Student Senate fails to pass proposal

Group votes down resolution to change structure, authority

By MAUREEN REYNOLDS
Associate News Editor

A proposal to change the structure and authority of student government failed to pass at Sunday's Student Senate meeting.

Senators voting against the proposal, which failed 14-9 to gain the necessary two-thirds approval, cited concerns over changes in authority on certain budgeting issues.

The resolution, introduced by Student body president Pat Hallahan, would have altered the structure of the Executive Cabinet, which represents all student government groups except the Senate, to include four senators and allow the student body vice president to vote on resolutions.

The proposal would also transfer powers of budget approval and constitutional amendments to the Executive Cabinet and require the student body president to present all Executive Cabinet-approved constitutional changes to Senate before signing them into effect.

Prior to the vote, senators passed changes to the proposal, including the number of senators allowed sit on the Executive Cabinet and requiring the student body president to report to Senate on all constitutional changes approved by the Executive Cabinet before signing those changes into effect.

Senators voted on, but did not approve, removal of the clause calling for the Executive Cabinet to approve the budget, a change presented at Wednesday's meeting and supported by Hallahan.

At Sunday's meeting, Hallahan said that he believed senators should discuss that issue at a later time.

"I think we should address [the budget] later because it won't even come up until March, and there are a lot of issues to discuss already," he said.

The long-term goal of this resolution, said Hallahan, was to form a Council of Representatives from the Executive Cabinet, which would represent every committee in student government. Currently, the Executive Cabinet represents all the committees except the Senate.

Senators agreed on the need for a single committee, but disagreed about the extent of power to be granted to it. Their main problem concerned the amendment calling for the power to amend the constitution to be given to the Executive Cabinet before the Council of Representatives is formed.

"[The Council of Representatives] does not yet exist," said Amy Chambers, off-campus senator, during the meeting. "If we want to make big changes, we should form the group first, and then give them the power [to amend the Constitution.]"

Hallahan disagreed, saying "If we say we want to wait and see, we will be saying 'We don't trust you,' and that will create an immediate division [in student government.] Senate has all the power right now. All I'm ask-

Hallahan still optimistic despite failure

Despite the failure of his proposal to reorganize student government, Student body president Pat Hallahan said he remains optimistic about the future of this resolution.

"It's very disappointing," said Hallahan after the meeting. "It was clear that the majority of Senators are for this resolution. ... I think it's going to get done."

But at the same time, Hallahan said that the Senate's vote Sunday wouldn't affect the report he is scheduled to present to the University's Board of Trustees on Thursday. Hallahan had said before Senate's action Sunday that his report would address student government issues in some manner.

"I think we're progressing on this, and I don't think it will affect [the report] too much. Hopefully by Wednesday we'll get something done, and I can report that to [the board]," he said. "I have no doubt that everything that we've been Elkhart County sheriffs arrested a Notre Dame security officer Wednesday for assaulting his seven-week-old baby and charged him with battery after he admitted to the abusing the child, a local newspaper reported.

Clark

Timothy Clark, a 32-year-old security officer who has been employed by the University since September 2001, is on paid administrative leave until "his situation becomes clearer," University spokesman Matt Storn said.

According to the Elkhart Truth, police said Clark admitted Wednesday that he dropped, shook and spanked Samuel Clark, who was born on Aug. 19, sometime between Sept. 29 and Oct. 6.

The Truth reported that the abuse investigation began after Timothy Clark and his wife, Elizabeth, took their son to St. Joseph Regional Medical Center Oct. 6 because he was vomiting. After examining the baby, hospital officials notified Child Protective Services of a potential abuse case, who then forwarded the case to police. Police did not indicate whether Elizabeth Clark took part in or was aware of the abuse.

Medical reports obtained by the Truth said the baby's injuries included a fractured skull and broken wrist, rib, leg and facial bone. The baby was hospitalized for at least three days, and it was not immediately clear if he remains at the St. Joseph Regional Medical Center. A spokesperson

Departments seek alternatives to fund speakers

By TERESA FRALISH
Assistant News Editor

In spite of significant budget cuts, Notre Dame organizations have still been successful in bringing prominent speakers to campus this semester by turning to other options, such as co-sponsorship or grants, to fund talks from well-known individuals.

As a result of the decrease in the endowment and the drop in the economy, University officials made cuts to department and institute funding across the board last year. From 2001 to 2002, the endowment fell from $2.85 to $2.6 million, prompting University officials to cut the academic budget by 7 percent.

Despite these decreases in funding, University departments have secured contracts from a number of well-known individuals, including Nobel laureate Seamus Heaney, Nigerian President Olusegun Obasanjo and South African Archbishop Desmond Tutu. Frank McCourt, author of the Pulitzer prize-winning book "Angela's Ashes", is scheduled to speak at Notre Dame this week.

John Cavadini, director of the Institute for Church Life, which sponsored the talk by Obasanjo, said his institute pursued a variety of options to fund the speech. "This conference was completely funded by grants from internal and external units at the University," he said.

Other University institutes said carefully planned strategies were needed to bring prominent speakers to campus. Hal Culbertson, associate director of the Kroc Institute, which helped bring Tutu to Notre Dame, said the Institute began organizing far in advance.

"The conference was part of a research project," Culbertson said. "We're able to do that through careful planning."

Show me the money

According to a recent study by a mutual fund trading group, 50 percent of American families expect to have about $35,000 saved up to pay college tuition by the time their first child turns 18. This means that most families can expect to have saved between one and two years of college tuition — although at some colleges, $35,000 translates into less than a year once room and board are factored in.

Joe Trombello
News Production Editor

From 1992-2002, while inflation rose 28 percent, the average in-state cost of attending public schools rose 79 percent. The University of Arizona increased its tuition by more than 39 percent this year, and many other public colleges hiked up their tuition by proportionate eye-popping amounts. Private institutions imposed similar tuition increases, raising the price of an education nearly 75 percent between 1992-2002, according to a 2002 report from CollegeBoard titled "Trends in College Pricing."

Although student financial aid increased more than the cost of college tuition and fees over the past decade, much of that growth has been through loans, not grants. Grants declined from half of all total aid to 39 percent in the past 11 years. Current students graduate from college with an average of $19,000 in debt, according to a 2002 National Student Loan Survey conducted by Nellie Mae, and students must frequently work increasing hours to make ends meet.

All of these statistics point to a troubling problem in college education — simply put, college tuition is far too high.

Administrators should be embarrassed that they have allowed college costs to skyrocket far beyond price increases due to inflation. It's time to take a serious look at why costs continue to rise.

Why must colleges spend exorbitant amounts of money on frills like $70 million student centers (Vermont) or $54 million sports complexes (Rhode Island)? How can administrators continue to view these items as necessities? Colleges should be comfortable places for students to live and to study, but are lavish expenses like these really necessary?

College officials need to do a better job of seriously examining expenditures. Faculty salaries, maintenance costs, financial aid expenditures — nothing should be left unquestioned. College students and their parents should demand greater accountability from school officials and receive more accessibility to financial data.

It's time to do something serious about the cost of educating a student, before work-study programs turn into work-work programs.

Apartment Tenant Kills Goats for Food

PAWTUCKET, R.I. — An apartment tenant has admitted he slaughtered two goats in the building in which he lives.

Neighbors called police Wednesday after seeing Pedro Rodrigues lead the goats into the building's basement. The neighbors later found a pool of blood on the basement floor.

Rodrigues told police he killed the goats, so a friend could cook them, the Times of Pawtucket reported. The 36-year-old said he slit their throats, and lay them on the floor to bleed out. Fearing that police may think he killed a person, Rodrigues had his friend produce the goats' carcasses.

City law prohibits residents from keeping goats and other livestock. Rodrigues will face a misdemeanor charge, police said.

NBA's Manute Bol to Become Tallest Jockey

ANDERSON, Ind. — Manute Bol, the 7-foot-7 former NBA player from the Sudan, plans to follow his brief stints in hockey and boxing with a venture into horse racing. Hoosier Park announced Friday that Bol plans to "become the world's tallest jockey" on Oct. 18.

The track, about 30 miles northeast of Indianapolis, said Bol will become a licensed jockey with the Indiana Horse Racing Commission in an effort to raise money for his native country. The news release did not offer further details on Bol's plans on the race track.

ND grad probes CIA leak

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The investigation into who leaked the identity of an undercover CIA officer is shining a spotlight on a 30-year Justice Department prosecutor more accustomed to staying out of the public eye on even the biggest cases.

John Dion, a 57-year-old Notre Dame graduate, is chief of the agency's counterespionage section, a group of a dozen career public servants who specialize in the government's most sensitive national security investigations.

In recent years, these have included FBI spy Robert Hanssen, CIA spy Aldrich Ames and accused al-Qaida conspirator Zacarias Moussaoui.

As high-profile as those cases were, none included the political overtones of the CIA leak probe, which is focused on the White House and has drawn Democratic calls for appointment of a special counsel to remove possible conflicts of interest for Attorney General John Ashcroft.

The investigation concerns who leaked to several reporters the name of Valerie Plame, a CIA undercover officer married to former Ambassador Joseph C. Wilson. The leak followed Wilson's public charges that President Bush was manipulating intelligence to exaggerate the threat posed by Iraq.

Those who have worked with Dion say he will not shy away from advocating charges against any high-level Bush administration official if that's where the investigation leads.

"I have no doubt that John has all the independence necessary to do his job the right way," said Paul McNulty, U.S. attorney for Virginia's eastern district. "He is used to working on cases that get a lot of attention. He is a thoughtful, careful person."

But not, associates say, a man who likes the limelight.

That trait was underscored

Wednesday at a Justice Department awards ceremony when Dion was jokingly introduced by Bruce Schwartz, a deputy assistant attorney general who is Dion's immediate superior, as "a man whose name has been torn from today's headlines."

Dion is declining all interview requests and even refuses to release a photograph of himself to news organizations.

He came to the Justice Department in 1973 as part of its honors program, shortly after graduating from George Washington University law school and the University of Notre Dame. He joined what then was called the internal security section in 1980, gradually rising through the ranks until he became acting chief in 1997 and chief in 2002.

Dion has twice received the John Marshall Award for Outstanding Achievement, one of the highest Justice Department awards: first in 1987 for work on the Walker family spy ring case and again in 1997 for espionage prosecutions of FBI agent Earl Pitts and CIA officer Harold Nicholson.

The Walker case involved a former Navy officer, John Walker Jr., and several family members who were convicted of spying for the Soviet Union. Pitts is serving a 27-year sentence for selling secrets to the Soviet Union and Russia; Nicholson was sentenced to 23 years in prison in 1997 for providing Russia with names of CIA officers and other classified documents.

Dion's challenge in the CIA leak was underscored Thursday when four senior Democratic senators wrote in a letter to Bush that Ashcroft's close ties to the White House will raise questions about the outcome of any investigation.

"He is used to working on cases that get a lot of attention."

ND benefactor dies of cancer at 75

By MEGHANNE DOWNES
News Editor

Joan Kroc, Notre Dame benefactor and philanthropist, died Sunday after a bout with brain cancer in her Rancho Santa Fe, Calif. home. She was 75.

Kroc, the widow of McDonald's Corporation founder Ray Kroc, established and endowed the Joan B. Kroc Institute for International Peace Studies at Notre Dame with $12 million in 1986 and was a major donor to peace organizations, said Scott Appleby, director of the Kroc Institute for International Studies.

Kroc, who had no direct connection to Notre Dame, decided to establish the foundation after she learned of then-University President Father Theodore Hesburgh's desire to establish peace through cross-cultural study, dialogue and peace building.

"Mrs. Kroc was single-minded in her dedication to eliminating the threat of nuclear weapons and all forms of deadly violence," Appleby and Hesburgh said in a joint statement. "The establishment and continuing support of Notre Dame's Kroc Institute was just one of several important initiatives she fostered in support of human rights, conflict transformation and peace building around the world."

Kroc also made substantial donations to establish the University of San Diego's Institute for Peace and Justice and to the Salvation Army to build the Ray and Joan Kroc Community Center in San Diego. The Joan B. Kroc Foundation supported agencies that dealt with AIDS research, world hunger, substance abuse and care for the terminally ill, including the St. Vincent de Paul Joan Kroc Center for the Homeless in San Diego, San Diego Hospice and the Betty Ford Center, said Appleby.

"She was a kind and gracious person who sought no attention to herself and who wanted to give as much of her money as possible for the good causes in which she believed," University President Father Edward Malloy said in a statement.

Kroc, who was a professional musician and music teacher, is survived by her daughter, four granddaughters and four great-granddaughters.

Culbertson declined to discuss how significant the budget cuts were for the Kroc Institute, but said the budget did shrink due to the drop in the endowment.

According to Cavadini, the Institute for Church Life saw a definite decrease in funding for this year, because the Institute's resources are closely tied to the University endowment. "If the endowment goes down we have to make cuts," Cavadini said.

"Our income goes down immediately."

However, the Institute funded the talk by Obasanjo and has plans to bring at least two other scholars to speak on campus this semester, according to Cavadini. "You just focus more," he said.

Cavadini said he believed the Institute for Church Life could continue to sponsor a similar number of talks to previous years by focusing on advance planning and co-sponsorship between University departments.

Other senators agreed with Hallahan's perspective.

"I'm for [giving the Executive Cabinet the power to amend the Constitution] because I don't believe Senate should determine the Constitution for every group," said Knott senator Brian Agganis. "It's surprising to me that we even have that power. It's a major power, but it's something we as a Senate haven't even dealt with this year."

After extensive debate, the resolution failed. However, Senators believe that there is hope for some form of the resolution to be passed.

"I think it was a very important resolution, and I still think there is hope that a form of it will be passed in the near future," said Howard senator Brin Anderson. "I think a lot of Senators were uncomfortable giving powers to this group because they don't know where it is going. Students run in marathon

Participants travel to Chicago for race

By NICOLE ZOOK

While most students were sleeping Sunday morning, several Saint Mary's and Notre Dame students were attempting a near-impossible feat.

The 26th annual Chicago Marathon kicked off at 8 a.m. Sunday and among its runners were Saint Mary's sophomore Mary Nelson, freshman Sara Nelson and their mother Diana, who all began training for the marathon months ahead.

"I first started training in April because of a triathlon, but the actual training starts in June," Sara Nelson said. "You get up to about 22, 24 miles. Then two weeks before the race, you start to taper [and] decrease gradually to prepare."

The sisters agreed that all the hard work was worth it. Both finished the 26.2 mile race, their first. Mary placed 100th in her division with a time of 4:59:45 and Sara, with a time of 3:43:55, placed 8th.

"I felt like a million bucks," Sara said. "You get very caught up in the atmosphere, with all the people, and it's very inspiring. It's a huge adrenaline rush."

The race, which has a registration cap of 40,000 runners, draws a crowd of over one million annually. Runners and spectators alike are treated to specially decorated neighborhoods, such as Wrigleyville, Chinatown, River North, Little Italy, Greektown and Grant Park.

The Nelsons said they plan to compete in another marathon at some point.

Sara will compete in short races starting in June and the Ironman competition in September of next year. "And I'm definitely planning on running the marathon again with my sister and my mother," she added.

"I'm really proud to have done it with the two other women in my family, and I would have been happy to do it in any time," Mary said. "I'm looking forward to doing more — but not anytime soon."

Poles celebrate papal anniversary

KRAKOW, Poland — Troubled by television pictures of a stooped and frail Pope John Paul II, Poles celebrated the 25th anniversary of their native son's papacy Sunday with prayers for his health and memories of his inspiration for their overthrow of communism.

