Morrissey to get fire escape after two year struggle

by John McGrath
Senior Staff Reporter

The wheels of University bureaucracy have finally gotten around to the concerns of Morrissey Hall residents about the lack of a fire escape to serve the 22 students in the dorm's chapel wing.

It has taken two years, but plans have at last been finalized for the installation of a series of ladders to facilitate the emergency exit of residents in the two "dead-end" hallways on the third and fourth floors of the chapel wing.

In the early morning hours of Sept. 10, 1977, a fire raged through one of the rooms on the third floor. The fire caused an estimated $40,000 damage, including heat, smoke, and water damage to the chapel, which is situated directly below the two sections in question. No one was injured in the fire, but it aroused concern about the safety of residents in the third and fourth floor corridors—both of which have only one exit.

I know that I started proceedings (to have the escape constructed) the very first week I came here (August 1978)," recalled Bro. Ed Luther, rector of Morrissey. "But up until this time, I have just not been able to get any satisfaction from them (Maintenance authorities)."

Contacted yesterday, Donald Dedrick, director of maintenance, reported, "It's (fire escape) been ordered and we're just waiting for it to be put in." Asked why the project has been delayed until now, he explained, "There was a question of design—we were worried that if the escape was extended all the way to the ground, we'd have a problem with illegal entry."

Apparently, the design problems have now been worked out. John Moorman, assistant director of maintenance, laid out some of the specifications for the project yesterday. The escape will consist of a ladder extending from the fourth floor window level to the roof of the chapel. Access to the ladder can be gained through third and fourth floor windows. A second ladder will extend from the chapel roof to ground level.

Moorman estimated the total cost of the project at $3,800. The ladders are now being fabricated, he said, and if all goes according to schedule, the escapes should be operable by mid-October.

The question of time delay still remains, however, especially in light of the fact that a simple ladder system has been decided upon.

"I really don't know why they went to the ladder instead of the stairs," Luther commented. "But anything they put up at this point will be adequate."

Luther added that he is standing by his statement made in yesterday's Observer about the project's delay. Luther was quoted at that time as saying, "I can't understand it. I feel they (Maintenance) have been dragging their heels on the whole project."

Part of the problem may lie in the backlog of maintenance department priority projects. While he described the Morrissey fire escape as a "priority" project, Dedrick acknowledged that the deficient situation in the chapel wing's escape routes "didn't really

Israel releases land to Egypt

TEL AVIV Israel (AP) - Israel turned over 2,600 square miles of Sinai wilderness to Egypt Tuesday as part of the Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty, but sharp differences on self-rule for Palestinians remained as the two countries prepared to resume autonomy negotiations. "Both sides are contributing to peace, and both sides are making sacrifices for peace," said Israeli Brig. Gen. Dov Sion as he turned over control of a triangular sector of south-central Sinai to Egyptian Brig. Gen. Saf-el-Din Abu Shnaf.

"We have achieved more in peace than we have by all our wars," Sion added.

That sentiment was also stressed yesterday by Prime Minister Menachem Begin, who said in a speech that agreement with Egypt was only the start of an overall peace in the Middle East.

"It never occurred to us... that we should sign a treaty of peace and then say, 'enough,'" Begin stated. He repeated his calls to Jordan and Syria to join the peace talks.

Israeli and Egyptian honor guards and bands accompanied the brief military ceremony at Abu Durba, a desert outpost on the Suez Gulf. Israel lowered its flag at the site at 11:25 a.m. local time, and the Egyptian flag was then raised over the area. The ceremony marked the third time Israel has turned over a Sinai parcel to Egypt under terms of the March treaty.

Israeli and Egyptian negotiations resume talks on Palestinian self-rule today in Alexandria, but the two countries have yet to grapple successfully with

by Margie Brassil
Saint Mary's News Editor

The Saint Mary's Board of Governance voted not to administer the annual United Way Campaign this year. When the first vote failed to get a majority opinion, a second vote was taken showing eight members against, six members for and one member abstaining in support of the campaign.

Explaining the Board's position, Student Body President Pia Trigliani said, "The majority of the board concurred that it is not the place of the Board to center their energies upon the United Way Campaign. They do however feel that Saint Mary's should participate in charitable functions and raising money for charities for worthwhile organizations, but they will not support administratively the United Way Campaign. The Board still supports the goals of the United Way, it is just not the decision of the Board to administer it."

The Board reached its decision after a presentation by Ed Drummond, Planning Director for the St. Joseph County

Duggan attends conference

Ellen Buddy
Saint Mary's Editor

It was an historic first last week when the Department of Health, Education and Welfare (HEW) met with the Women's College Coalition (WCC) in Washington. The main issue of the secretary's conference on women's colleges was equity in education.

Saint Mary's College, member of the WCC, was represented by President John M. Duggan and his assistant Joan Holland. Saint Mary's was one of fifty women's colleges from across the nation that participated.

According to Holland the WCC met on Monday to prepare for the HEW conference on Tuesday. "There were discussions on areas of concern to women's colleges," Holland said.

One of the sessions centered around making a case for women's colleges. Other discussions included major education legislation favoring small colleges. The quality of women's education and the involvement of women in biomedical research.

In the final evening meeting discussion leaders reported to all the presidents on the different sessions during the day. At this time the final preparations were made for the next day's HEW conference.

Secretary of HEW, Patricia Roberts Harris, opened the conference with an address that praised women's colleges and pointed out that the government has much to learn from them.

Harris made three specific recommendations that will serve to enhance the relations between women's colleges and the federal government. First, she appointed a special assistant as liaison for women's colleges, "hoping the federal government can be more sensitive to this 'distinguished minority,'" Holland said.

Harris encouraged the presidents of women's colleges to become members of HEW advisory boards. At present there are three such presidents serving on boards and there are 124 women's colleges in this country.

Her third proposal was to develop a program within sixty days to communicate to women's colleges the programs and grants that are available for their use.

Harris emphasized that when the colleges are seeking these grants and have question, that they should immediately call an HEW representative to settle the questions.

"It all seemed very encouraging to me," Holland said. "We must be active ourselves and can not leave it to HEW to do it all."

