Barkett: Female dorms to be revealed

by Jerry Lukus
Observer News Editor

Student Body President John Barkett yesterday predicted a decision this week on which "dorm or dorms" will be used as women's dorms next year. The SBP also claimed that the search for a successor to Fr. Thomas Blantz as vice-president of Student Affairs is the "the most important thing to happen here this year."

Barkett ruled Pangborn, Fischer, Dillon, Planner, Alumni and Grace Halls out as women's dorms because of their locations and rooms. He claimed that the towers were out because of their size, contending that "Notre Dame is not ready for a co-ed dorm yet."

The dorms that the SBP mentioned as possibilities were Lyons, Howard, Morrissey, Sorin, Walsh, or Badin. On a "hunch," he ruled out the North Quad, though "Zahn and Cavanaugh could be considered."

Finally, he ruled out the Stanford-Keenan complex, which many students had suspected to be the University's choice. Barkett said that the hall was all doubles and the dorm "must have some flexibility for the girls."

He feels that the best way to house male students displaced by the influx of females would be "on a quota system with the other halls."

"I'm sure that the halls chosen will be upset," the SBP contended. "It's a question of what you want more," he argued. "Somebody's goint to have to leave if they want women to live on campus."

Barkett also suggested that the newly-admitted girls be allowed to eat at both dining halls if they all live on one quad. "It's not fair if they eat just in one dining hall."

The SBP said that there will be a need for 'capable women' in the Dean of Students office

Barkett: Decision on women's dorms forthcoming and to take the jobs of rectors and R.A.'s. According to Barkett, a need exists for "someone to fight for the girls. They are going to be terribly outnumbered and Barkett hopes that the new rectors and R.A.'s will be able to handle what could be termed "a very delicate situation."

Barkett termed the search for Blantz's successor "crucial." The vice president for Student Affairs serves the Dean of Students, the Director of Student Residences, the campus ministry, and the counseling services. "The University has finally awakened to the fact that a highly qualified man is needed for the position," Barkett said.

Barkett said of Blantz: "He's an excellent man, but he belongs in the classroom. He had very little administrative experience."

SBP Barkett said he hoped that the new man will be given free reins to re-organize the office so that it might handle problems in the fields of drugs, off campus student living, sexuality, the residence halls, freshman orientation, and the social and academic life of Notre Dame.

Barkett is the only student on the seven-man Vice-Presidential search committee and he considers his appointment to the committee quite a breakthrough, calling it a "step in the right direction."

Barkett also came out against all plans to merge the Notre Dame and St. Mary's student bodies.

"As long as there are two Administrations and two Boards of Trustees, there is the need for separate representations at the schools," Barkett said, contending that, "They (separate student governments) can see the problems better."

Barkett said that a good way to solve the problem would be in running four-candidate tickets, through both universities. He had "no real opinion on it", though, just as long as "there are two sets of offices. That is crucial."

The position left vacant with the resignation of former St. Mary's SBVP, Missy Underman should be left vacant, according to Barkett. The SBP thought that the filling of the vice president's post was unnecessary. "They should appoint a temporary replacement or leave it open."

Barkett, also revealed that he had written to University President Rev. Theodore Hesburgh and asked him to follow a recommendation the Board of Trustees set forth earlier in the year by appointing a committee to investigate the

Lindsay makes unexpected showing

Muskie No. 1 in Arizona preliminary

(C) 1972 New York Times News Service
Phoenix, Arizona--Sen Edmund S. Muskie of Maine won 38 per cent of the delegates in yesterday's Arizona Democratic presidential voting, more than any other candidate, final figures showed yesterday.

But the two liberal candidates in the race, New York City Mayor John V. Lindsay and Senator George McGovern of South Dakota, took 44 percent between them, a potent showing in one of the nation's most conservative states.

Lindsay, who waged an intensive media campaign that aides say cost $18,000 (independent estimates are closer to $30,000) edged out McGovern, who had been at work in the state much longer.

The results appeared to establish the mayor, in his first election contest outside New York City, as a viable contender for the Democratic presidential nomination only a few months after he switched from the Republican party.

They also showed, however, that McGovern, whom many politicians had considered overmatched by the Mayor's personal magnetism, could give him a race.

The Arizona results constituted a stunning triumph for the democratic party's reform rules in their first significant test. Designed to open the party to broad public participation, they did just that here, as rank-and-file voters chose students, blacks, Indians, Mexican-Americans, peace activists, justices of the peace and a nun as delegates.

In 1968 five prominent democrats met in a series of closed meetings to name Arizona's delegation to the Democratic National Convention; Saturday, more than 35,000 people went to the polls to take part.

Under Arizona's unique new delegate-selection system, party members voted for 500 delegates to the State Democratic Convention on February 12, at which 25 national convention delegates will be chosen. Because it was not authorized by state law, the balloting was run by the party, not by the state. Cumulative voting was used.

With results tabulated from all 30 legislative districts, the final unofficial totals of delegates gave: Muskie, 189; Lindsay, 118; McGovern, 102; Hubert H. Humphrey, 2; Henry M. Jackson, 2; Vance Hartke, 1 and Shirley Chisholm 1, while 85 delegates were uncommitted.

Because party rules leave little room for maneuver at the state level, it appeared that Arizona's delegation to Miami Beach would contain (with slight deviation possible) 10 votes for Muskie, six for Lindsay, five for McGovern, and four uncommitted.

