Campus groups lobby for sports scholarships

by Mark Rust
News Editor

Captains of the various varsity sports will meet tonight with student government representatives to discuss ways in which they might influence the University to reinstate scholarships for non-revenue producing sports. Student Body President Bill Roche has also started a petition drive to qualify student sentiment, and met with University officials on three occasions, but other than that, according to Roche, "there's not much we can do."

"We just don't have all the information we need," Roche said yesterday. Fr. Edmund Joyce, executive vice-president of the University, defended the scholarship cut by pointing out that hockey, which uses 20 of the 40 cut scholarships, loses "too much" money. But how much is too much is unclear.

In order for the student government to have any effective voice in the sports funding decision, they need to know how much the program actually loses and what can be done to reverse the situation. Joyce, according to Roche, has thus far declined to give them that information on the grounds that it would be "impractical."

The University informed the athletic department in mid-January that no further scholarships would be offered to non-revenue producing sports "until a firm decision has been reached by the board of Trustees." That decision could come as early as Friday, when the executive committee of the board meets in Key Biscayne this weekend.

According to Dick Conklin, director of Information Services, the executive board is empowered - to make decisions for the board.

"Fr. Joyce told me he didn't know whether the decision would be made then," Roche said. "I think they need to provide us with more information than we are now getting. If they don't make a decision on Friday then that's okay. We just don't want them to make a decision to cut funding without allowing us to have some influence."

Roche said he would be happy if the board decided to reinstate the scholarships. He said he would be unhappy if they decided to definitely keep the cuts without giving the students a chance to voice their opinions.

In the meantime, no decision by the board would mean that the cuts will occur at least until the full board meets in the late spring.

Roche said he hopes to bring some of the captains with him to the Grace Pit tonight at 8 p.m., when Fr. Theodore Hesburgh, University president, will address some of these issues.

Facts pertaining to the scholarship cut controversy are sketchy: it is unclear, for instance, how much the hockey program actually loses. Three students who recently attended a meeting with Joyce concerning the future of the hockey program recalled Joyce using figures as varied as $60,000 and $120,000. Greg Meredith, captain of the hockey team, says the figure is closer to $90,000, depending on the accounting method used.

But some student government officials, including Vice-President Bill Vita and Executive Coordinator Jose Marrero, feel the real issue lies not in how much money hockey loses, but how much the University is willing to support hockey and programs like it.

"Fr. Joyce has insinuated that students do not support hockey, but even if prices were increased to $4 and attendance doubled that still would be a drop in the bucket compared to what the University says hockey loses," Vita said.

Roche speaks to HPC on hockey fate

by Tom Hay
Senior Staff Reporter

The future of the hockey team and new proposals for party guidelines were the topics headlining last night's HPC meeting in Lyons Hall.

Bill Roche, student body president, expressed concern over the pending fate of the Notre Dame hockey program. "Hockey is really in jeopardy right now," Roche said. "There are several issues involved in the whole athletic scene, including Title IX, but right now the urgency is on hockey."

Roche admitted that he was not certain then the administration would make know their position on non-revenue producing sports, but he added that a decision could come very soon.

"We don't know if they will make their decision this week, in May, or whenever, but right now, theoretically, hockey could get bagged on Friday," Roche said.

HPC Chairman Ellen Dorney pointed out that the issue was "not hockey versus women's sports, but hockey for hockey's sake."

Roche initiated a petition drive to voice student opposition to the proposed elimination of hockey scholarships. "What we're looking for is a concrete expression of student support. I hope the administration will take that into account when they make their decision on hockey," he said.

Roche said he hoped the petitions will allow some student input into the decision making process, but added, "Going out to the games is certainly going to help alot too."

Petitions will be available in the dining halls today, and

In Persian Gulf

U.S. receives access to bases

WASHINGTON (AP) - An American military mission returned yesterday from a week long trip to East Africa and the Middle East with commitments from three countries to allow increased U.S. access to military facilities, U.S. officials say.

The reported agreements reached with Kenya, Somalia and Oman also would grant the United States the rights to store military equipment and fuel. In return for their cooperation the three countries would receive increased amounts of U.S. military aid although the amounts have not yet been specified, said the officials, who asked not to be named.

Since the ouster of the pro western monarchy in Iran a year ago, the United States has been seeking ways to expand its military capability in the Persian Gulf and the Indian Ocean regions to cope with spreading political turmoil.

Part of this search has included a search for a "host country support" for U.S. air and naval forces. Late last year the administration decided this role might be filled by Oman, Kenya and Somalia.

As an additional measure the administration is planning to create a 110,000-man rapid deployment force for use in military emergencies.

Discussions are also under way on improving intelligence gathering methods to keep abreast of political currents in the region.

Last month President Carter declared the Persian Gulf a "vital interest" of the United States and that he would not hesitate to use force to protect it against outside efforts to gain control of oil fields.

O'Meara fields questions from Faculty Senate

by Annmarie Storz

University Provost Timothy O'Meara, speaking to the Faculty Senate last night in the CCE, responded to a variety of questions raised by the 36 members in attendance. O'Meara requested that a great deal of the subject matter concerning such issues as tenure appeals, faculty salaries and pay raises, and other issues be "off the record."

O'Meara has, he said "reservations" about the action being taken concerning tenure appeal procedures. He feels that the "appeals committee should not apply academic standards between departments" in tenure cases, although, "a committee could say a tenure package was not handled seriously, or there was a prejudice, or something crucial missing that should have been contained in the package."

Thirty-three cases were up for consideration this year - double the amount for last year according to O'Meara.

Course evaluations were discussed by Prof. Stephen Batill, representing the committee on Student Affairs. A Faculty Attitude survey conducted early this year discovered over 50 percent of the faculty wants to "get rid of the course evaluations completely" and 70 percent expressed dissatisfaction with the way evaluations were used in administrative decisions.

O'Meara said that "they don't appear at promotion meetings" and scores must be utilized in the department chairman's overall evaluation of a candidate as a teacher.

All 66 departments in the University have a Committee on Appointments and Promotions which evaluate tenure packages before it travels successively to the department chairman, the dean of the college, and finally to a committee composed of the Provost and others.

The problem concerning cheating at Notre Dame and the financial situation faced by retired professors were also discussed "off the record."

Irwin Press, professor of anthropology, raised the issue of the attitude expressed by seniors. He feels that they are "screwing off" and the administration must face this problem concerning the lack of academic seriousness in the senior year.

O'Meara said that "teachers have to be as tough as they can be" and although "we have a problem in standards, our standards are better than most places." He said we are not fostering intellectual curiosity in our students. We are getting them into medical school but are we producing Catholic intellectuals?

O'Meara was asked to tell the senate what he feels are his accomplishments, failures and priorities as provost. In his one-and-a-half years as provost, O'Meara said he has "tried to continue the evolution of the University in the area of scholarship." He "tries to base decisions, never with personalities in mind, but with

Italian terrorists shoot Roman Catholic activist

ROME - A young woman and a bearded male shot and killed one of Italy's leading Roman Catholic activists yesterday as he walked out of his law class into a hallway at the University of Rome, police reported. Callers to two newspapers several hours after the attack claimed it was the work of the Red Brigades, Italy's most feared terrorist gang. Vittorio Bachelet, 54, a top Italian judge, was the 11th person killed by terrorists since 1976. He presumably was chosen for assassination because of high ranking in the governing body of Italy's judicial system. The Red Brigades have vowed to strike at governmental agencies.

