Hussein vows response to U.S. attack

By WAIEL FALEH
Associated Press Writer

BAGHDAD, Iraq — A defiant Saddam Hussein vowed Tuesday to respond to U.S. missile strikes, ordering his troops to shoot down foreign aircraft and ignore the no-fly zones designed to keep his military in check.

Kurds in the north celebrated the attack launched by President Clinton, but said Saddam's forces were still pressing their offensive against Kurdish rebels.

Two American warships and a pair of B-52 bombers fired 27 cruise missiles at military targets in southern Iraq, killing five people, according to Iraqi and U.S. officials.

The attack set off air raid sirens in Baghdad and prompted Saddam to announce he would no longer honor the two no-fly zones that bar his warplanes from the skies of northern and southern Iraq.

"From now on, pay no attention to damned imaginary no-fly zones," Saddam told his armed forces. "Depend only on God, and hit hard and professionally at any flying target that belongs to the allied aggressors that penetrates the airspace of your beloved and glorious homeland."

"Fight, resist these aggressors and teach them a new, unforgettable lesson about values that their empty souls lack."

During and since the 1990-91

Persian Gulf War, Saddam has often responded to punishing action by the West with dramatic threats of retaliation that were rarely carried out.

Clinton launched the strike Tuesday in response to Saddam's weekend assault on Kurdish rebels in Irbil, the main city in the Kurdish save haven in northern Iraq.

Associated Press correspondent Yalman Onaran reported from Irbil Tuesday that the city was calm, but the boom of heavy artillery could be heard to the south.

Trucks loaded with fighters of the Iraqi-allied Kurdistan Democratic Party headed out of the city in long convoys, some heading toward the city of Sulaymaniyah, 100 miles to the southeast.

"We will attack Sulaymaniyah tonight, God willing," said one KDP fighter, who refused to give his name.

In addition to the strikes, Clinton also declared that the southern no-fly zone would be moved up from the 32nd to the 33rd parallel — a line that reaches the southern suburbs of Baghdad and places roughly half of Iraq inside the zones.

Saddam claimed Iraqi forces shot down most of the incoming missiles, a claim disputed by American officials. In Washington, Gen. Joseph Ralston said there was "no evidence" of successful Iraqi counterattacks.

Oil prices continued climbing Tuesday in response to the attack.

Iraq's deputy prime minister insisted the American attack was unjustified, saying Saddam's forces had with-

Contrary to popular belief, everyone at Notre Dame is not the product of a perfect family, certain about career goals and involved in a story book romance. Just like on any other campus (or perhaps more so on this campus than on most others) students at Notre Dame have a lot to deal with.

Tucked away on the third floor of the University Health Services Building, the University Counseling Center (UCC) is a resource that most students are aware of, but that few actually take advantage of. Currently, 10 percent of the Notre Dame student population participates in counseling sessions offered by UCC.

"This is a campus where there's a lot of pressure to be the same," explains Assistant Director and Coordinator of Clinical Services Rita Donley, PhD. "This tends to lead to isolation." The Counseling Center (originally called the Psychological Services Center and renamed to sound less clinical) was instituted to help students work through what the UCC brochure identifies as "these times of adjust-

Friends remember Streit's concern

By DEREK BETCHER

Doug Streit, 24, died this summer in a small plane crash just weeks after finishing his second year of law studies at Notre Dame.

A double domer, Streit received his undergraduate degree from Notre Dame in 1994. He majored in history and economics in the College of Arts and Letters, and resided in Morrissey Hall. As a law student, he resided in Fischer-O'Hara-Grace.

Friends, professors, and classmates echo each other in pointing out the love Streit had for Notre Dame. His six years spent at the University barely signal the start of his love for the community. Those who knew Doug mourn losing the energy and exuberance that his life had characterized.

"He was just vivacious, he was always on," friend and classmate Katie Elias recalled. "Doug kept us laughing and realizing that there was a world outside of law school."

An infectious carefree disposition endeared Doug to his freinds, who remember him both for his ready sense of humor and for his straightforward honesty.

"You always knew where you stood with Doug and that kind of openness was particularly helpful in a law school environment," Jonathan Lienhard, one of Streit's classmates, said.

VISA offers students first look at SMC

By LAURA SMITH
Assistant Saint Mary's Editor

How did you get your first impression of Saint Mary's College? For many students it was through a Saint Mary's student visiting their high school, a student who gave them their first tour of the campus, or even a student who hosted them overnight.

The dedicated women who introduce prospective Saint Mary's students to the College are members of one of the largest clubs on campus, VISA (Volunteers In Support of Admissions).

"I feel like VISA is a great way to give back to Saint Mary's," said Senior Bronwyn McAuliffe. "I can share personal experiences with prospective students. It's a good organization. You get to have fun and meet people from all over the country."

Chaves no longer teaching at ND

By JAMIE HEISLER

Mark Chaves, a Notre Dame sociology professor who allegedly sexually harassed a female undergraduate last year, will not be returning to his teaching position this semester, according to Denny Moore, director of public relations.

"He is not here this semester. He's not teaching. He won't be here next semester, (and he) won't be teaching. The same will be true next summer or fall," Moore said.

The undergraduate, a research assistant of Chaves, reportedly brought a complaint against him in early November, charging that he had linked her academic success to their relationship.

According to sources close to the situation, Chaves claimed through a letter directed to the student that he did not realize the comments were

A glimpse into the semester

It's the day after Activities Night, and you are counting the multitude of colored papers that you accumulated in a mere half hour in the JACC. Suddenly you are on two dozen voice mail all calls. The whole semester is yet to come, but you are already overextended. More useless fliers come through your campus mail touting meetings that conflict and heralding a future of more letters from copy shop addicts.

Life seems compressed by a constant whirl of dining hall lunches and Papa John dinners. Football weekends are lost in the bottoms of cans and books and Observer pull-outs. You find yourself pondering Spenser and Donatello while you are watching "The Simpsons". You understand intensely why time is the fourth dimension.

The semester has begun, and there is nothing that you can do about it. No matter how hard you try, you are going to learn something. The wondrous fount of knowledge is going to spill into your life and mold in the corners of our memory but dry up when you need it most.

You are going to find new and bizarre ways of entertaining yourself such as sleeping out for football tickets, discovering fun mnemonic devices, and spending hours on the endless network of links on the internet (thanks to resnet).

Suddenly lectures on feminism and movies like "The Shawshank Redemption" spark interests you never knew that you had. The liberal arts education is going to give you an opportunity to explore your faith, you society, and your psyche.

College is a sick, sick place. The seeds of this sickness were planted in you before you came to Notre Dame. However, here at the illustrious University of Notre Dame du lac or stunning Saint Mary's College, these ideas have found what they need to germinate and to take root. You must grow. You must learn to survive.

Your classes are going to bring you to new points of view and to new heights of intellectual esteem. You are going to find yourself encountering new people and new situations. You have joined a secret society of intellectuals with attitudes: the all-around workers who struggle to juggle classes, interhall sports, twelve service clubs, and a social life. Every moment of your life on campus is crammed with the college experience, even when you are sleeping.

Your classes will go smoothly. Your meetings will be attended. Your dorm will win that key interhall game. Your contributions will be appreciated. Your work will get finished.

It's two o'clock in the morning. Your best friend is a thesaurus which provides you with endless synonyms of "use" and "utilize". You haven't typed a word in ten minutes, so large toasters are flying across your monitor. You are listening to angst rock because only Robert Smith understands your pain. You are about to bludgeon yourself with the mouse. An empty can of Dr. Pepper sits to one side of your keyboard. Welcome to writer's block. There's nothing you can do, and there's no where you can go...but the 'brare.

A stronger hurricane, Fran, eyes the U.S.

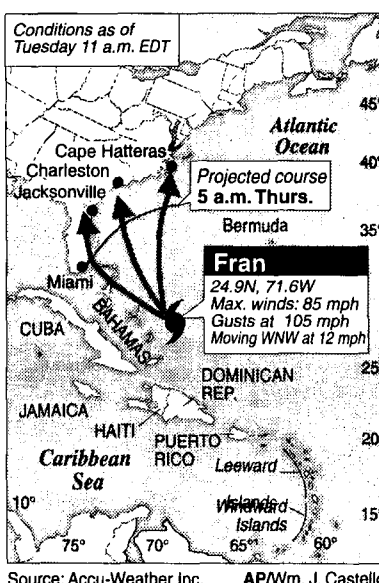

MIAMI
Hurricane Fran gained strength and took aim for the southeastern coast Tuesday on a path that could bring it to land later this week.

