Candidates discuss security, course evaluations

by Peggy McGuire
Senior Staff Reporter

Revision in Notre Dame Security forces was the main topic of discussion at last night's one-and-a-half hour public forum of Student Body President/Student Body Vice-President candidates.

Candidates Andy McKenna and Mike Roohan, Bruce Blanco and Carey Ewing, and Mike Schlageter and Jayne Rizzo responded to a wide variety of questions, including a proposed course evaluation booklet, a Third World Development Conference, the installation of lights on the Stepan Center basketball courts, and a possible Career Development Center.

J.P. Russell, Hall Presidents' Council Chairman, moderated the event which was held in the Dillon Hall basement. Candidates gave brief remarks before and after the open discussion. Approximately 70 students attended the forum.

Responses from the candidates on the security issue varied. The Schlageter-Rizzo platform advocates the formation of a security advisory board composed of students, administrators, and security personnel. Schlageter said that this board would be kept small and "workable." He favors leaving one position open for an off-campus student, "preferably a female."

"All off-campus students face the problems of burglary and break-in," he explained, "but a female faces that added fear of rape which no male could understand. A female off-campus student would be able to cover all of the worries the off-campus students face."

McKenna said that Security "will have to become more professionalized." Roohan, his running mate, claimed that "Security is not a sharp operation; they're not at all on the ball. Some basic changes have got to occur."

"We would not bring any new recommendations to the administration," McKenna continued. "They already have enough proposals before them. We would simply demand that they act upon recommendations which are already there."

Blanco stated that he and Ewing would wait for results from the consulting firm presently evaluating Security before suggesting any changes.

"We don't feel that we can do a better job than a professional firm which has spent six weeks studying the situation," he said. "We would wait for the firm to go in front of the Board of Trustees with their proposal. Then, we would make sure their report is made public and would advocate any recommendations they might have."

The resurrection of a course evaluation booklet, a topic covered at Wednesday night's forum, was again discussed.

Rizzo said that she and Schlageter researched the possibility of a booklet and learned that the Scholastic plans to publish one this spring. "We don't see any need to include on our platform anything which has already been done," she added.

Andy McKenna, Mike Roohan, Carey Ewing and Bruce Blanco discussed campus security, course evaluations and other campaign issues at the SBP/SBVP candidates forum held in Dillon last night.

McKenna said that the course-evaluation booklet he suggests differs from the upcoming Scholastic publication. "We would like to see a booklet modeled after one published in 1970 by Scholastic," he stated. "The 1970 booklet was the largest ever put out by Scholastic. It included descriptions of St. Mary's courses and comments about professors."

Maureen Walsh, editor of this year's Scholastic course-evaluation booklet, asked to clarify a few points. "There seemed to be some confusion about the course-evaluation booklet which will be available on April 10. It will be a comprehensive evaluation of Notre Dame courses."

In other issues, McKenna defended attacks on his proposal for a Third World Development Conference composed of student leaders from across the nation. McKenna said that after speaking with Dr. Charles Wilber, chairman of the economics department, he decided congested. It is an indoor court, and it is most accessible to South Quad people," he stated. "By installing lights on the Stepan Center courts, North Quad people would have a close place to play basketball."

"Because the Stepan basketball courts are next to the power station, it would be relatively inexpensive to install lighting," he added.

Schlageter explained the Career Development clause of his platform. "We are calling for a centralized figurehead who would coordinate all guidance materials and could direct students to the

NY Times links Trustee Hellmuth to illegal CIA activities in 60s

by Jack Pizzolato
Senior Staff Reporter

Notre Dame Trustee Paul F. Hellmuth acted as a CIA contact during the early 1960's and aided the intelligence agency in an illegal scheme to channel funds to five international youth groups, according to the New York Times.

In an article dated Feb. 16, 1967, the Times reported that the five youth organizations received CIA funds in the guise of grants from three American foundations. Among the youth groups involved were: the National Student Association in Washington D.C.; the Independent Research Service of New York; and the United States Youth Council of New York.

The funds, the Times noted, were to be used in each of the organizations' international programs, thereby giving the CIA access to foreign students and other sources of information.

One of the foundations identified as a CIA front by the Times was the Independence Foundation of Boston. Hellmuth was a trustee of the foundation when, between 1962 and 1965, it gave more than $250,000 to the National Student Association (NSA), an organization which presently has 500 member groups on college campuses across the United States.

Officers of the NSA admitted, the Times said, that they had received secret funds from the CIA and reported that Hellmuth served as one of their contacts with the intelligence agency. When contacted by the Observer, Hellmuth denied ever having worked for the government.

In addition to the NSA, the Independence Foundation also funded the Independent Research Service, an organization which, according to the Times, "has existed almost solely to finance the sending of delegations of American students and intellectuals to Communist-sponsored international youth festivals."

Another foundation not associated with the youth organization funding scheme, but mentioned by the Times as having CIA connections, was the J. Frederick Brown Foundation of Boston. The foundation contributed mainly to a New York-based women's group called the Committee of Correspondence, which worked closely with women's groups in foreign countries. Hellmuth was a trustee of the J. Frederick Brown Foundation at the time.

Operation Merrimack

The Observer reported earlier that, according to John Marks, director of CIA projects for the Center for National Security Studies, Hellmuth had acted as president and director of a CIA front organization engaged in illegal domestic spying and surveillance.

Hellmuth, Marks said, headed Anderson Security Consultants Inc. (ASC), a CIA owned and operated corporation established in the early 1960's and disbanded in 1974. ASC, Marks added, was discussed at length in a report released in 1976 by the Senate Select Intelligence Committee. The company was referred to by its code name "Operation Merrimack," Marks stated.

The report is quoted by the Associated Press (AP) as saying that "Operation Merrimack" was one of three related projects involving domestic intelligence by the CIA. The operation "was an effort to infiltrate dissident groups in Washington D.C., to obtain advance information about demonstrations against CIA facilities," the report said.

It also explained, according to AP, that the project, "using construction workers and trade-union members as part-time agents, was gradually expanded to include any information about the plans and attitudes of such groups as the Women Strike for Peace, the Washington Peace Center, The Congress of Racial Equality, and the Student Non-Violent Coordinating Committee."

Hellmuth, who was named to the Notre Dame Board of Trustees in November, 1960, graduated from ND with a B.A. degree and received a L.I.B. degree from Harvard Law School. In 1947 he joined the Boston law firm of Hale and Dorr, one of the largest law firms in New England, and was elected senior managing partner in 1955.

Hellmuth has been director of 28 businesses and corporations and has also served in the capacity of president, vice-president, and treasurer of a number of large firms. He is now retired from Hale and Dorr and lives in Cambridge, MA.

Mike Schlageter and Jayne Rizzo presented proposals in their platform and responded to questions at last night's forum.

that a conference of this type would be "more fruitful" than a fund-raising drive.

"In the conference, we would make people more aware of what is going on in Third World nations," he said. "By inviting leaders from across the nation, instead of people from Third World countries, we would keep costs minimal, but also serve our purpose. We would also be able to discuss campus-related issues."

Blanco explained his proposal to install lighting at the Stepan Center basketball courts. "The Rock is proper advisors," he said. "Right now, the deans are accessible to a select few. We need a central figure who would coordinate all activities."

Candidates also answered questions on the topics of co-ed dorms, the pass/fail option, departmental exam scheduling, and LaFortune renovation.

The next forum will be at 6:30 p.m. Sunday. Russell announced that it will not be in Walsh Hall, as scheduled. Students should call the Ombudsman office for the announcement of the new location.

Farmers rally for jailed comrades

EDINBURG* TEXAS [AP] - Hundreds of farmers riding tractors and other farm vehicles converged on this already tense Rio Grande Valley town yesterday, supporting colleagues arrested the day before in a violent confrontation with authorities.

The latest arrivals parked their farm machinery on the outskirts of town and gathered around the county jail, where 200 farmers spent the night after refusing to post $18.75 bond each following their arrests for blocking the border to protest Mexican beef and vegetable imports.

The arrested men said they would not leave unless released outright or on their recognizance.

About 300 farmers in the crowd outside heard leaders call for provisions for the men inside - chewing tobacco, cigarettes, antacids and dominoes.

