Laverty reviews efficiency of SMC governing board

by Donna Trauscht

The Saint Mary's Board of Governance met last night to discuss usual matters of business, but in addition, Mary Laverty was present to report on their efficiency as a governing board.

Laverty, director of Student Activities, recently returned from a leadership workshop at Southern Illinois University in Carbondale, IL. Fifteen schools were involved in the workshop, Laverty being the sole representative from Saint Mary's. She was received by the other participating schools with a standing ovation due to the high standing of the college.

In the process of explaining Cooperative Programming to the other colleges, which includes such functions as Mardi Gras, Orientation, the movie series and class formals, Laverty found the SMC program unique in that none of the other schools had heard of it before. In comparison with other schools, Laverty happily reported that Saint Mary's has outstanding activities, both entertaining as well as developmental. However, she did say they were not quite as diverse as some other schools. A future suggestion which she offered to the board, as to begin the utilization of block-booking. Block-booking would make the arrival of various speakers and entertainers more feasible because the expenditures would be shared by various other schools.

The Board discussed possibilities of holding student government elections earlier in the semester in order to provide some type of co-working for the newly-elected members before taking office. However, no conclusions were reached at meeting.

Another proposal involved the separate election of class and hall officers, thereby assuring capable and productive people of a better chance to be involved.

The discussion involved to the suggestion of possible activities for the school charity. Ideas include bingo games, raffles, concerts, a dance marathon, a sports marathon, a talent show, a costume party dance, and some type of faculty-student sports activity. Food sales were also suggested but discouraged, when Laverty pointed out that a local vending machine company has the exclusive right of food sales at Saint Mary's. According to Laverty, the school does receive a small commission on the sales and if that were lost, the possibility of increased tuition might arise.

Announcements were made concerning the Christmas Bazaar, which will be held Dec. 3-9. The Hallmark Card Company and a jewelry store will be participating as well as various art students, who are creating some of the sales items.

The final discussion of the meeting concerned the $10 refrigerator charge. Complaints were aired as to the justification of the charge, and the method of notifying the students when it had to be paid. One of the Board officers pointed out that the charge is mentioned in the student handbook. No immediate decision was reached by the Board as to their stand on the controversial issue.

In Fisher mishap

by Rob Powers
Staff Reporter

A Fisher Hall student suffered severe bleeding last Thursday night after falling against and breaking a window in a hallway while playing soccer.

Other students in his section quickly called for an ambulance, according to Fisher RA Mike Natale. Natale said the first student who called clearly told the security dispatchers, "We need an ambulance. A kid on the fourth floor of Fisher is bleeding badly."

Natale said that two students applied pressure with towels to stop the bleeding in the injured student's arm, back and side. They then accompanied the student down the elevator to the loading dock at the rear of the first floor, where they waited for the ambulance and continued to apply pressure on the wounds. He described the students as "calm and efficient."

A pickup truck belonging to Security passed behind Fisher Hall about two minutes later, according to Natale. Some of the students waved the truck down, and the driver stopped. Natale, thinking that a mistake was made and that a pickup was sent instead of the ambulance, called Security back, and was told the ambulance was on its way.

Eight to ten minutes after the accident, Natale said security's 'Car 1,' a Malibu stationwagon equipped only with a siren, small first aid kit, and a stretcher arrived.

The driver, Sgt. Boyd Fuhr, told the RA "You need an ambulance."

Fuhr said in a telephone interview yesterday that he had been delayed because he had mistakenly gone to the back of Pangborn Hall instead of Fisher. He had walked up to the fourth floor, and upon finding no one, realized his mistake, and drove to the back of Fisher.

Two friends accompanied the injured student in the back of the stationwagon to St. Joseph Hospital continuing to apply pressure to the wounds.

Dr. Leslie Bodnar of the Student Health Center and St. Joseph Hospital, commended the Fisher students for their first aid techniques, which he described as "very well done." He said their actions saved the injured student's life.

Bodnar reported that the student is in "good condition" at St. Joseph Hospital, although he will still have to undergo further surgery on nerves and a tendon. Surgery has already been successfully performed on the veins and

HUD denies ND loan for women's dorm

by Diane Carey

The Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) has denied a request by the University of Notre Dame for a $5 million loan. The money would have been used to supplement a donation to build a women's dormitory.

Brother Kieran Ryan, assistant vice president of Business Affairs, said HUD's refusal to supply the loan was "a matter of HUD not having enough funds."

Ryan pointed out that each year HUD as part of its college housing project, collects money on loan repayments and uses the payments for rehabilitating heating plants and constructing new housing.

This year HUD collected $111 million and allocated $80 million for constructing new housing at colleges and universities throughout the country. Notre Dame requested the maximum loan of $5 million.

"Last year we got a loan of $1,600,000 to rehabilitate our heating system," Ryan noted. "It was very unlikely we would get another loan the following year."

We still do have a donor...

Sr. John Miriam Jones, assistant provost, agreed that HUD's denial was probably "a matter of limited funds and making choices."

"I don't know why we were denied the loan," Jones said. "I don't know if they even gave reasons, but if so, I'm not privy to them."

Jones added that whether the dormitory can be built without the loan hasn't yet been discussed, but the refusal of the money may mean postponement.

"We still do have a donor who I don't think wants to see a headline that says, it's all off," Jones said.

Student suffers casualty

arteries, and his arm is in good condition, he said.

Bodnar said that security's delay was of no consequence.

Security desk dispatcher Jack Moulder said he received six or seven calls between 10:20 and 10:40 p.m. on Thursday night from Fisher students concerning a student who was cut with glass. But there was absolutely no call for an ambulance," he said.

"If just one call had indicated it was extremely serious, we would have called the ambulance," Moulder said.

