

Petty thieves hit ND over weekend

by Bill Holley

In the past three days Notre Dame has been hit by a rash of petty thefts. The first instance occurred Friday night at the Cellar in the basement of the Halfway House. At this time a total of $95 was taken from the purses of two girls visiting the campus for the weekend. The purses were left in the coatroom, which was unguarded.

Freshman Class President Ray Connell explained that the reason coats were not checked was that the coatroom serves not only the Cellar but the Halfway House and the Holy Cross lounge. In his words, "Why should we have put someone in the coatroom to check coats when we were only using the Cellar."

A number of coats were also reported stolen from the coat racks at the Mardi Gras Carnival at Stepan Center. Mardi Gras Chairman Jim Golomb admitted that he knew of six reported thefts. Campus Security only had one incident reported while figures were not available from the St. Joseph County Sheriff's Department as to the number of official reports. Ernie Gargaro, a member of the Mardi Gras Committee reported that the reason coats were not checked at the Carnival was that funds were not available to pay people to watch coats. He said: "It would run personnel costs out of sight." Two additional Sheriff's deputies were put on duty Sunday to help with security but as one deputy put it "We can watch the coat racks but we can't tell if they are taking their own coats or stealing them."

About 4:00 p.m. Sunday, Henry Cardinale of 417 Lyons reported to the Security office that his wallet and class ring were stolen from his room while he was out. His roommate David Heise was at the room at the time. Heise said that two negroes about 18 or 20 years old came to his room asking for a friend. Heise then went to look their friend's number up in the phone book. When he turned around the two men had left. He later discovered that Cardinale's wallet and class ring were missing.

Black Culture Lectures

Lynch opens SMC lecture series

Last night the St. Mary's Black Culture Lecture Series was opened with a lecture by Professor Hollis Lynch, director of the Black Studies Program of the State University of New York, Buffalo, and author of Edward Wilmot Blyden, a biography of an influential who encouraged American negroes to emigrate to Western Africa.

Professor Lynch led-off the series by providing a survey of the effects of historical developments and a number of black leaders on the American negro's attempt to return to Africa after the Civil War. A question session following the lecture prompted a comparison of such recent Black Nationalists as Malcolm X, who visited Africa several times and earlier Afro-Americans who may have had an entirely different vision of the African state in relationship with America.

Dr. Rita Cassidy, professor of Afro-American History at St. Mary's and coordinator of the series, announced that in the coming weeks topics in the series will study such aspects of black culture as the current American "black is beautiful" appreciation of all aspects of negro humanity, nineteenth century black thinker and the proponents of a revival of fascination in traditional negro foods, clothing, music and dance. American and African styles in literature, art and architecture will be also compared.

African playwright Wole Soyinka's The Trials of Brother Jero will be performed by a local all-black cast, and the Moreau Art Gallery is exhibiting a collection of implements, textiles and clothing articles entitled African Structural Arts throughout the month of February.

The second lecture will be Wednesday (please note that the S.B. Tribune was wrong), when John Povey, associate director of the African Studies Center at UCLA and editor of Arts d'Afrique will speak at 7:30 p.m. in Carroll Hall on "Negritude—a Root of Black Nationalism?"

ND sports: How much myth and reality?

by Tim O'Meilie

This is the first of a five part series on Notre Dame athletics.

"In Elmer Layden's day he didn't permit the athletes to call their scholarships a "ride," because they weren't. The football players had to pay a large part of their fees and they all had jobs. Most of them used to work in the dining halls. I can remember one used to wait on my table."

Those were the circumstances in the early 1930's when Notre Dame's ticket manager Robert M. Cahill was an undergraduate. He has been ticket manager since 1941 and has seen that intercollegiate athletics, particularly football, has changed immensely in almost 40 years. Sometimes there is a question as to whether it has changed for the better.

No longer do universities require an athlete to work on the side to help earn his way through college. His time is too much taken with athletics and classwork to permit much leisure time. He has a straight business deal with the university—his talent in exchange for a college education.

Football is no longer in the same category with the other intercollegiate athletics. In most cases, including Notre Dame's, it must support the remainder of the athletic program as well as the huge athletic plants at virtually every university across the country.