The U.S. Navy sent ships to sea for safety as Fran's sustained winds grew from 85 mph to 105 mph in a few hours east of the Bahamas.

Following on the heels of Hurricane Edouard, which unraveled off the Eastern Seaboard over the Labor Day holiday, Fran was expected to take a turn to the northwest by Thursday.

"This changes every time we make a forecast," said Max Mayfield, a specialist with the National Hurricane Center. "The big question is how far to the north it will go and when it will make the turn. Right now, the biggest threat is from North Florida to the Carolinas."

Mayfield said conditions were similar to those that affected Hurricane Bertha, which killed nine in July. Bertha came ashore in North Carolina with sustained winds of 75 mph, causing millions of dollars in damage to homes, crops and infrastructure.

At 5 p.m. EDT, Fran was about 285 miles east of Nassau, Bahamas and moving west-northwest at 13 mph. A hurricane warning was in effect for the north-west Bahamas, which includes Nassau and Freeport.

Charles King, administrator of San Salvador island in the Bahamas, said winds were near tropical storm force Tuesday afternoon.

"Apart from that, things are pretty much the same," he said. "We feel as though it will be a minimal hurricane, but we are watching and listening to the reports. We are ready to take the necessary precautions."

The Navy wasn't waiting. In Jacksonville, Fla., 14 ships from Mayport Naval Station headed for the open sea.

In North Carolina, business owners already suffering the effects of Hurricane Bertha were bemoaning more tropical weather.

"It was the worst Labor Day I've ever had, and I've been in business 41 years," said Carol Dillon, owner of the Outer Banks Motel on North Carolina's Hatteras Island.

Bomb will not change Pope's route

LA ROCHE-SUR-YON, France

A parish priest found what experts said Tuesday was a homemade bomb in the basilica of a church that Pope John Paul II will visit this month. The bomb was discovered Monday in a crypt of the St. Laurent-sur-Sevre church in La Roche-sur-Yon in France's western Brittany region. The device was hidden near the foot of a tomb holding the remains of Louis-Marie Grignon de Montfort, one of two 18th-century French clerics the pope plans to honor on his Sept. 19-22 visit. Beneath the bomb was an inscription in a garbled mixture of Latin and French — "in nomine pape poum," or "in the name of the pope, boom." Experts described the bomb as a "crude pyrotechnical device" and said it had been planted sometime over the weekend. Bomb disposal experts defused it, and no one was injured. Authorities said it was powerful enough to have caused "significant damage." The church is the first stop on the pope's visit, his fifth to France since 1980.

Demand up for family physicians

CHICAGO

Because of the growth of managed care, the demand for general practitioners is catching up to the demand for specialists. Researchers studied recruitment advertisements in medical journals and found that in 1990 there were four ads for specialists — such as anesthesiologists and orthopedic surgeons — for every generalist position advertised. By 1995, the ratio dropped to 1.8 to 1. The researchers, led by Dr. Serena Seifer, a professor at the Center for Medical Education Research at the University of Washington in Seattle, attributed the shift to the spread of managed care, which controls costs by using primary care doctors as gatekeepers to specialists, who charge more. The findings were published in Wednesday's issue of The Journal of the American Medical Association. Numerous studies have warned that too many doctors are specializing and too few are going into primary care, such as family practice, internal medicine and pediatrics. Dr. Jerry Goldstein, president of the Council of Medical Specialty Societies, said the study would be useful to medical students.

Abusive officer regains rank

STILLWATER, Okla.

A police sergeant who was demoted to patrolman for slapping the boy he said he caught having sex with his teen-age daughter will get his old job back with back pay and benefits. John Jerkins will return Wednesday to the rank of sergeant in the police department's criminal investigations division, where he had worked until he was demoted in April. City Attorney Mary Ann Karns announced today. She said an arbitrator will determine whether Jerkins should be punished for striking the boy. Jerkins had lost $705 per month in pay, plus $350 per month in pension benefits since the demotion. He was assigned duties such as stuffing envelopes and reading reports. Ms. Karns said Jerkins' testimony at a hearing led the city to agree to restore his rank with back pay and benefits. "Although he was agreeable to the reinstatement, other items of concern by both parties prevented a full settlement from being reached," Ms. Karns said. In the request to an arbitrator, the city will seek one week's suspension without pay. Moore will ask for Jerkins to be exonerated and for all references to the discipline to be removed from his personnel file.

De Benedetti resigns as chairman

MILAN, Italy

Carlo De Benedetti resigned Tuesday as chairman of Olivetti and Co. Spa after big investors questioned the computer maker's strategy. Board member Antonio Tesone was named the new chairman, the company said. Tesone for many years has been one of Olivetti's top lawyers. De Benedetti, who has led the company since 1978, also gave up his seat on the board of directors, but was named an honorary chairman. A financier and one of Italy's most powerful industrialists, De Benedetti indirectly controls nearly 15 percent of Olivetti's stock. The company confirmed De Benedetti's resignation in announcing a nearly $300 million loss in the first six months of 1996. Before news of De Benedetti's resignation got out, Olivetti shares finished Tuesday's trading down more than 5 percent on a newspaper report that a number of top managers have left the company. At one point, shares were down by 7 percent. Chief financial officer Luciano La Noce, administrative director Corrado Ariaudo and investor relations head Pierpaolo Cristofori have departed.

Students pursue goals thanks to SISTAR funds

By LESLIE FIELD
News Writer

Saint Mary's senior Caroline Quinlan and Communication Dance and Theater Chairperson Indi Dieckgrase will be presenting an hour-long performance based on their summer experiences with performance improvisation on Thursday and Friday at 8 p.m. in Moreau's Little Theatre.

Quinlan, a sociology major and dance minor, and Dieckgrase were two of four recipients of this year's SISTAR Grant which gives students an opportunity to further research in an academic area of interest with an allotted budget of approximately $3,000 from Saint Mary's.

Quinlan became interested in improvisation through her dance classes and found that it could be further explored through several workshops offered nationwide. With her grant, she attended workshops in northern California and Connecticut this summer. In a workshop she attended, she studied Interplay. "Interplay is a way to take your body, mind and spirit into consideration," Quinlan explained.

Sixteen other people attended this workshop. There was a wide spectrum of ages, Quinlan being the youngest attendant. "Everyone liked the fact that I could give the youthful perspective," Quinlan said.

Performance improvisation draws from personal experience, according to Quinlan. It incorporates the belief that no area should be unattended to if people are to be happy.

Phil Porter, a founder of the Interplay Workshop, first started his idea of modern improvisation and dance in 1979 when he founded a workshop entitled, "Body and Soul." Interplay has become a successful extension of this idea, focusing on what Porter calls Exformation.

Quinlan describes the term as, "a way of releasing all of the information we take in everyday in many forms, be it stories or dance."

Quinlan is hoping for a large turnout this week. "It's fun. You can take a break and see something different. It's good for undergrads to get a look at what they can do with the SISTAR grant," she said.

An article in Tuesday's Observer on the Partial Birth Abortion Ban Act should have said that over 70 percent of a group of registered voters who were polled by the Tarrance Group in December said they were in favor of the ban.

Also, President Clinton's statement should have been clarified to say that he is against the ban because it may be necessary in situations where the pregnancy poses serious adverse health effects for the mother, not just in situations where the mother's life is threatened. The Observer regrets the errors.

HPC may sponsor spirit week

By BRIDGET O'CONNOR

In an effort to increase traffic to the newly redesigned Alumni-Senior Club, a campus wide "Dorm Spirit Day" is being considered by the Hall Presidents Council during the week of the Notre Dame vs. Ohio State football game. Free deejay services or use of the Alumni-Senior Club for events are being considered as prizes for the winning dorm.

On Wednesday, September 25, residents of each dorm would be encouraged to wear apparel with their dorm name on it and stop by the Alumni-Senior Club at some point during the day to register their participation in the event. The dorm with the largest percent participation would win a prize to be determined by the winning hall and the Department of Student Activities, according to Director of Student Activities Joe Cassidy.

The event is being proposed by the Student Activities Committee in an attempt to attract the under 21 community to the Club.