According to Director of Security Joseph Wall, Car 1 was dispatched to Fisher at 10:20 p.m., reached the scene at 10:24, and arrived at the St. Joseph Hospital Emergency Room at 10:38 p.m.

Liz Gillespie, a third class security patrolman who is certified in first aid, was in the office at the time of the calls. When one of the callers asked to speak to her, he asked her how to treat the student's injured leg, although the leg was not affected.

Gillespie described that student as "hyper" and "making no sense." In the middle of her (Gillespie's) instructions, the student discovered that the security car had arrived, and hung up.

Director Wall said that he regrets the misunderstanding on Thursday night, and said that he intends to immediately train the security staff in emergency medical procedures. He said he has already equipped Security cars 2 and 3 with first aid kits.

Wall also said that students should continue to call for ambulances through the security office, so that security can be sure the ambulance will get to the right place on campus.

Shah of Iran wants law and order back

TEHRAN, Iran [AP] - The beleaguered shah of Iran put his top soldier in charge of the government yesterday in a bid to "establish law and order," but bands of anti-shah protesters responded with new hit-and-run rioting in this troubled city and its outskirts.

One person was reported killed and two were reported wounded when troops dispersed rioters.

The U.S. government, whose ties with Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi are a main target of protesters here, quickly expressed support for the shah's shift to military rule. State Department press officer Jill Schuker said in Washington the monarch acted within his authority and only after it became clear a new civilian government could not be formed.

The new prime minister, chief of staff Gen. Gholam-Reza Azhari, moved swiftly to assert control and head off the threat to the shah's 37-year reign.

Azhari's government ordered troops and tanks to ring key sites in the capital. It also clamped censorship on the local press, radio and television, arrested five editors and issued a "wanted" list for 30 others accused of inciting public unrest through the news media. No censorship was imposed on outgoing news dispatches, however.

The reaction of opposition leaders to the appointment of a military-led government was low-key. Blaming recent violence on pro-shah agitators, they urged their followers to remain united but calm and not to confront the security forces.

But even as Azhari introduced his new Cabinet to the shah at Niavaran Palace, anti-government mobs were burning and looting businesses, mostly bank branches and liquor stores, near Tehran University and in a satellite town near the railroad station just outside the city.

Military authorities said troops fired mostly into the air to disperse the rioters, but in one incident one person was killed and two were wounded.

The military governor of Tehran said his forces have instructions to deal firmly with those who assemble in public in violation of the martial-law regulations that have ruled Tehran and 11 other cities for two months.

Police said small and peaceful anti-government demonstrations were staged in Abadan, in the heart of the oil-producing region in southern Iran.

The long-simmering dissent here, which has erupted into street violence sporadically for months, is both religious and political. Orthodox Moslems demand a return to traditional values in this Islamic society and an end to westernization and what they say is Western domination, and political activists demand democratic reform of the shah's autocratic regime, the freeing of political prisoners and an end to martial law.

News Briefs

National Records to become public

WASHINGTON [AP]-The records of President Carter and Vice President Walter Mondale will be public property when they leave office, under terms of a new law signed by Carter over the weekend. Traditionally, presidents have retained control over their records after leaving office. But under the new law, papers of presidents and vice presidents will be public property after they leave office. Citizens will be able to seek access to the papers under the Freedom of Information Act, but release can be delayed up to 12 years in sensitive cases.

Market trading drops

NEW YORK [AP]-The stock market turned downward in the slowest trading in four weeks yesterday, giving way again to concern over high and still-rising interest rates. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which had staged a 17-point recovery last week after falling 100 points in late October, dropped back 8.23 to 814.88. New York Stock Exchange volume came to just 20.45 million shares, down from 25.99 million Friday and the lightest total since a 19.72 million-share day on Oct. 9.

FBI arrests heist suspect

LOS ANGELES [AP]-The FBI arrested Stanley Mark Rifkin, a computer expert, early yesterday on charges that he masterminded a sophisticated theft of $10.2 million from a bank, then used the money to buy diamonds from the Soviet government. Rifkin, 32, was arrested just after midnight at an apartment near the town of Carlsbad, north of San Diego, said Roger S. Young, FBI agent in charge of the San Diego bureau. He said Rifkin had $12,000 in cash and a cache of diamonds worth $13 million on the retail market.

Local Center selects ND professor

SOUTH BEND, Ind. [AP]-An assistant professor of government at the University of Notre Dame has been appointed president of the National Center for Urban Ethnic Affairs. Center board chairman Ed Marciniak said the selection of Dr. John A. Kromkowski, 39, was a result of a four-month search from among 55 applicants for the post. The center - a national neighborhood revitalization-ethnic affairs organization - was founded in 1970 and currently works with over 300 community-based organizations in 25 states.

Howard loses sign

Vandals strike ND halls

by John McGrath
Staff Reporter

The large sign reading "Howard -- Population 165," long a fixture of the South Quad dorm, was stolen Friday night, Oct. 27, one of the last days of the break.

The sign, which was anchored to the wall above the front entrance, was placed there about 10 years ago, according to Howard Hall President, Mike Kelly.

"It's not so much the price of the sign that bothers us, but the fact that the sign was part of our identity -- that's the worst crime," Kelly said.

According to the dorm president, the sign was stolen either late Friday night or early Saturday morning. "They probably needed a ladder to reach it," he said, adding that to the best of his knowledge the sign was attached to the building with screws.

In addition to the metal sign,

Ten students train for SB Hotline

by Leslie Brinkley

Ten Notre Dame and Saint Mary's students have completed a training program, offered last Saturday and Sunday, by the South Bend Crisis Center. The sessions instructed the students to handle the emergency calls received at South Bend's Hotline agency.