Law enforcement officers, many of them in riot gear, were stationed throughout town, but Hidalgo County Sheriff Brig Marmolejo said there would be no trouble as long as the farmers were peaceful and did not block traffic.

The arrests Wednesday came as about 100 officers, using tear gas and nightsticks, swept protesting farmers away from the International Bridge at Hidalgo, about 20 miles to the south.

The farmers, many representing American Agriculture, the group that has called for a nationwide farm strike, had assembled there to protest the Mexican imports. The officers moved in after the protesters blocked a produce truck as it crossed the bridge from Reynosa, Mexico.

Two farmers were known to have been hospitalized after the melee, and authorities said none of the officers was hurt. Those jailed included American Agriculture movement leaders from Texas, Louisiana, Oklahoma, Missouri, Kentucky and Georgia.

Many of the farmers who arrived yesterday said they lived in the area and had not participated in the protest at the bridge.

"It's good to see these locals get off their duffers," one farmer said as the 50 to 75 vehicles, their lights flashing, rumbled toward town.

Arnold Paulson, who said he was from Minnesota and a member of a group called the National Organization of Raw Materials, told the crowd from the bed of a pickup truck about problems faced by the farmers both inside and outside the jail Wednesday night.

He said those arrested were crammed into cells, and those outside could not get blankets from local service organizations and spent a cool, damp night.

It began to rain at one point in the night, and officers did allow the farmers to enter a building for a time.

Meeting slated for cheerleading candidates

There will be a mandatory organizational meeting for anyone interested in trying out for the 1978-79 cheerleading squad Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in the LaFortune Ballroom. General tryout regulations will be explained and registration will take place.

Meanwhile, John Duncan, general counsel for the Texas Civil Liberties Union, said his organization had arranged for legal assistance for jailed farmers who want to complain of police brutality.

His Notre Dame talk is expected to reveal ways to find the "hidden jobs," where the growth areas will be in the 1980's, and specific tactics to help get a job.

Keenan Review to begin tonight

by Clare Zimmerman

The Keenan Review will be presented tonight and tomorrow at 8 p.m. in Washington Hall. Attire is semi-formal and admission is free.

The show this year will include sixteen acts performed by an all-Keenan cast. These acts include juggling, take-offs on popular tunes, and comedy routines. Also, there will be a stage band under the direction of Shawn McKenna.

The purpose of the Keenan Review, which is sponsored and funded solely by Keenan Hall, is to provide entertainment for Notre Dame and to show how much talent can be found in any hall on campus.

Publicity Director Paul Callahan advises people to get there early if they want a seat and adds, "the Keenan Review was great last year, but this year it should be even better."

Tomorrow's show will be followed by a reception for all who want to attend in the Keenan basement.

Congressional leaders propose possible raise of retirement age

WASHINGTON[AP]- House-Senate conferees agreed yesterday on a bill that would force private businesses to raise their mandatory retirement age from 65 to 70, and ban altogether the forced retirement of federal employees.

Under current law, the three million federal workers are subject to mandatory retirement at age 70. That rule would end after Sept. 30, under new legislation.

Congressional leaders said final passage of the bill should come this month, and President Carter is expected to sign it quickly.

The provision under which private business could not force an employee into retirement before age 70 would go into effect next Jan. 1. The legislation grants up to two years for companies to phase out mandatory retirement provisions in existing contracts.

The measure affects only private companies with 20 or more employees on the payroll. That covers about 70 percent of the labor force.

Currently, private sector workers are protected against age discrimination in hiring, job retention, pay and other work conditions only to age 65.

The proposed law does not change 65 as the age at which most people can begin collecting maximum Social Security benefits.

Conferees agreed to compromise on two controversial sections of the new legislation affecting highly paid businessmen and college professors.

Businesses would be allowed to continue the forced retirement at age 65 of high level executives whose retirement benefits, minus Social Security, would amount to $27,000 a year. To clarify these types of executives, the conferees added the definition "high policy-making capacity" to those who might fit this category.

Colleges and universities also could continue mandatory age 65 retirement policies for professors, but only until July 1, 1982. Then the mandatory retirement age would be raised to 70.

The conferees decided the delay until 1982 would give colleges time to plan ahead and adjust their tenure systems.

Proponents of the business exemption said this would give young people more of a chance to climb the ladder to executive levels.

The bill also orders the labor secretary to study the feasibility of a total ban on all forced retirement policies.

Brooks presents poetry about black experience

by Dave O'Keefe
Staff Reporter

Pulitzer-Prize winning poet Gwendolyn Brooks entertained an audience of over three hundred people last night in Washington Hall with a recitation of poetry that concentrated largely on elements of the black experience.

Brooks began by offering definitions of poetry by Carl Sandburg, ("the achievement of the synthesis of hyacinths and bisquits"), and offered her own definition: "Poetry is life distilled."

"Mother," which Brooks described as "an abortion poem," was the first work read. Brooks explained that, despite the fact that she had never had an abortion, "observation, if intent and accurate, is an aspect of experience."

The next poem, inspired by the sight of grazing cows and horses from the window of an Amtrak train, was "a tribute to these magnificent creatures who know how to do life like so few of us do."

"The Life of Lincoln West" described the misery of "the ugliest little boy anyone ever saw." Ironically, Lincoln overcomes his insecurity when he overhears a white man characterize him as a typical example of his kind, "Black, ugly and odd. The real thing."

Brooks followed with three love poems; one for the young, "When You Have Forgotten Sunday", one for the old "Shorthand Possible", and "The Ballad of Pearly Mae Lee," a bittersweet lament by a young black woman whose man pays for the favors of a young white woman with a whipping.

Brooks read "Primer for Blacks" for "the blacks in the room," but invited those "who aren't of the black persuasion" to eavesdrop.

The poem was a powerful exhortation to "Rise, you self-shriveled blacks." "At the Hairdressers" was dedicated to "those sisters who have kept their naturals." "The Lovers of the Poor" concerned two matrons, "adventurers invading the black ghetto to give a present of money to a 'worthy' black family."

Many of Brooks' poems dealt with youth, inspired either by her children or by the "distilled memories of my childhood." "Song in the Front Yard" echoes the cry of all children: "I stayed in the front yard all my life. I want a peek at the back, where it's rough and untended and weeds grow."

Brooks was warm, personable, and well received. Her comment on "Song in the Front Yard" is typical of her unassuming honesty.

"Agreat many critics whom I've come to respect said that this poem was written on many levels and contains deep significance," she explained, then added, "They're wrong."

Carter attempts to bolster plunging U.S. dollar

WASHINGTON [AP] - President Carter tried to prop up the crashing dollar yesterday by touting investments in the United States, promising less consumption of foreign oil and predicting that U.S. trading partners will be able to buy more American goods.

He pledged to take direct action to support the dollar if necessary but said it would stabilize and "remain in good shape" without help once European money markets weigh his statements and start realizing the dollar's actual worth.

The president spoke at a news conference as the dollar encountered renewed pressure after plunging to a record low on foreign exchanges. The drop means imported products such as automobiles and television sets are likely to cost more in the United States.

It also means Americans overseas will get less for the dollars they spend.

Carter met with reporters at the National Press Club in an unusual session where questions were submitted in writing to conform with club tradition. The questions were selected by the president of the club, Frank Aukofer of the Milwaukee Journal.

Usually, at news conferences, reporters get the president's nod, stand and ask their questions personally.

The questioning at the Press Club covered a wide range of issues, and Carter made these main points:

-Ratification of a new Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty SALT with the Soviet Union would be jeopardized by the action Russia is taking to arm Ethiopia and help direct its war against Somalia. Secretary of State Cyrus Vance said yesterday the Russians now have two generals directing operations in Africa.

This, Carter said, "would be a cause of concern to me and would lessen the confidence of the American people in the word and peaceful intentions of the Soviet Union."

Replying to a Soviet charge that he is blackmailing the Russians by linking Africa and SALT, the president declared: "The two are linked because of action by the Soviets. We don't initiate the linkage."

-He is asking Congress to restore flexibility to civil service by basing raises for top government employees on work well done and making it easier to fire workers who are incompetent or inefficient.

Carter's package would create a special unit to deter retaliation against "whistle-blowers" who expose gross abuses in government. But the president said it would not protect those who violate pledges to keep government secrets.