Also discussed at the meeting were the ESPN Gamewatch (of the Notre Dame vs. Vanderbilt football game) in the LaFortune Student Center Thursday night and Fiesta Michiana this weekend at the Morris Civic Auditorium from noon to 8 p.m., honoring the Latin American Community.

Other business this week included the induction of the following committees: unity, communication and 25th anniversary of women at Notre Dame. An announcement was made that the distribution of alcohol guides will take place in the dorms in upcoming weeks.

Streitz

"He very much loved Notre Dame, he loved this place immensely. He loved law school more than most students do, and he certainly loved his friends and classmates," Father John Pearson, one of Streitz's law professors, recalled. Pearson also represented the University at Streitz's funeral Mass June 17.

In his spare time, Streitz was an avid tennis player and had been on Notre Dame's crew team. His interests included college basketball and labor law, and friends report that his family, especially his older sister Kimberly, were very important to him.

To relax, Streitz painted and did wood carvings. He also scoured newspapers relentlessly and could in turn hold conversations in subjects from soccer to political economy. His zest for conversation carried from class discussions to TV talk and encompassed most situations in between. Doug's companions remember him as a person who would frequently play devil's advocate to keep talk active.

Above all, it seems that Doug most loved simply interacting with people.

"Doug was known for being a really outgoing personality, he was a very inclusive person," friend and classmate Christine Rice offered. "He was open both with what he had and with peoples' abilities to share. He understood confidence so well."

While from a teaching perspective Pearson appreciated the energy and vigor Streitz brought to his classes and studies, he couldn't help but notice Streitz's role among his peers.

"Doug was an extremely popular student, which is certainly befitting. He had a great personality, he was bright, and especially he was concerned with his fellow students."

In pursuing his labor law interests, Streitz had been working this summer as a law clerk at the firm of Pepper, Hamilton and Sheetz in Philadelphia.

On June 13, a Thursday evening, Streitz left Cross Keys Airport in a small plane with his cousin, piloted by their friend. According to observers, shortly after takeoff the trio's single engine Beachcraft tilted to one side and sputtered. The craft then slowed in the midair before plummeting nose-first to the ground. Investigators had not yet determined the cause of the crash.

upsetting her and that he was sorry for his actions.

However, Richard Williams, chair of the sociology department, stated that Chavez was on leave from his teaching responsibilities for the spring semester.

According to a source close to the situation, Chavez offered his resignation soon after an investigation was undertaken by the University.

The source commented further that Chavez was allowed to continue his research on campus one day a week for the spring semester and that he was not allowed to have any contact with his previous research assistant.

Chavez was not available for comment. Chavez, 35, had been a member of the University faculty since arriving from Loyola of Chicago in August 1992. According to Williams, he had been awarded tenure in May 1994, three years earlier than the University average of five.

Telecounselors call prospective students to answer their questions about Saint Mary's. High school liaisons visit their own high schools over Fall or Spring Break to talk to interested students about Saint Mary's. Overnight Hostesses share their rooms for 24 hours with students who visit Saint Mary's.

"VISA is a great opportunity for students to gain leadership and communication skills and it requires as much or as little time as a student can give," said Moira Murphy, the assistant director of Admissions and VISA Coordinator.

UCC services include sessions for individuals, couples, and groups; undergraduate and graduate students; and friends and family members of those who are coping with difficulties. Some issues addressed by the center include eating disorders, parenting skills, death, and sexual abuse. In addition to sessions by appointment, the Center also organizes Counselling, a telephone help line run by the Psychology Club. Sundry outreach workshops and programs directed at various psychological issues are offered throughout the academic year.

Of especial help to students are the Center's group sessions, described by Donley to be "small but mighty" in their mission to alert students of like-minded people on campus, who are dealing with similar kinds of issues.

Donley acknowledges the difficulty some students have in making their first visit to the Center. "There's a big difference between going downstairs and getting an antibiotic and coming up here [to the Counseling Center]," she explains. "It is hard for some students to get over the stigma that somebody must be really crazy or weird to get counseling."

The 21 members of the staff have made it a priority to "normalize" the process of seeking therapy, and hope to increase participation in the available and affordable (the charge for each session ranges from $2 to $5) but often underused services offered by the Center.

Donley admits that it is impossible for the Center to rely on conventional word-of-mouth advertising to publicize UCC services. "It is rare that students promote their experience at the University Counseling Center with other students because of the stigma of seeking mental health services," Donley explains while citing that 22% of the students who participated in the group program in 1995-96 had participated the year before.

The list of programs offered for the fall 1996 semester are: Eating Issues Therapy Group; Grief Support Group; Graduate Student Therapy Group; Growing Up in Chaos; Is My Relationship A Healthy One?; and the Personal Growth Group. Additional information is available at the University Counseling Center.

SMC holds career kick-off for seniors

By LORI ALLEN
Saint Mary's News Editor

Although the year has just begun and many of us are barely used to our classes yet, it is never too early to start thinking about the future, especially if you are a senior.

Saint Mary's College will be holding a Senior Career Kick-off today at 4:30 p.m. in Carroll Auditorium to introduce seniors to the wide variety of opportunities that are available to them through the Counseling and Career Development Center, the sponsors of the event. The event is intended to help seniors learn about job search services; receive a career workbook; find out how to sign up for interviews at Saint Mary's and Notre Dame and start a credential file; and get the scoop on the Alumnae Resource Network.

"The Senior Career Kick-off gives seniors the opportunity to be excited about and get involved in all of the activities which are specifically geared towards seniors this year," said Senior Ashley Ratcliffe.

The Counseling and Career Development Center is available to all students, from freshman to seniors, and provides many useful resources. "They were extremely helpful, especially when I was going through stressful times at school," said junior Lisa Gutilla.

Student suspected bomber

Associated Press

TAMPA, Fla.

A theology student charged with trying to carry explosives, ammunition and weapons onto an airplane insists the material was harmless.

However, a police officer said the arsenal still could have been used for a hijacking.

Roman Regman was arrested Saturday at a security checkpoint at Tampa International Airport.

His carry-on luggage contained five homemade explosive devices, bomb-making materials, two hand grenades, a 9mm pistol, about 180 rounds of ammunition and six military knives, police said.

Regman, 21, held a roundtrip ticket to Wilkes Barre-Scranton, Pa., where he was to start his third year of study for the priesthood at St. Tikhon's Seminary in South Canaan, near Scranton.

Regman told WTVT-TV that he was innocent.

"The things I had were not real ... they're used weapons. They were no good. The grenades are dead," Regman said from jail, where he was being held without bail.

However, the police bomb squad director, Sgt. Jim Diamond, said Regman still could have used his arsenal to hijack the plane or commit some other crime when he reached his destination.

And WTVT quoted an unidentified airport official as saying the gun and grenades were usable.

On Sunday, state and federal agents searched the home Regman shared with his mother in Brooksville, about 50 miles north of Tampa.

"They did confiscate some items but I can't discuss that," airport police Lt. Steve Marlovits said Monday.

Airplane producers launch bidding war

By DIRK BEVERIDGE

Associated Press Writer

FARNBOROUGH, England

With combat fighters roaring above, Airbus Industrie and Boeing Co. launched a new war of words Tuesday over which plane maker is selling the most aircraft.

Airbus, the European consortium, told reporters it had racked up $3 billion in new business, including a $1 billion deal to supply 11 new A300-600 freight jets to Federal Express Corp. Airbus announced its deals on the second day of Farnborough International '96, a leading air show where the world's top airplane manufacturers and smaller companies that make their components appear every two years to hawk their products.

They wine and dine airline executives, trying to generate new sales, and push hard to convince others in the industry that they are out front.

Unfortunately for Airbus, its deals were $3.3 billion less than Boeing had come up with a day earlier. So in true air show style, Airbus mounted a full-scale public relations assault on Boeing's numbers.

Airbus senior vice president John Leahy said that when he heard about 25 Boeing sales in Australia, he got on the phone to his Singapore office with the intention of firing somebody — only to learn some of these orders had been placed years ago.

"We look at airplane orders this year — not airplanes that were ordered five years ago and resurrected to make headlines," Leahy told a press conference at the air show.

Boeing spokesman T. Craig Martin acknowledged that some of the orders from the leasing company Ansett Worldwide had been placed years earlier, but said the customer had not wanted them made public until now. The 68 Boeing airplanes on order for $6.3 billion are "all unannounced orders," Martin said.

Airbus does the same thing, Martin insisted, and at times even takes orders off its official books and adds them later to show big, sudden increases in business.

