Recognition, responses and protection from sexual harassment discussed

By LYNN O'DONNELL
News Writer

Sexual harassment does not have to be tolerated and there are some methods to responding to this kind of behavior, according to Wendy Settle of the University Counseling Center.

Settle, along with Barbara Fick of Notre Dame's Law School and Patty O'Donnell, an ND graduate student held the lecture "How to Recognize and Respond to Sexual Harassment," last night.

"Sexual harassment is primarily an issue of power, not sex," said Fick, quoting a handout produced by the University of Louisville. "It occurs when a person with power abuses that power."

Sexual harassment is a breach of the trusting relationship that normally exists between members of the university community, said Fick. Harassment introduces a personal element into what should be a sex neutral situation.

Fick defined some of the legalities connected with sexual harassment. Fick states that, "the university can be held responsible for sexual harassment, in situations where graduate students and professors are abusing their power."

Protection exists for those that are being pressured to perform sexual favors in exchange for academic or work-related benefits, said Fick, quoting the handout.

The three types of sexual harassment are sexual coercion, verbal and visual harassment and behavior contributing to a hostile environment. Coercion is the most severe and imposed by those in a position of power. Verbal and visual harassment includes sexual innuendo's and sexual remarks about one's clothing, body or sexual activity. Leering, staring, pinching or grabbing constitutes behavior that contributes to a hostile environment.

A "hostile environment exists if the harassment is severe and pervasive," said Fick, "but in order for the university to do something about it or initiate legal action people have to speak up."

Settle addressed the sexual harassment on the Notre Dame campus.

She feels that women experience a difficulty because, "Notre Dame's tradition of being an all-men's college forces women to battle against established norms."

After speaking to young women on campus, Settle would classify the dining halls as "hostile environments." Settle read a survey conducted Spring of 1991, which states that over two-thirds of Notre Dame students have experienced some type of sexual harassment.

O'Donnell talked about her experiences with her summer employer.

"It began with dirty jokes, how many boyfriends I had, and whether I was a virgin," said O'Donnell. "Then he propositioned me...he grew more aggressive...he grew more angry."

Settle and Fick encouraged O'Donnell and other students in similar situations not to ignore sexual harassment.

Settle referred to eight steps outlined by the University of Louisville to respond to sexual harassment; recognize it, be assertive with the harasser, talk

Saint Mary's College freshmen surveyed

By KELLY DERRICK
News Writer

Saint Mary's participated in the national American Council on Education survey of freshmen. The Saint Mary's freshmen are compared to other freshmen across the country attending peer Catholic institutions, as well as with other four year colleges.

This survey is a part of the Cooperative Institutional Research Program at the University of California, Los Angeles and is conducted each fall at 431 of the nation's two and four year colleges.

Results "enable administrators and faculty to gain a better sense of their entering women—their backgrounds, their goals for college education and beyond, and their attitudes and beliefs," said R. William Cash, Institutional Researcher.

Of the incoming Saint Mary's freshmen, 96.1 percent are white Caucasian. Minorities account for a significantly lower percentage compared to the 23.7 percent average at other colleges surveyed.

According to the survey, the typical Saint Mary's woman is Catholic, lives with both of her parents, and lives either 50 miles or less from home or 100 to 500 miles from home.

Her mother and father both have college degrees. The father is most likely a businessman and the mother is typically a full-time homemaker. The family income is above average and contributes over $1500 or more to her education.

As high school students, 73.6 percent of the women surveyed earned a B+ or better. Typically they were members of scholastic honor societies and took the SAT/ACT college preparatory course.

Sasseen discusses academic freedom

By KATHY MASSA
News Writer

There is a widespread misunderstanding of the true definition of academic freedom which shapes the identity of universities, according to Robert Sasseen, President of the University of Dallas. Catholic universities necessarily bring an added dimension to the definition of academic freedom.

Sasseen discussed this relationship in his lecture titled, "The Church, the Catholic University and Academic Freedom."

He outlined the identity and mission of a Catholic university according to Pope John Paul II. He then related the conditions necessary to realize the true Catholic university. An understanding of academic freedom is crucial to the development of a Catholic university, according to Sasseen, and he developed these two definitions. Sasseen then responded to common objections to the validity of Catholic universities.

Quoting the Pope, Sasseen defined the mission and identity of the Catholic university.

"The central task of the Catholic university is to establish an authentic community of inquiry, animated by the spirit of Christ, giving effective witness in the heart of culture to the Church's belief in the intrinsic value of knowledge," Sasseen said.

Sasseen countered the major objection to this vision of the Catholic university: it violates academic freedom. Sasseen pointed out that academic freedom has two meanings: institutional autonomy; and individual teaching autonomy.

These definitions portray a university that is not subject to any outside authority, said Sasseen. In addition, teachers should be able to teach whatever they believe to be true, according to those who oppose the Pope's definition of a Catholic university's identity, said Sasseen.

Herein lies the contradiction of a Catholic university as objectors understand academic freedom: if an individual desires to teach something he believes but it is contrary to the Church, said Sasseen, then, the university that employs that teacher cannot be a Catholic institution.

The conclusion of the objection is that a Catholic university is impossible in terms of academic freedom. In other words, objectors believe that academic freedom omits the possibility of a Catholic university, said Sasseen.

Sasseen's response was simple, "any unqualified view is intangible in theory and practice." An unqualified, limitless university "simply cannot be maintained in principle," Sasseen said. He argued against this erroneous

Hit-and-run driver admits drinking the night of accident

By JULIE BARRETT
Assistant News Editor

The Notre Dame junior involved in the hit-and-run accident that seriously injured two Saint Mary's sophomores early Sunday morning, Feb. 16, has admitted to drinking the night of the accident, according to Sgt. Charles Feirrell of the South Bend Police Department.

The Police are currently taking depositions from ND/SMC students who were around the student driver that night to determine if the student driver was intoxicated when he hit the two students, Feirrell said.

"We are trying to work around school schedules to take depositions from witnesses who saw the student before the accident occurred to find out if the student was intoxicated while driving that night," Feirrell said.

Feirrell explained that although drinking while driving is not illegal in the state of Indiana, driving while intoxicated is.

The Police Department has submitted the accident report to the county prosecutor's office where the charges against the driver are still pending upon further investigation.

County prosecutor Michael Barnes was unable to be reached for comments.

Elizabeth Joyce and Cara McCourt, the Saint Mary's sophomores injured in the accident, have been released from St. Joseph Medical Center and are back in school.

McCourt, who suffered a broken lumbar spine and a contused kidney, said she is "doing fine."

Receiving a broken neck and skull fractures after being directly hit by the car, Joyce is still wearing a neck brace, but declined to comment further on her recovery.

INSIDE COLUMN

Only we can save Church of Loretto

Over the past few months much has been said about the renovation of the Church of Loretto. Open forums, letters to the editor, inside columns and discussions have all occurred. The general consensus is that the committee has made up its mind and little can be done now.

JENNIFER HABRYCH
News Copy
Editor

Rumor has it though that something can be done to bring the renovations that have already begun to a screeching halt. At this time, some pews have been removed and replaced by folding chairs, and a mysterious children's swimming pool has been placed in the center of the church. Some priests have affirmed that all renovations must be approved by the bishop, even though this seldom occurs.

The bishop formed a commission to study the plan earlier this year and the rumor is that the report was far from favorable. Bishop D'Arcy of the Diocese of Fort Wayne—South Bend has not commented publicly on either on the committee's report or on his feelings about the renovations. The committee report has also never been released to the public, and therefore, has only been seen by the eyes of the committee, the Bishop, and the renovation committee.

Maybe D'Arcy does not know of the strife the plans have caused in the Saint Mary's community. Maybe it needs to be brought to his attention that some of the sisters have stated that they would rather die first, then have to see their church "destroyed."

Maybe Bishop D'Arcy should know that Mary Turgi, chairwoman of the renovation committee, did not consult the sisters in her community or care about their outrage, simply because her order is not run as a democracy, and she does not have to consult them.

Maybe someone should alert him that at least two committees that deal in designating historic landmarks have stated that they do believe that the "problems" the committee is renovating to correct could be solved in ways that did not alter the art or the structure of the Church. However, they have no jurisdiction over the Church of Loretto because it is not not 50 years old and exists on private property. They did offer free architectural advice on how to fix the church without destroying it.

Maybe someone should bring it to Bishop D'Arcy's attention that Turgi overlooked the idea of consulting the students of Saint Mary's because she believed that the students would have no interest in the renovation of the Church on their campus.

It seems to me that the only hope for any halt of the plans lies in the hands of D'Arcy. If an appeal is made to him he may have the power to act.

What do we have to lose but the Church of Loretto.

Please address your concerns to Bishop D'Arcy, P.O. Box 390, Fort Wayne, IN 46801.

"Miracle" water confiscated at border

■ LOS ANGELES — Customs agents wary of cholera are confiscating bottles of water brought from a Mexican well believed by some to have miraculous healing powers. If the water from a well in central Mexico's Tlacote is found free of disease, airlines will notify passengers about how to get it back, officials said. Juana Lopez said she and her husband, Ezequiel, traveled to Tlacote in February and in three days to fill four jugs. "The water cures people, it really does," she said. "My husband was in a wheelchair before. Now he walks." At least 35 people have died of cholera, which is spread through contaminated food and water in Mexico since June.

3-year-old shoots his sister to death

■ JACKSONVILLE, Fla. — A 3-year-old boy shot his 2-year-old sister to death and authorities are considering charges against the toddler's parents under a state law requiring guns to be safely stored out of a child's reach. Brittany Aaron Newton was shot in the head Sunday night with a .357-caliber Magnum handgun that belonged to her father, police spokeswoman Asa Higgs said Monday. The children were at home with their mother and another child at the time, Higgs said. How the shooting occurred wasn't known, because the mother was not in the room, Higgs said. Assistant State Attorney Angela Corey said any charges must follow a seven-day waiting period under the gun-storage law.

Bishops address issue of homosexuality

■ CHICAGO — Roman Catholics in America are still struggling with their bishops' 1990 edict that homosexual behavior is evil but homosexuality is not, a church leader says. "While it might be easy to say we have to love the sinner but hate the sin, it is always more difficult to make that distinction in practice," Bishop William A. Hughes of Covington, Ky., told a national conference on Catholics and homosexuality. Although the church condemns homosexual sex, it has been forced in the last decade to examine its attitudes toward sexual orientation in light of the spread of AIDS, the outspokenness of some homosexual priests and new evidence that homosexuality may have a biological cause.

Campus reacts to Bush selection as 1992 commencement speaker

By MEREDITH McCULLOUGH
Assistant News Editor

Confirmed reports that President George Bush will address Notre Dame's 1992 graduates have generated mixed reactions from members of the Notre Dame community.

While Bush is not the first President to speak at a Notre Dame commencement, the fact that he is a presidential candidate has raised concerns among some faculty and students.