Asked specifically about former CIA officer Frank Snepp, who wrote an unauthorized book critical of American action during the fall South Vietnam, the president declared: "I don't look upon Frank Snepp as one of the greatest 'whistle-blowers' of all time."

Comments from Congress generally favored Carter's plan but indicated opposition to a proposed limit on veterans' preference for civil service jobs.

The dollar fell to a record low on West German money markets Wednesday when it was valued at less than 2 marks.

Asked about his forthcoming meeting in Washington with Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin, Carter said he hoped to encourage resumption of direct negotiations between Israel and Egypt.

"We hope to search out some resolution on the definition of specifics related to the Sinai," he said and added that he would prefer to see direct talks between Begin and President Anwar Sadat of Egypt "but that is impossible now."

Carter opened his press club appearance with a brief speech in which he announced plans to ask Congress for "the most sweeping reform of the civil service system since it was created nearly 100 years ago."

The president said that "it is a sad fact that it is easier to promote and transfer incompetent employees than to get rid of them."

On other topics at the news conference, Carter:

-Said "No" when asked whether his administration waited too long before it intervened in the national coal strike.

-Said of the slump in his standing in public opinion polls that "we have had to deal and have decided to deal with long standing, very difficult issues" that had not been addressed before. He cited successes in improving the economy and getting direct negotiations started between Israel and Egypt. -Said he supported a requirement that employees of the CIA and other security agencies abide by a pledge not to reveal classified information without permission. -Described as "very reasonable" and "very adequate" his administration's program to provide long-range guarantees of loans to help New York City cope with its financial problems, although "it is obviously not everything that the New York City officials would want."

Five hundred expected for Soph-Parents Weekend

by Molly Woulfe

Debbie Roberts, president of St. Mary's sophomore class, estimates nearly 500 parents will participate in St. Mary's annual Sophomore-Parent Weekend, which begins today.

Festivities begin with a variety show, dedicated to the parents, at 8:30 tonight in Moreau Hall's Little Theatre, followed by a wine and cheese party.

Tomorrow's activities include an open house and a formal to be held at Century Center. "Making Our Dreams Come True" is the theme of the dance, to which all St.

Mary's sophomores, parents, and administrators are invited. Dinner will be served from 7:30 to 9 p.m., and dancing will begin at 9 and end at 1 a.m.

A sophomore-parent Mass will be offered Sunday morning at 8:30 in the Church of Loretto. Sr. Katherine Reighert of Camput Ministry will deliver the homily. Brunch will be furnished afterwards in the cafeteria.

"Sophomore-Parent Weekend is sure to be a memorable occasion this year," commented Roberts. "A lot of planning and work has gone into it, and we're sure everyone's going to have a great time."

Chaplin's body stolen

SWITZERLAND [AP] - Grave robbers acting under cover of darkness stole the body of comedian Charlie Chaplin, who died Christmas Day, from a tiny unguarded cemetery in this village where he spent his last 20 years, police said yesterday.

The rectangular cemetery, about 60 yards long, is located in a remote area along a rarely traveled dirt road. It is surrounded by a small stone wall about three feet high, near which Chaplin's grave was located. There was no elaborate tombstone because he wanted his grave to be as modest as the others in the cemetery.

Police said the heavy wooden coffin was removed between night-fall Wednesday and dawn yesterday. They said there was no indication whether it was taken for ransom. A Corsier municipal official called the theft an "act of vandalism."

Paul Germain, a municipal worker who helped with Chaplin's burial Dec. 27, described the coffin as massive and said it would have taken four men to move it.

Etienne Buenzod, another Corsier municipal worker, discovered the grave had been tampered with during a routine check. There were indentations in the ground indicating the coffin had been dragged for a short distance.

Police said there were no other clues.

Chaplin's widow Oona, daughter of playwright Eugene O'Neill refused to discuss the theft with reporters.

Smith, moderates announce Rhodesian pact

SALISBURY* Rhodesia [AP] Prime Minister Ian Smith and three moderate black leaders announced an agreement yesterday that provides for the country's first one-man, one-vote elections and black majority rule by Dec. 31.

In a brief statement after 2½ hours of talks, Smith, Bishop Abel Muzorewa, the Rev. Ndabaningi Sithole and Chief Jeremiah Chirau said they will sign a constitutional settlement today.

Under the pact, the four leaders who sign the agreement will form an "executive council" to take over the powers of the prime minister and plan the elections, for which no date has been set. The council chairmanship will rotate among them.

The interim government will be faced with the two sizeable tasks of winning Western recognition for the internal settlement and finding a way to end the increasingly costly war against externally based guerrillas who have vowed to crush the agreement and the Smith government.

The constitutional agreement resulted from three months of talks initiated by Smith after a British-American peace plan - which would include the guerrillas in a settlement - failed to make headway.

Despite dissatisfaction

Hoosier miners expected to ratify coal treaty

WINSLOW* IND [AP] - Striking miners burned copies of the proposed coal contract yesterday and denounced the agreement as unfair for retirees and more fit for the outhouse than the United Mine Workers.

Despite the generally unhappy reception, UMW District 11 President Larry Reynolds predicted that Indiana's 3,700 active miners will vote to ratify it and end the 87-day strike that has pinched electric utilities and forced more than 4,700 layoffs in other industries. In another development, the RCA plant at Marion, Ind., announced that it will repeat on Monday this week's one-day layoff of 2,500 workers.

"Many of the men have been out for a long time, and they'll vote yes because they want to get back to work, even though they're not satisfied," Reynolds said.

The voting, scheduled to begin Saturday, will be close, but "I really think it'll pass," Reynolds added.

At a gymnasium in Winslow, about 200 miners gathered to hear details of the contract, which their local leaders urged them to reject. There were no words in support of the pact.

One miner said of his copy, "I left mine in the outhouse."

"If we all had outhouses, we might get some benefit out of it the contract," another miner shouted.

At Terre Haute, where UMW district headquarters are located, two locals met in a basement meeting room but refused to talk to reporters afterward. An Associated Press newsmen was ejected from the room and told that if he wanted to know what was said at the meeting, "You'll have to join the union."

The few who talked refused to give their names. "It's mixed emotion," one miner said. "there are things in it I like and things I don't like. I don't know if I'll vote for it."

After the Winslow meeting, one miner started burning his copy of the 38-page contract and about a dozen other miners threw their copies on the fire. One miner spit on the burning papers.

Clayton Claridge, president of UMW Local 353, told the miners they had to share the blame for an inadequate contract because many had failed to attend regular strategy sessions during the strike.

"We've been sitting too long," he said. "We ain't got nobody but ourselves to blame."

A major complaint was the pension provision, which fails to meet the UMW's demand for equal benefits for older miners who retired under the original 1950 pension plan and those who retired after the last contract in 1974. Under the proposed contract, the old-time retirees would still receive about $170 less than modern pensioners in 1981.

"We retired miners ain't even considered when it's all said and done," one man said. "You hang on. Let's get a contract that treats the miners the same as operators."

"Send it back. Let 'em rewrite it," another miner yelled.

Miller recommended

WASHINGTON [AP] - With only its chairman voting no, the Senate Banking Committee recommended yesterday that the Senate confirm G. William Miller to head the Federal Reserve Board.

Formal confirmation of the nomination of the 52-year-old board chairman of Textron Inc. to replace Arthur F. Burns as the nation's central banker is expected in the full Senate today.

The 14-1 vote by which the Banking Committee endorsed the nomination came at the end of a five-week investigation which clearly tried the patience of some senators and led to an open revolt against the leadership of Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., the committee chairman.

There were complaints that the nomination was being delayed unduly at a time when leadership is needed at the Federal Reserve to meet the problems of interest rates, economic expansion, unemployment, inflation and the declining value of the dollar overseas.

Proxmire replied that the investigation had been thorough and complete, that Miller had been interrogated for parts of just two days and that the investigation had been completed as quickly as possible.

He said some senators apparently felt Miller was being subjected to "an inquisition."

"As the immediate successor in the Senate to Sen. Joseph McCarthy, a disgrace to this body, I know what can happen," he said. "Perhaps I've done that. I hope not...Nobody can say that the hearings were stacked...I don't think in any sense Mr. Miller was browbeaten. I can't find one single personal attack in the record."

Sen. Adlai E. Stevenson III, D-Ill., one senator who had pressed for an immediate decision Monday on Miller, told Proxmire that senators were only expressing fears of more delay and fears of a possible "inquisition."

