Security doubts remain

By LUKE BUSAM
News Writer

Exactly two years after the Notre Dame community woke up to the living nightmare that was Sept. 11, 2001, the fear has not totally vanished. Time has begun to heal the wounds of that day, and for many on campus, the apprehension and unsafe feelings are beginning to dissipate.

For others, the time for caution is not gone.

Professor of Political Science and fellow of the Institute for International Peace Studies Daniel Lindley said, "Notre Dame is a high value target, especially football games. Notre Dame is a core symbol of Catholic identity and collegiate sports are a symbol of national identity. But I feel much safer in South Bend than a lot of other places I can think of. Keep in mind that there are thousands of other high value targets in the [United States]. For example, there are 123 chemical plants which, if attacked, could cause over a million casualties each."

Many Notre Dame students have little concern about an attack on campus.

"I don't feel at risk for an attack in South Bend or on campus. It's not exactly a huge target," said Matt

9/11 memorial construction appears unlikely

By MEGHANNE DOWNES

A year and a half after a design was selected for the Sept. 11 memorial competition, it appears as though the memorial will not be constructed.

University spokesman Matt Storin said the University never committed to build the memorial even though the School of Architecture sponsored a competition to design it in spring 2002.

"Since 9/11 there have been wars in Afghanistan and Iraq and it is uncertain what lies ahead in the way of fall out from the tragic events of that day two years ago," Storin said. "I think the administration feels it would be best to wait a few years before determining the most appropriate way to honor those who have lost their lives in the period."

Kara Kelly, director of communications for the School of Architecture, said Notre Dame never promised a memorial. However, the architecture school sponsored the competition and hoped the winning design would be considered for construction.

Then fifth-year architecture students Kevin Clark and Meg Kroener designed the winning entry which was a horseshoe shaped memorial surrounding the South Quad flagpole where the Sept. 11, 2001 Mass was

Turtle Creek bust leads to 26 charges, 5 arrests

By KEVIN ALLEN
News Writer

The Sept. 6 alcohol bust at the Turtle Creek apartment complex, which broke up several tailgate parties prior to Notre Dame's first football game of the 2003 season, has led to 26 people being charged with a variety of offenses, including minor in consumption, resisting arrest, and inducing minors to possess alcoholic beverages.

The crackdown was organized by the Indiana State Excise Police and assisted by the South Bend Police Department and the Notre Dame Security Police.

Lt. Greg Deitchley of the Indiana

State Excise Police said most offenders were ticketed at the scene. Five were arrested and taken to the St. Joseph County Jail.

Since tailgating had gone on unopposed for years at Turtle Creek, the crackdown came as a surprise to some students. Deitchley said the Excise Police were motivated to organize the bust because of what he called "problems in the past."

"The city attorney's office got involved because they got complaints," he said. "[The excise police] worked in conjunction with the South Bend Police Department and the city attorney's office."

According to Deitchley, the excise police intended to make a strong statement with Saturday's operation, and there are tentative plans for the excise police to return to Turtle Creek on future weekends.

"I don't know what weekends we'll be there, but there's a strong possibility we'll be back," said

INSIDE COLUMN

The jolt will never fade

There is a store near Rockefeller Center that sells only FDNY paraphernalia. Long but narrow, it's easy to miss — the small storefront is dwarfed by surrounding buildings. A glimpse of red through the glass, though, attracts passers-by, revealing a huge model fire engine on the display floor.

Manned by off-duty firefighters and other fire department employees, the store is a popular destination for class trips, which come for instructional sessions on fire safety. Proceeds are used to fund further education on the subject.

It's a great little store, but I hadn't visited it before Sept. 11, 2001. I don't even know if it existed then; it probably did, but the first time I stepped through the doors was several months after the tragedy. I was on a gift-buying mission and reasoned that I might as well support the FDNY — like the rest of New York, I had a newfound respect and enthusiasm for the fire department. So I selected a few presents and, predictably, didn't make it out without buying something for myself.

The all-girls high school graduate showing through, I bought a calendar — featuring one firefighter per month. I threw it in with my other purchases, went home and promptly forgot about it for over a year.

I rediscovered the calendar over the summer while rummaging through the disaster piled atop my desk. Removing the plastic wrapping, I leafed through the pages. Each firefighter was pictured at a different location in New York City, and they were quoted about their futures, the fire department and the calendar.

It was only on my second look that I noticed the purple ribbons.

Along the perimeters of several photographs were small purple ribbon graphics, somewhat blended into the background. Reading the blurbs more carefully, I realized that, on these pages, many quotes were from mothers or relatives. The firefighters had posed for the calendar before Sept. 11, and some died that day trying to save others.

Looking at those men — who had no knowledge, smiling for the camera, of the fatal disaster to come — made all the horror of Sept. 11 rush back to me. I hadn't thought about it in a while. I'd avoided remembering the needless deaths and the terrifying nightmare into which a normal day had turned. I'm from New York. I work in the city. That could have been me. The firefighters, smiles and the contrasting ribbons reminded me of how many ordinary people were taken that day — how many lives were abruptly and violently ended.

I closed the calendar and knew that the shock will always be there. Every time I see a picture of a victim and then think of the gaping hole downtown, I'll get a jolt. Now, when I pass the FDNY store, I pay silent respects, not just to the firefighters lost but to policemen, civilians ... everyone. It may not be pleasant — the inability to forget — but it's necessary. Two years have passed, but we cannot remove ourselves from what happened to our country, our neighbors and our world in general. The jolt is good; we need to remember, be vigilant and do all we can do eliminate the global circumstances that made such atrocities possible.

Seattle steamed over coffee tax

SEATTLE — This city's devotion to the almighty coffee bean will run smack into its equally famous liberal conscience as a proposed tax on espresso drinks goes to voters next week.

On Tuesday, Seattle residents will face a ballot question asking them to add a dime-a-cup tax to their espresso drinks. This "luxury" tax, as Initiative 77 calls it, would pay for preschool and day care programs.

But for many espresso lovers in a city that helped push the gourmet coffee revolution, the proposal is nothing short of heresy.

"This is not a luxury," 34-year-old tech support worker Rob Marker said solemnly, hoisting his iced vanilla mocha on the sidewalk outside the hip cafe Coffee Messiah.

Security guard C. J. Lessig, between sips of her iced coconut mocha, agreed: "It's a way of life, man!"

Seattle has earned a reputation as a tree-hugging, whale-saving, WTO-protesting, tax-friendly bastion of liberalism. But scratch a lefty espresso addict on this issue, and you might get Rush Limbaugh.

"Here I am, forced to pay more for my basic necessity to fund irresponsibility," said Marker, warming to the topic. "I believe people have kids without considering it. I take issue with the greater issue of public funding for child care. Yes, it's needed, but it also feeds irresponsibility."

Antique car traverses two continents

ANCHORAGE, Alaska — After a 40,000-mile drive from Argentina to Alaska, a couple's dream to reach the Arctic Ocean in their antique car stalled with their goal in sight: The oil fields separating them from the ocean had closed to visitors for the season.

But now, Herman Zapp and his wife, Candelaria, will be allowed to continue the 230 miles to Prudhoe Bay after getting the green light from the BP oil company.

The Zapps left Buenos Aires on Jan. 25, 2000, in a dark blue 1928 Graham-Paige automobile with "Driving from Argentina to Alaska" painted on its side.

SENATE

Group irons out plans for new academic year

By MAUREEN REYNOLDS
Associate News Editor

At their second official meeting, the Student Senate laid out their plans for the coming year.

Howard senator Brin Anderson said that her committee, Residence Life, plans to look into the recent issue regarding RA's and their training policies. Anderson, along with the rest of her committee, plans to meet with associate vice president of student affairs Bill Kirk sometime next week to discuss the issue.

Judicial Council President Elliot Poindexter informed the Senate that Freshman Class Council elections will be held Sept. 22.

Any freshman considering running for a position needs to present the Student Government with a petition signed by 20 percent of their dorm's freshman class. Petitions are due on Monday by 6 p.m.

A candidate must win 50 percent of the vote in order to be elected, and if no one achieves this amount, the top two candidates will participate in a run-off election on Wednesday, September 24. The elections will be held in each dorm.

Sophomore class president James Leito nominated sophomore class vice president Kate Distler to the position of sophomore class adviser to assist the Freshman Class Council. Distler, who served last year as freshman class vice president, was unanimously approved by the Senate.

Chief of staff Emily Chin reminded senators to inform their dorms of the events that will be taking place today in memory the Sept. 11, 2001 terrorist attacks. Chin said there will be a rosary held at the Grotto at noon and a Mass in the Basilica at 5:15 p.m.

Judge seals victim's medical records

By MEGHANNE DOWNES
News Editor

During Donald Dykes's trial Tuesday, a St. Joseph County judge sealed the medical records of the woman who accused four former Notre Dame football players of sexually assaulting her.

Judge Jerome Freese ordered both the woman's medical and psychological records to be sealed during the defense's cross-examination of her when it was discovered she was never told she had the right to refuse their release.

During Abram Elam's trial, the first of the four former players' trials, both the defense and prosecution used these records to present their cases.

Freese blamed the legal mistake on former St. Joseph County Prosecutor Chris Toth and said it was "as close as you can come to malpractice."

The charges against the four former players were filed by Toth's office before he lost his election to current St. Joseph County Prosecutor Michael Dvorak. The four cases were then transferred to a special prosecutor, Hendricks County Prosecutor Maureen Devlin, because two of Dvorak's deputy prosecutors either worked with or served as an attorney for one of the players.

Dykes is the second of the former players to be tried and is charged with rape, conspiracy to commit rape and sexual battery. Last month, Elam was convicted of sexual battery but acquitted of criminal deviate conduct and conspiracy to commit rape. Lorenzo Crawford and Justin Smith's trials will begin later this year.

The four former players testified at Elam's trial that the sexual acts were consensual and maintained their innocence, while the woman said she was gang raped.

Storin said the University's decision to wait to build the memorial is not unprecedented. The Clarke Memorial Fountain located in front of LaFortune honors those who died in the Vietnam War and was built in 1986, 11 years after the war's conclusion.

"A memorial hopefully lasts forever and is permanent," Storin said. "You want to have the proper perspective when you commit to building one."

Storin did not rule out the possibility of the winning design being used in the future, though he did say if the memorial was built, it would be smaller than originally envisioned. Storin also said the proposed location of a memorial on South Quad would be a radical step, as the expansive space has no structures in its interior, except for the flagpole.

Doubts

Klein, a senior from Long Island, N.Y. Klein, who spent his summer working in New York City, said that although he may feel safe at Notre Dame, the unease that descended on the city two years ago has still not faded. This summer's electrical blackout, he said, only proved his assumptions.