Throughout this overwhelmingly Roman Catholic country, church leaders, former school chums and well-wishers cheered the former Karol Wojtyla, the cardinal from the southern city of Krakow whose Oct. 16, 1978, election as pope strengthened an oppressed nation.

Churches and central squares were festooned with yellow papal banners as Poles expressed their affection for John Paul in Masses, concerts and national television specials.

Bolivian protesters killed

LA PAZ, Bolivia — Bolivia's government imposed martial law on a city outside the capital Sunday after clashes between troops and demonstrators angry about proposals to export gas to the United States and Mexico. Sixteen people have been reported killed.

Soldiers manned major intersections in El Alto, a poor, industrial city 10 miles outside the capital, La Paz. But the move didn't stop protesters who repeatedly clashed with the soldiers and police trying to disperse them.

Roman Catholic priest Asensio Mamani said he saw three people killed in the clashes in his neighborhood, Senakata, on Sunday. Another priest, Modesto Chino, said two demonstrators were also killed in the Bolivian neighborhood.

Those deaths would bring the total killed to 16 in El Alto since the clashes began. The government earlier reported that 11 people had been killed.

Conjoined twins separated

DALLAS — Two-year-old Egyptian twins joined at the top of their heads were separated Sunday in a 26-hour operation that took more than a year of planning.

Doctors at Children's Medical Center Dallas worked through the morning separating the intricate connection of blood vessels running between the brains of Ahmed and Mohamed Ibrahim — considered the riskiest part of the operation.

They were finally separated at 11:17 a.m., hospital officials said in a prepared statement.

"They are now within striking distance of living independent lives," said Dr. Jim Thomas, chief of critical care at the hospital.

Following the separation, craniofacial surgeons began reconstructing their skulls and closing the wounds with skin and tissue created by expanders that were put in the boys' heads and thighs about five months ago.

All that rain meant Nancy Exmeyer had to scramble when it came time to open her pumpkin patch the first weekend in October.

Bush's diplomacy under fire

Senate Foreign Relations Committee urges Bush to take charge of postwar policy

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Bush has lost control of Iraq policy because of infighting among administration officials, the leaders of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee said Sunday.

The administration also came under criticism from Democratic presidential candidate John Kerry for being unwilling to create a real international coalition and alienating governments everywhere. "This is haphazard, shotgun, shoot-from-the-hip diplomacy," the Massachusetts senator said.

The committee leaders urged Bush to take charge of U.S. postwar policy in Iraq.

"The president has to be the president, over the vice president and over these secretaries," the chairman, Sen. Dick Lugar, R-Ind., said on NBC's "Meet the Press."

Added the committee's top Democrat, Sen. Joseph Biden of Delaware: "There's no clear articulation within this administration of what the goals, what the message is, what the plan is. You have this significant division within the administration between the Powells and the Rumsfelds."

Since early in the administration, Secretary of State Colin Powell has counseled a generally more moderate line than Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld. Even before the Iraq war in the spring, tales of tension and turf battles between their departments were widespread.

Asked what he would tell Bush were the two to meet alone in the White House, Biden said: "I would say, 'Mr. President, take charge. Take charge. Settle this dispute.'"

Biden said Bush should tell Powell, Rumsfeld and Vice President Dick Cheney: "This is my policy. Any one of you that divert from the policy is off the team."

Lugar also predicted

Getty

U.S. senator Dick Lugar gestures as he speaks on NBC's "Meet the Press" during a taping at the NBC studios Sunday in Washington.

American forces might have to be in Iraq in some capacity for eight years or more. Both he and Biden said the country's recovery would cost at least $50 billion more than the $87 billion, including more than $20 billion for the recovery, that Bush has requested and is pending in Congress.

Both Biden and Lugar mentioned Cheney's speech last week, presented as a part of an "information offensive" by the administration to counter what it sees as unnecessarily negative media reports about the Iraq postwar situation.

Lugar called it "very, very tough and strident." Biden said Cheney's desire, shared by Rumsfeld, is "to undermine international institutions because they feel it's a drag on our capability."

This makes Biden's position as a Democrat who voted for Bush's war plan frustrating, "the most frustrating time in my career."

The vote was correct, Biden said, because war was necessary to depose Iraqi President Saddam Hussein. "I just did not count on the fact that it would be handled with such a degree of incompetence subsequent to the — quote — military victory," Biden said.

Bush declared major combat finished on in his May 1 talk aboard the aircraft carrier USS Abraham Lincoln.

Kerry, appearing on ABC's "This Week," said Bush and Cheney should apologize to Americans "for having misled America, for not having kept his promises of working adequately within the international community, not having built a legitimate international coalition, not having exhausted the process of the inspections."

"And, most importantly, not having gone to war as a matter of last resort, which is what he promised to America."

Lindsay Taylor, a spokeswoman for the Republican National Committee, responded that Kerry "changes his position on the war every week in an attempt to pander to his liberal anti-war base. Surely Sen. Kerry can't think Iraq and America would be better off with Saddam Hussein still in power."

Palestine prime minister to resign

Associated Press

RAMALLAH, West Bank — After days of bitter quarreling with Yasser Arafat, interim Palestinian Prime Minister Ahmed Qureia said Sunday he intends to give up his post in the coming weeks, dampening hopes of reviving a stalled U.S.-backed peace plan.

Still, Qureia's threat left open the possibility a deal could be worked out to keep him in office.

Meanwhile, the Israeli army said it withdrew some troops from the Rafah refugee camp in Gaza, where it fought Palestinians for two days while searching for weapons-smuggling tunnels. Eight Palestinians were killed, and local residents reported the army destroyed 100 homes.

Arafat and Qureia disagree over the amount of control the Palestinian leader will retain over Palestinian armed forces, as well as procedural and personal issues.

Israel and the United States insist Arafat hand over authority, charging he is tainted by terrorism. Palestinians deny that and say Arafat is their elected president — although the term he won in 1996 has expired.

Qureia currently heads an emergency Cabinet that Arafat appointed by decree a week ago. When that Cabinet's term expires in three weeks, Qureia was set to form a more permanent government subject to approval by Palestinian legislators.

But Qureia said after Sunday's meeting of the central committee of Arafat's ruling Fatah party that a new government will be formed in about three weeks "with a new prime minister, too."

Some observers viewed that statement as one of frustration. If Qureia quits, he would be the second prime minister in five weeks to resign over disputes with Arafat, casting doubt on whether Arafat will ever relinquish enough power to allow a premier to succeed.

working toward with that resolution will come to be."

Hallahan supported this resolution because he believed it would facilitate better cooperation between groups within student government as well as make student government more efficient. Before the meeting, he talked with senators to answer their questions and try to get support for the resolution.

"I tried to talk to as many senators as I could over the last few days ... and I was able to get in touch with many of them," Hallahan said.

If the resolution had passed, it would have allowed four senators to sit on the Executive Cabinet, thus forming a body that would have representatives from every Student Government group called the Council of Representatives.

Hallahan said he will still invite four Senators to come to today's Executive Cabinet meeting.

"I'm going to invite four Senators to come to [the meeting,] as the resolution would have mandated. We need to get to work," he said.

At the meeting, senators expressed concerns about the powers and goals of the proposed group.

They disagreed on allowing the new organization the sole power to amend the Constitution. Hallahan addressed these concerns after the meeting.

"I think some [senators] had concerns about what this group is going to look like," Hallahan said. "Hopefully at tomorrow's [Executive Cabinet] meeting, we will decide what needs to happen next, and we'll go back to Senate with that recommendation."

Police arrest 1,500 Hindu nationalists

Associated Press

LUCKNOW — Police arrested 1,500 Hindu nationalists in India's largest state over the weekend for fear their new campaign to build a temple at the site of a razed 16th century Muslim mosque could lead to violence, officials said Sunday.

Most of those arrested since Saturday were members of the Vishwa Hindu Parishad, or the World Hindu Council, and the hard-liner Hindu political party, Shiv Sena, officials in Uttar Pradesh state said Sunday.

The council has called a rally on Oct. 17 to demand Hindus be allowed to build a temple in the city of Ayodhya, 300 miles east of New Delhi.

Hindu hard-liners believe the Babri mosque was built by Muslims on the site of an earlier Hindu temple honoring their supreme god, Rama.

Muslims say there's no proof of that and oppose Hindu plans to build a temple there.

On Friday, the High Court in Uttar Pradesh ordered the state government to prevent religious activity near the site in Ayodhya while the court reviews the decades-old Hindu-Muslim dispute.

At a huge gathering in 1992, thousands of Hindu activists razed the Babri Mosque with spades, crowbars and bare hands.

That triggered a year of Hindu-Muslim violence that killed 2,000 people across India.

On Saturday nearly 1,300 Shiv Sena members were arrested as they tried to hold a meeting in Ayodhya, said Rajeev Sabarwal, senior superintendent of police. Police detained another 200 people traveling by trains to Ayodhya.

Many were wearing saffron bandanas and traveling in large, slogan-shouting groups, police said.

They arrested included two Shiv Sena lawmakers, a key constituent of Prime Minister Atal Bihari Vajpayee's 19-party coalition.

Chief Secretary Akhand Pratap Singh, the state's top bureaucrat, told The Associated Press the detained would be sent home and prevented from attending the Oct. 17 meeting.

The Hindu council has pledged to go ahead with its plans despite the court order, said Prabhu Narain Singh, a senior official of the council, adding that 300,000 are expected to attend.

Hindu nationalist leader Ved Prakash Sachan said despite the government crackdown, the activists "will go by bus, or hitch a ride or walk all the distance, but will reach Ayodhya."

Railways Ministry spokeswoman Gitanjali Kame said trains going to Ayodhya had been canceled and others going to the area had been diverted.

"[The activists] will go by bus or hitch a ride or walk all the distance, but will reach Ayodhya."

Recall boosts California retail

LOS ANGELES — Businesses big and small shared the estimated $107 million pumped into California's economy by the recall.

The biggest campaign expense — $27 million recorded to date — has been for television or cable airtime, according to financial disclosures filed with the state. But other beneficiaries included campaign button makers, bakers, petition gatherers and companies renting everything from computers to cars.

They all got a piece of the $55 million spent so far by the campaigns as well as the estimated $52 million it took to stage last Tuesday's election, according to an Orange County Register analysis published Sunday.

"It's become almost a cottage industry," said Jack Kyser, senior economist for the Los Angeles County Economic Development Corp.

$8M spent to thwart drug bill

WASHINGTON — The pharmaceutical industry's trade group spent $8.5 million in lobbying this year as it worked against a bill to allow importation of government-approved drugs.

The Pharmaceutical Research and Manufacturers of America spent the money lobbying Congress and federal agencies in the first half of this year, the most the group has ever spent in a reporting period, according to federal reports reviewed by The Associated Press. Lobbying totals cover expenses such as salaries and mailings but not campaign contributions.

L.A. fans optimistic about sale

LOS ANGELES — The Los Angeles Dodgers may soon be back in private hands, a development greeted with cautious optimism by a handful of the team's fans on Saturday.

Fans said they'd welcome a return to individual ownership if it also meant a returning to winning.

When media magnate Rupert Murdoch's News Corp. bought the Dodgers from Peter O'Malley in 1998, the team hadn't won a post-season playoff game in 10 years. When it was announced Friday that News Corp. reached an agreement to sell the team to Boston real estate developer Frank McCourt, the Dodgers hadn't won a postseason game in 15 years.

Spring style flows in France

McCartney, Valentino, Saint Laurent, Vuitton, Ford unveil spring fashions

Associated Press

PARIS — Stella McCartney has an answer for an uneasy world: Go light.

Presenting her spring-summer ready-to-wear collection Sunday, the British designer dazzled fans with cool, airy styles of chiffon or cotton voile in soothing, dulled-down colors.

The wispy dresses in earthy greens were long off the hip, creating a flapping, flowing movement with the models' every step. A ballet dancer would feel at home in these outfits.

After her show in an ornate hall of the Paris Stock Exchange, McCartney said she had imagined rummaging through an old stockpile of fabrics to put together a soft-toned collection.

"I always had this fantasy of having a great, great grandmother and discovering her chest of old fabrics," she said. "Once they were really bright, vibrant colors that after 40 years were dulled down."

McCartney said she wanted to strike a light theme.

"We're coming out of a very difficult moment as human beings, reacting to a lot of world turmoil," she said. "We want to breathe in air — it's time for release and to move on."

One unabashed fan said McCartney is coming more into her own.

"It was fabulous. She goes from strength to strength" said Paul McCartney, the designer's father, who was on hand with his very pregnant wife, Heather. "It's getting better all the time."

One slinky offering was a see-through, triangle design silk blouse over a rough-cut, pleated mustard yellow skirt. Belly buttons disappeared underneath high-waisted swimsuits.

Shoes were often block heels in a discrete nude color, to give the impression that the models "were just floating along the runway," the designer said.

Agence France Presse

British supermodel Kate Moss presents a creation from Valentino's Spring/Summer ready-to-wear collection during France Fashion Week.

Chiffon and cotton voiles were often layered, handbags were laden with metal trim accents and colored sunglasses had designs of butterflies in motion.

But McCartney only gave a gentle nod to the lepidopteran motif. Across town, Valentino went heavier on the butterfly theme, using it on shoulder brooches, prints, and even sandals.

The Italian designer's approach also included light, lacy themes, but was generally more sober, including gowns or dresses that would wear equally well at work or on a night in town.

"Valentino has elegance," said Naomi Campbell, who graced the catwalk in outfits including a turquoise evening gown covered with shell pendants. His styles "feel like the old Hollywood, like in Elizabeth Taylor movies," she said.

Big silver sequin bowls adorned navy stretch tops. Embroidered aprons were clever, and there was an extra-loud embroidered, flower-printed shirt and matching skirt.

At the Rodin Museum, Yves Saint Laurent gave this season its biggest dose of black.

Bouffant-haired models pranced out in sizzling black embroidered evening gowns, trench coats in black with gold buttons, baggy black pants or a black velours bathrobe over a bathing suit.

Designer Tom Ford

showed a penchant for low cuts, giving the fashion house's legendary women's tuxedo a white vest that opened up from the navel. Heels seemed almost invariably stilettos, many in black and white with crystal-looking insets.

Among the more colorful pieces were a scaly dress in golden paillettes, and a comfortable, close-fitting dress in a sharp tangerine tone.

Louis Vuitton certainly provided a summertime feel by setting its show in a searing glass hallway that became scorchingly hot. But as the high-energy show began, black curtains came down, and a light show with the famed company logo darted over the faces in the crowd.

Bush's trip affected by economy

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A nine-day trip to Asia and Australia might seem a welcome respite to President Bush, who is being rebuffed by European powers and hounded by criticism at home over Iraq, a CIA-leak investigation and a weak economy.

But even across the Pacific, some difficult issues will pursue him, including the loss of millions of U.S. jobs.

To many in the United States, China and other low-wage Asian countries are prime culprits in the snatching of jobs from American workers. With Democratic presidential candidates making noises about this issue, it is sure to factor prominently on the campaign trail next year.

As Bush travels through Asia, he faces the challenge of a political balancing act: addressing domestic concerns mindful of his audience back home while trying to placate foreign hosts who want more trade and economic concessions from Washington in exchange for their help fighting terrorism.

"It's a tough assignment. He has to try to appeal to both audiences," said former Rep. Lee Hamilton, D-Ind., director of the Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars.

"He's got to be a strong advocate of the American economy, and he's got to go forward with open trade, and of course he's going to have to stress terrorism and weapons nonproliferation," said Hamilton, a former chairman of the House International Relations Committee.