The remainder of the conference was presented by

Robber bungles holdup of Denver drugstore

DENVER(AP)-A robber bungled a drugstore stickup when he fired several bullets into his own car, sped past a police cruiser, ran out of gas a block from the store, commandeered a truck and promptly wrecked it, police say. Police said that a man and a woman entered robbed a Denver drugstore of more than $500. The store manager grabbed a gun and gave chase, firing one shot. Then the manager had to take cover when at least 12 shots were returned. Police said the shooting from the getaway car was so erratic that the car itself was peppered with shots. After the man and woman abandoned their gasless car, the man commandeered a Mountain Bell telephone company truck and promptly collided with another car, police said. He was arrested minutes later.

Judge declares mistrial in Black Panther case

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP)-A judge declared a mistrial yesterday in the murder trial of Black Panther Leader Huey Newton, accused of killing a 17-year-old prostitute in 1974. It was the second mistrial in the case. Last March, a mistrial was declared after a jury deadlocked 10-2 for acquittal. The current trial was 37-year-old Newton's seventh felony trial since 1964. The prosecution charged Newton shot prostitute Kathleen Smith on an Oakland street-corner in 1974. Newton fled the country while Ms. Smith was in a coma, but later returned voluntarily from Cuba to stand trial. She died without regaining consciousness.

Carter allows Tellico Dam despite snail darter fish

NEW YORK-President Carter announced last night he has signed "with mixed reactions" a $10.86 billion appropriation bill that includes funds to complete the controversial Tellico Dam in Tennessee, a project that threatens the tiny snail darter fish. Noting that both houses of Congress authorized completion of the Tellico project by clear majorities, Carter said in a statement, "I accept, with regret, this action as expressing the will of the Congress." The president said that if he vetoed the measure, Tellico would repeatedly be the subject of future legislative battles and might in the end undermine the principles of the Endangered Species Act, which he promised to enforce vigorously.

Pursuing social justice

Mayer speaks on materialism

by Mary Beth Moran
Staff Reporter

Pursuing social justice in the absence of love as a motive results in a world drenched in blood, according to Dr. Milton Mayer in his lecture here last night. The lecture entitled "Confessions of a Biodegradable Man" gave Mayer's view on the extreme materialism of the world today and the injustice inherent in the capitalist economic system.

The proliferation of cults in American society today deeply disturbed Mayer. He noted that, historically, cults arise at times of great crisis and impending disaster. Also many of these cults are self-seeking in orientation; few have the selflessness of Mahatma Ghandi's peace movement in India or the civil rights movement of the 1960's.

Mayer thinks that humanity has failed the leader of the cult most important to its history --

Christianity. Christianity was originally a movement which advocated action against racism and injustice and a communal way of life, according to Mayer.

Mayer cited philosophical writings of Pope John Paul II, who wrote that capitalism and its free enterprise system exist in opposition to Christian philosophy and social values. "The struggle is between capitalism and Christianity; not communism," he said.

In speaking of the excessive materialism of America in this era Mayer spoke of his disillusionment with not only the present political leadership of President Carter, but also his dismay that this country would allow many of its people to be economically oppressed by large conglomerations.

Living in an age of hedonism had caused Americans of this generation to turn their back on old virtues and values both moral and educational, claimed Mayer. "For the first time in history a culture plunges from literacy to illiteracy," he said.

While the world has problems, Mayer does not believe them insoluble. Love translated into social action makes justice a reality both home and abroad, according to Mayer. Neither age or infirmity is an excuse to stop a man from doing his duty to his fellow man.

Mayer's lecture was co-sponsored by the General Program and the Student Union Academic Commission. A forum will be held tonight for those interested in discussing last night's lecture. For further details contact the General Program Office.

Siems announces dates of Juggler publications

by John Cassidy

Larry Siems, editor of "The Juggler," Notre Dame's student operated literary magazine, said yesterday that the magazine will be published twice this year instead of last year's once. Siems added that, "We'll take anything as long as it's quality material and can be reprinted in a magazine."

The first issue of 64 pages will be published on December 1st, with the deadline for submission of articles and reproductions (photos, paintings, art work etc.) set for this Monday.

Publication of the spring issue is tentatively scheduled for March. "The Juggler" is published on campus and funded through Student Activities. Those wishing to submit material for publication should take it to 309 O'Shaughnessy Hall.

Church suggests tabling SALT

WASHINGTON (AP) - Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, recommended yesterday that the panel delay sending the SALT II treaty to the Senate until something is done about Soviet troops in Cuba.

Church was reacting to a speech to the United Nations by Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko in which he called reports of a Soviet combat brigade in Cuba a propaganda campaign "based on falsehoods."

"The artificiality of this entire question must be honestly admitted and the matter closed," said Gromyko.

Church said that "as far as I am concerned the matter can be 'closed' only when President Carter is able to certify to the Senate his conclusion based on our independent intelligence assessment, that these Soviet combat forces are no longer present in Cuba."

The Idaho senator added that "I do not want to see the SALT II treaty rejected by the Senate. For this reason, I am of the opinion that the Senate Foreign Relations Committee should defer reporting the treaty to the Senate until the current negotiations have been completed and the results are known."

When the presence of Soviet troops in Cuba was first disclosed by the Carter administration, Church said he did not believe the Senate would approve the SALT treaty until the troops were withdrawn.

Other senators also reacted strongly to Gromyko's speech.

"I'm astonished," said Republican Leader Howard H. Baker Jr. of Tennessee. "There is simply no basis for doubting that the Russians have a fully equipped, fully manned combat brigade in Cuba. There's simply no doubt about it."

Baker called on President Carter to release to the public the evidence showing the presence of the Soviet troops in Cuba.

Sen Henry Jackson, D-Wash., called Gromyko's statement "a bald face lie" adding that "the SALT process has been put on ice for an indefinite period."

The furor over Gromyko's speech came not long after Senate Majority Leader Robert

C. Byrd appealed to the Senate to remain calm and avoid linking Cuba and SALT.

"Why all this sudden panic?" Byrd asked in a floor speech. "Why all this sudden hysteria?"

Dropping his previous insistence that he is uncommitted on the strategic arms-limitation treaty, Byrd said, "I'm inclined to vote for it, but I'm not fully decided."