"The University has generally tried to secure a president during their term in office. Consistent with that is the tendered request to President Bush," according to government professor David Legee.

"The difference this time is that Mr. Bush is in the middle of a political campaign. Many people will question the propriety of an invitation during a campaign year," he added.

Sister Kathleen, rectress at Lyons Hall said she was disappointed with the decision.

"I am really upset," she said. "This is no time for a political speech ... There is no way he should be coming here."

But Bush's candidacy is not Kathleen's only objection. She also said that she is not pleased that the administration chose a speaker with policies not consistent with the University's standards.

Some senior students echoed Beatty's concerns that Bush's address might give the commencement political spin.

Though Tim Thorton, outgoing senior class treasurer, said he was "impressed to have the president speaking," he added that "the timing is pretty bad."

Jeremy Gredone, also a senior, elaborated on this comment. "Part of how Bush approaches the speech will have to do with campaign not with our graduation," he said. "We will look back and remember who said it, but probably not what was said."

But not all reactions were negative.

"I am very happy that the school is in a position to attract such a high caliber, nationally known speaker," said Jennifer Switzer, outgoing senior class president. "Apprehensions (about Bush being too political and not humanitarian) are based on invalid grounds."

"Are we really in a position to complain about the president of the United States as our commencement speaker?" she asked.

"The decision was a good one," Switzer added.

Switzer said that her only complaint was that the administration had little to no consultation with the seniors in choosing their speaker. Switzer called the lack of interaction "unfortunate" and said, "hopefully there will be a change in the future."

While it cannot be determined whether or not the president will actually use the commencement to rally for

ND CAUSA organization to testify before House

By JOE MONAHAN
News Writer

ND's Cuban American Union of Student Advocates (CAUSA), a student organization, will testify before the U.S. House of Representatives' Committee on Foreign Affairs on the Cuban Democracy Act of 1992 (H.R. 4168) this Thursday.

The group's testimony is expected to be of "considerable interest" to the committee because the group's charter and membership give it a "unique ability to present the perspectives and positions of Cuba's youth," said member Mike Sullivan. Sixty percent of Cuba's population is under the age of 30.

In a letter to Dante Fascell, chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, Congressman Tim Roemer, D-Ind., said that CAUSA is an "exceptionally thoughtful group of law students from the University of Notre Dame who could provide the committee with the insights of the newest generation of Cuban Americans."

Congressman Roemer also said that "Eastern Europe would have been greatly aided by the assistance of a talented and motivated group of expatriates such as this, and I believe that we should not lose this opportunity to include them in this reform effort."

The six-member delegation will consist of three students from the Notre Dame Law School, including CAUSA President Heriberto Lopez Alberola, John Machado and Tony Villalobos, and three undergraduate students, including Student Senator Tyler Farmer, David Devine and Roger Feo. The group will be met by several CAUSA alumni in Washington, D.C.

The group's itinerary includes meetings with Indiana Third District Congressman Tim Roemer and Congressman Romano Mazzoli of Kentucky, both ND graduates, as well as Congresswoman Ileana Ros-Lehtinen of Florida's 18th District, according to a CAUSA press release.

In addition, CAUSA will be hosting a Thursday evening reception on Capitol Hill sponsored by the Bacardi Corporation for the committee.

The purpose of the bill is "to promote a peaceful transition to democracy in Cuba through the application of appropriate pressures on the Cuban Government and support for the Cuban people" as stated in its preamble. Sullivan emphasized that the group is taking an active role in the passage of the bill by testifying before the committee.

Established in 1989 by a small group of Cuban American students at the Notre Dame Law School, CAUSA is "a policy-oriented 'think-tank' and student advocacy group" and its existence "centers on student research and discussion of the issues facing Cuba, and the need for the newest generation of Cuban Americans to be involved in those issues," said Sullivan.

Sullivan also felt that CAUSA was a unique group not only in its content, but also because of its Catholic nature. "I just don't think it would work at another university" he said.

support, his appearance at the University will indeed affect his campaign, according to two Notre Dame government professors.

"(Speaking at Notre Dame commencement) adds to his credibility among Catholics," said professor Martin Saiz. "He receives the prestige and notoriety of a good connection with the University. It's strategic for him."

Leege added, "There is considerable strategic advantage in using Notre Dame as a platform. Catholics are swing voters."

"Mr. Reagan benefitted from his role in the 'Knute Rockne All American' movie and he never let us forget it. Mr. Bush would like to gain similar advantages. Thus the University is in an awkward position in as much as Mr. Bush may be a one-term president," Leege said.

The fact that Senator Daniel Patrick Moynihan (D-N.Y.) will receive the University's prestigious Laetare Medal during the commencement exercises should not be forgotten, according to Saiz.

"Monahan's acceptance of the award does give (the commencement) some balance," Saiz said.

'Silence of the Lambs' garners five Oscars

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Silence of the Lambs," the thriller about a fledgling FBI agent who needs the help of an evil genius, swept the five top Oscars on Monday night, including best picture and acting awards for Anthony Hopkins and Jodie Foster.

"My God. I can't believe it!" said Hopkins, who received a standing ovation from the crowd at the 64th Annual Academy Awards show. "I am greatly honored and tremendously moved."

"I'd like to dedicate this to all the women before me who didn't have the chances I had," said Miss Foster, who joins the ranks of repeat Oscar winners. She was named best actress of 1988 for her performance as a rape victim in "The Accused." "Silence" also brought Oscars to director Jonathan Demme and to Ted Tally for best adapted screenplay.

The film becomes only the third movie to sweep the five major awards. "It Happened One Night" did it in 1934 as did "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest" in 1975.

Jack Palance, the crusty trail boss in "City Slickers," and Mercedes Ruehl, the warm-hearted video store owner in "The Fisher King," won for best supporting performances.

"Terminator 2: Judgment Day," the 1991 box-office champion, outperformed its more prestigious rivals in technical categories. It won four Oscars: makeup, sound effects editing, sound and visual effects.

"Bugsy," Warren Beatty's gangster epic that had the most nominations with 10, picked up early awards for art direction and costume design. Another best picture nominee, "JFK," Oliver Stone's assassination polemic, won for film editing and cinematography.

Callie Khouri won the original screenplay award for the female buddy film, "Thelma & Louise."

Composer Alan Menken won the award for best original score for his music for "Beauty and the Beast," and he and his late partner, lyricist Howard Ashman, won a second Oscar for the movie's title song.

Fall DART registration expected to go smoothly

By STEVE ZAVESTOSKI
Associate News Editor

Though no changes have been made in the DART system, registering for fall 1992 classes should go smoothly, according to Don Steinke, assistant registrar.

In the past, Notre Dame and Saint Mary's students have complained of being closed out of courses filled by students from the other campus.

"I haven't really heard of situations where Saint Mary's students are unable to register for a class because Notre Dame students had filled it," said Sister Francesca Kennedy, Saint Mary's registrar. Saint Mary's students are given priority in all classes outside of the education and religious studies departments before Notre Dame students are admitted, she added.

In the past there have been more Notre Dame students taking Saint Mary's courses than Saint Mary's students taking Notre Dame courses, according to Steinke.

"Notre Dame education minors will always be able to get their required courses," said Kennedy. She also said that on occasion a Saint Mary's student will be closed out of a Notre Dame class—a familiar occurrence for Notre Dame students as well.

For Notre Dame students desiring to take a Saint Mary's class in departments other than education and religious studies, a Saint Mary's Intent form must be filled out at the Notre Dame Registrar's office. However, according to the "Schedule of Courses and Student Academic Information" booklet, "acceptance into SMC courses is not guaranteed."

As for Notre Dame students who should happen to be closed out of a course required for graduation, Steinke said the particular department will usually make every attempt possible to get the student into the course.

"In rare instances," he added, "the department will let them waive the requirement."

Within a year, though, according to Steinke, the registrar's office hopes to have a degree audit program servicing students' needs. The degree audit program will be a computerized program, according to Steinke, which will display for students exactly which courses are needed, within their major or outside their major, to graduate.

For the current registration period, students should meet with their academic advisors within their college in order to ensure requirements are met, said Steinke.

Horowitz criticizes trend of liberal Marxism

By JOHN CONNORTON
News Writer

Tenured radicals, stooped in the archaic liberalism of the Sixties, have exacerbated many of the United States' problems and caused the decline of the nation's universities, according to David Horowitz, radical student leader during the 1960s and bestselling author of "Deconstructing the Left."

Horowitz, last night's featured speaker for Dialogue at Notre Dame at Theodore's, criticized the recent trend toward liberal Marxism in the academia throughout the nation. An admitted Marxist and son of communist parents, Horowitz now credits many of the nation's problems to radicals who use yesterday's failed solutions to today's predicaments.

He stated that the social welfare system has created "a new plantation" that has trapped blacks in a morass of poverty and ghetto-life. Although welfare spending has doubled since its inception, so has the number of poor.

"Here on campus you have faculty members teaching the same bankrupt notions" that continue to add to today's problems, Horowitz told the audience. However, he explained, on these campuses "you wouldn't know that Ronald Reagan and his cold warriors freed one billion people" from the influence of Communism.

"Someone has told me that there are more Marxists in American faculty than in the entire Eastern bloc," said Horowitz.

Many critics of the new multicultural emphasis on college campuses believe such activities have had a profound effect on the quality of the teaching. Horowitz stressed that creating an "atmosphere of intimidation where people are afraid to speak out" on issues of racism, sexism, homosexuality is detrimental to our nation's universities.

"If a teacher is teaching only one side of an issue he is not teaching," Horowitz stated. He added that speech codes, sensitivity training and other means of controlling speech "poison the academic atmosphere."

To the audience's amusement, Horowitz admitted he believed "the idea that today's students are apathetic is healthy." Youth, he emphasized, is a time of freedom from the world's responsibilities and one should enjoy the moment while it lasts.

"To be absorbed and to take absolute positions is not the most conducive to learning," Horowitz said. "One should care about the issues but not to extremes."

"What I hope you will commit yourselves to is one nation, one culture, with liberty and justice for all," said Horowitz.

Officer testifies partner was upset after beating

SIMI VALLEY, Calif. (AP) — One of four Los Angeles policemen on trial for assaulting a motorist told his partner minutes after the beating, "Sarge should have handled it better," the partner testified Monday.

Rolando Solano, testifying in defense of Officer Theodore Briseno, also said Briseno, his partner, seemed "upset and feeling things were out of control."

He said Briseno told him, "I thought we were going to have to shoot that guy. I thought we were going to be in a shooting."

Briseno, 39, is on trial along with Officers Laurence Powell, 29, and Timothy Koon, 31, and Sgt. Stacey Wood, 41. The four are charged with assault in the March 3, 1991, beating of motorist Rodney King.

The beating was videotaped by a neighborhood resident and its broadcast on television sparked national outrage and calls for police brutality investigations.

The case also heightened racial tensions in Los Angeles and led to allegations of racism within the LAPD. King is black and the officers are white.