"When I was in the blackout you could tell people were thinking there was more to come than a blackout. Obviously, though, I feel more at risk in the city than at my house in the suburbs. Terrorists aren't going to attack something inconsequential like Floral Park," he said.

Freshman Sarah Tebeest of Wayne, a town in northern New Jersey, said she didn't think Notre Dame could be a target of attack. "I feel safer here than at home and I feel quite safe at home," she said.

Students from other parts of the country further removed from the direct effects of the terrorist acts said they have begun to feel relatively safer at home, due to increased security and safety measures that have been taken across the nation.

Sarah Cancellare, a junior from El Paso, TX, said she had specific reasons for her feelings of security while at home. "I do feel safe at home. I think a lot has to do with the border patrol we have always had. There's always been increased awareness in El Paso because of illegal immigrants and drugs. They've added weapons of mass destruction to their plate now and further increased awareness."

Far removed from both borders and major cities, Colin Pogge, a junior from Iowa, said he feels relatively safe in his hometown of Des Moines.

"I realize that the nation at large is still in danger but I also realize that Des Moines is probably not a hot spot for terrorism," he said.

Agus Galmarini, a freshman from Florida, echoed Pogge's sentiment.

"I don't think there's anything there that's worth attacking in Ft. Myers," she said, adding, "I feel safe at ND. I can't explain it, but I do."

Not all members of the Notre Dame community agree that the United States' efforts to combat terrorism have resulted in complete confidence in personal safety.

"I do not feel that the war on terrorism has made me safe. Safer yes, safe no. 9/11 was a wake-up call, and we've made progress with some degree of emergency preparedness, drug stockpiling, and disrupting al-Qaeda, but the Department of Homeland Security needs to get its act together and the funds for airport security are woefully short, among other problems," Lindley said.

While students were mostly united in their lack of concern for their safety on campus or at home, they expressed differing views regarding the "War on Terror" and the Department of Homeland Security's Terror Alert System. A number said they believed the "War on Terror" has increased American awareness and security. Galmarini said she had different beliefs.

"We haven't found Saddam, we haven't found Osama. I think it's made us look more vulnerable actually. It's very obvious that we haven't accomplished what we set out to do," she said.

Cynicism over the Terror Alert system was generally expressed. Students said it was unreliable, of little impact and colorful, but meaningless.

Cancellare said the system had its merits, saying, "I think anything we do in that respect can make us safer. Focusing any intelligent group of people on one goal is a step in the right direction. We are making a concerted effort on something we weren't making an effort on before. The system definitely makes people more aware of the status of terrorism and the potential threats on the horizon."

While many students expressed a sincere hope that the government's efforts to stop terrorist activity will prove successful, they did not express the belief that another attack is impossible.

"More than likely another attack will occur. I feel it will be difficult for it to be on the same scale as 9/11, but it's not out of the question," said Klein.

Although officers of the Notre Dame Security and Police Department were present at Turtle Creek on Saturday, the University did not take any action in planning the crackdown.

Deitchley said NDSP was called only after excise and city police arrived at the scene and decided they needed assistance.

When the excise police are done processing Saturday's report, they will turn those names over to NDSP who will then pass the information on to the Office of Residence Life for disciplinary action against the students involved.

Those receiving citations on Saturday will be processed through the St. Joseph County court system. Deitchley said most offenders will be offered pre-trial diversion for a $250 fee. If they complete the program then their permanent record will be expunged.

Saudis declare Barbie immoral

DUBAI, United Arab Emirates — Saudi Arabia's religious police have declared Barbie dolls a threat to morality, complaining that the revealing clothes of the "Jewish" toy — already banned in the kingdom — are offensive to Islam.

The Committee for the Propagation of Virtue and Prevention of Vice, as the religious police are officially known, lists the dolls on a section of its Web site devoted to items deemed offensive to the conservative Saudi interpretation of Islam.

"Jewish Barbie dolls, with their revealing clothes and shameful postures, accessories and tools are a symbol of decadence to the perverted West. Let us beware of her dangers and be careful," said a message posted on the site.

Blast rocks U.S. compound, 3 dead

IRBIL, Iraq — A suicide bomber tried to drive a TNT-laden SUV into a U.S. intelligence compound in northern Iraq, but it blew up short of the target, killing three people and seriously wounding four American intelligence officers, officials said Wednesday.

A Kurdish security official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said al-Qaida was behind the bombing in Irbil late Tuesday, less than two days before second anniversary of the Sept. 11 attacks. He gave no evidence to support the claim.

In Baghdad, meanwhile, two U.S. soldiers were killed by bombs in separate incidents.

Maj. James Bullion, civil affairs executive officer of the 404th Civil Affairs Battalion, Special Operations, said two children were among the dead in Irbil, the largest Kurdish-controlled city in northern Iraq.

"I'm genuinely sorry for what I did," he said before the lethal injection was administered. "I ask you to reach down in your heart and forgive me. There's no excuse for what I did."

Hayes, 54, was the 21st inmate executed this year in Texas, which leads the nation in carrying out capital punishment.

South Bend cop hit in shooting

SOUTH BEND — A police officer was shot and wounded as he knocked on the door of a home while responding to a report of a disturbance, police said.

After Tuesday night's shooting, Cpl. Steve Noonan was taken to a hospital, where a single bullet was removed from his right leg. Noonan, a 13-year veteran of the force, was later released.

The single gunshot was fired from inside the home and came through the front door as Noonan and four other officers responded to a report of a disturbance involving a weapon, police said.

Bin Laden lauds 9/11 attackers

Associated Press

BEIRUT, Lebanon — The first video image of Osama bin Laden in nearly two years was broadcast on Al-Jazeera TV Wednesday, the eve of the second anniversary of the Sept. 11 attacks. The al-Qaida leader was shown walking through rocky terrain with his top aide, both carrying assault rifles.

In an eight-minute audiotape accompanying the video footage, a speaker identified as bin Laden praises the "great damage to the enemy" Sept. 11 and mentions five hijackers by name. On a second tape, a voice said to be that of chief deputy Ayman al-Zawahri threatens more attacks on Americans and calls on Iraqi guerrillas to "bury" U.S. troops.

According to terrorism experts, such tapes reassure al-Qaida sympathizers that the terror network is still a force and its leaders still active and in seeming good health. A tape showing bin Laden would be crucial to that effort and the timing — a day before the anniversary of the 9/11 attacks, blamed on al-Qaida — highly symbolic.

Al-Jazeera said the tapes were produced in late April or early May, but the Arab satellite channel did not say how or when it obtained them. The backdrop in the video resembled the border regions between Afghanistan and Pakistan, where U.S. officials believe bin Laden is hiding out.

U.S. intelligence officials will review the tapes to try to determine if they are authentic and when and where they were made, officials in Washington said.

"This is another reminder that they continue to plot to attack us and to attack freedom," Sean McCormack, a spokesman for the National Security Council, said Wednesday.

President Bush, asked about the tape during a tour of forensics labs at the Osama bin Laden appears in this image from a recent video aired Wednesday on al-Jazeera TV. Bin Laden declared the Sept. 11 attacks "only the first skirmishes" in a larger campaign against the Western world.

FBI Academy in Quantico, Va., said he had not heard it yet.

Messages from al-Qaida leaders are sometimes viewed as presaging an attack. Press reports from the Mideast over the last week had suggested a new bin Laden video was set to air Wednesday, one U.S. official said, speaking on the condition of anonymity.

The Department of Homeland Security previously said it did not plan to raise the national terror threat level above its current position at yellow, signifying an elevated threat of attack.

The voice identified as bin Laden praises the Sept. 11 hijackers.

"Those men caused great damage to the enemy and disturbed their plans," the speaker says, calling them true believers who should become an ideal for other believers.

He makes no direct threatening remarks, but the voice said to be al-Zawahri threatens more attacks on Americans.

"What you saw until now are only the first skirmishes," al-Zawahri allegedly says in a 12-minute tape. "The true epic has not begun."

A religious song could be heard in the background of the alleged bin Laden audiotape. Both tapes were translated from the Arabic by The Associated Press.

The video image of bin Laden appeared to be the first since he was shown at a dinner with associates on Nov. 9, 2001 in Afghanistan. That tape was made public a month later.

The tape follows several attributed to other al-Qaida figures who made a point of saying bin Laden was still active in the fight against the West. The last such message, attributed to an al-Qaida spokesman, was aired on the Arab television station Al-Arabiya Sept. 7. In August, an audiotape attributed to al-Zawahri also stressed that bin Laden was alive and well.

Bin Laden was last heard from on April 7, exhorting Muslims in a tape obtained by AP to rise up against Kuwait, Saudi Arabia and other governments he claimed were "agents of America."

Bush calls for more police powers

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Bush told Congress on Wednesday to "untie the hands" of law enforcement officials and arm them with wider legal powers to combat terrorists, saying the groups that struck America two years ago are wounded but still dangerous.

He specifically called for expanding use of the federal death penalty, tougher bail restrictions and greater subpoena powers that he said are available for other crimes, such as drug trafficking and embezzling, but can't be used against terrorism. "This disparity in the law makes no sense," Bush said in a speech at the FBI Academy in nearby Quantico, Va.

Bush's appeal threw the White House into a growing debate over the anti-terrorism USA Patriot Act enacted after the attacks of Sept. 11, 2001. Critics say the law is too intrusive and a threat to civil liberties and fear that the administration is trying to pass a second version of the measure in piecemeal fashion. Even some House and Senate Republicans have talked about rolling back portions of the Patriot Act.

"For the sake of the American people," Bush said, "Congress should change the law and give law enforcement officials the same tools they have to fight terror that they have to fight other crime."

Bush acknowledged that not all members of Congress agree with the need to tighten the law but said a lot of them do. The White House indicated Bush supports tougher laws in other areas beyond the three instances he cited.

The American Civil Liberties Union said that "further erosions of judicial oversight and the basic checks and balances ... are the wrong path to take."

FACULTY SENATE

Group amends Academic Articles

By BETH ERICKSON
News Writer

The Faculty Senate convened Wednesday, passing a resolution to amend the Academic Articles to create provisions for hearings for severe sanctions against faculty members.

Developed by the Academic Council and the Faculty Senate under the leadership of Professor Tom Merluzzi, the amendment was passed unanimously and will be reviewed by University President Father Edward Malloy.

The University currently has no provisions regarding severe sanctions against faculty members. According to senators, hearings are held at the whims of the administration. They said that members of the faculty are rarely offered hearings — instead, private conferences, in which their sanctions are agreed upon “quietly,” are held.

A resolution to establish faculty grievance procedures was sent back to committee by a vote of 14 to 12. An illustrative list of specific grievances will be added to the proposed amendment.

John Robinson, Senate chair, expressed approval of these amendments at the beginning of the meeting. He said that he hoped the Senate could agree upon “provisions to protect each of us if ever accused of wrongdoing.”

