Bogle May Run For Congressional Seat

James Bogle, Notre Dame Government professor, spoke with United States Senators Vance Hartke (Dem., Ind.) and Gaylord Nelson (Dem., Wis.) recently concerning Senator Eugene McCarthy's bid for the Democratic Presidential nomination.

Bogle, chairman of the Indiana Independent Democrats and McCarthy coordinator over a five state area, proclaims himself "exceedingly optimistic" as a result of his efforts on behalf of the Minnesota Senator.

Bogle claims to have organizations set up in 13 Indiana cities in less than two weeks of effort. He points to the fact that there are now McCarthy organizations in 41 states as proof of a groundswell on behalf of the Senator.

News In Brief:

Patriot Election

Seniors will vote for Patriot of the Year today during the afternoon and evening meals in the dining halls. Off-campus seniors will be polled by mail.

This year's nominees for the award include former Marine Commandant General David M. Shoup, diplomat George Kennan, political commentators Paul Harvey and William F. Buckley, and Health, Education and Welfare Secretary John Gardner. Also nominated are recently retired American socialist leader Norman Thomas and Robert Keeley, a Notre Dame graduate who has done social work with Chicago's Blackstone Rangers.

Wreck Injures Jrs.

Two Notre Dame juniors were treated for head injuries and released by Memorial Hospital in Ludington, Michigan, after being involved in a hit and run collision Sunday night. Paul Schmuckal and Sam DeLuca were returning to school on U.S. 31 when an oncoming vehicle forced them onto the right shoulder causing Schmuckal to lose control and swerve back to the left side where he flipped over.

Debate Here

Two United States Senators will debate on the topic of the Vietnam war Sunday night in Washington Hall. The combatants will be Senators Gale McGee (D., Wyo.) and George McGovern (D., S.D.).

McGee and McGovern are the only two members of the Senate to hold doctorates.

Dunne Homily

This Sunday, Father John Dunne, will give the second in a series of homilies marking the "Year of Faith" observance at Notre Dame. He will speak on Conversion at the 5:00 p.m. Mass at Sacred Heart.

This series of homilies, on the first Sunday of each month, according to University chaplain, Fr. Joseph Fey, CSC, will be the university's chief observance of the year.

Father Fey also has plans for a series of seminars during the second semester dealing with the topic of faith. These will be under the direction of Father David Burrell.

Bogle plans to field a delegation of 32 from Indiana, including six from Notre Dame, at the Conference of dissenting Democrats in Chicago this weekend.

The Government professor will himself be a delegate to the Conference, and has invited four other professors, Dr. John Houch, Dr. James Carberry, Dr. William D'Antonio, and Dr. Michael Francis, to attend the meeting.

In addition, Notre Dame students Chuch Nau, Denny O'Dea, and Tom Scherer, the latter the President of the Notre Dame Young Democrats, will be delegates in Chicago. Dr. Bogle plans a luncheon Friday for Notre Dame and St. Mary's faculty members interested in the McCarthy effort.

Bogle denies completely that the McCarthy effort will split the Democratic Party. He emphasized that the McCarthy movement aims at influencing national policy, although he states that nomination is a possibility.

However, Bogle contends that the President himself has split the party over Vietnam, and weakened the Democrats in numerous elections. He points to the 1966 Congressional elections and the 1967 municipal elections as showing great dissatisfaction with the President.

The Chicago conference, according to Bogle, will demonstrate the width of the disagreement with Johnson. McCarthy will address the Conference. Also delivering a major address will be Zolton Ferency Michigan State Democratic Chairman and 1966 opponent of George Romney for Governor of Michigan.

Attending will be New York attorney Richard Lowenthal, vice-chairman of Americans for Democratic Action and coordinator of anti-Johnson efforts on a national level. Bogle expects two Congressmen, Reps. Don Edwards (Dem., Calif.) and Robert Kastenmeier (Dem., Wis.) to attend the conference. Richard Hatcher mayor-elect of Gary, Indiana, has also been invited to the conference.

Bogle speculated on his own plans pertaining toward his own political career as a U.S. politician. He speculates that he may not be teaching at Notre Dame next semester, devoting full time to the McCarthy effort. Bogle says he will work full time "if the movement gets off the ground and if they ask me."

