

At faculty address

Hesburgh cites universities' role

by Valerie Zurblis
Senior Staff Reporter

In the annual faculty address, University President Fr. Theodore Hesburgh said that universities are obligated to prepare people so that they can face today's problems.

"Universities have been the center of the growth of knowledge, culture, and civilization. Moral judgement and spiritual responsibility are needed," stated Hesburgh to the crowd of over 200 in Washington Hall.

Hesburgh pointed out that human rights, liberation and peace came about without the aid of the universities. He said that those prepared by the universities must lead the way, intellectually and morally.

"In the present and future, the universities can no longer attend to the mind alone." The traditional transmitters of morality, such as the family and the Church, will need the universities because problems are no longer central to the individual. "The problems of men and women are not to merely survive, but all serious problems are global," Hesburgh said.

Hesburgh gave some examples of intelligent people using unsound judgement, such as lawyers giving unfair trials, scientists creating weapons that can kill off mankind, and businessmen who will do anything for a profit.

"I predict the future University won't be permitted to remain morally neutral. There are problems that cannot be solved by scientific technology," Hesburgh emphasized.

"My deep conviction, because of the scarcity of persons needed, is that we need to develop such persons ourselves, and that Notre Dame shouldn't be alone to look for them," stated Hesburgh.

Hesburgh called for the need of endowment in certain areas of the university. Student financial aide, especially minority and graduate students, financial resources, especially in the science area and great teaching are "definite contours to every great university."

Hesburgh made two predictions for the future. The first was that many changes are to come. "You can no more visualize the changes now than you could visualize today in the year 1925," commented Hesburgh. The second was that these changes would confront mankind with moral challenges.

In light of these, Hesburgh made two more predictions, namely that universities will be at the heart of generally preparing people for these changes and that a special university is needed to direct change so that humans don't destroy themselves.

"The University still needs great people and it will continue to grow. The new vision needs resources, finances and people, more than is now available. A sense of values differs between moral and intellectual problems."

Hesburgh then pointed out that there will be a compulsory senior values seminar implemented by his deciding vote.

Affirmative Action

Hesburgh explained that Notre Dame does have an Affirmative Action plan and it was one of the few that is approved. As of last June, only 30 schools had approved plans.

"We're totally committed to this plan," said University President. "Many people make the decisions to find and appoint qualified people for the faculty. It has to be something we're all committed to."

In the past year, the number of faculty women has increased from 41 to 61. The undergraduate women have grown from 365 four years ago to 1350 today.

"It's obvious to all that our progress in bringing women professors to the university lags behind bringing women to the university," commented Hesburgh.

'Rules violated'

SMC election invalidated

by Jean Powley
Staff Reporter

As a result of alleged campaign violations, St. Mary's freshmen will vote in a second primary election for class officers Wednesday.

Violations involved campaigning on election day, turning in one platform after the deadline, posting signs in Madeleva Hall and posting too many signs in LeMans Hall, and the removal of each other's campaign posters by opponents.

The first primary was held last Wednesday, with the run-off scheduled for Friday, Oct. 17.

However, St. Mary's Student Body President Joan McDermott called for a new election when she learned of the alleged campaign violations.

McDermott explained that nullifying previous election results and calling for a new election are within her jurisdiction since, as student body president, she has the final decision on any policy.

Kathy Carrigan, election commissioner at the time of the election, said that she knew of the campaign violations but didn't think that they were serious enough to warrant drastic action. She had planned, however, to enforce the rules more strictly in the final election.

Carrigan Resigns

She has since resigned her position because she felt her authority had been superseded when McDermott called for the new election.

Mary Lou Billek, vice-president for student affairs, is now acting elections commissioner.

The five presidential candidates almost unanimously agreed that the campaign rules had not been made clear to them.

One candidate, Terry Touhy, said that she was glad that if there was something wrong with the previous election that it was going to be corrected.

However, she commented she was unsure of how to go about campaigning a second time, expressing fear that the class would be disillusioned and would not vote again.

Rules Not Clear

Debbie Spangler, another presidential hopeful, said that she knew that no one deliberately violated the rules.

Spangler explained the regulations hadn't been made clear in the beginning.

Another candidate, Jerri Plumb, felt that the new election was fair and just because it seemed that every ticket had a violation.

She also felt that the rules had not been explained well enough.

Hilaire Thomas, winner in the primary, explained that the reason for the mix up was the "stupidity of the election commissioner." She didn't make the rules clear.

The remaining candidate, Paula Carroll, disagreed.

"Everyone had access to the rules and anyone who violated them should have been disciplined. This new election is more of a slap on the wrist than discipline," she explained.

Election commissioner Carrigan expressed a similar view.

"I posted the campaign rules at various places around campus; they were available in my room; and I explained them to each candidate over the phone," she said.

Freshmen React

Freshman reaction has varied.

"I cared about it (the election) at one point, but now, forget it," was one opinion.

Another student felt that the rules should have been made clearer from the beginning. Yet another student felt that the election "wasn't organized and the rules weren't made clear."

Five-year grain deal set by U.S., Russia

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House announced Monday a five-year grain deal with the Soviet Union providing for the purchase of at least six million metric tons of wheat and corn annually at prevailing market prices.

Officials estimated the deal's worth at about $1 billion a year. It was hailed by President Ford as "a positive step" in relations between the two superpowers and one that would benefit American farmers, workers and consumers.

In a parallel move, the Soviet Union agreed to offer for sale 200,000 barrels of crude oil and other petroleum products a day over the five-year period. Negotiations on final terms are to be completed later this month.