The West Virginia Democrat, whose support would be essential for approval of the treaty, said he will make his final decision after hearing the results of the Senate Intelligence Committee's study of whether compliance can be adequately monitored.

The intelligence panel is expected to complete its work later this week.

HPC meets, discusses current issues

by Jana Schutt

The Hall Presidents Council met last evening in the basement of Breen-Phillips Hall. On the agenda was a report on Monday's CLC meeting, a speaker for the United Way campaign, and appointment of HPC committee members.

Paul Riehle, Keenan president, reported on the CLC article in yesterday's Observer, clarifying a statement made by Fr. John VanWolfe, vice-president for Student Affairs, that party rooms be used only on Friday and Saturday evenings, unless the hall rector feels that an exception is warranted. This is essentially the policy that the CLC advocated.

"If party rooms are used responsibly this semester, the keg proposal will have a better chance of passing in future," Riehle added.

Fr. Joe McTaggart also spoke last night on the United Way Campaign which is to be held on campus October 7-11. Each dorm will be canvassed individually.

"We are part of the city of South Bend," McTaggart said,

"and the organizations that students participate in are set up in South Bend. We want to promote a community feeling, an involvement. The money is important, of course, but the most important aspect is 100% involvement."

Dorms must have donations from each person to tally a 100% mark. This is not by the amount of money, but by the number of donors. Suggested donation is $1.

The HPC committee working in conjunction with INPIRG reported a plan to collect cans and paper to raise money for INPIRG. Half of the money collected will be put into the HPC budget allocation, and the other half will go to INPIRG. Collection will begin in the near future and will be done by truck from dorm to dorm.

In other actions, four standing committees were formed to operate for the 1979-80 school year. The Budget Committee, which makes decisions on monies allocated to each hall from the HPC budget, works in conjunction with the HPC Executive Coordinator, Don Ciancio. Members of this committee include John Riely, Jane Stoffel, Don Murday, Curt Wesseln, Chris Diagn, and Paul Riehle, alternate.

The Round Table Committee organizes dinners which promote interaction between hall leaders. It is comprised of Margaret Ward, Madeline Darrouzet, and Don Ciancio.

The Standard Review Committee is charged with the enforcement of HPC policy. Any problems cited are discussed here and solutions suggested. Members are Phil Vanderhoeft, Joe Madigan, Pete Visceglia, Lou Moran, Geoff Raynor, Bart Henderson, and Dale Robinson. Donna Schaefer, Mike Tuohy, and Phil Vanderhoeft were appointed to the Sports Committee. This group selects the all-stars for all interhall competition.

"You can't look at your first job as a career, but as a building block to other careers." This was the idea stressed by Ms. Lucy Hammer, trust officer of Indiana Bank and Trust of Ft. Wayne. The 1977 graduate of Saint Mary's College participated in a "College to Career Days" workshop presented yesterday at St. Mary's.

The series of workshops, sponsored by the Counseling and Career Development Center in conjunction with Saint Mary's Student Government, is designed to expose students to problems confronted in the working world through the personal experiences of women in various career fields.

Ms. Hammer also emphasized that although a first job after graduation may not be ideal, the experience and opportunity for personal connections it provides can lead to higher positions with greater responsibility.

She urged students to investigate the job responsibilities of various fields in order to find out if that particular area truly interests them. "Look at the yellow pages of the phone book or at the directory of an office building for people in your field of interest. What you find out may not be what you had expected."

Ruth Fischer, assistant professor of music at St. Mary's and an alumni of the college, stressed in her workshop that money and prestige are not the only factors involved in selecting a job. The opportunities for personal fulfillment a job provides, such as the chance to develop and implement one's own programs, also play important roles in the degree of satisfaction one receives from a job. "Look for the most fulfilling job available. If you are not happy in what you're doing, no amount of money can compensate for your personal sacrifice."

Also speaking yesterday was Carolyn Schlipf, regional branch manager for Temporaries Inc., a nationwide industry that does campus recruiting for corporations in order to fill part-time job openings.

Some of the positions that are open to graduates with no previous experience involved personnel administrative work. This means one receives on-the-job training for three months in order to qualify for a supervising position, says Schlipf.

Jobs may entail anything from screening and hiring job applicants to matching the potential part-time employees with the company in need of the workers' skills, according to Schlipf. Temporary, Inc. services provide workers where they are needed for approximately 90% of the nation's corporations, claims Schlipf.

Certain qualifications are required of one who is a possible candidate for a supervising position. Fluency and articulation of speech and the written word are most important, along with the ability to communicate with people on a day to day basis. Almost any major is a likely prospect for a vocation such as this, but particularly those majoring in English, Philosophy or the Liberal Arts.

Since Temporaries Inc. serves so many businesses, they have become "the nation's third largest growing industry" says Schlipf. Many of the accomplishments made in order to better the corporation include: employee benefit packages, paid holidays, hospitalization coverage, a credit union and many others. The system deals with four types of classified work which are as follows: editorial, industrial, medical and clerical, all of which provide a better chance for the part time employee finding a job geared towards his ability.

The "College to Career Day" workshops, open to all, will be continued today from 11 a.m. to 8 p.m. in Stapleton Lounge in LeMans Hall and tomorrow from 11 a.m. to 8 p.m. in Regina North Lounge.

Student Union distributes packages

by Tom Jackman
Senior Staff Reporter

Confusion surrounded the distribution of 247 Homecoming packages last night, but no injuries were incurred and the sale went "reasonably well" according to Tim Coughlin, Student Union social commissioner.

Packages cost $50 apiece, but were particularly valuable because they contained two general admission tickets to next month's Southern California football game, along with two tickets to the Kansas rock concert and two tickets to the homecoming dance.

The packages were distributed outside of Gate 3 at the ACC, a location which was not announced until 15 minutes before the sale on WSND-AM. At this time, WSND's Jim O'Brien incorrectly added that only 50 packages were available. With the tickets being on a "first-come first-served" basis, a massive campus-wide dash for the ACC ensued.