Bachelet had served as consultant to the Vatican and was a long time acquaintance of Pope John Paul II, who condemned the attack as "abominable crimes to stain the beloved city of Rome with blood."

Bachelet was a former president of the Italian Catholic Action, a worldwide lay organization. In 1967, he first met the Pope the archbishop of Krakow, Poland, and they served together on the pontifical commission for the laity.

Carter sends Marines to deter Soviets

WASHINGTON - The United States will send a Marine amphibious force into the Indian Ocean-Arabian Sea area next month in a new Carter administration move aimed at deterring any Soviet designs on the Persian gulf area, it was reported Tuesday night.

The mission of the battalion-sized force marks the first time that Marine combat troops will have been introduced by the United States into the Indian Ocean region. Previously, the only Marines assigned there were a handful serving as security guards aboard Navy ships.

Administration officials said that a four-ship Navy amphibious force with 1,800 Marines, helicopters, tanks and artillery arrived Tuesday at the U.S. Navy base in the Philippines.

The source who asked not to be identified, said that after about two weeks of exercises there, the Marine amphibious unit will then sail aboard the four ships into the Indian Ocean and join up with powerful U.S. Naval formations which have been patrolling in the Arabian Sea within reach of the mouth of the Persian Gulf.

Prosecution rests in Pinto trial

WINAMAC* Ind. (AP) - The prosecution rested its case yesterday in Ford Motor Co.'s reckless homicide trial after one last unsuccessful attempt to introduce key evidence on auto crash tests.

Pulaski Circuit Judge Harold R. Staffeldt turned down Ford attorney James F. Neal's request for a directed verdict of acquittal, and the automaker will begin presenting its defense Wednesday.

"I agree with (the prosecution) that there is a question for the jury, and where there is a question for the jury it would be error to do anything other than deny the motion," Staffeldt said.

Ford attorneys, in asking for the directed verdict, argued the state failed to prove Ford recklessly failed to warn consumers of possible Pinto defects, and that recklessness resulted in the death of three teen-agers in August 1978.

The three girls burned to death in a 1973 Pinto sedan that exploded when struck from behind on a northern Indiana highway. Ford faces three counts of reckless homicide in connection with the accident.

The state contends the automaker knew Pinto fuel tanks were subject to explosion in rear-end collisions but did nothing about it. The defense says the Pinto was no more dangerous, and possibly a little safer, than other subcompacts.

Before resting his case, chief prosecutor Michael Cosentino attempted to enter as evidence results of crash tests on vehicles other than the 1973 Pinto and on Pintos made before and after 1973. He argued that the tests would reveal a pattern showing Ford knew of defects in the Pinto from the time it first was produced in 1970 but refused to make modification to eliminate fire hazards and failed to warn the public.

As he has done repeatedly during the six-week trial Staffeldt ruled those crash tests were irrelevant to the Indiana case and refused to allow them as evidence.

Staffeldt dismissed a defense motion to strike testimony by Mattie Ulrich, the mother of two of the victims in the Indiana Pinto, that a recall notice on the car came six months after the crash.

Mrs. Ulrich said she would not have allowed her daughters and their cousin to take the car had she known about the recall before the accident. Asked what she would have done if she had received the warning earlier, she replied, "I would have got rid of it (the Pinto)."

Ford announced in June 1978 that it was recalling 1.5 million Pintos and Mercury Bobcats made between 1971 and 1976 because of government tests showing the fuel tanks leaked large amounts of fuel in moderate speed rear-end collisions. However, modifications to reduce the fire hazard were delayed until repair kits began arriving at dealers in September, 1978 - a month after the Indiana accident.

The prosecution's final witness, former Ford executive Harley Copp, completed six days of testimony yesterday saying style came before safety in the Pinto design.

Copp, who was Ford's vice president for European operations and later supervised crash tests in the United States, said the fuel tank on the 1973 Pinto subcompact had an odd shape - similar to a step - because it was designed to fit the pre-determined styling of the car's exterior.

"The engineers were left with a minimum of space for the spare tire, fuel tank and luggage compartment," he said. "If you don't believe me, just look at the wierd shape of that fuel tank."

In earlier testimony, Copp said the shape of the tank, and the way in which it was constructed made it more likely to explode in rear-end collisions. The step-shape gave the tank a lower breaking point than other subcompact tanks that were flat and uniform, he said.

Copp said then-Ford President Lee A. Iacocca, now chairman of Chrysler Corp., determined the Pinto's exterior style first. Engineers then were "locked into styling and locked into costs," Copp said.

IOC rejects call for boycott

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. (AP) - The International Olympic Committee announced yesterday the Olympic Games will go on in Moscow as planned, thus rejecting President Carter's call that they be moved or cancelled because of the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan.

The committee also urged that members of the Olympic organizing committee in Moscow inform the "highest authorities of their government of the circumstances which have created these difficulties for so many (National Olympic Committees)."

Lord Killanin, president of the IOC, said that all 73 members attending the IOC general session before the Winter Olympics had voted to keep the Summer Games in Moscow.

According to the U.S. State Department, more than 30 governments—as opposed to Olympic committees—have called for movement, postponement or cancellation of the Games.

Killanin said the IOC recognized the difficulties the United States Olympic Committee faced but urged it to "continue its efforts to make possible the participation of its athletes in the Games."

The U.S. committee had presented the IOC with Carter's demands.

The IOC had been deliberating for three days, although there was little doubt that the members would abide by their agreement with the Moscow Organizing Committee.

"The IOC is fully aware of, and sensitive to, the world conditions which have created the most serious challenge to confront the Olympic Games," Killanin said in a news conference Tuesday night. He concluded:

"The IOC cannot solve the political problems of the world, but calls upon the governments of all countries, and in particular those of the major powers, to come together to resolve their differences, and I, as president of the IOC, and all members, will do everything in our power to assist in this so that the Games of the XXIInd Olympiad can take place in the right atmosphere."

Killanin noted that all 142 recognized national Olympic committees are bound by Olympic rules and they alone, and not their governments, can accept or refuse invitations to the Olympic games.

Carter has said that if the Soviets do not pull their troops out by Feb. 20, and the Games are not moved or cancelled, he would not want U.S. athletes to participate.

The president reiterated that position yesterday through press spokesman Jody Powell in Washington. Powell was responding to a report in the Washington Post that the United States might prolong the ultimatum until May 24—the date the U.S. Olympic Committee has to send in its entry for the Summer Games.

Meanwhile, New York state's highest court cleared the way for the first team from Mainland China since the 1949 communist revolution to participate in the Olympics.

In a unanimous ruling, the New York Court of Appeals refused to strike down an IOC rule barring the team from Taiwan from competing under the flag and anthem of the Republic of China. The high court acted on an appeal from attorneys for the Taiwanese athletes.

Khomeini holds key to hostages

(AP) - Freedom will come for the American hostages in Iran only if their release is ordered by Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, the leader of the embassy militants was quoted as saying yesterday by a Persian Gulf newspaper. He said Iran's president should stay out of the hostage issue.

The militants, meanwhile, came under attack from Iran's Ambassador to the United Nations, who said in Geneva, Switzerland that they were beginning to lose credibility with the Iranian people and had gone "beyond their task."

In an interview with the Associated Press, U.N. Ambassador Nansour Farhang said the embassy seizure Nov. 4 was "never condoned" by the Revolutionary Council. Iran, he added, "is not interested in the Shah in terms of flesh and blood. We are interested in concepts, not revenge."