Kim Webb, director of the Crisis Center, described the training as necessary in developing listening skills and applying them to address such problems as child abuse, drugs, battered wives, and suicide.

The two eight-hour sessions exposed the students to these sensitive issues through a group discussion format. The purpose of the discussions was to help people become aware of how they should react to the problems and to make them feel more comfortable in communicating ideas to others.

Upon completion of training, students are assigned to sit in with experienced hotline listeners for three to four weeks. They will eventually be responsible for four hours of hotline service each week.

Senior Mark Ringlein became interested in the program through radio advertisements and attended the training sessions last weekend. He viewed the training as an attempt to break down inhibitions about some of the very touchy issues involved in hotline work.

"Most remarkable was the co-Kelly also reported that one of the large canvas signs with the name of the hall painted on it had been stolen "five or six weeks ago." That canvas sign was really expensive and it took a long time to make it," Kelly commented.

When asked whether the two incidents might be related to inter-hall rivalries, Kelly said, "No, I don't think so. We haven't heard anything from whoever took it. We don't want to get anyone in trouble, we just want to get our sign back."

In addition to the Howard thefts, Pangborn and Badin Halls also reported incidents of missing dorm fixtures.

Jose Morrerro, president of Pangborn Hall, told the Observer that a large flag with the dorm's symbol emblazoned on it had been stolen earlier in the year.

According to Morrerro, the flag was worth approximately $90. "At first we had a couple of people who thought they had clues as to who did it, but nothing materialized from that and we're still hoping that somehow it might turn up."

Morrerro also said that a three-foot tall papier-mache elephant had been stolen from the lawn in front of the hall over Homecoming weekend. "We found half of it strung from a window on the front side of Howard," the president said.

"We figured that if someone stole it (the flag) for ransom or something, they would have let us know by now. Like Fisher and Pangborn for example; we don't really have a big rivalry with them or any one else in particular, so we can't pinpoint any one hall." Morrerro commented.

Over the Homecoming weekend, some items were also stolen from Badin Hall, according to dorm president Ellen Dorney.

"The Friday night before the game, between midnight and one, someone ripped down our large sign that was made out of sheets, and stole a cardboard panther," Dorney said. In addition to the sign and the panther, a cardboard leprechaun was also reported taken. "At the game the next day, I saw some guy running on the field with our panther. We're just really disappointed that anyone would do something like that," Dorney said.

Final documentaries to air in film festival

by Ruth Kolcun

The last two documentaries of the Third World Film Festival will be shown tonight and tomorrow night at 6:30 p.m. in the Engineering Auditorium.

AIESEC, the French acronym for Student International Business Club, will conduct "seminars" on the documentaries next Monday in Room 124 of Hayes Healey, according to Pat Bryski, AIESEC Vice President of Operations.

"Century of Revolution," a three-part history of China since 1800, is a black and white film narrated by Theodore H. White. This film of China's turbulent century will be shown at 6:30 and 9:15 p.m.

"The Barefoot Doctors of Rural China," winner of the best educational film of 1975, will be shown at 8:05 and 10:50 p.m. This documentary was filmed entirely in the People's Republic of China. It examines China's efforts to provide adequate health care services for its agrarian population of over 600,000,000 people.

The film focuses on the training and activities of the "barefoot doctors" and their "walk on two legs" policy of combining both western and Chinese medical techniques.

"Global Awareness Seminar" will be conducted by Bryski. "These two documentaries will help to create an understanding of

Hunger Coalition suggests courses

Following is a list of Saint Mary's courses examining issues in justice that the Hunger Coalition has released.

Biology

Bio 104 Biology and Human Values 9MWF and 2MWF J. Forster 4 credits

The course deals with the social implications of biological problems. Food, ecology, environment and nuclear energy are some of the topics included.

English

ENLT 203 Perspectives on Women 1MWF and 2MWF Sokolowski

The course raises questions through the analysis of various interdisciplinary exploration and uses this material to examine literature. The course seeks to examine the portrayal of women in literature and various attitudes found.

Government

Govt 151 Contemporary Political Issues 2MWF, 11MWF, 8TT10 C. Hartzler and T. Marcy

An analysis of selected national and international political issues of the contemporary world.

Govt. 206 International Politics 8MWF T. Marcy

A study of the sources, application, regulation of power in world politics.

History

Hist. 315 America Comes of Age 2TT4 J. Detzler

The emergence of the U.S. as an industrial giant and international power is studied. Urbanization, economic maturity, progressivism, World War I and the 1920's are considered in a political, economic and social framework.

Hist 342 World in 20th Century 1MWF A. Black

The two World Wars and subsequent efforts at achieving a just peace; the rise of the dictators; colonialism and its decline in Asia and Africa; the Cold War; and the U.S. as world power are considered and studied in this course.

Hist 453 Middle East 1TT3 R. Cassidy

The Ottoman Empire in the 19th and 20th centuries; the emergence of Middle Eastern states—Syria, Lebanon, Iraq, Jordan, Israel and Egypt are studied.

Humanistic Studies

Hust 300 Catholic Vision; Christ and World 4MW 2 credits Schlesinger/Mandell/McDonnell/Malits

Christian implications of the modern world from a philosophical, theological, and humanistic point of view.

Hust 462 Revolution and World Conflict 2MWF B. Schlesinger

World ascendancy of Western culture is studied with topics focused on nationalism, liberalism, socialism, the rise of democracy, totalitarianism, and the nuclear age.

Philosophy

Phil 242 Business Ethics 1MWF W. Hawk

The purpose of this course is to develop skills for recognizing the moral issues which normally arise in the context of business—individual and corporate responsibility; self interest versus social responsibility; justice; hiring practices; whistle blowing; and duties to the natural environment.