Solano, who was not charged in the beating, first testified outside the jury's presence Friday that Briseno told him he didn't think Koon, the sergeant in charge, had handled things properly.

Superior Court Judge Stanley Weisberg allowed jurors to hear the remarks Monday over the objections of the other defense lawyers.

Head of NASA manned flight activities quits

WASHINGTON (AP) — William Lenoir announced Monday his resignation as the head of NASA's manned flight activities, joining his boss in leaving the agency.

The resignation was announced as Administrator Richard Truly prepared to leave NASA, at the behest of the White House. Truly's last day is Tuesday while Lenoir's resignation is effective May 4.

Their departures remove the two highest ranking former astronauts from managing the agency. After the Challenger disaster in 1986, a major recommendation of the White House-appointed Rogers Commission, was that more astronauts should be involved in running the agency.

Lenoir and Truly had left the agency and returned after Challenger to management jobs. Truly was charged with returning NASA to flight status. When he was promoted to administrator, he hired Lenoir to run the troubled space station program. Later, Lenoir became associate administrator for space flight and eventually headed the combined shuttle-station programs.

The commander of space shuttle Atlantis, Charles Bolden Jr., said in a news conference from orbit that it doesn't matter whether the key administrative positions at NASA are held by astronauts. He said people should be chosen for their capabilities, whether they're astronauts or not.

But he said astronauts should be considered if they want to move into administration.

Bolden said Truly would be missed.

"From the crew of Atlantis, we'd like to say thanks very much for everything you've done," he said.

There was no hint in NASA's announcement that Lenoir was leaving because Truly lost his job. Nor did it say what Lenoir will do.

"Bill has had not one but two distinguished careers in the space program," Truly said. "At the time I asked him to come back to NASA (in 1989), he told me he could only commit to stay for about three years."

During his tenure, NASA had 17 successful shuttle launches and completed a major scale-back of the space station program to save $6 billion.

"It's been a rewarding three years," Lenoir said. "We have continued to improve the operation of the shuttle program and have put the program on track for continued improvements."

Lenoir joined NASA in 1967 as an astronaut and flew as a scientist astronaut on the fifth flight of the shuttle. He left government service to become a vice president of a consulting firm, Booz, Allen and Hamilton.

Atlantis astronauts lose second instrument to blown fuse

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Atlantis' astronauts on Monday lost a second scientific instrument to a blown fuse, this time a telescope that had been probing galaxies millions of light years away.

The ultraviolet telescope was beaming back data on a cluster of galaxies in the direction of constellation Coma Berenices when it stopped working. Ground controllers spent hours trying to get the telescope back up and eventually concluded it was hopeless.

Principal investigator Stuart Bowyer of the University of California, Berkeley, said a wire inside the telescope apparently shorted and caused the fuse to blow. He said the short was unrelated to voltage trouble experienced by the telescope last week; ground controllers corrected that problem by changing the temperature of the instrument.

"That one worked. This one is gone," Bowyer said.

The telescope, the only astronomical instrument aboard Atlantis, accomplished 19 observations before the fuse blew. More than 34 observations were planned for the nine-day mission.

"They weren't just toys, throwaways. They were important," Bowyer said of the missed opportunities. "But I'll also say that with 19 of these, why, we are going to have a huge scientific return."

Because of its wide field of view, the telescope had focused on some stars that had never been studied before in the ultraviolet wavelength, Bowyer said. Sources of ultraviolet light are invisible from the ground because the rays cannot penetrate the atmosphere.

A blown battery fuse knocked out an electron beam gun Thursday, two days after Atlantis reached orbit. Before becoming disabled, the gun created 60 artificial auroras in the night sky over the Southern Hemisphere and twice sent out radio waves to students equipped with special receivers.

The crew of six men and one woman said in an orbital news conference that the electron beam gun, while it worked, was their favorite part of the flight. Astronaut Kathryn Sullivan compared it to the futuristic "phaser" gun used by Hollywood's Star Trek crew.

"It was truly magnificent scientifically and humanistically," said astronaut Byron Lichtenberg.

Astronaut Michael Foale told reporters on the ground that the crew can't do anything about the blown fuses. Even if they had trained for such repairs in the open cargo bay, they would not be able to reach the fuses in their bulky space suits, Foale said.

The telescope, electron beam gun and 11 other atmospheric research instruments are clustered in the aft section of the cargo bay.

The crew received a special greeting Monday. Sending his best was Russian cosmonaut Sergei Krikalev, who returned to Earth on Wednesday after 10 months aboard the Mir space station.

"Sergei's doing great. Back at home and says, 'Hi!'" Mission Control messaged the astronauts.

Astronaut David Leestma talked to Krikalev by ham radio late last year. Leestma and the three other licensed amateur radio operators aboard Atlantis had hoped to chat with Krikalev's replacement and the other Mir cosmonaut while Atlantis was aloft.

So far, the astronauts' calls to Mir have gone unanswered. Likewise, the cosmonauts' attempts to call Atlantis have not been acknowledged.

The astronauts have one last chance to communicate with Mir, on Wednesday.

A ship-to-ship conversation would be "a red-letter day for ham radio, a historic day," said NASA's Glenn Holt, who's helping with the experiment.

The only time Americans and Russians have talked ship-to-ship was during the 1975 Apollo-Soyuz mission. Regular on-board radios — and not ham radios — were used.

Atlantis is scheduled to land at Kennedy Space Center on Thursday morning. The astronauts were supposed to return Wednesday, but flight directors decided to keep them up an additional day to make more measurements of the atmosphere, including the thinning ozone layer.

Scientists happily reshuffled their experiments to take advantage of the extra time and "make the most of every precious moment in space," said mission manager Tony O'Neil.

Day school operator faces child molestation charges

FARMVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A jury on Monday began weighing evidence from 143 witnesses to determine if a former day care center operator molested 12 children in his small-town preschool.

Robert Kelly Jr., who owned the now-closed Little Rascals Day Care Center with his wife, Elizabeth, is charged with 100 counts of sexual abuse. He could get 40 life terms plus 600 years in prison if convicted on all charges.

The eight-month trial has cost North Carolina more than $1 million, and is described as the state's longest and costliest criminal prosecution.

It is sometimes compared to California's McMartin Pre-School molestation case, which stretched over seven years and cost more than $13.5 million. In the end, no one was convicted in what was the nation's longest and most expensive criminal trial.

Since August, jurors have heard testimony from 143 witnesses, including eight boys and four girls who recounted tales of abuse at the preschool in Edenton, 120 miles east of Raleigh. They began deliberating Monday morning.

"This case is hardly ordinary so I have asked each of you to sign the verdict," Judge D. Marsh McLelland told the seven-man, five-woman jury. "You should let your verdict speak the truth as you are able to determine it."

After half an hour of deliberations, jurors returned to ask McLelland for water pitchers, a chalkboard and notepads, and a list of exhibits. They had not been not allowed to take notes as they listened to witnesses.

The jury ended deliberations for the day at 5 p.m.

The trial was moved from Edenton to Farmville, 85 miles away, because of pretrial publicity. Defense lawyers argued that Kelly was a victim of small-town hysteria and that anxious parents badgered others into making false accusations after rumors circulated in the town of 5,800.

Kelly has been jailed since June 1989 in lieu of $1.5 million bail.

A Catholic university must also educate its students in order to equip them for their calling in the world.

In addition, Sasseen said, the service mission of the Catholic university also includes developing culture through research in order to form, even transform, culture through the influence of Gospel values.

Sasseen summed up the Catholic definition of academic freedom by quoting the Pope, "academic freedom is a guarantee to faculty to search for truth according to their ordered search, safeguarding the right of the individual and society within the confines of truth and the common good."

"It's not a question of the plausibility of a Catholic university," he said. "It is a question of 'how can you be an adequate university if you're not a Catholic university, because of the nature of truth?'"

conception of academic freedom, citing "realities."

He pointed out that the government sets limits on any university by accrediting it and requiring it to meet certain standards. Professors can be removed from their teaching positions in cases of "moral trepidation."

Furthermore, Sasseen said that removing a theologian without a mandate from the local Catholic Bishop to teach theology is analogous to removing a clinical psychologist from a teaching position in the university because he lacked certification.

Sasseen further outlined the dimension of a Catholic university, emphasizing its central mission of searching for truth.

Perot names former Vietnam POW as 'interim' running mate for race

DALLAS (AP) — Texas billionaire Ross Perot said Monday retired Vice Admiral James Stockdale, a former Vietnam prisoner of war whose freedom he helped to gain, would be his "interim" running mate in a possible race for the White House.

The decision allows volunteers to mount ballot petition drives on Perot's behalf in the 27 states and District of Columbia that require independent candidates to name running mates.

Perot has said he'll run for president as an independent if supporters are able to place his name on the ballot in all 50 states.

"I'm not here for me. I'm here for Ross Perot," Stockdale said at a news conference at Stanford University's Hoover Institution, where he is now a senior research fellow.

"I'm not that much interested in the mechanics of government. I'm interested in leadership," he said.

But Stockdale pledged to stay on the ticket through the November election if Perot wants him.

"Admiral Stockdale is an outstanding American patriot who has served his country in peace and war," Perot said. "I very much appreciate his participation in this effort to let the American people be heard."

Stockdale, 68, was a combat pilot in Vietnam and led the first bomb attack on North Vietnam in 1964. He was shot down and captured a year later and spent the next 7 1/2 years in solitary confinement.

In the late 1960s, Perot worked with Stockdale's wife, Sybil, and other POW families to call attention to abuses of U.S. prisoners by North Vietnamese captors.

Perot said that if the campaign advances, he will choose a permanent running mate this summer.

Stockdale, who has 26 combat decorations, spent 37 years in the Navy.

After retirement in 1979, he became president of The Citadel, a military school in South Carolina, for one year, and joined the Hoover Institution in 1981.

"He'd fit in well with a man like Ross Perot," said Arthur Blair, who was a department chairman at The Citadel when Stockdale was president. "He would compromise, I'm sure, but he wouldn't compromise his principles."

"I don't think he's a trimmer, who trims his sails to the prevailing wind," said Blair, now deputy director of the Mosher Institute for Defense Studies at Texas A&M University.

Since first declaring his interest in an independent run in February, Perot's office has received more than 1 million calls from supporters interested in starting petition drives.

Perot established a 100-line phone bank this month staffed by volunteers. He added 1,200 lines last week.

Perot, 61, has sounded a populist theme. He has criticized President Bush and other presidential candidates for failing to deal with the federal deficit.

Independent presidential campaigns historically have fared poorly. But observers say Perot's bid could take advantage of voter resentment at incumbents and Washington insiders.

Perot, who has an estimated net worth of $3 billion, has said his candidacy would not fail for lack of money.

Perot made his fortune in the computer services business, founding Electronic Data Systems Inc. in 1961.