The president's trip, which begins Wednesday, takes him to Japan, Thailand, Indonesia, Singapore, the Philippines and Australia.

He will meet with Chinese leaders in Bangkok, Thailand, on the sidelines of the Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation forum, which runs from Oct. 20-23.

The trip partly is to thank leaders who have backed Bush on Iraq. Notable among them are Australian Prime Minister John Howard, Philippines President Gloria Macapagal Arroyo and Japanese President Junichiro Koizumi.

Mental patients killed in hospital fire

Associated Press

MINSK — A fire believed to have been set by a psychiatric patient engulfed a Belarusian mental hospital Sunday, killing 30 patients and reducing much of the century-old wooden building to ash.

One of the 62 patients who lived at the hospital in the village of Randilovshchina, some 150 miles west of the capital, Minsk, was missing. Emergency officials said they did not know whether he ran away or died in the pre-dawn blaze.

Another 31 patients had minor injuries, officials said. No hospital staff were in the building when the fire started.

A spokeswoman for President Alexander Lukashenko, Natalya Petkevich, said the fire was set by a patient who had tried to burn down the building twice before. The patient was among those killed.

But Igor Zarembo, a duty officer at the Emergency Situations Ministry, said investigators were also considering a second possibility — that the fire resulted from carelessness on the part of the staff.

A nurse and an orderly were sleeping in a separate building on hospital grounds when the fire broke out, Zarembo said. When they awoke to screams and the smell of smoke, they apparently panicked and tried to put out the fire and rescue patients themselves, instead of immediately calling for help.

"As a result of such poorly thought-out actions, by the time emergency personnel arrived, one of the hospital's wings was completely engulfed in flames and the roof and ceiling had collapsed," Emergency Situations Minister Valery Astapov told Belarusian television.

The patients were men and women aged 30 to 60, deemed unable to function independently and whose relatives refused to care for them. They all lived in the one-story wooden building, constructed in 1905 with locked doors and bars on the windows, Zarembo said. He said most likely the doors of the patients' rooms were also locked.

The nurse and the orderly unlocked all the doors they could, but some rooms were already cut off by flames, Zarembo said.

The building was divided into two wings separated by a stone wall, and the wing where the fire began was destroyed, he said. Damage was less severe in the other half.

Human rights activists said the fire was a result of the dismal state of Belarus' psychiatric hospitals, which are poorly funded and largely unreformed since the Soviet era.

Columbia medical center investigated

Associated Press

NEW YORK — A whistle-blowing veterinarian has entangled Columbia University's prestigious medical center in a protracted dispute after alleging that baboons and other lab animals suffered from cruel or negligent treatment.

A year after veterinarian Catherine Dell'Orto complained to senior medical center officials, the case remains very much alive. It is the subject of investigations by two federal agencies, and animal-rights activists are seeking punitive action against the medical center.

Dell'Orto has left the university, contending she was shunned after speaking up, but she continues to press her cause.

Columbia, meanwhile, has implemented reforms based on some of her complaints, but — backed by federal investigators — has concluded that other allegations were baseless.

The university says one researcher Dell'Orto complained about has halted his experiments after receiving threatening e-mail, apparently from one of the veterinarian's supporters.

"Columbia doesn't claim to be perfect, but we try to be as close as humanly possible," said Dr. Harvey Colten, the medical center's associate dean for research.

"The extent to which some of these issues have continued, that's distracting," he told The Associated Press. "But in no way do we find it a problem to have the initial complaint raised — we want people to come forward if they think there are problems."

Dell'Orto, 34, said her concerns date to late 2001 when — as a postdoctoral fellow — she complained to staff at Columbia's Institute of Comparative Medicine about the treatment of baboons undergoing surgery as part of research into stroke therapies.

For example, she contended that baboons who were operated on — in some cases having an eyeball removed — were left afterwards to suffer in their cages rather than being euthanized.

Dissatisfied with the response, she sifted through records and became convinced there were systemic problems of maltreatment, poor record-keeping and other violations of regulations regarding care of lab animals.

In October 2002, she presented her evidence to medical center officials, who ordered an in-house investigation and notified the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Bali victims remembered

Associated Press

BALI — Weeping relatives gathered Sunday on the first anniversary of the Bali bombings to remember the 202 victims, celebrate life and send a defiant message to terrorists responsible for the worst attack since Sept. 11.

More than 2,000 people attended the morning service in a cavernous amphitheater on Bali island. The day ended with a moment of silence at 11:08 p.m., the same time suicide bombers blew up the Sari Club and Paddy's bar, killing mostly young foreigners — including seven Americans.

Similar memorial services were held in London and across Australia, which lost 88 citizens, the most of any country. In Sydney, several thousand mourners gathered on a wind-swept headland to dedicate a bronze sculpture to the victims.

Families and friends of many of the 28 British victims of the bombings gathered in London for a memorial service. In Trafalgar Square, 202 white helium balloons were released, one for each of those who died.

The attack is blamed on Jemaah Islamiyah, a regional terror group linked to al-Qaida and blamed for the August bombing of the J.W. Marriott hotel in Jakarta that killed 12.

"Yours is a loss that can never be recovered," Australian Prime Minister John Howard said in Bali. "We haven't forgotten you, we never will. Australia will never forget [Oct. 12, 2002]."

The service began with

Christian hymns sung by Australian and Indonesian school children but featured elements of all five major religions.

Twenty-two candles, representing victims' homelands, were lit and the 202 names were read. The service closed with a rousing rendition of the Australian folk song "Waltzing Matilda" as mourners hugged and placed flowers at a wading pool.

Relatives — some wearing black armbands saying "Bali United Forever" and others wearing shirts from rugby teams that lost players in the attack — walked past portraits of the dead as they left the cathedral-like pavilion.

"It was so sad walking past those photos," said Saari Wedemeyer, a 19-year-old whose friend was killed.

Texas redistricting plan passed

Associated Press

AUSTIN — A six-month battle in the Texas Legislature ended Sunday when the Senate passed a congressional redistricting plan in a third special legislative session.

The bill now goes to Republican Gov. Rick Perry, who is expected to sign it into law.

The new map, approved 17-14 in the Senate, likely will give Republicans the majority in the Texas congressional delegation that is now ruled 17-15 by Democrats.

Democrats have opposed every attempt by Republicans to pass a new plan, saying the current congressional boundaries drawn by a court in 2001 should remain in place. Republicans say current voting trends show Texas should have more GOP representation in Washington.

Republicans have said they could gain as many as six additional seats in the delegation. Democrats said the map would add seven Republicans.

The bill's passage ends six months of strange twists, including two walkouts by Democrats, three special sessions and harsh Republican infighting.

While the legislative battle over congressional redistricting is over, the feud continues. Democrats have pledged to take their fight to court.

Republicans were hoping to end the redistricting debate last week, as the House moved swiftly to approve the map Friday. But the Senate held off its vote to wait for the House to approve an unrelated bill to reorganize some parts of state government.

By the time that bill was eligible in the House on Friday, there were not enough state representatives left at the Capitol for a quorum. The House reconvened Sunday and approved the government reorganization bill, acceding to pressure from the Senate.

Lt. Gov. David Dewhurst previously said the Senate would not approve the redistricting map until the House passed the reorganization bill.

"I do not want to be held hostage by the Senate," said Republican state Rep. Carter Casteel, who helped write the measure. "I am sad that I'm standing here today asking you to vote against a bill that I helped author."

Escaped PA inmate still at large

Associated Press

WILKES-BARRE, Pa. — An inmate who escaped down a 60-foot long rope of bedsheets removed a seventh-floor jail window without the aid of any tools, and similar windows are also vulnerable, the warden said Sunday.

Hugo Selenski, suspected in the murders of five people found buried in his yard, escaped Friday by climbing down a rope assembled from 12 prison-issue bedsheets, Luzerne County Correctional Facility Warden Gene Fisch said. Selenski remained at large Sunday.

The escape occurred at about 9:30 p.m., near the end of a two-hour period during which individual cells are unlocked and inmates in the overcrowded maximum security unit are permitted to socialize.

Selenski, 30, and cellmate Scott Bolton walked into another inmate's unoccupied cell and removed a window used in a failed 1990 escape.

IRAQ

Seventh car bombing kills 8

Associated Press

BAGHDAD — Suicide attackers struck again Sunday in Iraq, this time with twin car bombs in the heart of Baghdad that fell short of a hotel full of Americans but exploded on a busy commercial street, killing six bystanders and wounding dozens, U.S. military and Iraqi officials said.

The Pentagon said gunfire from Iraqi guards and U.S. personnel aborted the drivers' plan to hit the Baghdad Hotel, home to officials of the U.S.-led occupation authority here and reportedly some members of Iraq's interim Governing Council.

At least one guard was reported among the dead; the two bombers also were presumed killed. One member of the 25-seat Governing Council, Mouwafak al-Rabii, told Al-Jazeera satellite television he suffered a slight hand injury.

It was the seventh fatal vehicle bombing in Iraq since early August, attacks that have taken more than 140 lives.

All have targeted institutions perceived as cooperating with the U.S. occupation of Iraq, and none has been reported solved.

The lunchtime attack sent terror-stricken Iraqis fleeing up Saadoun Avenue, over broken window glass from banks, restaurants and shops and past the bloodied bodies of injured.