Included in the uncommitted block were supporters of Jackson and Humphrey, candidates of organized labor, and members of the State's black caucus.

The uncommitted effort of the State Labor Federation, which followed the national strategy of the A.F. of L.-C.I.O. was the day's major failure.

Darwin Aycock, the Federation's liberal secretary-treasurer, who was himself beaten for delegate, said, "We were clobbered almost everywhere." But he, like other party leaders, said he was delighted by the new selection system.

Aycock said early this morning that it would be possible to send to Miami Beach, among the four technically uncommitted delegates, a Humphrey supporter, a Jackson supporter, a Union man and a representative of the caucus.

Here, as in Iowa earlier in the week, Muskie emerged as a clear winner, but he was unable to generate the strength his managers had hoped for. In the view of political observers, he slipped a bit. Muskie came into the election with the backing of most of the State's Democrats

Sen. Edmund Muskie of Maine faces down New York City Mayor John Lindsay in Arizona. Second-ranked Lindsay (left), a liberal surprised speculators by his show of strength in a supposedly conservative state. But the question of who will win the ultimate face-down is still very much up in the air.

Mock Stocks Open to All

by Mark McLaughlin

The fourth annual Mock Stock Market of the Finance Club will begin its first day of trading today. Open to both faculty and students from Notre Dame and St. Mary's, the Market operates in order to give all interested persons "a greater understanding of the workings of this very fascinating American institution," according to a release from the Finance Club.

In return for a one-dollar entrance fee, each trader receives $10,000 credit with which he may make transactions of the Market. Stocks can be bought and sold at the price stated in the Wall Street Journal on the day of the transaction. All stocks listed on either the New York Stock Exchange, the Midwest Stock Exchange, or the Over-the-Counter Market are eligible, and the Finance Club will keep a complete record of all transactions.

The prizes in this contest will amount to a total of $150, and are to be divided in two categories, best short term appreciation and best long term profit. Active trading will continue until February 25, when all portfolios will be closed and a prize will be awarded to the contestant who has realized the largest profit. From that point on no more trading will be allowed, and on April 28 the portfolios will be examined again, with the final prize going to the person with the greatest appreciation over the three month period.

The club has not yet determined the precise amount of prize money.

The Mock Stock Market will be located in the lobby of the Hurley Building, and will be open from 10:00 until 2:00 each day Monday through Friday.

Treasurer notes financial state

by Andy Winiarczyk

Student Government Treasurer Cass Regent last night had some optimistic predictions for this year's finances. "Financially, we are in very good condition. We should end up in the black."

Regent said, "The Student Union has spent about $24,000 out of $37,500 that was appropriated by the Student Senate. That means that they will have left 35 percent of their budget for the second semester."

The Student Government has used almost $4,500 out of $15,000 that was given to them by the Student Senate. They will have 70 percent of their appropriation left for the second semester."

He added, "It is quite possible that there will be a transfer of $3-4,000 to the Student Union from Student Government. If the Union exceeds its budget. All of the other organizations on campus have received a total of $20,000 from the Senate. The Leadership Institute is the only group which to this date, has filed a financial statement." "In order to achieve a balanced budget we will just have to control our spending. aifz we can do this it will be the first time in years." In 1967 there was a debt of $22,000, in 1968, $52,700; in 1969, $73,200; in 1970, $30,100; in 1971, $13,400. The fiscal year will end on August 31

Student Center or hall facilities

The SBP was uncertain if there would be any renovation of the halls and student center over the summer. Yet, he asserted, "the commitment is there to do something."

"The new student center is inevitable," Barkett claimed. "It's an expensive building, but it will come. It's a matter of when and I think it's at least five years away."

Presently, Hall Life Commissioner. Bob Higgins is working on a facilities survey of the halls, but Barkett said that the action is to come from the Administration down.

Involvement '72

Student Government is holding Involvement '72 Night tonight in the Library Lobby between 7 and 8:30.

Display table will be set up by campus groups and students can stop to talk with people involved in the different activities.

Its purpose is to let campus activities recruit news members and to let students know what's going on this semester.

About 20 groups plan to attend including the Free University, Pakistan Relief, InPIRG, Big Brothers, Sister Marita's Day School, and the Ecology Club.

Any groups wanting a table need only show up with a sign at 7:00. Students from both campuses are more than welcome.

cover the cost of tuition and books for two nuns from Uganda, East Africa, who have recently enrolled at IUSB.

IUSB tuition currently runs to approximately $1200.00 per year.

The African nuns, Sr. Immaculata Biteeko and Sr. Agnes Kabuhire of the Daughters of St. Theresa order, will complete two years of study at IUSB to fulfill the requirements for B.S. degrees in Education. The two have articulated at colleges in Edinburgh, Scotland, and London. Their travel has been financed by the Congregation of the Holy Cross.

Srs. Biteeko and Kabuhire both expressed a desire to become headmistresses of government schools in their homeland upon graduation from IUSB. Both have experience as administrators in Ugandan schools.

While attending the university, they will stay at the Holy Cross convent at SMC.

Contributions may be sent to Mr. Marnocha or to Sr. McDermott. Checks should be made payable to the Sisters of the Holy Cross, Africa Fund.