Of the first year students surveyed, 65.1 percent said they had consumed beer, wine, or liquor within the past year, compared to the national percentage of 57.3 percent.

For 80 percent of the women, Saint Mary's was their first choice in colleges to attend. Many of the women applied to four colleges or more. Most of the women believe that they will be satisfied with Saint Mary's.

According to this year's freshmen responses, Saint Mary's women outpaced the national percentage of first-year students seeking doctoral or medical degrees. Among the freshmen at Saint Mary's, 16.8 percent indicated an interest in obtaining doctoral degrees compared to the national percentage of 12.5 percent.

A larger proportion of women are likely to pursue careers in business or management related fields. The highest degree planned was a Bachelor degree at 47.3 percent. Reasons for attending college ranged anywhere from learning more about subjects of interest and gaining a general education to helping to get a better job and making more money.

Saint Mary's freshmen typically rated themselves as average or higher in qualities such as understanding others, leadership ability, self-confidence and competitiveness.

Hunter stuck in mud for over 20 hours

HUNIONTOWN, Pa. (AP) — A hunter stuck up to his waist in mud was freed Monday after more than 20 hours of wriggling, talking to himself and a full night's sleep.

He promised a rescuer he would give up turkey hunting for golf, but later changed his mind.

"You think, 'How stupid was I to get myself into this?'" said George Zubeck. "And then, 'How am I going to get myself out of this?'"

The 39-year-old delivery driver from Leisenring was taken by helicopter to a Pittsburgh hospital, where one of the first things he did was shower. He was in fair condition and being treated for hypothermia from the knees down.

Zubeck was found by loggers Monday morning on state game lands about 40 miles southeast of Pittsburgh. He was freed about 2 1/2 hours later by firefighters with shovels crossed the mud on plywood planks.

Still hoarse from yelling for help, he said in a telephone interview that he was scouting the game lands for turkey and thought the ground was solid enough to cross.

"Before I knew it, it was up to my knees, and then up to my thighs, and then what are you going to do? If you try to dig yourself out, it just gets worse," he said.

The nearest road was 2 1/2 miles away, the nearest house 1 mile. Zubeck said he yelled until he realized there was no one around to hear him.

Figuring the heavy equipment nearby meant someone would find him the next morning, he decided to get some rest. Zubeck estimated he slept from about 9 p.m. Sunday until 5 a.m. Monday by laying sideways in the mud and sticking his hands inside his jacket to keep warm.

The overnight temperature dropped to about 40 degrees.

In the morning, he heard the sweet sound of a front-end loader firing up and yelled to a tree-clearing logging crew.

Infant born without full brain dies before court rules on organ transplant

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — A baby born without a full brain died Monday before the Florida Supreme Court could rule on whether her organs could be taken for transplants, which her parents had hoped would save other children.

Theresa Campo Pearson, who was taken off life-support systems Sunday, died at 3:45 p.m., said Dr. Brian Udell, director of Broward General Medical Center's neonatology unit.

Hospital spokeswoman Linda Hamlin said the child's parents, Laura Campo and Justin Pearson, were with her when she died.

Doctors had said her organs would be too damaged for use as transplants by the time she died.

Her parents' legal effort to have her declared brain dead before her death, so her organs would still be viable, returned to the Florida Supreme Court, which earlier Monday had refused to hear the case.

A state appeals court certified that the case was of compelling public interest and sent it back to the high court, which said it wouldn't immediately issue a ruling.

Baby Theresa was born March 21 with anencephaly, in which the brain fails to develop beyond the stem, which controls reflexes such as breathing and heartbeat. The condition is always fatal within hours or weeks.

Her parents lost round one of their fight to donate her organs Thursday when a county judge ruled that a 1988 state law forbade her from being declared brain-dead.

The law says death can't be declared until all brain activity ceases.

Attorney Scott Mager had argued the law didn't apply.

"How can you have cessation of brain activity when you don't have a brain?" he asked.

Anti-abortion activists, who opposed efforts to take vital organs before the baby died, staged a demonstration outside the hospital Monday.

"We are not here to point accusatory fingers of judgment," said the Rev. Patrick J. Mahoney. "We are here to reach with hands of hope."

"Baby Theresa was a gift from God. ... She was not created by God for spare parts," said one demonstrator, Eddie Soblotne of Coral Springs.

Susan Clarke, the baby's maternal grandmother, saw it differently.

"Taking one and helping two, three, five — that's pro-life," she said.

She said the family would continue to press for a change in the law.

"We will go on from here to help the children ... help the families. You don't stop in mid-stream," she said hours before Baby Theresa died.

Campus Ministry...

...Considerations

A Hope for Adult Christianity

The staff of Campus Ministry has been planning for several months now to try and initiate next year a new program of religious education for undergraduates. We are convinced that there is a need on this campus to help our students integrate the issues of faith and morality into their lives in a more compelling way. We are seeking as a staff to try and respond to this felt need.

Everybody knows that Notre Dame students are required to take at least two theology classes during their time here, whether they are Christian believers or not. These courses are generally quite useful in helping our students come into contact with the traditions and doctrines and sources of authority for our faith. What we want to present now is a program that would be more systematic and supportive of those particular students who feel a deeper call - a call to mature in their faith and to move in the direction of committed adult Christianity.

It seems clear that people will never grow up and take ownership of the Gospel just from being talked at or preached to. What seems to be needed are opportunities for significant sharing among peers and common searching for wisdom and direction, in the light of our gift of faith.

In the last generation of the Church's life, all over the world and throughout the United States, small groups have formed where people try and live the Christian message together in their own particular circumstances. Whether you look into the poorest barrios of Latin America or the slickest suburbs of Western cities, you can find groups of adult Christians who meet together regularly to reflect on the Gospel and analyze the environment in which they live, all in the context of the challenge of the community.

This experience and insight - that Gospel life needs a "small Christian community" in which to grow - is of course not new. It is as old as the Church itself, where the first Christians gathered together in homes, to remember the stories and teachings of Jesus and to break the bread and share the cup in His memory. In previous years on this campus, Holy Cross Father Louis Putz taught an entire generation of Young Christian Students to "see, judge, and act" in a way that brought life to faith and faith to life. People like my parents and their friends raised large families and lived their lives with clear hope, sustained for years by a set of Christian friends who met together regularly to talk about the Church and fight about politics and share ham sandwiches in a world that was less and less supportive of their values.

Now the challenge seems to be to create a similar vehicle for the "children of the 90's." There are hundreds of students on this campus who have been deeply touched by retreats, like Notre Dame Encounter or dorm visits to Crowe House. Many of them find ongoing growth through events like NDE 4th Day; others don't. There are hundreds of students on this campus who have been deeply touched by Urban Plunges and Appalachia Seminars and Summer Service Projects. Some will find support for their growing commitments to the poor the needy in volunteer groups and reflection days at the Center for Social Concerns; but others won't.

With creative advice from students and faculty and staff members, our Office hopes next year to evolve a program of ongoing small communities, where undergraduates who can say "I think I want to be an adult Christian" can meet together regularly and discuss the issues of our day in the light of the Gospel. We seek to evolve a type of religious education which will depend on peer ministry to shape and strengthen our young people and which will facilitate discussion amongst them about the struggles of their lives. We pray that the life of these groups will deepen our students' understanding of the teachings of the Church, so that those teachings can provide guidance for their ongoing lives.

We welcome the guidance and investment of the entire University community for this project, as we move in a new, but not-really-so-new direction, and we invite your comments at any time.

Bush choice an honor for ND

Months of waiting and speculation about the 1992 commencement speaker were put to rest yesterday when University officials confirmed what some had suspected: President George Bush will address the 147th graduating class of Notre Dame.

The news brought immediate reaction from members of the Notre Dame community who believe that next to the Pope, the President ranks as the highest figure the University could secure to speak during its Sesquicentennial Year. And although Bush is addressing only the Notre Dame commencement, the reaction from many at Saint Mary's was that the decision is an honor for both communities.

But the President's high profile and current candidacy for reelection raise questions about the May 17 address.

Some view his acceptance as a chance to politicize the commencement. With students and their families from all over the country, Bush couldn't ask for a more geographically diverse audience to hear his reelection message.

But should we assume that the President of the United States would demean Notre Dame by turning its graduation into a stump appearance? The message may contain ideas expressed during his campaign, but to imply that Bush will do anything but tailor his message for the graduates is reaching at best.

Others argue that choosing Bush equals a Notre Dame endorsement for his reelection.

This claim is disputed by the fact that on the same day the Bush announcement was made, Notre Dame named one of the highest ranking Democrats in the country the recipient of the most prestigious honor to American Catholics, the Laetare Medal. That Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan will be present to address the graduates, should convince skeptics that political bias was not a factor in either decision.

The issue is that Notre Dame had the opportunity to have the President of the United States deliver the commencement address. Granted, Bush will bring national coverage and increased security. But to have him at Notre Dame is an honor, regardless of political affiliation or personal motivation.

Twins reveal abortion's truth

Dear Editor:

Tonight at 7:30 p.m. in the Hayes-Healy auditorium (Rm. 122), Notre Dame/Saint Mary's Right-to-Life will sponsor a presentation by renowned pro-life activist/feminist twins Janice and Joyce Keen entitled "Abortion & Truth: A Catholic Woman's Perspective."

The twins first became nationally recognized while undergraduates at Stanford University, when they were arrested and jailed several times for trying to physically blockade the entrances of abortion chambers. For her efforts, Janice spent the summer of her junior year in college in a California jail. Since graduation in 1990, the twins have further expanded their involvement in the pro-life movement.

Joyce is currently on staff at Americans United for Life, the legal arm of the pro-life movement, and serves on the board of directors of the Illinois Right to Life Committee. Janice worked for a year with the Pro-Life Action League of Chicago and acts as an executive member of the Professional Woman's Network, a pro-woman, human life advocacy group.

The Keens have brought their provocative and controversial presentation, which includes what many Notre Dame students have never seen before—video footage of an actual abortion—to several college campuses. They reveal the brutal truth about abortion; that it is the murder of unborn children; that it is the ultimate exploitation of women; and that all Catholics are morally obligated to pray and work for an end to this modern-day slaughter of the innocents.

JACC 'Disco Dome' rocks with 1970's look

Dear Editor:

Disco Balls? The Village People? Yes, I do believe the excitement has been rejuvenated inside the Joyce ACC. After months of experimenting with gimmicks like "cha-ching" sound effects and piped-in earthquakes, the sports marketing department has finally found something to excite the basketball crowd... the 1970's.

You can't convince me that the glorious return of a rowdy, raucous spontaneous student section during the last two home games of the NIT was due to the scintillating wisdom of placing the students behind both baskets and in the lower arena, closer to the action. No, no, no. It's because of the disco lights during player introductions, the crowd spell-along to "YMCA," and those great 70's ties that John MacLeod wears.

The Thunderdome, which was unduly named before any lightning ever hit, should be renamed the DiscoDome. Imagine the national exposure. Wouldn't it be "dyn-o-mite"?