Psychology

Psych 209 Dehumanizing Forces in Society 3Th5 J. Miller 1 credit

A study of the forces in modern society which threaten human dignity and integrity. The effects of this dehumanization are studied from both a psychological and sociological perspective.

Religious Studies

RLST 235 Christianity and the Moral Life 9TT11 and 1TT3 Fr. E. Krause

An introductory study of the meaning of Christian morality and personal integrity. A general overview of Christian moral theory will be presented. The theory will than be studied in application to various problem areas, such as: truth telling, responsible citizenship, and sexual morality.

Sociology

Soc 353 American Minorities 9TT11 C. McKelvey

An investigation of lifestyles, cultural values and attitudes with primary focus upon Afro-Americans and European immigrants. Majority-minority relations in the U.S. dealing with Mexican-American and American Indians will also be viewed.

Soc 362 Social Gerontology 9MWF Sister R.B. Tarleton

The study of old age including the social, emotional, physical and economic aspects of the aging process. Includes the study of the scope and effectiveness of programs which are intended to serve senior citizens.

Speech/Drama

SpDR 395 Black Theatre in America 1TT3 M. Coiner

The history of stage production from minstrel shows to the New Lafayette Theatre, with a consideration of dramatic works by and about black people in America.

ENERGY AND SOCIETY
Prof. Kenney 1TT3	691500	Physics 204 3 credits
Prerequisites: None
A course developing the basic ideas of energy, power, and the important applications of modern nuclear science. The advantages and disadvantages of nuclear fission and fusion energy devices are compared with solar energy, fossil fuel, and other energy alternatives. Nuclear weapons, their military applications, and the political problems involved in their control, will be discussed. The course is designed for the non-specialist.
TIME, SPACE, AND MATTER
Prof. Biswas 10TT12	691600	Physics 206 3 credits
Prerequisite: A one-year non-science course. This course is intended primarily for non-science majors who have had some introduction to physics. Algebra and some trigonometry, but no calculus, are used.
Historical and experimental background to the structure of matter and to the nature of light. Concept of space-time in Newton's physics, and its modification by Einstein. Principles of special and general relativity. Applications to topics such as: travel near the speed of light, motion faster than light (?), creation and annihilation of matter, nuclear fission and fusion, the elementary particles, quarks, cosmic radiation, gravitational collapse, black holes and other new astronomical phenomena, curved space, size of the universe, cosmological implications.
DESCRIPTIVE ASTRONOMY
Fr. Shiels 11MWF and 2MWF		Physics 210 3 credits
Prerequisite: A one-year introductory science course including at least one semester of physical science.
A description of the motions and structure of the earth, moon, and planets. An exposition of the modern theories of solar and stellar structure, nebulae, and galaxies. An introduction to cosmology. The course includes elementary observational exercises. It is intended primarily for non-science majors.

Through Legal Services:

Law students offer aid

by John McDermott

The purpose of Student Legal Services, according to Fritz Hanselmann, "is for the law student to put into practice what he learns in the classroom." But for the 10 second- and third-year law students who volunteer their time for this service, finding enough cases to keep them busy has been a problem this year. "No one knew we existed," Hanselmann said.

"Up until a week ago, we only had 14 cases referred to us," Hanselmann, one of 10 interns with the service, said. But things are beginning to pick up. This increase in caseloads is primarily due to the addition of Prof. Richard Hunter.

Hunter, who replaced Peter Broccoletti last week as one of the two supervising attorneys, brought with him 40 cases which were brought to him by students, faculty and staff. "People knew about Rich but they didn't know about us," Hanselmann said.

The service, based in the Law School basement, has been in existence for almost 20 years but has never been fully utilized by the students.

The 10 law students, called interns, who volunteer their time, are given class credit for their involvement. If they work for four hours a week, they get one credit. If they work for eight hours, they get two credits. But no pay is involved. In fact, according to Clyde McFarland, the division head, "we never take fee-generating cases... where compensation for liability is involved." McFarland added that the service works with civil cases only, not criminal cases.

"Of the seven divisions that encompass the Legal Aid and Defender Association, ours is the only one on campus that deals directly with the students," Kathleen A. Kearney, another intern in the service, said.

When a student, faculty member, or member of the Notre Dame staff seeks legal advice, he can either go to the legal aid office or phone 7795. There is always someone there from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and usually in the evenings as well.

The person will be asked to fill out three forms which will inform the intern of the case and let him know if the person qualifies financially for the free service. To qualify, one must make under $4,000 annually, otherwise they will be referred to a South Bend lawyer.

The law students are under the direct guidance of the supervising attorneys. Strict confidentiality is observed in keeping with the Code of Professional Responsibility.

Cases in the past have involved small claims, landlord-tenant relations, contracts, loans, and time-payment cases. "But anyone who needs legal advice is encouraged to use the service," Hanselmann said.

If a case must go to court, then either Hunter, or John Ennis, the supervising attorneys, take over the case. The intern also appears in court as an observer. However, the intern is responsible for all the research in the case.

The supervising attorneys spend most of their time checking the interns' work and making sure that everything is legal and according to proper procedure.

Prof. Conrad Kellenberg is the faculty coordinator of the legal aid service but all the faculty members are available to the interns for any legal advice they may need for a case.

A workshop is being planned for either February or March concerning problems with leases that students often face. Also notices have been sent to rectors informing them of the services available to the students in their halls.

"The writing of wills for students is also a possibility for the future," Hanselmann said.

Funded by the University, both Kearney and Hanselmann stressed that "all students, faculty, and staff are encouraged to seek our help. That's what we're here for."