Although the Student Union possessed 250 packages, they allowed only the first 247 students to sign a list which would enable them to purchase the tickets. Two of the remaining packages, it was announced, were to be saved for a $1 raffle next week. The final package will be the grand prize in a "Helen of Troy" hunt to be held shortly before homecoming, according to Student Union director Tom Hamel.

However, many students believed that the list being signed was for a lottery to be held immediately after the sale, and that they were unfairly excluded. Coughlin was quick to clarify that this was just a misunderstanding, and there was never any intention of raffling the two packages off last night.

Once the fortunate 247 students purchased the tickets, they signed another list to confirm that they were the first ones to arrive.

Comptroller Rick Pinkowski explained that the Student Union chose this method of distribution "to make sure that the people who really wanted the tickets would get them." Coughlin added that "this is the fairest possible way we could do it." He noted that a lottery would have drawn a far greater number of students, notably those who weren't really interested in the packages. Just announcing the time and date of the sale ahead of time, "a sleep-out," would have been unsuitable according to Coughlin.

Rumors that students were seriously injured in the rush for tickets were given credence by an ambulance which sped down Juniper Road at the same time. No injuries were reported to any local authorities, according to Hamel.

The raffle for two of the last three packages will be announced next week in The Observer, and will be limited to 500 $1 tickets, said Coughlin. The search for the final package will be held next month.

United Way explaining the purposes of the organization. According to Drummond, the Saint Joseph County Division funds 35 community services. Each United Way organization is an autonomous unit supporting the groups in their community that they feel require aid. He explained that four and one half percent of each dollar raised is used by the United Way volunteers to raise money for the charity, the rest of the money goes directly to the charities they fund.

Drummond spoke at the meeting in response to the Board's request for more information about United Way before making their decision. Adri Trigiani, development commissioner has been researching the operation since it came to her attention last year that many students were displeased with funding United Way.

"Student Government wants to get closer to their goal of raising social consciousness on areas we feel affects student life," noted Kathleen Sweeney, vice-president of student activities. One of the opinions expressed by the Board was that their efforts should go towards the campus charity.

... United Way

The United Way Campaign will still take place under the direction of Adri Trigiani and a group of student and faculty volunteers.

In other businesses, the commissioners working on Founders Day reported that they have rented a balloon to give rides to students on Oct. 11 from 3-5 p.m. The cost of renting the balloon is $350 and the cost of the rides will be about $1.00. The balloon is 70 feet high and 50 feet in diameter and will rise 75 feet from the ground.

Sheila Wixted, treasurer, announced that Friday, Sept. 28, is the last day for clubs and organizations to turn in their requests for Student Government allocations. The allocations will be made Oct. 7.

During the last Board meeting it was announced that Carrie Meyer resigned her position as Athletic Commissioner. A new commissioner has not yet been appointed.

Kegs: a sad case

In business it is known as the "bottom line." After all the hope, after all the talk, after all the work, what is the result? With little fanfare and even less explanation, the bottom line for the CLC after the Monday night meeting showed that kegs will still not be allowed on campus, giving CLC members--both the young and the less young--more than a little to be disillusioned about.

We live in a world of buzz words. The CLC has the power to "have input;" yet the recent history of the CLC shows that its "input" rarely is in agreement with the administration's output. The feeling of authority the CLC derives from "inputting" is fragile, easily and frequently crushed, like all thin masquerades.

The great "keg" issue is a case in point. In an effort to assert some control over their lives and their university, the CLC proposed, very simply, that beer be dispensed in party rooms from kegs rather than expensive, wasteful cans and bottles. Their reasoning was clear and cogent: draft beer tastes better, costs less, and is less wasteful. In their exuberance to "input" in a grand way the whole idea of drinking beer from kegs was turned into some type of lofty social issue called "learning how to drink responsibly," an idea as obscene in its implication as it is laughable in its rhetoric. "Inputting" with such a meaningless buzz phrase reflects the CLC's impotency in changing University policy, and this is sad.

Sadder yet is the way in which the decision was made. While Fr. VanWolfe, who announced the final decision, would appear to be the obvious scapegoat, the decision was apparently out of his control: close to half the rectors on campus did not support the proposal, even though the proposal would have given them the opportunity to accept or reject the tapping of kegs in their particular hall.

This represents an obvious shirking of responsibility. Were rectors who opposed in-hall kegs looking out for the welfare of students who live in halls run by rectors who think less clearly than themselves? Hardly. It is more likely that they were either protecting their own on-campus image, or once again "protecting" their overly patronized students.

While students will always drink, many will tend to drink more than their share in a frustrating effort to reassert control over their own lives, control taken from them by rectors who prefer to protect rather than lead. Perhaps the issue all along had less to do with "responsible drinking" than with responsible leading. In this area, the students have once again been let down.

'IF IT MAKES YOU FEEL ANY BETTER, I'M TELLING EVERYONE I EXPECT A HARD-FOUGHT BATTLE...OK?'

Jimmy's Tough Decision

Art Buchwald

WASHINGTON--Things happen very fast in Washington.

A few months ago everyone was asking: "Will Teddy Kennedy run in 1980?"

Now people want to know: "Will Jimmy Carter run in 1980?"

At the moment it is very hard to predict. There has been great deal of pressure on Carter to run, particularly by members of his staff. But insiders say he is reluctant at this time to announce his candidacy.

Carter has told friends, "If I challenge Kennedy in 1980 I could split the party. Besides, there are many family considerations that I have to resolve."

One is whether his wife Rosalynn wants Jimmy to run for President. Intimates say that Rosalynn, who has never enjoyed the give and take of national politics, would prefer that Jimmy go back into the U.S. Navy. Most of Carter's Annapolis classmates are admirals now, and Rosalynn is sure that if Jimmy would reapply for his commission he would earn his flag rank in no time.

On the other hand, some friends say that Rosalynn enjoys being First Lady and much prefers the East Wing of the White House to the Grand Ballroom of the Carter Peanut Warehouse in Plains.

Other family considerations that Jimmy is seriously weighing is whether, by not running, he'll have to take his daughter Amy out of the District of Columbia's school system. One of the reasons Jimmy gave for wanting to be President is that he had heard the D.C. school system was so much better than the one in Americus, GA.

A third family consideration Jimmy has to face up to is how his brother Billy will feel about him running for another term.