Next year, bring back the glory days of Irish basketball. Dig out the bright yellow uniforms with garish green clovers, and gold knee socks. Designate certain dates as leisure suit games where students dress up in polyester, making the JACC a truly fearful place to stay.

Bring in the K.C. and the Sunshine Band, the Bee Gees, and Donna Summer for post game concerts. And what ever you do, let the students sit behind both baskets, in the lower arena, at reduced ticket prices.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Losing Catholic scholars is costly to ND campus

Dear Editor:

David Lutz's article "Can Notre Dame Be Saved?", originally printed in First Things and recently reprinted by The Observer, is as provocative as it is sincere and thoughtful. The article raises a number of very pressing questions about Notre Dame's once and future character as a Catholic university.

I disagree very vehemently with some of Mr. Lutz's analysis and do not share his conclusions. I am, for example, very disturbed by the substance and implications of his discussion of academic freedom. Restrictions on academic freedom are restrictions on the pursuit of truth.

Such restrictions cannot, under any circumstances, be imposed in the name of safeguarding Catholicism. If the moral and doctrinal tenets of Roman Catholicism are indeed true, they can withstand the most rigorous intellectual scrutiny under conditions of free inquiry. Thomas Aquinas engaged in such inquiry in the Paris of the 13th century. We in America late in the 20th should do no less.

I am also worried that Mr. Lutz's discussion, like many of the arguments about Notre Dame's Catholic character, relies upon a false dichotomy. Such discussions seem often to presuppose that a Catholic university must either imitate Princeton, Yale and Stanford or must be narrowly and strictly confessional, disregarding the intellectual standards of the rest of the academic world. Posing the problem in these terms ignores a third possibility.

In trying to be a great Catholic university in a pluralistic (and increasingly secular) society, Notre Dame is trying something entirely new. Old models are woefully insufficient to guide us; we must discover how to accomplish our mission for ourselves as we go along.

This process of self-creation requires extraordinarily creative philosophical thinking as we debate what it is we should try to be. It also requires extraordinarily creative administrative solutions to the problems we face.

One of the issues Mr. Lutz raises is faculty hiring, which, he argues, poses a threat to Notre Dame's Catholic character. Briefly put, his argument is that Notre Dame faces a dilemma. As long as there are few Catholics or Christians receiving Ph.D.'s from the best graduate schools, Notre Dame must choose between preserving its Catholic character and hiring the best faculty we can.

This argument exhibits the salient feature present in other discussions of our mission; it raises both philosophical and administrative questions. The philosophical question is whether hiring a significant number of non-Christians and/or non-Catholics necessarily compromises Notre Dame's Catholic character.

The administrative question is how Notre Dame should respond to the paucity of young Catholic or Christian Ph.D.'s, given our interest in remaining a Catholic university.

The philosophical question is a difficult one. Certainly the Catholic character of Notre Dame cannot depend exclusively on the liturgical life of the campus, on the presence of the Congregation of Holy Cross, on the religious quality of undergraduate dormitory life and/or on parietals and single-sex residences.

What goes on in the classroom, in the research laboratories and in the library is also important. Notre Dame's Catholic character therefore depends to some extent on its having Catholic faculty and graduate students. To what extent it depends on this is and what it is for faculty to be Catholic are very hard to say. I will not try to say it here.

I want to focus instead on the administrative question. I do so because the hiring dilemma to which Mr. Lutz points results from a fact of academic demographics and because that is a demographic fact that Notre Dame can alter if we can muster the will and the financial resources. That demographic fact is that few of the Ph.D.'s turned out by the most respected graduate programs are Catholic or Christian.

I have only my own experience as a graduate student at Harvard to support this claim, but I would be extraordinarily surprised if it were not true.

Notre Dame could respond to the shortage of Catholic scholars in a number of ways. First, we could disregard the moral and religious beliefs of job candidates entirely. Second, we could ask candidates whether they were baptized or were raised either Catholic or Christian, while politely neglecting to inquire whether they still have any religious beliefs or commitments.

Third, we could attach less importance to hiring faculty who are highly touted and who come from the most highly esteemed graduate programs. The esteem of the world is worth only so much, it might be said, and is not worth the consequent compromise of Notre Dame's Catholic character. We could hire new faculty from graduate programs that are held in lesser esteem but are attached to universities that are unquestionably Catholic or Christian.

Neither of the first two responses is acceptable; indeed I think there is little to distinguish them. The third suggestion has some merit. It reminds us that we ought not live only in the eyes or the rankings of the rest of the academic world. Such reminders are always salutary. But we cannot neglect the standards of the rest of the academic world. To do so would be to betray an intellectual patrimony of which we have every reason to be very proud.

I therefore favor a fourth response. Notre Dame should not take as given the small number of Catholic scholars currently being trained at the nation's best universities. We should seize the initiative and attempt to increase the pool of outstanding Catholic academics. Several measures could be implemented to this end.

(1) A number of Notre Dame's very best undergraduates go directly into the job market or on to professional school. We should attempt to identify undergraduates with the potential for outstanding scholarship.

Any such students who want to go to professional school could be offered a complete tuition and living subsidy for two years here at Notre Dame field of their choice. We could, at the end of offer to help them apply to the best graduate schools if their work warrants it, even offering to pay their application fees.

This plan would give the chosen students exposure to graduate work at no expense to themselves, provide them the opportunity to acquire the language training needed for specialized research, provide them with a Master's Degree, and help them make a more informed choice about subsequently pursuing a graduate education at another university.

It might be better if students went directly to graduate school elsewhere from undergraduate work here. Exposing them to graduate study here is, however, better than their going directly to professional school or to work. On the assumption that most Notre Dame undergraduates are Catholic, this measure would encourage promising young Catholics to pursue doctoral studies.

(2) Notre Dame could set aside funds for those of our undergraduates who wish to pursue doctoral work in an academic discipline at other universities. Funds could subsidize all or part of their graduate education. These funds would be available on a competitive basis; receipt of funds would be contingent upon admission to a top drawer Ph.D. program and normal progress toward the degree.

Again, on the assumption that most Notre Dame undergraduates are Catholic, implementing this plan would encourage promising Catholics to pursue doctoral studies.

(3) Notre Dame could offer competitive scholarships to doctoral students from other universities who wish to spend a year at Notre Dame working on projects related in some way to Catholicism and its history.

This would allow Notre Dame to become acquainted with scholars who may be sympathetic to our mission and allow them to become acquainted with us. It would also afford the scholarship recipients the leisure they need to improve the quality of their dissertation work, thus raising the quality of Catholic scholarship.

(4) Notre Dame could establish a program for new Catholic Ph.D.'s designed to bring them to campus for a year or two of post-doctoral work. They could be offered a reduced teaching load with ample opportunity to begin their professional research. This measure like the last would enable Notre Dame to become acquainted with the current pool of young Catholic scholars and enable those scholars to become acquainted with us.

It is axiomatic that scholarly work improves with the time devoted to do it. This measure like the last would thus raise the quality of work Catholic scholars are producing by increasing the leisure they have to produce it. (I owe this suggestion to my colleague David Solomon.)

(5) Notre Dame should maintain a data bank of Catholics with Ph.D.'s in all disciplines. We can only hire Catholic scholars if we know who they are.

(6) Finally and most important, we should do everything we can in the classroom and out of it to encourage our best undergraduates to pursue graduate studies after leaving Notre Dame. This places a burden on faculty to identify promising students and to encourage their intellectual development.

It places a burden on all of us to make the intellectual atmosphere of undergraduate life more rarified than it now is. This too requires creative philosophical discussions and administrative measures too complicated to be discussed here.

Would implementing all of these measures be expensive? Of course. Are they worth the cost? I believe so. According to an old adage, those who think education too expensive should contemplate the costs of ignorance. Those who think the cost of investing in the next generation of Catholic scholars too high should contemplate the costs—to Notre Dame and to Catholicism—of doing without them.

Bookstore lacks class by selling the Sports Illustrated swimsuit issue

Dear Editor:

I want to publicly thank the management of the Notre Dame Bookstore for an important service which they are providing.

As a graduate student, I cannot afford to purchase a year's subscription of Sports Illustrated just so that I can have a copy of the swimsuit edition. Moreover, being an absent-minded graduate student, I usually forget when the swimsuit edition comes out.

But, luckily for me, and for many on this campus, I suspect, the Notre Dame Bookstore has made my life much easier. Because of the Bookstore, I do not have to purchase a year's subscription to Sports Illustrated in order to have my own copy of the swimsuit edition.

The Bookstore management has thoughtfully put this edition on sale downstairs in the Bookstore. And, as if that thoughtful act were not enough, the Bookstore has displayed the swimsuit edition at the checkout stands so that they could not possibly be overlooked by even such an absent-minded person as myself.

Of course, there are those who might be tempted to criticize the management of the Bookstore for this service. This swimsuit edition portrays women as objects to be used by men as a means to satisfy sexual desires, they might point out. The models in this edition, in a not so subtle manner, present an image of the ideal female body.

Does not this image create unrealistic psychological and social pressures on women, and, some might wonder, intensify the pressures related to such severely destructive eating disorders as bulimia and anorexia nervosa? And the more pious in our midst might point out that the Church is now in the holy season of Lent. These pious souls might wonder if it is really fitting for the Bookstore to promote this exploitation of women during this season when the Church is preparing to celebrate the saving mystery of the death and resurrection of Jesus.

But let us not be too critical of the Bookstore's management. Let us not dwell on this exploitation for the sake of profit. After all, I am sure that they are just trying to be of service.

The only man

Simone Spanu becomes the first male to attend Saint Mary's

By AMY BENNETT
Accent Writer

Simone Spanu is dealing with a ratio for which most Notre Dame men would kill. But Spanu isn't a Notre Dame student; he's a full-time Saint Mary's sophomore, and being the only male among 1,629 female students isn't as easy as it sounds.

Spanu, 19, was born in Rome, where his mother directs the Saint Mary's Rome program. He spent all of his school years in British and American schools in Rome. He is classified as a "special" Saint Mary's student, which means he is taking classes at Saint Mary's, but has not been admitted as a degree-seeking, or "regular" student.

Although most of Spanu's friends express envy at his status as a Saint Mary's student, he maintains that it is anything but easy. On the first day of classes, Spanu admitted, "I was blushing."

"I didn't realize at first what it meant that I was a full-time Saint Mary's student," he said. "I was just embarrassed to be in front of all these women. Then I felt privileged to be here. . . . On the other hand, I feel out of place because this is a school for women, focused on women."

"There are a lot of things that women do here that I can't. If I want to enroll on a sports team, I can't. If I want to use the after-hours study lounge, I can't," he added.

The fact that Spanu appears as a Saint Mary's student on the class roster confuses many professors. "The first thing I do in a class is introduce myself and tell (the professor) where I'm from and where I go to school."