ND student for SMC office

by Bob Lang

A Notre Dame student is the sole candidate thus far for election to the recently vacated office of Saint Mary's Student Body Vice President, election Chairman Jane Seymour revealed today.

John Gaal, a government major from Flanner Hall, made known Sunday his wish to run for the post, formerly held by Missy Underman

The question remains as to whether there will be an election.

"Right now, it's really hard to tell, but with only one candidate, it really doesn't look like there will be one" Miss Seymour said.

At a meeting of the SMC Executive Cabinet Sunday evening, it was decided that the Saint Mary's Student Assembly would take action on the matter at their next meeting., Wednesday night.

According to Miss Seymour, "there is nothing in the procedure manual against (a male) running. "The con-

Seymour: SMC election still in doubt stitution, as it now stands, calls for an election."

Miss Seymour did say, however, that "the assembly may make an addition to the procedural manual to provide for another method of selecting the interim VP, due to the extenuating circumstances."

SMC Student Body President Kathy Barlow was not available for comment.

Gaal explained the rationale behind his candidacy.

"I realize that the short duration of the term will hamper the effectiveness of whomever is elected or chosen to this position. However, I hope that the mere fact of my candidacy will pave the way for a more active interchange of ideas between the two campuses, and lead to the ultimate unification of the two Student Governments," he said.

Mardi Gras lacking

Mardi Gras is in serious trouble, according to festival chariman, Greg Stepic.

"There just isn't the great involvement by every one to help make the Mardi Gras program a success, because of this, the policy of charging admission--instituted last year-- will be continued," Stepic said.

Admission charges will vary from a dollar to fifty cents depending on the day. The final day will be free.

Stepic contended that the charge was necessary to keep the Mardi Gras festival alive.

"I hate very much to have to do this. It would be very nice not to have to handle any money at the door, however, there seems to be something missing from a few years back when Mardi Gras was making over $20,000 a year. There just isn't the great involvement by everyone to help make the program a success," Stepic said.

Many people," he added, "put forth an effort in Stepan center constructing the booths that are set up and its a shame that their efforts and the efforts of myself and my committee may have to be in vain if this year's Mardi Gras is not a success."

Stepic blamed poor raffle ticket sales for the bad financial position of the festival. $3,000 worth of tickets have been sold to date.

While Stepic conceded that this result was parallel to last year's performance which he termed a success, "this may not be the case this year."

"I have indications which lead me to believe that this will not be the case. With overhead of approximately $15,000 Mardi Gras is once again in danger of losing money as it did three years ago," Stepic predicted.

InPIRG to seek funds next week

Notre Dame's chapter of the Indiana Public Interest Research Group (INPIRG) is organizing a campaign in the various halls that will be in full swing by February 14, according to leader Bill Rahner.

Consumer advocate Ralph Nader, who conceived the idea behind INPIRG, will appear on campus Thursday, Feb. 17th at 8 pm in Stephan Center. His talk is being sponsored by the Student Union Academic Commission.

The chapter plans to petition the administration to add a $3 per year fee to student tuition bills to hire lawyers and other experts to work for INPIRG.

Other Indiana colleges including Indiana University and Purdue, are presently participating in INPIRG and are planning similar drives. If all the colleges agree to add the $3 fee the state fund would total $300,000 per year, according to Rahner.

A student board consisting of two representatives from each participating Indiana school will be elected to hire the professionals and assign projects to them, Rahner said.

Results would be achieved by publishing their findings, lobbying for their causes, or, if necessary, taking cases to court. Similar programs already underway in Oregon and Minnesota have hired workers at $9,500 salary per year.

What ever happened to the university

What ever happened to the university which claimed its role to be the education of students for a mature and responsible role in society? Where are those who praised openness, honesty and integrity as virtues to be encouraged here? Certainly not in ad hoc committees who reverse policy decisions at whim, or in meetings to coordinate class schedules with dining hall facilities, or in offices making threats to intimidate students and student organizations when these set out to conduct a legitimate investigation of obscure practices. And what about dining hall managers who bring up a pet paranoia in order to cover up for administrative inability to stay within their budgets...to the further inconvenience of students? Let's include them, too, lest the "costs of education" suffer another astronomical increase while salaries are further squeezed in order to make ends meet. Whether we call such events 'spades', or follow certain trends and settle for 'agricultural implements' as a safe and vague and non-committal definition, the diagnostic is the same: we are all matriculated in a very, very, very sick institution, or pair of institutions.

Here are two religious orders, presumably related in name, but nevertheless branches of that great conglomerate and accumulator of wealth which issues sermons and doctrines of service and solidarity from a city called the Vatican. Two orders, struggling against the world and each other to divert their attention from the death pangs of their own organization as well as those caused by the gradual emancipation of the institutions which they have nursed for several generations. Here is also an assembly of both clerical and lay directors, officers, administrators, and staff characterized by the extraordinary competence of a few, the extraordinary incompetence of many, and the run-of-the-mill mediocrity of many more.

And here is the fruit of many hopes, many dreams, and many hours of devoted work and study: a miscarriage.

Alluring promises of an academic merger have proven false, and those who matriculated at Saint Mary's College with hopes of a Notre Dame degree find they were naive enough to deposit confidence where it was not to be placed. Being naive is no crime or fault, but a stage of development everyone passes through during the gradual acquisition of knowledge towards an informed judgment. The crime and fault, however, may well rest upon the shoulders of those who profess a dedication to providing the means for developing such a judgment, and yet seek to pull the wool over the eyes of their students.