Robinson also laid out the goals of the Faculty Senate in his opening address. “We must contribute to making Notre Dame a better university and a better place for faculty,” he said.

Members unanimously elected Jeremy Fein, director of the Environmental Molecular Science Institute, to the position of Vice-Chair and anthropology professor Karen Richman as Co-Secretary. Sociology professor Rich Williams and computer science and management professor Ramzi Bualuan were elected Campus Life Council representatives.

The Student Affairs committee, chaired by psychology professor Jay Brandenberger, focused on Teacher Course Evaluations and the Honor Code in its first committee meeting of the year.

Members of the committee said that the Honor Code “doesn’t promote honesty, and in fact promotes dishonesty.” They said that members of the faculty are left “out of the loop” in decisions concerning the Honor Code, and that “faculty members themselves are on trial,” particularly in cases where prominent athletes are accused.

The committee proposed a reworking of the Honor Code’s language, as well as a required yearly recommitment on the part of students. A member of the Student Senate agreed with these proposals and said that hardworking students will appreciate attempts to enforce the Code.

The committee also discussed the proposed publishing of Teacher Course Evaluations. Faculty members agreed that these evaluations are becoming increasingly more important in tenure decisions and that the publication of such documents could possibly constitute a violation of privacy. One committee member said that the dean has seemingly interpreted tenure promotion procedures to mean that a professor must be “excellent” to become tenured and then must become “more excellent” to become a full professor. In light of this interpretation, TCE’s are critical in tenure decisions.

Members of the committee questioned the accuracy of the TCE’s and said that the evaluations were “perfectly grade dependent,” meaning that most students merely assess professors based on the difficulty of the class. The faculty members called for changes to be made in the wording of questions on the evaluations.

“The style of the questions is too subjective,” they said.

The committee will reconsider issues concerning TCE’s, the Honor Code, and faculty/student interaction at next month’s Faculty Senate meeting.

In other Faculty Senate news:

♦ The Academic Affairs committee discussed shrinking library resources. They are looking to develop a better process for faculty input.

♦ The Benefits committee, having worked with human resources over the summer, announced that North American Health will carry the HMO for the University. The committee is looking into insurance for retirees and disability insurance, as well as issues concerning charges for faculty parking.

Tutu

South African government to probe the flagrant human rights violations that had occurred since 1960 and the nation’s deepest struggles with apartheid.

Today, the Joan Kroc Institute’s Research Initiative on the Resolution of Ethnic Conflict will host Tutu as the keynote speaker for its “Peacebuilding After Peace Accords” conference, the culmination of a three-year project dedicated to the study of peaceful post-conflict resolutions in countries once ravaged by political and civil strife.

The archbishop’s lecture, entitled “The Struggle for Social Justice in Post-Apartheid South Africa,” will outline the work of Tutu and others in healing South Africa’s deep social wounds after the fall of the apartheid regime in 1994.

Tutu, despite his retirement as Archbishop of Cape Town in June 1996, has continued the peacebuilding work that first brought him to the attention of the Nobel Committee twelve years before.

“We invited him, since the whole conference focus is on post-accord rebuilding,” said Rashied Omar, RIREC coordinator and doctoral candidate at the University of Cape Town. “We thought he’d be an appropriate speaker ... He will look at the South African process ... some of the strengths and even perhaps some of the things that might have been done differently.”

To celebrate the arrival on campus of such a well-respected individual, the Notre Dame Folk Choir will open Tutu’s speech with a collection of songs to pay tribute to the connection between the goals of the conference and the events of Sept. 11, 2001.

“As part of the keynote, we will also have music and reflection to commemorate the date,” Omar said.

The conference which Tutu’s speech will headline is the capstone for what has been a collaborative initiative on the part of a group of distinguished international scholars and peace-builders, people whose mission it has been to reduce and get to the root of ethnic conflict around the globe. Omar said that the focus of RIREC’s research has been countries whose political conflict has been resolved on an official level, but still have a great deal of social and cultural healing to do before peace is restored.

“One of the goals of the project is to produce a number of scholarly volumes that will address ... the legacy of violence, how to transform the consciousness of a community, how to reintegrate insurgent groups into a regular army ... to reintegrate young people who may have been scarred by this violence ... and to implement transitional justice,” he said.

Tutu’s position as a religious leader not only set him apart from the members of the RIREC research team, but it made him particularly appropriate for participation in the conference, Omar said.

“He’s not an academic; he’s a religious individual and a practitioner of peace,” he said. “He’s a very important figure in this world. Religion is often associated with conflict in this world ... [Tutu] and others like Dr. Martin Luther King ... represent wonderful icons of individual leaders who have drawn in their faith commitment — and Notre Dame being a university of faith, it’s a wonderful example to students that faith can help to heal the world.”

The lecture, which is free and open to the public, will be held in McKenna Hall today at 7:30 p.m. Omar and Kroc Institute Associate Director Hal Culbertson said they expect a large crowd at the event.

“We don’t have a venue large enough for the amount excitement that we’ve heard on the part of many many people,” Omar said. “We will transmit the speech into adjacent rooms at McKenna Hall.”

Culbertson said that additional overflow audiences will be sent to DeBartolo 101 to view the speech on a closed-circuit television system.

WTO reps meet amid protests

CANCUN, Mexico — Negotiators from 146 countries sat down to thorny trade negotiations Wednesday, with rich and poor nations pushing conflicting agendas on agricultural reform and leaders cautioning that their decisions could mean life or death for billions of people.

Thousands of poor farmers, worried that more trade will drive them out of business, clashed with riot police as they tried to storm past barricades blocking the site of the World Trade Organization meeting. Hours later they dispersed, vowing to try again.

Int'l Paper to ax 3,000 employees

STAMFORD, Conn. — International Paper Co. plans to cut 3,000 jobs, or about 3.5 percent of its work force, in the next year to help improve profits, a company spokeswoman said Wednesday.

The company has been discussing the work force reductions with its employees in the past week, said Jenny Boardman, an IP spokeswoman. It employs about 86,500 people overall.

The reductions will primarily affect salaried personnel throughout the company, including cuts at the Stamford headquarters and about 450 positions in Memphis, Tenn.

A small portion of the job cuts will be achieved from attrition, but most will be from layoffs, she said. The company will provide severance packages and help finding a new job, Boardman said.

Mortgage delinquencies up in 2Q

WASHINGTON — More homeowners were behind on their mortgage payments in the last quarter as job losses put a strain on some households' budgets.

The seasonally adjusted percentage of mortgage payments 30 or more days past due for all home loans rose to 4.62 percent in the April to June quarter, up sharply from 4.52 percent in the first three months of this year, the Mortgage Bankers Association of America reported Wednesday in its quarterly survey. The survey covers roughly 34 million mortgage loans.

The second quarter's delinquency rate was the highest since the third quarter of 2002, when the delinquency rate was 4.66 percent.

Dollar tumbles on forex markets

NEW YORK — Hurt by continued concern about the stubbornly weak U.S. labor market, the dollar slid sharply against its main rivals Tuesday apart from the yen, thanks only to another round of apparent intervention by Japanese monetary authorities.

Strong bids from Japanese and U.S. financial institutions — some out of Tokyo — lifted the dollar from its lows during New York trading, preventing it from sinking below 116.00 yen, a level market participants say Japanese authorities are determined to protect.

Got this was virtually the only swiss the dollar got all day. Against the euro, the dollar, sterling — and until the apparent intervention, the yen — the currency was consistently under heavy selling pressure.

Enron exec starts prison term

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Enron's former treasurer pleaded guilty to conspiracy and was led away in handcuffs and ankle chains Wednesday to begin serving five years behind bars — the first executive to go to prison in the scandal that brought down the energy company and rocked Wall Street.

Federal prosecutors said that Ben Glisan Jr. made no deal to implicate higher-ups such as former chairman Kenneth Lay but that the sentence — the maximum under the law — should send a "somewhat chilling message."

Glisan, 37, admitted helping design financial deals that enriched him and illegally kept losses off Enron's books.

"I think I would simply like to say I take full responsibility for my actions," Glisan softly told U.S. District Judge Kenneth Hoyt.

He will be on supervised release for three years after getting out of prison. He also agreed to forfeit nearly $1 million in profits from an off-the-books deal at Enron and agreed to not seek a refund of $412,000 in income taxes he paid on that profit.

U.S. marshals escorted Glisan outside the courthouse to be taken to a federal lockup. His suit jacket was slung over his handcuffed hands, and ankle chains forced him to take small steps. There was no immediate word on what prison he would be assigned to.

Twenty-three other counts against Glisan were dismissed, including money laundering and fraud.

Glisan was indicted along with his one-time boss, former Enron finance chief Andrew Fastow. Fastow is accused of masterminding the schemes that led the Houston energy-trading company into bankruptcy in December 2001 amid devastating disclosures of inflated profits, hidden debt and questionable accounting. He is awaiting trial in April.

Lay resigned as chairman and chief executive, but no charges have been filed against him.

Leslie Caldwell, head of the Justice Department's Enron Task Force, said Glisan's refusal to cooperate with investigators will not hinder their case against Fastow or anyone else, and they do not need his help.

But she said others should take note of his plea and immediate imprisonment.

"He was viewed as one of the whiz kids at Enron," Caldwell said. "The fact that he now admitted he created a fraudulent way for Enron to hide things off its books I think will send a somewhat chilling message to other people."

Andrew Weissmann, a top prosecutor with the task force, added that plaintiffs suing Enron executives for fraud can use Glisan's admission to bolster their cases. "This now makes their case a virtual slam-dunk," he said.

Glisan, a one-time managing director, was the second former Enron executive to plead guilty in the scandal. An executive of equal rank, Michael Kopper, a managing director who was one of Fastow's top lieutenants, pleaded guilty last year to money laundering and conspiracy. He is helping prosecutors while awaiting sentencing.

Glisan was fired in 2001, when an internal probe revealed he gained the $1 million from a $5,800 investment in one of several complex off-the-books deals at the heart of the Justice Department's case against the company. Prosecutors say such deals skimmed profits from Enron.

Early last year, Glisan had tried without success to strike a deal and avoid prosecution by telling what he knows about the financial details.

At Wednesday's court appearance, Glisan hugged his wife, Barbara, and appeared to be suppressing tears before joining his lawyers in front of the bench. The family and the attorneys did not comment.

Big Board reveals Grasso payout

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Pressed by regulators to explain the lavish pay for chairman Dick Grasso, the New York Stock Exchange revealed an additional $48 million in deferred compensation Tuesday but said Grasso would forfeit it — after a payout of nearly $140 million announced two weeks ago.

A letter to Securities and Exchange Commission Chairman William Donaldson showed how Grasso's salary and other compensation ballooned from a total of $3 million in 1996, his first full year as chairman and chief executive, to $25.5 million in 2001, his most richly paid year. Multimillion-dollar bonuses, particularly in 2000 and 2001, accounted for much of the growth.