Oddly, the philosophy of athletics on the university level has not changed in those 40 years. This series will attempt to discover whether the realities have changed and we are interested in how things are done at Notre Dame.

Presumably the university is, first of all, an educational institution. Consequently that leaves some question as to why any school of higher education should become involved in the very un-academic business of intercollegiate athletics, particularly to the point where the kickoff is the highlight of the week and where hundreds of thousands of dollars are poured into it each fall. What part does big time football play at an educational institution?

A university grants scholarships to its students for the purpose of allowing a certain number of them who could not otherwise obtain a college education. The university does something very similar for its football and basketball players. Athletic ability is used as a bargaining point. How can an academic community permit entrance to a student on the grounds of his football ability? How does a university justify an athletic grant-in-aid?

What is the purpose of the administration in perpetuating a big time football and basketball program. Why do we not play on the same level as St. Joseph's

Saturday afternoon? What is the relation between the student and the athletic program? And if there is a legitimate relationship, still another question remains. Assuming a university's loyalty is to its students, then why do they not sit on the 50-yard line, and why not at midcourt? Why do the freshmen and sophomores at the basketball games "get stuck" up in the upper arena in the bleachers?

This series will attempt to answer those questions. And while we are interested in the state of athletics across the nation, we are primarily concerned with what happens at Notre Dame.

There has been much written and said about the purpose of intercollegiate athletics in the past few years. In his syndicated column which appears in the Chicago Sun-Times Red Smith asked the question, "Why College Athletics? For Profit, Of Course." There is always much discussion of the excesses in college sports—how necessary is Alabama's Bryant-Hilton and Alabama is not the only one. How prevalent are slush funds. Is it true athletes are full-time players and part-time students?

Just how jock is a jock? The overriding question is how does Notre Dame, which has been envied and revered throughout the nation as a home of the student-athlete and as possessor of one of the most honest and legitimate athletic programs, measure up.

To answer, the OBSERVER asked questions of Athletic Director Moose Krause, Ticket Manager Robert Cahill, Athletic Business Manager Herb Jones, Sports Information Director Roger Valdiserri, Executive Vice-President Edmund Joyce, Vice-President for Business Affairs Fr. Jerome Wilson and several others.

How much of Notre Dame is myth and how much reality? Why is football big time?

(Tomorrow why don't students sit on the 50-yard line?)

letic ability is used as a bargaining point. How can an academic community permit entrance to a student on the grounds of his football ability? How does a university justify an athletic grant-in-aid?

There are several more specific questions which involve Notre Dame. She is of Renneslaer, Ind. Is such a grandiose organization necessary to achieve whatever aims the university has in mind?

And if it can answer all these questions, how does big time football relate to the "average student." Is its whole purpose to keep him out of trouble on

Tops concert pulled off in the clutch

by Ted Price

Maybe you were lucky enough to hear before you went to the Morris Civic—many were not and were left standing outside while the Student Union did its thing and managed to present the Four Tops in concert under conditions known affectionately as "Clutch." The whole snafu opened with an emergency telephone call to Lou Lanwermeyer, Student Union Social Commissioner.

"I was sound asleep about 10:30 Saturday when the phone rang and the Notre Dame operator called and said that I had a message to call Tharon Hill in Chicago," said Lanwermeyer. Hill is the road manager for the Four Tops, and when he called five hours before a date, Lanwermeyer figured something was wrong.

OBSERVER INSIGHT

Lanwermeyer called the Union's agents, College Entertainment Agency, and spoke to Stan Rubin, who had originally negotiated the contract. Rubin informed him that the Tops had been in Los Angeles the previous night taping the Hollywood Palace show and that they had left their sheet music at the studio.

Lanwermeyer arranged for the music to be flown to Chicago with an emergency priority and then phoned the group there and told them that it was on the way. He also added that the contract was "solid", that is it could not be broken.

He dispatched Ed Zawacki, the Student Union's concert chairman to Chicago via Cessna 337, chartered from Stockert Flying Service of South Bend.

Zawacki arrived in Chicago and located the Four Tops in a room at the Holiday Inn near O'Hare. He said that the group refused to leave Chicago until they actually had the music in their hands.

