robertson and Dayton's trapping defense.

After Robertson tied the game at 58 with 34.3 seconds left, Notre Dame called timeout to set up their offense, but it also gave Dayton a chance to set up its defense.

"We came out of the timeout and they threw a trap on us that we weren't expecting," said Elmer Bennett.

Three Flyers surrounded Bennett at halfcourt, Robertson stripped the ball and Dukes took it down court for the layup and the lead.

"We wanted to take the last shot on our home floor so we applied the pressure," Robertson said. "He [Bennett] brought the ball above his head, and I was waiting for him to bring it down, which he did. I slapped it up and got it."

Notre Dame had a final chance to tie, but could not get a shot off as Robertson recorded his Dayton record ninth steal of the game when he intercepted a Brooks Boyer pass, which he anticipated all the way.

"We tried to run a play and get a situation where Elmer could push it up, kick the defense and give Brooks a shot at it," Irish coach John MacLeod said of the play.

As the buzzer sounded, the Dayton student section stormed the court to celebrate the comeback victory.

"It was a great defensive effort. Defense won the game for us," Dayton coach Jim O'Brien said. "To walk into our locker-

Irish not pretty in loss

By JENNIFER MARTEN

DAYTON- Sloppy play in the second half doomed the Irish in Notre Dame's 60-58 loss to the University of Dayton.

The Irish took a 34-29 lead into the second half thanks in part to senior guard Elmer Bennett's 20 first half points. Bennett nailed four 3-pointers within the first six minutes of the game to push Notre Dame out to an early lead.

The second half was a different story.

"We missed a lot of good shots and turned the ball over," said Notre Dame coach John MacLeod. "They (Dayton) made key shots inside and key shots outside."

The Irish were 10-of-23 from the field adding up to a disappointing .435 shooting percentage in the second half. Senior LaPhonso Ellis led all Notre Dame shooters with nine second-half points. Only three other players scored for the Irish in the second half. Senior Daimon Sweet had seven, senior Keith Tower added six and freshman Billy Taylor had two points.

Dayton, surprisingly enough, had a .423 percentage from the field, converting 11 of 26 field goals, but the Flyers made the shots when they had to. Dayton freshman Chip Hare and junior Alex Robertson hit free throws in the waning minutes to tie up the game.

Probably the biggest factor in the loss was the turnovers. Notre Dame coughed up the ball 25 times in the course of the game, 13 of those coming in the second half. Dayton only turned the ball over 11 times in the entire game.

"That's a great story to only have 11 turnovers and to cause them to have 25. That was a big factor," said Dayton coach Jim O'Brien.

Statistically, everything went wrong for the Irish in the second half. In addition to making fewer field goals and fewer free throws in the second half, Notre Dame also connected on one three-pointer as compared to see MISCUES/page 13

Leary assists women's turnaround

By JASON KELLY
Sports Writer

It has been an up and down season for the Notre Dame women's basketball team, but one stabilizing force has been the play of sophomore point guard Kara Leary.

It took injuries to freshman Audrey Gomez and junior Coquese Washington before Leary was inserted into the starting lineup, but she has been a regular since her first start against Detroit on January 29.

With Leary in the lineup, the Irish have won six of nine to improve their record to 10-14 and strengthen their hold on second place in the Midwestern Collegiate Conference race.

Leary won't take credit for the team's improvement, however. Instead, she cites improved teamwork as the key to the turnaround.

"We've just been playing better together as a team," she said.

Teamwork begins at the point guard position, however, and Leary has handled the responsibility well. In only her second career start she collected ten points and ten assists to lead the Irish to an important conference win over Loyola. Against DePaul on February 11 she notched a career high 11 assists and she continued her solid play Monday night in a win over Evansville, scoring eight points and dishing out six assists.

One important aspect of Leary's game is the absence of turnovers, which plagued the Irish early in the year. For the year, the Nashua, New Hampshire native has 43 assists against only 32 turnovers.

"My job is just to give the ball to people in a position to score," she commented. "And I'm not turning the ball over as much any more."

Despite her outstanding performance during the last month, she has played in the shadows of freshman phenom Michelle Marciniak as well as established stars Coquese Washington and Margaret Nowlin. The lack of attention doesn't bother the soft-spoken Leary, however, who is just happy to be in the lineup.

"I wouldn't have gotten this much time if it wasn't for the injuries (to Washington and Gomez)," she said, "but I just like being able to contribute."

She will be able to contribute a lot more as the Irish round out their season with three tough road games before the MCC tournament begins on

SMC hosts Calvin in seniors' finale

By CHRIS BACON
Sports Writer

Saying goodbye is never easy for anyone.

Saying goodbye to a basketball career is no different.

However, there comes a time when players must take their last shot, grab their last rebound, make their last free throw, take their last timeout. The seniors of the Saint Mary's basketball team (9-9) will be doing just that tonight at 7 when they host division rival Calvin College (10-10) in the Angela Athletic Facility.

Tonight's matchup with Calvin will be mixed with emotion and intensity, as well as a dash of revenge. The Belles close their home season with the team that handed them their second loss of the year. The Belles hope to reverse the 72-69 score against Calvin tonight. For this year's seniors, it is a long anticipated matchup.

"I think I keep ignoring the fact that it will be our last home game. Each year I remember the last game ceremonies feeling so young and thinking, 'I wonder what it feel like to have your last game,'" explained Belles leading scorer Catherine Restovich, who leads the team in scoring with a 15.1 points per game average.

"It's emotional. It's something that means so much to you. I'm going to miss the players and coaches.

They are one of the first team's we played and I believe they're not even going to recognize us. We didn't even know what our strong points were yet. They are in for a whole new thing."

Restovich chipped in 12 points and grabbed six in the previous Calvin game. This time, both she and Belles coach Don Cromer expect to see even more from her.

"Catherine has got to be our leader tonight. She'll have to set the pace," Cromer said.

Cromer will not just be looking to his lead forward Wednesday night. Starting with Restovich tonight will be seniors Kelly Cook and Kate Mulhern. Although the two have not started regularly throughout the season, the performance given by the two athletes off the bench has proven key during tight contests.

"Cook is going to play outstanding defense for us and help us with the last break," said Cromer. "Katie plays a real strong defensive game. She has a real knack for being in the right place at the right time."

Mulhern waited until her senior year to play. She did not start, but has proven an important player off the bench. In her rookie season, Mulhern has contributed 2.7 ppg and 2.5 rebounds, including eight points and