Proxmire said he still believes Miller's business background does not qualify him to head the Federal Reserve.

He cited Miller's lack of experience in economics and monetary affairs and the fact that, for the first four to six months of his four-year term as chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, the Federal Reserve System will be continuing an investigation into certain Textron business practices.

"I think the nation is not well served by this nomination," Proxmire told the 14 other committee members.

He also claimed that the committee's staff investigation led to the conclusion that Miller should have known that Bell Helicopter, a Textron subsidiary, was dealing in Iran with a sales agency owned by the commander in chief of the Iranian Imperial Air Force, Gen.

Mohammad Khatami.

At the hearing Monday, Proxmire contended and Miller denied that a $2.95 million payment made to the sales agent, Air Taxi Inc., was a bribe made to clinch a $500 million helicopter sale to the Iranian army.

EARN OVER $650 A MONTH RIGHT THROUGH YOUR SENIOR YEAR.

If you're a junior or a senior majoring in math, physics or engineering, the Navy has a program you should know about.

It's called the Nuclear Propulsion Officer Candidate-Collegiate Program (NUPOC-C for short) and if you qualify, you can earn as much as $650 a month right through your senior year. Then after 16 weeks of Officer Candidate School, you'll receive an additional year of advanced technical education. This would cost you thousands in a civilian school, but in the Navy, we pay you. And at the end of the year of training, you'll receive a $3,000 cash bonus.

It isn't easy. There are fewer than 400 openings and only one of every six applicants will be selected. But if you make it, you'll have qualified for an elite engineering training program. With unequaled hands-on responsibility, a $24,000 salary in four years, and gilt-edged qualifications for jobs in private industry should you decide to leave the Navy later. (But we don't think you'll want to.)

Ask your placement officer to set up an interview with a Navy representative when he visits the campus on March 8, or contact your Navy representative at 312-657-2169 (collect). If you prefer, send your résumé to the Navy Nuclear Officer Program, Code 312-B468, 4015 Wilson Blvd., Arlington, Va. 22203, and a Navy representative will contact you directly. The NUPOC-Collegiate Program. It can do more than help you finish college: it can lead to an exciting career opportunity.

J-board chairmen to meet

A meeting for all hall Judicial Board Chairmen will be held this Monday at 7 p.m. in the Student Government offices. The purpose of the meeting is to distribute ballot boxes and review the election procedures for Tuesday

The Way We See It

The following is an analysis of the strengths and weaknesses of the three SBP-SBVP tickets, accompanied by an endorsement based on the analysis. Before deciding to endorse, The Observer editorial board conducted individual interviews with each ticket Wednesday night. This endorsement is the result of discussion following the interviews and represents the opinion of a majority of the editorial board.

On Monday The Observer will publish columns written by the candidates, in which they may challenge any part of this editorial and make their final statements to the student body.

Blanco-Ewing

The Observer credits these candidates with addressing the broadest range of issues, including questions of judicial procedure and constitutional reform not dealt with by the other tickets. But while the candidates demonstrated their research into proposed lighting for the Stepan basketball courts and a student activities complex, we found them unfamiliar with important aspects of recent Student Government history which bear on some of their other proposals.

Specifically, they did not seem to have taken adequate stock of past arguments and developments in controversies over 8 a.m. exams, pass-fail option deadlines and the status of parietals offenses. And their proposal to give the newly-elected SBP and SBVP a voice in the selection of Student Union director embroils the selection process once more in politics.

Both candidates have shown genuine interest in hall politics and in campus affairs--Blanco through his membership on the Groundskeepers Rights Coalition and the Faculty Senate ad hoc committee on faculty-student relations, and Ewing through her work on Mardi Gras, An Tostal and in Student Union and Student Government.

But we feel the weakness of this ticket is that it lacks a realistic understanding of history and of the feasibility of its proposals and what their implementation would entail.

McKenna-Roohan

This ticket deals with a narrower set of goals, but offers more experience in campus leadership. McKenna has shown himself capable of accomplishing goals in his position as Junior Class President. Roohan has taken an active role in the Hall Presidents Council as president of St. Ed's and spokesperson for the Student Review Committee.

This ticket offers two ideas in particular that warrant mention: a long-overdue proposal for off-campus students to store their valuables over break, and development of workshops for hall, class and club leaders in effective planning of social events. We would have liked to have seen more concrete proposals on these topics from the candidates.

In fact, the general weakness of this ticket seems to be a failure to adequately explore the implications of its proposals. Two cases in point are the Third World Conference and the Council on Communication.

The first proposal is appealing in principle, but would require much more extensive financial and organizational resources than McKenna-Roohan have indicated. The housing and feeding of 50-60 conference delegates alone would be a tremendous project.

The Council on Communication is an unnecessary duplication of the roles of the hall councils and the HPC. Most problems arising within the halls can be handled by the rector or the hall council. Problems that are more wide-spread or persistent are the proper concern of the HPC or even the CLC. The creation of a new body would only obstruct the channels of communication more.

We feel McKenna-Roohan's experience and records in campus leadership indicate they can implement successful programs, but we question whether their proposed programs are well-defined enough to act on.

Schlageter-Rizzo

This ticket's proposals are more modest, but also better-researched and, for the most part, more feasible. Although we have no great confidence in the success of monthly forums--variations of which have been consistently poorly attended--we see these candidates' guaranteed 48-hour response as a simple, but practical way of soliciting and responding to student problems and suggestions.

The proposed Career Development Center, though not original with them or unique to their platform (the proposal was first made in the Report of the Committee to Evaluate Coeducation and is included in the McKenna-Roohan platform), has been researched thoroughly by Schlageter-Rizzo. Likewise, of the three tickets' platforms on Security, theirs is the only one outlining a specific mechanism through which proposals could be evaluated and recommendations made to the appropriate administrators.

Schlageter has proven his ability to implement programs as Student Union Service Commissioner. He has been responsible for such things as the book exchange, the plant sale and the Freshman Register. Rizzo has been active as president of Lyons Hall and as a member of the Neighborhood Roots planning committee.

The Observer endorses the Schlageter-Rizzo ticket because it combines well-defined, concrete proposals and a proven ability to implement them.

Lobotomy

by Patrick Byrnes

OF COURSE NOT! I'M A
TAURUS AND MY HOROSCOPE
SAYS WE'RE NEVER SUPERSTITIOUS.

Presently, there are over 300 youths in the South Bend area who need some kindness, understanding, and companionship from a friend they can call their own. Whether it be a snowball fight, watching a game, or just talking, it only takes an hour or two a week to brighten the life of some boy or girl.

The popular notion that youths in need of a big brother or sister are troubled children from broken homes is not often the case. In many instances, the youngsters are intelligent, active, and well-behaved, and come from good homes. Yet, often one parent is dead, which forces the other to work. Therefore, the youths just need a friend on whom they can occasionally rely.

As a big brother for the last three years, I have developed a close, personal relationship with a fatherless 10 year old boy. The value of such a relationship can only be truly appreciated by those who have experienced the joy of giving a part of one's self to another. I will never forget the looks of joy on this boy's face when we worked together to win trophies in a Big-Brother sponsored three-legged race and bowling tournament. Our other, more common, activities include bike rides, feeding animals at the zoo, and throwing the football.

Their need is great, but you can satisfy it. Why not make a new friend? Call the Big Brother and Big Sister Association today at 232-9958. You will make a needy boy or girl very happy!

Anti-Semitism unchristian

Dear Editor:

The crude anti-semitism of Mr. and Mrs. Ford's letter in the Feb. 23 edition of the Observer tempts one to ignore it in the hopes that such views are simply beyond the pale of rational discourse. However, I feel it is important that Christians not leave it to our Jewish colleagues to react against this kind of slander if we are not to repeat the past. For once before in this century, intelligent and good Christians thought that anti-semitism was too crude to deserve an argument and as a result we made the Jews pay a terrible price.

So let us be clear that we Christians will not condone the kind of attack exemplified in Mr. and Mrs. Ford's letter. For not only does it attack the very people that carry God's promise, but it manifests a virulent nationalism that is the denial of the Kingdom of Christ. In order to gesture the seriousness of this claim let me say clearly that if Mr. and Mrs. Ford identify with the Christian community, as a matter of integrity they ought not to do so as clearly they worship Caesar and not Christ.