Another possibility discussed was that

Bogle himself may run for Congress as a dissenting Democrat. He refused to deny speculation, but said that he would run only if all eleven Indiana seats are chosen at-large. He is a supporter of Rep. John Brademas (Dem., Ind.) in the third district which includes South Bend.

If the election were held at large, Bogle is optimistic that he could win nomination. However, he views as disastrous the prospects of any ticket in Indiana headed by Johnson. Hence, the at-large question plus the President's prospects for renomination will be determining factors in Bogle's decision.

Bogle, an Assistant Professor of Government and International Studies, joined the Notre Dame faculty in 1962. He is a specialist in International Relations with special emphasis on Soviet and Chinese affairs. Bogle received his doctorate studying under Prof. Hans Morgenthau of the University of Chicago, a leading proponent of the real-politik school of thought. Bogle is former Chairman of the Indiana Americans for Democratic Action.

Bogle views his own involvement in the McCarthy effort as stemming from both an opposition to the President's policies plus a view he stressed that Johnson is a "minority president."

Viewing the McCarthy picture as a whole, he remarks "This is not a movement to endanger the Democratic Party, but one which is healthy for it. As to McCarthy's chances of nomination, Bogle is realistic, but say that the Minnesota Senator's being chosen is "not beyond the range of possibility."

Sr. Grace Pleads For Autonomy Asks Girls Not To Protest

BY BETTY DOERR

Speaking to an all-student assembly at St. Mary's College yesterday, Sister Mary Grace, CSC, recently dismissed president of that school, expressed hope in the future of St. Mary's as an autonomous institution and urged the students to "pray for our college."

Sister Mary Grace said, "I favor collaboration in all ways, but I do not favor losing the autonomy and identity of St. Mary's College. Some suggest that in the future this will come. I hope that it will not."

Sister expressed enthusiasm over the present exchange program between Notre Dame and St. Mary's, and showed interest in further collaboration. "With any cooperation, the parties should complement one another," she said, "and not submerge either party. We must progress slowly, in a well-organized manner."

Sister Grace used the complex of six colleges at Claremont, California as an example of ideal collaboration. Students in that complex take courses at any of the schools they choose, but receive their diploma from their individual college. Sister chooses the word "collaboration" rather than the word "merger" which implies loss of autonomy on the part of one of the schools.

Sister Grace told the students "I will not ignore nor totally resist the winds of educational change, nor will I ride every breeze that floats by."

She made it very clear that she did not choose to leave St. Mary's: "I am not resigning and leaving the impression that I have agreed with all that has been going on." Her term of office will end on December 31.

"I may soon console myself like Henry Clay," she said. "Although I believe firmly in his words, that I would rather be right than be president. But educational right these days is not so easily come by."

In the latter part of her speech, the nun urged the students "to be dignified Saint Mary's women."

"I do not want any protests or demonstrations. We now have absolute evidence that many of these demonstrations on college campuses are Communist inspired. I think this is a tragedy in American education. I never want to see this at Saint Mary's."

Sister Grace also urged the students "to do something now and in the future about your devotion to the Blessed Sacrament." She is concerned about the lack of attendance at masses and the failure of many girls to cover their heads at mass. "You would not approach a most distinguished suitor before spending many hours in preparation for the date. . . We take our Blessed Lord so very much for granted."

Throughout the speech Sister asked the students to pray for the school: "This is the year of faith. I ask you to pray for the college, because the Devil is at work in the world today as never before."

Buckley For Sure; Ayn Rand Maybe

The Student Union Academic Commission has confirmed that Conservative columnist, commentator, and candidate William F. Buckley Jr. will speak on campus April 4. Because of Buckley's large stipend, which is one thousand dollars, a slight admission charge will be taxed in Stepan Center.

Buckley represents the first major accomplishment in Academic Commissioner Chuck Nau's attempt to get prominent conservatives to speak on campus to balance the considerable number of liberal lecturers.

Another possibility before the year is out is objectivist philosopher Ayn Rand. Academic Commissioner Nau has talked to Miss Rand's principal associate in New York.