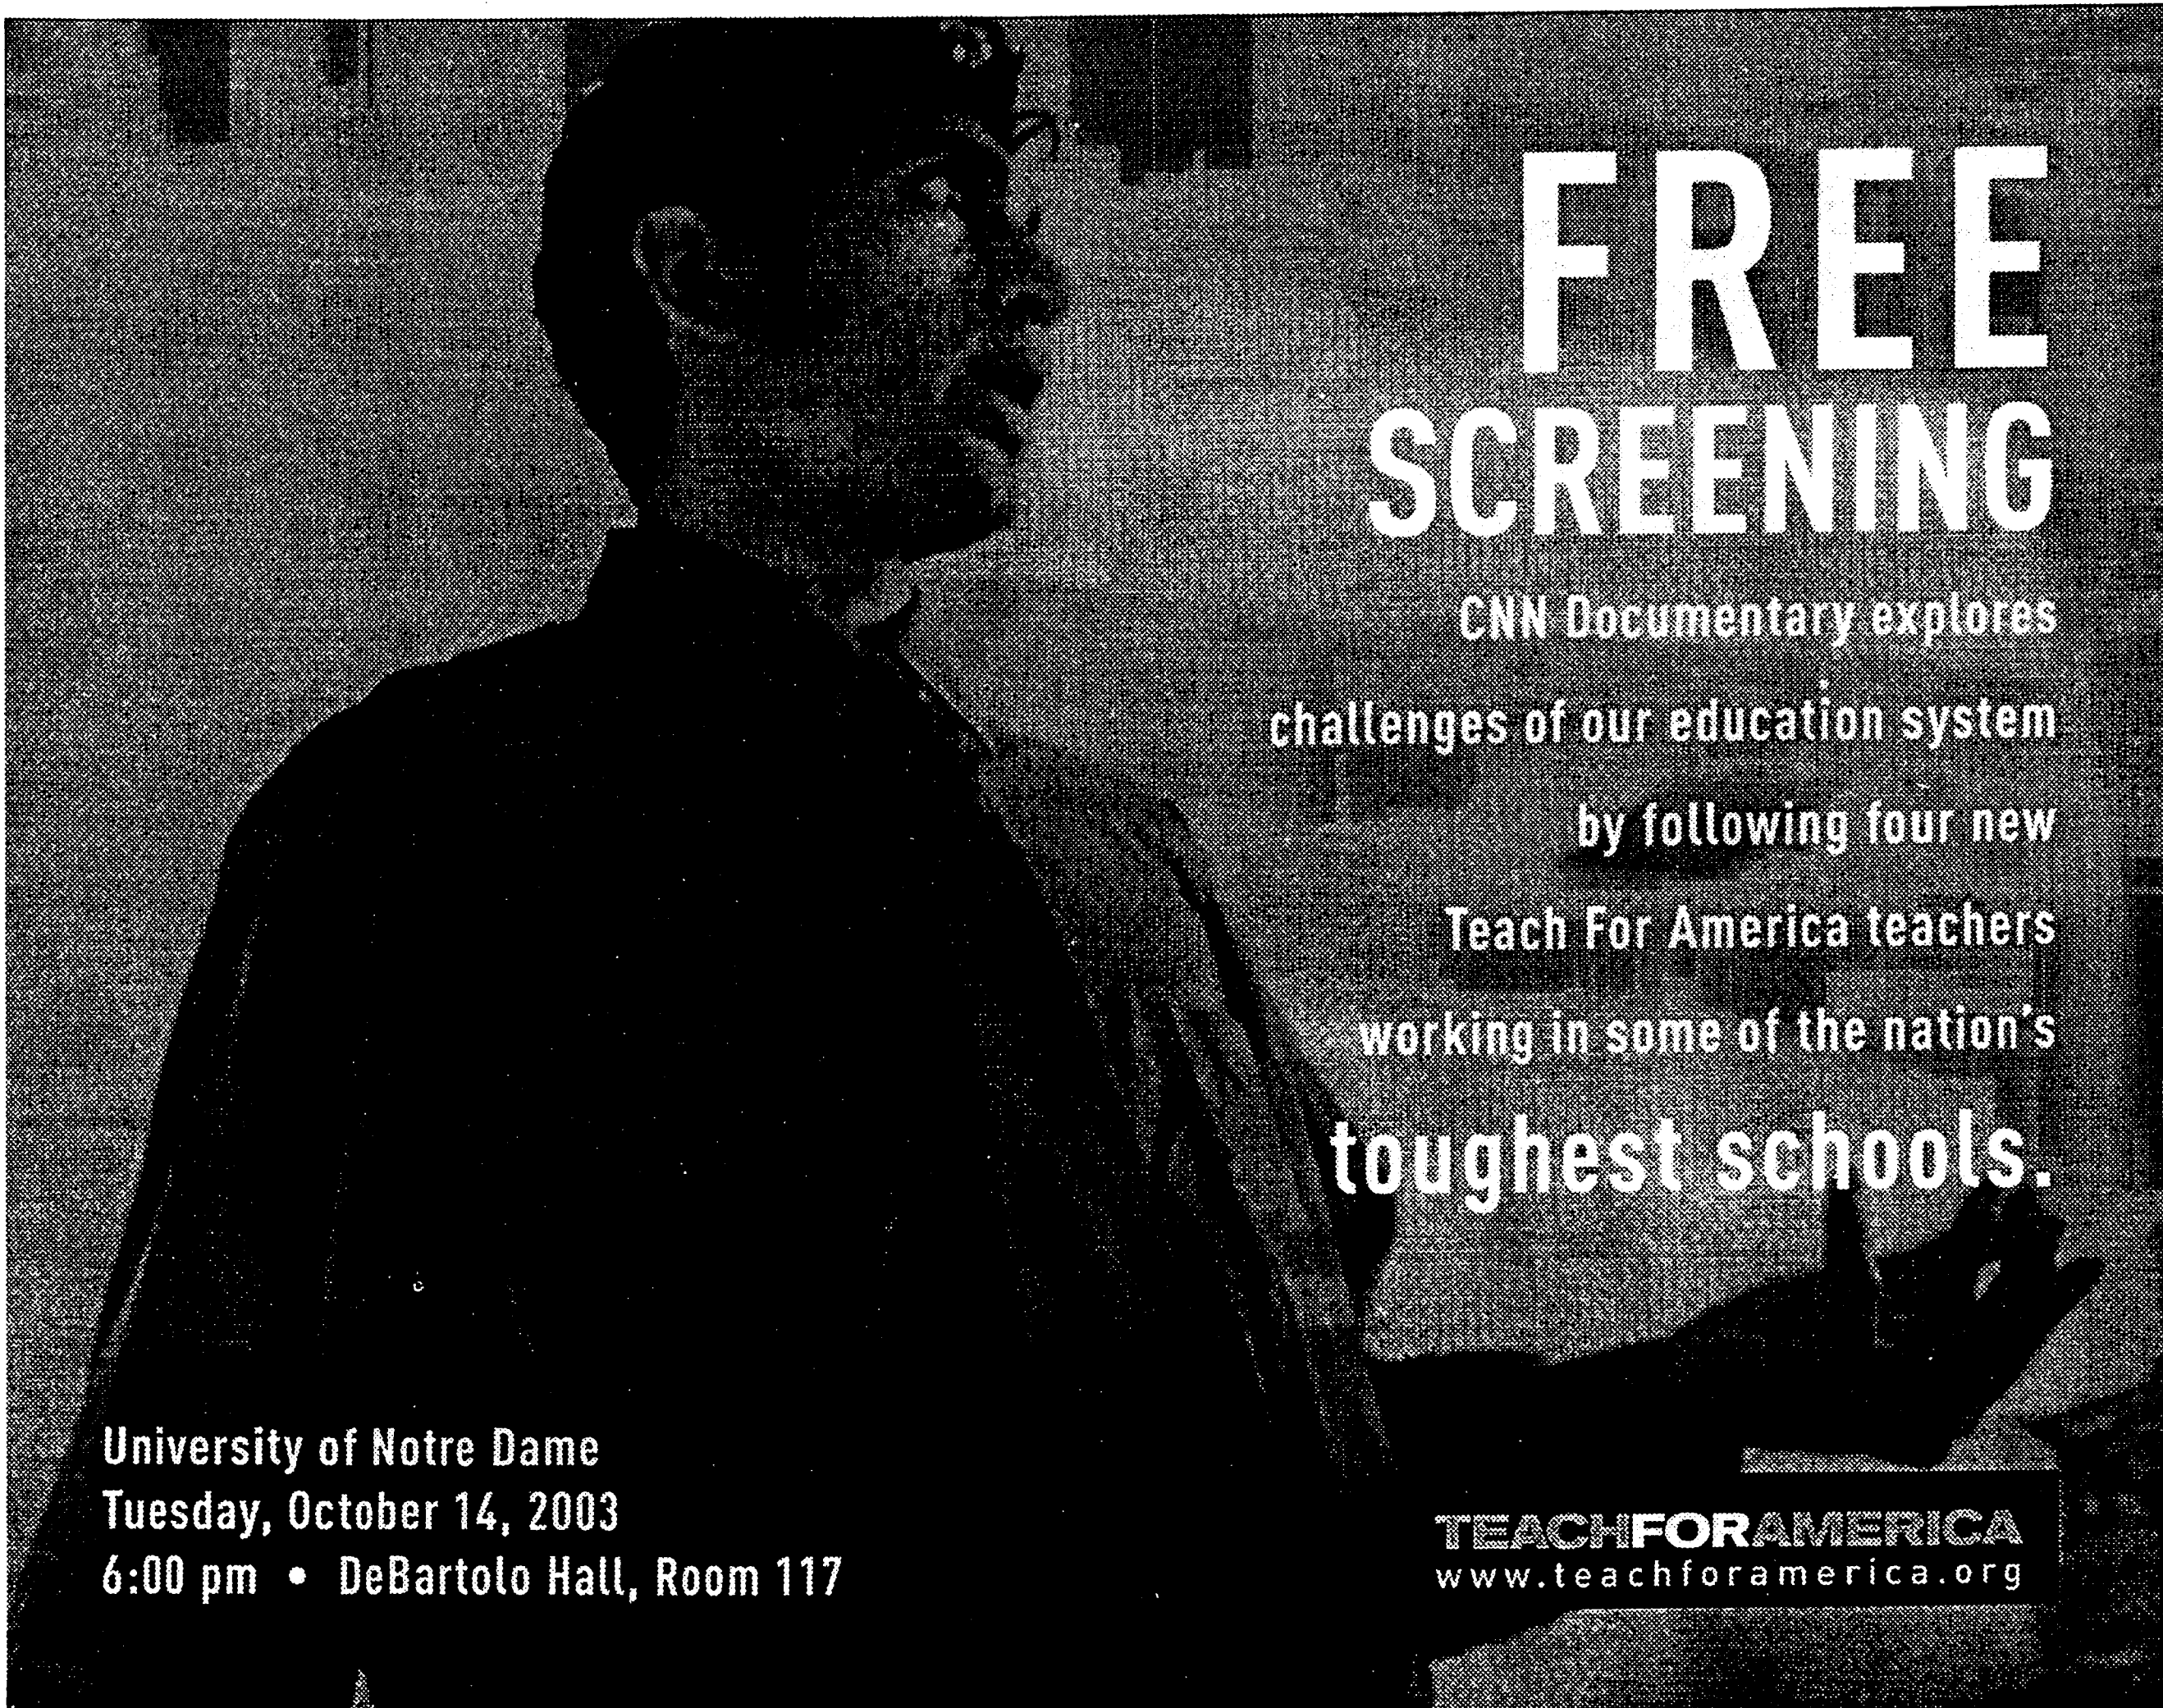

American helicopters and combat vehicles converged on the chaotic scene as black smoke from burning cars billowed over the central city.

The six victims and 32 injured reported at al-Kindi Hospital — four in critical condition — were all Iraqis, authorities said.

The U.S. military said three Americans were slightly injured.

"We will work with the Iraqi police to find those responsible and bring them to justice," Iraq's U.S. civilian administrator, L. Paul Bremer, said after Sunday's bombing.

But along Saadoun Avenue, feelings ran high against the Americans and their inability to stop the bombings.

Celebrating genocide under the Dome

Early in the morning, Oct. 12, 1492, a sailor aboard the Pinta glimpsed land in the distance — it was Guanahani, a Bahamian island. The next day, Christopher Columbus' crew of 90 set foot on the its soil. Rechristening it San Salvador and claiming it for Spain, he concluded their voyage begun in Spain that August. The rest, as they say, is history.

BJ Strew

Straight, No Chaser

This is how the pretty version goes. And, like Congress, unfortunately, Notre Dame seems to support it. In particular, this off-putting vignette adorns a hallway in the Main Building: prostrate Taino receiving Columbus. Is this right? Does this man deserve his glorified place under our beloved Dome, let alone his own holiday?

The "discovery" of the rest of the world is something worth celebrating, I suppose. This is something I have to take issue with for a couple reasons. For example: Can complex cultures of millions of people be "discovered"? Isn't that claim both racist and Eurocentric? And, that question aside, what about the archaeological evidence in Newfoundland of 11th-century Nordic settlements? Or British fisherman on the Canadian shores?

At least he proved the world was round, right? Nope. The Egyptian-Greek scientist Eratosthenes measured the circumference and diameter of the world in the third century B.C. Arab scientists had pioneered a whole discipline of geography and measurement, and in the 10th century A.D., Al Maqdisi described the earth with 360 degrees of longitude and 180 degrees of latitude. The Monastery of St. Catherine in the Sinai still has an icon — painted 500 years before Columbus — which shows Jesus ruling over a spherical earth.

But we stick with the romanticized, tenuous "official" line, however: we just pretend that Columbus was the first. Who wants to rock the boat? After all, without Columbus, surely Europe would never have found the other hemisphere. It would have escaped "civilization" at the hands of the Spaniards. The natives, needless to say, would have preferred this.

Nevertheless, conquerors care little for the preferences of the soon-to-be conquered. Upon meeting the peaceful, obliging Taino, Columbus wrote in his journal: "With 50 men we could subjugate them all and make them do whatever we want." Not exactly a model Christian.

It's estimated that within a few years of the Europeans' arrival, three-fourths of the native population perished. How?

First, there was murder. On Columbus second voyage, he demanded tribute from the Taino.

All were expected to yield a certain quantity of gold

per capita, or 25

pounds of cotton.

Many who produced neither were brutally murdered,

their hands

were cut off and they were

death.

Kidnapping, torture and rape were the order of the day. In fact,

many Taino were hunted for sport.

Second, there was disease. The Taino were prone to European diseases, especially smallpox. They spread like wildfire, ravaging the native population.

Third, there was slave export. Directly after his so-called discovery, he took natives as slaves, seizing 1,200 from the island of Hispaniola. They were paraded naked through the streets of Seville, then sold as slaves in 1495. Columbus blazed the trail for slavery in the Americas. It was after there weren't any natives left that the Europeans turned to Africa.

By 1555, from murder, disease and slave export, the Taino were all but eradicated.

Not surprisingly, many are reminded by this of the Holocaust. But unlike the Holocaust, where an estimated two-thirds of European Jews were killed, this genocide was total. And not only were the Taino entirely eradicated, but nearly all cultural traces were, as well.

What were Columbus' intentions? Each one is based on greed and glory. He sought a quicker route to Asia for spice merchants — trade was priority, then as now. He sought the one-tenth of the riches promised to him by Queen Isabella. He sought to forcibly convert them to Christianity.

We live in an era where imperialism and genocide still haunt the world. Columbus serves as such a perfect symbol of the two. And the legacy of Columbus is still felt today. In the richest country in the world, the poorest ethnic group is the Native Americans.

It's unclear why the University is so bent on exalting him, a man so inept that he was replaced and arrested in 1495. Does the administration plan

on putting up some

Himmler murals?

Would President

Malloy offer himself as the model, as President

Walsh did for the

Columbus muralist, Luigi

Gregori?

Of course not. The apotheosis of Columbus should by now have become an embarrassing cultural relic. But somehow it has persisted. The University needs to show real moral clarity, to do its part in ending this curious secular mythology, this practice of honoring one of history's most dishonorable figures.

The prospect of moving Columbus Day to the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November — to honor democracy instead of empire — and renaming it Election Day is pretty remote. But starting small, acting locally, isn't. Doing away with the offensive Columbus murals would be a fine start.

Marketing for men's retreat misleads

I wanted to publicly comment on "The Man's Weekend," the male-only retreat held this weekend. While I admire many people involved in the planning and organization, and respect and support the choice to have a male-only retreat, I am greatly disturbed by the publicity for this event.

I was unaware that being a true male required having pig roasts and liking football. Dovetailing off of some of your publicity stunts, Jesus definitely would not participate in a pig roast, for obvious reasons, and I cannot say that the violent nature of football, a sport that I, myself, often enjoy, is something that Christ would have necessarily supported.

But all kidding aside, I am surprised that characters like James Bond, the Godfather and Homer Simpson were displayed on the Web site for this event, presumably representing "true men."

I know that there are many things men need to discuss in terms of their spirituality, especially with relation to their sex. But I don't think that those issues are best modeled by people who are proud womanizers or violently murder others. Moreover, I was not aware that being deeply spiritual or attending retreats traditionally implied a questionable masculine identity.

I hope that this event is successful, but not simply in terms of numbers of attendees. I pray that the true meaning and importance of being a Catholic male is addressed, which means following Christ's example of humility, service and respect for all people — not just porkeaters.

Church-state separation misunderstood

I think that few of the founding principles of this country are as misunderstood as that of separation of church and state. According to today's mainstream liberal interpretation, this article of our Constitution is translated to mean that the state cannot be influenced by the religious convictions of its constituents.

This obviously cannot be the idea upon which our Constitution was founded. The preamble to the Declaration of Independence specifically states that our rights are inalienable precisely because God created us and endowed them to us. Similarly, our political system requires people to take oaths of office which call upon God to help them fulfill their civic duties. Even our currency bears witness to the role God played in forming our country.

Rather, I would contend that the First Amendment is an attempt to protect religion from government intervention.

It states, "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof." While we may not pass a law that institutionalizes a particular religion so as to prefer a particular creed in the civic arena, we may also not prohibit the free exercise of religion.

In fact, exercising one's civic duties can and indeed should include attempting to influence civic law according to the moral code which one holds as a result of their religious beliefs. This is the heart of our right to suffrage.

As soon as heads of state claim religious authority, this amendment is violated. However, this article does not exclude our political leaders from being deeply religious individuals who attempt to govern according to God's will. Indeed, their right to do so is expressly protected under the First Amendment.

The idea that one can encapsulate their religious beliefs and insulate the rest of the world from them is ridiculous for anyone to honestly purport. A person's beliefs inevitably influence their philosophy, how they choose to live their life and how they vote.

Attempts to remove references to God from our civic lives would not constitute the separation of church and state; rather, it would be the indoctrination of atheism, a religion unto itself.

We must not be ashamed of the Gospel, and I am afraid that a liberal interpretation of the First Amendment encourages just that: people being ashamed of being Catholic. We cannot use the First Amendment as a scapegoat; it does not give license for cowardice or for dissension within the Church. Active evangelization of the world in a natural way, through the ordinary lives that we lead, is a necessary characteristic of a disciple of Jesus.

A true love for Christ naturally permeates the lives of his disciples. Consequently, Christianity requires us to live out our beliefs, not to hide them. From prayer at meals, to supporting the sanctity of marriage and of life, we cannot claim to be disciples of Jesus and not follow his Church.

I guess it comes down to a simple question: If someone made the claim that you were a Catholic Christian, would there be any evidence to back it up?

Does diversity exist among Domers?

Let's promote diversity! I would like to personally give a shout-out to all the admissions people and applaud you for your promotion of diversity on this campus. Class of 2007, you are the most diverse group to ever walk the hallowed halls of our prestigious University. Not only that, but apparently you are the most intelligent as well (even though they say that EVERY year). Boy, oh boy. What an exciting era we live in.

Some people would say unto us that our campus is not diverse. I would say unto them, "Look around you. Don't you see that every single student is unique? We may be 75 percent Caucasian/non-Hispanic, but some people have different hair colors. Don't you understand that although an average of 80 percent of each incoming class participated in varsity athletics, some played different sports? How can people claim that our institution is anything but diverse? Just because we have more Mikes, Matts, and Katies per square foot than any school in the United States, maybe even the world, doesn't change the fact that we are diverse! Notre Dame even spells diversity, of course, if you add a 's' and 'i' and a 'v,' and then take away the 'o' and the 'm' and the 'a,' but you get the point."

We promote diversity! Although "alternative lifestyles" aren't accepted, that doesn't mean they don't exist. Sure, we don't recognize them officially, but sometimes we let them advertise in The Observer. Besides, alternative lifestyles happen all the time here. Every single day I see people alternating between working out at Rolfs and the Rock. You see diversity is so much more than ethnicity or cultural heritage. We have tall people, short people and even in-between people. We have both squirrels AND chipmunks; geese AND ducks; rain AND snow. And if I am not mistaken, DeBartolo is definitely not an Irish last name, is it?

We are so diverse that even our diversity is diverse. Not everyone that comes to this school is from Chicago or Ohio, for instance. I, personally, am from the great state of North Carolina. You see, even I add to our diversity. Hey, not everyone is pre-med either. OK, so maybe the freshman class has a disproportionate amount of pre-med majors, but that will change. They still have time. I mean, who wants to walk around the lakes the first weekend with a lowly art major after parietals have broken up all the dorm parties? If you are going to marry the first person with whom you frolic on dark scary paths, late at night, while still buzzed from excessive warm Natty-Light consumption, you might as well aim high.

I am proud of our diversity. The University is even finding new, exciting ways to make us even more so. (Note to self: University and diversity rhyme.) If smoking is banned from campus, for instance, then people will have to choose between Nicorette and the Patch, yet another example of diversity. I am more of a gum person myself, but someone else may need that 24-hour protection the patch provides. Even the new alcohol policy promotes diversity. OK, so not really, but I am sure if you think hard enough you could pretend it did.