There was no immediate indication on whether the oil would be sold below the cartel price fixed by the 13-nation Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC). But Frank Zarb, head of the Federal Energy Administration, hinted at a discount, saying "we need to have beneficial terms."

Even though the Russian oil represents a fraction of daily U.S. imports of some 5.8 million barrels, the administration sought a cut-rate price as a sign to OPEC that it cannot wholly dominate prices on the world market.

With the announcement, President Ford lifted the moratorium he imposed last summer on grain sales after a poor Russian harvest led to the purchase of 9.8 million metric tons from American exporters. According to some economists, this probably will result in a jump of consumer prices here over the next few months.

Simultaneously, AFL-CIO

President George Meany said the International Longshoremen's Association dropped its embargo on loading grain for Soviet ports. "This is good news for American consumers and farmers," Meany said of the deal.

The terms provide for the following:

1. The Soviet Union will buy a minimum of six million metric tons of wheat and corn each year with an option to buy an additional two million tons without government-to-government consultation.

2. The U.S. government reserved the right to reduce the quantity to be sold in any one crop year if the estimated total U.S. grain stockpile is less than 225 million tons.

3. The deal begins Oct. 1, 1976, and runs to Sept. 30, 1981.

4. The Soviets promise to try to space their purchases and shipments as evenly as possible over each year and that any additional sales undertaken from the current crop will not be of such a volume to disrupt the U.S. market.

Secretary of Agriculture Earl Butz estimated additional grain sales this year would amount to no more than seven million metric tons since the Russians have been buying from other sources during the American moratorium. He said the overall impact on bread prices would be "negligible," amounting to about one penny on a 45-cent loaf.

The current U.S. feed grain crop, which does not include corn and wheat, is 183.6 million metric tons. Corn production is at a record 145.7 million metric tons with wheat also at a record 58.2 million tons.

NEW YORK, NEW YORK (AP) - Gov. Hugh L. Carey, meeting Monday with the state board that controls New York City's finances, said the panel is striving to cut the city's deficit-ridden budget while firing the fewest possible number of municipal employees.

Carey said members had reached "substantial agreement" on how to get thousands of persons off the payroll as painlessly as possible.

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) - Spain asked the Security Council on Monday to call urgently upon King Hassan II of Morocco to hold up a proposed march of 350,000 unarmed civilians into mineral-rich disputed Spanish Sahara.

Costa Rica offered a resolution supporting the Spanish request, but Moroccan Ambassador Driss Slaoui urged the council to postpone debate indefinitely to await negotiations among the parties to settle the problem.

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Ford is suffering from a sinus cold and slight fever that kept him from the Oval Office Monday for the first time since he became president.

Press Secretary Ron Nessen, who announced Ford's illness, said the President "generally feels good except for nasal congestion and coughing," and gave assurances there was nothing more seriously wrong.

Collective bargaining to be discussed Thursday

by Joe Gill
Staff Reporter

Fred Hueppe, a professor at St. John's University, will address members of the faculty on the pros and cons of collective bargaining Thursday evening at the University Club.

James Cushing, chairman of the Faculty Senate committee on collective bargaining, said "Professor Hueppe was in on the beginning processes of collective bargaining at St. John's and is very active in it."

"Professor Hueppe will be given the opportunity to present what processes are involved, and what is good or bad about them," he stated.

The meeting is sponsored by the American Association of University Professors (AAUP) as a result of a bill passed at a Faculty Senate meeting last month.

The bill provided that two speakers from campuses which participate in collective bargaining and one speaker from the National chapter of the AAUP would address the Faculty Senate.

Hueppe is the first of these speakers.

The meeting will begin at 7:30, and the format includes Hueppe's speech, a panel discussion and a general question period. Cushing said that the panel is "prepared to ask questions that are both pro and con collective bargaining."

John Houch, one of the members of the panel, pointed out, "The purpose of the meeting is informational, and each faculty member will later have to decide for himself about what choice is best for this university, as opposed to St. John's."

United Way auction held to be tonight in SMC dining hall

by Kathy Byrne
Staff Reporter

St. Mary's College will hold its third annual auction money for the United Way Fund tonight during dinner in the Dining Hall.

"I can't say enough about the merits of the cause" said Cathy Coyne, student chairperson of the event.

Some of the items to be auctioned off are steak dinners for two at The Library, Ponderosa, The Mark and Albert Pick; an antique beer keg from the 100 Center; gift certificates from Pier One, Dainty Maid, Jennifer's and McDonald's.

Dr. Mark Bambenek, chemistry professor will serve as auctioneer. There will be many other items auctioned including several cases of beer. Only administration and faculty members are eligible to bid on the beer.

"The prospect of faculty fighting over the beer will hopefully initiate some excitement," Coyne commented.

A goal of $5,000 has been set by St. Mary's this year. Although the auction is the major part of the drive, administration and faculty members have signed pledge cards for the drive.

"Instead of asking the student body to contribute a dollar each, we have the auction," Coyne explained.

A short movie explaining various United Way projects will be shown at ten-minute intervals during the auction.

Many of the United Way projects in the South Bend area are used as field and educational research centers by St. Mary's students.

These include the Alcoholism Council, Red Cross, the Catholic Social Service Center and the Urban League.

Coyne pointed out, "They're getting educational experiences at all these places. St. Mary's students really do benefit from the drive."

