Bookstore preps to sell on-line By ANNE MARIE

MATTINGLY Assistant News Editor

Starting next semester, Notre Dame students will be able to avoid large crowds and long lines by ordering and purchasing books through a new 'virtual bookstore' website.

The site, located at http://www.nd.bookstore.com, allows students to select books by providing the department name, course number, and preference regarding new or used books.

"This is something we will start to promote for the upcoming spring term," explained James O'Connor, director of the bookstore. "[The site] will be updated on a weekly basis. As soon as we get the orders we'll put them on.

Patrons will be able to pay by providing credit card information, and bookstore employees will gather and store orders until students can pick them up.

The service will be available at no additional cost, according to O'Connor, who speculated that free delivery to residence halls may be an option in the future.

"[Delivery] is one of the possibilities to work toward as we develop the program," he said.

Despite its convenience, O'Connor does not think that the new service will reduce the number of students who visit the store.

He said that many students are selective about their used books and added that the new store will have an atmosphere that attracts students for rea-

The doors opened at 11:55. One thousand students marched in, and each took his allotted place at the table, standing at his chair. At twelve o'clock a bell signal called all to attention. A priest said grace. A bell struck, and all sat down. A red light flashed in the dining hall and another in the kitchen. This signaled to waiters to bring in the soup ...

This week a reborn South Dining Hall welcomed students following nearly 12 months of renovations. The cdifice's new design attempts to blend old, Gothic character with modern accouterments.

Fradition & Technology

This description in a 1928 magazine recounts a typical meal in what was then known as the Dining Halls Building. Upon its completion in 1927, the structure now known as the South Dining Hall was viewed as a prototype for what a university dining hall should be: a model in precision and order, with every detail premeditated to ensure perfect service.

Previous to the recent renovations, the South Dining Hall had undergone surprisingly few changes in its 70-year history. What had changed was the world outside. The recent construction of several residence halls in the vicinity of the South Dining Hall required University officials to reevaluate the food service available to this increasingly populated area of campus.

MULTICULTURAL BEAT MSA fills plate for upcoming academic year

By BRIDGET O'CONNOR Associate News Editor

An on-campus cultural center highlighted a docket of new undertakings presented at the Office of multicultural Student Affairs' (OMSA) Coalition Council meeting last night.

"Over the summer, the office did some research about establishing a multicultural center on campus, said Kevin Iluie, assistant director of OMSA. Noting that such an idea can "be a very touchy issue with some students on campus," Huie said, "I am convinced that what is written in here as a proposal will convince anyone that having a multicultural center on campus is a good idea."

While passing out copies of the proposal, Huie added: "There has not been one person that has gotten this that has disagreed with what is in here.'

The plan for the center was based on an example at the University of California at San Diego. Huie said that the center would not be designed solely for underrepresented groups or to provide favoritism in any way: rather, the center is designed to incorporate the interests of majority groups as well, he said.

"If there is any indication that there is a lack of support for the center to take place then we will not pursue it," Huie said.

OMSA is looking for signatures of support from individuals, as well as group endorsements for the proposal

Iris Outlaw, director of OMSA, added that the plan was designed to account for the diverse capacities the office has assumed.

"The way the office has been operating anyway is in the capacity of a center," she said.

Huie thought that the creation of a center would provide a more friendly environment for student involvement. He pointed out that a crosscultural center would be more conducive to participation than OMSA.

Tony Reid, a 1997 Notre Dame graduate and co-founder of Onyx Industries, Inc. (OII) offered a fundraising opportunity to student groups.

"An opportunity has arisen that I'm going to bring to you," he announced. Reid explained that he is looking for an organization or group to help facilitate the sale of his company's calendars. Regis Philbin will promote the calenders by featuring computer's memory, make the perfect martini and cut off the tip of your cigar. A virtual computer salvation. Hardly,

Programmers create fascinating programs which perform almost any task, and while our favorite development guys over at the Redmond, Wash. computer Mecca might be able to invent "app" after "app" which con-tinue to wow our technological senses, they will never be able to accomplish the goal of creating a better computer user. Exhibit 1 Ñ I had the opportunity to work at the proverbial "Evil Empire" (Microsoft Corp.) this summer. Upon my departure, I was given a copy of Windows 98 as a gift. "Wow," I thought. I could now soup-up my 2-year-old Dell, which has the propensity to crash and/or scream incomprehensible computer-speak warnings (at which I con-sequently click "OK" and ignore) at very inopportune times, i.e. when on page 27 of that 30-page paper and have forgotten to save the file.

The installation seemed simple enough Ñ insert the CD, click "Upgrade to Windows 98" and wait for about 30 minutes. Of course, being the quintessential Arts and Letters major, I decided that this was too simple \tilde{N} that I would show those CS majors a thing or two. Oh yeah, they can write code, but can they do anything else? I had been assembling their computers for my first two years of college. Why shouldn't I be able to do one of those things they'd always talked about Ñ reformat the hard drive. From what I gathered, one formats his or her HD in order to clear out the "registry file" (another term that I had overheard the techies talking about), to supposedly make my PC light years faster.

So I backed up my files, exited to DOS, typed in "format c:," and pressed enter. At the very moment that "formatting one percent complete" appeared on my monitor, the word "boot disk" came to mind. Damn! See, without a boot disk, your computer is basically a very expensive box which is able to display "replace non-system disk and press enter" on the screen, and not much else.

Why didn't I create the sacred boot disk before hand? Well, I didn't really think about it. When you choose to destroy your computer, the computer doesn't question. It simply shoots itself in the head without asking if you have notified the paramedics in advance. Total submission — great. Thus, three days, five hours of work and a call to Microsoft later, I now have Windows 98 installed on my computer. Was it worth it? Well, let's just say that I am typing this article on "Notepad" since the upgrade doesn't come with Word. I cannot e-mail it to my editors because when the rest of my computer was incinerated, so to was my copy of Eudora. Windows 98 is just a zippy typewriter. My life is complete.

Be careful before you get charged up

As new students flooded the West Mall for the first day of classes, representatives from MasterCard, Visa and American Express offered free T-shirts and calling cards in exchange for filling out an application.

But students might regret those free T-shirts when they are faced with extensive credit card bills, debt counselors warn. Lonnie Williams, a representative for the Consumer Credit Counseling Services (CCCS), said she counseled 40 UT students this year because they had fallen into serious debt problems since January.

"Too few students understand how or why to use credit responsibly," Williams said. "Developing bad credit habits now can impact their ability to obtain loans, credit, jobs or housing for years in the future.'

UT Legal Services offers free advice and assistance to students who want to negotiate with creditors or who need advice concerning collection agencies. Legal Services refers employed students who need financial advice to CCCS, which acts as a trustee for such students.

Few schools ban alcohol on campus

LEXINGTON, Ky.

Last fall, Louisiana State University and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology experienced a loss when two fraternity pledges died of alcohol poisoning. This tragedy caused many universities and colleges across the country to tackle the issue of alcohol abuse. UK's response: a new policy that took effect over the summer. The policy mandates alcohol-abuse education for firsttime offenders, fines and probation for secondary offenders and suspension for people who violating the policy three times. Compared with its benchmark institutions, UK's policy is a bit more severe. Although the University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill and West Virginia University are looking into tightening restrictions on alcohol use on campus, none of UK's 11 benchmarks have campuses that are completely dry, but all have policies that prohibit the consumption of alcohol in the open on campus premises.