Billy has always been shy by nature and hated the limelight, and he has never cottoned to his brother being President of the United States. He was once overheard telling Jimmy: "I'll be glad when you're out of the White House so I can get back to tending my gas station. Everyone who owns a station has been making a mint. But not me. Every time I want to go to work I get called in front of a grand jury. If you cared anything for me you'd chuck it all and get the feds and press off my back."

The most important factor in Jimmy's decision will be how his mother feels about him running for President. Miss Lillian has yet to indicate if she will give her permission or not.

"I've tried to give Jimmy a good upbringing and teach him right from wrong," she told the Muppets on television the other night. "But the trouble with being President of the United States is that you don't know what is right or wrong. When you think you're doing right, the public says you're doing wrong. And when you're doing wrong, the public says you're doing right. I've never stood in the way of my children. So if Jimmy wants to run for President it's my duty as his mother to support him, even if it's difficult to explain to my friends whose sons are all successful in their own fields. On the other hand, if he wants to buy a cooperative apartment on Fifth Avenue in New York City, I'll go along with that too."

Most of the pressure on Carter is coming from his close advisors who keep telling him, "Some people will say it's unfair of you to challenge an incumbent senator from Massachusetts when he decides he wants to be President. But these are not ordinary times and the country needs leadership. You're the only one who can do it after what we've gone through for the past three years."

Pretty soon Jimmy Carter will have to make the hardest decision of his life. Will he enter the presidential sweepstakes and risk splitting his own party by challenging Kennedy? Or will he bow out and wait another four years to run, when the Democratic nomination would be his for the asking?

come to our attention until after the fire."

He added that serious consideration for the project has only surfaced "within the last year, mostly since Brother Ed brought it up with the fire department and the maintenance department."

Director of Fire Safety Jack Bland explained that Morrissey's worries are only a small part of an overall campus trouble area.

"We know that we have a lot of dead-end corridors around campus," Bland acknowledged. "And we're trying to work to alleviate the situation, but Morrissey's problem is just one in many."

While describing most halls as trouble areas, Bland singled out St. Edwards, Carroll, Holy Cross, and Sorin, as dorms of particular worry to his department.

"If you take any one of these old halls, each one has its unique set of problems,"

Bland explained. "These buildings were built under a different set of codes, and what was good then is not necessarily good now."

In response to the fire hazard inherent in the older dorms' structures, Bland noted that the University is in the process of surveying all buildings on campus, but residence halls in particular, for potentially dangerous hazards.

"We're developing studies on this whole dead end corridor situation. We have some severe dead-end corridor problems we're looking into," Bland said.

The fire department's authority only extends to making recommendations, however.

"Once it leaves my hands," Bland explained, "it's up to the maintenance department to implement action."

In the case of the Morrissey fire escape project, however, that implementation came only after a disastrous fire, and two years of waiting.

three different panels of HEW officials.

Mary F. Berry, assistant secretary for Education, chaired the first panel which discussed the relationship of women's colleges to "federally mandated initiatives for educational equity."

The second panel addressed critical higher education issues that HEW will face in the next few years. For example, accreditation and student financial aid.

The topic of panel three concerned civil rights issues of interest to women's colleges. The handicapped were included in this presentation.

"The conference certainly has begun a process of sensitivity and communication on both sides that must be continued by both HEW and the WCC," Holland said.

Carter addresses APTA, calls for national mass transit aid

NEW YORK (AP) - President Carter said yesterday his proposals to aid mass transportation will erase decades of neglect and "reclaim America's transit systems" unless Congress rejects his proposed tax on oil company profits.

Carter, making a one-day trip to New York City, also promised that mass transit systems will continue to get priority allocation of gasoline and diesel fuel if shortages develop. "We will keep them rolling," he said.

Carter's remarks were delivered at the annual convention of the American Public Transit Association.

After his speech, the President was to attend a reception for civic and community leaders before holding a "Town meeting" with residents of the borough of Queens.

In his speech to the transit group, Carter said he has made proposals that would produce 40,000 jobs throughout the 1980's, save "massive" amounts of energy and add 15 million passengers a day to buses, streetcars and subways.

He announced no new programs, but said that when he is through with New York City's 75-year-old IRT subway line "It won't look a day over sweet 16."

Carter spoke glowingly of the future of mass transit but said, "For this program to succeed, the Congress absolutely must approve one major element—the windfall profits tax."

He said lobbyists "are swarming all over Capitol Hill, working to devastate" the tax on excess oil company profits by cutting back sharply on the $140 billion the administration claims it would produce for the Treasury over 10 years.

"Their proposed amendments would put a total of well over $100 billion in the pockets of the oil companies," Carter said.

Shortly before Carter left Washington, the Senate Finance Committee unanimously agreed to exclude "newly discovered oil" from the tax, one of a number of pending moves aimed at softening the tax bite. The administration opposed the committee's action.

The program Carter outlined to the nation July 15 in his energy address included a recommendation that $10 billion be provided from the windfall profits tax for public mass transit facilities along with $6.5 billion for improving automobile fuel efficiency during the 1980s. But he told the transit association audience:

"With the energy proposals I have presented to the Congress, this nation will invest $50 billion in public transportation during the decade of the 1980s." He did not elaborate on the $50 billion figure.

Congress deadlocks over budget

WASHINGTON (AP) - Like a family arguing over whether to buy a new car, and which one, Congress is locked in an increasingly bitter debate over how much the country can afford to spend and what it should be spent on.

But as the House and Senate resume debate on the budget today, they'll be talking not in terms of $100 or $200-the cost of one car vs. another-but about a budget of more than $500 billion and even differences in the billions of dollars.

And for the first time in the five-year history of the new congressional budget process, it appears unlikely they'll resolve their differences before the new fiscal year starts next Monday.

The deadlock is not expected to affect the day-to-day operation of government since Congress can still appropriate money, but it could generate other fall-out, including a further weakening of public confidence in Congress.

The Senate, looking forward to this fall's SALT II debate, favors sharply higher defense spending than the proposed House budget. The Senate is also calling for $3.6 billion in cuts in social programs that the House has thus far rejected.