In the letter, H. Carl McCall, chairman of the exchange's compensation committee, answered point by point the concerns raised by Donaldson last week. The SEC chairman, who held the top NYSE job before Grasso, questioned the payout and set a Tuesday deadline for the exchange to respond.

The NYSE, a quasi-private institution charged with regulating the public companies traded under its watch, has been widely criticized for Grasso's pay — announced even as the exchange demanded more accountability from its members and was instituting its own reforms. The Aug. 27 disclosure sparked protest throughout the U.S. financial world.

The SEC confirmed Tuesday that it had received McCall's response, but declined to comment further.

Grasso said Tuesday he decided to forgo the $48 million in the interest of the NYSE, and to help restore its focus — which he said had been distracted since the details of his pay became public.

"When my contract was signed in '99, no one could have anticipated these levels of compensation," Grasso said. "This institution should not be preoccupied with talking about the compensation of its leader."

Margaret and Keri: Just Call Them Grace

by Chandra Johnson

Assistant to the President & Director, African American Student Ministry

I will never forget the fall semester of 2001. In addition to looking forward to another year, I enrolled in Prof. Thomas O'Meara's Theologians of Grace class. It started off great. On the first day of class, grace was introduced as the activity of God in human history which touches realms from politics to mysticism, and grounds the existence and mission of Christ. Two weeks later, three planes plowed into the Twin Towers and the Pentagon, and one crashed into an open field. Ground Zero, not grace, became my focus for the rest of the semester. From that day on, I spent many a class wondering how grace fit into the political, mystical and Christian scheme of the events of September 11th. What would Thomas Aquinas and Karl Rahner have to say about God's activity in human history as we watched almost three thousand people disintegrate under steel before our eyes. Did Christ exist at all and what mission must a Christian claim now? Numb most days, I kept going to class and quite unexpectedly, on the last day of class, my questions were answered.

Fr. O'Meara's final comment on the last day of his last class struck me harder than the Trade Center tragedy. When asked where he thought Christianity was headed in the 21st century, his response was, "I believe Christianity is just beginning." Wow. I will never forget this statement because it was that light-bulb-moment when what you have believed all of your life suddenly becomes crystal clear. Somewhere deep within my soul I have always sensed that the Christianity we practice today is phase one of a profoundly transforming lifestyle Jesus of Nazareth espoused two millennia ago. I also believe phase two is just on the horizon.

They tell us that since September 11th, 2001, we live in fear, daily. Could this be true? When an airplane appears to be flying too low and too loud, how long do you watch it? What were your first thoughts when the tornado siren sounded a few weeks ago? How did you feel at half time last Saturday when the Fighting Irish left the field with a looming point deficit? Were we afraid? Hopeless? Whenever a world event effects the way people see themselves, new voices rise up to reignite their faith. Christ was the voice of freedom and reason for his people, and his listeners responded with renewed hope and purpose. Fear was no longer a force in their lives and Christianity – phase one – was born. If we listen closely, this same voice can be heard in our own backyard. Could phase two be knocking at our door?

Margaret Laracy, the Class of 2003 valedictorian, used her time on the commencement platform to profess a timely and prophetic message to her peers. In speaking of the eminent challenges they were about to face, she repeated over and over, "Do not be afraid..." If Margaret's reflections weren't penetrating enough, senior Keri Oxley's First Year Orientation speech brought it home when she said to incoming freshmen, "Do not be afraid. Do not be afraid to look to the reflections of the Notre Dame community...Be malleable...Integrate your life." I think it no coincidence that the gospel reading of Christ's charge to the disciples to love, give and forgive unconditionally will always be on or near September 11th. Every year we will be reminded that grace is the activity of God in human history, fully realized when we choose loving over being afraid. If events like September 11th, the overwhelming response to Margaret and Keri's messages, and yes, even our incredible win over Washington State haven't spoken to our hearts, what will?

As we begin another academic year and enter into our quiet memories of September 11th, may we recommit once again to letting God love us by loving ourselves and one another. Don't hesitate another minute. Just do it.

* After teaching theology for 20 years at Notre Dame, Fr. O'Meara retired in December, 2001. His new book, A Theologian's Journey, may be one you want to check out.

Every year we will be reminded that grace is the activity of God in human history, fully realized when we choose loving over being afraid. If events like September 11th, the overwhelming response to Margaret and Keri's messages, and yes, even our incredible win over Washington State haven't spoken to our hearts, what will?

ND graduate takes over as Indiana governor

Kernan temporarily assumes role for ailing O'Bannon

Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — Minutes after formally transferring Gov. Frank O'Bannon's powers to Lt. Gov. Joe Kernan on Wednesday, legislative leaders and Supreme Court justices gathered in the Statehouse for prayer.

More than 500 people joined them in the soaring, marbled rotunda for a service that was both solemn and uplifting. And during that hour — in a building that breathes politics — politics disappeared.

Woodie White, Indiana bishop of the United Methodist Church, said it was O'Bannon, a powerful man yet common man, who made that possible.

"There are these times in life when differences in political party, race, ethnicity, social and economic status are transcended, and the community finds a common bond in a shared concern in its corporate pain and grief," White said.

At a hospital in Chicago, doctors said O'Bannon, 73, had emerged from drug-induced coma and showed some "small but significant improvements" following a Monday stroke. He remained in critical condition Wednesday.

An hour before the prayer service, legislative leaders petitioned the state Supreme Court to transfer power. Kernan already had assumed duties as acting governor, but Republican Senate President Pro Tem Robert Garton and Democratic House Speaker Patrick Bauer wanted to follow a formal process under the Indiana Constitution.

The governor's wife, Judy, issued a statement from the governor's Chicago hospital saying she was comfortable with their decision.

"We are aware of the formal process that is occurring in Indiana, and in it we are seeing what we have always known: Our state government is a strong institution based on a constitution," Judy O'Bannon said.

Bauer and Garton said they signed the petition with heavy hearts, since they had long admired O'Bannon and began their Statehouse careers the same time he did. Garton and O'Bannon were elected to the Senate in 1970, and Bauer won his House seat that year.

And Garton said he wanted to emphasize that O'Bannon "is still the governor of Indiana, and Judy O'Bannon is still the first lady of Indiana."

Tough questions about being genuinely Catholic

I say I'm Catholic, but am I lying? More than 90 percent of us claim Christianity, and almost all of us claim some virtuous faith, but what does this mean? We have the top American and international students who are likely to join the ranks of success in fields ranging from business to science and community leadership around the globe. But are we genuinely living what we profess?

ND Changing Times

In searching our ways to cut the grain from the chaff, it must be extremely clear that actions and not individuals are defined as good or bad. The focus is on a positive, encouraged quest to fulfill the greatness we can achieve together.

There are pressing questions on the conscience on these issues. Where do I spend my free time and money? Do I spend more on alcohol or in giving to those in hard, life-threatening conditions? Or is it just accepted that college is a time to party more so I can focus better on the serious work to come? Christ's first miracle was making wine; He's a God of celebrations. But He also endured great pain for the sinful and suffering and called us to follow.

If I were to see a homeless person begging on campus, would I live out the Catholic corporal works of mercy and welcome the person with open arms? Or would I consider it a nuisance to avoid? The University does not allow panhandlers on campus and may issue a trespassing violation letter before escorting them away. Has my "universal" Catholic faith become exclusionary at Notre Dame?

Seeing the Main Building and Golden Dome directs me to recognize the glory of the Blessed Mother in the community. But what is the cost of my admiration of this landmark? There are costly paintings within. The bathrooms have made a "Restroom Hall of Fame" for its Victorian tile floors and solid oak stall doors. Mary is clad in gold. When Notre Dame-sponsored service activities have shoved my hands into those of people searching for food and shelter both home and abroad, how can I justify this affluence?

A couple years ago, children from the Center for the Homeless had an evening on campus with AFROTC's Arnold Air Society. When a little girl on my shoulders first saw the Dome, she was in awe: "Wow, what is that?" A question that tears at the heart, it's easier asked than answered when it comes from a homeless child.

I've heard friends in the business college bemoan the corporate focus. But I've met and written about the dean of that college. She's felt the burn of poverty and has an unmistakable value-centered view of her college's education. So why do some students feel a disconnect? Are they simply failing at grounding idealism in necessary tangible skills, or have parts of our community become corporatized?

Several question ROTC on campus and the military it supports. Pope John Paul II opposed the war. How do I answer his criticisms? Can Notre Dame succeed in strengthening a moral voice in the military? Can I make a difference?

What are our institutional priorities? Are we sacrificing our content and focus on social justice for our academic reputation? Or are we really intending to witness to the secular world through the respect we gain?

Which comes first between Christ and career? Having a financially secure job in engineering can help me provide for a family and others in need, right?

Are these questions symptomatic of a secularized Catholicism being influenced by American consumerism? Other faiths from both the Eastern and Western spheres are also struggling, though in different ways, with faith and modernity.

Christ said the road to life is narrow and so difficult that only those who actively search and work on it find the path. Some of his apostles cried, "This is harsh teaching; who can follow it?" and ended their walk. He told a parable where some enter Heaven because they cared for the suffering whereas others are separated from those who go to Hell because they didn't. Must I serve within a life of faith to enter Paradise? Can I call myself Christian if I don't?

It's noted in Ezekiel that we will be held accountable if we don't dissuade each other from any evil ways. Although these are questions I don't have quick answers too, I know they're worth asking.

Through all the tough questions, I have faith that everyone can find the way. God speaks of us in Isaiah: "[My word] will not return to me empty, but will accomplish what I desire and achieve the purpose for which I sent it. You will go out in joy and be led forth in peace, the mountains and hills will burst into song before you, and all the trees of the field will clap their hands."

How do these questions relate to the community here? If Christ were to visit in person, what would he say? What do you think?

QUOTE OF THE DAY

"This is a day when all Americans from every walk of life unite in our resolve for justice and peace"

George W. Bush
president

GUEST COLUMN

Remembering Sept. 11

Richard Nixon often cautioned young people that higher education makes the mind strong but the backbone weak. His warning is especially appropriate when examining academia's response to the terrorist attacks of Sept. 11. As we remember the events of that horrific Tuesday, it is imperative that we understand the moral lessons America learned from Sept. 11, as well as the inability of Cornell's elite to appreciate these same lessons. The contrast between our country's renewed patriotism and our campus' "Blame America First" attitude is horrifying.

Joe Sabia

Cornell Daily Sun

Sept. 11, 2001, was one of the darkest days in the history of the world. Who among us can ever forget the images we saw that day? Commercial jets piercing each of the Twin Towers. Smoke billowing out of the Pentagon. A smoldering crater in Shanksville, Pa. Islamo-fascists celebrating and dancing in the streets.