Let's join our diversely-shaped hands with those of our administration and promote even more diversity. Every single person on this campus, from the faculty, to the staff, to the students, to Monk Malloy himself, has a different set of fingerprints. Nowhere else but Notre Dame will you find a more diverse student body of individuals who all played diverse sports, are members of a diverse range of clubs and service organizations and come from such a diverse range of upper-middle class suburban backgrounds. Hey, even our GPAs in high school were diverse. Some people made 4.00s, and some 3.99s, and if schools used weighted GPAs, then even more diversity exists than previously thought.

Hurrah for Notre Dame! Hurrah for you! Hurrah for me! Hurrah for diversity!

Yeah, college!

After spending far too much time with a certain group of people, the phrase, "Yeah, college" has evolved and become a significant part of my vocabulary.

Emily Howald

Assistant
Scene Editor

At first it was just something that was said in jest, but it has become the symbol of some of the craziness that is allowed and expected to be made during these four, or in some people's cases, seven, years of sweet, sweet independence.

The Webster's Dictionary defines college as an "organized body of persons with shared functions and privileges." The question, then, is what those shared functions and privileges are. Logic would tell us that it is supposed to indicate the benefits that accompany attending such a prestigious university, especially in our case.

However, the other side of my brain recognizes benefits, albeit in small doses, that come between 9 p.m. on Thursday night until about 6 a.m. on Sunday morning. Junior Mike Panzica said, "College is drinking beer in your boxers in the street at 6 a.m. before football games like Pat Gallagher. It is striving everyday to be on the same level of beastliness as Tom Degnan." That is interesting, but more important, on point.

Tom Degnan, in response, said, "College is."

I look at my brother and his friends who graduated here three years ago and know they would give anything to be back in our shoes. I don't really realize how lucky we are until I see how desperately they want to be here. You can see it when they return, aged and tired from the business world, trying to duplicate college. They're hangovers are worse, but there desire to relive college is probably stronger than ever.

Although our perspectives are different at Notre Dame, that is no excuse to act less college. We may replace frat parties and protests with parietals and prayer, but that does not mean that we cannot have any less of a college experience. If anything, we should realize that we have it all here. A combination of brains, brawn and beer.

I feel that I should be putting an asterisk next to College when talking about Notre Dame, because the experience here is truly unparalleled. We might not ever make it into the "Best Party School" category and that is fine. In fact, I don't think Notre Dame should be limited to such a category or designation. That is, until they come out with "Best Overall College."

So please, try not to lose perspective. If your faith is depleting or you've whiffed at having fun, look, as I do, to this excellent piece of advice. Think of it as the voice of reason, the voice of college.

I've learned one thing and that's to quit worrying about stupid things. You have four years to be irresponsible here. Relax; work is for people with jobs. You'll never remember class time but you'll remember the time you wasted hanging out with your friends. So stay out late. Go out on a Tuesday night with your friends when you have a paper due on Wednesday. Spend money you don't have. Drink until sunrise. The work never ends but college does.

Yeah, college. I read you.

Emily Howald just had her 21st birthday yesterday, so you will most likely not be seeing her on campus today. Take it easy on her, for we are assuming that she has been enjoying college a little too much. E-mail her at ehowald@nd.edu.

Drive-Thru Recc

Music fans in Chicago pack the

By MAUREEN BUSH
Scene Writer

There was an invasion Saturday night in Chicago. Popular southern California independent label, Drive-Thru Records sent their "Drive-Thru Invasion Tour" all over the country and the world to expose the masses to both the newer additions to the label and the older, staple bands that Drive-Thru fans have loved for years. It is amazing to see the fierce loyalty that the fans have to a single record label and how those fans were excited to see all five bands that graced the stage in the old Riviera Theatre.

Promptly at 6 p.m., the lights dimmed as Ace Enders, guitarist and vocalist of The Early November, took the stage alone with only an acoustic guitar in hand. He explained that they were going to start this set a little different than usual because the previous night in Milwaukee bassist, Sergio Anello had knocked him out during the set, giving him a concussion. The pace of the set changed dramatically after Enders played the first song. Joe Marro on guitar, Jeff Krummer on drums, and Anello joined him onstage to blow away the crowd with their powerful melodies.

Despite the fact that some fans had only heard a few songs from their new album, "The Room's Too Cold," which was released Oct. 7, many were continually impressed during their six-song set. Enders stated during the show that this was the band's first time in Chicago, but you wouldn't have been able to tell from the crowd participation and the raw energy coming from the stage. They decided to slow it down again as they played "Sunday Drive" as the fourth song in their set.

The Early November finished up with some surprise guests. When they were playing a new song off of their new album, Kenny Vasoli of The Starting Line rushed onto the stage to sing with the band. Then, during their last song Adam Lohrbach of Home Grown joined in the mix to help finish up a great set.

The second band of the night was Senses Fail, a young New Jersey band whose members were between 16 and 21 years old. Senses Fail is made up of Buddy Nielsen on lead vocals, Dave Miller on guitar and vocals, Garrett Zablocki on guitar and vocals, Mike Glita on bass and vocals and Dan Trapp on drums. This band roared onto the stage and ripped through their set as Nielsen held the crowd in the palm of his hand by jumping out onto the guard rail and leaning close to the fans several times.

This was the most heavy and hardcore band of the night as they kept the crowd jumping and screaming along with vocalists. The highlights of the set were fan-favorites, "Stephen" and "One Eight Seven," and their first single, "Freefall Without A Parachute." For being so young, Senses Fail has a very mature style of what sounds like a good cross between hardcore and punk rock and I am excited to see what they will do in the future.

Next on the bill were the old men of the night, Home Grown, an Orange County-based band that has been together for seven years. Adam Lohrbach, bass and vocals, and his band made up of Darren Reynolds, John Tran, and Dan Hammond came out and entertained the crowd with several songs off of their last release humorously titled, "Kings of Pop." With their fast and furious playing and their catchy lyrics, this punk band did not disappoint. Among the songs they played were "Kiss Me," "Diss Me," "Give It Up," "Second Best," and personal favorite, "I Love You, NOT!" where Tran proudly states, "I think you're hot but I love you not!"

As far as maturity goes, this band is lacking in all the right areas because they were able to keep the crowd jumping along to the fast pace of their songs. Though this is a band that has not gained the popularity of some of their label-mates, Home Grown reminded me why I listened to them in the past and why others should listen to them in the future.

After a short delay, Chicago-based Allister took the stage clad in dress shirts and ties to the delight of the hometown crowd. They immediately broke out into "Radio Player," a good fast-paced song to open their set. It was obvious that a significant portion of the crowd was there to see Allister who is made up of Tim Allister on guitar and vocals, Scott Murphy on bass and vocals, Mike Leverence on drums and Kyle Lewis on guitar. The band played catchy tunes from their latest release, "Last Stop Suburbia" such as "Overrated" and "Scratch" and dug into their history playing old favorite, "Moper." After informing the crowd that the Cubs were winning 6-0, the band stated that they would be going into the studio to record a new album. They then played a new song called "Rewind" and were joined onstage by one of their many former members to assist in singing.

This was a trend during the Allister set as they started into their last two songs of the night there was continued side-stage participation. During the punchy "None of My Friends Are Punks," two members of the road crew ran around the stage dancing and singing. That led up to the last song of the night for them, "Somewhere On Fullerton," which is their most popular song thus far. The crowd went nuts and so did the stage, as it seemed that everyone who was on the side came running out to sing and dance to the song that many Chicago kids can relate to about a punk-rock venue on Fullerton Street where they would frequent concerts growing up.

The final act of the night was The Startling Line who entered the stage to a piano arrangement, which they began to soup up by playing their instruments along with the recording. A banner dropped bearing their name as they started into "Given the Chance," which is a song about how happy this band is to have been given the chance to follow their dreams. This energetic Pennsylvania based quartet made up of Kenny Vasoli on bass and lead vocals, Matt Watts on guitar, Mike Golla on guitar and vocals and Tom Gryskiewicz on drums, has taken the pop-punk world by storm, invading not only the Riviera stage that night but also radio and television spots nationally.

They kept the pace up by aggressively playing "Hello Houston," and then older song, "Three's a Charm." They played almost every song off of their latest release, "Say It Like You Mean It" and slowed it down with "Make Yourself At Home," from the unreleased EP, which shares the same name.

The highlight of the show was the catchy "Left Coast Envy." They finished up their set by informing the crowd they would be leaving for to record a new album which they are hoping will be released early next year and playing their radio hit, "Best of Me" as a shower of confetti fell from the rafters.

After leaving the stage for a shade under a minute the band returned as Vasoli stated, "Now that we're done with the work it's time to party!" He then had the crowd sing the new Justin Timberlake song, "Senorita," splitting up the girls and the guys to sing their own respective parts mimicking exactly how Timberlake does in the song. After stating that was "the best crowd participation we've had yet," The Startling Line began their encore continuing the R&B turned punk theme with "I'm Real," a cover song written by J-Lo and Ja Rule, which can be found on the "Pop Goes Punk" music compilation, and finished with the last song from their album, "This Ride." They exited the stage to roaring applause and cheers in appreciation for the job well done.

The first ever Drive-Thru Invasion Tour was seemingly a replacement for the fact that the record label did not have a stage at this summer's Van's Warped Tour and many of their acts did not make any appearances on that tour.

Though they had the right idea with this concert, it would have been better served to have a stage on Warped Tour or to send out a larger number of their bands on a tour this summer. Though the concept is excellent, five bands is a lot to take in at an indoor venue no matter how short their sets are. The show was very well executed, though, and the road crew moved things along fairly quickly.

It is obvious that this record label acts as a family to its bands because they all seem to get along very well, each band plugging the others throughout the sets vocally and by wearing their T-shirts. This made for a fun show with the only complaint being that the sets were all fairly short as compared to normal length sets. Overall, this was a good show that provided quality entertainment for a good price.

Beckett strikes out 11 in complete game win

Associated Press

MIAMI — Josh Beckett and the Florida Marlins put history on hold — at least for a couple of days.

With the Chicago Cubs set to clinch their first World Series trip in 58 years, Beckett buzzed Sammy Sosa in pitching a two-hitter and leading the Marlins to a 4-0 win Sunday in Game 5 of the National League Championship Series.

Ivan Rodriguez, Mike Lowell and Jeff Conine homered and the Marlins played the role of ultimate spoiler — at least to thousands of Cubs fans at Pro Player Stadium and millions nationwide — in closing their gap to 3-2 and sending the series back to Wrigley Field.

"We needed a good outing from a starter. I knew that going in. They had roughed us up pretty good," Beckett said. "We needed to pitch better."

Only three times in LCS history and five times in World Series play have teams come back from a 3-1 deficit to win a best-of-seven matchup.

The Marlins began their comeback behind Beckett, who struck out 11 in the first complete game of his 51 starts in the majors. He also tied the NLCS record for fewest hits allowed in a complete game.

Even more notable: He became the first pitcher to throw a postseason shutout against the Cubs since Babe Ruth did it for Boston in the 1918 World Series opener.

But Beckett's signature moment came in the fourth, when he came close to Sosa. The tension wasn't nearly as high as it was between the Yankees and Red Sox at Fenway Park in the ALCS a day earlier, but it got the ballpark buzzing.

"He overreacted a lot. I don't know if he was trying to pull a Boston Red Sox-Yankee thing," Beckett said. "It was pretty ignorant. I'm not trying to hit him."

Even with nearly a century of failure in their past, the Cubs aren't about to panic. At least not yet.

Mark Prior is set to start in Game 6 Tuesday night against Florida's Carl Pavano. If he's needed, fellow ace Kerry Wood would pitch Game 7 the next day as Chicago tries to reach the Series for the first time since 1945.

"We feel confident with those guys on the mound, especially after a loss," Cubs manager Dusty Baker said.

The Cubs already had made arrangements with the Marlins to use champagne chilling in the Florida clubhouse for a celebration, if necessary. It wasn't.

"I had an idea we were going to go back home," Baker said. "Now we're going back to our fans and our people, and it's going to be exciting and electric."

Florida had its bags packed for Chicago well before the game began. The Marlins looked for any edge to prolong the season, as evidenced by their Sunday morning chapel service at the stadium.

"It was a little more motivational than usual and we had a lot more people there," team chaplain Chris Lane said.

Not that the Marlins needed any extra help with Beckett on the mound.

"Once again, it all starts with pitching," Marlins manager Jack McKeon said. "When we get good pitching, we can be troublesome."

At 23, the hard-throwing righty pitched the best game of Florida infielder Mike Lowell is greeted at the plate by Miguel Cabrera in the fifth inning, after Lowell hit a two-run home run in the Marlins' 4-0 victory over the Cubs Sunday.

his young career, allowing only two singles and a walk. He shut down a Cubs team that had totaled 33 runs in the first four games of the series.

A night earlier, the Cubs romped 8-3 and roughed up Dontrelle Willis. Having been run out of his own ballpark, the rookie was jogging around the stadium early Sunday, virtually unnoticed by fans in the parking lots. He had a big smile, and so did everyone else wearing teal-and-black a few hours later.

Lowell hit a two-run homer in the fifth off Carlos Zambrano in the fifth, and Rodriguez and Conine later connected.

Lowell's hit was just his third of the postseason. Injured for most of the final month, he came back to hit an 11th-inning homer that won Game 1.

When he batted in the eighth, Beckett drew a standing ovation from towel-waving Marlins fans in the crowd of 65,279.

Beckett allowed only one ball beyond the infield before the Cubs got their first hit, a soft single by Alex Gonzalez with two outs in the fifth. Moises Alou also singled in the seventh as hitters on both sides struggled in the twilight start.

A half-inning after Marlins rookie Miguel Cabrera was drilled in the left elbow by Zambrano, Beckett almost nailed Sosa.

Beckett's first pitch in the fourth was a head-high heater to Sosa — tailing in toward him, too — that caused the slugger to duck and stumble backward. Sosa immediately sprang to his feet and took a couple of steps toward the mound, shouting and pointing his bat at Beckett.

Plate umpire Larry Poncino and Rodriguez, the Marlins catcher, quickly sealed off Sosa to prevent big trouble as a few Cubs rushed to the top step of the dugout.

Chiefs overcome 17-point deficit for the win

Associated Press

GREEN BAY, Wis. — For once, the Kansas City Chiefs' wild finish didn't involve Dante Hall.

Even with their star kick returner being kept out of the end zone for the first time in a month, the Chiefs overcame a 17-point fourth-quarter deficit to force overtime, then came out on top after a crazy closing sequence to beat the Packers 40-34 at Lambeau Field.

Here were the final three plays of the game, one right after the other:

1. Cletidus Hunt blocked Morten Andersen's 48-yard field goal attempt with 9:09 left in OT to give the Packers (3-3) possession at their 39 and the wind at their back.

2. On first down, Packers running back Ahman Green — who ran 26 times for 139 yards — fumbled the ball, and Kansas City recovered.

3. Chiefs quarterback Trent Green threw a 51-yard touchdown pass to Eddie Kennison with 8:42 left in the extra period.

Simple as that, Kansas City improved to 6-0.

"First off, it doesn't tell me anything I didn't already know. There's a special profile about this team," Chiefs coach Dick Vermeil said. "At no time on our sideline did anyone think we'd lost this football game."

Free safety Jerome Woods, who had a 79-yard touchdown interception return in the fourth quarter, knocked the ball loose from Ahman Green. It bounced right into the hands of line-backer Mike Maslowski.