House and Senate leaders agree there is little chance a compromise can be reached on the 1980 budget by the end of this week when the House is slated to leave for a week-long recess.

Some leaders even say the only real budget deadline is final congressional adjournment for the year, expected in December.

And while day-to-day government will go on, a long-term deadlock on the budget seems certain to undermine already shaky public confidence in congressional budget-making and buttress the charge that the government cannot live within a tight budget.

Rep. Tobert N. Giaimo, D-Conn., the chairman of the House Budget Committee, said almost as much last week when he declared that failure to reach agreement "would be admitting to the American people that (Congress) is very good at appropriating money but that Congress can't live with budget discipline."

Giaimo added that such a deadlock would strengthen efforts to place mandatory restrictions on government spending. Many states are already calling for a constitutional amendment to require a balanced federal budget.

The new budget process was inaugurated five years ago to give Congress a better handle on spending by creating a system for establishing priorities within an overall budget ceiling.

The new process called for setting tentative spending ceilings in May, nearly five months before the start of a new budget year. The ceilings are divided into 19 categories, or "functions" of government, such as defense, transportation and health.

The tentative ceilings are then used by congressional committees as they approve spending for programs under their jurisdictions. The ceilings are reviewed in September and a firm total budget figure prior to the new process, Congress would simply appropriate money for government programs and the total amount appropriated would be the budget.

By and large, the new process has worked well and is widely regarded as one of the most important congressional reforms in recent years.

Normally, the target May figures are ratified in September with relatively modest changes and appropriating committees live within the ceilings.

However, this year, with inflation running higher than expected, a recession under way and mounting public pressure for spending restraint, Congress has found the task more difficult.

The House, with its heavier urban representation, has tried

Task force proposals threaten the dollar

WASHINGTON (AP) - The dollar bill could become a thing of the past and tomorrow's money might be made of plastic if Congress follows the recommendations released yesterday by a Carter administration task force on money.

The task force suggested that the government begin replacing the paper dollar with the new Susan B. Anthony dollar coin and, later, with $2 bills.

It also suggested that Congress consider eliminating the half-dollar coin, making pennies out of aluminum alloy if copper prices rise too high and urged a study of using plastic in future currency.

Possible elimination of the dollar bill was immediately attacked by Rep. Frank Annunzio, D-Ill., chairman of the House Banking subcommittee on consumer affairs. Annunzio told a hearing that he would "do everything within my power to keep the dollar bill in circulation."

"If we do eliminate the dollar bill and, instead, use the dollar coin, then the Treasury Department should be required to issue every American a pair of suspenders," he concluded.

Congressional sources, who asked that their names not be used, said Congress probably would move very slowly to alter the nation's currency because of apparent public rejection of two recent hard-fought changes: introduction of the Anthony dollar earlier this year and the 1976 re-introduction of the $2 bill.

The task-force report prepared by officials from the Treasury Department, the Mint, the Bureau of Engraving and Printing and the Federal Reserve-is the latest in a series of recommendations that have been prepared on the nation's coin and currency system.

Most are aimed at lowering the government's cost of producing money, which will total nearly $35 million for coins this year and $72 million for paper money.

The report gives no hint of the cost of its recommended changes nor a time-table for their adoption.

"The recommendations have not been adopted or endorsed by the Treasury but are being sent to Congress and made public as part of the review process before final decisions are made," the Treasury Department said in a statement.

It added that "the proposed changes are for economy and to aid law enforcement rather than to correct any serious deficiencies in the systems."

The recommendations come at a time the government has encountered public resistance to the Anthony dollar. Many people have complained that they confuse the new coin with quarters and major retailers have reported little demand for the new dollar.

Still, William H. Wallace, a Federal Reserve official, told Annunzio's subcommittee: "The initial demand for the coin has been about what we forecast. We have therefore been disappointed by the instant analysis which has led many in the media to assume that the coin will not be successful."

Senior Class Trip

Money exchange for pesos in Acapulco, pick up applications in Student Activities office ND or SMC any day this week - RETURN BY Friday Sept 28. Money will be distributed on travel night Oct. 16 $50 minimum no maximum .Any non US citizens going on trip please contact Student Activities ND or SMC

by Brendan Brown

In preparation for the senior trip to Acapulco, Andy Barfuss, senior coordinator, announced that those interested in exchanging American for Mexican currency should pick up applications in the Student Activities Office at either Notre Dame or Saint Mary's and have them filled out and returned by Friday September 28. Barfuss "strongly advised" those going to Acapulco to take advantage of this opportunity. The Student Activities Office has made arrangements with a currency house in Chicago to handle the transaction.

Barfuss felt that it would be safer and more profitable for students to deal through the currency house. Although there is a fifty dollar minimum, Barfuss believed that most seniors would exchange between $100 and $150.

Those going on the trip are required to attend Travel Night on October 16th at 8:00 pm in O'Laughlin Auditorium at St. Mary's. U.S. customs officials will be there to give advice and to distribute tourist cards which can be used instead of passports. To obtain a tourist card students are required to bring proof of citizenship in the form of a birth certificate, a voter registration card, a passport, or a notarized affidavit.

Those who are not U.S. citizens should report to the Student Activities Office as soon as possible to make the proper arrangements.

Also on Travel Night plane tickets and flight times will be distributed, and roommate selections will be confirmed. Furthermore, students will be able to purchase t-shirts commemorating the trip for three dollars.

To date, there are some 485 seniors from St. Mary's and Notre Dame going to Acapulco, however over 600 signed up and paid the fifty dollar deposit. The high number of cancellations didn't surprise Barfuss though, who said that many of the seniors were probably "over-anxious." He pointed out that the travel agent who is organizing the trip also felt that 600 people was an unusually high number for a vacation of this sort.

to protect funding for social programs while the Senate, worried about the military balance with the Soviet Union, has pressed for increased defense spending.

That conflict, fought on a battlefield of growing public resistance to government spending, was bound to be difficult and now appears to be slipping into deadlock.

President Carter and many House and Senate leaders have called for a 1980 budget deficit below this year's expected figure of $30 billion. They say a reduction is necessary to show the American people that Congress is moving toward a balanced budget, a goal that Carter has set for 1981.