Credibility Gap

((AP) Washington — Informed sources wondered yesterday whether Secretary of Defense McNamara's resignation bore any relation to the coup at St. Mary's College last week. As of yet the national administration has taken no formal stand on the new ruling clique but friends of the President feel that McNamara's resignation stems from heated clash over the Notre Dame-Saint Mary's merger. President Johnson, a frequent consultant of the new college head Fr. John McGrath while Fr. McGrath was at Catholic University, is believed to favor the merger. Cyrus Vance, President Johnson's troubleshooter, is expected to intercede with the warring factions on the President's behalf.

The events at St. Mary's of the past week have been bizarre and for the most part unexpected. In a sudden move last Wednesday Mother M. Olivette, C.S.C., superior general, replaced Sister Mary Grace, C.S.C., with Fr. John McGrath, professor of comparative law at Catholic University. As of yet, Washington has not intervened, although promises of aid are expected.

The appointment, in the opinion of trained observers, seems to bear out Sister Mary Grace's charge of collusion with Notre Dame. The appointment follows the Notre Dame model — Fr. McGrath had only visited St. Mary's once, on November 17.

According to Fr. McGrath, he is acting president and not president. He will take power on January 1 of next year and is expected to from a government favorable to merger proposals. The rebel ASP, in hiding in Le Mans Hall, could not be reached.

Before leaving office Sister Mary Grace warned of creeping Notre Damism. Reports reaching Washington indicate that she fears that St. Mary's, roughly one sixth the size of Notre Dame, will lose its identity if merged with its larger neighbor. Cyrus Vance, at the President's request, is expected to suggest a compromise solution which would require Notre Dame to lose its identity as well. Under the terms of the compromise, the merged campuses would be known as St. Mary's, but sources close to Sister Mary Grace feel that such a solution is still unsatisfactory. It is believed that the St. Mary's identity, of the world but not with it, would still be lost.

The United States is expected to extend diplomatic recognition to the new government by early next week. To date forty-seven nations, led by Argentina and the Vatican, have recognized the government which will take over on January 1. In a special session of the United Nations General Assembly convened late last night, the government of Nationalist China called for UN intervention against what the delegate called "blatant Notre Dame aggression."

The situation became even more confused as the result of another structural shake-up this week. Dr. Thomas E. Jordan, head of institutional research and planning, resigned because of "problems created by the religious trustees." Events surrounding Dr. Jordan's resignation indicate that Sister Mariam Patrick, C.S.C., head of the Mathematics Department, actually wields the power.

Former Secretary of Defense McNamara, who is said to oppose the merger, could not be reached for comment. President Johnson is expected to confer with close aides at the Texas Whitehouse this weekend. Reports reaching Washington indicate that Sister Mary Grace will soon go into hiding, her campaign to secure faculty support a failure.

SENATE STALLS JEOPARDY BILL

BY JOEL CONNELLY

The Senate last night voted to table a motion by ASP Senator Jon Sherry calling for the creation of a student disciplinary code. The motion will be referred to the student affairs committee of the Senate, and will be reported back at the next meeting. The tabling came in the wake of numerous proposed amendments to the Code plus strenuous objections to it.

A Morrissey resident, brought to the Senate by Walsh Senator

Pat Dowd, explained how he had been subjected to threats and twice sent home as a result of disclosures involving the gang operating out of Morrissey.

He attacked the provision in the proposed code which would have forbade the expulsion of a student until that student had been convicted in civil court and appeal procedures exhausted. He stated emphatically "If this passed I could walk out of here and be killed."

Sponsor Sherry replied by pointing out that a proposed friendly amendment to his bill would allow the student judiciary board to review whether students were being jeopardized by the length of the civil procedures in a case. In such a case a student would be suspended.

Steve Anderson, former ombudsman and now chief planner of the Student Judiciary Board, explained that the procedures he is working out, plus those of the Sherry Bill, simply allow the accused the right to confront his accuser. Sherry defended the code, saying "We must have the safeguards of confrontation and civil proceedings so the innocent can be protected. We have it in the outside world. Why not at the University?"

A meeting called before the Senate session by Walsh Senator Dowd and attended by about 20 Senators produced agreement that there were so many amendments that the bill would have to be sent to Student Affairs. In the end, the Senate as a whole concurred. Stay Senator Phil Rathwig proposed the tabling, then proposed recommitting the motion, and then proposed tabling again.