Panthers 23, Colts 20 (OT)

Stephen Davis gave the Carolina Panthers a running start Sunday, then DeShaun Foster took over.

The Panthers' tag-team running attack bowled over Indianapolis defenders, broke tackles and eventually set up a 47-yard winning field goal from John Kasay to keep the Panthers unbeaten with a 23-20 overtime win.

"Coach let me know Stephen was down and it was going to be on my shoulders," Foster said. "I just tried to go out there and make the most of my opportunity."

The Panthers (5-0) have now won seven straight dating to last season and are one of three remaining unbeaten teams in the NFL. The others are Kansas City (6-0) and Minnesota (5-0).

But this win was atypical for Carolina.

Just six days after Peyton Manning miraculously rallied the Colts (5-1) from a 21-point deficit in the final four minutes at Tampa Bay, he nearly did it again.

Manning led the Colts on an improbable 91-yard, game-tying drive in the final three minutes against another one of the NFL's best defenses — but he never got a chance to win it.

To compound the Panthers' problems, Davis, the NFC's leading rusher, watched most of the final 21 minutes with a bruised arm. He finished with 76 yards rushing, his first sub-100-yard game since joining the Panthers and a dramatic drop-off from last week's 159-yard effort.

Broncos 17, Steelers 14

The defense gave the Denver Broncos a chance to win. Jason Elam took advantage.

Elam hit a 47-yard field goal on the final play of the game to lift Denver past Pittsburgh 17-14, the Steelers' third straight loss.

"It wasn't a pretty game, but we didn't expect it to be pretty," Broncos defensive tackle Bert Berry said. "We knew it was going to be a battle, and there wouldn't be a moment where we could have a letdown."

Denver (5-1) rebounded from last week's loss to Kansas City and came out on top of a tight game between the AFC's top two defenses.

Pittsburgh (2-4) tied it at 14-all on Jerome Bettis' 1-yard dive and an improbable 2-point conversion, but the Broncos got the ball back at their 20 with 2:41 left.

Steve Beuerlein struggled in place of injured starter Jake Plummer, but was 5-for-8 for 44 yards on the final drive. He also got a break when Pittsburgh safety Brent Alexander dropped an interception at the Steelers' 20 with 44 seconds left.

Ravens 26, Cardinals 18

Arizona's Jeff Blake wanted badly to show the Baltimore Ravens what they're missing.

Instead, he threw three interceptions on the wrong side of a typical Ravens victory: No touchdowns for the Baltimore offense, big plays by the defense and one crucial touchdown via special teams.

Blake was intercepted twice by Chris McAlister, who returned the second one 83 yards for a touchdown. Ed Reed, who had the other pick, blocked a punt and returned it 20 yards for the other Ravens' TD in a 26-18 win over the Cardinals.

"That's the way the game is, you know," Blake said. "Two plays can make you or break you."

Jamal Lewis set a franchise record with his fourth consecutive 100-yard rushing game. The NFL's powerful leading rusher gained 131 yards in 21 carries. The Ravens got a scare when Lewis bruised right shoulder and went into the locker room for X-rays in the second half. They were negative and he returned to the game.

"It was all right," Lewis said. "It was just a little hurt."

Blake completed 22 of 36 for 247 yards and two touchdowns, but was done in by the interceptions, the third by Reed. Baltimore had no turnovers, so Arizona is minus-14 in turnover margin, by far the worst in the NFL.

Browns 13, Raiders 7

The Cleveland Browns can always count on kicker Phil Dawson's right leg.

On Sunday, they needed his left one, too.

Dawson scampered 14 yards on a fake field goal to set up William Green's go-ahead touchdown run in a rare and ugly home win for the Browns, 13-7 over the penalty-prone Oakland Raiders.

"Dawson looked like that guy Forrest Gump," said Browns defensive end Kenard Lang. "I was gonna yell, 'Run, Forrest, run.' He didn't look all that pretty running, but the result was beautiful, man."

Not only did his run — if you want to call it that — catch the Raiders completely off guard, it even surprised Dawson, who isn't looking forward to his next one.

"I tried to change directions, but my belly was carrying me out of bounds," Dawson said. "But if you're wearing a helmet, and they tell you to run, you run."

Green ran right through Raider AbomiNation, picking up 145 yards as the Browns (3-3) won for the first time in three tries at home this season.

Cleveland is just 10-25 in front of its own fans since the Browns' NFL rebirth in 1999.

Saints 20, Bears 13

The New Orleans Saints finally found a team they could beat.

Aaron Brooks threw two touchdown passes against one of the NFL's worst defenses to lead the Saints to a 20-13 victory over the Chicago Bears on Sunday.

Brooks connected with Joe Horn on a 6-yard scoring pass with 7:18 left for the clinching score as the Saints won for the second time in six games. The Bears fell to 1-4.

After playing the league's toughest schedule in the first five games — against opponents who combined for a 17-5 record

— New Orleans didn't look great in managing just 283 total yards. But it was enough to turn back the Bears.

The Bears, ranked 28th on defense and 32nd and last on offense, scored their only touchdown — a 4-yard pass from Kordell Stewart to Dez White with 2:10 left in the game.

Before that they had two field goals from Paul Edinger — a 28-yarder in the second quarter and a 31-yarder in the fourth.

Stewart, who had three fumbles and was sacked three times, was 10 of 21 for 152 yards. Anthony Thomas, coming off back-to-back 100-yard outings, had 96 yards on 21 carries.

Klatt's two goals in Kings' win over Blackhawks

Associated Press

CHICAGO — Trent Klatt doesn't score goals too often.

On Sunday night, he scored twice in one shift to lead the Los Angeles Kings to a 4-2 victory over the Chicago Blackhawks.

Klatt, who has 129 goals in 703 NHL games, gave the Kings a 3-0 lead with his two goals in a 33-second span and help them win their second straight game.

Klatt, who signed as a free agent from Vancouver in the offseason, usually spends his time along the boards getting the puck to his linemate Luc Robitaille.

"It's pretty simple," Klatt said. "I just go to the net hard and do the work in the corners. It's paying off right now."

"You certainly don't have a guy like myself out in the slot, that's Luc's job," he added. "Derek [Armstrong] and myself we can go in and win some battles in the corner and we try to get the puck to Luc in the slot."

Klatt, who had 16 goals last season with the Canucks, already has three this year.

The Kings' Lubomir Visnovsky scored a power-play goal in the first period and Jaroslav Modry added an insurance goal with 3:31 left in the third.

Los Angeles concluded a season-opening, three-game road trip at 2-1-0.

"We certainly should have had points in all three games," Kings coach Andy Murray said, "but I'd rather be going back with four points than without any."

Chicago's Mark Bell and Kyle Calder scored power-play goals to cut the score to 3-2, but Chicago dropped its second straight.

Los Angeles goaltender Roman Cechmanek stopped 32 shots, including 14 of 15 in the third period. Chicago's Jocelyn Thibault made 22 saves, including one on a penalty shot by Esa Pirnes in the second period.

"We've been working hard, but we're having a little bit of trouble defensively in our end," Thibault said. "We have to get better at that."

Chicago coach Brian Sutter was more direct about his team's defensive coverage.

"On [Los Angeles'] second, third and fourth goals, we were beat out of the corner down low," Sutter said. "We were beaten in areas we have to take pride in."

"Obviously, we didn't take enough pride in them. We played a team that battled hard."

Visnovsky opened the scoring with 3:40 left in the first period with five seconds remaining on a Kings power play. He beat Thibault with a slap shot from the top of the slot.

Klatt made it 2-0 with his first goal, at 8:33 of the second.

Tim Gleason's shot from the point hit traffic and bounced to Bell in the slot. Bell lost his footing and the puck squirted to Klatt, who cut to the net and tucked a shot past Thibault.

Klatt increased the lead 33 seconds later, tipping in a loose puck in the crease after Robitaille's low shot from the point trickled between Thibault's legs and toward the goal line.

Pirnes was awarded the penalty shot after Alexander Karpovtsev pulled him down on a breakaway at 10:17 of the second period.

Bell cut it to 3-1 at 11:21 of the second on the power play. He deflected in Karpovtsev's perfect feed from the top of the slot.

Thibault stopped Zigmund Palffy's short-handed breakaway attempt 52 seconds into the third.

Calder cut it to 3-2 with a power-play goal at 4:50 of the third. After a goalmouth pile up, Calder took on a loose puck and fired it over Cechmanek, who had sprawled to make an initial save.

Coyotes 2, Mighty Ducks 0

Ladislav Nagy scored in the first period, and goaltender Sean Burke made that stand up as the Phoenix Coyotes beat the Anaheim Mighty Ducks 2-0.

The loss in their home opener dropped the Ducks, who came within one game of winning the Stanley Cup last season, to 0-3.

Nagy scored on a power play at 9:27 of the opening period, his first goal and second point in the Coyotes' two games. Daymond Langkow added an empty-net goal with five seconds remaining.

Burke stopped 31 shots to earn the 34th save of his career, thwarting the Ducks on five power plays.

Skating down the right side, Nagy took a cross-ice pass from Mike Johnson, bore down on Jean-Sebastien Giguere and wristed a shot over the goal-

Giguere had positioned himself near the left post, and Nagy was able to thread the puck through a small opening above the goalie's glove.

The Ducks' goalie faced 28 shots.

A sensation in the playoffs, Giguere has allowed eight goals in the Ducks' three losses to open the season. He signed a four-year contract for about $20 million with the team last month.

Sergei Fedorov, signed to a five-year, $40 million contract after Paul Kariya left for Colorado, has yet to score for the Ducks.

Rob Niedermayer has scored the only two goals for Anaheim, off to an 0-3 start for only the second time in club history. They also lost their first three games in 1998-99.

Phoenix was coming off a 2-1 overtime win over St. Louis in its opener.

Sharks 3, Wild 2

Alyn McCauley's power-play goal sparked a three-goal flurry by San Jose over the final four minutes of the first period, and the Sharks held on for a 3-2 win over the Minnesota Wild.

Christoph Brander got his first career goal to give Minnesota a 1-0 lead 6:24 into the game before McCauley's goal started San Jose's spurt.

Just 37 seconds later, Mike Ricci redirected a pass from Scott Thornton past Wild goaltender Dwayne Roloson to give the Sharks the lead. Patrick Marleau's power-play goal with 9.9 seconds remaining in the first gave San Jose a 3-1 advantage.

Rookie Brent Burns scored his first career goal 4:22 into the second period to pull Minnesota within a goal.

Despite controlling the puck for much of the third period and taking eight shots, the Wild couldn't get the puck past San Jose goalie Vesa Toskala. Toskala finished with 23 saves.

Manny Fernandez replaced Roloson at the start of the second period, and finished with 15 saves.

Boston College and Notre Dame meet last year in their annual game as arranged by the Big East conference. Though Boston College agreed to join the ACC Sunday, they could remain in the Big East until 2006.

Boston College agrees to join ACC

Associated Press

GREENSBORO, N.C. — Boston College will join the Atlantic Coast Conference as its 12th member, guaranteeing the league a future football playoff game while landing another major television market.

The school had until Nov. 1 to accept the ACC's offer, but agreed in less than four hours after ACC presidents and chancellors voted unanimously Sunday to include Boston College in the league's expansion plans.

"This just adds one more excellent school to what now will be a 12-member mix," ACC commissioner John Swofford said. "If you look at their graduation rates, B.C. will jump right into the higher echelon of our conference. They bring a lot on both fronts."

Big East by-laws require 27 months notice to leave that conference or face a reported $5 million exit fee, meaning the Eagles may not begin participating in ACC sports until 2006, Swofford said.

Boston College's president said athletics, academics and finances were reasons for the jump from the Big East.

"The ACC is a strong, stable conference," The Rev. William Leahy said. "The move to the ACC will generate greater revenues in the future."

The heads of ACC schools voted 9-0 in favor of extending the Eagles an invitation during a teleconference Sunday.

Miami and Virginia Tech were added to the nine-team conference in late June and will begin play in 2004.

In a statement, Big East commissioner Mike Tranghese said: "We are extremely disappointed with Boston College's decision to leave. Our membership is very surprised that the ACC presidents continue to come back into our league for membership."

James Barker, Clemson president and head of the ACC's Council of Presidents, said it became apparent recently that an 11-team league was not ideal for the ACC.

Boston College and Syracuse were the Big East schools in the ACC's original expansion plans — along with Miami — but were voted down in favor of adding the Hurricanes and Hokies. Duke, North Carolina and N.C. State voted against adding Boston College at the time.

IN BRIEF

Legendary jockey Bill Shoemaker dies of Sunday natural causes at 72

SAN MARINO, Calif. — Hall of Fame jockey Bill Shoemaker, who rode four Kentucky Derby winners and was a commanding presence in thoroughbred racing for more than 40 years, died Sunday. He was 72.

Shoemaker died in his sleep at his suburban home near Santa Anita racetrack, according to longtime friend and trainer Paddy Gallagher. Gallagher, an assistant during Shoemaker's training career, said doctors told him Shoemaker died of natural causes.

"He was one of the greatest human beings I have ever had the pleasure of knowing in my life," said retired jockey Chris McCarron, now general manager of Santa Anita. "Forget about his ability to communicate with horses, his compassion for people was second to none."

Marinez, Ramirez, Zimmer and Garcia fined for fourth inning behavior

BOSTON — Pedro Martinez and Manny Ramirez of the Boston Red Sox were fined Sunday along with Don Zimmer and Karim Garcia of the New York Yankees for their actions in Game 3 of the AL championship series.

Bob Watson, baseball's vice president in charge of discipline, did not announce specifically why the four were fined, other than to say it was for their behavior in the fourth inning of New York's 4-3 victory Saturday.

Martinez was fined $50,000, Ramirez $25,000, Garcia $10,000 and Zimmer $5,000, according to a baseball executive who spoke on the condition he not be identified.

"I am very disappointed in the behavior of some of the participants in last night's game between the Boston Red Sox and the New York Yankees," commissioner Bud Selig said in a statement.

"I have instructed the umpires and told the clubs that any further misconduct by either team will not be tolerated and will be dealt with severely."

Appleby gets first PGA tour win in four years

LAS VEGAS — Stuart Appleby liked his chances when he saw the 15-foot putt he needed to make to end his four-year drought on the PGA Tour.

"As soon as I saw it, I thought I could make it," Appleby said after beating Scott McCarron in a playoff at the Las Vegas Invitational. "As it was going to the hole, I thought, 'It's a little slow, a little left,' but it dropped in."

The win was Appleby's first on the tour since the 1999 Houston Open and ended his recent streak of runner-up finishes.

"It's been a bit of a drought," the Australian said.

Irish make return to Stonebridge Invite

Special to The Observer

The Notre Dame men's golf team will be in action today at the 2003 Stonebridge Invitational, hosted by Southern Methodist University.

The Irish played in the 2002 Stonebridge Invitational and placed fifth with a score of 873 (289-295-289). The 54-hole tournament will be held at the par 72, 7,247-yard Dye Course at Stonebridge Country Club in McKinney, Texas.

The Irish are coming off a 15th-place tie (with Southern Methodist) at the Windon Memorial Classic in Glenview, Ill. The 17-team field included eight of the top 50 teams in the nation, according to the latest Golfweek/Sagarin Performance Index rankings.

Notre Dame shot 909 (301-306-302) as a team and was led by a career-low performance from sophomore Scott Gustafson. Gustafson shot a score of one-over par 217 (72-73-72), beating his previous best 54-hole total of 219, which he set at the 2002 Kansas Invitational.