To Spanu the professors are one of the most appealing aspects of Saint Mary's. "The professors here will give you all the help and guidance you need. I feel at home because a lot of people know my mother. All her colleagues are here, and that makes me feel a little closer to her,"

The Observer/Sean Faman

"If I want to use the after-hours study lounge, I can't," said Simone Spanu, an Italian student presently attending Saint Mary's College. He commented.

Spanu admits that he rarely participates in class. "I'm intimidated by being in an all-women's class. I've actually never spoken except in my math, and then only because the professor called on me. I was not active at all, compared to other people."

Penny Briner, a Notre Dame graduate student, taught Spanu in an introductory level sociology course at Saint Mary's last semester. "I assumed he was a Notre Dame student," she said. "The first time I knew he was a Saint Mary's student was when he corrected me during class attendance."

Briner noticed that Spanu did not seem overly concerned with his status as the only male student at Saint Mary's. "My impression was that he didn't emphasize it as much as the faculty and administration," she said. "I always wondered whether he was intimidated.

He would come to my office and talk to me quite often. Once we started talking in a one-on-one atmosphere, he began to talk quite a bit about his experiences at Saint Mary's. He talked to me a lot about the culture shock and the homesickness he was experiencing," said Briner.

Spanu finds that few Saint Mary's students realize he is indeed enrolled there. "When people in my classes talked to me, they just assumed I went to Notre Dame. When people started seeing my Saint Mary's I.D., they began to believe me," he admitted.

Spanu has not yet decided upon a major, but is leaning towards liberal arts or humanistic studies with Italian as a second major. Because Saint Mary's is an all-women's institution, he cannot receive a Saint Mary's degree. Spanu hopes to transfer to Notre Dame at the end of the 1991-92 school year.

Spanu finds the differences between American and Italian cultures to be immense. "In Italy you wake up, have a coffee and maybe read the paper before work. After work you go out dancing with friends or just out for an ice cream. You spend Sunday with family and have an awesome dinner. After dinner you rest and go and watch a soccer game or go to a park."

"You can do all that here (in America), but it's not something you do naturally everyday. Here you have to plan to do all that—in Italy you just do," Spanu added.

With a grandmother in South Bend and friends in several major cities, Spanu has seen some of the different sides of America, but it is Chicago that he likes best.

"I love Chicago. I want to live there someday. But not in the suburbs—downtown. Everything in Chicago is the opposite of Rome—it's tall, modern, huge, overwhelming."

Spanu hopes to find a place to live in Chicago for the summer, rather than return to Rome. "It would be my dream to spend a summer there," he said of Chicago. "If I don't, I'll go back to Italy for sure."

Spanu has also visited Los Angeles and New York City, where a schoolmate now attends college. Although he loved both cities, he maintained that "The Midwest is what America is for me. . . . It's not affected by other cultures as much as other places. The Midwest is what people from other countries think of when they think of America."

Although Spanu admitted that homesickness, the heavy work load, and South Bend's weather all manage to get to him occasionally, he said, "It's hard to believe you can (broaden your horizons) here, because you look around and it seems so empty, but when I go back to Italy, I know that's when I'll see it."

Spanu said, "I want to know this country, the people. I am a citizen of this country, too. I want to learn a little more about who I am."

Ride the pop wave

By ROLANDO DE AGUIAR
Music Critic

We are not sure yet what business the group Ride is in these days.

Does the group clean up typical feedback, or is the foursome trying to put a grungy edge on British pop?

With their second full-length album Going Blank Again, Ride has further muddled the picture, by putting new spins on their trademark sound.

Songs like "Leave Them All Behind," Going Blank Again's first single, show off that sound with guitars hanging in the atmosphere and the bass carrying the listener melodically.

Ride's lyrics are as enigmatic as ever on the album's lead-off track. Though lyricist/lead singer Mark Gardener doesn't say anything concrete, he sets up the territory which Ride occupies.

"Colours shining/ Fading into night/ Our grasp is broken/ There's nothing we can do," is a quote from one of Ride's songs.

Going Blank Again

Ride

(out of five)

And there is nothing the listener can do either, except lie back and listen to the hanging pop.

"Twisterella" is a pop song on grounds with "Kaleidoscope" and "In a Different Place," two of Ride's most popular songs from their first American releases.

Concise and quick in its communication, Ride nonetheless sends the same atmospheric message of a band which is easily pinned down to floaty subject matter and sound.

But Ride has made strides to modify this sound. "Chrome Walls" adds a plucked guitar sound to the mix, and though this element does not change Ride, it does show some versatility from the layers of the electricity the band usually generates.

Ride even opens up new lyrical territory on a few songs.

"Cool Your Boots" and "Mouse Trap" sound vaguely personal. Though the band usually communicates emotional thoughts, storytelling is not its forte. But these two tracks give the listener something new.

"Running away/ You're lost for words again/ Now you've got all you wanted/ Are you really satisfied," is a sampling from a Ride song.

No, this is not the pain and truth of Bob Dylan, but it is progress.

The band gets fun, too, with "Making Judy Smile," a sixty-ish pop song, which is one of Ride's most singable songs.

But Ride's most danceable song must be "Time Machine," which explores new territory for the band. Over a funky bass line which drives the song, Gardener delivers typical monologue, singing of being carried away and disappearing.

With their unique sound, Ride shows no sign of disappearing. One of the freshest young acts on a major label, Ride's sound crosses important barriers. And we do not know which way they will go next.

The group Ride has recently released their second full length album in America, Going Blank Again.

was 2 for 4 with and a run, but it was Danapilis whose three run homer in the eighth provided the lone Irish offensive highlight.

"It was one of those games where it just wasn't our day. We try not to have too many," said Mee. "But we did come back and score six runs in the last two innings. We didn't lay down for them."

The Irish got back on track on Sunday and almost pulled off a comeback win by scoring two runs in the top of the ninth to send the game into extra innings. It wasn't enough, though, as the Hurricanes scored in the eleventh to win the game 6-5.

Notre Dame held the lead for a brief moment after scoring a lone run the third, but Miami scored five in the bottom half of the inning. Both starting pitchers had trouble. Junior Chris Michalak gave up five runs and seven hits in 5.2 innings of work while Miami's Silvio Censale lasted only 3.1 innings on the mound giving up two runs and four hits to the Irish.

Junior Dave Sinnes, a Miami native pitched well in front of a his hometown fans. Sinnes relieved Michalak and was on the mound for a little over four innings and allowed only one run and three hits. In the eleventh inning, Sinnes walked three to set up Miami's win.

Danapilis (3 for 4, 2 runs, 1 RBI), Binkiewicz (2 for 5, 1 RBI), and freshman Paul Failla

(2 for 4, 1 run, 1 RBI) had big days at the plate for Notre Dame. The Irish chipped away at Miami's lead with a single run in the third, fourth, and seventh innings and scored two in the ninth.

"It was good experience to play a team of that caliber," said Mee. "I think we learned a lot. We played well on Friday and Sunday, but we'd like to forget about Saturday."

Hoops

The Irish's 29-21 halftime edge evaporated as they scored only six points in their first 14 possessions of the half.

"They showed a lot of different zones and that caused some problems for us," MacLeod said. "But, we were able to weather some scoring droughts and do enough offensively to win."

The Utes tied the game, 35-35, at the 12:34 mark when Phil Dixon hit a 14-foot jumper, but then failed to convert four chances or to take the lead. Keith Tower opened the advantage back to six, 47-41, at 6:10 when he followed his own shot with a pretty reverse lay up.

"I felt like the shot was going long and I know it was coming back to me," Tower said. "I saw Afeaki coming so I ball faked and went around him."

The lead reached eight, 52-44, when Tower hit one of two foul shots at 3:29. However, the Utes would not die. Dixon hit a three and Jimmy Soto put in his own miss to bring them back to within three with 2:12 left.

Sweet answered with a 10-footer in the lane, but Soto then drove for a lay up.

With Notre Dame up by three, Tower was called for a push underneath and Byron Wilson hit one of two to make it 54-52 with 1:20 remaining.

At 1:03, Ellis missed a turnaround to give the Utes a chance to take the lead. This time they did when Dixon sunk a three with 34 seconds left. Before the questionable technical foul, Bennett missed a trey, but got his own rebound to give the Irish a chance to win the game.

Utah started the contest by missing its first six shots before Dixon nailed a three-pointer at the 15:20 mark to cut the Irish lead to 6-3. Bennett then set up Ellis for an alley-oop slam which triggered a 9-2 Irish run.

Notre Dame got its largest first half lead, 27-13, when Bennett was fouled on the break and sunk both shots. However, Utah was able to get back into the game late in the half as Notre Dame scored on only one of its final six possessions.

"It was not pretty," said MacLeod. "This is the kind of game you have to win to keep going."

HEY LES-

Do you let all the women bowl strikes through your legs??

dear bubba: what is a butterfly?A butterfly is a very beautiful thing.So fluid,so effortless,so picturesque.One often forgets that this beauty is a product of much love,effort and determination.For a butterfly was once a catipillar.Inching along slowly and carefully,taking just the right steps to achieve his ultimate goal.along the way he does make some mistakes.crawling up the wrong tree or crossing the street when he shouldn't.But in the end,after moving slowly and carefully and making many mistakes along the way,he becomes that perfect thing of beauty and more importantly love,a butterfly.Honey,things have been kind of rough this semester.Their has been changes in our relationship which have taken both of us time to adjust to.We are still adjusting to these in some ways now.We will continue to make mistakes now and then,that's natural.One things for sure honey,I love you from the bottom of my heart.Nothing will change that.As time goes on our relationship can only be stronger from the things that have happened this semester.I truly belive this.Never lose faith in me as I,will never lose faith in you.Never forget how important you are to me.Never forget how much I love you.
Love,A black bear from Maine.

MERRILL LYNCH & CO.
CORPORATE FINANCE ANALYST PROGRAM
(Chicago Office)

The Investment Banking Division at Merrill Lynch recruits recent college graduates into the Corporate Finance Analyst Program, where they work with corporations and institutions. The division acts as a financial intermediary between corporations and investors, offering financing alternatives and advisory services. New analysts will take part in a six-week training program in New York at Merrill Lynch's World Headquarters before joining the Midwest Industrial Banking Group in Chicago.

While this has traditionally been a two-year position, a number of analysts are invited to remain for a third year, and several of these are hired as first-year associates after completing their third year.

When considering candidates for the positions in the firm, we look for a record of outstanding academic achievement, extracurricular involvement, work experience, and demonstrated leadership skills. Successful candidates are articulate, able to write effectively, and able to work well with others.

We look favorably on degrees in all subjects, though some familiarity with accounting, economics, finance, and computers is helpful. Knowledge of these areas suggests an ability to readily acquire the tools needed for quantitative analytical work.

All of these positions require a commitment to meet a demanding pace as well as the energy to see a project through, often under pressure. Merrill Lynch offers a competitive compensation package and an innovative relocation program.