As a university, we can place no claim to academic excellence as long as the basic principles taught here are overtly violated by administrative policies, and policy reversals. Students in both schools are taught elements of psychology, sociology, management, business ethics, and a healthy share of common sense only to leave the classroom and find more than the number of exceptions required to prove the rule.

Now a promised merger has fallen through because of an evident lack of ability -- on at least one side -- to set reasonable terms. Granted that financial terms are difficult to set and meet, budgets must be revised and adjusted, depts paid, etc. -- but these have been disclaimed, or rather evaded, as the issue at point during last week's meeting, and personnel problems have become the excuse. Such an explanation doesn't seem to hold water. The merger has been built up as a means of survival for both institutions, and unless there has been more than the usual amount of demagogism in this build up, it hardly seems to be reasonable to imperil the whole for the sake of a few personnel. Quite to the contrary, such a reorganization would provide a unique opportunity to relieve this ailing community of some of the dead weight responsible for blunders such as those mentioned above.

Hopefully, in their next meeting both parties will show some awareness of their responsibilities towards both institutions, private education, and Catholic education as a whole, and be able to cope with the personal sacrifices required to demonstrate the authenticity of their dedication. Maybe with a little 'give and take' in settling existing differences something constructive can be expected.

During one of the recent confrontations, a university official allegedly claimed that students were not mature enough to understand the reasons for the failure to reach an agreement on this merger. Many students resent this type of paternalism towards themselves, and towards the faculty, who were no less informed, or misinformed. As a simple matter of fact, the outcome to date seems to indicate that immaturity lies elsewhere. The whole affair parallels a gathering of two groups of children, each with its own set of rules for the game, and neither willing to part with the obsession of leading and winning the game. Unable to discuss terms maturely, both groups picked up their toys and stormed out of the playground. (Was it, perchance, that the "personnel problems" involved personnel present at the meeting?) Needless to say, we can all expect some bickering about one group running off with another's toys. In any course of events, neither side lost, and neither side won, and the game was never played. Of course the students of both institutions lost, but students are students, they come here to college, dish out a few thousand dollars, and go. That's all.

There are only two ways to stimulate some action from the Notre Dame and St. Mary's bureaucracies: legal action, and adverse publicity. Confrontations are but confrontations, and usually result in nothing more than inspiring rhetoric and tiring demagogism -- yes, more of that. Boycotts may or may not prove that the limits of student tolerance have been surpassed, but they definitely will increase the burden of upcoming final exams. And demonstrations will most probably produce nothing more than a few fifteen-minute martyrs.

Legal action is in this case groundless, for false advertising is rampant in our society, and there's no such animal as a 'straight' college recruiter to be found anywhere. Publicity then remains as a course of action. This will be difficult within the radius of Notre Dame's influence, but this influence does not extend to everyone's home town newspaper. This is not a simple task, for it requires the translation of voiced concern into action, and too often in the past this translation has proven to be inefficient.

There are many ways in which such a campaign can be carried out, and in times of need we have found no match for the resourcefulness and creativity, so I shall make no pretense of strategic leadership.

In conclusion, I would like to point out that both administrations have demonstrated a rather cavalier attitude towards the entire problem of coeducation, failing to discern between the task of education and that of coercing the student into a frame of moral and religious conduct. They have failed to make any but a token effort to recruit some of the professional expertise available among their faculties in order to exercise a true religious leadership in the community, simply because power and control are autonomous to this objective. This is indeed a very unfortunate situation, but hopefully, when both administrations iron out their differences regarding the merger, they will be able to channel their efforts towards the true goals of Catholic education.

Devotedly in Notre Dame,

P.S. - my apologies for remaining anonymous, but my untenured position is quite vulnerable to administrative retaliation, and I would much rather have certain personalities devote their energy towards the soul-searching this letter is intended to inspire.

Pearl Lang:natural movement

Somewhere in the archives of our minds, often haphazardly stored beneath "theatre" is a genus "dance", including such species as jazz, ballet and modern. Of these, the last is ironically the least familiar. Tomorrow evening, however, at O'Laughlin Auditorium there will be presented a singular opportunity to view modern dance, with the appearance of the Pearl Lang Dance Company, one of the leading four or five modern troupes in the United States.

Formerly a celebrated dancer with Martha Graham, Miss Lang organized her company in 1952. Since that time, she has also choreographed over thirty-five works, both for her own troupe and for other American companies, as well as for the Netherlands National Ballet and the Batsheva Dance Company of Israel. The compositions emphasize the traditional elements of modern dance, rather than extreme or controversial technique, and are thus accessible to the ingenué as well as to the acclimatized dance viewer. Nevertheless, that for which Lang work is renowned is the brilliantly original organization of those "classical" modern dance movements into a whole.

Several of the pieces, such as one called "Shirah", make great use of ritual in biblical dance drama. Some are futuristic with electronic music, while other, less exotic ones include classical music.

One of the most widely performed works is an adaptation of Brecht's "Mother Courage and Her Children" entitled "The Brood", which combines music of the 1940's with masked figures in an anti-war production. All of the compositions, however, illustrate the technical prowess of an excellently-trained group.