Grounds crew speaks out

Dear Editor:

We are writing this letter to express our disappointment at the University's handling of the recent suspensions, and at its refusal to talk to us. Reprimand procedures which are clearly laid out, were not followed in this instance. Apparently, Mr. Mason can by-pass any University procedure at his own whim. It's ironic that Mr. Mason is so insistent on following strict procedure when it comes to our request to meet with Personnel, yet he so quickly disregards procedure when it comes to such a serious matter as suspending workers.

The groundskeepers have had eight days off since December 25, 1977, and they worked both Christmas Day and New Years Day through the blizzard. We bring this up to show that we have worked long hours, under harsh conditions. However, our complaint is not with the amount of work, but rather, at how poorly we are treated while at work. Day in and day out we are given difficult and heavy work to do by hand that could more easily, and in the past has been, done by machine. We are being hassled not to take the short breaks that are so necessary in the freezing weather we work in. Why are we being harassed? Could it be that the University would like to settle its labor disputes by forcing us to quit? We do not know the answers to these questions because the University refuses to talk to twenty-one of its workers about job conditions.

We will not let these suspensions dampen our desire for a union - if anything, it clearly shows the need for one.

Big Brothers need volunteers

Dear Editor:

The Big Brother and Big Sister Association of South Bend desperately needs volunteers! Did you watch a basketball game, enjoy your favorite hobby, or frolic in the snow this past week? Why not try sharing these activities with a lonely child?

Surviving The Saints

Reverend Robert Griffin

The other day, I heard news of a priest who is very dear to me, a classmate of seminary days who is as close to me as a brother. We were ordained in different years he and I; but there were times, in our student training, when his sense of humor kept me going, because with him, I could laugh at solemnities. Seminary life could be tough, especially during the Lents when you had resolved to become perfect. Perfection was a habit, it was thought, learned from reading the lives of the saints. Looking back, the examples of the saints made perfection seem like a pretty grim habit to acquire. Sister Elizabeth of the Trinity, for instance, insisted that her only consolation was to be left without consolations. St. Henry Suso lined his drawers with needles. Father Willie Doyle, the Jesuit, ejaculated prayers until his jaws ached, and chilled his concupiscence by standing in frigid pools of water up to his neck. Needles, ejaculations, and frigid water were the easy stuff compared with the need for silence and interior recollection. Interior recollection was like listening to the voice of God all day, as my dog listens to hear if I'm awake in the morning so that I can get up and take him outside. Without silence, we were told as seminarians, we could never be properly recollected, interiorly.

When, as seminarians, I told my friend I thought Sister Elizabeth of the Trinity was dreary, he said he found her more depressing than acne on a first date. I asked him if he could keep interiorly recollected, and he said only when he didn't line his drawers with needles. I said I had tried ejaculatory prayers, and he admitted standing up to his neck in chilled water. The only consolation of such practices, we both agreed, was that they left us without consolation.

I had news the other day of my friend, but it didn't bring me laughter. After many years of ministry, my friend has decided to leave the active priesthood. There are announcements people make, I have noticed, when you mustn't seem stunned, when you'd be lacking class and grace to say: "Leave me alone with the news. Let me shed my tears by myself." Someone you love or care about says: "Mitzie and I are divorcing, you know"; or, "You won't believe this, but it appears to me that I'm gay"; or, less sadly, "I'm joining the charismatic movement." Such announcements can frighten you because you are losing friends to an experience where you cannot help them. They will do well; you will survive, if only they'll allow you an immediate moment where you're not smiling.

I wept when I learned my friend was leaving the priesthood. Why shouldn't I weep? There are memories that are part of innocence, and I will never again be the innocent novice who listened to hear God's voice in the silent hours of the seminary. Memories can get bent out of shape when you hear news that a friend has left. So much of you belongs to his strength that you wonder if you can ever feel innocent or young again.

All that any of us is called to do is to save his soul; the saints teach us that. Neither my friend nor I ever wanted to be saints; as holy men, we could never have made it. The gift of laughter, I think, has helped me more than all my prayers. I wonder if anyone has ever thought of making laughter a sacrament?

For a while, I think, my friend as a priest stopped laughing. I think that is why he is leaving, in search of laughter. The ordained life can be as grim as a seminary on a day in Lent. At his first Mass, and every Mass for the next decade, my friend announced: "Introibo ad altare Dei; ad Deum qui laetificabit juventutem meam." ("I will go unto the altar of God; to God who gives joy to my youth.") One day for him in middle age, the joy showed up missing. When joy leaves town, there seems to be a need to search for it.

To every seminarian who is ordained, the priesthood is given as an eternal trust. It is a tradition of service you belong to, a grace that sinews your soul. You can't leave it anymore than you can escape fingerprints, unless you're willing to do violence to yourself, and my friend isn't a violent person. His priesthood will be less visible now, but I trust him to continue as a priest, since God never reclaims His gifts, and robes are not needed for the rituals known to the heart.

Perfection is not a habit that the saints can teach because the saints are not perfect as God is perfect. Maybe I should have heard God in the novitiate silence; instead I heard the laughter of a friend. From that laughter came a peace that was like God's voice singing in my soul.

Saints are such lovely people. It's too bad that they are inimitable. If only Henry Suso could have gotten on to holiness without the needles. If only Sister Elizabeth could have accepted consolations. Then I could have enjoyed the saints rather than to have felt the need to survive them.

Angel Flight: Who What Where When Why

by Bryan Gruley

As I crossed the South Quad on my way to an interview with campus Angel Flight Commander Mary Melley, I carried a notepad that bore a simple question at the top of the front page: "Angel Flight—what is it?" I've heard that same question asked around campus a number of times in the past few months, particularly the week preceding St. Valentine's Day, when a group of girls calling themselves "Angel Flight" could be seen selling candy in the South Dining Hall. It was then that I finally decided to research this Angel Flight thing and find out exactly what it is.

Angel Flight is a service organization sponsored by the Air Force ROTC. Based in college campuses across the nation, it serves communities and colleges in affiliation with the Arnold Air Society. In most places it originates from a specific sorority, though at Notre Dame the rules prohibit this. It was founded in 1952 as a sister organization to the Arnold Air Society (AAS), and at that time was mainly groups of girls serving the AAS boys. That changed quickly, and by the late fifties the Angels were doing things for themselves. Today the Angels and the AAS work together on some projects, but primarily they are independent groups working for their own individual interests.

At Notre Dame, Angel Flight is in the midst of revitalization. Last year only four girls were members, and one of these graduated. Now, thirteen girls and one boy—only seven of whom are ROTC members—serve under Commander Mary Melley. A sophomore from McLean, Virginia, Mary supervises the ND Flight detachment and reports to Area and National Commanders. Air Force Captain Gene Renuart and his wife Jill advise and help out with Flight activities.

Flight activities are varied. The Angels collected for the Jerry Lewis Muscular Dystrophy Telethon last November, and have been baking special order birthday cakes for AAS members since September. Their major project in the St. Joe County area has been to lend a hand at the Korvilla Home for the Mentally Retarded, maintaining the grounds and taking patients to football games, picnics, etc. Sometimes they enjoy social gatherings with the Air Force Cadet Corps. Nationally, the Angel Flight 1977-78 campaign is "The Family," and the ND Flight has contributed to the cause by giving Thanksgiving and Christmas dinners to needy people in the area. Fund-raising activities include selling programs and polish sausages at football games, and most recently, selling and delivering Valentine's Day candy on the ND-SMC campuses.

This is Mary's second year in Angel Flight. "Candy Carson, last year's Commander, got me into it. She got Angel Flight going again." A 1977 grad, Candy was responsible for rejuvenating interest in Angel Flight; previous Commanders had presided over more members, but none had instituted pledge programs that would bring in new ones. Consequently, Angel Flight gradually dissipated almost to non-existence. Fortunately, there was Candy and then Mary to get it back on its feet again. Many freshmen were recruited last semester. Says Mary: "Freshman

America gather to share ideas and get to know each other. Mary just returned from an Area Conclave in St. Louis this past weekend. "We accomplished a lot of things," she said. "Came up with some new ideas. Hopefully, we'll sponsor next year's Bi-Area Conclave."