Phi Kappa Theta member dies

AMES, Iowa An Iowa State student was found dead Monday night in his apartment at 117 Beach Ave., according to Ames Police. Ames Police said no foul play is suspected, but the investigation is still ongoing. Kiran Bavikatte, 23, junior in pre-architecture from Bettendorf, was found unresponsive on the floor of a locked room in an apartment owned by Phi Kappa Theta, according to the police reports. Bavikatte was a member of the fraternity. The report also said Bavikatte had a history of epileptic seizures. Reports show the police department received a call at 7:53 p.m. from the Phi Kappa Theta house, 2110 Lincoln Way. Chris Rickert, senior in civil engineering and Phi Kappa Theta president, made the call. Police, the fire department and an ambulance were dispatched at 7:58 p.m. and arrived at the scene at 8:01 p.m. The report said a police officer concluded Bavikatte was dead soon after arriving at the residence.

It also helps them formulate a payment plan. "[With CCCS], creditors are more willing to negotiate with interest and fees, which make it the hardest to get out of debt," Williams said.

She said students get into financial trouble because they do not realize that paying only the minimum balance doesn't decrease their debt. Instead, interest accrues and the overall debt actually increases.

"The average time it takes to pay off a $5,000 debt with just paying the minimum or even a little more will take 15 years," Williams said. "Students who only pay the minimum can owe more than they make the first year out of college. That's a problem.'

Larry Liu, a psychology senior, said he learned this lesson from his first credit card. "My first credit card was so convenient," Liu said. "I always treated my friends to dinner thinking they'd pay me back. But I had nothing to show but a huge debt.'

Williams said students should be most careful with credit cards that have the widest range of spending possibilities with low minimum payments.

Protesters call for student's expulsion

BERKELEY, Calif.

Protesters from Southern California, joined by UC Berkeley students and Bay Area citizens, gathered on Sproul Plaza yesterday to demand the immediate expulsion of sophomore David Cash from UC Berkeley. Led by the Southern Californians who drove to Berkeley Tuesday night, nearly 100 protesters waved signs and chanted while various speakers used a bull-horn to censure the student. The protesters claim that Cash is partially responsible for the death of 7-year-old Sherrice Iverson. In May 1997, Iverson was allegedly strangled to death in a casino outside Las Vegas by 20-year-old Jeremy Strohmeyer, a close friend of Cash's. The protesters said that because of Cash's actions surrounding the incident, he should not be allowed to attend UC Berkeley. Cash has said that he witnessed Strohmeyer with the girl shortly before her death and that Strohmeyer confessed the killing to him.

The final ASUU elections have been over for more than four months. The stories about the elections, however, never seem to end. Luke Timmins, a University of Utah pre-law major who was running for office under the Power in U Party, was charged with computer theft, a third degree felony. Timmins allegedly hacked into the U computer system April 1 and stole the names, phone numbers, e-mail addresses and Social Security numbers of 23,000 students, faculty and staff. He allegedly did so in order to send out campaign literature for the Power in U Party. The final ASUU elections took place two weeks after the hack, on April 15-16. "Over 13,000 messages were sent to individuals included in the compromised file," said Clif Drew, associate vice president for academic affairs. These e-mailings were sent from luket@xmission.com. ASUU President Doug Dubitsky did not care what the information had been used for.

Summer service sets record

By ERICA THESING News Writer

Accepting positions at food banks, hospitals, summer camps and other volunteer agencies, 196 Notre Dame students completed service projects. this summer. The comprise the largest group ever to complete the pro g r a m according to u Cunningham, director of summer service projects.

196

Cunningham credits word of mouth with helping to increase the popularity of the program, and she said that the service projects provide students with opportunities to help other people, explore career options and earn a tuition credit.

Senior Jeff Nichols, who volunteered at a camp for innercity boys this summer, first heard about the program from former participants and decided to join.

"I figured it was high time I started doing one myself. It's such a big thing at this school and I wanted to take advantage of the opportunity while I had the chance," he said.

Junior Jennie Tylec, who also volunteered this summer, didn't need to hear about the program from another student; Tylec had already experienced the rewards of summer service the previous year and opted to return. Tylec spent her first summer at a food bank in western Massachusetts, organizing fund raisers and applying for grants for the agency. That experience opened up new career options for her, and she decided to spend another summer in service, this time at a food bank in Detroit.

"I really enjoyed my project from last year, so I figured it couldn't hurt," Tylec said. "After my two summers, I'm really leaning towards working for a non-profit.'

In Detroit, Tylec worked in the inner city, and she remembers the experience of passing a community of homeless men and women everyday on her way to work. They huddled on the street corner around two dirty couches and a small fire.

"It was a good thing for me because I got to know what it's like on the other end. I got to go out and see how a large portion of our population lives," she said. "It was a big sacrifice. At first, I wasn't sure I made the right decision. I gave a lot, but I definitely got a lot out of it."

Students who have participated in the program often comment that they received more help than they gave, according to Cunningham.

She also said that students in the program discover a whole new group of friends through the people they work with. Nichols experienced this with his fellow counselors who were former campers from inner-city environments.

"Being accepted by these guys and being able to contribute was very special to me," Nichols said.

After returning from their projects, students attend debriefing sessions and then have the option of meeting with a small group or going on a two- day retreat, which will take place this weekend. Students also write a reflection paper ón their experiences.

Cadillac uses ND intern for prototype work

By SHANNON GRADY News Writer

While most of the nation focused on the massive strike that halted production of General Motors Corp. cars, 30 college students kept busy by designing new ones for the No. 1 automaker.

The 30 interns were part of GM's design center summer intern program. Their mission: to develop concept vehicles from scratch for the eight GM marketing divisions.

Notre Dame senior Allison Johnson was a part of this summer's program, and worked on the Cadillac team.

"It was an awesome experience. At school I work with all engineers, and it's the same every day," she said. "But for this, I worked with artists and industrial designers, and I had to learn how to communicate completely differently," she said.

This multi-disciplinary program was managed by a team of GM design center personnel. who worked alongside the students on a daily basis. Each student had a mentor to provide guidance in areas such as designing, sculpting and engineering.

"This program is a terrific opportunity for both the stu-dents and their mentors," said Larry Fallon, the director of strategies and business management for the design center. "The students get an opportunity to work in their own studio with ready access to professionals who can advise and encourage them on a daily basis.

"At the same time, the professionals get a chance to contribute to the professional growth and creativity of these young, creative individuals,' he continued. "It's a win-win for all who are involved."

Over 13 weeks, the eight teams researched each brand's history, studied the automobile market and forecasted product trends.

After collecting data, the eight teams collaborated on designs for each of the automaker's brands.

Then the teams produced a 1/3 scale clay model of their product, built a mock vehicle interior and presented its design to GM design center management for review.

Ideas from each of the eight teams may implemented into future concept and production cars. Last year's Cadillac team, for example, had its project incorporated into a concept car, Johnson noted.

'There's a good possibility that at least one of our designs will be put into a future show car," Johnson said.

"Physical changes made the Oak Room no longer necessary said David and viable," Prentkowski, director of Food Services.

The ensuing changes would cost 10 times the original construction costs. Many students were relieved to learn that despite the thorough renovation, the dining rooms remained virtually untouched. The salad, beverage and condiment bars were removed from the center of the dining areas, restoring the layout to its pre-World War II design. A sprinkler system and heating and cooling upgrades were also installed to bring the building up to 1998 safety standards.

According to Doug Marsh, the project coordinator and architect for SDH, even these structural details were planned with the integrity of the building in mind. For example, contractors tunneled under the existing dining room floors to install unintrusive fire alarms.

At an initial construction cost of $1 million, the original Dining Halls Building could serve 3,000 students in 25 minutes with its family-style service. Each place was set with a linen napkin and bread was served on silver platters. Each meal was overseen by a table of priests who sat facing the room at a cloth-laid table on the dais. Every stage of the meal was methodically accounted for, down to the division of uneaten food into waste and reuse piles.