Army To Give Joyce Pre-Induction Physical

Notre Dame's most venerable opponent of the Establishment, Lenny Joyce, may soon be gone. The former S.D.S. leader and onetime candidate for Student Body President is scheduled for a pre-induction physical December 5. Although Joyce is guaranteed a ISC deferment until the beginning of February, his future after that appears cloudy. A large group of picket is expected to be on hand next Tuesday to see Joyce off for his physical.

Joyce signed the "We won't go" petition circulated around campus last month. Considering his signature now that he is in danger of being drafted, Joyce states "I meant it." As to his plans if drafted, Joyce remarked "We are no longer going to play games with the draft authorities. We are going to openly declare them to be illegitimate." More specifically, Joyce maintains "I will resist."

Joyce feels that the authorities are keeping an eye on his activities. He maintains "We know Indiana University S.D.S. is being spied upon. We are undoubtedly being watched." He also claims there is a narcotics agent keeping an eye on the Halfway House.

While at one time he did run as a write-in candidate for SBP, Joyce now maintains it is totally futile to work within the "Establishment." He states, with satiric inference to one professor's work on behalf of Minnesota's Senator Eugene McCarthy, "Only liberals like Dr. Bogle and Lyndon Baines Johnson work inside the system." From his statements about the draft and other matters, Joyce clearly intends not to.

YR Chief Laments Club's Interest Failure

As the Young Democrats debate the Presidents' policies and flit with a new brand of McCarthyism, the Young Republicans of Notre Dame, long the most active political club on campus, have done little so far this year. The club has met but once, has sponsored no lectures and has put out its newsletter only once. It has, in the words of YR Chairman Dennis Millman, been "a very frustrating fall" for the club.

Millman explains that the club has not met because "We haven't had any business to discuss." The club's annual membership drive has according to Millman produced unsatisfactory results. A seminar scheduled at St. Mary's has fallen through. Millman received no response when he called for people to help out on Mayor Allen's reelection campaign in South Bend. The club's plans to sell programs at football games even didn't work out in three different games.

Morrissey-Minton Backlash

Contrary To Minton . . .

This article is being submitted to The Observer as a refutation of Mike Minton's article of November 27, by the Morrissey Hall presidents—Dan Gleason, Tony Kemps, and Phil McKenna—and Dave Meekison, hall senator.

We are very much concerned and disheartened by Mr. Minton's interpretation of the Morrissey Hall Council's action as "a prostitution of principle." On the contrary, Morrissey's surprising decision to enforce University parietal hours was a commitment to reason. It was initiated to preserve, not destroy, the spirit that Mr. Minton so highly cherishes.

Mr. Minton leaves the impression that Morrissey residents will now be subjected to a gestapo-like atmosphere. This is absolutely erroneous. A letter distributed to every member of the hall by the Hall Council, stated the decisions reached by the Council explaining each resident's "obligation" in this way, "There will be no student police force. Hall unity requires your COOPERATION". It seems, then, that Morrissey's "New responsibility" is not really new at all. Like before, each resident is responsible for his own actions and realizes that cooperation with his peers is a necessity.

Mr. Minton fails to realize that even while he was president, Morrissey Hall was subject to University regulations. No new laws were created by the hall last year regarding parietal hours. It was, and still is, an internal sense of responsibility that governed the Morrissey' resident's actions. Morrissey is conforming to no one! Rather, the hall is restating its role of leadership through responsible action.

Mr. Minton also implies that Morrissey's decision is permanent, and that only a change in Administration policy would influence a reconsideration in Morrissey. In the same letter mentioned above, it was explained to the residents of Morrissey that ". . . the Hall Council agreed to support University hours until the General Assembly of Students on January 4 and 5 or until a policy change occurs."

Mr. Minton asserts that we have sacrificed the unique spirit of Morrissey—one of cooperation and freedom of choice—for the sake of conforming. He would choose to set aside visionary legislation that in purpose will effect and liberalize all halls rather than sacrifice his own de facto freedom for a period of three weeks. This, we feel, is the real "prostitution of principle".