Murder suspect shot by victim's daughter

INDIANAPOLIS — A man charged with the murder of his father-in-law was shot to death in a crowded courtroom Monday by the dead man's despondent daughter in what police said was a "family feud."

The victim, Nathaniel Sanders, 34, Indianapolis, was shot once in the lower back as he and a brother stood with relatives and witnesses awaiting arraignment on first degree murder charges. He died about an hour later in a hospital emergency room.

Police charged Sanders' sister-in-law, Harriette Roberta Jones, 30, Indianapolis, with first degree murder in connection with the courtroom incident. She was booked in the Marion County Jail.

Sgt. Robert Stout, a detective with the Marion County Sheriff's office, said the shooting apparently climaxed a "family feud" that began 10 days ago when Mrs. Jones' father, Harry Thomas, 59, Indianapolis, was beaten to death in his home. Sanders and his brother, Robert, 33, were charged with first degree murder in connection with the beating.

Stout said the two brothers, Mrs. Jones and a group of relatives and witnesses had approached the bench for the arraignment Monday when Mrs. Jones pulled a revolver from her purse and fired at Sanders before a court bailiff wrestled the gun from her hand.

Mrs. Jones' husband, Willie Jones, had remained at home Monday with the couple's three-week-old child. He told the Indianapolis News his wife spent the night talking with her sister, Carolyn Sanders, Nathaniel's wife. Jones said the two women were despondent over the death of their father and a delay in his funeral arrangements.

Police said Mrs. Sanders and her three children were in her father's home when he was killed. Stout said he questioned Mrs. Sanders after the shooting Monday. "She had a large number of bruises and contusions and a couple of black eyes," Stout said. "She said she had been beaten by Nathaniel."

The News quoted a witness to the courtroom shooting, who asked not to be identified, as saying Mrs. Jones "was extremely nervous" before the arraignment began. "She kept saying, 'People should do something about these people getting out on bond,'" the witness said.

In New Jersey case

Doctor opposes euthanasia

MORRISTOWN, N.J. (AP) — Karen Ann Quinlan's doctor testified Monday that the comatose young woman "reacts to light, sound and pain," and he would refuse to disconnect a respirator that has kept her breathing for the past six months.

Dr. Robert J. Morse was the first witness in a trial to decide whether Miss Quinlan's parents can remove the respirator and allow their 21-year-old daughter to "die with dignity." The Quinlans have said there is no hope for recovery.

In his opening statement, Morse's attorney, Ralph Porzio, likened the Quinlan suit to the Nazi atrocities and gas chambers of World War II.

He said the court was being asked to "predicate a death sentence on the quality of life" and asked: "Where do you draw the line?" in deciding if a person's existence is so futile that life should be ended.

The trial in this northern New Jersey city is expected to last about two weeks. Superior Court Judge Robert Muir is presiding.

Morse testified: "I would not discontinue her from the respirator. She is not dead by any medical criteria."

Morse, who has been Miss Quinlan's doctor for all but the first three days of her coma, characterized her as a person "in a vegetative state who has no inkling of what is happening around her."

"When you go to a zoo and show the animals food, it comes over by instinct — Karen doesn't move. I have never seen her recognize me. Except for an act of God, she can't live a functional life."

However, Morse said that by current medical definitions of death, Miss Quinlan is alive and that there are times when she can breathe without the respirator fastened to her throat.

"No research I've done has shown any reason to stop treatment," Morse said.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph T. Quinlan, the girl's adoptive parents, were in court accompanied by three Roman Catholic priests. The Quinlans have described themselves as devout Catholics.

Miss Quinlan has been in a coma in St. Clare's Hospital since April, when she apparently ingested by accident a combination of alcohol and tranquilizers.

All sides in the case agree that Karen is alive, and for this reason the case skirts the issue of the definition of "death." Doctors say she is alive by all medical standards, including brain activity as shown by electronic monitoring.

Because Miss Quinlan is comatose and therefore mentally incompetent, the court is being asked to let her adoptive father make a decision for her to remove the respirator based on his knowledge of her wishes.

Hesburgh: coeducation elevates student quality

Concerning ethnic students, Hesburgh said that this year there are over 100 minority students attending Notre Dame. Twenty-five percent are women and 75 percent are in the top ten of their graduating classes.

Hesburgh also gave some statistics on the incoming freshmen class. Nineteen point three percent of the men were ranked fifth or above in their graduating classes as were 44.4 percent of the women, giving a total of 500 students. "We also have the largest pool of students ever to apply, despite decreases across the nation," stated Hesburgh.

Hesburgh added that 82.4 percent women and 91.9 percent men are in the top 20 percent.

Co-Education

"I think that will demonstrate to all that with co-education we have not lowered but elevated the quality of the students," remarked Hesburgh.

Hesburgh recounted that Notre Dame had a relatively smooth passage into the co-educational status. Now with women present and growing in the student body, faculty and administration, Hesburgh wonders why it didn't happen sooner. "It's more civilized now," joked Hesburgh.

"Notre Dame, which is named after a woman, will graduate a well-educated woman that will enrich our whole society more than they have in the past," stated Hesburgh.

Hesburgh wants to raise Notre Dame to a higher performance in the future. In the future, enormous financial challenges and spiritual problems are to be faced. "I pray that all of us may meet this challenge and fulfill the promise of this place," stated Hesburgh.

St. Mary's student uninjured when car overturns

A St. Mary's student was apparently uninjured last night after her car overturned at a curve on Douglas Road.