According to the Abu Dhabi newspaper Al-Itihad, the militants' leader, who was not identified by name, said his group rejected President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr's proposed compromise solution for releasing the Americans, in their 101st day of captivity Tuesday at the U.S. Embassy in Tehran.

He said the militants would help Bani-Sadr in his role as president "but he should not interfere in issues that are not dealt with in the constitution, such as the hostages issue," he was quoted as saying.

In an interview with French radio and television, Bani-Sadr repeated he would be willing to free the hostages in a matter of days if the United States admitted to its past wrongs in Iran, pledged not to interfere in its future and recognized Iran's right to obtain extradition of the deposed shah and his wealth, Tehran radio reported. He first made the offer in an interview published Monday in the French newspaper, Le Monde.

The State Department said the U.S. government would not offer any apology.

There was no comment from deposed Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi, living in Panama after receiving medical treatment in the United States at the time the embassy was seized.

"The imam blessed our action," the militants' leader was quoted as saying. "The imam has not changed his position yet on the release of the hostages and I cannot see how other people can change their position. If the president has a different opinion then let him take it up with the imam...The operation still has the imam's support and is in line with his teachings. We will never do anything against his wishes."

Bani-Sadr has said he and the Revolutionary Council which he heads have sent to Khomeini their proposal on releasing the estimated 50 hostages that he is waiting for a response, possibly in the next few days.

the long term policies of the University in mind."

O'Meara cited faculty salaries as his first priority, recognizing that increases, particularly in some colleges, are not keeping pace with inflation. He also cited the need for faculty development money, graduate students, library improvement, "Concern with the intellectual curiosity, development, and strength of the student body" and finally "concern about reports on the problem of alcohol on campus."

Tenure procedures were another topic of discussion at the meeting. Some faculty members expressed dissatisfaction with "insensitivity" of the administration concerning the date of arrival of some "final notices" last year. Whether a notice comes as a surprise or is known in advance, according to O'Meara, depends on the department chairman's strength and the receptivity of the faculty.

Michael Francis, representing the committee on administration, expressed the dissatisfaction of some departments with the allocation of funds for research. Those departments without graduate study seem to be receiving different amounts for research.

Press concurred in his "fear that good teaching is being downplayed in those departments without graduate programs."

According to O'Meara, the $350,000 grant which the Arts and Letters college recently acquired may be utilized in the alleviation of this problem. O'Meara was asked about what he has done to encourage the quantity of research, specifically in terms of granting leaves of absence and improving the library. The provost said he is "pushing for a faculty office building" and offers "verbal encouragement to increase the quality not quantity of research."

The Faculty Senate plans to discuss and vote on recommendations for appeals procedures in tenure cases, and to pass recommendations concerning the use of course evaluations as a method of determining teacher quality in its two remaining meetings this year.

FBI foils underworld summit

WASHINGTON (AP) - The FBI has evidence crime syndicate bosses were planning as recently as last week to call a summit conference and carve new boundaries in underworld fiefdoms spanning the nation, knowledgeable sources say.

But FBI officials now believe the session was canceled after public disclosure of bureau investigations, including Brilab the sources said.

The secret summit, involving crime bosses from an undetermined number of cities, was said to equal in scope the notorious 1957 conclave of more than 60 mob leaders in Apalachin, N.Y.

The FBI learned of the planned session through several major investigations of organized crime, including Brilab, the undercover probe of mob involvement in insurance bribery and kickbacks in the Southwest, said sources familiar with the investigations.

The sources, who requested anonymity, said mob leaders were drafting plans to alter the boundaries and terms of agreements giving each of them exclusive rights to a certain geographic region. The mobsters involved are the bosses of the syndicate the FBI calls La Cosa Nostra.

"This included narcotics traffic and everything else organized crime is involved in," one source said. "There were a variety of modifications in the works."

The sources declined to say where the summit was to have taken place.

The first hint of the underworld plan surfaced when a letter from Assistant Attorney General Philip Heymann was made public in federal court in Los Angeles on Friday. Heymann wrote that the FBI "is on the verge of developing evidence regarding a massive, nationwide conspiracy relating to the allocation of territories in the United States for certain types of illicit activities."

The planned conclave was reminiscent of the Apalachin summit, which startled the nation with the strongest evidence to date that a national crime syndicate did, indeed, exist.

Until then, J. Edgar Hoover, the FBI director, had resisted urgings to investigate organized crime. After New York state police disclosed the Apalachin summit, Hoover was forced to pay attention to crime syndicates.

But it was not until the 1970s that the bureau focused on organized crime in a major way.

When William H. Webster took over as director two years ago, he accelerated the investigations with more sophisticated techniques, often employing court-authorized wiretaps and agents working undercover for months at a stretch.

Evidence of the new gangland summit was developed partly from the Southwest insurance investigation, another long-running FBI probe of organized crime in the Midwest, and at least one other separate but interwoven investigation of organized crime.

Roche hopes to get enough response to present them to Fr. Hesburgh tonight at 8 p.m. when he speaks in Grace Hall. New Proposals for party room guidelines were brought up at the meeting by Keenan Hall President Paul Riehle.

Riehle, the HPC representative to the CLC, said the suggested guidelines are being considered by Fr. John VanWolfe, vice president for Student Affairs. The proposals have been brought up before the CLC, but couldn't be voted on at the time because a quorum was not present.

According to Riehle, the main emphasis of the projected guidelines is to allow each hall to have more power over its own party policies.

The resurrection of limited private parties involving more than one room is one suggestion under consideration. Riehle stressed that it would not mean a return to section parties, but would lend a little more flexibility to the present policy.

"A small private party could take place in one or more private residence rooms, but not in the corridor," he said. "Alcohol will still not be allowed in the corridors."

Riehle said he also believed that the number of people allowed to attend should be established within each individual hall. "There is a twenty person attendance limit right now (University-wide), and we want to change that," he said.

ND fares better than area in battling flu outbreak

Lynne Daley
Staff Reporter

This year's outbreak of flu at the University is of "moderate" intensity, according to University Physician Robert Thompson.

"Our outbreak has not been extreme," Thompson said. He estimated that 25-30 students have been admitted to the infirmary for flu symptoms since Christmas break.

"When you compare that to the couple hundred or so cases we had a few years ago, we're not so badly off," Thompson said.

Thompson attributes the reportedly high absentee rate in classes to the number of students who may have the symptoms and choose to stay home. Only the more extreme cases are actually admitted to the infirmary.

The city of South Bend has a more serious problem with the virus. According to Nurse Nancy McMillan of St. Joseph's Hospital, "We've had a lot more cases in the last month than usual."

Several elementary schools in South Bend were closed because of the high absentee rate. Now, "there may be 12-17 kids out of each class," McMillan said.

McMillan added that there have also been several cases of pneumonia. With pneumonia, the patient has more trouble breathing, due to pain and congestion. Flu is indicated by the presence of a high temperature, vomiting, and muscle aches.

Although there has been only one verified case of pneumonia at Notre Dame, Thompson urged students to go to the infirmary if they feel very ill. "It helps in that we can check a person to make sure it's nothing beyond the flu," he said. Thompson advised students who suspect they have the flu to drink plenty of water-based fluids and take aspirin. "With the flu, you can only treat the symptoms. It won't respond to antibiotics," Thompson said.