But in the wake of these savage terrorist attacks, America experienced what Ronald Reagan once called a Great Rediscovery. We rediscovered who we are as a people. We rediscovered our nation's founding principles — self-sacrifice, faith in God, and American exceptionalism.

Self-sacrifice was on display in many corners of the United States on Sept. 11, but never more so than in New York City. In her book "A Heart, a Cross, and a Flag," Peggy Noonan captured this spirit:

"On a local TV show [on Sept. 12] the reporter Dick Oliver was asked how it was that so many firemen died, couldn't they have escaped, and he said with a rough voice that had love in it, 'Firemen don't run out of buildings. Firemen run into buildings.'"

Through their selfless actions, these firemen helped Americans to recapture their faith. But they weren't the only men who answered God's call that day. Aboard United Airlines Flight 93, Jeremy Glick, Mark Bingham, Tom Burnett and Todd Beamer led America's first victory in the War on Terrorism. In her book "Let's Roll!," Todd Beamer's wife, Lisa, wrote lovingly of her husband's heroism on the morning of Sept. 11: "What made Todd different from many other men who are merely religious was not the fact that he was willing to die for his faith; the terrorists did that! No, Todd was willing to live for his faith. Better still, he was willing to live his faith all the way until the end. Todd built his life on a firm foundation so that when the storm came on Sept. 11 he didn't have to check the blueprints to see if everything he had built his life on was going to stand. He knew."

Thanks to the stirring leadership of President George W. Bush, Americans have rediscovered why the United States is, indeed, a shining city on a hill. In his Sept. 20, 2001, speech to Congress, President Bush reminded us that America is guided by Divine Providence. "I will not forget this wound to our country or those who inflicted it. I will not yield. I will not rest. I will not relent in waging this struggle for freedom and security for the American people. The course of this conflict is not known, yet its outcome is certain. Freedom and fear, justice and cruelty, have always been at war, and we know that God is not neutral between them," Bush said.

While Americans were in the midst of a Great Rediscovery in the post-Sept. 11 world, Cornell's elites were treating the terrorist attacks as if they were a hurricane, tornado, or some other natural disaster. Though they were empathetic toward families of the deceased, they seemed to forget that their fellow countrymen were slaughtered by terrorists. Mere days after Sept. 11, Cornell professor James Garbarino, human development, was in full psychobabble mode, making excuses for the hijackers:

"Often [terrorists] have experienced personal suffering or family loss, or historical victimization and are seeking a way to give meaning to that suffering through acts of violent revenge ... It is more than a matter of our good and their evil. Dehumanization is the enemy."

Former University trustee Don Lifton called for anti-war teach-ins to oppose the administration's military efforts in Afghanistan:

"[Cornell must] oppose the use of military force in response to last week's tragic events ... unleash Cornell's formidable media relations expertise to educate the nation that our university community has deep hesitations about a military response. And finally, [it must] inform our huge, worldwide network of alumni about the concerns expressed."

Cornell government professor and renowned feminist Anne Marie Smith led an anti-war march, protesting the U.S. attack on Afghanistan. Apparently feminists do not oppose the Taliban if it means they will have to side with America.

Former University President Hunter R. Rawlings III sent out warnings to Cornellians, urging students not to physically assault Muslims on campus. From the University administration's hysterical wailing, one would think that a Kristallnacht against Arabs was underway in Ithaca, N.Y., with Muslim bodies strewn across Route 13.

Cornell tried to rewrite the aftermath of Sept. 11 as a grand lesson in multiculturalism and diversity. In truth, the terrorist attacks by Islamists were further evidence that not all cultures are equal. Some cultures — such as those developed by the Taliban in Afghanistan and Saddam Hussein in Iraq — are evil and must be destroyed so as to preserve Western Civilization.

The so-called intellectual elite on Cornell's faculty — sitting leisurely in their offices, drinking their apricot cream coffee and eating their kiwi sorbet — speak of patriotism as if it were a dirty word. But the heroes of Sept. 11 — and the soldiers in Afghanistan and Iraq today — remind us that we should have only love and pride in our hearts when we speak of America on this day of remembrance.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Birth control needed for medical reasons

Ryan Dwyer accuses The Observer of providing immoral information to the new freshman class, citing Planned Parenthood as a place to fill birth control prescriptions since University Health Services will not. As a student in law school he should know better. Just to make sure, I checked the inaugural edition of The Observer.

Yes, they refer to birth control and Planned Parenthood, but the reference is to pills. They did not recommend Planned Parenthood for condoms or help with abortions, just birth control pills. Perhaps, as a male, Dwyer is unaware of this, but there is a significant percentage of young women, myself include, who depend on birth control for non-contraceptive purposes. Today, birth control pills are commonly prescribed for a variety of medical conditions and even by dermatologists for skin care purposes.

I am not naive, and I do realize that many women will seek birth control pills there for contraception. Also, I too am pro-life and am not a supporter of Planned Parenthood.

I do, however, sympathize with our young female freshmen whose resources for legitimate medical needs are restricted by incorrect religious assumptions, and I support The Observer for addressing that Dwyer's case, while impassioned, would not stand up in court.

On Stage and In

◆ Notre Dame and Saint Mary's offer the

By KC KENNEY
Assistant Scene Editor

Notre Dame and Saint Mary's have a very diverse student body when it comes to activities they are involved in and whether someone prefers being on stage or off, theatre on both campuses always offers many opportunities to get involved.

The Department of Film, Television and Theatre

The Department of Film, Television and Theatre, or FTT, is celebrating their last season at Washington Hall this year by showcasing a run of the "best of Notre Dame theatre," three shows specially selected by the FTT faculty to mark the long tradition of great theatre in Washington Hall. These productions will give students the opportunity to see the very talented undergraduates from Notre Dame, Saint Mary's and Holy Cross strut their stuff for the last time before they move to the new Marie P. DeBartolo Center for the Performing Arts.

Tartuffe is a brilliant comedy about a small family that is set upon by a devious scoundrel by the name of Tartuffe. Tartuffe uses false piety and excessive devotion to win over the hearts of the family and then take them for all they are worth, including the women of the family! This show was censored in the late 17th century by religious groups who felt it was a direct attack on the merit of religion. Notre Dame presents a very fitting location for Frederic Syburg to direct this classic. The show runs from Oct. 8 to 12 at Washington Hall.

The Glass Menagerie, an American classic by Tennessee Williams, is another FTT production that goes up this fall. Many of the performers are familiar theatrical gurus, including Katie Kertez, Bryce Cooper, Tom Connor and Molly Topper. The director is the ever-acclaimed FTT professor Siiri Scott who earns rave reviews from her students and performers. "I'm super excited because Siiri Scott is directing, and she's an amazing acting coach," said Molly Topper. "I mean, it's Tennessee Williams. When you know the writing is good you know you can take it places." The Glass Menagerie goes up on Nov. 19 and runs until the 23.

Finally, Ann Marie Stewart will direct Arms and the Man, an anti-love triangle based story by George Bernard Shaw. This show runs from April 21 until the 25 and has great Shaw characters, like an army officer that prefers "chocolate to bullets." Though casting is closed on Tartuffe and The Glass Menagerie, casting for Arms and the Man will not be held until Jan. 19 and 20.

A fact that may not be commonly known to the local collegiate theatrical community is that Notre Dame's FTT productions have auditions that are not only open to FTT undergraduates, but also to all students at Notre Dame, Saint Mary's and Holy Cross. There are other opportunities to be involved in FTT productions besides the Mainstage. The FTT directing classes hold their Directing Finals in the fall and spring. Directing Finals are an opportunity for these aspiring directors to exercise their bossiness in a one-act plays by big name writers. Auditions are Sept. 22 from 5 - 7p.m. in Washington Hall. The Freshman Four is another opportunity to be fresh-pians, but is limited to freshman. These one-act plays are exclusively directed, acted, stage managed and all else by freshman in the spring.

Not a real fan of the spotlight? FTT also offers many opportunities for students to be involved in other ways. Students are needed to work on sets, costumes, lighting, and publicity or work as stage managers.

The Communication, Dance and Theatre Department

CDT will be performing Arthur Miller's famous political drama, The Crucible, directed by Mark Abram-Copenhaver, assistant professor of theater. Auditions will be held on Nov. 6 - Nov. 9. The department will present an independently written play in the second semester. Further information is available from the department at 284-4640.

The Pasquerilla East Musical Company

For more than ten years, Notre Dame had not had a musical on its campus. Then, in 1997, Kelly McGann, a resident of PE decided that this needed to change. From this, PEM Co. was born. Since 1997, PEM Co. has been the largest student-run musical theater company on campus and it has produced a high-quality show with capacity-brimming audiences every year. This year's production is the well-known and loved Leonard Bernstein show, West Side Story, a musical take on Romeo and Juliet.

Senior Ray Areaux takes on the role of director/choreographer for West Side and said he is thrilled for the chance to bring such a great production to Notre Dame.

"Our team is psyched for a fabulous production," said Areaux, who led the cast of Damn Yankees two years ago.

The cast of 2003's Into the Woods continued the trend of musicals. This year, they continue the tradition with West Side Story.

"We are quite a fun group, and it's going to be quite a fun ride."

Auditions are on Sept. 15 and 16, but the show itself isn't until February. Auditions consist of both singing and dancing. Materials are available now in the Library.

PEM Co. also sponsors a Musical Revue that is held in March at LaFortune Ballroom.

The Not-So-Royal Shakespeare Company

The NSRSC will be sharing their flair for the bard by presenting the Shakespearean comedy Much Ado About Nothing on Dec. 4 through 7. Auditions are Sept. 25 and 26 at 204 O'Shaughnessy Hall. Why should you try out for such a great show?

"Why wouldn't you do Shakespeare?" asked Katy Kertez, who will be directing the spring NSRSC show King Lear. "I mean, who needs an excuse to perform shows by the greatest playwright ever? Like, y'know?"

Those who are auditioning are asked to prepare a short dramatic Shakespearean monologue, though cold readings from the play will be accepted.

The Saint Edward's Hall Players

The SEHP started out as a Friday night production, put on by St. Ed's, for the entertainment of its residents and the rest of the campus. As time went on,

"I mean, who needs an excuse to perform the greatest plays? Like, y'know?"

Done in a clever 70's style to help students relate, The Not-So-Royal Shakespeare Company performed a well-received version of Shakespeare's Taming of the Shrew.

it grew and developed to be more of an independent theater group that presents great and compelling shows. This year they will be putting on One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest, directed by FTT major Adel Hanash. Auditions will be held in October, before fall break, so as to offer players an opportunity to be familiar with their roles. They encourage students of all grades and abilities to try out and look forward to an exciting show. They perform in Washington Hall the last weekend of January.

