Police monitor 'five point' area following residents' complaints

by Betsie Boland
Staff Reporter

Complaints from area residents have led South Bend city officials to closely monitor bars in the "five point" area.

According to city attorney Dr. Richard Hill, the biggest environmental problem that the area residents around the "five points" bar district must deal with is students. "Actually, circumstances are to the point that the neighborhood has had it," he said in an interview yesterday.

"What we hope to develop is a situation in which behavior in this neighborhood is comparable to that on campus," Hill said.

Hill emphasized that the police are not out to arbitrarily bust underage patrons in the area bars including Corby's, Nickie's, and Goose's Nest; rather, they would like to fairly enforce the law to alleviate excessive noise, litter, blocked streets and sidewalks and vandalism.

"People who like the neighborhood and are happy with their homes have complained to the city, saying they have had it," Hill contended. "Underage drinking is prevalent and the maximum occupancy laws, designed to protect patrons as well as residents, have been ignored in the past. Fire is definitely a hazard," Hill said.

With the cooperation of the University, Hill hopes to further protect the residential area by correcting the noise and litter problem, in addition to cutting down on the underage drinking. "We only ask that everyone comply with the law. We are not trying to close down (the bars); we're merely trying to clean up the neighborhood," he emphasized.

"The situation at Goose's last week could have turned into a bad situation because of a couple of students' provocations. This is exactly the type of situation we want to avoid, and we want to try to prevent it before it occurs," he said.

Professor Arthur Quigley, a resident of the area and the head of the Northeast Neighborhood Council concurred with Hill. "Our major complaint is that a small percentage of the tavern clientele, not necessarily students, are not neighborly people. People who throw litter, urinate in the yards, whether fifteen or fifty, are not acting as neighbors," Quigley stated. "It

Jury vindicates Ford on reckless homicide charge

WINAMAC, Ind. (AP) - A jury from the nation's heartland yesterday found Ford Motor Co. innocent of reckless homicide charges in the first criminal prosecution of a corporation in a products defects case - a verdict the prosecutor said "vindicates" the giant automaker.

Defense attorney James F. Neal said the acquittal on charges stemming from the fiery highway deaths of three teen-agers showed even a giant corporation can win the day if it has "a fair and reasonable story."

"We just felt the state never presented enough evidence to convince us that Ford was guilty," said jury foreman Arthur Selmer.

However, juror James Yurgilas and several others also said they believed the Pinto was not a safe car.

"I felt the Ford (Pinto) was a reckless automobile, but we couldn't actually prove they didn't do everything in their power to recall it."

Defense witnesses, mostly Ford executives, had said the automaker authorized emergency procedures and spared no expense to implement a voluntary recall of 1971-1976 Pintos and Mercury Bobcats, after the government informed the company of defects in the cars that made them likely to explode when hit from behind.

The mother of two of the victims told the jury that the family did not receive its recall notice until six months after the crash.

In Dearborn, Mich., word of the acquittal was taken into a meeting of Ford's board of directors. Henry Ford II, who stepped down from the job of chairman during the meeting, said "everyone was highly elated" by the acquittal news.

The three teen-agers were burned to death when their 1973 Pinto exploded in flames after being hit from behind by a van on an Indiana highway in August 1978. The state contended defects in the subcompact's fuel system made it likely to leak fuel in rear-end crashes at low to moderate speeds.

Ford attorney's said the force of the impact, rather than any alleged defect, caused the gasoline tank to explode.

The verdict came in the fourth day of the jury's deliberations, including a marathon session that went into the early morning hours yesterday.

Chief Prosecutor Michael Cosentino said after the verdict that there was a "strong possibility" he would appeal the judge's rulings in the case.

Defense attorney Neal, whose fee in the case has been reported at $1 million, said of a possible appeal: "I don't care about the appeal. They can appeal all the points of law they want. I'm through with the case."

He said later: "I'm awfully pleased. It is the most difficult case I've ever tried. The state had an easy emotional case, but we had a less emotional case because we were defending a big corporation."

Cosentino, who led a spartan state effort that included funding of about $20,000 and the use of volunteer help, said the verdict "vindicates" Ford.

He said: "It means to me that manufacturers can make any kind of car they want to and it's up to the public to decide if they want to buy it or not. I do not personally believe that corporations are doing what they can to help the people of this country, but the jury apparently does."

After the verdict, he shook the hands of fellow prosecutors, saying to one, "We gave it all we had."

"The jury has spoken and that's our system. I'm disappointed of course, but that's the way the system works," Cosentino said.