Editor John Willy described the then-new building as the 'handsomest structure on campus,' boasting of its gothic design, Indiana limestone and terrazzo marble floors. He prefaced his article with the observation that the building was so symmetrically designed that what is said of one side of the building applies equally to the other.

WORLD NEWS BRIEFS Bomb suspect appears in U.S. court

NEW YORK

Two suspects in the bombing of the U.S.Embassy in Kenya were sent to the United States to face charges that could carry the death penalty. One told the FBI he planned to die as a martyr in the attack. Kenya, wary that a trial might invite new terrorist assaults, allowed the trial to take place in the United States, where terrorist laws cover attacks against American citizens on foreign soil. "We will not be intimidated by terror ... and we are determined that sooner or later, one way or other, terrorists will be held accountable for their crimes," Secretary of State Madeleine Albright said. Mohamed Rashed Daoud Al-'Owhali appeared Thursday in federal court in New York City. He was one of two suspects released by Kenyan authorities to the United States; officials wouldn't say whether the other, Mohammed Saddiq Odeh, had arrived by Thursday afternoon.

NY bank warns of Russian troubles

NEW YORK

In the first public indication of the effect of Russia's economic troubles on United States banks, Republic New York Corp. said Thursday that losses from investments in Russia would wipe out its third-quarter profits. Wall Street banking analysts said other big U.S. banks will take hits - although not as serious — from their Russia investments. By itself, Russia's financial woes won't significantly affect U.S. banks. The bigger problem is Russia's potential to drag down world markets, as it did Thursday, first in Asia, then in Europe and the United States and Latin America. Republic, the nation's 18thlargest bank holding company in terms of assets, slashed the value of its Russian debt to 15 cents on the dollar, following an identical action earlier this week by the Russian government on its own bonds.

Ford Recalls F-150 Pickup Trucks

DETROIT Ford Motor Co. said Thursday that it will recall more than a half-million cars and pickup trucks to replace defective suspension parts that could pose safety problems. About 310,000 1993 Ford Taurus and Mercury Sable sedans and station wagons are being recalled to replace their front coil springs. Ford says the springs could break from cracks and corrosion, which could damage the tires. The cars being recalled are in 21 mostly Northern states and Canada where corrosion is more of a problem.

Bonnie douses coast with rain

ASSOCIATED PRESS

MOREHEAD CITY, N.C. Bonnie, downgraded to a tropical storm, wrung itself out like a washcloth over North Carolina as it dragged its remnants back toward the sea Thursday, dropping more than 10 inches of rain in places.

However, forecasters said the chances of severe flooding were slight. Many people in the Carolinas breathed a sigh of relief as the day wore on when it became clear that the wind damage from the hurricane's onslaught appeared to be smaller than expected. too.

There were no reports of any deaths, serious injuries or widespread damage, although officials say agricultural losses could be great.

"This storm was a breeze compared to Fran," said Wilmington-area construction worker Johnny French, referring to the 1996 hurricane that killed 24 people in North Carolina and caused $5.2 billion in damage Richard Moore, North Carolina's secretary of public safety, said:"We could not be more relieved this morning. It seems, for whatever reason, the winds did not do as much damage as expected.

Moore said Bonnie's damage total may equal Hurricane Bertha's in 1996, which ranged from $1 billion to $2 billion.

"It will be close," Moore said. "Bertha was primary an agricultural damage storm. We won't really know the damages until we can get out in those rural areas."

The 400-mile-wide storm sloshed ashore Wednesday afternoon at Cape Fear. By Thursday evening, its 115 mph hurricane winds had fallen to 65 mph, but the storm continued to drench the coast as it made its way back toward the Atlantic at a sluggish 9 mph. As of the evening, Jacksonville had gotten more than 10 inches of rain, Wilmington 9 and Greenville nearly 8.

A 20-mile stretch of State Road 12 on North Carolina's Outer Banks was buried under 3 feet of water and 4 feet of sand Thursday night and was impassable, authorities said.

"Believe it or not, we're going to take this hit pretty well," said John Elardo, a forecaster at the National Weather Service office in Newport.

"Anywhere else in the world, this kind of rain would be a bad situation," he said. "But we have flat land, and dry, sandy soil which is good for absorbing rainfall." Also, the weather had been dry recently in North Carolina, and rivers and creeks were low. Elardo said.

Late Thursday, Bonnie was 45 miles south-southeast of Elizabeth City, and was expected to move offshore during the night. The Maryland and Delaware coasts braced for rain as it passed a good 40 miles offshore.

Tom Atwood emerged from his home when the rain and wind eased and saw streets filled with tree limbs and debris, but everything else intact.

"Seems like we got very little damage, considering the night we had last night," he said. "I've got water in my house, but we actually made it out pretty good."

sures - currency controls, fixed prices and state ownership - to contain Russia's escalating financial crisis. Yeltsin spokesman Sergei

Yastrzhembsky vehemently denied that the president was preparing to step down. Both Washington and the Kremlin said Thursday that next week's Yeltsin-Clinton summit, set for Tuesday in Moscow, was still on.

The president's new prime minister, Viktor Chernomyrdin, claimed Thursday night that "although (the situation) is certainly not simple, it is absolutely controllable." But there was no sign Yeltsin or his lieutenant had begun to contain the crisis.

As exchange markets remained officially frozen but the ruble's value during other post-Soviet crises?

It was clear that the Kremlin is now willing to consider solutions previously rejected - steps the West is likely to see as moving backward from a free market.

Chernomyrdin and other government figures held consultations with top Parliament leaders — most of them Communists and other hardliners — who presented a draft plan for fixing the economy by bringing back Soviet-style economic controls. The possibilities include nationalizing major industries, controlling prices and fixing currency exchange rates.

"Privatization didn't lead to a restructuring of the economy and has failed to create an effective class of property owners," the draft said. The situation demands increasing the role of the state in regulating the economy.

Kremlin officials took part in the deliberations, but it was unclear how much support the specific proposals

The Kremlin, meanwhile, issued a statement appealing to the foreign news media "not to spread inaccurate information" about Yeltsin's status.

"Any information citing informed sources about supposed plans for a resignation of the Russian president are fictitious and untrue," the statement said.

In Washington, White House spokesman Barry Toiv said Thursday there would be no comment until officials figure out what is happening.

Communist leaders also continued to pressure Yeltsin politically. Gennady Seleznyov, the Communist speaker of Parliament's lower house, said they were preparing a bill to lay out the privileges available to a former president, including membership in the upper house for 10 years.

Meanwhile, the financial markets continued to crumble. The Central Bank suspended all currency trading, saying the suspension would continue Friday.

Stats Show Most Rapes Happen in First Month

TUCSON, Ariz. In the first four weeks of school, the hardest lessons to learn may not be in the classroom.

Day Editor/Viewpoint 631-5303 Office Manager/General Information 631-7471

UNIVERSITY OF ARIZONA

Most rapes and sexual assaults occur within the first month of school to 18- to 19-year-old women, said Matt Sanders, assistant director of the Oasis Center for sexual assault and relationship violence.

'There's an excessive amount of socializing that goes on as people orient themselves to the scene," Sanders said. "It's a time when people are most vulnerable because they're testing their boundaries and limits in regards to sexual contact and alcohol use.'

A 1987 study conducted by UA professor Mary Koss showed that one in four women are sexually assaulted in their lifetime and that 84 percent of the rape victims knew the perpetrator.