Farley Hall Players

Farley Hall Players began in 2001 with the student written production of Chance At Love, which was so successful it proceeded to tour the Midwest. Farley has a great reputation for putting out strong shows, both musicals and plays alike. This year, they will be doing Taxi Cabaret, directed by junior Devon Candura. Taxi Cabaret is a relatively undiscovered new musical about six friends living in New York after college.

Lena Caligiuri says that the group is "extremely excited to be returning to our ultimate goal of producing small, intimate musical theatre after having opted to do a straight show last year. Devon is an incredibly enthusiastic and dedicated director, with a very talented team working with her to make this show a success."

Actors From the London Stage

Though the students put on fantastic shows each year, the Department of Film, Television and Theatre also sponsors shows of William Shakespeare performed by the Actors from the London Stage. Next week, the Actors grace the Washington Hall stage with Shakespeare's Measure for Measure, performed Sept. 17-19. AFTLS actors hail from such prestigious theatre companies as the Royal Shakespeare Company, the Royal National Theatre of Great Britain and Shakespeare's Globe Theatre, among others. Measure for Measure is a passionate tragicomedy that explores sexual morality and abuse of power.

Performances begin at 7:30 p.m. Tickets are available at the LaFortune Student Center Ticket Office — $16 for adults, $14 for senior citizens and $12 students. For MasterCard, Visa and Discover Orders, call 631-8128.

The Actors will return in February with Romeo and Juliet, offering a great romantic date for Valentine's Day. Their shows are always of exceptional professional quality and easily appreciated by first time viewers of the Bard, even though it may seem, at first, like a foreign language. The Actors make it accessible to all.

Whether a student has experience in shows in high school, local theater or perhaps the occasional touring company, Notre Dame and Saint Mary's have many venues for performers and techies from all stages of experience. It is a great way to get involved on campus and add a great compliment to a resume. One doesn't need to be a drama major to be able to get involved in or be in the audience of a great show. All someone needs is a bit of time, a desire to learn and an interest in creating a little drama in the world.

TOM BARKES/The Observer

As one of the Mainstage Productions of 2002-2003, FTT sponsored The Mandrake as well as several other student-starring productions.

TOM BARKES/The Observer

Though considered a little "racy" by some students, How I Learned To Drive, an FTT production directed by Dr. Wendy Aronsl, was performed in Washington Hall. This is FTT's last year in Washington Hall and they have made it the "best of" the Department's works.

Red Sox defeat Orioles 5-0 with stellar starting pitching

Associated Press

BALTIMORE — Kevin Millar did the math. By his calculation, giving Pedro Martinez a three-run lead before he walked to the mound added up to a victory for the Boston Red Sox.

"Pedro's got a two-something ERA, so we know we score three we've got a good chance to win," Millar said. "This guy's been phenomenal for us."

Martinez allowed three hits over eight innings and Millar had two RBI in a three-run first inning as the Red Sox defeated the Baltimore Orioles 5-0 Wednesday.

Boston got the only run it needed when No. 5 hitter David Ortiz drew a bases-loaded walk from Jason Johnson in the top of the first. Millar followed with a two-run single, and at that point the Red Sox might as well have started packing their bags after a 7-2 road trip.

"It set the tone," Boston manager Grady Little said. "We came out and got after it pretty good there."

"It was an uphill struggle the whole way," Baltimore manager Mike Hargrove said. "Once we got behind 3-0, we knew that we were going to have play near perfect baseball the way just to have a chance."

It was Martinez who was near perfect. The right-hander allowed only five runners, none of whom advanced past second base.

"He had command of his pitches all day long. He was just outstanding," Little said.

Yankees 15, Tigers 5

Jorge Posada hit a grand slam and drove in a career-high seven runs, and the New York Yankees overcame four errors and routed the Detroit Tigers 15-5 on Wednesday night.

Hideki Matsui homered and drove in three runs and Nick Johnson also homered, but made three of the Yankees' defensive miscues. New York won its fourth straight and remained 3.5 games ahead of Boston in the AL East.

Andy Pettitte (18-8) labored through six innings, allowing four runs — two earned — and struck out seven and walked three. He rebounded from a rough outing against Boston last Friday night, when he gave up eight earned runs and nine hits in 2 1-3 innings in a 9-3 loss.

Braves 4, Phillies 2

Something about losing big brings out the best in the Atlanta Braves.

Javy Lopez homered to give the Braves a franchise-record 216 homers this season, and Atlanta rebounded from a big loss to beat the Philadelphia Phillies 4-2.

A day earlier, Philadelphia won 18-5, the fifth time this season the Braves have lost by 10 or more runs. Each time, they've bounced back to win the next game.

"It's not a coincidence," Lopez said. "This is what makes this team better. Once you bounce back, you know you've gotten rid of all the frustration from the night before."

Philadelphia dropped one game behind Florida in the NL wild-card race, and Atlanta lowered its magic number to clinch the NL East to six.

"We've had a fire lit all year," Phillies manager Larry Bowa said. "That's not going to change. You have to worry about yourself. You can't worry about other people."

Horacio Ramirez (10-4) won his second straight decision, allowing six hits in seven innings. He gave up solo homers to Pat Burrell in the second and Tomas Perez in the seventh, and struck out seven without walking a batter.

It was the second strong start in a row for the rookie left-hander, making a bid to be included in the postseason roster. The previous time out, he held Pittsburgh to one earned run and three hits in nine innings.

Expos 8, Cubs 4

Pinch-hitter Jose Macias hit a go-ahead double in a five-run eighth inning, and the Montreal Expos overcame a four-run deficit to beat the Chicago Cubs 8-4.

Chicago, which began the night tied with Houston for the NL Central lead, was ahead 4-0 behind Matt Clement, who took a no-hit bid into the sixth inning.

Clement walked his first three batters in the inning and was replaced by Mark Guthrie, who walked the next two batters, forcing in a pair of runs. Orlando Cabrera followed with an RBI single off Dave Veres.

Endy Chavez opened the eighth with a single off Mark Remlinger and stole second. Kyle Farnsworth (3-2) relieved, and Cabrera bunted to first baseman Randall Simon, who missed the tag as Cabrera reached on the infield hit.

With two outs, Macias hit what appeared to be a routine fly to short left field, but Moises Alou appeared to be blinded by the lights, and the ball fell as Montreal went ahead 5-4.

Brian Schneider doubled down the right-field line for a 6-4 lead, and Henry Mateo and Jamie Carroll hit RBI singles.

Luis Ayala (8-3) pitched a perfect eighth for the win.

his chair, puffed on his cigar and offered an observation after the Marlins took advantage of some sloppy play by the New York Mets in a 7-3 victory.

"In a close game, give us an opening and we're coming through the door," the Florida manager said.

The Mets offered multiple openings with three errors and one embarrassing nonchalant play — each of them contributing to Florida runs.

It was the 11th victory in 13 games for the Marlins, who moved into the NL wild-card lead, one game ahead of Philadelphia. The loss was the seventh straight for the Mets, the first four to the Phillies, the last three to the Marlins.

"It was a big win," McKeon said. "We got contributions from a lot of guys. We just have to play like we're playing with everybody chipping in."

Errors by Mets third baseman Ty Wigginton and shortstop Jorge Velandia, and a nonchalant play by left fielder Raul Gonzalez led to the first five Florida runs. Then, second baseman Danny Garcia missed a foul pop, giving Ivan Rodriguez a second chance in the ninth inning and he hit a two-run wrapup homer.

"We didn't play the kind of game we normally do defensively, and it cost us," Mets manager Art Howe said.

The Mets misadventures started with one out in the third inning when Mike Redmond was safe on an error by Wigginton and Jeff Conine followed with a homer just inside the left-field foul pole against Jae Weong Seo (8-11).

Freeman happy to be back with the Pack

Associated Press

GREEN BAY, Wis. — Antonio Freeman and Mike Sherman are trying to work things out.

The two parted on bad terms last summer after fighting about money and other matters. They were reunited Wednesday when the injured-riddled Green Bay Packers brought back Brett Favre's all-time favorite target.

Freeman, who caught 57 touchdown passes from Favre between 1995-2001, signed a one-year, guaranteed deal and got his old No. 86 jersey back from injured rookie Carl Ford.

"Same ol' Free," offensive coordinator Tom Rossley said after a closed practice. "There are some routes he runs great. He's not going to run away from anybody. But he has some strong points and he has some weaknesses. And we're going to try to bring out the good part of him."

Freeman is slated to start at split end Sunday against the Detroit Lions with Pro Bowl receiver Donald Driver out with a neck injury.

"I never envisioned coming back," Freeman admitted. "You have to take the situation as a blessing for both of us, because I was available and they were willing to welcome me back."

Sherman, who banished Freeman from the season finale in 2001 after he showed up late for practice, said he is letting bygones be bygones.

"I don't hold hard feelings on people. I'm a fairly forgiving person," he said, blaming the breakup on finances. "Any time money's involved, things get screwed up."

The Packers released Freeman on June 3, 2002, in the middle of his seven-year, $42 million contract that included a $10 million bonus, after he refused a big pay cut. Freeman's productivity had slipped and his attitude soured after several run-ins with the law and Sherman.

Even before his arrival this week, Freeman counted $4.3 million against the team's salary cap this season. If Freeman's deal was for the veteran's minimum of $655,000, he would count another $475,000 against the Packers' cap.

Driver (neck, concussion), Robert Ferguson (ankle, knee) and Karsten Bailey (hamstring) all were hurt Sunday. Bailey was waived Wednesday along with linebacker Hunter Hillenmeyer to make room for Freeman and Chris Jackson.

Driver was in a neck brace Wednesday and Ferguson remained on crutches.

Initially, Freeman had reservations about a reunion with Sherman.

"But we're both men, in very different stages of our lives, and we need each other right now," Freeman said.

Sherman said, "We probably talked more in the past 24 hours than we did the last couple years, actually."

Before Wednesday's workout, Freeman, 31, hadn't suited up since the NFC championship game in January. He played for the Philadelphia Eagles last year, when he caught 46 passes for 600 yards and four touchdowns.

Fresno State placed on 4 years probation

Associated Press

FRESNO, Calif. — Fresno State was placed on NCAA probation for four years Wednesday for violations involving academic fraud, recruiting and eligibility.

The NCAA Infractions Committee also found a lack of institutional control.

Fresno State banned its men's basketball program from postseason play this past year after learning that a former team statistician and an academic adviser participated in a cheating scandal with three former players. The school also self-imposed a two-year probation and cut three scholarships from the men's basketball program for other violations.

The committee required the university to vacate the record of its performance in the 2000 NCAA Tournament and return 90 percent of the funds it earned for that appearance.

Fresno State President John Welty said he was pleased the NCAA chose not to impose further, more serious, sanctions.

"We acknowledge there were clearly areas that needed addressing," Welty said. "Now, with our corrective measures and positive progress in these areas, we can put the problems behind us."

Probation will end Dec. 4, 2006.