Philadelphia club sponsors flights home over break

The money for flights leaving for Phila. on Dec. 19, 20 and 21 will be collected today at 7:30 in the Lewis Hall Recroom. Each flight leaves at 5:45 p.m. and the fare is $108 for members who have paid $3 dues to join the club. Final arrangements must be completed by the end of the week, so the money must be in as well as notification of day to be scheduled. Any questions or problems, call Maria (3433) or Mike (1626).

China's contemporary issues as related to its history," the AIESEC vice president said.

The panelists for the AIESEC seminar will include Dr. John Thorp, assistant professor of Sociology and Anthropology, Father David Burrell, professor of Philosophy and Theology, and Dr. Yu-Chi Chang, professor of Management.

According to Bryski, members of the International Student Organization and Notre Dame students will also participate on the panel.

The Third World Film festival is co-sponsored by student government and the Center for Experiential Learning.

Tom Ludlam, director of promotions for the festival, says, "we have averaged 100 people at each showing of the films, so far. We encourage students to attend the last documentaries."

IN SEARCH OF THE BLUES

Being asked to write a personal article about the Blues is no easy task. I could write quite easily about a basic Blues library or a review of Midwest Blues through its development since 1970—but those aren't really personal: they're detached just enough to make it easy.

Actually, I'm really not even sure I know the Blues. My conviction is that Blues (i.e., Blues music seen and heard as a cultural phenomenon) is fundamentally a black experience. The Blues evolved from years of feeling and tradition that I can only vicariously appreciate. The Blues are, to be short, as a friend of mine once titled his radio show, "America's Living Heritage."

But our question is still unanswered: what is the Blues? Well, it "ain't nothin' but a botheration on the mind." They defy definition, they demand description. This runs counter to our whole frame of mind. Our Kockeian heritage demands we quantify. Experiences must be measured and analyzed. The whole notion that an experience is to be felt on its own merit—like the "inscape" of Hopkins or the "epiphanies" of Joyce—is rejected as romantic, and, worse, as unscientific. So, we end up with descriptions of Blues in terms of measure (12 bar), historicity, and style. But ultimately, all these will fail. They will fail because explaining in these ways will not in any way recover for the reader the experience that is the Blues.

Now this is not to say that the Blues is an individual, non-transmissible phenomenon. More than anything else Blues is a language—but it is a language framed in emotion rather than reason, insight rather than logic. If this were "Basic Concepts of Political Philosophy" we could say that the Blues is a form of leisure. That is why we have a Blues Festival instead of a concert. It is a time for celebration and regeneration.

In the black communities—read ghettos—of Chicago, Detroit, St. Louis, Oakland, and Houston—as well as many others—the Blues, though less so today, is a cathartic experience. After five long days of trying to get by, one can go to a local club and, for a brief time, leave that struggle behind by sharing it with others. It is no accident that Blues and religion are so closely related and yet so disparate. The Bluesman and the minister vie for the role of community spokesman. The minister preaches the struggle to get over and the Bluesman proclaims "Let the Good Times Roll." It is not then so ironic that Georgia Tom a.k.a. Rev. Thomas A. Dorsey could write both "Its Tight Like That" and "O, Precious Lord."

But we are still describing the Blues in terms of function; we are still avoiding the issue.

Okay, to me the Blues is a part of my life. (Perhaps this is a part of my white, near southern middle class upbringing.) For better or worse my life has been changed by the Blues. Blues has taught me how to laugh and cry. The Blues is not hedonistic, but it helps me not to be afraid of being emotional. The Blues is not despairing, but it has taught me how bittersweet life can be.

Personally, I still live at the fringe of the Blues. It has not consumed me the way it has others. My commitment pretends to be academic, while it is probably more intense than any academic commitment could be. Ask my wife; when the Blues Festival rolls around I become intolerable to be near, or at least more intolerable than I am the rest of the year. The Blues is a demanding mistress—and a rewarding one. But I can resist the temptation till those two days in November, then I surrender.

If you see me at the Festival I'll talk your arm off about the Blues, probably even invite you to my house to hear more. See, I am looking for converts—like I said before the Blues is a demanding mistress, but not a jealous one.

"Ramblin', I've got ramblin' on my mind."

"You've got to move, you've got to move."

The Blues is restless. It's not an historic souvenir of slavery or a quaint musical form at the roots of rock or R & B. It is alive and continues to grow and burst open with new surprises. We may no longer have Fred McDowell to play delta slide for us or Mance Lipscomb to be the songster; we may not have Hound Dog Taylor to tell us how to boogie or Howlin' Wolf to warn us about the back-door man; we miss them all, but we still have the Blues. The Blues roll on.

So what have I said? Not too much really. It's hard to convey emotions. But if you come to the Festival, if you listen, if you let go for a second; then you'll understand everything. All this babbling will become (I think) understood. The language I talked of before is not a language written with ink upon paper but with music on the heart. So, "Preach like Peter, Pray like Paul. When judgment day comes, That's all, that's all. So, have a good time."

JOIN DENVER AT THE AOC JUST SOME GOOD DOWN HOME FUN

John Denver is an artist whose music I've always enjoyed—in small doses, that is, and only at certain times. But last Friday night, along with a near capacity crowd in the A.C.C., I took a large dose of Denver music...and loved it. The two-hour concert was well-staged, well-programmed and well-sung, all of which added up to make it a thoroughly entertaining show. It was a concert that John Denver fanatics, haters and "moderate-dosers" like myself could all enjoy.

The "in-the-round" stage set-up worked beautifully. Denver's back-up musicians were positioned on different levels around the edges of the stage, while he stood on a central rotating platform which seemed to rotate neither too slowly nor too quickly. Also, the activity on the stage periphery provided something to look at while Denver's back was turned.

The audience -- the largest I'd ever seen at an A.C.C. concert -- was certainly not your typical concert crowd. Although there was a large number of students in attendance, the majority of the audience was made up of adults from the South Bend community. While the concert was less rowdy than most I've attended, the crowd was by no means unresponsive. Audience members clapped and often sang along with the music, and were several times brought to their feet by Denver's performance.