Sgt. Krill from Notre Dame Security said the girl failed to make the turn properly and the car rolled into the front yard of a residence.

The accident occurred directly behind Stepan Center at approximately 11 p.m.

According to Krill, the girl was alone and apparently unhurt. He said the St. Joseph County Sheriff's Office is investigating the accident.

Krill added he did not know if any summonses would be issued to the driver, but he said there may be one for excessive speed.

Ring Around the Classroom

Collegiate Seminar, that galloping scrutiny of the great books, is about as popular as mononucleosis. Students who like the course term it "useless" while others are less charitable.

At least my professor is realistic. One of his first statements was "I assume most of you are here against your will." That indeed seems to be the case.

The most often heard complaint is that the books are boring, the professor is boring, and the discussions are boring, which is quite a large allotment of boredom for a single class. The discussions are handy for writing letters, planning the weekend and having fantasies about those of the opposite sex. According to some of my classmates, the latter is one of the more popular pastimes.

Other students question whether a professor with a background in history, for example, can adequately direct a class dealing with Plato or Aristotle. Is there more faking than directing?

Not only that, but the professor brings with him a bias toward the book according to his particular field. One professor with a bent for psychology analyzed Homer's Odyssey in Freudian terms. Did you know Clytemnestra was phallic aggressive? In my younger days I was a classics freak, so I know just enough about Homer and Greek culture to realize that's the biggest crock of crap I've ever heard. It just ain't possible, Jack.

Another problem is that many of the students don't know what they are talking about, won't get adequate instruction in the course of the seminar, and the discussions end up piddling around the subject without getting to the point.

A single class may touch upon the American eagle with beak extended, homosexuality, foul leprosy, life, liberty, the pursuit of happiness, tuberos begonias, funny hats, grain sales to Russia and the Boston Naval Shipyards. During this time the deceased author has rolled several times in his grave, covered his ears and is contemplating haunting the class.

You probably think I'm ridiculing Collegiate Seminar, right? Well, yes and no. Now after that totally ambiguous and confusing statement I'll attempt to explain myself.

Although a great number of Arts and Letters students like to delude themselves that they're well-read, they haven't read all the books in the seminar, and some of the authors are just meaningless names. Have you ever read Apuleius? Not in the last ten minutes, huh?

Supporters, (or apologists, if you prefer) of the seminar maintain that the purpose of the class is not an in-depth study of the philosophy, literature, quirks, or whatever of the timeless author of the week, but simply an introduction to his work.

I know that right now everyone who has taken and hated Collegiate Seminar is telling the person across the lunchroom table from him that I'm an ignorant buffoon, an abandoned reprobate and an object more worthy of contempt than ridicule. But before you turn to the sports page and read about how wonderful Dan Devine is today, read on, because you might find something that's never occurred to you before.

Since I must give credit where it's due, the person behind this idea is Professor Adolph Soens, and it goes something like this.

Someone once defined a lecture as "the process by which the notes of the teacher become the notes of the student without passing through the minds of either." A certain amount of mental laziness tends to set in because of the educational process we've gone through.

Seminar, on the other hand, is what Soens calls "a Socratic course in a Germanic university system." Good God, mom and dad pay five grand a year and this guy isn't teaching us anything. We have to teach ourselves which is a blasted imposition. Original thought is a burden because so few of us have ever done it. I think Soens' statement bears some consideration, because he may be very correct.

All this is just dandy, but we have to get down to the basic reality of whether the whole thing works or not.

Personally, I think Collegiate Seminar, no matter how lofty its goals, or how good it is in theory, is a flop. I've talked to people who have been so totally alienated from the great books by Collegiate Seminar that the mere mention of Dante can make them lose their lunch.

Dean Isabel Charles' appointment of a committee to reevaluate the seminar is a smart move. If Collegiate Seminar is dropped as a college requirement I don't think many future Arts and Letters students will be heartbroken.

P. O. Box Q

L.I.F.E. Denied

Dear Editor:

On October 1, 1975, the Notre Dame-St. Mary's Students for L.I.F.E. applied for student government funds for this year. We are committed to educating the ND-SMC community to the horrifying reality of abortion. To do this we need funds -- to bring in well-known speakers, to advertise alternatives to abortion, etc. In short, we need money just as any other organization committed to serving others.

The Student Government decided for the third year in a row not to fund us. John Hargrave, the Student Government Treasurer, told us that the Student Government could not give us any money because they would be committing themselves to our group. Only immoral or amoral governments are worried about commitment.

But even if one can say that it is not the role of Student Government to commit themselves, then we must say that the Student Government has committed themselves to every other organization they gave money to. Telling us they cannot commit themselves to our group is either faulty reasoning or a lie.

We then spoke with Ed Byrne, Student Body President. He told us that we were refused money on several accounts. We are an issue-oriented group and issue-oriented groups should raise their own money. We will not deny that we are an issue-oriented group-- yes, our issue is people. Raise our own money? We are trying. We have operated a concession stand already and plan to do so again before the home football games.

The Student Body President also said that many of the organizations who were given money, received it because they have already tried to raise money. We cannot remember when the Society of Ujaama tried to raise money. Did they receive money because they are a minority? And so there would be no flack? The injustice being committed is awful.

Ed Byrne also told us that the Board followed the decisions of past administrations, i.e. the past two years we were refused money. What an innovative government!

Finally we must say that we have been discriminated against. Because abortion is not the "popular" issue these days, governments such as the Student Government of the University of Notre Dame would rather play Pontius Pilate and wash their hands of the whole matter.