'People need to be safe and aware of their surroundings," Seastone said. "We try to tell people to watch their alcohol intake, effectively communicate with the person they are seeing, or going out with, and let someone know where you are and who you're going out with."

Sanders said more than 60 percent of reported sexual assaults at the UA involve alcohol. Arizona law states that if either partner consumes alcohol, legal consent to sex cannot be given and the potential for rape is present.

A 1996 study by Antonia Abbey, an assistant professor at Wayne State University in Detroit, Michigan, showed that 95 percent of campus sexual assaults involved alcohol use by either the man, ory loss and disorientation, Sanders said. "It's very problematic for people to pinpoint that they've had a date rape drug used on them because they can't remember," Sanders said.

observer.obsnews.1@nd.edu

News E-Mail

"People who use the (date rape) drugs obviously don't really care about the person they're with. They may be using massive doses or doing things that can lead to death," Sanders said. "This is a very powerful depressant and if you slow someone's heart enough you can kill them.'

Partner communication Koss's study found that 84 percent of men who had committed what met the legal definition of rape said they did not feel that what they did was actually rape.

Sanders said that sexual assault is defined by Arizona law as any unwanted sexual contact, mostly centered around the breasts, anus and genitals. Rape is defined as unwanted penetration.

Dan Refly, adviser for the Campus Acquaintance Rape Educators, said a student health survey conducted in the spring of 1998 found that 90 percent of last year's freshman had one or no sexual partners.

Reilly also quoted a survey of incoming freshman men that states that the majority have had one or no sexual partners, but that they plan to increase that number once at the UA. He added that men need to make sure they have consent from their partner before engaging in sexual activity.

'Be very certain, especially if you're not sexually experienced, to talk to your partner and make sure you're getting consent and everyone is OK with what's going on," he said. "Make it good for both people - if the woman is enjoying the experience, she'll make it pretty clear.'

"It's really important for men to realize they are also at risk because we've labeled this as a woman's issue for way too long," Sanders said. "Everyone needs to be concerned about it and invested in changing it." Sanders said that sexual assault and rape statistics are changing.

Two years ago we had maybe eight cases of sexual assault or relationship violence," Sanders said. "Now we have many more.

"We've had an increase in reported cases but we don't want to confuse that with an increase in violence. People are just talking about it while more and more services are provided so people can get out, get medical and legal advice and find themselves in a safe place," Sanders said.

He said that between 1995 and 1997 there were about 80 sexual assaults and 80 instances of relationship violence reported to the Oasis center

"It's nice to have a clear picture of what happens in a college setting as opposed to perpetrating the silence. If you can't talk about it, you can't do anything about it," Sanders said. Seastone stressed the importance of counseling for all victims.

The important thing is for someone to go and get help at the hospital because they need to talk to someone psychologically to get through the matter," Seastone said.

An Arizona statute provides sexual assault victims with free hospital treatment. Hospital personnel are required to notify police if they treat a sexual assault victim. Police who come to the hospital to file a report, however, cannot force someone to talk about the experience. Freedom Rice, a crisis intervention coordinator for the Tucson Rape Crisis Center, said a quick phone call to the Sexual Assault Resource Service can arrange for a trained nurse and counselor to be with the victim at the hospital. Reilly said the resource service nurses were volunteers, with special training in sexual assault and emergency exams after an attack.

Following an assault, victims are given the option of preserving evidence by completing a series of examinations called a rape kit. The examinations must be conducted within 72 hours of the attack.

'The physical exam for the rape kit is solely for collecting evidence," Rice said. "If the victim doesn't want to prosecute they won't receive an exam."

Seastone urges any victim to complete the rape kit, even if they are not certain they want to prosecute the perpetrator.

'We ask that you allow us to gather evidence because sometimes you can't make that decision (whether or not to prosecute) on the spot," Seastone said.

Immediately after an attack, anyone who has been sexually assaulted or raped should be careful not to throw away clothes, douche, shower or in any other way destroy physical evidence, Sanders said. Police recommend placing each article of clothing in a paper bag to avoid the risk of contamination.

"The real danger is letting this stuff take over your life, not receiving medical attention, not knowing your options and not getting counseling," Sanders said. "It can really get in the way of your goals, academic, personal and professional."

Sanders said that victims should realize they are not alone. If a friend is a victim, Reilly said to be supportive and feel free to ask questions of the Oasis or Tucson Rape Crisis centers.

'Educate your friends," Reilly said. "If you have a friend in need, ask questions for them.

both. Alcohol is also dangerous voman or because of the possibility of being slipped a "date rape" drug, Sanders said.

'People need to have someone watch their drinks," Seastone said. "Tucson is seeing an increase of roofies (rohypnol) put into their drinks, so people may not know about a sexual assault because they pass out.

Date rape drugs commonly cause mem-

Women are not the only victims of rape and sexual assault; men are at risk as well. Sanders said.

"One in six men are assaulted in a lifetime," Sanders said, adding that both men and women frequently use the center.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR Bradley's Presence Brings Mixed Response

I write to welcome Sen. Bill Bradley to the University of Notre Dame. In his 1996 book, Time Present, Time Past, Sen. Bradley writes, "American civilization is like a three legged stool, with government and the private sector being two legs and the third being civil society, the place where we live, educate our kids, worship our God, and associate with our neighbors."

Notre Dame is a both a participant in and a catalyst to this third leg of "civil society", inspiring ethical reflection and encouraging bold moral commitments. This is true because Notre Dame is more than a university; it is a Catholic university. It is more than a place where we live and learn; it is a place where we encounter God and endeavor to build a Christian community that reflects this encounter. Sen. Bradley's sensitivity and leadership in improving race relations and in building stronger communities can only help us in this endeavor.

The respect that Notre Dame students have for life is passionate and deep. Ms. Maureen Kramlich's letter to the editor of August 25, 1998, clearly exemplifies this passion. Ms. Kramlich thinks it hard to imagine that Sen. Bradley has much to contribute to Notre Dame. I believe we have much to gain, however, in observing his style of civil dialogue aimed at advancing human dignity and the common good – two cherished principles of Catholic social teaching.

Sen. Bradley, you are a scholar and a peacemaker. This university is the better for your being here. I think you will find many at this university eager to learn from your experiences and commitment to justice.

And maybe you could teach our basketball teams a trick or three.

Sean B. O'Brien ND '95, ND Law '01 August 27, 1998

In reference to the letter to the editor entitled "Bradley brings poor abortion record to Notre Dame" my roommate and I were in total agreement with Maureen Kramlich that Bill Bradley has no place at Notre Dame.

We were outraged, however, by the reasoning that she gave. Maureen believes that Senator Bradley's voting record on abortion means that he can not bring anything to the University. Don't get us wrong, we are by no means endorsing abortion. However, we think that Maureen has overlooked a more important flaw in Senator Bradley's past.

Perhaps the darkest skeleton in the senator's closet is his former career with the New York Knicks. We all know that after mass students go back to their rooms and practice their second religion, Bulls-ianity, where they tell stories of how Michael walks on water and turns gatorade to wine.

If the senator was really smart he would have played for "Da Bulls, yet he chose to play for the Judas of the National Basketball Association, the New York Knicks. As a midwestern, value-oriented school, we feel it is pathetic that the student body has missed the big picture and allowed this great evil to persist. We must not allow Chicago and its purity to be corrupted by east coast influences.

Maybe next time we want a professor we can look to a real American hero, Mike Ditka. Thank you and GO BULLS!!!!

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Denial of Life Inside Womb Demeans it Outside

Amidst all of the rhetoric and word games that have characterized the abortion debate, it is easy to lose sight of the real definition of what it means to be pro-life.