Denver opened the show with "Farewell to Andromeda," a moderately-paced number which more-or-less set the friendly, relaxed atmosphere which pervaded throughout the evening. He followed this song with "It Amazes Me," from the album I Want to Live, and "Today," a number which the entire audience was invited to sing.

The balance of old songs and new ones. of hits and unfamiliar tunes in the program was, I thought, strikingly good. Particular crowd-pleasers in the first half of the show included "Fly Away," featuring the beautiful alto of back-up singer Renee Arman; "High Sierra," a fast-paced blue grass instrumental; Denver's version of "Johnny B. Goode," a sample from his new album; and, of course, "Rocky Mountain High."

At this point, the nine back-up musicians -- who, by the way, performed tremendously all evening -- left the stage for a short break while Denver sang a few numbers unaccompanied. Of these, the audience particularly enjoyed "Saturday Night in Toledo, Ohio," a humorous song by Randy Sparks poking fun at the lack of night life in Toledo.

The second half of the show featured many of the big Denver hits, including "Country Roads," "Back Home Again," and the song that got probably the biggest audience reaction of the night, "Thank God I'm A Country Boy." By the time Denver finished his next two numbers -- "The Eagle and the Hawk," and the beautiful love ballad, "Annie's Song" -- everyone in the crowd seemed to be feeling a little "rocky mountain high." I never built up the emotion of "Calypso," a song written about Jacques Cousteau's ship, and left the audience well-satisfied with his final number, "Sunshine on My Shoulders."

Throughout the evening Denver neither jumped around nor sweated as much as Springsteen, yet he managed to radiate just as much enthusiasm and energy. He sang each song with intense sincerity and honesty, and, like Springsteen, gave the impression of truly loving not only his work, but also South Bend. Well, South Bend loved him, too.

Remember Reality?

At the very end of his flattering essay on Notre Dame (National Catholic Reporter, October 27), author Robert McClory gets to the heart of the matter.

He quotes Thomas Schlereth, of our American Studies Program, who asks the most crucial question of all: "Can Notre Dame be a really first-rate academic institution while nurturing the religious and ethical dimensions of life? Can it be comparable to Harvard and Princeton academically without sacrificing its theological roots?"

It won't be easy for Notre Dame to have a future worth being a part of -- that is, one embodying the attainment of true academic excellence and the unique Catholic religious spirit that has provided her life-blood for so many years. The people who have left their blood in the bricks of this place don't want Notre Dame to be another Harvard, if it means severing religious roots and going secular.

What are the forces to be resisted, the demons that haunt us? The first would be a kind of vocationalism that would have us train and not educate; would have us be more of a technical institute and not a true university; would have us prepare young people more for task than for life. Would have students concern themselves with the question, "When I graduate, what am I going to do?" instead of, "When I graduate, what am I going to be?" It's a variety of careerism: the overall and even total organization of living toward one end.

The Catholic university, with less than solid ties to Christian roots, is also fair game for the demon of indoctrination. This educational perversion would have the university educated not humane and decent people, but safe citizens -- manageable voters, manipulable consumers and, if need be, in the case of war or crisis, willing killers. A Catholic university could easily become quite excellent in secularity like this. It could, like an ice-cold and superb machine, become spectacularly effective in teaching students how not to interrupt the evil patterns that they see before them, how not to question and how not to doubt.

It is always possible for a Catholic university to become eligible for the accusations Harvard graduate and Rhodes scholar Jonathon Kozol levelled at those public schools where students "learn to be proficient at mechanical procedures, docile in the presence of all processes they do not understand, acquiescent in the presence of a seeming barbarism. It is not so much that they learn to be cruel people. Rather it is that they learn it is not needful to be urgent in compassion or importunate in justice."

In the light of this, it is distressing to have had it reported that in a class just prior to fall break one of our professors told his students that the problems of the Third World were too complicated; beyond solution; not appropriate matter for their concern. One sees what Kozol was speaking about.

It can be very tempting for a school, even a nominally Catholic one, to isolate students from any consideration that there are any victims in the world. For if one believes in victims, one is led to believe also in victimizers; if there are oppressed, it might just be because there are oppressors. An authentically Catholic university would afford students confrontation with the fact that evil acts just don't happen by accident, but have quite frequently been initiated by the will of those who stand to profit from them.

"The recognition of direct, explicit and not accidental causes and connections of this kind," Kozol writes, "portends enormous danger for the conscience of the children of rich people. It is of great importance for the children of the ruling class to think of fear, starvation, sickness in terms of social accident or technological mistake; to think of hunger, for example, or the lack of medical care, like a season with too little rainfall, or a river that did not come up as high as usual this year. It is not comfortable to understand that the reason rivers do not rise as high as usual some years is that they have been diverted to the fields and irrigation ditches of another person in the upper meadow. It is even more disturbing to be forced to understand that oftentimes that other person is no stranger, but our friend, our next-door neighbor or our father."

So, the question may not be, "Does N.D. have a future?" but "What kind of future does it have?" In order to maintain its theological roots and Catholic spirit it will have to resist infection from the kind of vocationalism, careerism, indoctrination and isolationism we have been considering.

The challenge is formidable, but I am optimistic. And mainly because there are people here who will do brave battle against those forces that would stifle our spirit and throttle our Christian growth. People like Ken Goodpaster, John Houch, David Burrell, Leo Ryan, Ollie Williams, Don McNeill, Tom Schlereth, Claude Pomerleau, Tom Shaffer, Jack Egan, Tom Broden, Judith Ann Beattie, Bill Sexton, Ed Gaffney, Peggy Roach, Lee Tavis, Bob Pelton, Mary Ann Roemer, John Yoder, Jim Stewart, Penny VanEsterik, Chuck Wilber, Tom McNally - to name just a few. Most significantly, there is a growing number of students who are joining their ranks. It is with people like these that Notre Dame's potential for greatness lies.