We call upon the Student Government not only to fund us, but also to examine its role and to live up to its potential moral leadership and to speak out for every human being's right to live.

Dear Editor:

I should like to take this opportunity to say that this year's concert schedule is the best that I have seen in my three unillustrious years at Notre Dame. "Professional" is a fitting description for the Chicago concert last night at the A.C.C. From a strictly-adhered-to-format to a good natured rapport with a very enthusiastic audience, the well seasoned group put on a slick performance.

Playing two sets of roughly one hour each, Chicago mixed new and old material with practically all of their well known hits. After opening with a newer piece, the group proceeded into "Does Anybody Know What Time It Is?" which seemingly caught and kept the audience's attention. This was followed by a new composition of lead guitarist Terry Kath which was trailed by another familiar song. This format was adhered to throughout the show and proved to be successful. Not only did it mix old with new, but it kept the audience in touch throughout the performance.

Another aspect of the show that kept the audience in touch was the stage presence of the group. Collectively and individually, Chicago was a very interesting group to both watch and listen. When performing their better known songs, the attention generally shifted to the lead vocalists who were either guitarists Kath, bass player Peter Cetera or keyboard man Robert Lamm.

Lamm, who along with Kath writes most of Chicago's material, handles the middle range of Chicago's vocal harmonies as well as singing leads in such songs as "Does Anybody Know..." In addition to his singing, Lamm was competent on several keyboard instruments he played throughout the night. The addition of a synthesizer to his repertoire added a different, but interesting approach to Chicago's usual jazzy brass sound.

If Lamm supplied the middle range vocals, then Kath was the lower end of the scale. His leading vocals was the ever familiar "Colour My World", and he delivered a strong lead guitar solo in the show closing "25 or 6 to 4." Cetera is the high strain of the trio and sang to the lead vocal in most of their newer hits which included, among others, "Old Days" and "Feelin' Stronger Every Day." Cetera played a steady bass throughout and romped around every corner of the stage to seemingly make sure everybody in the audience got to see some part of the band.

The group also made sure they got to show off their instrumental talents, particularly in the second half of the show. One of the first songs in this set was "Repetoire" a song designed to let each member of the band take a solo. Walter Parazaider, who all too often is just known as the flutist in "Colour My World," gave a fine sax solo which gave way to the high strained trumpet of Lee Loughnane.

Loughnane has some kind of endurance—he went the whole show at full blast playing generally high notes and did not falter once.

However, the song was stolen by drummer Danny Seraphine who gave an incredibly fast, clean and interesting solo that never came close to lapsing into boredom like so many drum solos do. Seraphine later collaborated with percussionist Laudir DeOliverira in a piece that combined and complimented the percussionists conga playing ability and Serphine's ample jazz-rock drumming talent.

In the middle of all this was James Pankow, who not only played trombone (and quite well at that) but acted as emcee and crowd cheerleader. To say the least, he was successful in all three roles.

The show was not completely perfect. The wind instruments missed a few notes in the beginning and the sound mix was such that Pankow's trombone came on a little too strongly at close quarters while Cetera's base was too loud over the large speakers. However, these small details did nothing to damper the performance which was strong throughout.

Two other pulses going for the show were found in its stage and sound set-up. The stage was set up so practically everybody sitting in front of or to the side of had a good view of the performance. This was, in part, achieved by the raising of the vast majority of column speakers. The raising of the speakers also seemed to project a much clearer sound (especially to the bleacher sections) than the standard set-up.

Chicago knew what the audience wanted to hear. They gave them that and a little more along with a touch of class which added up to fine evening at the ACC.

wilsons, jardine, love---here come the beach boys

"When I grow to be a man
Will I dig the same things that turned me on as a kid?
Will I look back and say that I wish I hadn't done
what I did?" ---

The Beach Boys

"When I Grow Up (To Be A Man)," was written and recorded by the Beach Boys over ten summers ago when Brian Wilson, Dennis Wilson, Carl Wilson, Alan Jardine and Michael Love were in their late teens and full of the same youthful, good vibrations which they possess today. Whether or not the group still "dig the same things that turned them on as a kid?" isn't as important as the fact that their fans, the surf 'n sun generation of then and now do "dig the same things." The Beach Boys game them and are in fact profoundly "turned on" by tunes like "Surfin' Safari," "Surfer Girl," "Be True to Your School," "I get Around," "Don't Worry Baby," "Help Me Rhonda," "California Girls," among oceans of others.

Those "California Girls," which The Beach Boys sung about circa early sixties are now California women. The Beach

Boys themselves could be regarded as The Beach Men but their musical repertoire of hit records re-creates a timelessness, a sense of eternity, not just yesterday or today, but always. Beach Boys music suspends their own lyrical question about what will things be like "When I grow Up," high above a never never wave somewhere in that swelling surf where music was, is, and will always be "swell," and where perennial teenagers will always dig and cherish groovy times listening to Beach Boys grooves.

Beginning with their earliest efforts that certainly were responsible for the worldwide surfing phenomenon -- they at one time made the Fender Telecaster a household word and every group necessity -- "Carl and the Passions" from Hawthorne, California have been true innovators. Their influence in promulgating "California Style" is obvious; their recording of "concept" albums set a precedent that has affected every album recorded since by anyone.

The Beach Boys were, in fact, the first successful contemporary "concept" group -- a "surf band" -- which evolved naturally inland to The Beach Boys, neither boys nor of the beach.