The NCAA said most of the school's violations were found in the men's basketball program, but added that some secondary infractions were uncovered in both the men's soccer and women's basketball programs.

The committee found that during the 1998-99 academic year, a men's basketball player was provided financial aid without being enrolled in a full-time course program. The player also was certified as eligible for competition even though his academic record did not meet the requirements for such status.

The committee found that during the summer of 2000, a former academic adviser and a former statistician violated the NCAA principles of ethical conduct when they arranged to prepare course work for two other students who were completing their last semesters of eligibility, as well as for a men's basketball prospective student.

COLLEGE FOOTBALL

Amidst criticism, Navarre keeps performing at high level

Michigan quarterback John Navarre looks to hand the ball off in last year's game against the Irish. Notre Dame won 25-23.

Associated Press

ANN ARBOR, Mich. — Whether John Navarre is planting his feet in turf to make a pass or walking across concrete to answer doubters, he appears poised.

Such levelheadedness is a virtue for Navarre, whose career at Michigan is riddled with contradictions.

The senior already holds team passing records, and may own nearly every one after the season, but he could be the most-criticized player to ever play for the Wolverines.

"Everywhere you go in this town, you hear a lot about John Navarre and it's never positive," teammate Larry Stevens said.

"But I'll tell you what, his teammates and coaches have the greatest level of respect for him."

Navarre will have a chance to quiet one of the criticisms — that he doesn't win big games — on Saturday when No. 5 Michigan (2-0) plays No. 15 Notre Dame (1-0) at Michigan Stadium.

"I don't know that I would call that unfair," Navarre said.

He is 6-6 against ranked opponents, including an 0-2 mark against the Fighting Irish and Ohio State when they were in the Associated Press poll. He is 17-2 against unranked opponents, with those losses coming to Ohio State and Michigan State in 2001.

"At Michigan, you're measured by championships and the big games you play," Navarre said. "I don't want to say I'm not a Michigan quarterback because I haven't won those games, but I'm also not out to prove anything to anybody with those certain games."

While Navarre can improve his mobility, accuracy and ability to make game-winning plays, he can't do anything about another factor that plagued the early part of his career.

He wasn't Drew Henson.

As a redshirt freshman in 2001, Navarre started the first four games for an injured Henson.

Navarre dazzled with seven touchdowns and no interceptions in two routs, but he struggled in a loss at UCLA and for a half at Illinois before being replaced by Henson.

When Henson decided to skip his senior season to play baseball, a decision some fans still have not gotten over, Navarre could do little right in the eyes of some. He threw more TDs (19) than interceptions (13), but he did not play well in losses against Washington, Michigan State, Ohio State and Tennessee.

Navarre's job was in jeopardy the next spring, and he responded with a strong spring, summer and junior season.

"John Navarre will always represent a great story about a kid who epitomizes what football can do for you," Michigan coach Lloyd Carr said. "He didn't measure up to other people's expectations, and he succumbed a little bit to that pressure. Then when he was flat on his back, he got up off the ground and proved what kind of person and player he was."

Navarre has also found out, in some circles, he can't win.

Even last year when he threw 21 TDs and just seven interceptions in a 10-win season, naysayers point out he had a total of one TD and two interceptions in Michigan's three losses.

"John Navarre didn't lose those games, or the games the year before. We lost those games as a team," Stevens said. "He can't block, catch or tackle. It's not all about John Navarre, but you wouldn't know that if you listened to people around here."

Ohio State running back Maurice Clarett runs with the ball during the Fiesta Bowl last season with quarterback Craig Krenzel in the background. Clarett was suspended for a year by the NCAA.

Clarett suspended for season by NCAA

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Maurice Clarett was suspended for the season Wednesday for violating NCAA rules, tarnishing Ohio State's national title and clouding the future of one of the nation's most talented running backs.

Clarett was punished because the school determined he accepted thousands of dollars in improper benefits and then lied to NCAA and school investigators.

"This is a sad day," Ohio State athletic director Andy Geiger said as he announced the penalty.

Even though the infractions date to 2002, the school is not in jeopardy of having its national title stripped.

Clarett will remain on scholarship this school year.

His attorney, Scott Schiff, wouldn't speculate if Clarett's Ohio State career was over.

"He's considering his options right now," Schiff said.

Clarett had been suspended from the team while the NCAA and Ohio State investigated his finances. Ohio State has been working for more than two weeks on a response to "several pages" of allegations sent by the NCAA to the university.

Geiger said Clarett was guilty of 14 violations of the ethical-conduct bylaw and two violations of receiving preferential treatment or benefits because he is an athlete.

Geiger said before each season Ohio State players are presented a copy of NCAA Bylaw 10 which deals with ethical conduct and not lying to investigators.

"You play by the rules, you live by the rules," Geiger said.

Geiger said Clarett would be required to make a donation to a charity of his choice equal to the amount he received in benefits, which Geiger termed as "thousands of dollars," if he wants to be reinstated.

Ohio State can appeal for Clarett's reinstatement after the year suspension is complete.

"We hope the NCAA considers a suspension for this season to be sufficient," Geiger said.

"More importantly, we hope that Maurice will remain in school to pursue his degree, and that conditions will warrant our application for reinstatement to play Buckeye football next season."

IN BRIEF

Titans go for experience by signing Anderson

The Tennessee Titans wanted an experienced kicker, and they got one Wednesday night by agreeing to terms with Gary Anderson, the NFL's career scoring leader and once again the league's oldest active player.

The Titans lost kicker Joe Nedney for the season to a torn ligament in his right, non-kicking leg during their 25-20 victory Sunday over the Oakland Raiders. Nedney and punter Craig Hentrich combined to kick four field goals in the game.

"It was important to find a veteran kicker who has made all the big kicks and been in all of the situations," general manager Floyd Reese said. "We feel like Gary is the best available kicker and that we couldn't afford to take a chance with a younger player with the number of games in this league that come down to a final kick."

NHL Playoff MVP Giguere agrees to four-year deal

A relieved Jean-Sebastien Giguere agreed to a four-year contract with the Anaheim Mighty Ducks on Wednesday, a day before training camp opens.

"I'm very happy to get this finally over with," he said. "I did not want to miss any part of training camp. It's very important to have a good training camp and a good beginning to the season."

Giguere's goaltending carried the Ducks to the Stanley Cup finals, and helped him get a deal worth nearly $5 million a year. He earned $900,000 last season.

"I'm expecting the same thing I did in the past, work hard and keep learning and get some experience," he said. "There's lots of room for me to get better."

The deal ensures Giguere's presence on a team that lost veteran Paul Kariya to Colorado in the offseason.

Obscene gesture costs Paniagua job

The Chicago White Sox released Jose Paniagua on Wednesday, a day after he made an obscene gesture at the plate umpire as he left the field.

"It was a decision we felt we had to make," White Sox general manager Kenny Williams said before Chicago's game against Minnesota.

"You have to excuse a certain amount of failures out there when you haven't pitched in a year," Williams added. "What's inexcusable are the actions that happened afterward. That's not what we stand for."

With the White Sox leading the Twins 8-2 on Tuesday night, Paniagua came in to relieve in the ninth, his first appearance in the major leagues in a year. He gave up four runs, three hits and a walk in just one-third of an inning, and was apparently upset with some of the calls made by plate umpire Mark Carlson.

Belles maintain unbeaten streak, tie Calvin 2-2 in OT

By ERIK POWERS
Sports Writer

Saint Mary's continued its season-opening unbeaten streak Tuesday. The Belles (3-0-1) tied Calvin (0-2-1) 2-2 in an overtime conference opener.

Calvin scored first with 37:00 left in the first half. A forward stole the ball from a Belles midfielder and kicked it past surprised Saint Mary's goalie Laura Helene. Saint Mary's was attempting to clear the ball and Calvin caught the defense in an awkward position.

"The first goal was just poor communication on a poorly-played ball," coach Peter Haring said. "Our defense was caught because they were so congested. The center-mid got her pocket picked, and our keeper was caught off guard."

Saint Mary's played listlessly for the first ten minutes of the half. The Belles mounted only a pair of Belles attacks and Calvin besieged Helene at the goal. But with 30:00 left in the half, Saint Mary's offensive intensity improved. The Belles narrowly missed goals off of a pair of corner kicks before Shannon Artnak tied the game at the 25:51 mark. Jen Concannon bounced a kick off of the crossbar which Artnak headed for a rebound goal. Artnak has one goal and two assists on the season.

"You can't play behind all the time, and this is actually the first game where our opponent has scored against us first," Haring said. "I give the team a lot of credit. That first half we came back and put a goal in. We don't lose our composure once we get into a rhythm."

Calvin launched an aggressive attack in the second half. Within the first two minutes, a Calvin forward barely missed on a breakaway with Helene making a difficult save. With 37:12 remaining, the Belles midfielders and defenders converged on two Calvin forwards in the box outside the Saint Mary's goal. Each of the Belles waited for a teammate to clear the ball, and when that did not occur, Calvin kicked the ball past a screened Helene.

But the Belles once again were resilient. Saint Mary's found its rhythm and resumed a dominating attack on Calvin's goal. Calvin blocked several kicks at close range off of corner kicks but was unable to stop Carrie Orr's 20-yard kick with 19:41 remaining. Orr stopped a long rebound and sent a high,

"I'm not disappointed with the way we played at all."

Peter Haring
coach

STEPHANIE GRAMMENS/The Observer

Saint Mary's defender Carrie Orr follows the ball in her team's game against Calvin Tuesday. The Belles tied the Knights 2-2 in their conference season opener.

Saint Mary's controlled the momentum for the rest of the half and overtime. The Belles limited Calvin to only three serious scoring threats from the 20:00 mark on.

"Defensively, that team was fast and tried to play over the top," Haring said. "But our team won the balls in the air and we didn't give them any really good scoring opportunities. Shannon Culbertson, Carrie Orr and Katie Taylor play so well together. They're a very strong core group of defenders."

Taylor stood out with her physical style of play by upending a Calvin forward with a combination shoulder tackle and head butt.

"Katie Taylor comes from her own mold," Haring said. "Her sister Lynn was a center/defender last year and basically the foundation of the team. Katie plays just as hard, if not harder and she wins every ball. She won't be denied."

Though the Belles were disappointed by the scoreless overtime and tie, they remained positive.

"I'm not disappointed with the way we played at all," Haring said. "In fact I'm happy because we learned how to play back from being down. I'm not a big fan of ties; in fact I almost would rather go to a [penalty kick] situation just to have a final result. But that's the [conference's] format."

Saint Mary's plays at noon Wednesday at home versus Adrian.

Pressure forces Irish fullbacks into blocking role

Observer Staff Report

After falling behind 19-0 to Washington State Saturday, the role of Notre Dame's fullbacks changed.