TV movie highlights ND'64 season

Huarte was the third-string quarterback going into spring practice for the '64 season, but catapulted into the starting position by the opening game. He is the last player from Notre Dame to win the Heisman Trophy and is taking the movie in stride.

Talking from his Placentia, CA home, Huarte related, "My reaction to the movie all depends on how the writers portray the characters. I think the subject of the movie has an unusually interesting situation. If the characters are portrayed correctly then the movie would please me."

"Nothing really stands out about the '64 season as I think back except the entire season," Huarte continued.

Huarte, who owns two tile businesses that import ceramic tiles from Italy, said "I do remember when I first came to Notre Dame as a freshman and tried for a week to convince the coaches I was on scholarship."

Best summarized the movie with this quote: "I think this movie would show what a great institution Notre was in '64 and still is today."

CBS to feature 1964 season, Ara's first year, in TV movie

by Michael Ridenour
Staff Reporter

CBS is planning to bring the 1964 Notre Dame football season to the screen in a two-hour movie made for television. While the production is still in the early developmental stages, the probably airing of the movie, if made, would be next fall.

The originator of this movie scheme is Bob Best, former Notre Dame assistant sports information director and now director of public relations for the Tampa Bay Buccaneers.

The concept of the movie comes from a chapter (1964 season) of Best's book, The Era of Ara, in which he wrote with the help of a 600-page manuscript compiled by Tom Pagna, former Notre Dame assistant football coach and current offensive backfield coach for the Kansas City Chiefs.

Best submitted the idea of the '64 season in which Notre Dame went from doormats the year before to the Cinderella team in college football. It was Ara Parseghian's first year as Notre Dame head football coach and the dramatic reversal of fortunes almost concluded with the team winning the national championship.

A last minute loss to Southern California in the final game of the '64 season cost Notre Dame the championship, but out of that season came Heisman Trophy winner John Huarte, and the acceptance of the prestigious McArthur Bowl, symbolic of the top team in the nation.

"It was a really incredible year and I thought it could be made into a dramatic movie," Best stated from his office in Tampa.

"Another reason why I thought a movie would be interesting in regards to 1964 was the atmosphere around the Notre Dame campus. Things were different. Lights had to be out at 11 p.m., the school was all male, students had to wear coats and ties to dinner, and the students not attending pep rallies were dragged from their halls and thrown in the lake--no matter if it was frozen," Best said.

"The movie draws on nostalgia like Happy Days," he added.

While it is not certain that the movie will be made, Best is quick to point out that there have been favorable signs in regards to the movie's production.

One favorable development in particular is that CBS has assigned

Bob Best

Herbert Brodtkin of Titus Productions as producer of the movie. Brodtkin won acclaim for his production of the Emmy-winning series Holocaust.

"I've been told that the hiring of a producer of Brodtkin's caliber is a very favorable sign," Best said.

Contacted at his office in New York, Brodtkin was unsure of the progress of the movie. "It still is too early for comment on the production. In six months I'll know how it's developing," Brodtkin said.

Titus Productins has hired a screenwriter, Mark Medoff, to write a "treatment" for the movie, which is due in a couple of weeks.

A treatment is a narrative outline of the movie and it must be approved before the production of the movie can progress further.

Medoff, who is head of the drama department at New Mexico State, said, "I don't see any reason why the movie shouldn't be made. Not to sound conceited, but I feel that approach I have taken is interesting. I think it could be a very dramatic movie like Brian's Song."

He explained his approach. "Essentially the movie would begin in 1963 with Parseghian coming to Notre Dame and focusing on the period through spring practice. It would then progress through the '64 season to the loss at Southern Cal and John Huarte's winning of the Heisman Trophy."

Paul Mullaney

Commenting on when he thinks the movie will be televised, Medoff said, "This is a very iffy business. If the movie gets made, I think sometime next fall."

Two characters the movie will certainly focus on is Parseghian and Huarte. Parseghian was not excited about the movie being produced. "I would not encourage a story promoting the movie," Parseghian said from his South Bend home.

Best had a reason for Parseghian's "blase" attitude toward the movie. "Ara doesn't need the movie, he's no egotist, but Ara deserves it. For anyone else the movie would be flattering. I look at the movie as a tribute to him more than anything else," Best stated.

Best continued by saying, "I know it's a callous attitude, but if the movie is not made it doesn't matter that much to me. It's already been flattering just having CBS consider my idea for a movie. I would, however, like to see the movie made because Ara has done so much for Notre Dame."

Pagna concurred with Best's assessment of Parseghian. "Ara is a very humble guy. I've known him since I was 16 and he's never tried to bring publicity to himself. He's the type to go out and just get the job done. Ara recruited me and I played for him. He's kind of brought me up."

Pagna, talking from his Kansas City Chief's office, said he is very happy about the production. "I think it will be exciting. It would be a pure and wholesome movie," he stated.

Soccer team falls, 1-0

by Mark Perry
Assistant Sports Editor

Unable to overcome a goal in the middle of the first half, the Notre Dame soccer team lost a heart-breaker to Western Michigan last Saturday, 1-0.

The loss dropped Notre Dame's season record to 19-3-1, and severely damaged any hope for a berth in the NCAA playoffs.

Notre Dame goalie Brian Cullather was attempting to punt the ball out of the Irish end, but was harassed by a Western Michigan forward, and was called for taking too many steps by the referee.