Hesburgh opens crisis committee

Rev. Theodore M. Hesburgh, president of the University, was one of four conveners of a National Cambodia Crisis Committee (NCCC) meeting with Rosalyn Carter January 29 in the White House.

Its purpose was to launch a $100 million fund-raising effort in the private sector for Cambodian relief. In remarks to the group of business and labor leaders, educators, entertainers, and religious and civic leaders, Hesburgh reported that some $30 million dollars had been raised from non-governmental sources since last October. While the threat of mass starvation has lifted in Cambodia, he said, there is still widespread hunger that cannot be alleviated internally until next fall's harvest. Until then, the country will be totally dependant on outside aid and needs some 30,000 tons of food each month.

President Carter's wife hosted the meeting and addressed the group, as she had at a similar gathering in the White House last November 13, shortly after returning from a trip to Southeast Asia.

Hesburgh's first involvement in the Cambodian aid program came last October 23, when as chairman of the Overseas Development Council, he led a delegation to the White House that secured President Carter's commitment of $69 million in federal aid for the ravaged Southeast Asian country.

Heavy drinking at ND Survey yields unusual results

Kelli Flint
Staff Reporter

Twenty six percent of Notre Dame students are heavy drinkers, over twice the number of heavy drinking students nationwide, according to a report released by the department of Psychological Services.

The report, entitled Alcohol Use and Abuse at Notre Dame, summarizes the results of a poll taken last fall covering twenty-five dorms on campus. A sample of 2356 students found that: 66.3 percent were men, 33.7 percent were women, 29.2 percent Freshman, 22.2 percent were Sophomores, 22.2 percent were Juniors, 17.2 percent were Seniors, and 9.1 percent were from other levels.

Most of the students drank at least once a year, and about three-quarters drank at least once a month or more. Of these students, 86.5 percent drank beer, 49 percent drank wine, and 66.2 percent spirits at least once a year. Approximately ten percent of all students appear to be abstainers or infrequent drinkers.

When compared with a national sample of college students, Notre Dame students were significantly above the average in the categories of light drinker, moderate-heavy drinker, and heavy drinker.

Wayne Pelligrini, a clinical psychologist with the alcohol program, seemed surprised by the number of heavy drinkers. "I was also alarmed by the age at which students started drinking, which is significantly younger than in previous surveys," Pelligrini said.

Patricia Crosson, director of the alcohol program, noted that the survey may seem conservative. "The survey was done over a 30 year period, with the same criteria," Crosson said.

Pelligrini added that most students who checked the heavy drinking category felt that the qualifications for that category were outdated. "Now students drink five or more drinks three times per week or more, instead of once per week, as the survey stated."

Approximately 13 percent of the students reported no problems, as the result of drinking. About 17 percent reported one or two problems, and about 35 percent reported three or four problems as the result of drinking.

Most students reported hangovers, nausea and vomiting, and driving after drinking at some point in their lives, as the result of drinking.

Ninety percent of the students reported drinking at least once a year. The findings suggest that a somewhat higher percentage of men are drinking now, compared with 30, 10, and 5 years ago. There has also been a steady increase in the percentage of women who consume alcohol.

Approximately 95 percent of both seniors and freshmen reported drinking beer at least once a year. There appeared to be no significant difference between seniors and freshmen in the frequency and quantity of drinking beer, wine or spirits.

Pelligrini noted that these statistics would not be as alarming if students had not started drinking at such an early age. "Many students are experienced drinkers as freshmen," he said.

The relationship between the quantity-frequency level of drinking and the use of illicit drugs appears to be significant. Approximately 68.5 percent of the heavy drinkers reported using illicit drugs and 50 percent of the moderate-heavy drinkers, compared to 28 percent of the moderate drinkers, 8 percent of the light drinkers, 5 percent of the infrequent drinkers, and 3 percent of the abstainers. A significantly higher number of males (45 percent) reported being users of illicit drugs compared to 28 percent of the females surveyed.

Margaret Cronin, alcohol counselor, feels that students attitudes nurture further acceptance of drinking problems.

"Most dorms allot 25 percent of their funds for food and drink for hall parties. The drinks are supposed to be nonalcoholic, yet beer is usually served. This takes away the rights of the abstainer. They're the suffering few on campus."

Mayor denies bar crackdown

Tom Koegel
Staff Reporter

South Bend Mayor Roger Parent said yesterday that he "had not told the police in any kind of direct way to 'crackdown' on bars in the Five Points area." He called accusations of mayoral pressure made by neighborhood bar owners published in The Observer "totally unfounded."

The bar owners had claimed that they were the victims of "harassment" from both the mayor's office and local enforcement agencies connection with the major increase in the number of raids.

The majority of the bar owners feelings at the time of the original article were summed up by one owner who simply stated, "We're sure it's the new mayor."

Parent denied such accusations as "outrageous". "I have not told the police in any kind of direct way to 'crackdown' on bars in the Five Points area," he said. Furthermore, he claimed that "any accusation that that area had been singled out is totally unfounded."

Parent pointed out that when he was a councilman he "fought long and hard to make sure that bars be very careful about the way their business is run. Those bars which are located in a neighborhood area (like Five Points) have to be very careful about their operations."

Parent noted that the police department, in formulating their policy toward the bars, "might have looked at my tough record and taken it into consideration."

One bar owner had also said that he believed the South Bend police were raiding the bars and were ignoring more "serious crime in the process."

"I consider the kinds of things that have happened in that area (at various bar locations) as very serious," Parent stated. He noted that the recent investigations at the bars are in part related to events which occurred last semester, and complaints received from local residents.

"Last semester in that area, we had a situation where we had numerous complaints from people in the neighborhood," Parent said. "It was a situation where the police had to be called in for crowd control, rather than for raids. That's not the kind of thing police should have to do."

Pakistan receives warning

NEW DELHI, India (AP) - Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko of the Soviet Union accused the United States yesterday of subverting detente and warned Pakistan it risks its independence by backing America and China in the Afghanistan crisis.

Pakistan will "undermine its position as an independent state" if it allows the United States and its allies to convert it into "a springboard for further escalation of aggression" against pro-Moscow Afghanistan, Gromyko said in a speech delivered at a banquet given in his honor by India's Foreign Minister, P.V.N. Rao.

Gromyko's strong words came after a first round of talks with Indian leaders on the Afghan situation during an official two-day visit here. Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, a long-time friend of Moscow, is making low-key efforts to defuse the Afghanistan crisis and get the estimated 90,000 Soviet troops withdrawn from the neighboring country.

If the Soviet foreign minister was persuaded by the cautious and friendly statements of Mrs. Gandhi and Rao during their three hours of meetings, he gave no indication.

Gromyko defended the Soviet intervention, attacked the United States and China and delivered the warning to Pakistan, which is slated to receive about $400 million in U.S. arms aid.

He said the United States was using Pakistan in an "increase of international tension for subversion of world detente and escalation of the arms race, which has been pursued by her for quite a long time."

"The same road is followed by the Peking leadership, which pursues the course of the great-power hegemonistic policy," Gromyko said.

He said it was "absurd and dishonorable" to blame Soviet action in Afghanistan for increased regional and world tensions. "The responsibility for this entirely rests with the forces of imperialism, first of all certain circles of the USA which are possessed with the idea of military superiority, which would like to change in their favor the balance of forces in the world and revive the time of cold war," he declared.

Reporters were not admitted to the banquet. The Soviet Embassy provided Indian media an English translation of Gromyko's remarks.