Mary states two objectives that guide her supervision of the Angels. "I want people more aware of things off-campus.

*Observer Features

year you keep your eyes open for a good social organization. I came out here thinking of getting into something like this."

Mary's duties include attending various conclaves in other parts of the country. At these, Angel Flight members from across

People come here thinking there's nothing outside the campus borders. I lived off-campus in a very poor section of town, and I could see how much could be done." She also wants the Angels "to have a good time. You're supposed to get something out of it, whether it's satisfaction out of helping people or meeting them socially."

One of Angel Flight's biggest problems is getting work. "There are so many service organizations on campus," says Mary, "there's almost no more projects. You have to look to find them." Anonymity is also a problem. With little money for publicity, the Angels have been relatively unknown around campus. "However, Mary sees a change in the near future. Pledge programs to recruit new Angels are in the works. "We're trying to get more guys involved, and of course more girls too," Mary says. Other future plans include taking the Korvilla Home people to the Blue-Gold (perhaps Green-Gold this year?) football game, and possibly a Special Olympics for those same people.

That's Angel Flight. A group of students having fun helping out in a bunch of places on the ND-SMC campus and St. Joe's County. If you happen to hear someone saying "What the hell is 'Angel Flight?'" or some jerk suggesting that it might be one of those hot contemporary TV sitcoms, direct him or her to Mary Melley, 324 Lewis. She's looking for new Angels everywhere.

Tongsun Park gives details on influence-buying operation

WASHINGTON [AP] - Tongsun Park reportedly began giving details of an alleged influence-buying operation to the House ethics committee yesterday and some members called it odious and ugly.

"We covered the most odious episode in the story today," Rep. Bruce Caputo (R-N.Y.) told reporters.

"It was a conspiracy of American businessmen, congressmen and Koreans to make blatantly improper payments over a sustained period with U.S. taxpayers' money," he said. "The details are revolting." Rep. Millicent Fenwick (R-N.J.) said, "the whole thing is ugly."

She and Caputo refused, because of the committee's secrecy rules, to reveal any of Park's testimony but said he gave new details on payments already disclosed publicly.

"There's no new territory but there are new interpretations and they're ugly," Mrs. Fenwick said.

In another development, the committee's special counsel, Leon Jaworski, said he met with Secretary of State Cyrus Vance on the ethics committee's efforts to get South Korean officials' testimony but no agreement was reached.

South Korea has adamantly refused to turn over the officials. Asked about prospects for a breakthrough, Jaworski said "I wouldn't even speculate on that."

Jaworski made the comment during a break in the ethics committee's third day of questioning Tongsun Park on his alleged influence buying Congress.

Jaworski has said it is essential for the committee to get the testimony of not just Park but also other Korean officials, including former Ambassador Kim Dong Jo, to determine whether congressmen sold influence or should be punished for any other misconduct.

The former ambassador and his wife are accused of trying to give envelopes stuffed with $100 bills to at least three congressmen.

The former ambassador broke silence last week with a Newsweek magazine interview to denounce the allegation as "ridiculous."

He called a former embassy officer who made the accusation a liar and called a Capitol Hill secretary reckless for identifying a photograph of him as the man who tried unsuccessfully to give Rep. Larry Winn (R-Kan.) such an envelope.

Tongsun Park talked to reporter briefly to deny an assertion by several committee members that he is getting increasingly evasive in the closed-door questioning.

"I may sound evasive but that is not my intention," Park said. "My desire is to tell the complete truth."

Cuban participation confirmed in war against Somali rebels

[AP] - Ethiopia confirmed for the first time yesterday that Cuban troops are manning front lines alongside Ethiopians in the African country's war against secessionist rebels. A rebel leader claimed Cuban paratroopers and women tank crew members have been dropped into the battle zone.

Guerrillas fighting in southernmost Ethiopia, meanwhile, reported killing two Cuban officers. If the report is true, it represents the farthest that Havana's troops have ranged southward in the war.

"Cubans, who are renowned for shedding their blood anywhere and at all times in genuine struggle and for the sake of principles, are standing alongside the Ethiopian people's defense forces on the front line," Ethiopian head of state Lt. Col. Mengistu Haile Mariam was quoted as saying in a speech in the capital city of Addis Ababa.

The speech was reported by the British Broadcasting Corp., monitored from Ethiopian state radio.

Direct Cuban military involvement has long been reported in the war against Somalia-backed rebels in the Ogaden region of eastern Ethiopia. The rebels, ethnic Somalis, want to separate their Ogaden homeland from Ethiopia and join it to neighboring Somalia.

The Carter administration, expressing increasing concern about the Soviet-Cuban role in the conflict, says more than 11,000 Cuban soldiers and 1,000 Soviet advisers are helping the Ethiopians.

Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance said yesterday in Washington that two Soviet generals are helping direct the Cuban-Ethiopian counter-offensive against the Somalis.

The Mengistu regime is heavily dependent on Soviet arms supplies and has acknowledged the presence of Cubans and Russians in Ethiopia. But previously it had not confirmed that Cuban troops were at the front lines.

A senior Cuban rebel leader, Abdi Nasir Sheikh, said in Mogadishu, Somalia, that airborne Cuban troops parachuted into the front lines last week at the village of Biyo-Lulue, 62 miles north of Dire Dawa, and at another village east of the strategic walled city of Harar.

He said most of the combined Cuban-Ethiopian forces dropped into the area were "completely destroyed."

The Cubans included crews for Soviet-built armor that had been parachuted down at the same time by Soviet transport planes, Nasir said, and among the tank crews were Cuban women.

He gave no figures on the number of women or the number of paratroopers.

Dire Dawa and Harar are Ethiopia's two last major strongholds in the Ogaden, where Somali forces have captured more than 90 per cent of the disputed region since fighting erupted in mid-July.

In Rome yesterday, Ethiopia's foreign minister, Feleke Ghedle Gheorghis, denied that Cubans are fighting in the northern province of Eritrea, where another group of insurgents is trying to secede from Ethiopia.

Eritrean rebels have claimed that 1,000 Cuban troops are in the Eritrean capital of Asmara and some have taken part in the fighting.

UMW president urges contract ratification

[AP] - On the eve of the first balloting to ratify a contract that could end the 87-day-old coal strike, United Mine workers President Arnold Miller went to West Virginia coal country yesterday, and warned that rejection could kill the UMW.

In Washington President Carter urged the miners to accept the proposed contract.

Most rank-and-file miners vote on the pact this weekend, but some locals vote today, others as late as Monday.

Because many miners have expressed reservations - and even anger - about the pact, Miller and other union officials have been airing radio and television ads since Tuesday to urge ratification. Yesterday, he and UMW vice president Sam Church were in West Virginia, urging ratification in a state where 60,000 of the 160,000 striking miners live.

In Ohio, Illinois, West Virginia and several other states, hundreds of UMW locals were meeting to discuss the proposal.

Reaction ranged from flat denunciation to resigned acceptance, and it was difficult to predict how the vote might go.

In a telephone interview with the Associated Press from Oak Hill, W.Va., Miller said that if the pact is killed, the union could find itself bankrupt and negotiating separately with 2,600 coal companies.

He said the Bituminous Coal Operator Association, with which the UMW reached its tentative agreement last Friday, has said it won't negotiate further as a unit if the contract is turned down.

"I don't see how we can go back to the bargaining table," Miller said. "We'd have to have a huge number of bargaining councils. It would cost us $15 million to bargain under those conditions."

Miller also said that if the contract is turned down, he expects Carter to take action to force the miners back to work. But he said the miners would refuse to work under a Taft-Hartley injunction, and that would mean he and the union would be fined. "A fine to the union - that would wipe us out," he said.

In Washington, meanwhile, Carter said of the UMW members: "I hope they will vote affirmatively."

At a news conference yesterday, Carter also defended his handling of the strike as "a carefully balanced judgment... Had we precipitously imposed our will in the coal strike deliberations, that effort would have been counter-productive."

The proposed contract would raise wages from an average $7.80 by a maximum $2.40 over three years. The most controversial provisions would make miners pay part of the cost of some medical treatments that have been free; would make the health plan company-run rather than independent; would continue a pension plan that gives recent retirees larger checks than other pensioners, and would allow companies to penalize leaders of wildcat strikes.