On the indirect kick following the penalty, the Western Michigan player tapped the ball to his teammate, who kicked the ball into the net for the only score of the game.

"We outplayed them for most of the game, but just couldn't get the tying score," said co-captain Jim Sabitus following the game. "We controlled the ball at midfield, but just couldn't get any solid shots on goal."

Cullather suffered a mild concussion with some minor bleeding from his lungs later in the game after a collision with a Western Michigan player. Cullather said the injury was not serious, and that he expects to play this weekend.

The Irish will be closing out their regular season this weekend. Saturday morning they play their final home game of the season, as they take on the Tennessee Volunteers prior to the football game, with kick-off scheduled for 10 a.m.

Following this game the Irish will be flying to Des Moines, Iowa, to face Drake University on Sunday

Army gets Navy's goat... then returns it

WEST POINT, N.Y. [AP] - The cadet who got the Navy's goat with the help of a farmer's daughter says he and his friends took better care of Bill XXI than the U.S. Naval Academy.

"They didn't keep very good care of their mascot," sophomore Garon Reeves of Columbus, Ind., said in a telephone interview last night. "I don't know very much about animals, but the goat's hooves definitely needed trimming and Lucy's father was saying it had lice and its coat was all grungy."

Reeves and his associate said four Cadets in blackened faces and dark clothes staged the assault on a weekend leave, bringing Bill XXI back with them in a borrowed truck, but declined to provide further details.

An Associated Press story from Annapolis, Md., quoted one navy officer saying "all goats stink" and a football co-captain saying the team didn't want Bill back because "we're 6-0 without him."

"Yes it did stink," Reeves said. "Very much. We kept better care of him."

But Reeves didn't deny that Bill XXI might be more of a navy curse than a blessing.

Navy lost its game against Notre Dame last Saturday, one day after Army says it shipped the goat back to Annapolis.

The Vent of Frustration

Goal Tending

True, Navy was not all that it was cracked up to be.

And true, the Mids were probably not at all tested prior to Saturday's game in Cleveland.

But you wouldn't have been able to convince the Mids of that before the game, or even after they dropped a convincing 27-7 decision to Dan Devine's Fighting Irish.

Afterwards Navy had to be one of the most frustrated football teams to lose a game this season. They couldn't accept defeat, or at least this one defeat. It was clear that the Mids expected to give Notre Dame a run for its money. But in no way did the Blue Wave expect to get trampled upon. It was the end of a dream for a team that had been ranked 11th in the country and had boasted all sorts of defensive records. And perhaps it was just too much for some of the Navy players to handle, so they chose Devine and the Irish as the vent of their frustrations.

It caught me by surprise when two of Navy's top performers, quarterback Bob Leszczynski and split end captain Phil McConkey, lambasted Notre Dame for leaving Joe Montana in the game so long and throwing so late in the game, and also putting some of its top line defenders back in the lineup when Navy was driving on its last possession of the afternoon. In fact, some very explicit comments (too explicit for these pages) were sounded by McConkey, who was knocked out cold after catching a 13-yard touchdown pass for Navy's only score of the game with just 12 seconds remaining.

"I don't know who the hell they are... leaving those guys in the whole game. Man, I have no respect for them. I don't know who they think they are," are some of the comments that can be salvaged from the presentation McConkey made to myself and two other reporters that confronted the Blue Wave captain after the game.

McConkey continued, "We saw them come in, man. It stirred us up a little. I don't know who they think they are. I've got no respect for them. I don't remember nothing. I just remember that. I remember them putting all their guys back in and leaving their offense in. I know it would be different if it was coach (Navy mentor George) Welsh. He wouldn't add insult to injury. He has respect for another team when they're down."

It appeared to me that the Mids lacked respect for their own team, and that the only insult added to their injury of defeat was imposed upon them by themselves. After all, three first-half turnovers in their own end of the field seemed to say that they would be more than happy to let the Irish do as they please.

And if the Irish did indeed attempt to pour it on in the last quarter, why were they outscored by the Mids in that stanza? At least Tim Koegel made the box score the following morning, while nobody seemed to hear about Illinois coach Gary Moeller's gripe.

Moeller, whose Illini were massacred by Michigan State, 59-19, was upset that MSU's excellent passer, Eddie Smith, was throwing for the end zone after Michigan State, on top 45-19, recovered a fumble on Illinois' 13-yard line with less than nine minutes to play.

But if that's your team's most effective method of putting the ball in the end zone, why not use it? As far as Montana passing on that final situation, the Irish were ahead 27-0, and had a first-and-goal situation at Navy's nine-yard line. Notre Dame could only muster three yards on the first two downs (on the running of two reserves, Dave Mitchell and Jim Stone), so it seemed it obvious that by putting the ball in the air, the Irish would have a better chance at scoring. Why should you stop trying just because you've achieved an insurmountable lead? If anything, Navy proved it was up to the task by stopping the Irish on that series.

Bowl scouts or no bowl scouts, one would think, anyway, that the Irish would be passing from beginning to end just by looking at the results of the Navy-Pitt game of one week ago. Although the Mids held Pitt to minus 28 yards rushing, the Panthers accounted for 275 yards in the air. It would seem perfectly logical to me that the Irish game plan would have called for extensive passing.

Even though the Irish gained 375 yards on the ground, that does not mean that they have to go to a complete ground attack. Whether running or passing, it was just that the Irish were highly successful on Saturday. Nonetheless, a differential of 20 points is convincing. But in no way did Notre Dame pour it on.

Perhaps Rick Talley of the Chicago Tribune put it best by saying, "Montana's presence late in the game, of course, had nothing to do with this story. This game was decided a couple of years ago, when the big guys went to Notre Dame and the smaller ones went to the United States Naval Academy."

Leszczynski and McConkey are two of the smaller ones.