The music and natural movement of modern dance can artlessly bind space with time, and it is probably that the adept Pearl Lang company will accomplish that in their performance here. The experience should be a very exciting one.

The Rap Center is a switchboard and referral service helping people with a wide variety of hassles. A training course for volunteers will be held during a two-week period beginning on January 31. Persons interested in working at the center and talking to people should sign up at 209 Western Avenue or call 289-7986.

Jung:Life and Work

From the Life and Work of C. G. Jung: Aniela Jaffe, Harper and Row, New York, 1971. 137 pp. $2.25.

Aniela Jaffe's book shows once more that a package cannot be judged by its size. In four brief essays about C. G. Jung she has lifted our picture of this man and his work off of the ordinary person's flat canvass to give it dimension and perspective. Each of these studies takes up some aspect of Jung's life and thought which is either little understood or misunderstood--subjects which the author is well qualified to discuss. For twenty years she worked in analysis with Jung, as secretary of the C. G. Jung Institute in Zurich, and during his last years as Jung's private secretary, and as editor of Jung's biographical reflections, Memories, Dreams, Reflections. The present slim volume is a much needed, most adequate companion and addition to her former work.

The first two essays are of immense value to anyone interested in religion. Here the findings of the most impressive modern student of the parapsychological are carefully and clearly detailed. For the first time Jung's comments on these strange reaches of the human mind, references which are found scattered throughout twenty volumes of his collected works, are gathered together by a competent student. If parapsychology has theological implications, no theologian interested in an empirical theology can afford to miss this study.

Jung believed that there is empirical evidence, derived non-experimentally, for the reality of an autonomous, non-physical organizing factor which affects both the human psyche and soma. Men, he found, come to wholeness and maturity only as they relate to this reality, and to the parapsychological phenomena that often accompany it. These conclusions were influenced by Jung's study of alchemy, which offered historical evidence of experiences similar to those of Jung and his patients. Mrs. Jaffe provides a simple and definitive analysis of Jung's study of alchemy and its relation to parapsychology.

Her last two chapters are of particular interest to those who are already fascinated by Jung as a person. She offers a most comprehensive study of Jung's controversial stand towards Nazi Germany during World War II, showing that neither the critics nor his devotees have dealt with what actually happened. Jung, as she delineates, was never a Nazi sympathizer. Instead, during the first years of the Nazi revolution he made a serious error in judgment, and this, in fact, was one thing that he always regretted.

In the concluding essay Mrs. Jaffe tells what it was like to be Jung's secretary. The explosive and touchy side of Jung is described, as well as his incredible intuition and kindness, and thus she leaves us with a disarmingly honest and human portrait of a great man. No one interested in Jung or in empirical religion can afford to pass up reading this little book.

Grapplers pin John Carroll in final match

by T.C. Treanor

A second-period pin by massive freshman heavyweight Mike Fanning earned the once-beaten Notre Dame wrestling team a dramatic 22-21 victory over previously undefeated John Carroll University.

Swimmers split pair

The Notre Dame swim team split this weekend in dual meet action, beating Bradley University, Friday, 59-46, and losing to Illinois State, Saturday afternoon, 66-47.

The Irish tankers took seven first place ribbons out of the twelve events, in the victory over Bradley.

The most important first place finish came in the 400 yard freestyle relay. Had the Irish lost that event, the Bradley swimmers would have left the Rockne pool with a victory instead of a loss.

But the ND quartet of Jim Meagher, Joe O'Connor, Jim Kane and Gene Krathaus, took the event, and in record time. The clocking of 3:23.8 gave the Irish the victory as well as the meet record.

All told, seven meet records were set in the competition, three Fanning's victory, his twelfth consecutive pin, came on the heels of 190 pound Al Rocok's 12-2 triumph over Larry Dulay. The ten-point victory won Notre Dame four team points at a time when they trailed John Carroll by nine, 21-12.

of those by Coach Stark's swimmers.

Other Irish first place finishes were recorded by Jim Kane, 200 yard freestyle, Gene Krathaus, 50 yard freestyle, Mike Fahey, 200 yard butterfly, Joe O'Connor, 500 yard freestyle, Jim Fisher in the 200 yard breaststroke, and Larry LaFratta in 3-meter diving.

Saturday was a different story. Joe O'Connor paced the Irish with two blue ribbons, but didn't receive much support from the rest of the Irish.

O'Connor captured the 500 yard freestyle, and swam in the 400 yard freestyle team that copped a first in that event.

Two other ND swimmers joined O'Connor in the winner's circle, Jim Kane in the 100 yard freestyle, and John Balthrop, who won the 200 yard backstroke.

The weekend action left Notre Dame with a 4-2 record.

Team captain Ken Ryan, wrestling at 150 pounds, and 126 pound Steve Moylan won Notre Dame's other twelve points via pins. Ryan pinned Bill Collins one minute and thirty seconds into the third period, and Moylan, now 9-2 in dual meets, pinned Jack Hague 43 seconds into the second period.

But it was the 6'6", 265 pound Fanning who thrilled the large crowd in the ACC's auxiliary gym and who won the match for the Irish. Fanning, a defensive lineman on the Irish football team, pinned 6'4", 245 pound Ed Floyed after 36 seconds of the second period.