Instead of giving running backs Ryan Grant and Julius Jones a break or catching short passes out of the backfield, the two had to prepare to block for quarterback Carlyle Holiday, since the Irish were going to resort to passing the ball more than rushing.

That was just fine with Rashon Powers-Neal and Josh Schmidt.

"On Saturday we kind of had to switch up the game plan a little bit because of the situation of the game," Powers-Neal said.

The two fullbacks combined for just one carry and one reception. But neither seemed to mind, as long as the Irish would win.

"We know our role. We know our No. 1 job is pass blocking,"

Schmidt said. "We have to be equally versatile, run routes well and catch the ball out of the backfield and also run the ball if the coaches call a fullback running play."

Excited for game day

Darrell Campbell was excited after Wednesday's practice. It was just hard to tell which situation he was more excited about.

First, he told reporters how excited he was to face Michigan this weekend.

"It's an extremely large rivalry. It's just going to be a war," Campbell said. "It's exciting simply because this is what we've done since high school. To go out there and play game upon game where the competition gets better, that's what we live for. Michigan definitely raises the bar, and we have to go out there and raise it more just to have a chance. We're licking our chops."

Campbell is also excited to be getting one of his defensive members back for Saturday against the Wolverines in linebacker Courtney Watson.

"Courtney's back. I don't really want to say too much because I get so excited," Campbell said. "Courtney has some of the greatest celebrations, and he's all over the place. The intensity he brings — it's just crazy."

With all the excitement surrounding Campbell, he hasn't forgotten the talent level of the upcoming opponent.

He would not take anything away from the Wolverines, despite the two teams they've faced this season — Central Michigan and Houston.

"You never downplay anyone's offense," Campbell said. "If they're No. 1, those are the statistics you believe in order to up your game. Great players and great teams come out and dominate, and that's what they did, and that's why they earned such a high ranking."

GameDay

ESPN's College GameDay will make its seventh trip to Ann Arbor, when it broadcasts its pregame show from Michigan Stadium.

The Wolverines are 11-4 overall and 5-1 at home when GameDay is present, while the Irish are 5-6 overall and 2-3 on the road. However, Notre Dame has won its last two GameDay appearances.

of the week and was named Big East Rookie of the Week.

Buczkowski has been one of many newcomers to the squad that has played an important role in the early season wins. Classmates Kim Lorenzen, Lizzie Reed, Jill Krivacek, and Christie Shaner have all played important minutes for the Irish so far, and sophomore Annie Scheffer has made a strong impact in her first action after being sidelined with an ACL injury last year.

In her first full game back, defender Vanessa Pruzinsky turned in a solid showing, picking up the defensive MVP at the Notre Dame Classic.

"I'm just so excited to get to play again," Pruzinsky said. "It's really been over a year since I've really been able to play on my ankle. I'm really excited that it's doing really well."

The one problem that the Irish had last weekend was with giving up breakaway goals. They hope to have that problem fixed against the Red Storm.

"We've got to be better organized," coach Randy Waldrum said. "We miss [Gudrun Gunnarsdottir] in the back, she really helps keep things organized for us."

"We need to get tougher on defense and not give up goals like that," added Pruzinsky.

The Irish will also be looking to build momentum heading into their highly anticipated showdowns with Santa Clara and Stanford in California.

"I wasn't happy that we got behind," said Waldrum referring to the early deficit his team faced against Arizona State. "But that was a great test for us. We needed to get the pressure they put on us. We were rattled that first 30 minutes. We needed to see that happen to us before we got to Stanford and Santa Clara. I'm pleased we came back and got a hold of that game. I'm not sure we could have done that last year."

Despite the upcoming showdowns, the Irish are focused on St. John's and Western Kentucky. Having never played the Hilltoppers, and not playing the Red Storm last year, the Irish may not be that familiar with their upcoming opponents.

"We don't really know that much about either team," senior forward Amanda Guertin said. "We just really need to go play our game."

gression. You may have one receiver, and that might be a guy that's hot or that might be the primary guy. You might not have the luxury of going to your favorite receiver."

Holiday admitted the team struggled last week, but said the coaches made adjustments at halftime, and that was the difference between the first half and the second half.

"Last week at halftime we adjusted, and we were able to pick up the pressure. When they did blitz us in the second half we were able to pick it up and take advantage of it," Holiday said.

Sharing this birthday: Brian De Palma, Amy Madigan, Moby, Harry Connick Jr., Lola Falana, Earl Holliman

Happy Birthday: Drastic measures don't usually bring results, but this year you may have to be willing to push the envelope. Be prepared, precise and right to the point. The less you dawdle, the more you'll accomplish. Your numbers: 8, 13, 21, 34, 45, 47

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Break away from everyday routine and do something a little bit different. Being involved in large organizations and lost in the crowd will allow you to observe and gain insight. ★★★

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Being a good Samaritan will add to your popularity. You will be able to make positive changes to your working conditions by gaining the support of co-workers. ★★★

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You'll be like the Tasmanian devil today, so full of energy and ideas it will be difficult for the average person to keep up. Don't be too quick to judge others who seem to be standing still. ★★★

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You are under observation. Don't become involved with anyone who may already be married. Keep your feet on the ground and look for a stable partner or stay single for now. ★★★

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You can make a difference. Your job of helping others will become easy if your empathize. Your ability as a spokesperson will be admired. ★★★

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Brown-nosing will lead to jealousy and to conflicts with colleagues, leaving you friendless and the talk of the office. Be productive but don't flaunt your actions. ★★

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): It's time to back off and let the chips fall where they may. Do not pry into the affairs of others. Sudden changes are likely regarding your professional position. Don't take chances. ★★★

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Put your cash in the bank. Taking financial risks will lead to trouble. Problems will result if you have put too much stress on yourself. Life can be enjoyable if you stick to basics. ★★★

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): It won't be all about you today. If loved ones ask for your time, be prepared to give it. If you don't, you may not like the treatment you get in return. ★★

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Expect delays or problems with shipments, mail or equipment. Don't rely on colleagues. Stay put and work on projects that don't require a great deal of travel or communication. ★★

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Feeling good about yourself is half the battle as you've discovered if you've been making some alterations to your appearance. You can expect to attract a lot of attention. ★★★★★

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Avoid disputes by treating others with respect and being a little more accommodating. The old saying is true: Actions do speak louder than words. Be affectionate and refrain from being critical or questioning. ★★★

Birthday Baby: You are sophisticated and loving. You're a mediator who will have the ability to make others smile and to bring harmony and peace to any situation.

Quarterback Carlyle Holiday hopes for more time in the pocket

By JOE HETTLER
Sports Writer

Notre Dame's offense barely survived the numerous blitzing schemes Washington State threw at them last Saturday.

This weekend against Michigan, the Irish will use the experience they gained from that pressure to improve an offense that gained 312 yards in a 29-26 overtime win against the Cougars.

"The more you do blitz pickup, the more [you get] the front unit working together and the backs working with them," offensive coordinator Bill Diedrick said. "I don't think there's any question [experience will help]."

Washington State pressured Irish quarterback Carlyle Holiday all day with its blitz schemes, especially in the first half. Blindside and frontside pressure from the Cougar secondary caused Holiday to take hits and cough up the football.

"If you take a lot of hits, you're going to start feeling the pressure," Holiday said. "You're going to have to because that's the only option. You're going to become aware of where everyone is."

Holiday didn't feel the pressure on several occasions in the first half and fumbled four times — one of which was returned for a touchdown. Holiday understands that he must feel the presence of opposing defenders and either scramble or get rid of the football, instead of taking a sack or making a costly fumble. He said this week in practice has helped him in that situation.

"Quarterbacks don't get hit at practice, but at the same time you have to use everything like a game situation, so when you see that guys are coming you have to step and get rid of the ball."

The Washington State pressure not only caused fumbles, but also forced Holiday out of his progressions. Ideally, Holiday will have about 3.5 seconds to check each of his three receivers on any given pass play. Last Saturday, the offensive line couldn't keep the Cougars off Holiday long enough for him to check more than one, or sometimes, two receivers before being sacked or forced to throw the ball away.

"Overall through camp, I think Holiday's done a good job going through his progression," Diedrick said. "Sometimes you may not have a pro-

Belles glad to be home again

By JUSTIN SCHUVER
Associate Sports Editor

The Saint Mary's volleyball team is happy to again give an opponent a little home cooking.

For the first time in almost two weeks, the Belles will face an opponent at home. The last home match for the Belles was Aug. 30, in the SMC Triangular against Goshen College.

Saint Mary's faces non-conference opponent Rochester College Thursday at 6:30 p.m. The Belles defeated the Warriors on the road last year by a score of 30-22, 30-19, 30-16.

"Last year we were really in control that whole game," Belles coach Julie Schroeder-Biek said. "We are a stronger team this year, so I'm telling our players just to go out there and play our game, and we should win."

If the Belles pull off the victory, which would be their fifth this year, they will have to do it without a key component of their team. Freshman outside attacker Ann Carpenter experienced back problems earlier in the week and will be held out of the Rochester match and receive X-rays Thursday.

Sophomore outside attacker Michelle Turley, who injured her foot earlier in the year, will have an MRI Thursday. The Belles coach believes that Turley more than likely experienced a stress fracture and will probably miss the season.

According to Schroeder-Biek, Rochester will probably try to come at Saint Mary's with a powerful offensive attack. The Belles' previous opponent, Calvin, used a much more interior-oriented offense.

Just the same, the Belles coach is anxious to get her team back home in front of a positive crowd and away from what has been a grueling road schedule lately.

"It's going to be nice to be back home," she said. "Lately it's been just go-go-go; play one day, practice the next, then play again, and so on."

"I really scheduled us tight this season. Hopefully we can just get everyone healthy."

The Belles remain at home Saturday to compete in another SMC Triangular, against Kalamazoo College and Tri-State University.

Young Irish players look to contribute

By ANDY TROEGER
Sports Writer

Having continued their good start by winning two games in the Notre Dame Classic, the Irish will head to New York to face St. John's in a Big East match-up this afternoon.

The Irish, now ranked No. 2 by Soccer America and No. 3 by the NSCAA, will then return to Alumni Field to face Western Kentucky Saturday. This marked the 10th time in 11 years that the Irish have been in the top three in the NSCAA poll, with last year being the lone exception.

The Irish will look to continue the one-sidedness of their series against the Red Storm. The Irish have won the previous seven meetings by outscoring St. John's 38-0. The Red Storm opened this year 1-3, with their lone win coming in their last game against Siena.

The Irish also look to continue their solid play from early this season. In their first four games, the Irish have outscored the opposition 20-3 and have never given up more than one goal per game, while scoring at least three in every contest.

The Irish have received numerous contributions from a multitude of players. Last week, freshman Jen Buczkowski received many awards for her play, including being named offensive MVP of the Notre Dame Classic. She was also recognized on the Soccer America national team