"I told them that the music was due in about three and that there was no reservation available on any flight to South Bend after that." Two more aircraft were chartered, this time from Executive Charter at O'Hare.

Zawacki returned to the airport and saw the operations manager of the airfreight service there. He briefed him on the situation and otherwise persuaded him that it was an emergency. As soon as the plane was at the gate, Zawacki and the manager were in its belly searching for the music.

"We finally found it, two boxes weighing almost fifty pounds apiece," he said. "These I grabbed and ran to the Stockert plane."

Meanwhile, the Four Tops had boarded their planes but found that there was no room for Hill. So Hill had to go with Zawacki. But somehow, Hill's attache case didn't make it.

"We taxied back from the runway to the hangar and found the case. From there, back to the lineup waiting for takeoff, and we were finally airborne on our way to South Bend."

When the squadron landed at St. Joe International, they were met by several police cars and a nearly apoplectic Lou Lanwermeyer. The Four Tops were hustled into the police cars, along with all their music, instruments, road manager and his briefcase.

The concert went on at 4:35, late enough to make the audience's temper rather ugly. But according to several people who were there, the concert was "real good".

According to Wade, the entire operation cost in the neighborhood of $500, but there has been no figure released on the damage to health of several Union officials. He said that the Tops would cover all extra expenses.

Riot and calm mixed on campuses

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—A homemade bomb exploded in the administration building at San Francisco State College early yesterday, shattering the calm that had returned to the nation's troubled campuses over the weekend. The building was extensively damaged in the blast and a campus security officer was injured.

At the University of Wisconsin, Gov. Warren P. Knowles toured buildings on the fringe of the campus where National guardsmen called out last week to maintain order have been quartered and told the militiamen they were doing "a good job."

The guardsmen at Wisconsin withdrew from the campus Friday at the request of Chancellor H. Edwin Young.

A group of black students at Duke barricaded themselves in the university's administration building for several hours Thursday to dramatize a list of 13 demands, including an on campus black dormitory, a "living learning" course for African studies, an increase in enrollment of black students and a remedial program to help black students prepare for entrance to the school. The protesters and their supporters clashed with police after the students left the building.

The administration building at the University of Chicago was ordered closed for a week of cleaning and repairs of damage university officials said was done by student protesters who ended their sit in Friday after 16 days. Officials said debris left behind and obscenities scrawled on the walls would cost thousands of dollars to remove.

The University of Iowa chapter of SDS, which has figured in many campus disorders, was placed on probation by a university committee and two students were censured for participation in an unauthorized campus rally.

At Brandeis University in Waltham, Mass., members of the Afro American Society searched for their own candidate to head the new African and Afro American Studies department after accusing the university of dragging its feet in selecting someone. The group, which held Ford Hall for 11 days last month, said they would choose a candidate and present his name to the dean of the faculty.

Things remained quiet at the University of Massachusetts, scene of a protest against recruiting on the campus last week by Dow Chemical Co.

Electricity fails Late Sat. night

Last Saturday night Notre Dame students and their guests suffered through a campus power failure. This was a first at Notre Dame and placed it in the illustrious ranks of those colleges that were part of the Eastern seaboard black-out of a few years ago.

The almost total campus black-out occurred in two stages. At approximately 10:30 P.M. all the halls on the North Quad except Keenan and Stanford were blacked out. About fifteen minutes later, these two halls plus all the halls on the Main Quad were also blacked out. The effects of the black-out were felt in an area delineated on the north by the North Dining Hall and Stanford as Mardi Gras went on unhindered and on the south by the main gate.

Power was restored to Keenan-Stanford in a half-hour but was not restored to the rest of the North Quad until four hours later. The Main Quad was without power for forty-five minutes. The reason for the delay is found in the fact that when the main generators became inoperative, it required a certain amount of time before the auxiliary generators could build up to the capacity of the main generators.

"We're No. 1" is Notre Dame's constant cry...when winning. "You blew it, team," is Notre Dame's retort when losing.

Notre Damers, a really "winning" team has student support whether or not they win the game. When playing, each member of the team represents you and your school, and therefore is an extension of yourself.