The other six matches went to the Ohioans. Jim Trausch pinned ND's Bill Moran 1:49 into the second stanza of their 167 pound match, and Carroll won five matches by decision. John Morabito outpointed Mike Martin at 118.3-0; Tom Mulhall downed Rich Esposto 6-3 at 134; 142 pounder Dan Weir decisioned Curt Brambel 4-2; Mark Hummer topped Mike Kemp at 158, 8-3 and 177 pound Tom Corbo was a 7-2 winner after Rich Galoon.

The victory made Notre Dame 8-1. John Carroll is now 7-1.

Trackmen top Miami

by John Wick

The Notre Dame track team breezed to victory over Miami of Ohio Saturday by a score of 87-44. Despite the absence of Mike McMannon and other team members because of illness, the Irish succeeded in placing in all of the events, showing, in coach Alex Wilson's words, "a highly competitive team effort".

In the field events, freshman Greg Cortina put the shot to a new school record of 59'8" with Ellio Polselli taking second place. Kevin McAuliffe managed a first in the long jump and later placed second in the triple jump behind teammate Tom McMannon.

The sprinters, led by freshman football player Erie Penick, swept all of their events. Penick took first in the 60-yard dash with a time of 6.3 seconds. Rick Vallicelli and Bob Washington were second and third, respectively. In the 300-yard event, Penick again picked up a first place as Vallicelli finished third. Tom McMannon tied the meet record of 7.4 seconds in the 60-yard high hurdles with Pat Mullaly and Mike Dimick placing second and third.

The Irish showed their strength in the middle distances with Marty Hill and freshman Mike Gahagan placing first and third in the one mile event. Gahagan later returned to take first in the 880, just ahead of Gene Mercer.

Erie Penick

Earlier, Mercer took a first in the 1000-yard run, easily outdistancing the Miami runners. Sophomore Don Creehan and Bill Phillips finished first and second in the 6000-yard dash.

The Irish, now 1-0, will be in action again next weekend, meeting Ohio State Saturday in Columbus.

Lost weekend for Digger, Lefty

UCLA, Illini drub cagers

by Vic Dorr

According to Digger Phelps, Notre Dame has the number one student body in the country. According to the International Cheerleading Foundation, Notre Dame has the number one college cheerleaders in the country. But according to virtually everyone, UCLA has the number one college basketball team in the country. And Saturday afternoon the Bruins showed why.

Playing in front of a sellout Convocation Center crowd of 11,343, the Bruins shrugged off every offensive and defensive wrinkle that Irish coach Digger Phelps could throw at them, and ended up with a 57-32 victory, their 16th in a row this season.

The Irish opened the game by battling UCLA's pressing man-to-man defense with a press of their own, and by working the ball slowly and deliberately on offense. Relying on this strategy, and taking advantage of some early UCLA turnovers, the Irish were able to stay just about even with the Bruins, and trailed by only 17-13 at the 10:00 mark in the first half.

But during the second ten minutes of the first period, UCLA began displaying the explosiveness that has become their trademark. Tommy Curtis and Tom O'Mara traded field goals, but then two quick buckets by Henry Bibby and one by 6-11 Bill Walton moved the Bruins into a 25-15 advantage. Bibby dropped in a pair of free throws to make it 27-15 at the 7:04 mark, and when Willie Townsend picked up his third personal just 34 seconds later, Phelps decided to go with a stall.

"We played them once before," remembered Phelps, "and got beat by 58. I felt that they were about ready to explode against us again, so I decided to go with our 1-2-2 spread. We wanted to try to contain them for ten or 15 minutes, and then take it from there. The 1-2-2 did enable us to cut their lead to eight and got back into the game, but Bibby scored right at the half, and that hurt."

The Irish 1-2-2 was an offensive set which cleared the left side of the floor and let Gary Novak work one-on-one against UCLA's Walton. Novak, only occasionally passing off, would feint toward the basket and then would retreat out beyond the top of the key, only to turn and make another move at Walton.

Notre Dame started the stall at 6:30 in the first half, and they stayed in it for the remainder of the period. Novak popped in a short jumper at 3:31, and drew a foul from Walton just 40 seconds later. The 6-7 sophomore converted both free throws to pull the Irish within eight, 27-19. But a fielder by Walton and a buzzer basket by Bibby moved the Bruins into a 12-point halftime lead.

"Our plan at halftime was to hold the ball until eight minutes remained," explained Phelps, "Then we were going to go all out to try to win it. Our strategy was dependent on whether Walton would come out to pick up Novak, or whether Wooden would make some other adjustment."

Wooden, the UCLA coach, did consider an adjustment, but he eventually decided against it. "I never did consider bringing Walton out when we had the lead," he said. "I did consider bringing in a faster man and using the zone trap, but then I just decided to sit back and wait."

And wait the Bruins did. A backdoor bucket by Larry Farmer put the Bruins up, 33-19, and then Novak went to work on Walton again, dribbling in and out for nearly seven minutes until he finally drove the lane and scored.

Irish turnovers helped the Bruins stretch their lead to 15 with ten minutes to play, and Phelps was forced to abandon the stall then—rather than at the eight minute mark. And the Bruins, as Phelps had feared, exploded. They held the Irish scoreless until only 5:05 remained, and scored 12 points themselves during this span. Wooden's substitutes ran the score to its final 57-32 spread.