Increases in air travel are leading to more orders for jets, after a manufacturing slump earlier in the decade.

Airbus responded that it has had far fewer cancellations this year, with Boeing leading the way. Airbus also announced firm orders for:

- Three A340-300s, typically valued at about $130 million each, for Cathay Pacific Airways of Hong Kong.
- Eighteen A321s, valued at about $50 million each, to Asiana, a Korean carrier.

Airbus has also signed a memorandum of understanding for six A320s and six A321s, along with six options for each, to Condor Flugdienst, a charter carrier run by Germany's Lufthansa. Using its own brand of hype, Airbus combined all these deals to come up with the figure of $3 billion. The firm orders themselves are worth about $2.4 billion.

As the two big players fire salvos at Farnborough, No. 3 McDonnell Douglas Corp. is hoping to rebound in the commercial aviation business, where its market share has plunged sharply.

Airbus' Leahy showed off a chair with McDonnell Douglas heading ever lower, although company executives said they are hoping for new business this week and plan to be long-term players.

Hussein again factor in U.S. campaign

By JOHN KING
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON
Saddam Hussein was a big factor at the start of the last presidential campaign, all but forgotten in the end. By provoking a military showdown with President Clinton just nine weeks before Election Day, the Iraqi leader might have a more lasting impact this time.

The bipartisan praise for Clinton's overnight cruise missile strikes against Iraqi military targets underscored the political opportunity for the president, who displayed a decisiveness Republicans frequently assert is missing from the administration's foreign policy.

"At 15 or 20 points ahead in the polls, the president doesn't need this kind of risky challenge," said Connecticut Democratic Sen. Joseph Lieberman. "He's shown some guts."

But any prolonged confrontation with Iraq carries huge political risks, the most obvious being the potential for U.S. casualties should Saddam not heed Clinton's warnings and additional strikes be ordered.

And the lukewarm support voiced by Western allies gave Republicans an opening to assert that Clinton has squandered the international prestige built by Ronald Reagan and George Bush, to the point where Saddam had no reservations about ignoring Clinton's warnings.

That latter point is one Republican challenger Bob Dole has repeatedly stressed in his campaign against Clinton. "Saddam Hussein is testing American leadership," he said Sunday.

On Monday, he went on to say Clinton had demonstrated "weak leadership" in dealing with Iraq. But after the overnight missile strikes, Dole awoke Tuesday facing a delicate political dilemma:

How to support the U.S. position in an international crisis while raising questions about Clinton's leadership. "In matters like this, all of us think not as Republicans or Democrats, but as Americans," Dole said in a speech to the American Legion.

Nonetheless, even as he said he supported U.S. forces "without hesitation or reservation," Dole worked in a subtle swipe at the administration. "I trust this is the beginning of decisive action to limit the power and arrogance of Saddam Hussein," Dole said.

When it comes to dealing with Saddam, Dole has a mixed record of his own: On Tuesday he called Saddam a butcher and a tyrant, but back in 1990, just before Iraq invaded Kuwait, Dole opposed efforts to impose economic sanctions against the Iraqi regime, even after Saddam had threatened Israel.

"There might be a chance to bring this guy around," Dole said after an April 1990 meeting with Saddam in Baghdad.

Clinton and Dole spoke by telephone before Dole's Tuesday speech, and aides to both men sought to depoliticize the latest U.S.-Iraq standoff. White House press secretary Mike McCurry said Clinton had forbidden aides from discussing political implications "because that was not part of the decision-making process whatsoever." Echoed Dole spokesman Nelson Warfield: "I don't think it would be appropriate to do a political handicap."

But the calendar alone put the episode front and center in presidential politics.

"This close to a presidential election, a confrontation involving use of force and risk to American military personnel is almost certain to have an impact," former Secretary of State James A. Baker III said in an interview.

Baker knows firsthand the inclination of most voters to make foreign policy a secondary presidential issue in times of peace. He helped President Bush assemble the international coalition against Saddam after the 1990 invasion of Kuwait, and Bush's approval ratings were so high after the Persian Gulf War that many big-name Democrats decided not to challenge the incumbent. But by November 1992, only 8 percent of voters said foreign policy was the biggest factor in their choice, according to exit polls.

In the short term, Baker predicted Clinton would benefit, "because generally speaking the American people come together behind their president in times of military conflict."

The big risk is the possibility of this thing going off in uncharted directions and getting out of control.

Saddam's defiance in the aftermath of Tuesday's strikes only added to the air of uncertainty.

Romania's economic gap glaring

By VIOREL URMA
Associated Press Writer

BUCHAREST, Romania
Behind a wire fence and gates protected by electronic devices and German shepherds, some of Romania's nouveaux riches lead sheltered lives in 20 luxurious tile-roofed villas and bungalows.

Uniformed guards speak into walkie-talkies and suspiciously eye non-residents who drive by the complex, which includes a park and a private club.

Few know exactly who lives at the World Trade Village, an island of mocking opulence that has sprouted in the middle of a wasteland on Bucharest's northern edge. Neighbors derisively call it "Beverly," for Beverly Hills, Calif.

"Let me tell you, sir, that only the second- and third-tier of gold bugs live here," says Mihai Lazar, an electrician. "You won't find big sharks. The richer live even better."

Seven years after the collapse of communism, Romania is a showcase of stark contrasts.

For the few who have gotten wealthy, life is a beautiful dream. For the great majority, it's a daily struggle.

The average monthly salary is 330,000 lei (just over $100) — enough to buy one pair of imported leather shoes, or 37 pounds of top-quality frankfurters.

Not long ago, Romanian tourist agents were advertising nine-day package tours to the Olympics Games in Atlanta for $2,950. It is an unimaginable sum for most Romanians.

"This is what I could afford to buy today: a kilogram (two pounds) of tomatoes, four hen eggs, a piece of cheese and a loaf of bread. Total cost: 4,500 lei ($1.40)," says Lazar, 42, who moonlights as a taxi driver to augment his meager electrician's salary.

Labor protests, galloping inflation and a slowly implemented program to convert state businesses to private ownership have marked the country's jolting transition to a market economy.

About half the country's 23 million people live around the poverty level.

In Bucharest, a metropolis of 2.2 million, there's ample evidence Romania is embracing the market mentality. Shops and streets overflow with goods.

There are elegant restaurants and casinos like the Casa Vernescu. Food is again plentiful, though few can buy what they like. The new elite's flashy cars are everywhere.

Yet a short ride from the city center, paved roads give way to bumpy cobblestone streets lined with decrepit houses. Homeless children beg for spare change.

Newspapers sometimes carry ads from people offering their kidneys for cash. Here and there, a symbol of the new times, palatial villas have sprung up. A three-story splendor outfitted with a rooftop satellite dish and an exterior marble staircase catches the eye of the traveler.

"It belongs to a man who runs a car repair business," says a neighbor. "But he didn't steal (to get rich). He's smart and he fixes only Mercedes, BMWs and Volvos."

Widespread corruption, abuse of power and get-rich-quick schemes are the hot topics of conversation in newspapers and among Romanians.

drawn from Irbil "several hours" before the missile strikes. He also derided U.S. claims that Saddam had violated U.N. resolution 688, which prohibits the Iraqi leader from oppressing his people.

"We did not violate U.N. resolutions," Deputy Prime Minister Tariq Aziz said on CNN. "I challenge the American administration (to say) upon what basis of international law ... this aggression was being justified."

But U.S. and rebel officials said Iraqi forces had not withdrawn from Irbil before the attack and fighting continued south and east toward Sulaymaniyah. Iraq's ruling Revolution Command Council urged the other permanent members of the U.N. Security Council to rein in the United States — and seemed to threaten them if they did not.

Iraq "has adopted several necessary decisions and measures to confront the situation in the light of the cowardly American aggression," the Iraqi council said in a statement carried by the state-run Iraqi News Agency.

The United States and Britain were having trouble gathering support in the Security Council for a resolution condemning Iraq; France and Russia, two other permanent council members, opposed the measure. The council did approve a routine renewal of the sanctions against Iraq, as expected.

Russia condemned the bombing, which it said could send events in the region spiraling "out of control." China urged both sides to show restraint, while Britain said the United States was right to attack after Saddam's army moved north into Kurdish rebel areas with 45,000 soldiers and 300 tanks.