Earl Ulrich of Osceola, Ind., father of two of the three victims in the 1978 crash on U.S. 33 near Goshen, Ind., said of the verdict: "I'm very disappointed. . . But this has nothing to do with us. This was the state of Indiana against Ford Motor Co."

Killed in the crash were Judy Ulrich, 18, the driver, her sister Lyn Ulrich, 16, and their cousin Donna Ulrich, 18.

Gacy to die in chair

CHICAGO (AP) - The same jury that convicted John W. Gacy, Jr. of murdering 33 boys and young men decided yesterday that he should die in the electric chair.

When the court clerk read the jurors' decision, there was a burst of applause and hurrahs from parents, relatives and friends of the victims. The outburst was quickly subdued by security guards.

The jury of seven men and five women took two hours and 15 minutes to reach the decision. They deliberated an hour and a half Wednesday before convicting him.

Gacy was sitting as the verdict was read, staring straight ahead with no expression on his face.

Judge Louis B. Garippo set June 2, 1980 as the date of execution. Gacy stood before him flanked by his attorneys

Fisher entertains audience with assortment of works

by Gary Cuneen

Visiting the U.S. for the first time, British poet Roy Fisher treated the Sophomore Literary Festival with an assortment of his little-known works. He began his presentation by reading a piece entitled, "Paraphrases," consisting of authentic and self-created letters written to him, expressing the plight of an unknown poet. His readings exposed his warm, modest personality, and were received with laughter from the audience.

Born in a town near the industrialized city of Birmingham, England, Fisher based much of his poetry on his interpretation of Birmingham. When Birmingham was being torn down and reconstructed after it was bombed, Fisher realized a sense of loss of the old Birmingham, and saw the construction of its modern replacement.

At this same time, Fisher's father was approaching death, and the coinciding of these situations motivated Fisher to write about Birmingham. He created an assemblage of writings on the fall and rebuilding of Birmingham.

In his poem entitled "Entertainment of War," he speaks of the 1940 bombing, and his views at age ten. Characterized by vivid imagery, as are most of his works, "Brick Dust and Sunlight" described the city's decay. In "Seven Attempted Moves," Fisher summarized the feelings of the city by pitting the old and antiquated images of freedom versus the defined images of industrialized society.

"Win or die"

Guerrillas continue embassy siege

BOGOTA, COLOMBIA (AP)

The fifth round of negotiations between the government and the guerrillas who hold a group of high-level diplomats hostage here ended in a flash of anger yesterday. A masked woman representing the terrorists walked away from the talks visibly enraged and shouting, "We will win or die!"

The woman left the negotiations, held in a panel truck parked outside the occupied embassy of the Dominican Republic, took a few brisk steps and then turned toward hundreds of reporters standing some 80 feet away.

Jabbing her finger angrily into the air, she shouted that the guerrillas wanted the release of their comrades from Colombian jails.

The woman returned to the embassy accompanied by Mexican Ambassador Ricardo Galan, who has been appointed by the hostages as an observer to the talks.

The presidential press office issued a brief communique several hours later saying the government wants a negotiated settlement but the guerrillas must indicate whether they wanted to continue the talks.

The official statement contrasted with the communique after Monday's fourth round of talks, which said the talks had "advancedly serenely" and would be continued.

The government entered yesterday's talks, which lasted 90 minutes, prepared to propose a speed-up in military trials of guerrillas, including members of the M-19 organization - the same group holding the American Ambassador, 18 other foreign diplomats and an undetermined number of other hostages at the Embassy for the 16th day.

The government announced Wednesday night that nine "eminent jurists" had been appointed to a special commission by President Julio Cesar Turbay Ayala to find ways of accelerating the trials. The theory is that some of the defendants would be acquitted and some might get suspended sentences.

The M-19 guerrillas take their name from the April 19, 1970 presidential election, which they claim was rigged.

Election may resolve hostage situation in Iran

(AP) - Iranian Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh said yesterday upcoming parliamentary elections will allow the government to "dominate the power in the streets" and solve the issue of the American hostages "quite quickly."

In a radio interview broadcast in Paris, Ghotbzadeh said he believed the nation was losing patience with the militants who this week defeated government efforts to take custody of the approximately 50 Americans held hostage in the occupied U.S. Embassy since Nov. 4.

"Time is working against the students. The people were entirely with them before. Today, that is no longer the case," Ghotbzadeh said in an interview broadcast by France-Inter.

A five-member U.N. commission remained in Tehran 17 days investigating Iranian charges of mass murder and corruption by deposed Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi and seeking to question all of the American hostages.