Editor:

Notre Dame life has given me much, including my first relationships with the Black American, and I learned that he is the same as me. Yet now, I am subject to a demand which may even be termed "ridiculous" due to the circumstances.

First of all, there was "booing" last Tues. night, and it was vehement. But it was directed at Coach Dee, not the players. Hell, I did not realize there were five Black players on the court until just reading the OBSERVER. It so happens that I was wrapped-up in the game-not a racial issue!

Second, consider the night of January 15, when Spencer Haywood was here. He received an enormous ovation, one of appreciation for his efforts while representing our country in Mexico. Also reflect upon the standing ovation given Austin Carr. Both of these enthusiastic acclamations were given because the two players were great in their sport. I do not think race had anything to do with these at all. But the other nite, everything went wrong, so right away, the racial issue arises. Well, not so, my brothers! If the Black men here, after thinking about the examples given above, think that the students booed the players because of race, then they are blind!

I, for one, will not apologize for something I did not do, and I hope our basketball team, now reduced in size, and more so in strength, will win, and win big, this coming Saturday.

Notre Dame's flickering chances for an at-large NCAA tournament bid received a much needed shot in the arm Saturday, as Johnny Dee's forces thumped the Aggies of Utah State 108-82.

With nary a boo to be heard the entire afternoon, the Irish mounted their finest offensive effort of the season as four starters topped twenty points and a healthy Jackie Meehan cleverly quarterbacked the attack. As Dee put it on national television after the game, "We're where we wanted to be at the start of the season."

Bob Whitmore was high scorer with 26, 22 in the second half, while Austin Carr added 25 and Arnzen and Murphy totaled 21 each. All five starters earned a Sporting an offensive alignment which saw Dwight Murphy playing a high post as center-forward, the Irish ran often and well. Austin Carr, though still at three-quarters speed, added 12 rebounds and

The Irish icers ventured north for the weekend and suffered two more defeats at the hands of the powerful Wisconsin Badgers, 5-1 and 10-2. Notre Dame's record now reads 13-7-3, four of the set-backs resulting from Wisconsin. On Jan. 30-31, the Badgers humiliated Notre Dame 10-2 and 12-0.

Friday night in Milwaukee, the Irish went out and astounded 3,724 fans by out-playing their foes for twenty minutes. John Roselli fed Jim Cordes for a score at 17:31 and the defense allowed the Badgers a mere 15 shots on goal. Notre Dame harried Wisconsin goalie Bob Droman with 12 shots and left the ice leading 1-0.

Things reverted to normal at 8:14 of the second period when Bert DeHate, Dave Smith, and Jim Boyd vaulted Wisconsin into the lead by scoring three goals within the amazing time span of 21 seconds. Smith's goal came only two seconds after DeHate's.

During the second 20 minutes, Irish netminder Dick Tomasoni made 25 saves and never really showed signs of regaining the touch that makes him Johnny Dee's top offensive threat. Whitmore and Murphy were particularly vindictive combining for a 21 for 40 shooting afternoon.

Ahead only 39-31 at the half, Notre Dame exploded to a 68-43 cushion at 11:44 through the second stanza. The Irish continued to burn at a 63% clip in piling up 69 points for the half. John Pleick took a behind the back pass from Tom Dinnott for the century mark.

State's 6-8 super-soph Marv Roberts from Brooklyn, N.Y.

Wisconsin skaters too much

had a chance on any of the five Badger goals. The other two came in the third period on deflected shots. Tomasoni was brilliant in the nets, ultimately turning away 59-64 shots, an excellent percentage of .922.

Friday's game was marked by 14 penalties and set the stage for Saturday's rough-and-tumble match in Madison. The Irish were out-scored but never out-hit, as 16 penalties were whistled. The highlight came at 15:53 of the second period when ND's Phil Wittliff and Mike Collins took on Dick Klipsic and Dave Smith. All four players received 5-minute fighting penalties and were exiled from the game.

Before he left, Wittliff scored one of the two Irish goals, at 17:04 of the first period. Joe Bonk hit the cords earlier at 3:59, but by that time, ND was already down 2-0. Wisconsin left the ice after twenty minutes with a 4-2 lead.