Embracing the coming chill of autumn

Fall tv lineup sends shivers down everyone's spines

Greetings kids! It's fall again, and that means back to school for those of us fortunate enough to have avoided the working world for another year. But even for disgruntled nine-to-fivers like myself, the coming of autumn is symbolic. The weather takes on a bit more palatable air, at least to my taste.

Kirsten Dunne

Halloween is on its way, giving me the rare opportunity to walk about in my everyday clothes without being asked why I'm in costume. And most exciting, perhaps, is the new TV season! Football is back on. The amount of time until the NBA season starts now seems much less excruciatingly long. Back, too, are the nighttime soaps, my personal favorite being Melrose Place (say what you will — I still love this station).

Hopefully, Kindred: The Embraced will also be among the series returning to the nighttime lineup. Not like I need to spend another hour in front of the tube, but I really like the series...even with its ridiculously unrealistic plots. In case you don't know, Kindred is a weekly show about several clans of vampires in Los Angeles. Now, California is actually a very popular hangout for vampires — I'll give Aaron Spelling that much. My problem is this: I can never bring myself to believe that this gang is really a bunch of bloodsuckers!

The show, admittedly, gets some things right. For one, it accurately portrays the process of making a new vampire (which, for you novices, involves a creature of the night taking the large majority of blood from a mortal body, and infusing that body with his or her own blood). Also, there's always a big dilemma for vampires debating whether to bring a mortal into their world; like genuine vampires do, they inevitably face a whole slew of moral issues when they fall in love with mortals. The characters on Kindred, when they're upset, cry blood tears. They move with the preternatural speed with which all vampires are blessed, and have a hypnotic power of persuasion over mortals.

But I have a hard time getting past some of the other things the Kindred cast does, and I'm confident that, if this show has garnered any genuine vampires as viewers, they're rolling over in their graves!

For one thing, these guys and gals can walk around during the day with nary a care. Yeah, right! It's true that very, very old vampires, or those who have drunk the blood of these ancients, are less sensitive to light than others. But they still burn, and they wouldn't think of the casual little lunchtime strolls through the park that the Kindred cast can't seem to go without.

Speaking of lunchtime, the characters on Kindred don't miss many meals — and I'm not talking about the usual liquid-only diet of traditional vampires. Sorry, guys, but I just don't buy it. First off, if a vampire eats or drinks mortal fare, he gets dreadfully ill — or at least, that's the way it is in real un-life. But even accepting that these vampires are exceptional in their ability to eat and to drink non-sanguineous fluids, the question remains: why WOULD they? You see, vampires have many of the same needs and desires as average mortals, but unlike humans, they satisfy them all in one way: sucking blood. If this bunch is extra-conscientious, they don't have to kill people to drink their blood — they can simply wet their whistle a bit and then make the mortal forget the whole matter. And I have seen this practice on Kindred, so I know the characters know how to do it Well, whatever the case, the diet of this group is just a wee bit far-fetched in my book.

Another thing — as I just stated, to a vampire, blood-drinking is the ultimate satisfaction. Nevertheless, the blood suckers on Kindred are always getting busy with each other or with some unsuspecting mortal. When I see this, I wonder what kind of dummies they think we are! Vampires have absolutely no sex drive, okay? And I might mention that, in addition to lacking the desire, the male variety of vampires lack the ability to do the deed. Now, The Observer is the newspaper of an upstanding Catholic University, so I'm not going to expound on this. Rather, I'll leave it to your imagination — which, of course, if you're a good Catholic, won't lead you very far....

Yet another quaint thing about Kindred is the ways vampires on the show die. Yes, folks — for you true amateurs out there, vampires CAN die. But it's not an easy matter to knock one of these guys off, mind you! All myths and propaganda aside, the only way a vampire will truly perish is if he is burned — by sunlight or fire — and his ashes scattered. Yet this show would have you think that you could get rid of a vampire with a mere mortal weapon! And on one show, they drugged an unfortunate bloodsucker and left him in the sun to die. This, notwithstanding that the rest of the gang is seemingly immune to daylight — a bit of a discrepancy there I'd say.

Putting aside all these quirks, the show is more than entertaining enough to keep me as a viewer. But, unfortunately, I'm starting to think that I'm in the minority, as I haven't heard about any season premiere of Kindred. I guess the producers' failure to educate themselves on the undead proved too exasperating for other viewers. Alas! I'll live ... not forever, but live nonetheless.

“He is so good at grieving! He wears woe as others wear velvet; sorrow flatters him like the light of candles; tears become like jewels. Well, none of that trash works with me.”

Oh yeah — one more thing. I figured it was about time to select a new name for my column, seeing as though it's been heading in a new direction as of late. And without getting too deep, let me say that I suppose my column has changed because I have. How, you may ask? Incidentally, I feel this is best summarized by an immortal. My favorite vampire of all time, Lestat de Lioncourt, once reflected on his beloved Louis — who reminds me much of my former self — as follows: “[H]e is so good at grieving! He wears woe as other wear velvet; sorrow flatters him like the light of candles; tears become like jewels. Well, none of that trash works with me.” Me neither, Lestat — at least not anymore!

May you all prosper in the new academic year.

Saint Mary's W

By LESLIE FIELD

They are looking for a few good students. Tough. Proud. Not afraid of long chicken nugget lines or overdue books. They are campus job employers and they have hired some of the finest campus workers for the 1996-97 year that Saint Mary's has ever seen.

Here is a look at the top ten on-campus jobs for the upcoming academic year at Saint Mary's:

10. Dining Hall Worker. There is a top ten list in and of itself within the octagonal walls of the Saint Mary's Dining Hall. Senior English major Sue Dechatelet has made an on campus career out of her work at the dining hall. And why shouldn't she? The benefits alone are enough to make any student enjoy her twenty hours a week re-stocking the infamous salad bar containing the ever popular garbanzo beans and refilling the cereal bins every morning. The hours aren't bad either, according to Dechatelet. "They are very accommodating and always work around my schedule. Sometimes it is tiring, but I really don't mind it. If you have to work, it's not a bad place to be."

9. Front Desk Worker. Hope you have lots of reading to do. Most students who we polled liked their jobs at the front desk because they were typically within the confines of their hall and did not require a great deal of laborious work. Front desk worker Cara Calcagno enjoys the job because, "I can just hang out and talk to all my friends. I have time to study and can remain an active participant in my hall, partaking in many of its activities throughout the year plus I can always scam pizzas off the Papa John's guy when things are slow."

8. Library Worker. This is another opportunity to study and relax. Students typically enjoy the quiet environment. They find it peaceful and highly academic. It is not, however, as cushy as the Saint Mary's Cushwa-Leighton library if you tell Junior Anne Geisler comments, "I have a perfect job, but many other library workers are trying to balance my work and student life."

7. College Relations Office. From enjoying her job in the college relations office to getting a great deal about how the office operates, guess I have been doing a lot of field work. But, hey, these kids are organized and much more aware of their surroundings. This job also gives students a chance to see how Saint Mary's is being run, what sorts of decisions are being made and how their school keeps up with the times.

6. O'Laughlin Theatre assistant. Filled with quality entertainment, a mix of black and whites, and here's the kicker, a real life, hand held, two way walkie-talkie.

5. RA. The power. The glory. This year will be a particularly challenging one for the resident advisors, as they must enforce regulations and the always problematic RA's are a very fair and helpful group. Courtney McEvers. "I always liked being an RA. They were a trip! They were always giving me advice...and the pizza parties were always great."

4. ECDC. These students have a good deal of time early in the morning

Use the following key when reading the job descriptions below.

! means this is a fun job $ means this is a well-paying job
* means this is an easy job # means this job provides plenty of study-time

#* The Copy Shop

Some students work at the Copy Shop to earn spending money. The 12-hour per week job does not consume too much study time. It involves making copies and sending faxes.

#* ND Video

ND Video offers convenient hours for students from 5-11 pm. At 8-10 hours per week, this job provides plenty of study time and pays the standard wage of $5.95 per hour for students to use for school or miscellaneous expenditures. The job includes taking rentals and making sure that everything is organized.

#*! The Huddle

At The Huddle, students make and serve food and ring-up customers for the standard $5.95 hourly wage. It is an easy job as well as an enjoyable one, if you don't mind working around food. And 8 hours per week leaves a sufficient amount of time to study.

#* Swimming Pool

This 10-hr./wk. job does not steal study time since shifts are offered during the day and on weekends. At $5.95 per hour, it provides a nice sum of money to use at school. A swimming pool attendant need only check the ID's of people coming into the pool and answer any questions that people might have. The pool is a popular place among student employees!