Contrary to what Mr. Minton stated, Morrissey's previously established guidelines—self-governemtn and community spirit—were not abolished. Rather, new and more appropriate pathways were pursued. Mr. Minton has not been in close contact with the situation in Morrissey this year. He has, therefore, failed to realize that the path toward Morrissey's ideal of communal living has not been direct. The surprising step taken at the meeting was seen by the council members as the most reasonable solution to a problem that plagues many halls. The step taken was one that allows Morrissey to assert its influence in the unification of halls that is at the present on the contrary, it amounts to the realization of the need for a new alignment of all student efforts. What is at stake is not merely the freedom of Morrissey Hall, but the very quality of campus life.

We appreciate Mr. Minton's concern, but we feel that his views could have been better channeled into the formulation of, rather than the invective against, the Hall Council's decision,

McNamara Bows Out

BY DENNIS GALLAGHER

The resignation of Robert McNamara as Secretary of Defense leaves a gap which is not likely to adequately filled. It may seem odd that I should write a panegyric on a man whose job has been the efficient conduct of a war which seems to me impractical and and in some aspects immoral. Yet it is not easy to imagine another man who could have functioned nearly so well as Secretary of Defense under the same conditions as has Mr. McNamara.

Robert S. McNamara's life is in some ways the modern paradigm of the Horation Alger story in bureaucratic dress. He was no penniless shoeshine boy. His father managed a shoe factory and he himself attended Harvard. But he did work his way up through the tortuous ranks of industrial management by dint of hard work and ability to become president of a large corporation in which he had originally little capital holdings. At the peak of his business career, in 1961, when he had been president of Ford for just one year, he resigned to become Secretary of Defense under John Kennedy. He gave up three million dollars in Ford stock and took the $35,000 a year job saying, "How many millions does a man need?"

He brought to the Cabinet post the same thoroughgoing steadiness and administrative brilliance that distinguished him in business. Where most Cabinet members are unable to do more than coordinate and oversee a department whose workings they do not fully understand, McNamara ran the Department of Defense. He took advice, and not orders, from the military. He took steps to insure that the United States would be capable of flexible response as well as massive retaliation. He introduced a cost and effect method of determining which projects the department should pursue.

It has been rumored that McNamara has attempted to limit the bombing of North Vietnam and has in general aroused the ire of the military by not submitting to all their demands for increased troop commitment and wider action. Certainly, he has opposed the arms race escalation involved in the construction of an anti-missile system. The full extent of his disagreements with the Administration he served are not likely to be known for many years, if ever. For Mr. McNamara is a civilized and loyal man. And such men do not make dramatic and demagogic statements of denouncement and disavowal.

No one knows what will happen in the great course of human events. A future generation may blame us for not going to war with China, just as we blame Chamberlain for not standing up to Hitler. Then again, it may wonder how the escalation in Vietnam that led to the great holocaust ever got so out of hand in the first place. And the answer may be that the new Secretary of Defense was unable to keep military demands in a political perspective, that he was not able to meet the call for more bombs with a sheet of meaningful statistics, with a sure and rational answer.

Al's All Stars

Your Name Is Schoen

BY AL BERRYMAN

Now that the chase is on again to knock off UCLA, it is time for all the mystics to put forth fearless predictions on the upcoming basketball season. As long as everyone else is naming All-American teams, it seems like one more can't do any harm, so here goes:

Guard	Lucius Allen	6'2"	UCLA
Guard	Don May	6'4"	Dayton
Center	Lew Alcindor	7'1"	UCLA
Forward	Elvin Hayes	6'8"	Houston
Forward	Westley Unseld	6'8"	Louisville

A small liberty was taken by putting May at guard, because he is a forward, but a guy with his talent can't be kept off the team. He was the number five rebounder in the nation in '66 as he led the Flyers to the NCAA finals. Allen and Alcindor last year were the best players on the best team, and it's going to be hard to find a better combination anywhere this year. Unless maybe you like Louisville, where Unseld and Butch Beard should show the Cardinal opponents what it's all about. Words are not enough to describe Hayes. The Big E's itching for another shot at UCLA, too. After playing against him last year, Hayes refused to jump on the UCLA bandwagon. His thoughts: "Lew didn't show me much." If the Bruins ever do lose this year, look for it to happen on January 20 in the Astrodome.