Too many times, the pro-life position is isolated as a purely anti-abortion position, and images of banner-waving protesters blocking the entrances of abortion clinics dominate our perception of the pro-lifer. What is lost is the idea of what the pro-lifer is fighting for: that is, the gift of life, to be respected not only in the womb but in every stage thereafter. The pro-lifer respects not only the life of the unborn baby, but the life of every human person, especially against child and animal abuse) by also condoning a procedure destructive to life in the womb.

When we disrespect life at one stage, aren't we in danger of translating this disrespect to all stages of life? When we allow ourselves the right to distort the idea of when life begins, we can more easily justify our right to determine when life ends — a scenario which has been witnessed in the recent legalization of assisted suicide in Oregon and the ongoing practice of capital punishment in our nation.

When we can dismiss life in the womb as economically burdensome and undeserving of protection, we can more easily refuse the responsibility to protect any life that poses any kind of burden to us. No doubt this kind of attitude has fueled many people's unwillingness to support the burden of welfare recipients, immigrants, and other marginalized and vulnerable groups of people. One of the most articulate supporters of what Catholics have embraced as the "consistent ethic of life" is Helen Alvare, pro-life spokesperson for the National Conference of Catholic Bishops (NCCB.) In Pro-Life Today: The Struggle Continues, she recognizes the connection that exists between denial of life to those in the womb and the demeaning of life outside the womb. She explains that "the last twenty-five years of abortion on demand and its accompanying rhetoric of "freedom of choice" have helped bring about a counterrevolution in the way people think about authentic freedom." (p. 18). She goes on to write, "'Choice,' by its very nature, is about what the individual wants, free of any concerns for the common good. It tends to be unfettered by standards such as right and wrong or truth and falsehood .. In the end, it becomes 'the freedom of the strong against the weak who have no choice but to submit." (p. 19). In other words, years of feeding and fostering a "my choice" mentality have created a threat not only to unborn babies, but to anyone who falls under the category of weak or vulnerable persons.

Is there a solution to the attitude of a society so intensely intolerant of weakness and so fanatically committed to personal choice that it would resort to violence to eliminate the first and uphold the other?

Alvare writes, "While such a distortion of the meaning of human freedom is shocking, it forced us to respond with a notion of 'freedom' powerful enough to replace 'choice,' to embrace the common good, and to respect truth all at once. That notion is built on fidelity not because we choose whom we will love but because God has chosen us to love others no matter what." (p. 20). Love others no matter what. Look upon all individuals as blessings and not as burdens. Recognize the inevitability of weakness in all people and our utter dependence on God and on each other. These are the lessons and the yearnings of the pro-life movement.

As the Notre Dame community, we can work to uphold the authentic image of what it means to be pro-life. We don't all have to be banner-waving activists to consider ourselves pro-lifers, but we do need to have courage to stand up against any attitude or practice that threatens to demean the dignity of life.

We can be the teachers, the lawyers, the physicians, the politicians, the husbands and wives, the fathers and mothers, the men and women who carry into our jobs and our everyday lives the conviction that life — all life — is a gift to be treasured and a gift worth defending.

inose wno are most vulnerable.

As I was driving one day, I happened to glance at the bumper of a young woman's car in front of me and read the following messages: "Happy Childhood Lasts a Lifetime — Prevent Child Abuse" and "People Who Abuse Animals Rarely Stop There." Exactly, I thought! Then, my eyes wandered to the final bumper sticker plastered on the back of the car: "If You Can't Trust Me with A Choice, How Can You Trust Me With a Baby?"

I wondered at the fact that this young woman could protest child abuse with one bumper sticker while neglecting to understand that the other was in fact condoning abuse within the womb — a practice that indeed "rarely stops there." I wondered if she remembered how the supporters of Roe v. Wade had touted abortion as a solution to child abuse, and I wondered if she realized that the incidences of child abuse had only skyrocketed since that infamous Supreme Court decision more than 25 years ago.

I was saddened that this young woman had unwittingly weakened the admirable, life-enhancing causes she was trying to promote (the campaign

■ MLB Mets' loss keeps NL wildcard race within one game

Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO Ellis Burks, Jeff Kent and Shawon

Dunston homered as the San Francisco Giants tightened the NL wild-card race with an 11-3 victory over the New York Mets on Thursday. Danny Darwin pitched 5 2-3 strong innings for just his second win since June 8 and drove in his first run of the season for the Giants, who have won five of six.

Burks, hitting .364 since joining the Giants in a June 31 trade with Colorado, hit his 19th homer and add an RBI single. Dunston had a three-run pinch-hit homer, and Kent added his 23rd homer of the season

Bill Mueller added a two-run double for the Giants, who took two out of three games against New York to move a game behind the Mets in the race for the wild card. The Chicago Cubs, who had a night game at Colorado, began the day a game behind New York.

Mike Piazza hit his 25th homer, a tworun shot, in the sixth for the Mets. Piazza went 3-for-3, including a pair of singles.

The Mets also scored in the fourth when Brian McRae hit into a bases-loaded double play. McRae, 1-for-27 in his career against Darwin, had been the fifth-toughest player to double up in the NL.

Cubs 11, Rockies 10

Sammy Sosa didn't take advantage of hitter-friendly Coors Field, but teammates Mark Grace, Brant Brown and Mickey Morandini did Thursday night as the Chicago Cubs beat the Colorado Rockies 11-10 in 10 innings.

On a night when Sosa went 2-for-5 with one RBI but no home runs, leaving his total at 52, Morandini delivered the winning hit in the 10th, tying Chicago with New York in the NL wild-card race, one game ahead of San Francisco.

Lance Johnson reached on a fielder's choice grounder, stole second and scored on Morandini's third hit of the night, a one-out single to right off Mike Munoz (2-2).

Grace had three hits hits and four RBIs, and Brown had a three-run homer for the Cubs, who rallied from a 9-3 deficit and matched a season high with 19 hits.

Bernie Will snapped an 0-for-12 slump with an RBI double off the center-field wall with one out in the 11th inning Thursday night as the New York Yankees matched their 1997 win total by beating the Anaheim Angels 6-5.

With Derek Jeter on second, Williams drove a 1-0 pitch from Mike Fetters (2-8) to deep left-center that Anaheim center fielder Jim Edmonds couldn't run down before crashing into the wall.

The Yankees, mired in a mini-slump the past 10 games, improved to 96-36 with 30 games remaining.

Anaheim, a possible postseason opponent for New York this year, won three of five games this week at Yankee Stadium to win the season series 6-5. New York leads every other season series.

Jay Tessmer, who began the season in Double-A and only joined the Yankees on Wednesday, made his major league debut and got the win in relief.

Chuck Knoblauch's sacrifice fly in the eighth had given the Yankees a 5-4 lead, but the Angels tied it in the ninth on Orlando Palmeiro's one-out RBI single off Ramiro Mendoza.

Trailing 4-3, New York had tied it on pinch-hitter Paul O'Neill's sacrifice fly in the seventh and taken the lead in the eighth on Knoblauch's flyout. The Yankees then blew a lead for the fifth straight game of the series.

Cone failed in his attempt to become the majors' first 19-game winner.

Finley also was all over the place, giving up three runs, seven hits and five walks in five-plus innings

Braves 6, Cardinals 4

Mark McGwire's glove made the news Thursday night, not his bat.

The St. Louis Cardinals' first baseman remained at 54 home runs and hurt his team with a fielding error that led to three runs in a 6-4 loss to the Atlanta Braves.

McGwire, who has seven homers in the Cardinals' last 11 games, was 0-for-4, dropping him to 3-for-23 (.130) against Atlanta this year with one homer and one RBI.