Dick Tomasoni had only 43 shots on goal compared to Friday's 64, but his percentage was much lower, .769. The Irish offense was even less effective, putting only 14 shots on goal. That figure almost matched the number of shots taken at Wisconsin during the first period on Friday's contest.

Notre Dame actually played well over the weekend. The Badgers are a class ahead of the Irish in skating speed, passing, and defense. And Notre Dame definitely improved over their previous losses to the Badgers. The Irish get a chance to rebound on Tuesday night against Lake Forest College. The next home game is scheduled for Feb. 28 against Gustavus Adolphus.

Irish tap new coach

John Counsell, 1964 Notre Dame baseball captain who signed a five-figure contract with the Minnesota Twins upon his graduation, has been named assistant baseball coach at the University by Athletic Director Edward W. Krause.

The 26-year-old Counsell spent four seasons in the Twins' Class A farm system, before asking for his release in 1967.

An outfielder who led the Midwest League in assists with 26 in 1966, Counsell had his best year at the plate that season with a .254 average and 51 runs batted in at Wisconsin Rapids. The previous fall he hit .297 in the Florida Instructional League.

In his last year of professional baseball, Counsell hit .245 for pennant winning Orlando in the Florida State League.

A defensive gem as a three-year starter at Notre Dame, the native of Oconomowoc, Wisconsin had his best season as a junior in 1963. That year he hit .350 in addition to collecting five hits in the last Irish appearance in a NCAA baseball tournament.

Counsell succeeds Tom Kelly as Jake Kline's assistant. Kelly is now assistant director of intramural and club sports at the University.

ND Relay unit wins at Garden

Notre Dame's two-mile relay team won that event at the Knights of Columbus Track Meet on last Friday night. Mike McCann, Joe Quigley, Mark Walsh, and Rick Wohlhuter rounded the Madison Square Garden track in 7:35.6. Bill Hurd finished second to Kentucky sophomore Jim Greene in the 60-yard dash. Greene won the event in 0:06.2 after taking his semi-final heat in a sizzling 0:06.6

lived up to his billing as the nation's number six leading scorer. Though somewhat timid on defense and rebounding, Roberts scored from in and out on a variety of shots for his 35 points.

The only question left now is which tournaments the Irish will hear from. Convincing wins this week, tonight against Butler and especially in New York on Thursday against N.Y.U., could earn some friendly glances from NCAA officials when they convene to name at-large selections next week.

In any case the Irish are sure to hear from the N.I.T. and a trip to Fun City would assure at least a two game set. A first round loss at Carbondale in the NCAA would end it all, but a first round win might well give the Irish a second shot at Kentucky. And if Saturday was any indication of what is to come, a second matchup might not prove as frustrating as what took place in Louisville over the Christmas holidays.

W. Michigan beaches ND

Coach Dennis Stark's swimmers found it tough going again this weekend as a rugged Western Michigan squad beached the Irish 67-46 Friday night at Rockne Pool. "We knew they were tough, but they were tougher than we thought," Stark remarked.

The Broncos took 9 of 13 events in boosting their record to 7-4. Notre Dame is now 5-2.

Reid Lichenfels took his specialty in the one meter diving, while Freshman John Fahey lowered his varsity 200 yard butterfly mark again, this time .6 seconds to 2:08.2.

John May added a win in the 100 yard freestyle in the quick time of 49.7. Notre Dame's other first came in the 400 yard freestyle-relay which saw Vince Spohn, Tom Hock, Bill Ladouceur, and Captain John May combine for a new meet record of 3:22.8.

Tomorrow night the Irish travel to Mount Pleasant to meet Central Michigan. They return to action at home on Saturday against Northwestern.

Mudron cops championship

Pat Mudron was the only member of the Notre Dame wrestling squad to win a divisional championship in the Wheaton Invitational this past weekend. In doing so Mudron won 3 matches, one over Dave Krepic of Elmhurst another over Walt Kummerow of North Park College and the first place match over Dave Harper of the host team. Mudron was competing, of course, in the heavyweight class.

The only other ND grappler to reach the finals was 123-pound Keith Giron, who was defeated by Bill Whitehead of Dubuque, 3-1. Giron had advanced with a 4-2 triumph over Dave Anderson of Augustana in the semifinals.