Henry Bibby had 15 points, Bill Walton 12, and Larry Farmer ten for the Bruins. Walton and Swen Nater each grabbed seven rebounds for the UCLA's. ND's Gary Novak was the high scorer for the game with 16 points, and Tom O'Mara followed him with ten. Novak also led the Irish in rebounding with six.

The loss to UCLA was Notre Dame's eleventh setback of the season and second of the weekend. On Friday night, the Irish traveled to Chicago Stadium, where they absorbed an 81-59 defeat at the hands of Illinois.

Phelps' team missed their first six tries from the floor, and 11 of their first 12, but trailed the Illini by only 16-12 at the 8:00 mark in the first half. During the next seven minutes, though, the Irish could collect only four points on a goaltending call and two free throws, and fell behind by 35-16.

The Illini raced to a 27-point lead, 58-31, with 12 minutes left to play in the game, and Coach Harv Schmidt's crew just coasted from there. Nick Weatherspoon paced the Illini with 26 points, and Nick Connor had 17 rebounds for the winners.

Gary Novak had 16 points and eight rebounds to lead the Irish in both departments, and Tom O'Mara had 12 points.

The Irish cagers have completed the roughest weekend on their schedule, but there is no rest in store for them. The team will play Michigan State in East Lansing tomorrow night, and will return to the ACC Thursday night against the West Virginia Mountaineers.

Frosh win fourth straight

by Joe Passiatore

The Notre Dame freshmen basketball team placed five men in double figures en route to their fourth consecutive win, a 108-85 conquest of Southwest Michigan, Saturday afternoon.

Once again the backcourt tandem of Gary Brokaw and Dwight Clay did most of the damage for the Leprechauns. Each had 17 points at halftime and Brokaw finished the game with 32, Clay with 23. Pete Crotty supplemented their attack with 14 points. Tom Varga contributed 13 and Bedford Bruno tallied 11.

Notre Dame was able to establish superiority over the Roadrunners early, as they built a ten point lead, 21-11, at 13:46 of

Badgers beat icers twice; Irish fall to 7-9 in WCHA

by Jim Donaldson
Sports Editor

Notre Dame was able to handle the East's top team earlier this season, but they couldn't handle the best in the West last weekend, dropping a pair of 5-3 decisions to the WCHA-leading Wisconsin Badgers at the ACC.

The Irish icers had handed Cornell, considered by many to be the top hockey team in the East, a 5-4 overtime defeat back on Jan. 10, but were unable to come up with a victory against Bob Johnson's classy Badgers.

Wisconsin fought back from a three-goal deficit to top the Irish on Friday night and Gary Winchester scored four goals to lead the Badgers to victory Saturday.

The Badgers upped their WCHA record to 15-3 with the twin triumphs and now have 38 title points. They are 19-3 overall. The Irish were unable to add to their total of 22 title points as their record fell to 7-9 in league play and 11-11 on the season.

The Irish came out skating hard Friday night and played a near perfect first period, building up a 3-0 lead over the Badgers, who hadn't played in two weeks because of first semester examinations.

John Campbell got things started for the Irish at 9:58, banging in a rebound of a shot by Eddie Bumbacco. Larry Israelson followed suit 69 seconds later when a shot from the right point by Mark Steinborn hit off Badger goalie Jim Makey to Israelson, 10 feet in front, and the soph left winger flipped the puck into the open left side of the net.

Notre Dame moved in front 3-0 with a power play goal at 19:11 as John Noble tipped in an off speed shot from the right side by Paul Regan.

Things were different in the second period, however, as the Badgers came roaring back to take the lead with a four-goal outburst.

Lloyd Bentley put the Badgers on the scoreboard at 5:37, driving a 35-foot slap shot by Irish goalie Dick Tomasoni.

Gary Kuklinski made it 3-2, 7:53 into the period and Pat Lannan tied the score at 13:04, hitting the twine with a rebound of a shot by Winchester.

The Irish had a chance to regain their lost lead and momentum when the Badgers' Jim Johnston was sent to the penalty box thirty seconds after Lannan's goal but, instead, it was Wisconsin that came up with the big play, scoring while short-handed.

The first half. The taller Irish had all the better of it in the rebounding phase of the game and were able to limit Southwest Michigan to just one shot on offense in the early going. By the time Frank Allocco fed Brokaw for an easy lay-up at 5:30, the lead had ballooned to 41-21.

At this point, Skip Miller caught fire for the Roadrunners and was instrumental in reducing his team's deficit to 47-35, with two minutes left in the half. Dwight Clay then began to connect from the outside and he negated Southwest Michigan's hot shooting. At intermission Notre Dame led 55-43.

Brokaw and Clay went to work in earnest at the outset of the second half, Brokaw driving the lane and Clay connecting on Stan Hinkley provided the heroics for the Badgers, gaining possession of the puck at his own blue line and breaking in alone on the N.D. net. Tomasoni came out to meet Hinkley but the Badger winger faked past the Irish goalie and deposited the puck into an empty net for what proved to be the winning goal.

The Irish outshot Wisconsin 13-7 in the final period, but it was the Badgers who registered the only goal, Jim Young picking up an insurance goal at 8:30.

In the second game of the series, the Badgers' duo of Winchester and goalie Dick Perkins were too much for the Irish. Winchester was the game's offensive standout, picking up a first period hat trick and scoring what proved to be the winning goal in the final stanza, while Perkins, playing his first game since being injured in late November, shone on defense, stopping 37 Irish shots.