There is a bumper crop of top sophomores this year. While no team has five the caliber that UCLA had last year, look for these names to come up on somebody's All-American selections after the season is over: Calvin Murphy of Niagara, Ernie Austin of Syracuse, Rick Mount of Purdue, Pete Maravich of LSU, Bob Lienhard of Georgia, Bob Lanier of St. Bonaventure, Jim McMillan of Columbia, Chuck Moore of Stanford, Ralph Ogden of Santa Clara and Mike Kretzer of East Tennessee State.

The Irish open up Saturday night against St. Joe's, and Johnny Dee's men shouldn't expect too much trouble. Last year we saw a bunch of sophomores make a bunch of sophomore mistakes, but they jelled into a smooth unit by the end of the season, and not even Elvin Hayes had much to say after his team walked off the floor of the Fieldhouse a beaten ball club. If only we could have about 80 per cent of this year's games just like that one.

Your name is Thomas Ralph Schoen. Last Friday night, you wore that gold helmet for the final time. After that game, you and 23 other seniors peeled off those navy blue jerseys, never to wear them again.

You've left your mark in Notre Dame football history, though. Seven all-time records belong to you and except for a mere 12 yards, an eighth mark would be yours. Your top statistics include:

- **Single game- -Number of punt returns: 9, vs. Pitt., 1967.
- **Single game- -Yards gained on punt returns 167, vs. Pitt., 1967.
- **Season- -Most TDs on pass interceptions: 2, 1966.
- **Season-Most punt returns: 42, 1967.
- **Season- -Most passes broken up: 11, 1967.
- **Career- -Most TDs on pass interceptions: 3.
- **Career- -Yards gained on pass interceptions: 226.

But statistics are a rather impersonal memory of a football player. Ten years from now, Irish fans who saw you play will associate the name Schoen with excitement, not with records. Anybody who wasn't moved by your runs had to be nailed down.

Your big game this year was against Pitt. You clicked off 167 yards and a touchdown on nine punt returns and 40 yards on a pass interception.

At that point, it looked like you would smash Nick Rassas' record for most punt return yardage in one season. But you sprained a wrist against Pitt, caught the flu two days later and suffered even more from Georgia Tech and Miami punters who kicked away from you. In the last two games, 447 yards for the season, 12 short of Rassas' total.

After the Pitt game, Coach Ara Parseghian said, "Tom had just a sensational day. He's got good speed and exceptional quickness. He's an outstanding football player and a great All-American candidate." The American Football Coaches Association made a prophet of Ara Monday when they selected you safety on their All-American team. Yesterday, United Press International did likewise.

People wonder what makes a premier return specialist. "It's all blocking," you say. "Believe me. I've got 10 real blockers out there with me. These guys just pick 'em off one by one. All I have to do is read off their blocks. O'Leary and Jim (Smithberger) take the spotters (first men downfield for the offensive team). The other blockers peel back and set up a wall along the sideline."

While you credit your teammates for much of your success, it's no secret that Tom Schoen is a believer in himself. It shows in the way you trot off the field after a good return. It shows in the way you talk to an opposing receiver after breaking up a pass.

Some say you can't make it with the pros. "I don't think I'm too small," you say. "Look at the NFL. There's a lot of 180 and 190 pound backs."

It's a good bet that a gang of pro teams won't think you're too small on Jan. 30 when they conduct the annual college draft. There's room in any league for a guy so daring that he made only two fair catches all year.

Kunz, Olson '68 Captains

GEORGE KUNZ

George Kunz and Bob Olson were elected co-captains of the 1968 Fighting Irish this week, marking the first time since 1961 that Notre Dame will field more than one captain.

Kunz, 6-5, 240, started for the 1966 national champions until he was injured in the Northwestern game. His knee kept him on the sidelines for the remainder of the season. The battler from Arcadia, California began the '67 season as a tight end also, and against California and Purdue he hauled in 7 passes for 101 yards. Injuries to teammates forced him to be moved to offensive tackle, where he started the last eight games.

Olson took over the linebacking job left open by Jim Lynch's graduation in 1967, and he led the Irish defensive unit in tackles as a sophomore. The 6-0, 225-pound ace knocked down Miami's attempted conversion in the last game to preserve Notre Dame's victory.

When Kunz and Olson take over the team leadership from Rocky Bleier tonight at the banquet in the North Dining Hall, Olson will be the first junior to captain an Irish football team since 1919, when Pete Bahan had the job.