The veteran Soviet leader's speech followed one by Rao urging "utmost restraint, both by countries of the region and outside powers, in the best interests of regional peace."

An Indian government spokesman indicated Mrs. Gandhi had urged Gromyko during their talks to pull Soviet troops out of Afghanistan. She also voiced opposition to American plans for a military buildup in neighboring Pakistan, the spokesman said.

Jury gives Bundy death sentence

ORLANDO, Florida (AP) - Calling it "a tragedy that a life such as yours was wasted," a judge yesterday sentenced Theodore R. Bundy to die in Florida's electric chair for the 1978 murder of a 12-year-old schoolgirl.

It was the third Florida death sentence in six months for Bundy.

"I bear none of the guilt," Bundy said. "I did not kill Kimberly Diane Leach. Evidence in this case did not come solely from the witness stand. It came from the newsstand."

Circuit Judge Wallace Jopling pronounced sentence briskly: life in prison for kidnapping the brown-haired seventh grader, death in the electric chair for killing her.

Miss Leach, a seventh grader was taken from in front of her Lake City, Fla., junior high school on Feb. 9, 1978. Her body was found in an abandoned shed two months later.

Scholarships support Notre Dame's ideals

The University's threat to eliminate scholarships to non-profit bearing sports contradicts the idea of competition on which the University prides itself. The Observer believes that Executive Vice-president Edmund Joyce has ignored student concern for the sports programs. We support student effort to influence the final decision and question the Administration's perception of the issue.

Since the January 16 announcement of a moratorium on scholarship offerings to the non-profit bearing sports, student support for the reversal of the decision has snowballed. Following last night's Hall Presidents Council meeting, a petition was circulated as part of an attempt to convince the Administration that many students disagree with Joyce's method of solving a farcical financial difficulty.

The questions that the Administration and the trustees must answer before making their decision are these: Why are sports important to the Notre Dame community? How important are these sports to that community? Where do scholarships fit into the overall athletic picture?

The concept of sports is important to our whole culture. The ideas of competition, self-improvement, recreation, striving for excellence and simple physical fitness are integral parts of any community or society. Notre Dame, as does America, capitalizes on many virtues of what has come to be known as "good sportsmanship."

Sports at Notre Dame have been recognized as one of many areas in which students' excellence has gained national and international respect for themselves and their school. The University has rewarded its athletes for quality competition and has emphasized the importance of peer support and fellowship. The noise level of the campus on a September Saturday night reflects the outcome of that afternoon's football game. And Fr. Hesburgh himself sat on the end of the bench at Monday night's basketball game against San Francisco. Much of Notre Dame's reputation rests on the quality of their athletic teams.

Scholarships are a means of attracting quality athletes who help to build quality teams and quality programs. The absence of quality in any program lessens the level of competition. Scholarships have a direct correlation to the quality of a sports program, with one or two exceptions. Scholarships are necessary to continue the University's support of those ideals of competition which Notre Dame promotes.

According to Joyce's pragmatic reasoning, the value of sportsmanship and fellowship is less than the value of financial profit.

The Observer and the students can not deal with facts and figures which the Administration withholds. But the theoretical argument is clear: the scholarships must stay. Or is the deterioration of "non-profit producing" sports, such as hockey, a narrow-minded goal of the Administration?

A gratuitous insult to peace-lovers

Dear Editor:

It strikes me as a gratuitous insult to students and faculty alike when Professor Norling accuses all those of us among his colleagues who are not confirmed Cold Warriors of undermining the common sense of our students with such "anti-Christian" ideas as a love of peace.

But does he really believe that the faculties at West Point (where Dwight Eisenhower went to college) and Annapolis (where Jimmy Carter went) consist of "academic ideologues" who similarly corrupt their students because they "hate their own societies"?

'Ode to a Father' provokes smile of understanding

Dear Editor:

Chris Stewart's column, "Ode To A Father," struck a very sensitive nerve within me. The young man's expectations of what he had hoped his father would be parallel those that I had set for my mother.

Throughout my early teens, the tension between my mother and I grew insurmountable, due to my own soul-searching. In seeking independence and identity, I lost all avenues of communication with my mother. I didn't want a mother. I wanted a friend. She couldn't quickly adjust to my new demands on her. After all, she'd been my mother for eighteen years, how could I expect her to suddenly change? Yet, I did. And the more I expected her to change, the harder it became to communicate with her and love her.

During a conversation we had over Christmas break, my mother explained how sometimes we set up unrealistically high expectations of the people we care about. It becomes so difficult for the other individual to live up to those expectations, whether consciously or not, that communication breaks down and the relationship falls apart.

For the first time I listened to what those words meant and acted upon them. The change that resulted was unfathomable. Now, we communicate because we accept and love each other for what we are and are trying to become.

I described this scenario to a friend of mine at a time when I felt that the lines of communication between us were falling down. The reaction that it elicited was a smile of understanding. Chris Stewart's description of the father-son relationship provoked the same smile in my heart because I understood both perspectives and sets of expectations. I sincerely hope that the son can learn the lesson that took a lot of pain for me to learn.

Article on SMC sanctions 'grossly inaccurate'

Dear Editor:

My response to the article, "Judicial Board hands down sanctions," on Feb. 11, was one of utter shock and disgust. The SMC Judicial Board Act of Confidentiality reads as follows: "Any decision reached by this Board or anything which occurred during this case will not leave this room on the part of any Board member. This Board practices strict ethical standards of confidentiality." In other words, "NO COMMENT" as made quite clear in a previous article by The Observer on Feb. 7.

However, that wasn't quite good enough. The article which was written by Mary Leavitt on Feb. 11 was grossly inaccurate and unsubstantiated. In my opinion, this article was based solely on gossip and hearsay. No statement was released by the Judicial Board regarding any decisions based on the LeMans hall incident. I am the only person responsible for such a statement, and I was not available for comment.

Finally, and most infuriatingly, the statements made by me which appeared in the Feb. 11 article, were obtained under false pretenses. An Observer reporter stated to me that she was writing an article on the SMC Judicial process, and in no way was it related to the LeMans Hall parties. The information I released to her on SMC policy and procedure which appeared in the same article falsely insinuates a breach of confidentiality on my part, in regard to any Judicial decision reached by the Board.

In conclusion, I would like to say that the article which appeared on Feb. 11 was unmistakably a piece of trash. Such blatantly false information does not achieve anything. It only helps to destroy the trust we have in each other and in our system.

Martha A. Boyle
SMC Judicial Commissioner

Demands apology from The Observer

Dear Editor:

I have recently been disheartened by the lack of discretion The Observer staff has shown in divulging information to our student body. Last week following the violation of party rules in LeMans Hall an article appeared in The Observer which clearly stated students did not want any information printed concerning the sanctions they received.

Unfortunately, The Observer persisted to seek out information against the will of these individuals. On Monday an article appeared in The Observer which clearly violated the confidential relationship between members of the Judicial Board and the involved students.

I have very good reason to believe that no member of the Judicial Board (or involved parties) broke the confidential relationship, yet The Observer by "guesstimating" what happened has successfully led us to believe otherwise. This may lead to serious distrust between the students and the Judicial Board.

Reading Mary Leavitt's article makes it clear that the Saint Mary's handbook served as her only source of information and that members of the Judicial Board respected the privacy of the involved students.

I believe students should be made aware of the consequences that will occur if they violate college policy. This awareness is a student's individual responsibility obtained best by becoming familiar with the college handbook-not by The Observer breaking codes of confidentiality and printing inaccurate information against the will of those they write about. I believe you owe both the students and the members of the Judicial Board an apology.