$! Resident Assistant

While being an R.A. is not an easy job because of the responsibilities it entails, it is highly sought after due to its pay (free room and board) and its enjoyment level. R.A.'s spend one to two nights a week "on duty". This means that on these days they must be available from 7 pm until 7 am to solve/answer any problems or questions that arise. During this time they must occasionally make rounds to make sure that everything is in order. Otherwise they are responsible for their section. Their study time can be limited during nights when they are on duty, but they choose these nights around tests. Job satisfaction for R.A.'s comes from the new relationships they develop and the interesting stories they encounter.

#*$ The Library

This is a coveted job by many student workers at Notre Dame. Matthew Dull works ten hours per week

Crowd favorite Edberg advances into quarterfinals

Associated Press

NEW YORK

In his own quiet, yet fiery way, Edberg surged into the quarterfinals Tuesday with a fist-pumping 6-7 (7-2), 7-6 (7-2), 6-4, 6-4 victory over Britain's Tim Henman.

Not since Connors' amazing run to the 1991 semifinals here at age 39 — the year Edberg won for the first time — has a player been such a sentimental favorite with the crowd.

He's only 30, but he's playing in his 54th consecutive and final Grand Slam event. They roar for him on each winning point, clap for him when he's down. They've been doing it all tournament, and they can be expected to do it Thursday when he plays No. 4 Goran Ivanisevic.

"The crowd was behind me once again," said Edberg, a little surprised because he never heard such cheers here in his prime when he was respected but not quite so revered. "It does help, but at the same time you need to play good tennis in the match to get them behind you. As long as you win the last one, that's what counts."

Edberg had the crowd screaming for him at the end against Henman by sweeping the final 12 points. Edberg, who hadn't gone this far at the Open since winning it for the second straight time in 1992, now must find a way to cope with the brutal serves of Ivanisevic.

The Croatian served 20 aces — one at 130 mph — to reach the Open quarters for the first time with a 6-4, 3-6, 6-3, 7-6 (7-2) victory over unseeded Andrei Medvedev of the Ukraine.

"Now starts the real tough matches," Edberg said.

There was nothing tough about Monica Seles' 48-minute, 6-0, 6-3 crushing of Amanda Coetzer in the women's quarterfinals. Coetzer didn't even come within a point of winning a game until she finally won one to make it 3-1 in the second set. Coetzer won only five points in the first set.

"Throughout the tournament, I always have one bad set" in each match, Seles said, thinking of her second set against Coetzer as bad. "At this stage they can take advantage of it. I have to start to focus on every set. (Coetzer) is a great fighter, one of the best. It could have been really close."

It wasn't.

Seles, No. 2, next goes to the semifinals Friday against the player she beat in last year's semis — No. 4 Conchita Martinez.

"I don't think she's unbeatable at all," Martinez said optimistically. She has lost all eight of her matches against Seles.

Martinez fought off three set-points in a tiebreaker, then cruised to a 7-6 (8-6), 6-0 victory over Linda Wild.

Edberg had a tough enough time in his 3-hour, 5-minute match against Henman, a quarterfinalist at Wimbledon. This was their first match, though they practice often against each other in England, where they both live.

The loudest roar of all came in the second-set tiebreaker when Edberg won the most exhilarating point of the match. The Brit launched a backhand lob that looked like a winner, but Edberg scampered back, chased it down and sent back a defensive lob that seemed to take forever to come down before it landed in the corner.

Henman had plenty of time to wait for it, and he sent back an overhead to Edberg's baseline. Edberg slugged a forehand, only to see Henman drive a backhand crosscourt. Again it looked like a winner, and again Edberg pulled out a little magic — a running backhand into the corner that Henman couldn't touch.

"That's what it takes to win a match," Edberg said. "It was one of the great points of the match. These are the points that lift your game. That's what tennis is all about — getting winners when you need them."

That shot gave Edberg a 6-2 lead in the tiebreaker, and he quickly closed it out with a service winner. Though they played two more close sets, Edberg never was in trouble again.

For the third time this tournament, Edberg found himself facing an opponent with an injury. In his opening upset of Wimbledon champion Richard Krajicek, the Dutchman took a timeout for a nosebleed. In Edberg's second match, Bernd Karbacher retired in the fourth set with a strained left hamstring. This time, Henman needed treatment for a groin pull in the fourth set.

Maybe Ivanisevic should worry about what peril will befall him, though he didn't sound too concerned.

"I say that if I reach the second week I can do a lot of damage in this tournament," Ivanisevic said. "That's what I'm doing now. I'm playing better and better every match. Whoever wants to beat me, the guy has to play unbelievable."

"I got my confidence back. First time in my life I believe I can do really well here."

Although he made only 48 percent of his first serves, Ivanisevic double-faulted only once. Medvedev served 12 aces and six double-faults.

"He's improved so much," Edberg said of Ivanisevic. "He's so much more confident than before."

Asked if would defend the title next year if he wins, Edberg replied in his typically deadpan way: "I'll come back and watch next year."

It doesn't get any better than this!

■ WOMEN'S SOCCER

Players Honored

Observer Staff Report

The Irish had honors bestowed on two of their women's soccer players this week. Senior Amy VanLaecke and freshman Jenny Streiffer were named BIG EAST Players of the Week on Monday. VanLaecke, who scored five goals this weekend, was named BIG EAST Offensive Player of the Week. In the Irish's victory over Providence this Saturday, VanLaecke recorded a hat trick, tying a record for most goals scored in a half. On Sunday, in the victory over Boston College, VanLaecke scored two more goals. Streiffer was named BIG EAST Rookie of the Week for her nine-point performance against Providence. She scored two goals and had five assists to set a new Notre Dame record with nine points. Also she tied an Irish record with three assists in a half. Streiffer also registered three assists in the first half of the game against Providence and in the second half against Boston College.

Irish forward Amy VanLaecke received Big East Offensive Player of the Week honors after she tallied five goals en route to Irish road victories over Providence and Boston College last weekend.

Drive. Intensity. Those aren't words you're likely to see in many course requirements. Then again Army ROTC is unlike any other elective. It's hands-on excitement. ROTC will challenge you mentally and physically through intense leadership training. Training that builds your character, confidence and decision-making skills. Again words other courses seldom use. But they're the credits you need to succeed in life. ROTC is open to freshmen and sophomores without obligation and requires about five hours per week. Register this term for Army ROTC.

■ SMC VOLLEYBALL

New era of Belles leaders trample Manchester

By SHANNON RYAN
Sports Writer

For volleyball captain Kelly Meyer, the role of leadership hasn't come easily. The Saint Mary's junior has been accustomed to relying on the guidance, communication, and experience of upperclassmen.

But not this year. In her home opener Tuesday night, Meyer lead her team to a victory in three straight sets over Manchester College.

Meyer now finds herself leading SMC's volleyball team which is loaded with a young crew of seven freshmen, one sophomore and only two juniors.

Meyer, the 5'6" setter, commented, "It's been hard to slip into the leadership role. Juniors should be experienced in communication."

As co-captains, sophomore

Laura Schreeg and Meyer find the difficulties of this transition fading with each game.

Meyer is not the only one who notices the part of captain coming more easily. Head coach Julie Schroeder-Biek is also pleased to observe many of her players who are not natural leaders stepping into the role nicely.

With a majority of freshmen, many of them have helped by filling the role of leader as well. These first year students were at the tops of their high school volleyball teams and have brought their team work skills with them to Saint Mary's.

Each member contributes to the team in a variety of ways. As their coach stated, "They compliment each other well in their weaknesses and in their strengths."

Freshmen Courtney Love's

outstanding communication talents, Mary Rodovich's and Melissa Miller's powerful serves, and Katie Candiano's ability to come off the bench well are a few of the many benefits to the young team. Although they are still getting to know each other, they possess the talents vital to win.

Luckily, Meyer, along with the rest of the team, did not appear to have any glitches in the leadership department last night in their battle against Manchester.

Finishing 2-2 in the Calvin College Tournament last weekend, the Belles defeated the Spartans in three straight sets last night during their first home game. The scores of 15-11, 15-6, and 15-9 did not, however, reflect the excellent level at which they performed.

The Belles started off slowly in the first set, but later took a 10-3 lead. The Belles reached a plateau at the score of 14-6 and allowed Manchester to score five unanswered points. Finally, SMC took control and scored that fifteenth point to win the first set 15-11.