Through all of this, the primary motivation for the group has been the music itself. Brian Wilson, Dennis Wilson, Carl Wilson, Alan Jardine and Michael Love -- the + "original" Beach Boys and the nucleus around which The Beach Boys are structured today -- are utilizing their energies to grow as musicians. As a musical endeavor, they are still evolving, changing, growing. These changes are noticeable in their onstage demeanor, their musicianship that has progressed with the technology of today, their willingness to experiment with form and content, and their expansion of the traveling band format that now includes such things as tympani, electronic instruments and whatever else is needed to present their music totally, not a slim copy or packaged self-parody. As always, what The Beach Boys derive in the studio, The Beach Boys play onstage -- all over the world.

Naturally, as individuals The Beach Boys have pursued their separate interests ranging from a dedication to the principles of Transcendental Meditation, to acting; and, typically, the energies invested in such endeavors as these are of the same intensity with which The Beach Boys approach their music.

As in any evolving creative-effort, there have been changes; and the personnel is an example. But The Beach Boys of today are the same Beach Boys that changed the sound and shape of American music. Brian Wilson now concentrates his energy in the recording studio and on his writing, while Carl, Dennis, Alan and Michael, along with other carefully selected musicians, devote a large part of their time to playing music on the road.

Capitol Records recently released another LP of Beach Boys timeless tune troves aptly called "Spirit of America," which could also be interpreted as the musical backbeat of America, that inscrutable power that takes the hands off of the clock and makes them clap to the beat of good vibrations, of good times.

That last lyric line of "Will I Look back and say that I wish I hadn't done what I did," is answered with a rhetoric "No!" from both The Beach Boys and their brigade of faithful followers. This was particularly made evident last year when The Beach Boys experienced the biggest grossing concert year of their career. The H.G. Wells Time Machine or rather the Wilson-Jardine-Love machine is as magical, as rejuvenating, and as fresh and energetic as it ever was.

Crime issue highlights S.B. mayoral race

by Cathy Cannon
Staff Reporter

The three candidates for mayor of South Bend discussed their programs to reduce crime and improve the downtown area in the city.

Development of a citizen's crime patrol and campaign to attract new business to South Bend are the chief proposals of John Slafkosky, Republican candidate for mayor of South Bend.

"The chief problems in South Bend are crime and economic instability. I am the only candidate with specific proposals on these issues," Slafkosky stated Saturday. He proposed the formation of citizen patrol groups to be called the Neighborhood Assistance Bureau.

"We studied the communities who have had a decrease in crime, according to FBI reports, to see what they had done. We found in many of these cities citizen patrol groups had been formed," Slafkosky said.

"These are no vigilantes, nor are they armed. They are a trained group of volunteers, screened by experts, who will patrol certain areas of the city," he explained.

Slafkosky added the Neighborhood Assistance Bureau is the most reasonable, effective and economic way to reduce the crime rate.

If elected he will form an industrial team to attract new business to the South Bend area, Slafkosky said.

He explained, "Our unemployment rate of 8.2 percent is not real bad but it could be better. South Bend has many assets which will attract companies to the vicinity if they are publicized."

Slafkosky also said he will work for an elected rather than an appointed school board.

He added, "With a budget of $35 million a year, the school board should be directly accountable to the voters since the money comes from their property taxes."

Slafkosky criticized his Democratic opponent Peter Nemeth for wanting to eliminate the office of Public Safety Director.

He observed, "Since the police and fire departments receive 40 percent of the city's budget, they need someone to plan and coordinate activities."

Slafkosky served as city GOP chairman and as a precinct committeeman for the past three years. He graduated in 1963 from Notre Dame, and played professional football for two years before retiring to become a sales representative.

Crime, underdevelopment of the downtown area and urban blight are South Bend's major problems according to Peter Nemeth, Democratic candidate for mayor.

Nemeth's Proposals

Nemeth's program for fighting these problems includes upgrading the efficiency of the police department, providing free parking downtown, attracting new business to the area and developing laws such as property maintenance to prevent substandard housing.

He also criticized the Neighborhood Assistance Bureau saying the money would be better spent on improving the police department.

He explained where similar programs were implemented, interest was high at first but fell off later.

He added the danger exists that the patrols will turn into vigilante groups.

Nemeth defended his proposal to eliminate the office of city Public Safety Director.

He stated, "It is a useless layer of bureaucracy. With 50 percent of the city's budget going to the fire and police departments, they should deal directly with the mayor, not a go-between."

Nemeth favors appointed school boards over elected ones.

However, he added, "I do think the appointment process should be up-graded so that a larger cross-section of the community will be represented."

"If the citizens want an elected school board, there is a legal process they can follow to get one. If this happens I would certainly not object," Nemeth noted.

Nemeth, a graduate of Columbia Law School, served as Deputy Prosecuting Attorney for St. Joseph County for four years.

He is a former member of the South Bend Common Council and Committee on Economic Development.

Eliminate Patronage

The elimination of patronage politics and a reduction in the city's budget are the aims of Ronald Kronewitter, Independent candidate for mayor.

The elimination of patronage appointments will make the city government more efficient, Kronewitter maintained.

"More efficient government means a budget cut will be possible. I will take a 10 percent cut in salary if elected to demonstrate my good faith on this issue," he pointed out.

He added, "I want to continue efforts to implement the merit system in the fire and police departments."

Kronewitter mentioned the election of fire and police chiefs by the respective departments as one possibility.

Kronewitter said he will investigate the possibility of setting up police substations around the city as part of his crime prevention program.