Carol Trousdale

Editor's Note: The Observer has a responsibility to report as accurately as possible all news which affects the lives of those in the ND/SMC community. Information pertaining to rules, and the punishment resulting from the breaking of those rules, clearly affects the lives of all students. The Observer has violated no code of confidentiality, since the names of those "sanctioned" never appeared in print. The quotes attributed to Ms. Boyle, pertaining to the judicial process in general, information which she, ostensibly, is qualified to disseminate. To the best of our knowledge, the information printed on the final decision reached by the board was accurate.

by Barb Bridges
Staff Reporter

After chastising Notre Dame student Activities Commissioner Tim Coughlin, five-time world champion billiard player Paul Gerni demonstrated the trick-shots that have made him famous yesterday in a show at the NDpool-hall.

Gerni, who showed up late to the 1 p.m. show, became critical when students continued to play pinball and pool as he performed.

The angered Gerni threatened to leave, but Coughlin pointed out that Gerni was under contract. After five minutes, the disturbance was settled as Coughlin asked students to stop their other activities, and Gerni performed his billiard feats.

Gerni has appeared at Notre Dame for the past four years. "Needless to say, he will not be back again," Coughlin said. Coughlin commented that he "would like to apologize to all the people that were there for Gerni's unprofessional behavior. I hope they enjoyed the following show."

Gerni demonstrated numerous trick shots as expounded billiard hints to aspiring players.

Pocket billiards is the second most popular sport in the country. To Paul Gerni, it is a "very classy sport" that is growing in world-wide recognition because of his ambassadorial efforts.

A graduate of Purdue University, Gerni started playing pool at age six in the recreation room of his father's parish. Gerni started winning tournaments at age seven, and continued to win throughout high school and college. Gerni has been a professional billiard player for eight years and his reputation has skyrocketed.

Gerni holds the record for pocketing 166 balls consecutively. He became the World Champion trick-shooter in 1978 when he sank 21 balls with one shot.

The billiard wonder runs on a tight schedule. His home is in Kansas City, but the majority of his time is spent traveling throughout the world. Gerni is making major strides in abolishing the "smoke-filled room, beer guzzling pool-hall" image for which billiards has traditionally been noted.

Gerni travels abroad and annually performs about 200 shows for commercial and benefit purposes, and at colleges.

Various national billiard federations sponsor Gerni in his effort to promote the game.

Both the efforts and the rewards have been great, claimed Gerni. "I've given a lot to the game, and now the game is giving back," said Gerni. Gerni is consistently the highest paid player in his business. Gerni accrues benefits from television shows such as Barretta and the Bionic Woman because he devises the billiard shots used in various episodes. A lite Beer commercial uses another one of Gerni's trick shots.

Gerni's crusade for pocket billiards is also carried out via his articles in U.S., British, and Swedish magazines. Films are another medium in which Gerni displays his billiard talent.

"I take the tournament side and the entertainment side, and I'm right in the middle," he said. "I want to get the audience so excited they can't wait to grab a cue."

brian Morris, an independent promoter who accompanied Gerni to Notre Dame, producing a film in the United Kingdom about "snooker" champion Fred Davis. Gerni will appear in the film, and has also been an advisor for another billiard film, the "Baltimore Bullet." The two films will premier together in Baltimore on March 21.

Morris said he feels that programs like Gerni's need more exposure. He asserted that billiards in America "has big things happening," and that the "universities should start getting into it."

Morris criticized the student union for holding Gerni's show in the pool hall rather than in a ballroom setting where Gerni usually performs. "The very thing they're trying to get away from is happening here."

At present, Gerni has just finished planning a "jailhouse invitational" tournament to be held at Leavenworth Penitentiary in Kansas, which will pit "the greatest pros and cons against each other."

Gerni is proud of the new billiard image he is helping to spread, and he likes the challenge of the game. "It's the kind of game that's easy to learn and difficult to master," he said.

Police rescue political hostages

SAN SALVADOR, EL SALVADOR (AP) - Anti terrorist police units assaulted the Christian Democrat Party headquarters yesterday, freeing 10 hostages during a gunfight that left one policeman and three left-wing militants dead, witnesses reported. About 100 leftists seized the building and hostages two weeks ago.

The attack came several hours after five leftist demonstrators were shot to death and more than a dozen were wounded as they and others staged a "victory" march that ended their week-long occupation of the Education Ministry.

Other left-wing extremists occupying the Spanish Embassy freed the ambassador, Victor Sanchez Nesa, last night, but said they would hold five other hostages "until our demands are met."

A spokesman for the militants, who took over the embassy Feb. 5, said initially yesterday that Sanchez Mesa would be released because he "suffered amedical crisis" as gunfire crackled through San Salvador. But he said later the ambassador, who is known to have a heart condition, was freed

"to show our good faith and not for medical reasons."

The five still held in the embassy are Chancellor Manuel de Helguera, a counselor, a secretary, and two Spanish technicians.

The police raid on the Christian Democrat office had raised fears in Madrid that force might be used to free the captives in the embassy.

Security forces in neighboring Guatemala attacked the Spanish Embassy in Guatemala City Jan. 31 when it was taken over by protesting peasants and 37 persons perished in a fire that broke out during the skirmish. Spain severed relations with Guatemala, and El Salvador's ruling junta has assured Spanish officials force would not be used to free the embassy captives here.

Christian Democrat leaders said none of the hostages in the party headquarters was injured as the anti-terrorist squad members charged into the building, which was taken over Jan. 29 by about 100 militants of the Feb. 28 Popular Leagues.

A gunfight broke out and shooting continued for several minutes. The leftists surrendered as three armored cars pulled into the driveway of the two-story building, their machine guns leveled on the doors and windows.

Police said later they staged the assault because a gunman inside the building had shot at police driving by in a truck.

institute

A new summer institute at the University of Virginia will help prepare Ph.D.'s in the humanities and social sciences for non-teaching careers.

The institute, offered jointly by the University's Graduate School of Arts and Sciences, McIntire School of Commerce and Office of Career Planning and Placement, will prepare Ph.D.'s for diverse responsibilities by educating them in skills and terminology important in non-academic occupations.

The institute will also help participants develop ways to seek jobs effectively and will provide business, industry, and government with a pool of highly qualified potential employees, say the program's organizers.

The institute will accept a maximum of 40 students, and preference will be given to those who have completed the requirements for the Ph.D. Participants will live in University dorms or nearby apartments.

Applications may be obtained by writing the Office of the Dean, Graduate School of Arts and Sciences, 444 Cabell Hall, University of Virginia, Charlottesville, VA 22903. Applications will be accepted through March 15, 1980, and applicants will be notified of admissions decisions by April 15.

key to Notre Dame was the biggest mistake he ever made," Marrero added.

"I don't think the University has put much emphasis on supporting hockey. Students were not offered season tickets in the summer along with basketball ticket offers, they wouldn't let WSND FM (a station with a broadcasting radius of 30 miles) air hockey games, and they didn't even hint that this might happen until late in the hockey season. Students haven't had time to mount a publicity drive and show their support."

That is the opinion of many students, Marrero said, and Roche added he hopes the petitions will prove it.

"We want to give the executive board some statistical evidence of support," Roche said. "And we want to know what is being done. Nobody will even tell us accurate facts."