Rodovich led off serving the second set urging the team to a 7-0 start. Rodovich, an outside attacker, said they "pulled themselves together" in the middle set.

"This was our best playing," Rodovich said. "The motivation was on our side and we were going to keep it there."

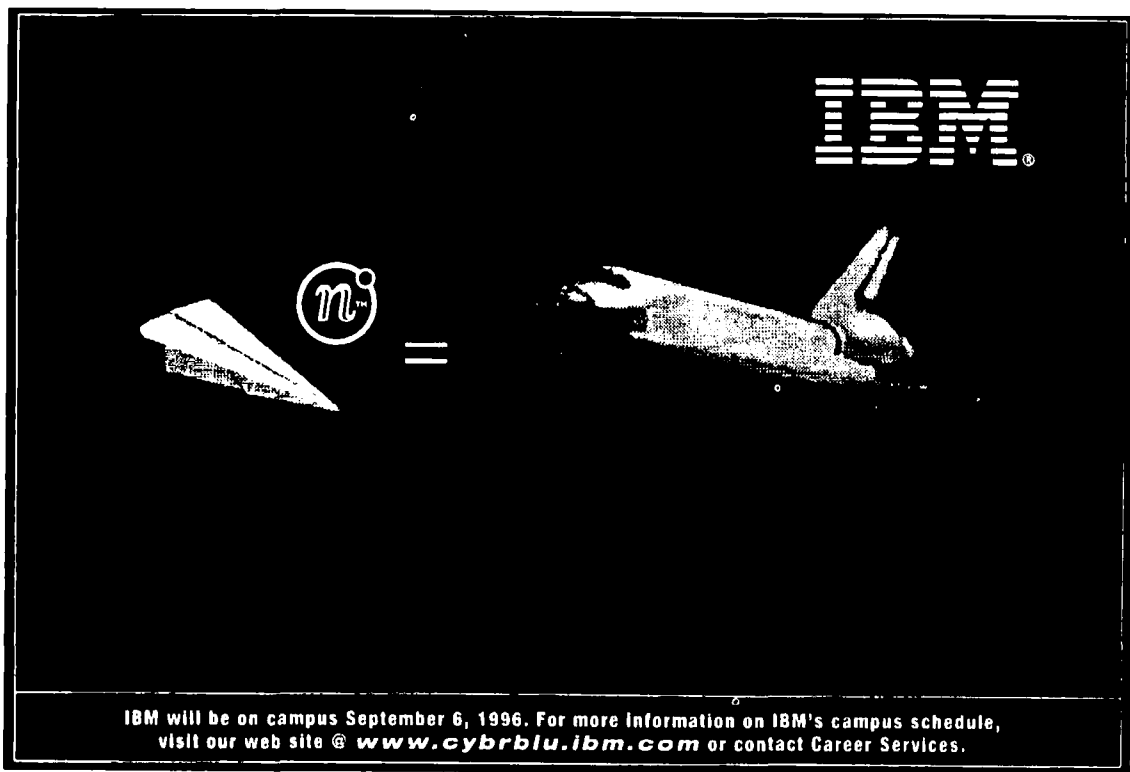

Not only was Saint Mary's playing exceptionally, but Manchester was not doing much to deter them. The Spartans had major problems with the fundamentals of the game and had to focus just to get the ball over the net. Saint Mary's easily claimed the second set 15-6 and lead the game 2-0.

A seven point deficit is not what SMC had in mind while starting off the third set after playing so well in the first two. Nevertheless, this was the reality just minutes into the set.

Struggling with serve reception and passing, the Belles realized they needed to apply all they've learned in practice and the preseason if they wanted to win in straight sets. The Belles concentrated and came back from a 8-1 deficit to win 15-9.

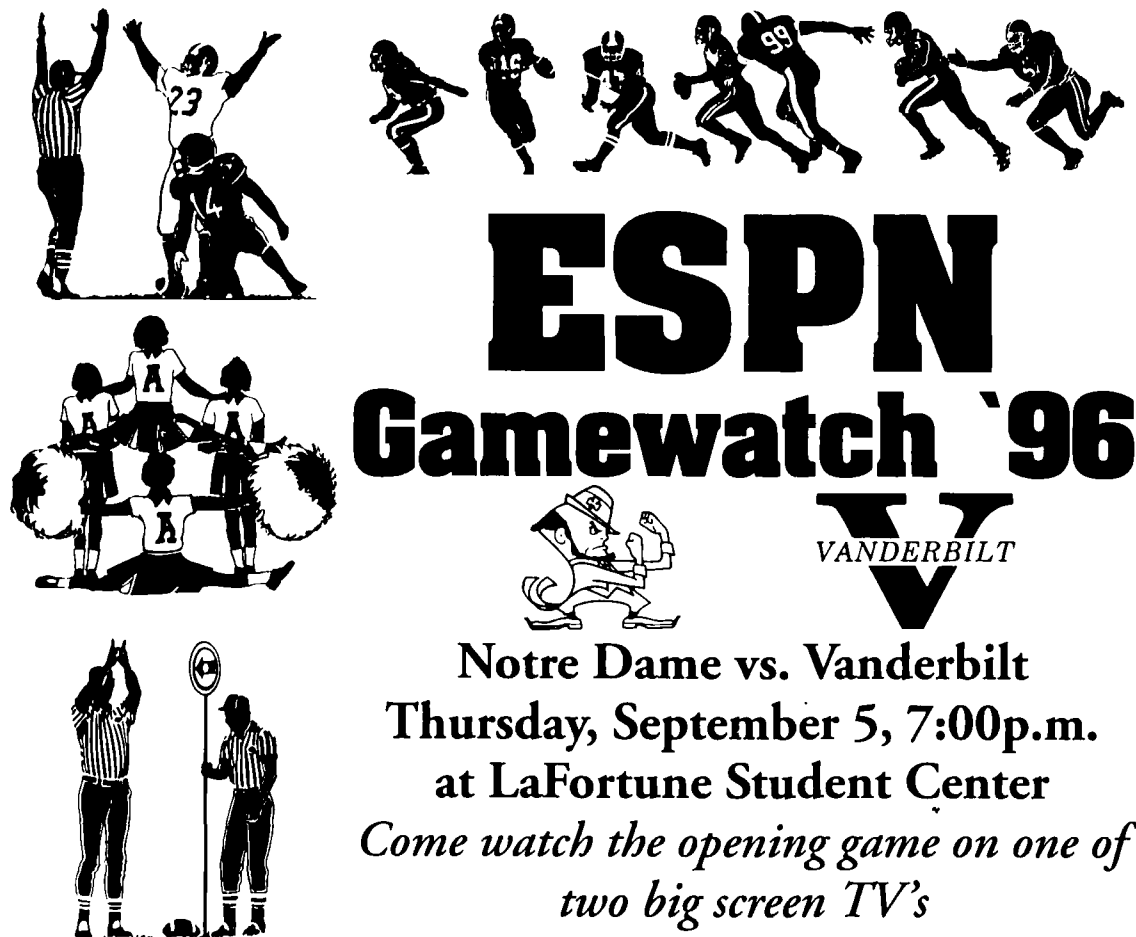

The team hopes their success will carry over into their weekend tournament at Hanover College. With great versatility and depth, they are sure to encounter many more wins like their 3-0 victory against Manchester.

IBM will be on campus September 6, 1996. For more information on IBM's campus schedule, visit our web site @ www.cybrblu.ibm.com or contact Career Services.

end) regardless."

There has been no firm indication of how long Kinder will be off the field.

"The plan right now is just to miss Vanderbilt," he explained. "I just want to get some good treatment."

Kinder lit up the Commodores' defense in the 1995 contest for 110 yards on 17 carries and scored the first Irish touchdown of the game. Farmer and Denson also recorded a combined 106 yards on 26 carries in the game.

Kinder tore a medial collateral ligament in his right knee during the team's first practice at the 1995 Fiesta Bowl, forcing the tailback to end his sophomore season on the sidelines.

have been in the Final Four three of the past four years. So they may have a mental advantage because they have beaten great teams and we cannot say that."

Lack of confidence does not seem to be a problem with sophomore middle blocker Lindsay Treadwell who simply stated that "We have to play like we know we can. We know we're good enough to beat them."

Another one of coach Brown's concerns is the depth and strength of Stanford from top to bottom.