However, defense spending has become a politically explosive issue in the Senate, where some senators vow to oppose the U.S.-Soviet strategic arms limitation treaty-SALT II unless the military budget is substantially increased. Carter has endorsed the 1980 defense level approved by the Senate.

However, House liberals have argued that increased social spending is needed in the current recession when unemployment will rise and more Americans will be forced onto welfare.

The House is considering a proposed 1980 budget calling for $548.2 billion in spending and a $28.9 billion deficit. The proposal is only slightly leaner than one rejected last week in a surprise vote.

Last week, the Senate approved its $546.3 billion version of the budget, and because the Senate estimated revenues as lower than the House, its version contains a higher deficit, $31.6 billion.

The Senate proposal contains 3 percent growth in 1980 defense spending over and above inflation, while the House budget would increase 1980 defense spending by about 1 percent after inflation.

Golfers take third in Indiana tourney

Notre Dame went into the Indiana Intercollegiate Golf Championship at Zionsville, Ind. last Monday as the defending champion of the tournament and had high hopes of capturing the title again this year.

But by the time the field of eighteen teams had completed the one-day, 36 hole event at the Golf Club on Indiana, those hopes had vanished. Notre Dame ended up in third place with a score of 771. Purdue, having last won the tournament in 1975, took first place with a score of 748, and Ball State at 769 grabbed second.

There was an amazing similarity between the confrontation of Notre Dame and Purdue at Zionsville on Monday and the battle between these same two schools on the gridiron last Saturday in West Lafayette. After the first eighteen holes of play on Monday, or in other words half time, Notre Dame and Ball State posted 378's and were leading the tournament and Purdue by four shots. So going into the locker room... rather, clubhouse, Notre Dame seemed to be in pretty good shape. But, reminiscent of last Saturday, the Boilermakers came out smoking in the second half.

"They simply caught fire," said Notre Dame coach Noel O'Sullivan. The Irish coach was referring to the fact that Purdue shot an incredible 366 for the final eighteen holes, only six strokes over par as a team. "To shoot six over par as a team is unreal," added O'Sullivan.

Notre Dame could only manage a team score of 393 to go along with its initial 378.

The medalist in the tournament was Purdue freshman Larry Gosewehr who fired a tournament record of 140 with rounds of 73 and 67. All in all, it looked as though Purdue had really done it again to the Irish.

But, thanks to senior John Lundgren, Notre Dame was able to gain some revenge on the Boilermakers. At the end of the 36 holes of regulation play, Lundgren was tied with Purdue's Eric Dutt for second place at 148, forcing a playoff. The other members of the two teams gathered at the first playoff hole to give support to their respective teammates.

The stage was set for the showdown, but the excitement didn't last long. Lundgren stroked a three-foot birdie putt in on the first hole to defeat

Dutt.

While Lundgren took second place, the other Notre Dame golfers had strong showings. Out of 108 players, senior captain Dave Knee (152) was eighth and junior Tim Sacke (155) was 11th.

O'Sullivan and the team had mixed emotions about the tournament. O'Sullivan admitted that the team's performance was "a little disappointing," however he was quick to add that, "We were all delighted that John (Lundgren) got some licks in against Purdue."

Notre Dame will get another shot at Purdue in the Notre Dame Invitational Monday on the Burke Memorial course. The Irish will host 10 schools in this 18-hole event.

game, an altercation erupted between Franklin and an unidentified Tech player, resulting in the ejection of both players. When regulation time expired, the Indiana Tech players and coaches refused to play the two, 10-minute overtime periods required under NCAA rules. Consequently, the referees awarded the game to the Irish, with Tom Luetkehans getting credit for the overtime goal. Irish coach Rich Hunter could not be reached for comment.

Notre Dame will try to make it two in a row this afternoon at 4 p.m. when they take on Kalamazoo College on the Stepan Center field. The Irish will take to the road tomorrow for a 3:30 p.m. clash with Albion College before returning to Cartier Field Friday after a 4 p.m. game against the top-ranked Hoosiers of Indiana University.

Chisox sue

CHICAGO (AP)--The parent company of the Chicago White Sox has sued rock-concert promoters for $3.8 million in connection with damage done to the Comiskey Park Field.

Artnell Co. filed the suit Monday in Circuit Court against California Jam, Inc. The suit claims that damage done to resodded parts of the field during concerts Aug. 18 and 19 forced the White Sox to cancel three games.

It added that the cancellations caused the team to lose revenue from concessions, ticket sales, parking proceeds and radio and television sponsors.

It cost more than $45,000 to restore the playing field, according to Artnell.

There was no immediate comment from California Jam.

The suit also said that California Jam failed to live up to an agreement to give Artnell a statement of gross receipts from the concerts and the percentage due the White Sox--$10,000 a performance or 10 percent of therevenue, whichever was greater.

is a question a lot of young people in high school and college are asking. Then, even if you get the finest college degree, where can you use it meaningfully? Perhaps the answer lies in becoming an Air Force officer through Air Force ROTC. We have many different career areas in which specialists of all kinds are needed. And as an Air Force commissioned officer you can have unequalled opportunity for leadership and management experience, plus an excellent starting salary and benefits package.

Consider Air Force ROTC as a gateway to a great way of life for you. Find out about the benefits of a four, three or two-year scholarship that pays $100 a month, tuition, book costs and lab fees. Couple that with what will be waiting after graduation, and you have the answer to what you've been looking for.

Indiana here Friday

Soccer no pie-in-the-face

I remember the first time I ever saw a soccer game. Notre Dame played Bethel College and the Irish won by some score so ridiculous, I can't even remember it.

Of course, I don't remember much of anything except how cold it was that night. In fact, I only stayed because I was covering the game for this newspaper. (I was very ambitious as a sophomore.) Anyway, I came away from the frostbiting experience thinking the whole thing was rather boring, wondering whether the Irish would win their next real football game and praying my feet would thaw out before then.

I was fairly sure I'd never go to another soccer game unless I was well-paid and heavily insulated.