The student government leaders indicated that when the executive board deals with this issue on Friday, board members will have to discuss a related subject: Title IX, and its implication for future athletic budgets. In the meantime, according to Roche, "a lot of people are upset over this."

For radioactive wastes

Carter proposes cavern storage

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Carter proposed yesterday the nation's first coordinated effort to store nuclear garbage, planning to spend $700 million to examine salt domes and other sites in the South and West as potential radioactive dumps.

This is a solid policy that can stand the test of time," the President said.

Sending his proposal to Congress, the president said the government would study about 11 sites where the poisonous by-products of nuclear power, weapons tests and medical research could be hidden at no risk to the environment.

The proposal contains funding of $739 million for fiscal 1981. Funding for nuclear storage in the previous two fiscal years averaged $550 million a year.

Questions remain as to whether the wastes, especially spent fuel from commercial reactors and government weapons programs, can be stored safely. The highly radioactive materials could have a life of from 1,000 to 300,000 years.

"A technical consensus exists among experts that no insurmountable barriers are known" to prevent the safe storage, said Carter's domestic policy advisor, Stuart Eizenstat, briefing reporters on the program. His statement was supported by Frank Press, the president's science advisor.

But one of the papers the White House distributed in support of the program said that the Nuclear Regulatory Commission "is determining whether or not it has confidence that radioactive wastes can be disposed of safely."

The choice of sites carries political risk, and Carter created a state planning council, with Gov. Richard Riley of South Carolina as chairman, to work with the administration and Congress on radioactive waste management issues.

The need for such a program has been demonstrated by controversies surrounding several of the sites holding radioactive materials. The White House estimated that the nation turns out almost 100,000 cubic feet of high-and low-level radioactive waste, a figure that may grow to about 650,000 cubic feet by the year 2000.

Some storage facilities have been closed by local authorities and others are filling up at such a rate that medical research producing nuclear garbage has been threatened because sites may not be available.

Utilities with nuclear plants have been forced to keep spent fuel at reactor sites where storage space is expected to be scarce by the end of the decade. Carter said he would continue to seek legislation to build or buy limited temporary storage facilities for such spent fuel until permanent sites can be developed.

Carter's recommendations stem from a two-year study. Final decisions on which sites to develop into actual permanent storage facilities are not likely to be made until 1984 or 1985, officials said.

The first sites might then be in operation by the early 1990s, several government officials said at the White House briefing.

The officials said that of the three countries that have agreed to an expanded U.S. military role, Oman is by far the most important because of its location on the Arabian Peninsula at the gateway to the Persian Gulf.

Somalia had close links with the Soviet Union until 1978 when the Russians were expelled for supporting Somalia's archrival and neighbor, Ethiopia. The Soviets left behind extensive military facilities at the port city of Berbera, including a 15,000-foot runway.

The Kenyan deepwater port of Mombasa has extensive repair and oil storage facilities.

In seeking to expand its military presence in the area, The Carter administration has abandoned its 1977 goal of converting the India Ocean into a demilitarized zone. The United States and the Soviet Union both have increased their military activities in the area in recent months.

The United States is reported to have 25 ships in the general area, and the Russians 24. Both navies are said to be in a "watch and wait" posture without making any threatening moves.

The most powerful of the U.S. Navy ships deployed in the region are three aircraft carriers and their escorting destroyers.

Baseball arbitration begins

NEW YORK (AP) - The Major League Players Association Tuesday released the names of 59 players who filed for salary arbitration prior to the deadline.

However, one of those names was eliminated almost immediately when Montreal outfielder Ron LeFlore, who originally opted for arbitration, agreed to a one-year contract with the Expos.

Among the names still on the list were National League relief star and Cy Young Award winner Bruce Sutter of the Chicago Cubs, ace Pittsburgh reliever Kent Tekulve and top Houston relief specialist Joe Sambito.

Other big names on the list included pitcher Mark "The Bird" Fidrych and outfielder Steve Kemp of Detroit, outfielder Ellis Valentine of Montreal, shortstop Roy Smalley of Minnesota, third baseman Ray Knight of Cincinnati, and Chicago White Sox pitcher

Ken Kravec.

The arbitration process calls for the player and the team to each submit a salary figure to an arbitrator, who then schedules a hearing. After both sides present their arguments, the arbitrator selects one of the two submitted figures as the player's salary.

before each match. You wanna talk about streaks? I'll give you a great one. Since Andy Bonk (a senior co-captain of this year's squad) has been fencing here he has never lost a match. Never! In his four years he's been on two national championship teams and a second-place team (in last year's NCAA's). He's also won an individual gold medal in NCAA foil competition. Now that's streak I'm proud of.

"Let me tell you something. You know when this streak will be finally be worth something? When it's over. Then we can all sit back and say, 'Now how many did we actually win?'"

Of course, even though DeCicco doesn't emphasize it, he's not going to do anything personally to break the 114-match skein and that means wearing the same suit, shirt and tie for four and one-half years.

"Yeah," he laughs. "I bought a suit just before the streak started and my wife sewed a United States Olympic Committee patch (of which DiCicco is a member) on the pocket."

"Well we made an eastern road trip and we just blew teams away. The kids fenced brilliantly. After it was all over, one of the kids, I think it was Tim Glass, said 'Coach, don't change the clothes.' So for the last 114 matches, I've worn the exact same clothes."

And his team ended up with the exact same results. But all of that hasn't changed Mike DiCicco a bit.

"The Notre Dame spirit," he likes to say in a manner that is uniquely his own, "is when someone does something for Notre Dame just because they want to give something to the place. People like the student manager who stands Friday nights for the home painting helmets when they could be out having a good time. People like Father Hesburgh who is an extremely busy man, but still found time to sit on the bench at the San Francisco basketball game because he is a part of this place too. People like that give a hell of a lot more than they'll ever get in return."

People like Mike DeCicco.

DeCicco: success minus glory

by Frank La Grotta
Sports Writer

Some guys are talkers. They spend the greater part of their time telling you all about the things they'd like to accomplish if only this or that didn't get in their way. They've got plenty of good intentions; just ask them. Unfortunately, when they finally run out of breath, they also run out of energy and their ledger sheet (for all you accountants) shows a big fat zero.

Some guys are like that you know. But some guys like Mike DeCicco are different.

The coach of Notre Dame's fencing team doesn't talk about what he's done, or what he wants to do. He quietly goes out and does it, and if the credit for his accomplishments goes elsewhere, well, quite frankly he could care less.

You see, Mike DeCicco isn't in it for the glory. Back-slaps and curtain calls don't phase him in the least. Nevertheless, there has been plenty of both since he took over the reins of the fencing team 19 years ago; and with good reason. His career record shows 338 wins and only 33 losses, with two national championships and his present winning streak of 114 straight matches tucked in there somewhere. And that is not a typographical error.

Still DeCicco sits back on the third floor in the administration building (A coach with an office in the ad building?) and tells you that the winning streaks and trophies aren't what keeps him in the game. And you better believe him because he's telling the truth.

"To me there are more important things than all that," he says fondling the trophy his team won in 1977--the first of two straight NCAA awards for the number one team in the nation.

There's just something about the kids on the team," he continues. "The feeling around the fencing gym on the second floor of the ACC. I'm not ashamed to call it love because I know I love every kid on the team. And if those kids can leave here and look back and say 'Well, the classes were tough and this or that wasn't so great, but I really enjoyed being a part of the fencing team, well, that's what makes it all worth it.'"