Gustafson also played in the 2002 Stonebridge Invitational, shooting 232 (77-71-84) and will be in head coach John Jasinski's lineup for this fall's tournament. Two of Gustafson's classmates will also be participating in their second Stonebridge Invitational, Tommy Balderston and Eric Deutsch.

Salas upsets No. 29 Hollands

Special to The Observer

Notre Dame senior co-captain Alicia Salas, ranked 63rd nationally in singles, continued her run as a giant killer by upsetting No. 29 Dianne Hollands of Arizona in consolation action Friday in the Riviera/ITA Women's All-American Championships, the first leg of the collegiate tennis grand slam.

Salas then fell to No. 7 Daria Panova of Oregon to be eliminated from the tournament. Salas and the rest of the Irish women's tennis team will return to action Friday in an exhibition match against rival USC in the Eck Tennis Pavilion. Action is tentatively slated to begin at 4 p.m.

Salas posted her fourth win over a ranked opponent in four days by topping Hollands 6-4, 6-3. The Irish senior dropped the first three games of the second set before fighting back to win six consecutive games. The Wildcat is the highest-ranked opponent ever to fall victim to Salas.

"Alicia did an unbelievable job of covering the court," Irish head coach Jay Louderback said. "She was really aggressive, and I was really impressed with her speed. She really tracked down a lot of balls."

In the afternoon match, Panova, the tournament's sixth seed, pulled out a close match 6-4, 7-6 (7-5). Salas jumped out to a 4-1 lead in the second set, but could not force a third frame.

"It was really a great tournament for Alicia," Louderback said. "She played very well and beat some really good players."

Salas is 6-3 on the young season, with the losses coming to players ranked Nos. 7, 8 and 27 nationally. She now has 11 career victories over ranked opponents.

Prior to this tournament, Salas' highest-ranked victim was No. 54 Melissa Applebaum of Miami in the Big East final a year ago. She posted three wins over top-40 players in the All-American Championships.

In qualifying, she beat No. 85 Ashley Schellhas of Vanderbilt 6-4, 3-6, 6-0 and No. 33 Alix Lacelarie of Clemson 6-1, 6-0 on Tuesday before defeating No. 39 Megan Muth of William & Mary 6-4, 6-3 in Wednesday's qualifying round. On Thursday, Salas lost 6-4, 6-0 to No. 27 Tammy Encina of Tennessee in the opening round of the main draw.

Salas was the first Notre Dame player to reach the 32-player main draw of the All-American Championships since current Irish assistant coach Michelle Dasso advanced to the quarterfinals of the tournament as a senior in 2000.

The premier hard court event of the fall collegiate season, the All-American Championships, feature the top players in NCAA Division I tennis. Several past champions have gone on to professional careers. The famous Riviera Tennis Club has played host to this event since 1988.

SMC CROSS COUNTRY

Progress evident at Benedictine Invite

By PAT LEONARD
Sports Writer

The Saint Mary's cross country team came out in full force on Friday and took it to the 25-team field of the 5,000-meter Benedictine University Eagle Invitational.

Six Belles runners finished in the top 50 as Saint Mary's placed fourth overall and proved its improvement since the season's opener at the Heidelberg Invitational in Ohio.

Senior Jackie Bauters led the way for the Belles for the fifth time in six meets, posting a time of 19:52 and finishing 17th overall.

The finish was the second highest of Bauters' final season, the best finish coming in the first meet when she came in 13th.

Heidi Saunders of Goshen College was the overall winner with a time of 19:18.9.

Only Northern Illinois (27), Goshen (79) and St. Joseph's (118) placed higher than the Belles.

Saint Mary's freshmen Sara Otto (20:06.8) and Erin Nolan (20:06.8), junior Elizabeth Commers (20:28.5), freshman Katie White (20:39.3) and sophomore Becky Feauto (20:46.0) functioned as more than just a supporting cast to Bauters' strong finish.

Saint Mary's narrowed the time difference between its first runner (Bauters) and fifth runner (White) to 49 seconds. This statistic is an accurate measure of the success or failure of a team. With all runners healthy and clicking, the Belles seem primed to take this momentum and use it to their advantage in the MIAA Championships Nov. 1 at Albion College.

CCHA) split with the 15th-ranked Buckeyes (2-2-0, 1-1-0) despite the fact that Notre Dame's top goalie, Morgan Cey, was unable to play. Sophomore Rory Walsh picked up the win Friday night, and freshman David Brown played well in Saturday's loss, stopping 36 of 39 shots he faced. Both Brown and Walsh were making their first career start.

"I liked the way we played overall," Irish coach Dave Poulin said. "We were doing lots of the intangible things well. We had two young goaltenders who hadn't played a game at the Division I level play pretty well."

Youth played a large part in Notre Dame's success this weekend, but so did veteran presence — particularly the play of senior forward Rob Globke, who had a hat trick in Friday's victory. It was the first time a Notre Dame player scored a hat trick in a conference opener since 1995.

"It was a nice way to get the season started," Poulin said.

Ohio State started the scoring Friday, getting on the board a little more than six minutes into the game when Rod Pelley fired the puck over Walsh's glove.

The Irish tied the game six minutes later with Globke's 50th goal of his career. Center Matt Amado split the Buckeye defense with a perfect pass to Globke, who then fired the puck over Ohio State goalie Dave Caruso.

Globke gave the Irish a lead with his second goal of the period with about three minutes remaining. With the two teams playing four-on-four, Irish defenseman Tom Galvin sent Globke a perfect pass, allowing the forward to beat Caruso with a shot from the slot.

The Buckeyes tied the game just four minutes into the second period when Walsh gave up a rebound goal to Paul Caponigri. Globke would reclaim the Irish lead seven minutes later on the power play.

Notre Dame added insurance goals in the third period from forwards Aaron Gill and Cory McLean. Walsh made 31 saves in the game.

"Rory's a battler," Poulin said. "He didn't get in any games last year, but he worked hard in practice and his conditioning this season was outstanding coming in."

"He really battled tonight and made some big saves when it was a one-goal game."

The Buckeyes changed goalies for Saturday's game, electing to start senior Mike Betz instead of Caruso. Betz has never lost to the Irish in his career, and Saturday was no exception as he stopped 29 of 30 shots to improve his record against Notre Dame to 7-0-3.

Neither team mustered any goals in the first period, combining for only 10 shots. That changed in the second frame, as they combined for 35 shots. It was Ohio State who scored the first goal, when Daymen Bencharski scored on a deflection a little less than three minutes into the period.

Notre Dame tied the game less than two minutes later when sophomore forward Tim Wallace scored a rebound goal after Betz stopped the initial shot from McLean.

Ohio State's J.B. Bittner put his team ahead for good 11 minutes into the final period, and Dave Steckel scored an insurance goal with a little more than two minutes left in the game.

"Ohio State played a little more desperate in the final period and got the two points," Poulin said. "This is one that we have to find a way to win. We lost one of six periods on the is that good teams find a way to win these kind of games," Waldrum said. "The energy level wasn't real high, and I think physically it will be nice to get back to a regular week. I'm really proud of them though it was a really tough stretch."

The Irish took the lead against Miami in the first half off a corner kick. Freshman Christie Shaner's kick was headed by Katie Thorlakson before bouncing to Mary Boland who headed it in. Shaner and Thorlakson were credited with assists on the goal.

The Irish were unable to get another goal before halftime, but a through ball from senior Melissa Tancredi sprung classmate Amanda Guertin for a breakaway. Guertin then beat the keeper for the goal. The Irish finished off the Hurricanes quickly, as Thorlakson rebounded a shot by freshman Jill Krivacek for the 3-0 margin.

The Hurricanes broke the Irish streak for having allowed one or fewer shots on goal at 11 games by getting two long shots that were easy saves for Bohn.

The Irish got on the scoreboard quickly against Georgetown, with senior Kim Carpenter continuing her scoring surge with a close shot off assists from Vanessa Pruzinsky and Amy Warner. Although the Irish continued to dominate, they did not score again until late in the half when Pruzinsky's cross was knocked in by sophomore Maggie Manning for a 2-0 half-time lead.

Guertin came off the bench to score two second half goals for the Irish, with her first coming on a breakaway off an assist from Manning only moments into the half. Warner added another goal two minutes later for a 4-0 lead to give the Irish a dominating lead.

Guertin got a second goal in the 69th minute off assists from Krivacek and fellow freshman Jen Buczkowski, and sophomore Annie Scheffer capped the scoring with her fourth goal off an assist from freshman Becky Tweneboah.

As has been customary for the Irish, they dominated the Hoyas, allowing only one harmless shot on goal. The Irish did not allow a shot until the 63rd minute, capping a streak of 138 minutes where the Irish did not allow a shot to the opposition.

The Irish again used their depth to wear out the opposition, using all of their healthy players against Georgetown and used many of the same players against Miami.

"The players that we brought in helped step up the energy level," Waldrum said. "Lizzie Reed came in and I thought Becky Tweneboah gave us some good minutes as well. Jill [Krivacek] has been playing very well in midfield for us. I'm pretty pleased with that."

The Irish will finish up their eight-game home stand Friday as they host No. 10 Connecticut at 7 p.m. at Alumni Field.

The late Irish spurt proved futile when Brian Johnson of Rutgers scored an insurance goal at the 80:42 mark.

"It happens," Clark said of the loss. "We can't read too much into it except to look at the goals and see how we lost them."

Rutgers now leads the all-time series with Notre Dame with a 9-3-1 record. The 5-2 victory also marks the Scarlet Knights' sixth straight win over the Irish.

Notre Dame is 5-2-1 at Alumni field this season, with one home game remaining on Oct. 31 against Villanova.

The Irish drop to fifth in the Big East conference with its loss to Rutgers. St. John's (5-1-0), Rutgers (4-1-1), Virginia Tech (4-2-0) and Connecticut (3-1-2) have better records heading into the season's homestretch.

"It is disappointing to lose the game," Clark said. "But the test for us is do we use this as a stepping stone or a stumbling block? I think we have to use this as a stepping stone and get back on the right path on Tuesday. We have six remaining games, and they're all tough games."

Notre Dame's next test comes this Tuesday on the road at non-conference opponent Cleveland State. The Vikings (6-7) are in the middle of a four-game losing streak after dropping a 2-0 decision to Marshall.

Hot Irish continue their winning streak

By HEATHER VAN HOEGARDEN
Sports Writer

The Irish are on fire.

This weekend saw the No. 15 Irish sweep two Big East foes en route to winning their sixth and seventh straight games.

Friday's victim was Seton Hall. The Pirates came into the Joyce Center with a 14-6 overall and 0-3 conference record. However, they were no match for the red-hot Irish.

Notre Dame hit a scorching .436 en route to the three-game victory (30-22, 30-14, 30-25).

Sunday was much more of the same for the Big East leading Irish. Rutgers (8-11, 2-3) never led in three games as the Irish dominated (30-13, 30-18, 30-22).

"We've had great practices all week, and I really think it's paying off for us," head coach Debbie Brown said. "Overall I think we were playing really well."

The Irish have been excellent of late, remaining undefeated in the Big East with a 6-0 start. Against Rutgers, the Irish hit .352 on the match, compared to the Scarlet Knights' meager .028 hitting percentage.

Notre Dame's hot hitting of late can be attributed to the switch to a 5-1 rotation. With Kristen Kinder as the Irish's only setter, hitters do not have to adjust to having two setters. Kinder had 39 assists in Sunday's match.

Meanwhile, sophomore Lauren Brewster has been unstoppable. Sunday, she hit .560 with 16 kills and only two errors. Last week, she was named co-Big East Player of the Week, and Friday she had 13 kills with no errors, good for a .684 hitting percentage.

"Lauren has been unbelievable," Brown said. "I watch other teams, and they have no idea how to stop her."

Brewster is not the only Irish hitter to get hot of late, as all the middle blockers have stepped up. Lauren Kelbley nailed 10 kills Sunday to go along with her .474 hitting percentage.

Blocking has also been another strength of the Irish as they rejected the Scarlet Knights 15 times at the net, while getting stuffed only two times. This has been the trend of late for the Irish front row.

"We work a lot on blocking," Brown said. "[Assistant coach] Robin [Davis] does almost all of the blocking coaching, and he's really good."

However, despite the outstanding coaching, Brown also credits her athletes for their blocking prowess.

"We have players that have the physical ability to be high above the net, and our blockers have gotten better and better — they're smarter," Brown said.

Even though the Irish kept rolling this weekend, they are looking forward to the week off.

"Right now is the perfect time for us to have a break, especially because of the academics," Brown said. "Academically, the week before fall break is really tough."

So, as the Irish take a study break and a few days off, they hope that the momentum continues in their favor, as they are just having fun playing volleyball, and that is when they play their best.

"I think that we worked really hard at being consistent and playing at a higher level," Brown said.

Next week, Brown and her team will travel to North Carolina where the Tar Heels will try to cool down the Irish.

MEN'S SOCCER

Lanced by the Knights

Rutgers rolls onto Alumni Field and whips the Irish 5-2

By PAT LEONARD
Sports Writer

The statistics show that the Notre Dame defense has been among the best in the country this season. Rutgers apparently does not concern itself with numbers.

The Scarlet Knights scored four straight goals to open the game and got scores from five different players in a 5-2 blowout of the Irish at Alumni Field Saturday.

Notre Dame (7-2-3, 3-2-1 in the Big East) scored twice in the second half to mount a comeback. Senior Greg Martin and freshman Ian Etherington notched their second and first goals of the season, respectively. Still, a late Rutgers goal sealed the Irish second home loss of the season to a Big East opponent.

The loss also toppled an Irish streak of eight-games without a loss, dating back to a Sept. 6 loss to St. John's.

Rutgers' four-goal spurt caught Notre Dame off-guard, especially because the Irish felt they were not being outplayed up to that point.

"They had a crazy little spell there," Irish coach Bobby Clark said. "I've reviewed the tape, and in a funny way I felt we played fairly well until then. They just had a crazy, inexplicable period where we let up some crazy goals. But for any team to have 10 shots and score five goals, that's a very high ratio. That'd be a high ratio in basketball, so it's definitely a high ratio in soccer."

Rutgers (7-3-1, 4-1-1) capitalized on early Notre Dame miscues to take a lead it would never relinquish. Ricardo Arenas put the Scarlet Knights on the board first after Irish goalie Chris Sawyer slipped coming out to play a long ball.

Sawyer had trouble controlling the next long ball to come his way, a ball that slipped through his hands and onto the feet of Rutgers' Chris Karcz for the Knights' second goal.

Rutgers scored twice in the next eight minutes, the last of which came at the 44:17 mark just before the end of the half.

Notre Dame came out of the locker room firing. Junior defender Kevin Goldthwaite's through-ball to senior forward Justin Dettler set up a cross that Martin deflected to make the score 4-1 at 51:54.

Etherington, a speedy freshman, scored 15 minutes later on a headball off a Chad Riley cross at 66:05.

Getting back at the Buckeyes

The Irish split a pair of games with No. 15 Ohio State to garner revenge for their playoff loss to the Buckeyes a year ago

Revenge is a dish best served cold.

The old adage means that revenge is best after time has passed since the original infraction, but in Notre Dame's case against Ohio State, it could have also referred to the temperature of the ice.

Notre Dame, who lost to Ohio State in the first round of the CCHA Super Six postseason tournament to end the 2002-03 season, knocked off the Buckeyes on the road 5-2 Friday night. The celebration was short lived, though, as Ohio State came back Saturday night to split the series with a 3-1 win over the Irish.

Having played seven games in 15 days, the Irish were looking to survive this weekend to get back to their normal routine. And survive they did, hammering Big East foes Georgetown and Miami at Alumni Field.