He also said he wants to increase the salaries of policemen and firemen to attract more people to the force.

Another plank in his program is the construction of a new Juvenile Detention Center.

Kronewitter opposed the formation of the Neighborhood Assistance Bureau, saying, "I've said before specialists should handle special jobs. The police should handle crime." Kronewitter does not think the appointment of school board members is a problem.

He said it's not whether the members are elected or appointed that is important; it is who they are.

"I would try to appoint people with recent teaching experience who know what is going on in the schools," he added.

Kronewitter said he sees no

Bayh to declare '76 presidential candidacy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Birch E. Bayh, the youthful-looking 47-year-old Indiana Democrat whose constitutional amendment put Gerald Ford in the White House, formally joins his party's presidential chase Tuesday as one of the favorites.

The ninth Democrat to declare his intentions, Bayh is barely visible in public opinion polls but is generally believed by party officials to have broad potential for support in a number of key areas.

He hopes to put together a coalition of backers from organized labor, women's groups, blacks and liberals, based on his Senate record and a contention that he is both liberal and electable.

Bayh was headed for a 1972 presidential bid but dropped out when his wife, Marvella, had to undergo breast cancer surgery. She has since recovered.

Even before Tuesday's announcement, which will take place in the Indiana State House in Indianapolis where Bayh became speaker at 31, he has begun to demonstrate organizational strength.

In New Hampshire, scene of the Feb. 24 kickoff primary, Bayh's campaign manager is Eileen Gonthier, a top Democrat in the state. State Chairman Laurence Radway says Bayh has considerable strength among party leaders.

In the March 2 Massachusetts primary, Bayh's campaign will be run by John McKean, who ran George McGovern's successful 1972 primary.

In New York, Bayh has enlisted Bronx Borough President Robert Abrams, also a 1972 McGovern chairman.

However, his initial appearances at gatherings of party liberals, in Minneapolis, and in Springfield, Mass., have failed to stir support. In straw polls, he ran behind Rep. Morris K. Udall of Arizona.

Bayh's chief Senate achievements have been floor-managing constitutional amendments, including the presidential succession amendment that put Ford and Nelson Rockefeller into the nation's top two offices and the still-pending equal rights amendment for women.

More recently, Bayh has pushed for strict handgun limits and, after extensive subcommittee hearings blocked proposals to limit the Supreme Court ruling permitting abortions.

An Indiana native, Bayh majored in agriculture at Purdue University where he was elected senior class president.

Elected to the state House at 26, he became minority leader after two years and then speaker. In 1962, he unseated veteran Republican Sen. Homer Capehart, then won re-election in 1968 and 1974.

Would-be assassins indicted

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two men were indicted Monday on federal charges of plotting to assassinate President Ford in Sacramento by shooting him and bombing a sewer line.

The defendants are Gary Steven DeSure, 32, whose last known address was Warm Springs, Mont., and Preston Michael Mayo, 24, of Warren County, Va. Both were listed as unemployed.

They were arraigned last month by a U.S. Magistrate in Santa Barbara, Calif., and are being held there on $100,000 bail each.

The indictment charged the two conspired to plant a bomb in a street sewer near the California state Capitol during a presidential visit there. DeSure "would detonate the explosives and stand as a lookout" and Mayo "would fire a shot at the President," the indictment said.

DeSure and Mayo got to in Cincinnati Aug. 17 and two days later arrived at a motel in Dixon, Tenn., where they "wrote details pertaining to the equipment and plans necessary to accomplish the assassination attempt," the indictment said.

On Aug. 20, they arrived at a motel in Midwest City, Okla., and the next day arrived at a motel in Amarillo, Tex., the indictment said.

On Aug. 23, the indictment continued, DeSure and Mayo reached the Hollywood Burbank Airport in California where they abandoned the 1974 Datsun they had been driving.

Mayo then rented a car from a Ford dealer in Woodland Hills, Calif., and they traveled from there to a motel in Van Nuys.

The defendants arrived at the Pepper Tree Motel in Santa Barbara on Aug. 24, the indictment related.

They were arrested and jailed two days later on the theft charges.

On Aug. 27, according to the indictment, each defendant "did willfully and knowingly make threats to take the life of and to inflict bodily harm upon the President of the United States."

Each man was charged with threatening the life of the President as well as with the more serious charge of conspiring to assassinate the President.

The conspiracy charge carries a maximum penalty of life in prison. The charge of threatening the President carries a maximum penalty of five years in prison and a $1,000 fine.

No details were immediately available about the defendants' possible motives for allegedly plotting the assassination.

Off-Campus 20

Howard (St. Ed's) 0

Interhall football completed its fourth week last Sunday, focusing on the big play to open up the games. Defense remained the strategy, with turnovers as their objective. The offenses continued to improve, especially off-campus and Dillon. The rainy day caused many turnovers and ended with some surprising results.

Dillon 6 Sorin 3

Both defenses looked impressive throughout the game as Sorin shut out Dillon in the first half. Dillon held Sorin to a 30 yard field goal after a turnover inside the 30. In a second half rally Dillon showed they haven't given up hope in retaining last year's title. Bill Griffin connected three times to Tim Holroyd, the final pass for a TD, in a 40 yard drive midway into the third period for the winning points.

Off-campus finally got their offense on track Sunday as they scored three TD's against a fairly tough Howard defense. Robert Zierk scored two touchdowns on sweeps of 8 and 12 yards, both coming from Howard turnovers. The final score was a 23 yard run by Craig Tigh on a lateral from Zierk as he was being tackled.