Neagle allowed one hit during the first six innings and struck out nine as Atlanta won for the sixth time in seven games. The Cardinals have lost six straight.

McGwire, who is two homers ahead of Chicago's Sammy Sosa, has 29 games remaining to catch the record of 61, set by Roger Maris in 1961.

The most notable play for McGwire came

The Observer/JoeMueller

Cardinals closed to 6-3. Placido Polanco had an RBI double, Willie McGee had a sacrifice fly and Eli Marrero chased Neagle with a double off the wall in leftcenter.

Neagle also singled and scored in the fifth off Matt Morris (4-4) and Andrum Jones added his 23rd homer for the Braves. Andres Galarraga had an RBI single in the fifth and a sacrifice fly in the seventh.

Ligtenberg, Atlanta's third pitcher, got three outs for his 24th save, allowing Ron Gant's 21st homer. With runners at first and third, McGee hit a game-ending grounder to deep shortstop, jamming his right leg on the first-base bag.

Mariners 10, Indians 4

Alex Rodriguez hit his 37th homer and the Seattle Mariners responded to manager Lou Piniella's hat-kicking tirade with a 10-4 victory over the Cleveland Indians on Thursday night.

The Mariners, mired in a disappointing season, avoided their first three-game sweep at Cleveland since 1992

In their first at-bat since Piniella's ninth-inning, hat-flipping outburst on Wednesday night, the Mariners scored four runs in the first on two walks and an error by Jaret Wright (11-8).

■ NFL Another rowdy Cowboy gets in trouble with the law

Associated Press

R

DALLAS Despite pledges by owner Jerry Jones to clean up the Dallas Cowboys' public image and his millions spent to monitor player behavior, another one of his stars is under police investigation.

This time, it's All-Pro offensive lineman Larry Allen.

Police are investigating a topless dancer's accusation that Allen forced her to have sex by threatening her with a knife in the parking lot of the Kings' Cabaret dance club.

No charges were filed against Allen, who was in Jacksonville, Fla., for an exhibition game Thursday night.

"It's really not appropriate for anyone to make a comment or a judgment, at this time," said Jones. "I don't think it's fair for anyone to jump to any conclusions.'

Allen had no comment. He is the fourth member of the Cowboys to be accused by women of sexual assault in less than two years, but no charges were ever filed against the other players.

Wide receiver Michael Irvin is on probation because of drug possession. Last month, he was involved in a dorm altercation at training camp in which guard Everett McIver was cut in the neck with scissors.

Defensive tackle Leon Lett is back on the team after missing 13 games under NFL suspension last year for substance abuse violations.

Last summer, a Dallas County grand jury declined to indict Nate Newton after a Grand Prairie woman told police he raped her. In December 1996, a former topless dancer told police that wide receiver Michael Irvin threatened her with a gun while lineman Erik Williams and another man raped her. The accuser, Nina Shahravan, later recanted and pleaded guilty to perjury.

In Allen's case, a dancer told police he entered the club where she works around 4:10 p.m. Monday.

The accuser told police that Allen ordered drinks and a table dance from her, then said he needed to talk to her so they went outside, got into his car and drove behind the club.

She said Allen put his hand on a knife that was in the car's console and forced her to have sex. "I think the investigation is progressing, but it's too early to say what the conclusion will be," Dallas police Sgt. Jim Chandler said.

COLLEGE FOOTBALL "Whoa Nellie" kicks off last season on ABC

Associated Press

NEW YORK Few announcers are identified as closely with their sport as Keith Jackson is with college football.

The longtime ABC announcer, whose booming voice and catch phrases like "Whoa Nellie" have been often imitated but never matched, begins his final college football season Monday night at the Kickoff Classic. Jackson, who turns 70 in October, will retire after the Fiesta Bowl.

When you are flipping around the dial on a Saturday afternoon and hear his voice, you sit up and listen because this game must be important," said Bob Griese, Jackson's partner for the last 11 years at ABC. "If Keith Jackson is doing this college football game, this should be the one I watch."

Jackson joined ABC in 1962 and has covered the big events - the NBA, the NFL, baseball and the Olympics and the obscure ones - like wrist wrestling on "Wide World of Sports. But it is the 32 years of calling college games from small towns like Tuscaloosa, Ala., and State College, Pa., that is Jackson's true love.

Jackson, a walking history book on college football, remembers the great coaches, like Bear Bryant, the great players, like Johnny Rodgers, and the great games, like the 1979 Sugar Bowl. But he also remembers the little things, like the band director at Penn State or the press box attendant in Iowa City.

"I like the ambiance that goes with college football. It is a wonderful festival," Jackson said, "I go to the stadium three hours before the game and watch the bands practice and the stands fill with four generations of fans.

"I know a lot of people scoff at it and people always accuse me of selling it and promoting it, but it is a very warm friendly kind of fuzzy feeling you get in most places."

His unabashed promotion of the sport and his pet phrases like "a hit as hard as blackjack pine" probably would not fly with a new announcer. But they are vintage Jackson and are what define and shape his telecasts.

When I did news, you wouldn't know where I'm from," said Jackson, a native of rural Georgia. "But when I started doing Southern games, I decided it was a colorful language. I know the words, the homilies, the reactions and how to make up the phrases. It sort of just grew."

Despite his love for the game, Jackson believes the time is right to leave ABC, with a change in management at the company and his 70th birthday less than two months away. He looks forward to ending the grind of the weekly travel and visiting places he has never gotten to see in September, October and November.

His career will end with the first Bowl Championship Series championship game a system Jackson believes is flawed and should have four teams. Between now and then he just wants to do what he has done for 32 years, call the games without any extra attention.

"The basic function is still to cover football games," he said. "The American public couldn't care about where I am going.'

DIVERSELY DANTE ~ 1

COLLEGE FOOTBALL Wolveries go with experience at QB

Associated Press

ANN ARBOR, Mich. Lloyd Carr believes in trusting his gut. That's why Tom Brady will start at quarterback when Michigan opens at Notre Dame in a little over a week.

"Much like Brian Griese, he esev of Michigan Sports Information Despite starting all 11 games for Michigan in 1996, Scott Dreisbach has been completely left out of this year's QB controversy.

has paid his dues," Carr said Thursday. "Tom's a bright guy, he has a good arm and his teammates look up to him.

"I think he has the right stuff." In almost the same breath, however, Carr had to admit that there is better stuff on hand. That would be highly touted freshman Drew Henson, who in just two weeks of practice has turned more than a few heads.

'Drew has made excellent progress. He improves almost daily," Carr said. "He's a bright kid. Without question, he's the most talented quarterback I've ever been around.

'He's going to play some this year. He's not just another quarterback."

Exactly what the coach means by "play some" remains to be seen. It could mean that Brady's job is secure. Maybe the Wolverines will bring Henson along slowly.

But you never know.

The one player almost left out of all these quarterback conversations is Scott Dreisbach. He is by far the Wolverines' most

He already has the arm. And he brings one thing to the table that Brady doesn't: Speed.

"I've been surprised," Carr said. "Drew is even quicker on the move than I thought." So, why Brady? Why not go with the kid right now if he's that good?

The answer is experience, mainly.

If the Wolverines were opening at home against some soft and chewy cream puff, Carr would be greatly tempted. Nebraska, for example, is a 34 1/2-point favorite to wallop Louisiana Tech in the Cornhuskers' opener this week.

But the Wolverines don't always open against cream puffs. Last year it was . Colorado. This year Notre Dame.

And there is almost no way Carr can bring himself to throw Henson into the fire at South Bend. That's just a little too far, a little too fast, from Brighton High School. Raw talent and all.

"Tom Brady's been here four years. Drew Henson has been here two weeks," Carr said.