The Irish, who did not allow a goal on the weekend, beat Georgetown 6-0 Friday night before coming back to beat Miami 3-0 Sunday afternoon. The Irish, still ranked No. 2 and now 14-0-1 on the season, have now shut out their last six opponents with goalkeeper Erika Bohn owning a 590-minute shutout streak.

Irish coach Randy Waldrum did not feel like his team played particularly well against Miami but was happy about the way they still managed to win convincingly.

They did it again.

A year after capturing the MIAA conference championship, the Belles successfully defended their crown by beating Albion in the final MIAA tournament, 279-285.

The win gave the Belles a huge edge in the final standings over rival Hope. The Flying Dutch struggled to third at the season's final tournament, shooting a 729 — 50 strokes off Saint Mary's pace.

Stefanie Simmerman, the defending Division III national champion, tied for co-medalist with an 82.8 average per round. She tied Alma's Courtney Rheinhardt for the best season average.

Adams finished the fall with a 83.0 stroke average, while Mattia was behind her teammate with an 87.0 average.

The Belles got off to a great start with a first day score of 342, seven strokes ahead of Albion. Hope fired a 363, which all but eliminated the Flying Dutch from winning the overall conference crown.

On the second day, the Belles fired a 337 to clinch the title. Simmerman and Adams both shot 165, good enough to tie for fifth place.

The final standings for the MIAA season had Saint Mary's with a dominating lead over Hope. The Belles had a combined 1,108 shots in five tournaments, while the Flying Dutch had 1,767. Hope did beat Saint Mary's twice this season, but the Belles won two weeks ago at Adrian and then again this weekend.

Jones gains record 262 yards in Notre Dame's upset win over Pittsburgh

By JOE HETTLER

PITTSBURGH — Julius Jones had 152 rushing yards in his first four games for Notre Dame this season. He surpassed that total in the first three quarters against Pittsburgh Saturday night.

Jones broke Notre Dame's single-game school rushing record with 262 yards on 24 carries and two touchdowns and the Notre Dame defense recorded eight sacks while hassling Pittsburgh quarterback Rod Rutherford all game, helping the Irish beat No. 16 Pittsburgh 20-14 at Heinz Field.

The win was Notre Dame's first on the road this season and snapped a three-game losing streak.

"I believed in our football team," Irish coach Tyrone Willingham said. "There will always be tough times. I liked our attitude and I liked our approach."

Ryan Grant added 27 carries and 84 yards as Notre Dame rushed for a season-high 352 yards. It was the most rushing yards for Notre Dame since Aug. 28, 1999 against Kansas.

"I think our weakest part in the game has been the running," Willingham said. "We wanted to see if we could improve and once we did that, we wanted to continue it."

Jones ignited the Irish throughout the game with solid runs, while the offensive line played well and opened holes for both backs. He had three touchdown runs, all over 25 yards, including a 61-yard scamper in the fourth quarter. He surpassed his career-high 149-yard rushing yards in the third quarter.

"It was a great feeling to get the win and get things on track," Jones said. "Things opened up for us as a whole team. We had a lot to step up to the plate. I give the offensive line all the credit, they gave me some room to run and it was a great game for us."

Notre Dame's defense was as impressive as Jones in holding the nation's eighth-ranked offense to a mere 175 total yards. Larry Fitzgerald, who entered the game averaging 145 yards receiving, had only five catches for 79 yards and two touchdowns in the first half, but was held without a catch in the second half. Rutherford was only 3-for-15 in the second half and was under pressure throughout the game.

"That's what the goal is, to go out and dominant," linebacker Courtney Watson said. "I don't think you ever think you're going to go out and dominate on every single play, especially against a team like that. I think we just played a great game."

The Irish couldn't move the ball on the opening drive and had to punt, but Jared Clark recovered William Ferguson muffed punt catch and Notre Dame had the ball at the Pittsburgh 34. Three plays later, Jones broke through for a 25-yard touchdown, picking up a key block from fullback Josh Schmidt to give Notre Dame the early 7-0 lead.

The Irish defense gave its offense the ball in Pittsburgh territory on the next two possessions, but the offense could not capitalize — D.J. Fitzpatrick missed a 52-yard field goal and the Irish failed on a fourth-down attempt.

Irish running back Julius Jones races by Pittsburgh's Lewis Moore on his way to the first of his two touchdowns on the night. Jones broke a 25-year-old school rushing record with 262 yards on 24 carries as Notre Dame won 20-14.

Pittsburgh fought back to tie the game when Rutherford found Fitzgerald for a 23-yard touchdown on the last play of the first quarter.

After Notre Dame went three-and-out, Pittsburgh's Ferguson broke a 71-yard return to the Irish 4-yard line. Two plays later, Pittsburgh went on top when Rutherford found Fitzgerald again to give the Panthers a 14-7 edge.

But Jones and the offensive line answered as the senior broke off a 49-yard touchdown run to tie the game with 8:54 left in the first half.

Irish linebacker Derek Curry sacked Rutherford on the next drive and forced a fumble, which was recovered by Derek Landri at the Pittsburgh 8-yard line. After failing to score a touchdown, Fitzgerald nailed a 19-yard field goal to put Notre Dame ahead 17-14 at halftime.

The Irish put together a six-play, 52-yard drive in the middle of the third quarter and Fitzpatrick added his second field goal to give the Irish a 20-14 lead with 7:10 remaining in the third quarter.

Notre Dame took the ball deep in Pittsburgh territory with just over nine minutes on the clock. The offense ran the time out with a 15-play drive that consisted of 14 runs and only one pass.

- C quarterbacks: Quinn didn't do much to help the Irish win, but he didn't hurt them too much either. He struggled throwing the ball but did find Jenkins with a crucial catch late in the game.
- A running backs: Jones broke the single-game rushing record with 262 yards and scored twice, while Grant added 86 yards. The duo dominated the Panthers defense.
- C receivers: The receivers weren't thrown to and became almost nonexistent throughout the game. Jenkins had the critical 19-yard catch to keep the final drive alive.
- A offensive line: The offensive line finally came together. The unit opened up holes for the backs and helped the rushing attack gain 352 yards. They controlled Pitt's line all game long.
- A defensive line: The line had its best game of the season. It pressured Rutherford all day and had six sacks, including 3.5 by Tuck. The Panthers could only muster eight yards rushing for the game.
- A linebackers: The unit stopped the rush and defended Pittsburgh's pass well. They contained Rutherford when he ran out of the pocket. Curry's sack forced a fumble and Watson had 7 tackles.
- A- defensive backs: The backs didn't allow Fitzgerald to record a catch in the second half and forced Rutherford to look to other receivers. They got burned on a couple plays early, but recovered well.
- C special teams: Fitzpatrick made two field goals but missed two more, and poor punt coverage set up Pittsburgh's second score. The punting was average and the kickoff coverage did adequate.
- A- coaching: Whatever the coaches did in the bye week worked. The offensive line shift with Stevenson and Harris paid off and Notre Dame's game plan was solid.

Notre Dame defensive lineman Darrell Campbell and Victor Abiamiri sack Pittsburgh quarterback Rod Rutherford Saturday night. It was one of eight sacks the Irish defense recorded en route to dominating the nation's No. 8 ranked offense in the team's 20-14 win.

Irish return to classic style

PITTSBURGH — Somewhere in South Carolina, Lou Holtz was smiling.

His immediate successor, former Notre Dame coach Bob Davie, certainly was after doing the color commentary for ESPN during Notre Dame's dominant 20-14 victory over No. 16 Pittsburgh Saturday night.

What they saw would have brought a smile to the face of any fan of classic Notre Dame football.

Although the score didn't indicate it, the Irish dominated the Panthers on both sides of the ball, returning to a traditional style of Irish play not seen in a while.

"I haven't seen that in a long time," said Notre Dame safety Glenn Earl, whose defense also did its part in stymieing a potent Pittsburgh passing attack and limiting the Panthers to 176 yards of total offense. "The offense just ran the ball at will without even throwing a pass for eight minutes straight. It was just domination."

The Irish racked up 352 yards rushing on the strength of senior Julius Jones' 262-yard, record-breaking day.

The piece-meal Notre Dame offensive line consisting of five first-year starters in Jim Molinaro, Mark LeVoi, Bob Morton, Dan Stevenson and freshman Ryan Harris looked reminiscent of the over-powering Irish fronts of the Holtz days.

On defense, the Irish played as dominantly as some of the great units to come before them, holding a Pittsburgh offense that averaged 38 points a game scoreless in the second half.

"After every possession, we just came back to the sidelines and said to each other that they cannot hang with us," said defensive end Justin Tuck, who led a tenacious Irish defensive front Saturday with 10 tackles and three and a half sacks. "That was the first time this year I think we played together as a great defensive line."

Defensive tackle Darrell Campbell played like a man possessed. The senior did not miss a snap on defense against the Panthers — leading an Irish pass rush that kept quarterback Rod Rutherford and the Pittsburgh offense moving backwards all night.

"I'm really proud of all those guys. Darrell Campbell never came out of the game," Irish defensive line coach Greg Mattison said. "The kids wanted this one bad, and we've been so close. You can't say enough about our players and [head coach] Ty [Willingham] in keeping this team together and believing."

Cornerback Vontez Duff accepted one of the biggest challenges presented to any Irish player this season in nearly single-handedly shutting down Pittsburgh wide receiver Larry Fitzgerald in the second half of the game, preventing the nation's leading receiver from catching a pass after halftime.

Simply put, this was Notre Dame football like it is supposed to be played. The Irish marched into a ranked opponent's stadium and came away with an impressive victory.

Somewhere, Knute Rockne is cheering, as his boys in blue listened to his famous halftime speech one more time: "Sometime, when the team is up against it, and the breaks are beating the boys, tell them to go out there with all they got..."

Notre Dame did just that Saturday night. Off to a 1-3 start, and with things only looking worse with teams like USC and Florida State on the horizon, the Irish needed a dominant performance like they got.

They needed it for all the doubters, to prove that Notre Dame hasn't fallen off the football radar.

They needed it for themselves, to show that they still have the talent and ability to win every Saturday. And, most importantly, they needed it for the program, to show that Notre Dame football is still alive and kicking.

"We said it's important for this football team to make those that wore the uniform before them proud, and that doesn't change," Willingham said.

There should be a lot of proud Notre Dame alums after Saturday's victory. Because for just over three hours, the Irish, indeed, returned to the glory days of Notre Dame football.

Jones finally meets expectations

By JOE HETTLER
Sports Editor

PITTSBURGH — Bob Davie knew how crucial Saturday's contest between the Irish and No. 16 Pittsburgh was for Irish running back Julius Jones. Seeing Jones near the entrance gate after breaking Notre Dame's single-game rushing record, the former Irish coach saluted Jones with a smile and gave his former star a hug.

It was a symbolic gesture of sorts — the man that recruited Jones congratulating him on a night when the senior showed the nation just what he was capable of accomplishing.

Jones had 262 yards rushing en route to breaking Vagas Ferguson's 225-yard game in 1978. Jones also rushed for two touchdowns and was the key in Notre Dame's 20-14 upset of Pittsburgh.

After being kicked out of school and missing a whole season of football last year, Jones finally gave Notre Dame's coaches and fans the kind of game they've been expecting since his freshman year in 1999.

He ran over, through and around Panther defenders all night. He made the big run when the Irish needed it, and he had several key touchdown sprints. But most importantly, the Jones simply embarrassed the Pittsburgh defense by doing what Irish fans have been waiting for since his arrival back to campus in the early fall.

The extra classes at Arizona State and the rigorous training with his brother Thomas, a running back for the Tampa Bay Buccaneers, wasn't easy for Jones. But Saturday night's performance made all the sweat and pain in the offseason and year off worth it.

"It means a lot, just to be away and have the opportunity to come back and go through the things I've gone through," Jones said. "It's a great feeling and I feel like everything I did paid off."

In his first four games, Jones had a mere 152 yards and averaged a modest 3.5 yards per carry, struggling since his solid performance against Washington State in the opener. He gained only six yards against Purdue last week and was visibly angry after Notre Dame's 23-10 loss. While Jones did not perform to expectations, neither did Notre Dame in going 1-3.

But this week was different. Jones showed the game-changing abilities he displayed as a sophomore and junior and flashed the brilliance that the Irish have expected since his return to school.

Most importantly, Jones gained the swagger he had during his first three years at Notre Dame when he gained 1750 yards and 19 touchdowns. He can take that swagger into the remainder of Notre Dame's games this season.

"It was a lot of confidence," Jones said. "I felt confidence in the offensive line and they felt confident in the running backs. It was a great game for us to get our confidence going for USC and the rest of the season."

Freshman Harris gets his first start

By CHRIS FEDERICO
Sports Writer

PITTSBURGH — Another true freshman saw playing time for the Irish Saturday as offensive tackle Ryan Harris was moved into the starting lineup at right tackle.

Harris, who became the sixth Irish freshman to see the field this year, learned he would start Friday.

"[Friday] Coach [Tyrone Willingham] asked me if I called my parents, and I told them, 'Yeah, I think I'm going to play this week.' He said, 'Well, you should call them again and tell them you're going to start,'" said Harris after the game. "I was preparing all week in case of that. Someone went down in practice, so it seemed kind of inevitable that no one else was there."

The rookie was part of a revamped Irish offensive line that helped running back Julius Jones to a 262-yard, record-setting day.

"I just looked at it like I want to help my team any way I can," Harris said. "I just work hard everyday and pick up the system and game schemes more and that ended up happening, so it worked great."

Harris was just one part of a different-looking right side, as tackle Dan Stevenson moved to right guard for the game. The switch paid off, as the Irish amassed 352 yards rushing.

"I thought the combination of Ryan Harris and Dan Stevenson worked very well," Willingham said. "That was a very difficult transition, because one is a freshman getting his first start, and the other is a tackle moving over to guard. I thought it was a great move by our coaches, and it worked out very well for us."

Air attack grounded

As the Irish rushing attack shined Saturday, the passing game struggled. Freshman quarterback Brady Quinn was only 5-of-17 passing for 33 yards, with one interception. The young signal caller struggled to connect with his receivers, but still led his team to victory, and that is what's important, according to Willingham.

"The measuring stick that I have for our quarterback is simply to win, and Brady [Quinn] did that tonight," he said. "He made throws when we needed big throws. He led our football team with a calm and a presence that we expect from our quarterback."

The disparity in the Irish offensive production — Notre Dame had 352 yards rushing and 33 passing — was almost a complete reversal from the squad's last time on the field. Two weeks ago against Purdue, the Irish had 297 yards passing and only 49 rushing.

"I will label that part of the growth process that we're going through," Willingham said. "Some things are good one night and not so good the other night. Eventually, we'll be able to put all of our areas in the right place."

Where was Setta?

After converting the first point after touchdown and sending off the ensuing kickoff, Irish place kicker Nicholas Setta was absent from the field Saturday, as junior D. J. Fitzpatrick replaced him both punting and place kicking.

"Nicholas [Setta] suffered an injury on the first kickoff, and after that point he was ruled out," Willingham said of the senior's injury.

In Setta's place, Fitzpatrick — who started the year as Setta's backup and holder on place kicks — was 2-for-4 on field goals, hitting from 19 and 34 yards and missing from 52 and 32 yards. He also had five punts for an average of 37.4 yards a kick.

"Holding this year broke the ice for me, and I wasn't that nervous, but kicking and punting is a little different," Fitzpatrick said.

Game day captains

Serving as captains for the Irish were safety Glenn Earl, Setta, offensive tackle Jim Molinaro and linebacker Courtney Watson.