Fisher 6 Morrissey 0

Fisher's Gerald Miles scored the big play on a 50 yard off-tackle touchdown run midway in the second period. Fisher then went for two but the attempt failed. Morrissey tried to get on the board before halftime but time ran out. Both teams showed tremendous defenses against fine offenses.

Pangborn 0 Alumni 0

Pangborn and Alumni played to a 0-0 tie Sunday as both teams were hampered with penalties and turnovers. It was obviously a defensive game. The biggest threat came with four minutes left in the game. Pangborn on fourth down faked the punt which failed leaving Alumni in good field position inside the 30. Unable to generate an offense Alumni went for the field goal which was just inches wide.

Sunday night's Interhall Football games were all defensive battles with Keenan, Flanner and Holy Cross halls all winning by shutouts. All of these games were played at Cartier under the lights.

Keenan 20 Cavanaugh 0

Keenan's domination of this contest began early in the first quarter with a time consuming 60 yard drive. The culmination of this drive was a 26 yard pass from quarterback John Feeney to halfback Pinky Faherty. The extra point attempt failed and the score was 6-0.

Midway through the second period Keenan's swarming defense blocked a Cavanaugh punt and recovered at midfield. Feeney passed 37 yards to Greg Wilkes. On the next play Faherty ran 13 yards for his second touchdown. The two-point conversion was good and the score was 14-0. Keenan scored again before the half ended, but it was called back because of a holding penalty.

The second half of this game belonged entirely to the Keenan defense, especially their front line. Tom Welch, Bob Lindsey, Don Bishop, Bill Jacobitz, and captain Al Sondej sacked the Cavanaugh quarterback six times. Late in the fourth quarter they forced a fumble at the Cavanaugh 2 yard line. Fullback Joe Kearns blasted the final 2 yards for the touchdown. The extra point was missed, but Keenan had a 19-0 romp.

Flanner 6 Zahm 0

This game was scoreless until late in the fourth quarter when, after just stopping a Flanner drive, Zahm fumbled deep in their own territory. Two plays later Flanner quarterback Mark Coon flipped a short pass to split end Mike Shutt for the game's only score. The final score stood at 6-0, Flanner. Both teams were handicapped by the rain.

Rain and the wet surface hampered play over the weekend.

Holy Cross 13 Grace 0

After a scoreless first quarter Holy Cross marched 50 yards in 6 plays. The biggest play on the drive was also the touchdown play, a 30 yard scramble by quarterback Mikey Landi. The extra point was no good and the score was 6-0.

In the third period, after a 40 yard sustained halfback Larry Merief swept around the left end for seven yards and the score. The extra point was good and the final score was 13-0.

Falcon facts

One can hardly blame the Cadets that packed Falcon Stadium Saturday for singing "Na-Na-Na-Na, Hey Hey, Goodbye" at the beginning of the fourth quarter Saturday, but future Irish opponents will know better. The Falcon supporters also came up with another first, chanting "here comes nepalm here comes nepalm," but in the end it was the Falcons who got burnt.

Air Force placekicker Dave Lawson, who broke the collegiate career field goal record Saturday by hitting his 43rd three-pointer (he added number 44 and 45 later in the game), was understandably not-so-thrilled. "What matters is the team," said the senior from Shawnee Mission, Kansas, "and that never should have happened today. We gave it away."

Falcon coach Ben Martin used anguished generalizations in his comments after the game, but did manage to pinpoint what he thought hurt the Cadets the most. "We fell victim to Montana's passing," he lamented. "He was really humming the ball in there, more so than Slager. We were near the receivers, but he threw strikes."

The Air Force coach concluded his comments by turning to the crowd of reporters that surrounded him, lifting his hands and asking "weren't any of you guys praying out there? We needed legions of crescendos rising from the Stadium . . .". He just turned away after that, but turned back to say "Thank you"

Saturday's loss extended the Falcon's winless streak to 11 games and made them 0-6 against the Irish. Their 30 points however is the most they've scored against ND, and their high for the season.

In the Notre Dame locker room after the game someone suggested a solution for the Irish's nerve-shattering fourth quarter finishes. Why not send them out to a movie for three quarters? It sounds ridiculous, but it might work. If you took the offense to a movie and let the defense stand alone for three quarters, you might be 10, 15, maybe 20 points behind going into the final period, nothing new to the '75 Irish. Then just bring the offense back and tell them they have to score three touchdowns in the final quarter to win (they're used to it). Send in Joe "Miracle" Montana and tell him to lead a dazzling comeback for a last-minute victory.

Seriously, the Irish call ill-afford to wait three quarters to get going this weekend against USC, and they know it. They must extend the drives that they generate into the end zone, for too often they move down the field yet fail to light the scoreboard.

"We move the ball up and down the field," said guard Al Wujciak, "but we just can't get it in the end zone."

Also, the Irish have been aided by the big play at just the right time. Against North Carolina they had Burgmeier's 80-yard touchdown on a simple sideline pattern, and against Air Force they came up with two fumble recoveries, a 66 yard pass and Al Hunter's crucial 43 yard run- all in the fourth quarter.

"When you get a big play," says sophomore quarterback Montana, "it psyches the guys up. It helps your mental attitude."

Every team relies on the big play, but ND has had their share late in the game. Of the 120 points they've totaled this season, 90 have come in the second half, 73 of those in the fourth quarter. The Trojans figure to be less beneficial towards the end of the game.