Even if the miners ratify the contract, it would not automatically end the strike. The UMW is negotiating with the American Bituminous Contractors for a separate contract to cover an estimated 30,000 construction miners.

Indian collection to be exhibited

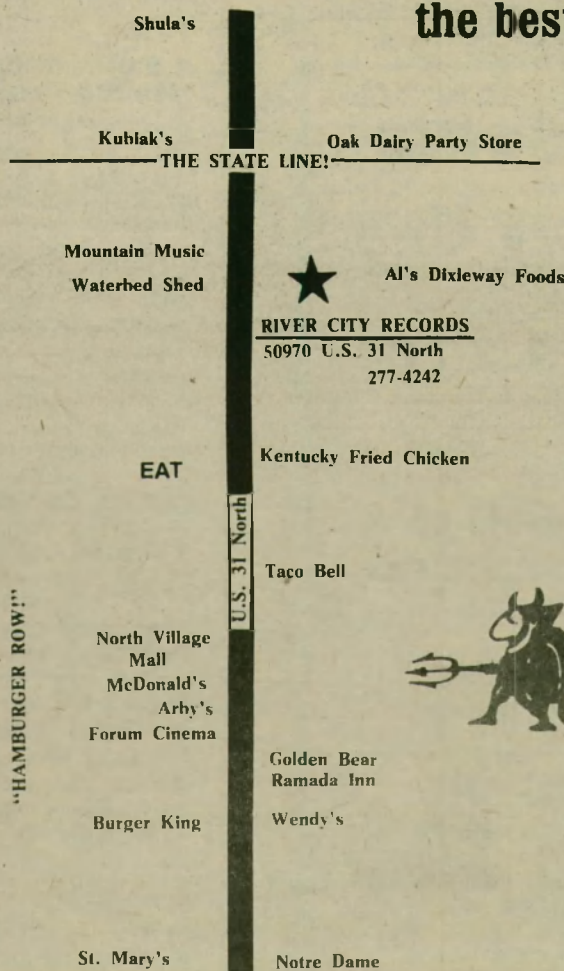

The American Indian Collection of the Notre Dame Art Gallery, some of which was literally rescued from attic storage rooms on campus, will be placed on display beginning Sunday in the O'Shaughnessy Hall studios. Some of the items are believed to have been collected by Fr. Edward F. Sorin, the University's founder.

Select works from private collections will be added to the Notre Dame items. Included are a rare Blackfoot war shirt, beaded moccasins, pottery, baskets, paintings, blankets, masks and ritual objects.

Other exhibits during March include photographs of W. Eugene Smith and recent acquisitions in the permanent collection. The gallery is open weekdays from 10 to 5 p.m. and weekends from 1 to 5 p.m. Special evening hours are scheduled from 7 to 9 p.m. on Thursdays.

Mideast relations improve

JERUSALEM [AP] - A crack appeared yesterday in the deadlock between Israel and Egypt on a Mideast peace settlement when a U.S. mediator handed Prime Minister Menachem Begin his first direct communication from Egypt's President Anwar Sadat in more than two months.

Begin declined to reveal the contents of the letter conveyed by Assistant Secretary of State Alfred Atherton. But he said based on the message and the reply he will send next week, "there is reason to say the negotiations...will continue."

It was the first direct contact between the two leaders since they met in Ismailia, Egypt on Dec. 25.

A day earlier, sources were saying Atherton's shuttle mission had run aground, having failed to produce the declaration of principles for peace without which Egypt and Israel cannot resume hard bargaining.

Atherton planned to return to Egypt and also visit Jordan and Saudi Arabia to keep up the momentum until Begin visits President Carter later this month.

Israel and Egypt are stalled over the declaration of principles because Jerusalem rejects Cairo's demand for total withdrawal from captured Arab land, and acceptance of Palestinian self-determination.

SU, Ombudsman start ride service

The Student Union Services Commission and Ombudsman are sponsoring a Notre Dame-Saint Mary's ride information service to help students find rides or riders for spring break.

To take advantage of this service, a student should call Ombudsman, 6283, and give the volunteer the area code of his destination and date of departure. The Ombudsman will be able to look up the area code if the student doesn't know it.

The Ombudsman will use this information to match the student up with other people who have called.

The ride information service is in operation the entire school year.

Orthodox Christians plan synod, strengthen Roman Catholic ties

(AP)-Patriarch Demetrius I, spiritual leader of about 250 million Orthodox Christians, says ties with the Roman Catholic Church are "at a most satisfying phase" despite the lack of dramatic events marking recent advances in relations.

"The common wish is that for the preliminary work to be molded into a concrete form of dialogue," the patriarch said in response to written questions.

He reported crucial progress toward staging a great synod of all Orthodox churches-something that had long been pursued by the late Patriarch Athenagoras, his predecessor who imposed a dramatic turn to efforts to heal more than 900 years of often bitter and violent separation between the two largest groups of Christianity.

The great synod would be something parallel to the 1962-1965 Vatican Ecumenical Council which introduced vast reforms in Catholicism.

Both the problems the Istanbul patriarchate has to clear in convening it are vastly different from those faced by the centralized Vatican structure.

The kind of authority Patriarch Demetrius exerts over Orthodoxy differ as much from that of the pope over Catholics as the run-down compound of the 18th century St. George's Church where he lives at Phanar on the banks of the Golden Horn differs from the glorious structure of St. Peter's Basilica and the Vatican as a sovereign state.

The patriarch's authority is spiritual with national churches maintaining full independence.

"In our opinion these last years have been decisive in the preparation of the Holy and Great Synod of the Orthodox belief," Patriarch Demetrius said.

Since Athenagoras embraced Pope Paul VI in a historic encounter in Jerusalem in 1964, he strived to have all the independent Orthodox churches move jointly on the path toward hoped-for unity with Catholicism.

Some churches, especially the Greek Orthodox Church, have for years opposed any attempt at closer contacts with Rome.

A great synod would mark an extraordinary event for all Christianity. Orthodoxy held its last such meeting in the 8th century.

A pre-synodical Pan-Orthodox conference met in Nov. 1976 to lay the doctrinal ground for the great synod.

Demetrius, who succeeded Athenagoras in 1972, ruled out any pressure on national churches.

"However," he said, "historically and canonically the Patriarchate is the first among the Orthodox churches and as such holds certain prerogatives and obligations in the light of which it carries its responsibilities."

Two parallel theological commissions established respectively by the patriarch and the pope have been charged with trying to sort out the doctrinal problems separating Orthodox and Catholics. The first subject deals with doctrinal teaching about the sacraments—that is, the main Christian rites from the Eucharist and baptism to the ordination of priests and bishops. Sub-committees of experts are scheduled to meet in Rome in March.

Demetrius said the patriarchate and the Vatican have been exchanging messages to facilitate the commissions' task.

Demetrius' first few years as patriarch have seen a broad reorganization of patriarchal offices, better ties with the Islamic world and improved relations with the so-called Monophysite churches, small ancient groups considered as heretical by both Orthodox and Catholics, such as the Coptic, Armenian, Nestorian and Jacobite churches.

Patriarchate sources described as "excellent" relations with the Turkish government, which traditionally looked with distrust at the survival of what it considered a fragment of the Byzantine empire in its midst. There are less than 8,000 Greek Orthodox Christians in Istanbul with a population of 2.2 million.

Demetrius recognized the value of "coexistence with Islam" and praised "cooperation for the accomplishment of common pursuits, like the strengthening of belief in God, the practice of a higher morality and serving man regardless of race, language and faith."

Sutton named year's best

NEW YORK AP - Eddie Sutton, the Arkansas coach who brought new respect to Southwest Conference basketball, has been named The Associated Press college coach of the year for 1978.

Sutton, whose meteoric success at Arkansas helped rebuild the image of a conference largely reputed for its football, was an easy winner in the nation-wide balloting by sports writers and broadcasters announced Thursday.

Sutton, the Coach of the Year runnerup last year when his Razorbacks won the SWC championship, received 60 votes to 37 for Marquette's Hank Raymonds.

Abe Lemons, Sutton's chief competitor whose Texas team tied Arkansas for the regular season SWC championship, finished third in the balloting with 33 votes.

Ray Meyer, who led surprising DePaul into the Top Ten rankings this season with a tem reminiscent of his powerhouses of the 1940's was fourth with 26 votes. New Mexico's Norm Ellenberger rounded out the top five with 15 votes.