"They don't have just one player we can key on. They are very balanced so we can't take as many gambles."

Making things more complicated are injuries. Out for the Irish are junior setter Carey May (dislocated shoulder) and senior outside hitter Kristina Ervin (sprained ankle). Filling in at setter will be Jaime Lee and senior Jennifer Briggs will start at outside hitter.

Rounding out Brown's lineup will likely be captain Jenny Birkner and Angie Harris at the outside hitter slots while Treadwell and freshman Mary Leffers will fill the middle. Jennifer Rouse, a 6-5 senior, will also see action in the middle to take advantage of her physical size and blocking ability.

Birkner, Lee, Harris, and Leffers are all coming off all-tournament performances in this past weekend's Shamrock Classic.

man year Sharpley and Folkl were the top two recruits in the nation and both have experience with the US National Team. Folkl, a 6-2 outside hitter, earned NCAA Freshman of the Year honors in 1993, and was the first alternate on the US Olympic volleyball team this summer in Atlanta.

Notre Dame will look to make things tough for Sharpley, their setter, as she is the focus of their attack. In her sophomore campaign she was one of Stanford's tri-captains and the coaching staff considers her as good a setter as Stanford has ever had including three former All-Americans.

The Irish will definitely have to be on top of their game to overcome the Cardinal. One key for the Irish will be communication and simply believing that they can win, as Stanford's advantages over the Irish are in the mental game.

"We have to have really good communication, and we need to compete harder than we have so far," commented junior setter Jaime Lee. "We also should be knowledgeable of who they have and we need to focus on taking care of the ball on our side of the net."

Brown's concern lays in the intangible aspect of the game.

"We need to believe that we can beat a top five team. They win on the road against a Big East opponent (something they failed to do all of last year), they have played well defensively, registering two shutouts and giving up only 8 shots in 180 minutes of play, and they have allowed their talented, young players to gain the experience that will be necessary if they hope to compete against the best of the Big East this season.

Senior midfielder Konstantin Koloskov scores in last night's shutout.

We're cheap — but we're not easy.

We're The University of Alabama, and we're looking for a few good MBAs.

The flagship of an excellent business school, our MBA program is nationally ranked for high quality and cost-effectiveness. Check out our references at right.

What's more, a booming international business community (Mercedes, JVC, British Steel) and outstanding computer, research, and classroom facilities make a UA business degree an especially great value.

Our admission requirements? Like a lot of things about us, they're a little different:

- Most MBA programs require several years' work experience — we want you right out of college.
- Most programs prefer business majors — our students come from a wide range of backgrounds, and we like it that way. (Liberal-arts majors welcome here.)

We're looking for bright, motivated students — especially those hoping to combine academic challenges with hands-on experience.

If your grades and GMAT scores tell us you have potential, you can get an early start on the education — and the career — you want.

"The University of Alabama offers one of the most low-cost, sought-after MBAs. But this doesn't come at the cost of academics."

YOUR HOROSCOPE

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Your creativity and originality will know no bounds! The right agent can help you capitalize on your innovative ideas. Although career and financial issues dominate in the months just ahead, romance will become a top priority early in 1997. A spiritual experience next spring leads to more fulfilling personal relationships. Your social life accelerates. Reach out to people in a position to help a cause close to your heart. Appeal to their finer instincts.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DAY: swimmer Dawn Frazer, dancer Mitzi Gaynor, baseball player Ken Harrelson, composer Anton Bruckner.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Battling restraints takes courage and persistence. You learn a valuable lesson despite feeling hemmed in. Ignore a power play at the office. Turning in a stellar performance will protect your position.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Self-doubts disappear when you handle a personal matter successfully. Associating with confident people boosts your own self-esteem. A playful prank could backfire.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A backlog of work awaits you. Enlisting the cooperation of your co-workers will speed progress. Put a disturbing dream aside. A blind date could turn out better than expected.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You will need patience and persistence to get through this eventful day. Eliminate non-essential trips and tasks, then concentrate on one project at a time.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Security and stability hold great appeal now. Friends help you find your life's work. A long-cherished dream will

Irish dominate in home opener

ND blanks

Sports Writer

In their first game of the season the men's soccer squad came out flying and scored a goal early in the first half. However, they seemed to lose their intensity following the goal and gave up a few shots that could have possibly been prevented. But such was not the case in last night's home opener at Alumni Field.

The Irish faced regional rival Northwestern and completely dominated the Wildcats from the opening whistle to the final horn en route to a 4-0 victory. The Blue and Gold are now 2-0 and preparing for Big East and national powerhouse St. John's who will invade Alumni Field at 7:30 p.m. on Saturday evening.

Freshman defender Matt

McNew opened the scoring at 24:36 in the first half on an assist from fellow defender Peter Gansler. The senior tri-captain lobbed a beautiful 30 yard ball from the right side of the field to McNew, on the left, who one-timed the pass into the back of the net. Wildcat goalkeeper Matt Russ was injured on the play, but would return to start the second half.

Just over three minutes later, at 27:40, the Irish struck again with the use of some excellent team play. McNew initiated the play, feeding a streaking Scott Wells on the left sideline. The senior darted toward the goal with the ball and exchanged passes with veteran midfielder Konstantin Koloskov before centering a crisp pass across the penalty box to fellow senior Tony Capasso. The right midfielder blasted a shot past back-up goalie Zach Adams and off the left post into the cage.

The Wildcats registered their only shot on goal very late in the first half, but some good defensive hustle by sophomore stopper Matt Johnson created a tough angle on what otherwise would have been a certain goal. Sophomore goalkeeper Greg Velho made the diving stop and from that point the Irish began to cruise.

Head coach Mike Berticelli commented on the value of this game for his young team.

"This was a good opportunity to use a lot of players," said Berticelli, "especially the young guys."

Don't assume for one second, however, that the team sacrifices anything by using its first and second year players.

"Our freshman are all capable of contributing," noted the coach.

And contribute they did.

Freshman forward Andrew Aris came off the bench to unselfishly assist on a goal scored by Koloskov early in the second half and later put the nail in the Wildcats' coffin with an unassisted goal of his own. Aris seemed to be all over the field late in the game and displayed terrific ability to create opportunities for himself and others.

Meanwhile, freshman Peter Bandera and sophomore Phil Murphy followed the example set in the first half by maintaining the defensive intensity in the midfield. Rarely did a Northwestern midfielder find himself unmarked in the Irish half of the field.

These efforts did not escape the Berticelli's watchful eyes.

"Bandera really helped off the bench," commented Berticelli. "I was also very happy with Phil Murphy in the midfield. He did some great things tonight."

With a record of 2-0, the Irish seem to have accomplished everything that they set out to do in the first two games of the season. They have recorded a

Setters look to upset

By JOE CAVATO
Sports Writer

Tonight at 7 p.m. all eyes of the collegiate volleyball community will turn their attention to the JACC when the second ranked Stanford Cardinal and the sixth ranked Irish clash for an early season battle.

The Irish are poised for an upset as they have compiled a 69-4 record at the Joyce under head coach Debbie Brown, including 41 of their last 42. In their last three matches with the 1992 and 1994 national champions, the Irish have come up short so this will provide the Irish with their first real test of the year.

The Irish offense had a wrench thrown into the works yesterday as senior tailback Randy Kinder, projected to start against the Vanderbilt Commodores tomorrow night, has been sidelined with a pulled right quadriceps injury.

Despite fighting off the nagging injury suffered at Culver Military Academy for two weeks, the running back finally succumbed on the astroturf in Loftus on Sunday.

"It's my right quadriceps that's been sore," Kinder explained. "The way I see it, and the way (trainer) Jim Russ sees it, is that it is more preventative than anything. I'd rather miss one game than miss six."

Kinder

Kinder's injury brings into question the placement of sophomore Autry Denson at split end. Moved to free up space for Kinder and senior Robert Farmer, Denson still would have found time in the backfield against the Commodores. Due to the injury, Farmer will be moved into the starting role with Denson assisting at tailback.

"Anytime you lose a player like Randy, it's going to hurt you," evaluated sophomore fullback Jamie Spencer. "But we have guys who have got to step up who have the toughness and aggressiveness necessary."

Kinder offered no insight on how his injury might affect the game plan, but holds confidence in his running mates.

"I have no idea how this affects our offense," Kinder said. "But Robert (Farmer) has been there and he is completely capable. Plus, Autry will play both (tailback and split