Potential candidates should submit a resume (no student profiles please) to the Career and Placement Office no later than April 1, 1992.

SMC tennis defeats Albion College 7-2

By KILEY COBLE
Sports Writer

The Saint Mary's tennis team (4-4) won a tiring match against Albion College on Saturday, 7-2, in the indoor courts at the Angela Athletic Facility.

The first home game for the Belles was an easy sweep in doubles play. Seniors Ellen Mayer and Marie Koscielski are a strong aggressive combination in the number one spot. They defeated their opponents Jen Myers and Jen Friedline, 6-4, 6-1.

The two played doubles together as sophomores and are now happy to be back together.

"Ellen is consistent with ground strokes," coach Jo-Ann Nester said. "Marie is a strong server and that's good for Ellen at the net. Ellen's tenacious baseline game makes for a good combo."

Sophomore Mary Cosgrove and freshman Andrea Ayres play the number two spot in doubles. They also prove to be a valuable combination for the team winning against Eve Kopp and Jen Basch, 6-1, 6-1. Cosgrove and Ayres play with the same game style, both are aggressive with the ball.

"We both hit the ball very hard and she's fun to play with," said Ayres.

Number-three doubles sophomores Thayma Darby and Shannon McGinn pulled off two impressive sets of 6-4, 6-1 against Jen Kerr and Kris Carnes.

In singles play, in the first spot, Mayer was defeated by Ayres had her first win of the season in singles play, beating Carnes 6-2, 4-6, 6-4.

Irish wary after loss to Winthrop

By JIM VOGL
Assistant Sports Editor

After playing with some of the country's best college softball teams, Notre Dame figures to have an easy time with Division II member St. Xavier.

But that's just what worries Irish head coach Brian Boulac.

"St. Xavier can beat us. You can't let down," he said, remembering the team's disappointing 7-3 loss to Winthrop College at last weekend's Southern Invitational.

"Winthrop snuck up on us. We played flat, without the intensity we had the first day," explained Boulac. "We kind of looked past Winthrop. It was a discouraging loss."

Notre Dame can't afford to look past St. Xavier, whom they host for a double-header today at 3:00. The Cougars, from Chicago, should field a decent team. Last year, they finished 43-28 under coach Lynn Olinski. The Cougars return slugger Sue Derschler (.405 batting average) and hurler Jackie Russell (20-5) while catcher/outfielder Brandi McCue is their top newcomer.

"We've got to be consistent and be mentally prepared for every game," said Boulac, whose team picked up their intensity and avenged the loss by beating Winthrop 3-2 in the next game. The Irish finished in the middle of an elite pack finishing at 3-3 good for fifth among the ten teams competing.

In the first game of the tournament, the Irish scored their most impressive win of the season, downing ninth-ranked South Carolina, 4-1.

They also gave a solid effort against 22nd-ranked North Carolina and seventh-ranked Southwest Louisiana. The Tar Heels beat the Irish 3-1, and Southwest Louisiana, who eventually won the tournament, won 4-1.

In the tournament, Notre Dame's offense got a wakeup call and answered with 36 hits, including three homers. The squad hopes to continue its hitting arsenals behind the hot bats of centerfielder Ronny Alvarez and second baseman Christy Connoyer.

throughout their history, compiling a 43-18 record at the World's Most Famous Arena.

Though this year's senior class has not had great luck at the Garden, certain players have been superb.

The Irish have compiled a 2-3 record in New York since the 1988-89 season. But in the five games, Sweet has averaged 20.4 points per game, and averaged .624 from the field (before tonight's 5-11 performance).

And in Notre Dame's 88-76 win over #8 North Carolina in January, Sweet contributed 30 points to the Irish effort. but the guard was not the high scorer, as LaPhonso Ellis popped for 31. Elmer Bennett added 18 and a then-career-high 10 assists.

The Irish will need similar career performances from their seniors Wednesday in order to defeat Virginia.

Madison Square Garden luck can't last forever.

Subpar finish in Evansville for ND men's golf

By MIKE HOBBS
Sports Writer

The men's golf team traveled to Evansville this past weekend to compete in the Evansville Intercollegiate Tournament. The tournament held at Oakmeadow was a site that provided beautiful accommodations and coverage despite the poor conditions of the course. Unfortunately, it was not enough to spark the Irish to the leader position.

The competition consisted of Ball State, Western Kentucky University, and Murray State finishing in the top three positions with the Irish finishing in the middle of the pack. On the whole, it appeared that the performance was average at best.

"We are fed up with mediocrity. We feel that these guys are talented enough to go out and win. There is no reason for them to finish in the middle of the pack," stated assistant coach Dave Long.

Leading the team was Cole Hanson. Playing in his first tournament, the freshman from Minnesota shot a 78 on Saturday to position him in third place for the day. He returned to shoot a 79 on Sunday for a total of 157.

"Cole played well and he has a great attitude," said Long of Hanson's showing over the weekend. "He's a great kid. He has a lot of potential."

Following Hanson was junior Chris Dayton with scores of 82 and 77 for a total of 159 for the weekend.

"It was a real disappointment. We could have played a lot better, but this weekend we did not show it," said Dayton.

The Irish are looking to bounce back with strong practices this week.

"We want to put this behind us and move on. The majority of the season is still ahead of us," added senior captain Mike O'Connell.

Women's track places in two meets over weekend

By JOSEF EVANS
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame women's track squad made their presence felt in more than one location this past weekend, as they had athletes placing in both the U.S. Air/Nike Raleigh Relays at North Carolina State and the Alabama Relays in Tuscaloosa.

At Raleigh, the relay team of freshman Becky Alfieri, freshman Kala Boulware, senior Diana Bradley, and freshman Sarah Riley finished strong in both their events, but not without some adversity.

"We were running against the wind most of the time, and it was also really cold. (Those factors) did affect us," offered Bradley.

Also a factor was the strong and unfamiliar competition the Irish women were up against.

Eastern schools Notre Dame had not seen in the indoor season, such as Wake Forest and North Carolina, proved to be formidable opponents with plenty of good runners.

Still, Notre Dame's relay team managed a fifth-place finish in the 4 X 1500 meters race, with a time of 19:39, and improved on that in their final event, with a third-place running of the 4 X 800 meters.

"We were a little disappointed with the first race, but we had people running alongside us in the 4 X 800, and we did a lot better," noted Bradley.

In individual competition, freshman Eva Flood came through with a solid sixth-place finish in the 5000 meters, finishing her event in 17:34, while at the Alabama meet, junior Karen Harris put her herself in fifth place in the shot put with a throw of 42' 11.75".

Belles softball opens season

By NICOLE MCGRATH
SMC Sports Editor

The Saint Mary's softball team hopes to begin its season today against Indiana University-Purdue University at Fort Wayne here at 3:30 p.m.

The Belles' season has been put on hold for the past two weeks due to the inclement weather.

"We are extremely anxious to start the season and cannot wait for today's game," said co-captain Carol Grobner.

It will be interesting to see how the Belles fare without last year's star player Janet Libbing. Libbing is out for the season after tearing two knee ligaments while playing during basketball season. The Belles are feeling the loss at the bat and the loss of leadership on the field.

Last year I.U.P.U.-Fort Wayne had a record of 19-10. The Lady Dons wrapped up the season 5-4 in the Great Lake Valley Conference Division II.

The Lady Dons will be led by Coach Dale Van Houtin and look to be a formidable opponent returning 11 lettermen; 7 of which are starters.

The Belles will have to keep an eye on a few of the Lady Dons' players. Jennifer Martin, Andrean, Ind., was last year's conference leader batting a .550 average. She currently holds the position of catcher. Tina Menoi of Waterloo, Ind. last year held a .411 batting average and will be playing the position of center. Finally, Lisa Miller of Fort Wayne, will be covering the position of shortstop and last year had a .312 batting average.

But that does not mean that the Belles do not have a couple of cards up their sleeve. Lisa Bright, a freshman from Highland, Ind., should prove to be solid in the position of pitcher. She did a good job down in Florida over break as the team came away with a 4-3 pre-season record.

Meanwhile the Belles are returning the entire outfield from last year. The trio is made up of Erin Wachter who will be playing left field. Stacy Bogataj will be taking the position of right field. Finally, Grobner will be playing center field.

"She does an excellent job and covers a lot of territory," said Coach Don Cromer of Grobner.

The infield is young but will try and hold their own against the Lady Dons. Jane Murphy, at catcher, is the only returning infielder. Sara Miller will be playing at first base while Margie Pelton will be at second base. Bridget McCourt will be set at shortstop and Kristen Martina will be taking on third base.

Virginia earns NIT final berth

By MIKE SCRUDATO
Sports Editor

NEW YORK—The Virginia Cavaliers (19-13) advanced to the finals of the National Invitational Tournament behind 27 points from Bryant Stith.

"I think this was good for us," Virginia coach Jeff Jones said. "We did not want to come to New York and drop two."

The game was close from start to finish as the lead changed hands 12 times and was tied on nine occasions.

It appeared as if the Gators were taking control of the game when they went on a 7-0 run in the middle of the second half to grab a 49-45 advantage. However, the Cavaliers responded with six straight to retake the lead, 51-49.

Stacey Poole ended the run by hitting one of two foul shots with 4:29 remaining.

After teams traded baskets for two-and-a-half minutes, Stith hit a baseline jumper with 1:58 left to give Virginia its largest lead of the game to that point, 57-52.

Following a missed three-pointer by Florida's Bryan Hogan, Corey Alexander hit one of two from the line and Stith added two more after a Craig Brown layup to ice the game for the Cavaliers.

"Virginia did a better job with the physical play on the boards," Florida coach Lon Kruger said. "They went after the loose balls, and hit the offensive boards especially well. They seemed to want it more."

Virginia led 33-31 at the half despite shooting only 36 percent. The Cavaliers stayed in the game by outrebounding Florida 24-16, 12-3 on the offensive glass. For the game Virginia held an 18-8 advantage on the offensive boards, and a 42-34 overall edge.

This will be the Cavaliers' second trip to the NIT Finals. They defeated Minnesota, 58-55, to win the title in 1980, the year the NIT expanded to its current 32-team format.

Notre Dame lacrosse to face Ohio-Wesleyan

Observer Staff Report

The Notre Dame lacrosse team travels to Ohio-Wesleyan in search of its second straight victory against a Bishop squad which has never lost to the Irish.

Both teams enter the contest with identical 3-3 marks and both chalked up impressive wins over the weekend.

The Irish used a late scoring burst to top 19th ranked Hofstra while Ohio-Wesleyan opened NCAC play with an impressive win over Kenyon.

The Bishops are led by senior Bill Bishop who leads the offensive attack for the Ohio-Wesleyan, tallying 20 points in the first six games. Joining Bishop in the assault is junior Andy Greaves, contributing nineteen points, including a team-high 13 goals. The pair had a combined eight goals in the win over Kenyon. Complimenting Bishop and Greaves on defense is goaltender Dave Breslin whose .603 save percentage leads the Bishops.