And if he comes away from South Bend with a victory over the Fighting Irish, it is a pretty good bet Brady will be set for the season. It was his solid performance in a 27-3 victory over Colorado last year that established Griese.

After that, Griese was the man. And the coach knew that trusting his gut was the right thing to do.

There is no guarantee. But that's the thing about college football that keeps men like Carr going and going.

"I know as a coach, I've never been so excited in my life," Carr said.

experienced; a fifth-year senior who started all 11 regular-season games in 1996.

By rights, the job should have gone back to Dreisbach in 1997. Instead, Carr got a feeling in his gut about Griese. When the season opened, it was Griese at the throttle and he guided the Wolverines to a 12-0 season and their first national championship in 50 years.

The difference now, of course, is the fact that Griese had been a backup to Dreisbach and saw considerable playing time when Dreisbach was hurt. Brady, on the other hand, has hardly played at all.

In four years, Brady has been in just six games, two in 1996 and parts of four games last season. His career statistics show Brady has completed 15 of 20 passes for 129 yards with one interception and no touchdowns.

That means Henson would about match Brady's career numbers in just a single game.

Manning tosses the Colts their 2nd preseason win

Associated Press

■ NFL

INDIANAPOLIS Peyton Manning, finishing the preseason with his most productive game, passed for 172 yards and two long touchdowns to Marvin Harrison as the Indianapolis Colts held off the Detroit Lions 20-17 Thursday night.

Manning, the No. 1 pick in the NFL draft, was 8-for-17 and retired to the sideline after the second quarter as the Colts (2-2) took a 17-10 lead.

The Lions (1-3) tied the game with a 22-yard pass from rookie Charlie Batch to Germane Crowell early in the fourth quarter. A fumble by veteran Frank Reich, signed earlier in the week, set up the winning 27-yard field goal by the Colts' Mike Vanderjagt with 3:55 to go.

Detroit's Jason Hanson missed a 56-yard field goal that would have tied the game again as time ran out.

Manning's two touchdown passes, both in the first period, marked the first time he had thrown for more than one score in a game.

This time, the Lions couldn't get to Manning or to his favorite target, Harrison, who had four catches for 145 yards and got by his former Syracuse teammate, Kevin Abrams, for touchdown receptions of 76 and 40 yards.

The first was on the first play of the game, when Manning threw from the Indianapolis 24 and hit Harrison at the Lions 40. The third-year receiver outran the second-year Detroit cornerback the rest of the way to complete the Colts' longest play of the preseason and put Indianapolis up 7-0.

A 22-yard run by Barry Sanders set up Scott Mitchell's 8yard TD pass to Herman Moore that tied the game midway through the quarter.

Batch replaced Mitchell at quarterback after a 57-yard punt return by rookie Terry Fair, Manning's former teammate at Tennessee, midway through the second quarter. The Lions moved six plays to the Indianapolis 13, where Hanson kicked a 31-yard field goal to cut the Indianapolis lead to 14-10. The Colts countered with a 43-yard field goal by Vanderjagt with 40 seconds left for a 17-10 lead at halftime.

After Crowell's tying touchdown catch in the fourth quarter, the Lions had a chance to take the lead when Ryan Stewart intercepted a pass by backup Kelly Holcomb and returned it 19 yards to the Indianapolis 27. Reich, on his first play with the Lions, was hit by Emil Ekiyor and fumbled the ball back to the Colts. After the next Indianapolis punt, Reich fumbled again, and Ekiyor recovered at the Detroit 24. Six plays later, Vanderjagt kicked the winning field goal.

COLLEGE SPORTS Probe grows as gambling ring comes full circle

Associated Press

CHICAGO

A 24-year-old man admitted Thursday he participated in a gambling ring at Northwestern for at least three years and attempted to "scare" a Wildcats basketball player into paying off his gambling debt.

Michael Stemberk, of North Riverside, pleaded guilty to perjury for lying to a grand jury about his involvement in the ring. Stemberk is the sixth defendant to plead guilty as a result of a federal probe into gambling at Northwestern, an investigation that uncovered evidence of fixed basketball games and now involves the 1994 Wildcats football team.

Stemberk was not a student at Northwestern, but was a high school friend of Brian Ballarini, a Northwestern quarterback who admitted last week he ran a gambling ring helping individuals, including Northwestern athletes, place bets on college and professional games.

9 1 F -

In his guilty plea, Ballarini said he placed bets for people on Northwestern football games while he was a member of the team.

Stemberk admitted Thursday that between 1992 and 1995 he participated in the gambling scheme with Ballarini. On at least two occasions, Ballarini shared "inside information" with Stemberk about the 1994 Northwestern football team, upon which Stemberk placed large bets through Ballarini, according to Stemberk's plea agreement.

Stemberk said he lied about an episode in which he and Ballarini talked about collecting a gambling debt from former Wildcats basketball player Dion Lee. The diminutive Stemberk said he phoned the 6-foot 5-inch Lee to "scare" him into paying his debt of about $2,000.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Mark Vogel said the phone call was recorded by the government, but he refused to reveal its contents, acknowledging only that an "implicit threat" was made.

Prosecutors said they would dismiss a second perjury count in which Stemberk allegedly significantly understated the amount of his bets with Ballarini. Stemberk faces a prison term of up to 18 months.

Stemberk has not agreed to cooperate in the government's ongoing investigation but his attorney, Daniel Wolff, said Thursday he wanted to delay sentencing because "certain things may develop which might be to my client's benefit." Assistant U.S. Attorney Patrick Collins said the government would accept Stemberk's help if he was willing to give it.

Ballarini, 25, of Chicago, is cooperating with the investigation.

Former Wildcats basketball players Dewey Williams and Lee have pleaded guilty to attempting to fix three Northwestern basketball games in 1995.

Former Notre Dame kicker Kevin Pendergast and Brian Irving of San Francisco, who was not a Northwestern student, also have pleaded guilty in the scheme. They acknowledged placing thousands of dollars in bets on Northwestern basketball games.

Northwestern said it continues to cooperate with the U.S. attorney's office and the FBI in the investigation.

Continued lockout may foul out the regular season

Associated Press

NEW YORK The NBA, holding a consecutive games record that would make Cal Ripken envious, looks ready to sacrifice the streak.

The league's perfect record of never having lost a game to labor strife — that's 35,001 in a row, or 13 1/2 times Ripken's total - went into serious peril this week when chances dimmed for a resumption of collective bargaining talks before the scheduled opening of training camps.

"At some point you have to elect to deal with the lesser of two evils, and I think we've concluded that to once again make a bad economic deal is even worse that what'll flow from losing games," deputy commissioner Russ Granik told The Associated Press, strongly indicating that the leagueimposed lockout will last into the fall and perhaps the winter.

In other words, the NBA is prepared — some would say planning — to sacrifice games in November and December in the hopes it will put pressure on players as they miss paychecks, leading to a better collective bargaining agreement for the owners.

"There are different types of lost games," Granik said, com-paring the NBA's labor woes to major league baseball and its disastrous strike of 1994, which started during the pennant race and forced the cancellation of the World Series.

HEAD COACH BOB DAVIE

WELCOMES YOU BACK TO SCHOOL

An arbitration hearing on whether owners should have to pay guaranteed contracts during the lockout is on a nine-day hiatus and isn't scheduled to end until Sept. 8. Post-hearing briefs must be filed by Sept. 15, and arbitrator John Feerick will then have 30 days to render his verdict.

Two months of rhetoric, harsh words and allegations of delaying tactics haven't brought any progress. September will begin with the sides far apart on the key issue — an economic system that will slow down or limit the growth of player salaries enough to make the owners happy.