Winchester started started his scoring spree at 7:38, driving a 40-footer from the left side past a screened Tomasoni. He picked up his second goal at 16:39, speeding down the left wing and whipping a shot into the far right side of the net while the Irish were short-handed.

Winchester's third goal also came on a power play. The Calgary, Alta., sophomore completed his hat trick at 18:59, drilling home a shot from the left point.

The Irish came battling back in the second period and cut the Badger lead to 3-2 on goals by Bumbacco and Ric Schaffer.

Bumbacco scored on a power play, taking a perfect pass from Ian Williams in front of the Badger net and deflecting the puck over Perkins. Schaffer, standing 15 feet in front of the cage, got a stick on a slap shot from the right point by Steinborn and deflected the puck past Perkins, caught leaning the wrong way.

Winchester gave the Badgers a two-goal bulge again at 4:41 of the third period when he backhanded a 15-footer past Tomasoni but Regan kept the Irish comeback hopes alive with a shorthanded goal at 5:48.

The Irish kept the pressure on the rest of the way but were unable to come up with the equalizer. Wisconsin's Jeff Rotsch decided the issue at 19:40, shooting the puck into an open net from his own blue line after the Irish had pulled Tomasoni in favor of a sixth skater in an attempt to tie the score.

medium range jumpers. Notre Dame opened up an 82-53 margin at 11:11 on a Pete Crotty bank shot and it was obvious that the Roadrunners weren't going to be

The final minutes of the game were marred by an abundance of turnovers as the Roadrunners attempted to make their defeat a bit more respectable. They weren't too successful, however, and the contest ended with the score 108-85.

Notre Dame outrebounded Southwest Michigan 55-42, and outshot the Roadrunners 53 percent to 45 percent. The turnover discrepancy wasn't much of a factor, as Notre Dame had 19 compared to the 22 committed by Southwest Michigan. The victory boosted the frosh record to 6-3.

Russo claims American people defrauded

The government of the United States is "guilty of conspiracy", according to Anthony Russo, keynote speaker of the Conference on Conspiracy and Dissent. Russo, speaking Friday, also claimed that the government has "defrauded the American people and the world."

David Dellinger was originally scheduled to speak in the keynote slot, but when he cancelled out due to illness, Russo was contacted to fill his place. Russo is co-defendant with Daniel Ellsberg in the Pentagon Papers affair.

Russo extended his attacks to the U.S. judicial system, particularly the structure and purpose of the Grand Jury set-up. He claimed that as they now stand, "the Grand Jury is the foremost arm of the police state".

Russo also called the indictment he shared with Ellsberg "sheer fabrication". He also contended, that the government had a weak case against Ellsberg and himself.

The indictment was for conspiring to defraud the United States Government. Reading directly from the indictment, Russo said that he conspired "by impairing, obstructing, and defeating its lawful government functions of controlling the dissemination of classified government studies".

Ellsberg's co-defendant said that it was the government which was guilty of conspiracy. "Everything is backward," he said. "The government is charging us with conspiracy when they are the defrauder."

"The government is guilty of lies, secrecy, and deceit. A kind of establishment LSD, only their's is a mind contractor," he stated. Russo quoted the lawyer who defended Sacco and Vanzetti who said that "the extent to which a government relies upon secrecy is the extent to which that government is a tryannt."

The speaker called the Grand Jury "an arm against the movement". He contended that "the criminals are the ones doing the prosecuting. The government is using the Grand Jury against us to further their tryannical goals."

Russo said that the juries work to collect data to be used "against the movement" in two ways. He objected to the use of the subpoena to question people behind "closed doors." He also accused the Grand Jury of being a "sweatbox" for third degree interrogation.

The Grand Jury, according to Russo is just a collection of "warm bodies". "They are the tools of the prosecution," he said.

Russo said the government used the immunity system "to go back on it's work". Russo said he was given transactional immunity which, he said, is supposed to protect him from all prosecution, before the government indicted him

Russo claimed that "you don't have to do anything unlawful" to be guilty of conspiracy. All it involves, according to Russo, is "just talking about an act that is wrongful".

Russo: Verdict: guilty for U.S. for "defrauding the American people"

Russo called the Pentagon papers that they are a "pamphlet for the new American revolution". "You've gotta decide where you stand and what you stand for," he continued, "If you don't stand for something, you'll fall for anything."

Rhodesia attacked

Blacks condemn treatment

by James Dixon

The Black Unity Conference of South Bend last Thursday, issued a statement condemning the treatment of Black Africans by the Ian Smith regime in Rhodesia. The statement was signed by former council Endesha Hamisi Alimayu.

In the statement the conference demanded that "...the U.S.A. severe its economic ties to this racist country, as it saw fit to do against Cuba." The statement also asked that the United States come out against Ian Smith, "the Hitler, who is raising his ugly head in 1972." Finally the conference affirmed its support of the Africans "in their struggle to be free of white domination."

The statement is a result of the recent turmoil in Rhodesia in which eight Black Africans were killed and two members of the African National Council were imprisoned. The riots stemmed from a dispute over a recently signed pact between Rhodesia and Great Britain.

According to Alimayu the main objective of the Black Unity Conference will now be to "have the public know the situation in Rhodesia." He suggested that supporters write to the United Nations in behalf of the African cause.