The Irish will once again look to Mike Sullivan and Randy Colley to supply its offensive punch. Colley scored three goals against Hofstra and leads the team. The Notre Dame offense will be tested by a strong Bishop defense, which has held opponents to a scoring average under nine points a game.

On defense, the Irish can rely on the improved play of their goaltending corps. The group consisting of juniors Chris Parent, Patrick Finn, and Ryan Jewell has been impressive as of late, holding usually high-scoring Hofstra to only three goals in the final two periods of Saturday's win.

After facing the Bishops, the Irish return home next Saturday for a game with Denison.

Second time is charmless for Irish tennis vs Florida

The Observer/ John Rock

Notre Dame junior Andy Zurcher, shown here at Eck Pavilion earlier in the year, competed well at the Blue-Gray Invitational, but fell to a ranked Mark Merklein.

By JONATHAN JENSEN
Sports Writer

They say a team is always tougher to beat the second time around.

The fifth-ranked Notre Dame

men's tennis team found that out the hard way, as they were bounced from this weekend's prestigious Blue-Gray National Classic by a Florida team they defeated earlier this year at the National Team Indoors.

It was the second time this year that the Irish were beaten by a team they previously defeated, as they beat North Carolina in the H.E.B. tournament only to be bumped off in a dual meet in Carolina a week later.

But despite the upset loss to the 13th-ranked Gators, the Irish were still pleased with their performance at the meet. They went 2-1 to capture fifth place at one of collegiate tennis' best meets.

The fact that 12 out of the 16 teams in the tourney were ranked in the top-25 and that the Irish loss was only one of a number of big upsets in the tournament makes their finish even more notable.

Number-two ranked TCU was booted out in the semifinals by those dreaded Tarheels, unranked Oklahoma State beat 14th-ranked Minnesota, and another Irish opponent, Drake, beat a ranked San Diego squad on their way to a sixth place finish. Sixth-ranked Mississippi State ended up taking the title.

The Irish faced that Oklahoma State team in their first match of the tournament and came away with a convincing 6-0 victory over a team that was the Big 8 champion and a NCAA tournament participant a year ago. Notre Dame's third-ranked Dave DiLucia continued his undefeated reign over collegiate tennis with a 6-2, 6-2 win over Eric Fahnstock and the rest of the Irish followed suit.

"I expected a tougher match, given the fact that we have not been able to get outside for a while," said Irish head coach Bob Bayliss. "But we lost only one set and we were really sharp."

The Irish's next opponent was the Gators, and they ended up losing much more than just a match. One of the last matches of the 5-1 loss was the fifth singles match with Notre Dame junior Mark Schmidt, who also is undefeated in third doubles with Chris Wojtalik.

Schmidt lost the first set 7-6 in a tiebreaker, and late in the second set he rolled over his ankle while pursuing a baseline shot. He suffered a second degree sprain and should be lost for 3-5 weeks. All of the Irish's other close losses in the match paled in comparison to the loss of Schmidt. He had an impressive 13-2 record before the default in fifth singles and was 6-0 in third doubles.

One of the three players who have been playing at sixth singles, either Ron Rosas, Tom North, or Wojtalik, will have to step into the five spot and perform on short notice.

"They have all seen action this year so they are all very capable," said Bayliss. "So we'll just have to go with the hot racket."

Besides Schmidt's default, the Irish also lost three other three set matches, including a tough loss for 44th-ranked Andy Zurcher to a ranked Mark Merklein. DiLucia took the lone Irish win with a 6-3, 6-3 victory over Bruce Haddad, but nothing else clicked.

"Last time we faced them we had Chuck Coleman at third and Will Forsyth at fourth," noted Bayliss. "They were switched this time and it presented a different matchup. Maybe it hurt us, I don't know. You can't worry about those things."

The Irish evidently did not dwell on the loss for long, as they crushed Drake in the next match 5-1 to capture fifth place. DiLucia was tested by Martin Dionne 6-4, 7-5, but in all the other Irish two-set wins Drake was able to win no more than three games.

"Drake had beaten two good teams in San Diego and Alabama, so going in I was a little concerned," stated Bayliss, "But in the end I was pleased."

All in all, the Irish are happy with the results, even if they did not go as far as they wished.

"With that many good teams here," said Bayliss, "You can't expect everything to go according to form."

Next week, the Irish stay home to face West Virginia and Wisconsin, where if things do go according to form they will add a couple more W's to their stellar 15-3 record.

Reebok is "shoe-in" for Olympic gold

The Summer Olympics are coming to Barcelona soon.

This promises to be one of the greatest sporting events in the world, bringing together the best athletes from over 100 countries, who have dedicated their lives to the pursuit of one goal: the gold medal. No matter what the odds, these men and women have put in countless hours of training in hopes of having that one shot for glory.

For some of these people, it will be their first chance, maybe their only chance, at competing on such a level as this. For others, maybe a chance to improve on past performances or even to repeat as medalists.

There will be plenty of intriguing stories at Barcelona this summer. From Magic and the NBA Basketball team pounding its opponents into submission to the efforts of one of the greatest women's swimming teams ever assembled, this Olympiad promises excitement at every turn. Cable TV is even offering a triplecast just so you won't miss a second of the action.

But no matter what you may choose to watch, be it tennis or wrestling, gymnastics or fencing, no single event will capture the attention of the world as much, yes, you guessed it, the decathlon.

The decathlon is simply the quintessential sporting event, requiring superb physical conditioning and athletic prowess. Not only will the world be witness to a stunning display of athleticism in the long jump, shot put, high jump, javelin, discuss, and running events, but more importantly, they will see history being made.

That's right, sports fans. You shall all realize the answer to that question that has undoubtedly been preying on your minds for a few months now. You, the world, will find out exactly who is better, Dan or Dave.

Do you know the kind of training that being a world-class athlete requires? Reebok certainly does. It must be absolutely staggering the amount of time and devotion these guys have. They started their regimens when they were only toddlers, spinning and running around and falling on their butts. If that's not how great athletic careers get started, then I don't know what would be.

So, as these guys struggle with the rigors of training, one has to wonder if Dan and Dave really know if the other person is training in his shoes. That information would probably hurt their respective self-confidence. I mean, how could Dave possibly feel comfortable knowing that Dan is wearing Reeboks too?

Irish down Utah 58-55 on technical foul

By MIKE SCRUDATO
Sports Editor

NEW YORK- A controversial technical foul on Irish coach John MacLeod in the second DePaul game may have kept Notre Dame (18-14) out of the NCAA tournament, but last night a similar technical foul on Utah coach Rick Majerus allowed the Irish to reach the NIT finals.

■ Virginia-Florida results see page 17
■ NIT Box scores see page 14

With the Utes (23-11) leading 55-54, LaPhonso Ellis appeared to dribble the ball off his foot, but officials called a foul on Utah center Paul Afeaki and Majerus exploded.

"It was deserved," Majerus explained. "I was wrong. I lost control and it cost my team the game."

Ellis hit one of two foul shots and then Daimon Sweet sunk the two technicals to give the Irish the 58-55 win.

"I feel bad about that," MacLeod said of the call. "But the official that called it had no one in front of him and didn't hesitate making the call. I thought he (Ellis) got fouled."

Utah showed why it is the nation's fourth ranked defense in a second half in which Notre Dame shot only 30 percent.

"We went to more combinations because we weren't matching up well in our man-to-man," Majerus explained.

Notre Dame championship hopes still alive in MSG

By ROLANDO DeAGUIAR
Associate Sports Editor

NEW YORK-Notre Dame was able to pull a win out of its hat last night, using late foul shots to slide a 58-55 victory past Utah.

With the victory, the Irish are one of only six college basketball teams left playing for the big prize, the fact that they are still playing gives them cause to celebrate.

"We're kind of grateful that we didn't make it (to the NCAA tournament)," said Irish senior Daimon Sweet. "It could have been like fools' gold."

An invitation to the field of 64 would have glittered in the headlines, but Notre Dame would have faced tough competition.

The Irish would likely have been eliminated before the NCAA Final Four. But here in New York, Notre Dame is playing for a championship.

"I can personally say that I have never played for a championship either at Notre Dame or in high school," said Irish senior Elmer Bennett. But now Bennett will have that opportunity Wednesday, as the Irish face Virginia in the NIT final.

Though Notre Dame fell to the Cavaliers 83-56 in the mid-season, the Irish have gone 14-7 since, after coming out of the blocks this season at 1-5.

"This shows that there can be a turnaround at Notre Dame," said Irish coach John MacLeod. "Now we are in the final of the NIT. No one expected us to be here."

But this could be the best place for Notre Dame to be in a tough, close game. The Irish have been stellar at MSG

Irish baseball defeats Number 2 Miami

By JENNY MARTEN
Associate Sports Editor

The Notre Dame baseball team had a weekend full of highs and lows as it took on the University of Miami, ranked second in the country, in a three-game series in Miami over the weekend.

"It was a pretty successful trip if you consider that we played Miami and beat them 2-1 in their own park. We also played admirably in the last game, taking them 11 innings," said Notre Dame coach Pat Murphy. "Miami is definitely one of the best baseball teams in the country year in and year out. This tells people across the country that we are capable of playing with the best."

On Friday night, the Irish defeated the Hurricanes 2-1 thanks to the arm of junior Pitcher Al Walania. Walania (2-2) pitched a complete game allowing Miami only one run and seven hits while striking out nine batters, a career high, and walked only one Hurricane batter in the contest.

Miami scored first in the game with a single run in the first frame. The Irish responded with two runs in the top of the second to take the lead for good. Walania shut down the 'Canes for eight more innings escaping trouble in the seventh and ninth innings. Walania struck out the final batter to end the game with the tying run on third.

"Al pitched outstandingly," said Murphy.

The performance earned Walania Midwestern Collegiate Conference Player of the Week honors.

"Al Walania definitely pitched a great game," said Irish tri-captain Cory Mee. "He did a great job of shutting them out in addition to finishing the game."

Saturday was a totally different story as the Hurricanes crushed Notre Dame 18-6 in a game that the Irish would like to forget.

Miami started out the game with a four-run first inning and didn't stop until the Hurricanes had scored at least one run in every inning. Junior pitcher Pat Leahy (3-2) pitched two innings for the Irish and gave up five hits and seven runs. Sophomore Tom Price was on the mound for an inning and walked three batters while freshman Craig Allen pitched five innings. Allen was blasted for eleven hits and eleven runs.

The Irish scored three runs in the sixth and eighth innings. Seniors Joe Binkiewicz, Craig Counsell, and Mee and junior Eric Danapilis provided what Notre Dame offense there was in the game. Hurricane Kenny Henderson (7-1) shut down the Irish in his five innings on the mound allowing no runs and only one hit.

Binkiewicz went 1 for 4 with an RBI and a run while Counsell went 2 for 5 and also added an RBI and a run. Mee