The owners have proposed several changes to the current operating system, asking for an eight-year deal.

Proposals have included several different salary limitation mechanisms: A phase-in of a "hard" salary cap with almost no exceptions, a maximum salary of 30 percent of the cap (excepting players already over that threshold, but limiting their raises to 5 percent), a phase-out of the Bird exception that would include a grandfather clause for current 10-year veterans, and an elimination of the $1 million salary cap exception that each team can use every other year, regardless of whether they are over the salary cap, to sign an additional player.

The owners had the right to toss out the old collective bargaining agreement if player salaries exceeded 51.8 percent of basketball-related income (BRI), and that number jumped to 57 percent in the 1997-98 season

The players offered to slow future cap growth if the BRI number hit 63 percent, then replaced that proposal with one that would shrink the current 20 percent limit on year-to-year raises

In addition, the players have asked that the $1 million exception become a $2.5 exception available every season, and that a $3 million "lottery exception" be available every year to nonplayoff teams.

"Their proposal takes care of the all the players even better than they are today. That's what's wrong with it. Our 57 percent would go to 60 or 65 percent," Granik said, his voice rising and filling with disdain more than any other time during a 45-minute discussion.

A deal would have to be in place by mid-October, at the absolute latest, to save the 82game season that is scheduled to start Nov. 4.

Even then, it would lead to a three-week scramble to open camps, sign players, make trades and sneak in an exhibition game or two.

Perhaps the only way the season will start on time is if Feerick rules quickly and the sides meet in late September and early October.

But Granik insisted the league won't give in just to save the perfect record, which the Elias Sports Bureau calculated at 35,001 consecutive games since 1946.

Freshman forward Shane Walton comes to Notre Dame as one of the top players in Southern California. His athletic abilities quickly became evident to coach Berticelli and the team, giving him the spotlight last Friday against the Buckeyes as he scored the only Irish goal of the game.

Originating the attack will be the focus of the Irish midfield, headed by team co-captain Matt Johnson. Hoping to serve as the starting line for a more prevalent attack, the midfield is committed to being more creative on the attack.

"She is a key central player because of her all-around skill," Sharp said. "Let's just say she has a very strong foot.'

A surprising plus for the Belles is the return of Liz Coley, who decided to come out for her senior year after studying abroad. Her impressive resum≥ includes play on Atlanta travel teams.

"We're looking to keep the ball moving from the midfield up," said Reggie McKnight, the fourth-leading scorer in 1997, which was his freshman year. "It's an overall contribution from all the players.'

Leading the Irish backfield will come from a defense headed by co-captain Phil Murphy, Dave Cutler and Steve Maio, with three-year starter Greg Velho in goal as the final line of defense. The more offensive style of play should also give the defense a chance to create rather than defend.

"[A more aggressive attack] allows us to take it easy," said sophomore defender Griffin Howard. "It makes the game more enjoyable and quickerpaced."

An more up-tempo game is what the Irish will strive for with a well-balanced defensive and offensive gameplan. Just as this year's squad will look for many players to contribute stellar performances, the team will also need and offense and a defense to be near perfect to net the wins.

The transfer of sophomore Laura Paulen, a defender coming out of a Charleston, W.Va., school, will also boost the roster.

Besides the returning seniors, Saint Mary's will rely on the reserves of four juniors, two sophomores and 11 freshmen to turn around last season's 7-13 record.

In addition to Sharp's own recruiting efforts, the increased freshman enrollment has also provided a young solid core, Sharp said.

If Saint Mary's can set the stage in its favor with a first win, the momentum may carry them through games against Bethel and the most challenging set of games in St. Louis.

Aggressive play nets first win Irish dominates OSU in exhibition matchup with 9-0 shutout

By M. BRIAN KESSLER

Assistant Sports Editor

The second-ranked Notre Dame women's soccer team started the 1998 season on the right foot, defeating Ohio State 9-0 on Alumni Field last night.

Although it was just a preseason game, the team's solid performance set the tone for the regular season which gets underway Sept. 1 at Michigan State.

"It was a real confidence booster to come out and play well in our first game," said senior for-ward Monica Gerardo. "We got a chance to test things out and it felt good to play against someone other than ourselves.

The Irish looked dominant all night and jumped out to a 5-0 lead at the half.

"We were excited to play and came out with a lot of intensity in the first half," said Gerardo, who had two goals on the night. "I think we looked really good, but there is always room for improvement.

Anne Makinen started the barrage of Irish goals as she put one passed Ohio State goalkeeper Amber Barnes in the sixth minute. Less than a minute later, Makinen found the net again to give the Irish a 2-0 advantage. But the sensational sophomore wasn't done yet; she completed the hat trick with her third goal in the 13th minute.

"The girl is just amazing," said Gerardo of Makinen. "She played awesome for us today and will be a key player for us all season. She's one of those players that helps the rest of the team elevate their game.'

"I think coach wants me to take on a bigger role this year and be a leader," Makinen said, "and I hope I can do that on and off the field.'

Jenny Streiffer and Gerardo each added a goal to round out the first half scoring for the Irish.

It was Notre Dame's first half defense, however, that was just as impressive as their high-powered offense. The Irish didn't allow a single shot on goal during the first half and controlled the ball extremely well.

"Our defense did a great job today," Gerardo said. "We have a very potent offense, but good scoring opportunities start with great defense.

Charged attack to complement Irish D

By ANTHONY BIANCO Sports Writer

This year's Irish team will depend on the same forte that gave them their second-straight appearance in the Big East Tournament last season defense. Although the defense allowed just nine goals in 11 Big East conference games, it was only able to give the Irish a 10-9-2 record. For a squad relying on the same strength that barely captured them a winning season last year, this team is excited to get out on the field.

The difference is that although their strength again lies with the defense, the 1998 men's soccer team has developed an offense good enough to fall back on – or rather, to run to Ñ the net with.

"This year's team is more creative and focused with goal scoring," head coach Mike Berticelli said. "But this team is still concentrated on its defense.

The Irish hope that these ingredients are part of the recipe for success. The team previewed this blend last Friday in its first exhibition match against Ohio State. Although the Buckeyes won the game 2-1, an offensively refocused squad came out in the second half to outshoot Ohio State 10-5.

Finishing scoring drives with goals will make the difference as the team readies for the season opener, a home match against Valparaiso next Tuesday. With the loss of leading scorer Ryan Turner, this year's squad will look for a number of players to finish the scoring drives.

Belles sqaud looks to reverse first game jitters

By M. SHANNON RYAN Saint Mary's Editor

The first game of the season is often a curse for the Saint Mary's soccer team.

For the past three seasons, the Belles have dropped the inaugural contest and set a disappointing tone for the rest of the season.

This year, however, the team is set to shatter the first game spells in its season opener Wednesday at home against Illinois Wesleyan.

"It's a very important game," said head coach Robert Sharp. "It's going to set the tone for the rest of the season.'

A favorable mood could easily be set with the assistance of senior team captains, Monica Cernanec, midfielder Katy Barger and Jo Wagner.

Wagner, the Belles goalie, will be one of the strongest of the troops. Last year's captain and team MVP, Wagner has not always had the necessary defensive backup.

"She's had a tough three years," Sharp said. "As a goalie, she has the experience to help us put together a good season. She just has not had the strong defense behind her.

Defender Cernanec may help provide the missing muscle.

A self-described natural leader, Cernanec is one of the few Belles to stick with the team for the entirety of her college career. Her seniority has also helped her nestle into the mind of her coach.

"I'm learning how he thinks and I think that helps a lot," said Cernanec, one of five seniors. Barger has been a starter for two years, missing