Obviously there are plenty of memories accumulated over the past 19 years... pictures of winners and almost-winners (DeCicco believes there are no losers if a person tries his best).

Trophies and plaques and rings and thank you notes and each has a special place on DeCicco's wall or office shelves and in his heart.

"Winning the national championship the first time was the biggest thrill," he reminisces. "My kids just fenced out of their minds and to win it here at Notre Dame (the Irish hosted the tournament that year) well, that made it twice as good."

Maybe three times as good because as much as Mike DeCicco loves people perhaps his greatest love is Notre Dame. But, then again, the way he explains it, they are one and the same thing.

"Notre Dame isn't mortar and bricks," he says with emphatic gestures that give away the Italian heritage already evident in his deep-set features and olive-colored complexion. "This place is people and that's what I love about it. It's people that make Notre Dame a special place."

In keeping with that analogy, DeCicco spends most of his day-- until fencing practice starts-- as the academic counselor to Notre Dame's 503 varsity athletes. It's another way for this quiet achiever to accomplish even more.

"When you can help someone realize his potential in some area--like academics, for instance-- then you can actually see the result of your effort," he points out with a look that tells you he's as proud of the Academic All-American plaques on his wall as he is of the honors his fencers have given him.

"Hey, it isn't easy to be a student-athlete at Notre Dame," he adds, standing up on this one. "But our office only monitors their progress and helps them out when they need it. We are not baby-sitters and we play strictly by the rules."

Back at the fencing gym,

Mike DeCicco

DeCicco sheds his academic uniform and dresses like a fencer-- which he was for four years as a Notre Dame undergrad. He teaches his fencers the fine points of the art (the finer points for the more experienced swordsmen) and he's never too busy to advise a fencer, whether he or she be an All-American or a freshman who has trouble telling between a sabre and an epee.

Ah...such is the stuff that winning streaks are made of. "That's something my kids have accomplished," he emphasizes. "I've been here a lot of years and each match is important to me; but not because of a winning streak. Weekly improvement, individual goals, these are things I look for with each match."

"Hey, this streak is an ego thing. I'm not saying it's bad, I'm just saying it isn't the biggest thing on my mind"

Winter Games open; U.S. skaters tie

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. (AP) - The Winter Olympics opened under a cloud Tuesday with the International Olympic Committee rejecting President Carter's proposal that the Summer Games be moved out of Moscow and Carter in turn demanding that the U.S. not send a team.

But one American member of the IOC held out hope that U.S. athletes might participate somehow despite the president's call late Tuesday night for the U.S. Olympic Committee to reach a "prompt decision against sending a team" to Moscow.

Neither development was unexpected, nor was Carter's announcement that the U.S. is working with a number of other governments to set up other international games for athletes who do not go to Moscow.

As the first competition of the Winter Games began Tuesday, the U.S. hockey team managed a 2-2 tie with Sweden, thanks to a goal by defenseman Bill Baker with 27 seconds left. Canada,

Shari (who else?) leads Irish, 70-64

by Craig Chval

Notre Dame basketball coach Digger Phelps may talk about his bench and how his players fill certain roles at certain times, but with one bold move, Irish women's basketball coach Sharon Petro has created the most potent reserve corps on campus.

Since the return of the all time leading scorer Jane Politski to the starting line-up after a sprained ankle, Petro has kept freshman scoring sensation Shari Matvey on the pines to open the game. And the results have been devastating.

In the three games since she assumed her reverse role, Matvey has been Notre Dame's leading scorer and rebounder in three straight victories. Huntington College was the latest victim to Notre Dame's lethal bench wallop, bowing to the Irish 70-64 Tuesday night. Matvey who leads the 14-5 Irish in scoring, rebounding, field goal percentage and blocked shots, finished with 21 points and a dozen rebounds

by Beth Huffman
Women's Sports Editor

"We are family...all my sisters and me..."

Willie Stargell, the old-man and captain of the Pittsburgh Pirates adopted the Sister Sledge hit tune for his team. The song may more appropriately in gender fit another native of Pittsburgh and her team--captain Nancy Nowalk and the Saint Mary's basketball team.

Nowalk is the old-lady, the only senior, on the Belles' team...and without a doubt, she's the respected leader of her team.

"I guess I am looked at as a leader, but I don't feel set apart from the team. They respect me as a senior and I respect them and their talent. Our team is very cohesive, something I haven't experienced in the past," offered the soft-spoken Nowalk.

The Holy Cross resident modestly credits her teammates with the successful season she is having.

"I have improved this year more than the other three years combined. The other kids have good attitudes and talent, I think they've made me a better player."

Nowalk is not slight in her laud of Coach Jerry Dallessio and his efforts, either.

"Jerry is an excellent coach. We have improved unbelievably 100 percent. I'm glad I could be a part of the beginning because the whole program is going somewhere--and it's due to Jerry's efforts," said Nowalk as she praised the Belles' second year mentor.

The St. Francis Academy graduate selected Saint Mary's College because it was just what she was looking for--a small, Catholic liberal arts college with a good art department.

"I love basketball, I enjoy it because it's fun, but I take it seriously," remarked Nowalk. "When I came to Saint Mary's basketball was just secondary. Art is my form of expression, it's a very personal thing and I appreciate and feel fortunate for the talent I have."

"I express a lot through art, I'm into ceramics right now--mainly on the wheel--I started into ceramics my sophomore year and have chosen that medium for my senior art show."

Ceramics challenge me, and I like challenges."

Though she hopes to coach basketball after graduation Nowalk, who averages right around 12 points a game, will rely on her art as a livelihood.

"I'm certified to teach kindergarten through 12th grade after I graduate. I'll probably go into art therapy," stated the Belle's starting forward. "It's a new field and exciting to me--I'll work with the handicapped, emotionally disturbed and elderly. I enjoy working with people and I am drawn to work with the disadvantaged."

"I give as much of myself to people as I can: I feel fortunate for the talent opportunities that I have and I think I should share them."

Nowalk gained field experience in her teaching when she journeyed to New Mexico two years ago. In that southwestern state she helped to teach ceramics to underprivileged Span-

...while Belles douse Nazareth

Saint Mary's used consistent shooting and strong rebounding to trample Nazareth 91-26 last night at the Angela Athletic Facility. The Belles picked up their second win in as many days and improved their record to 11-8.

Saint Mary's jumped ahead early in the game, leading 22-6 at the 10 minute mark, and never had to take a second glance back. Poor shooting and ball control on Nazareth's part allowed the Belles to build a 46-12 halftime advantage.

with 16 points. Mary Zuenlke and Anne Armstrong connected for 12 apiece, while Mary Bayless contributed 10. Defensively, Ellen Hoyer had an impressive 12 rebounds. Collen Wojciechowski led Nazareth 12 points.

Belles coach, Jerry Dallessio, was pleased with the performance of the entire team. After snapping their three-game losing streak in a hard fought game on Monday against St. Francis, the Belles found a great deal of confidence and optimism. Dallessio was happy with the play of Zuehlke, who had been on the injured list.

"Mary's an excellent player," related the coach. "We don't want to make her injury any worse."

Dallessio also felt that last night's game was an overall boost to the team's morale, which he feels is crucial for the remainder of their playing schedule. The Belles travel to Purdue-Calumet on Thursday in a game Dallessio says "can't be taken too lightly, although we beat them convincingly at home." Further ahead on Saturday, the Belles will back at the Angela Athletic Facility to face undefeated and top-ranked Butler University.