As things turned out, I was wrong -- which is becoming the pattern these days. (Who else do you know that picked Notre Dame to beat Purdue by 21 points?) I just happened to stop by a soccer game last spring and I actually started enjoying it; until, that is, some criminal smashed a whipped cream pie in my face. (I'm never going out during An Tostal again.) But even through the whipped cream, I could see that I really liked it. (The game, not the pie.)

These days I never miss a soccer game and I'm not getting paid to go. In fact, I pay to get in. It only costs half a buck which is less than the price of a hamburger at the Huddle. The way I look at it, I'm getting two hours of great entertainment and saving 500 calories a game.

Which is not to say that you have to be fat to like soccer. In fact I would recommend a Notre Dame soccer game to anyone. It is, perhaps, the only game left in America that is still played for skill's sake. Its excitement comes from the action on the field -- a good shot and a great save to stop it ... a breakaway chance and a smart defensive play to kill it -- the college game hasn't been polluted by violence, cheap shots or inflated egos.

At least not yet.

The Notre Dame soccer team, currently in its third year of varsity competition, is 3-4-1 after yesterday's game against Indiana Tech which Tech forfeited when they refused to come out for the overtime period. The 3 is encouraging, the 4 is misleading, but the 1 tells the story. It represents a 2-2 tie that came on Cartier Field Sunday against Loyola-Baltimore.

I know, I know...ties are like kissing your sister. But not a tie against the number eight team in the entire nation. A team that gives full scholarships (Notre Dame gives no scholarships for soccer) and has a budget that's 10 times larger than the Irish soccer treasury.

And you want excitement?! Try this: The Irish were leading 1-0 through most of the game before Loyola kicked two quick ones to go ahead, 2-1, with about 20 minutes left in the game.

With 1:42 remaining, Notre Dame's Kevin Lovejoy scored the tying goal on a pass from Jay Schwartz. The game went into overtime, where the Irish dominated but could not score, and it ended in a 2-2 deadlock.

"It's the kind of game that could make a difference in the rest of the season," predicted head coach Rich Hunter. "Now we know we can play with the best."

That's good, because they'll be here on Friday at 4 p.m. wearing bright red uniforms that say "Indiana" on the jerseys. The number two team in the country last year, the Hoosiers presently boast a 6-1 mark and a top-five national ranking. The last time Notre Dame kicked off against them, the final score was 7-1 in favor of the boys from Bloomington, but this year, things are a little bit different. This year the game is being played at Notre Dame -- and this year the Irish think they can win.

Frankly, so do I.

But to do it, to beat Indiana, Notre Dame will have to play the best soccer game ever seen under the Golden Dome. Kevin Lovejoy, Mike Mai, and Sami Kahale will have to score goals. Jim Sabitus, Tom Crotty and Oliver Franklin will have to see that the Hoosiers don't. And Brian Cullather will have to smother every ball that comes near the goal. But I don't want to single out any players because to beat Indiana, everyone associated with the team, from the coach to the manager, will

Belles salvage weekend split

by Deirdre Grant
Sports Writer

The Saint Mary's tennis team was on the road early Saturday morning to take on Big 10 power Purdue; and they arrived home late Sunday night after playing at Butler University.

At Purdue, number one singles player Patsy Coash defeated Aura Jain 6-2, 6-0. However, the rest of the team did not find the Boilermakers as easy to handle. Consequently Saint Mary's found themselves leaving West Lafayette without another win.

Anna Jain, twin sister to Aura, defeated the Belles number two singles player Maureen Fitzgerald 6-2, 6-0. Karen Smith was defeated by Purdue's Mary Christell 6-0, 6-1. Susan Brad defeated Carmel Maenza by the same score. Fifth and Sixth singles, Maureen O'Brien and Mo O'Brien were unable to challenge the Boilermakers losing 6-3, 6-2, and 6-0, 6-0, respectively.

In doubles, Saint Mary's once again failed to find a winning combination. The doubles team of Jain and Jain downed Coash and Smith 6-2, 6-0. Throwing a little more salt on the wound, Christell and Sherry Cannon fired away, defeating Fitzgerald and Maureen O'Brien 6-0, 6-1. The doubles team of Jan Duonch and Terry Bracken were also struck down by a score of 6-4, 6-2.

Though the ride from Purdue to the Belles second weekend match against Butler must have been disheartening, the girls managed to leave their Lafayette woes behind, and come with a 6-3 win over Butler University.

Coash once again looked outstanding, defeating Sarah Fee 6-0, 6-1. Sandy Frey, the Belles coach, summed it all up. "I can't say enough about Pasty. Even against Purdue, though worried, she got herself psyched up and won without any trouble." Fitzgerald beat Butler's Fran Willson 6-2, 6-4. Saint Mary's number three singles player, Smith, lost to Jenny Young 7-5, 6-1. Getting back on the winning road, Maenza rolled over Nancy Olcott 6-1, 6-1, Maureen O'Brien edged past Pat Curtwright 7-5, 6-4, and Bracken defeated Barb Skinner 6-2, 6-3.

In doubles, Coash and Smith flew past Fee and Willson 6-1, 6-1, while Bracken and Mo O'Brien lost a tough one to Olcott and Reynold 6-7, 7-5, 7-5. Though pushing hard for a come from behind win, Maenza and Linda Radner lost to Lindow and Sterling 6-2, 7-5.

Returning home from this busy tennis weekend, coach Frey was able to take a close look at the team; she is very encouraged with what she sees. For a small college, Saint Mary's undoubtedly has a good team. Frey believes that the team is gaining more depth and consistency. The practices have become more intense, and the team hopes to be in top shape for the state tournament. Looking ahead for the Belles, this young team has talent and depth, coupled with a strong desire to win. Therefore, the rest of the season should prove to be quite exciting.

Controversy in soccer victory

The Notre Dame Soccer team picked up its third win of the 1979 season yesterday with a 4-3 overtime win at Indiana Tech. The contest was shrouded with controversy that led to the ejection of three Tech players and Notre Dame full-back Oliver Franklin.

For reasons unknown, Indiana Tech refused to take the field for the overtime period, which caused them to forfeit the game to Notre Dame.

The score was 3-2 in favor of the home team when Notre Dame's Bill Wetterer, on a pass from Tim Nauman, knotted the score with 18:15 to play.

Then with a little more than three minutes remaining in the