Sutton's success at Arkansas has been done with remarkable haste. After developing a winning program at Creighton for five years, he took the Razorback job four years ago and turned perpetual losers into a continual winner overnight.

His records since taking over at Arkansas in March of 1974 have shown steady improvement -- 17-9, 19-9, 26-2, and 26-2 this year prior to the SWC play-offs.

Arkansas' players wear the words "determination" and "dedication" on their warmup jerseys and Sutton has seen to it that they have also been imprinted on their minds.

"You have to have a love of basketball," is the way Sutton explains his philosophy. "We don't want to worry about motivation. We want players whose highlights of the day is coming to practice."

Sutton played guard for Hank Iba at Oklahoma A&M and was a graduate assistant to the legendary Aggie coach for one year. He says it make him a better coach.

"The one thing I learned from Mr. Iba is to understand the role of intercollegiate athletics within the university framework," says Sutton. "It is important for the student body, faculty and alums and fans to identify with the young men in your program."

"Everyone wants to win, but if you lose and everyone knows you are losing with quality people then you don't have problems. We may not have the best basketball team in the nation. There are a lot of good basketball teams, but no one has a better group of people in its basketball program than we have."

Sutton has built his success at Arkansas around the play of junior Sidney Moncreif and seniors Marvin Delph and Ron Brewer. All three are Home-grown, all three are 6-foot-4 and all three are all-conference, or better.

Irish seek road victory over Dayton

by Craig Chval
Sports writer

Last Sunday's 71-65 victory over Marquette speaks for itself; the Fighting Irish roundballers can play with the best of 'em. In fact, Digger Phelps' crew proved that they can dominate the creme de creme of college basketball, at least for a half.

But unfortunately for Notre Dame, the NCAA tournament is not scheduled for the Athletic and Convocation Center, and neither is tomorrow afternoon's clash with the Dayton Flyers. Since their 69-66 verdict over UCLA in Pauley Pavilion on December, the Irish have raised some serious doubts as to whether they can beat even a run-of-the-mill club on the road.

With a 15-2 record in the University of Dayton Arena, the Flyers (17-9 overall) can hardly be considered run-of-the-mill. The game is already sold out, and the Flyers are hungry for a NIT bid, so Saturday will provide the Irish with an excellent opportunity to see if they can do on the road what they did in the second half Sunday—exhibit admirable poise under trying circumstances.

Notre Dame's defense will be up against a powerful inside-outside combination tomorrow in junior guard John Paxson and senior forward Erv Giddings. Paxson, who managed a dozen points against the Irish in last year's game, will bring a 17.2 scoring average into tomorrow's contest. A versatile performer who has also seen action at a forward spot, Paxson is finding the bottom of the net at a .511 clip. Giddings will be looking to improve upon last year's ACC performance that netted him 14 points and six rebounds. Dayton's leading rebounder, Giddings is latching on to an average of 9.1 caroms per game. He also averages 13.7 points per outing.

Joining Paxson in the backcourt will be Jack Zimmerman, Dayton's quarterback. Zimmerman is second to Paxson on the club in assists, while averaging 11.2 points. Freshman Jim Rhoden holds down the second forward post, contributing a 10.2 average. Against Xavier, Rhoden romped for 14 points in the first half before taking the rest of the night off.

Another rookie, Richard Montague, has started the past two games in place of Terry Ross at center for the Flyers. Ross, who has a fractured cheekbone, should be ready to see action against the Irish. Before Ross suffered his injury, the senior pivotman was averaging 8.7 points and 6.5 rebounds.

Last season, when the Irish whipped the Flyers in the ACC, 97-64, Bruce Flowers enjoyed an excellent game for Notre Dame. The 6-8 junior connected on nine of his 13 shots from the field and added a pair of free throws to total 20 points and lead all scorers. Toby Knight and Duck Williams chipped in 17 apiece for the Irish, and Rich Branning added 14.

Although the Irish assured themselves of an NCAA bid with their impressive second-half showing against Marquette, tomorrow's game could prove to be almost as crucial, especially mentally. If Notre Dame can go into Dayton, ignore what promises to be a delirious crowd, and defeat the Flyers, the Irish will have that much-needed confidence to win on the road.

But if Notre Dame suffers a similar fate that befell the 1973-74 squad when an overflow record crowd of 13,528 saw the Flyers hand a John Shumate-led Notre Dame team only its second loss of the season, that famed "sixth-man" will be sitting on the other bench come NCAA time—in the person of self-doubt.

ND track squad faces test

by Gregory Solman
Sports Writer

There is but a single discomfiting aspect to an undefeated record, having to defend it upon every occasion of competition.

The Drake Bulldogs, in town for this Saturday's track meet pose an undeniable threat to the Irish current 2-0 dual meet record.

"There is no question that this will be the best team we've faced thus far this season," emphasized Piane. "Last year Drake beat us solidly and many of their top performers return to this year's squad. We're going to try to turn last year's results around but it will take a solid effort on our part to do that."

It will take more than a solid effort from several key Irish performers, who are now competition after formers, who are now coming off a weekend free from competition after two consecutive wins over Valparaiso, 113-18, and Northwestern, 86-45.

"Actually, a weekend layoff can sometimes be helpful," commented freshman shotputter John Shusan. "But this early in the season, I'd personally prefer to compete every weekend to get to know your competition and get out your opening season jitters."

However, Coach Joe Piane scheduled the weekend layoff deliberately to have his team rested, his runners especially.

"Last year Drake defeated us by 45 points," recalls Piane, "but this year, it could go down to the relay race at the end of the meet."

If it does, the Irish will have to contend with Jim who earlier in the season at Michigan State relay split of 4:02. The Bulldogs also have talent stacked in other events as well, particularly in the mile and two mile races, where Drake boasts Boyd Nansel, who placed second in last year's Notre Dame Invitational. Both Steve Welch and Dennis VanderKraats followed Nansel to the finish line in that race, and have formulated plans for the Saturday contest.

"Steve (Welch), Dan (Horgan) and I will probably try to run a faster pace race in hopes that he'll tire," commented VanderKraats, pointing out that Nansel will be doubling roles by running both the one and two mile race.

"Right now, as far as our training has been going," added VanderKraats, "It's still quite early in the season, and we're

Wilkinson named

ST. LOUIS AP Bud Wilkinson, former University of Oklahoma football coach, has been named head coach of the St. Louis Cardinals of the National Football League.

Cardinals owner Bill Bidwill announced today that Wilkinson, who has been out of coaching since he made an unsuccessful bid for the U.S. Senate in 1964, will replace Don Coryell as the Cards' mentor.

Wilkinson won national championships with the Sooners in 1949, 1955 and 1956, and is considered to be one of the winningest coaches in college football.

The announcement was a great surprise, as Bidwill knew it would be.

"I'm just waiting for someone to come up to me and say, 'You sure came out of left field with this one,'" Bidwill said. "When that happens, I'm going to say, 'No, right field.'" doing mostly long distance base work. But we're working hard."

Short distance men like the Irish Kurt Spieler will have their work cut out against Drakes fine contingent of sprinters and hurdlers.

ND eyes playoffs

The Irish are currently in sixth place in the WCHA, one point behind fifth place Colorado College, with a 12-17-1 record and 25 points. They have just two regular season games remaining against Wisconsin before the playoffs begin on March 10-11. An Irish victory this weekend would insure a playoff spot: eight of ten teams make the playoffs.

The other teams fighting for a playoff spot are North Dakota, Minnesota-Duluth, Michigan and Colorado College. Michigan State has been mathematically eliminated. This weekend Colorado College plays Denver in a home and home series, North Dakota meets Minnesota at Grand Forks, Minnesota-Duluth hosts Michigan Tech and Michigan and Michigan State play a home and home series.

If Notre Dame loses two games to the Badgers a chain of events must occur for the Irish not to make the playoffs. First North Dakota must come up with two points, Duluth gain three points and Michigan sweep Michigan State. In the event that Notre Dame finishes tied for eighth place the Irish will advance if they are tied with Michigan and Minnesota-Duluth and miss the playoffs if they tie with Colorado College and North Dakota.

WNU-AM will broadcast both games on Saturday night at 8:15 and Sunday afternoon at 3:15.