Revolutionary leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini threw his support behind the militants, setting what the U.N. panel said were unacceptable conditions to the proposed visit to the hostages. Subsequently, the governing Revolutionary Council withdrew its backing for efforts by Ghotbzadeh and President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr to take custody of the Americans.

Khomeini has delegated authority in resolving the hostage issue to the Majlis, or Parliament, to be elected in balloting scheduled this Friday and April 4. The Majlis is not expected to consider the hostage issue until May.

U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim and Carter administration officials had hoped that the inquiry into the shah's alleged crimes would convince the militants to allow the proposed visit and lead to the release of the captives before the Majlis takes office.

The panel members, backed by Waldheim, have said they will withhold their findings until they are allowed to see the hostages.

Prof. Robert Byrnes lectures on Soviet-American relations

by Sal Granata
Senior Staff Reporter

Likening the Soviet Union's aggressive foreign policy to Hitler's search for Lebensraum, and associating current western reactions to the appeasement policy preceding WW II, Professor Robert Byrnes of Indiana University sketched a gloomy outline of Soviet-American relations before an overflow crowd in Hayes-Healy auditorium yesterday afternoon.

Byrnes' lecture, Soviet-American Relations and the Crisis in Iran and Afghanistan, was sponsored by the Program of Soviet and European Studies.

Byrnes blamed an indecisive policy for America's plight overseas. He affirmed that in dealing with the Soviets, "you must know what your goals are and be resolute." Describing the Carter years and the USSR, Byrnes said "Carter represents the American people, the people learned exactly what Carter learned...that we've been bamboozled."

Byrnes explained that most of the world is "convinced that we are nice guys, that we won't hurt anyone; but that the Russians will. Western Europe and Japan accommodate them. The last thing they want to do is get in the way of the Soviet Union. The situation in Afghanistan, he said, has 'illuminated the nature of our allies' inability to stand up and be counted."

"The invasion of Afghanistan destroyed the limited amount of trust that Americans had for the Soviet Union," Byrnes continued, adding that this destruction was "the most important casualty of the Afghan crisis."

But at the same time that he warned his audience of waning American prestige abroad, Byrnes predicted grave problems ahead for the Soviet Union.

"It may be possible the Soviet Union will not survive until 1984, at least not without our help," he said.

Byrnes went on to outline the implications of the Soviet move into Afghanistan, describing Southwest Asia as "the soft underbelly of the world." He called Afghanistan's neighbor Pakistan a "very rickety state with problems spilling over its borders."

"Iran is not one of the closest friends of the U.S." Byrnes quipped while evaluating the status of the revolutionary government situated west of Afghanistan. He touched on Iran as a likely center for continued violence and possible Soviet intervention.

"Only half the people in Iran are Iranians, the other half want independence; the likelihood is very large that it too (the Iranian government) will fall apart unless it seeks outside help," Byrnes said.

Byrnes also pointed out India's possible role in any future Soviet excursion into Pakistan in much the same manner as the German-Soviet dismemberment of Poland in 1939.

His final summary of the situation in the region of crisis was that, "The area was made too order for a state like the Soviet Union."

Describing anti-Americanism as the most powerful force in the last third of the 20th century, Byrnes told his audience there was nothing the U.S. could do to control events there.

"First of all, they wouldn't have us, even if they would take American aid, their is nothing they could do with it," he said.

Byrnes noted that Islam's conservative leaders have cultural reasons for being hostile to American culture and are antagonized by America's protection of Israel.

"Americans don't understand other people are different; not inferior but different, different values and political systems...Americans don't know how other people react to force," Byrnes said.

He quoted a phrase from Machiavelli's Prince to describe Soviet foreign policy: "It is better to be feared than loved."

Byrnes closed with a plea for nuclear disarmament and control of nuclear proliferation.

FLOC supporters discuss objectives

by Chip Block

Boycotting Campbell's and Libby's products in the various hall's food sales was a main topic at a meeting of FLOC supporters held last night in the LaFortune ballroom. The group discussed what steps were necessary for the abolishment of the companies' products in the stores and what individual students could do to help the boycott.

The meeting opened with the reading of an article in the Wall Street Journal concerning the passage of the FLOC referendum at Notre Dame. The article which appeared in the Journal yesterday, outlined the referendum's responses of Campbell's and Libby's officials. The group then reviewed other media coverage that FLOC had received.

The group then turned their attention towards gaining support at other colleges in the area. The supporters read a letter from Purdue asking for advice and support for starting a FLOC organization at that university. The group received a similar letter from the University of Indiana also asking for support.

How to keep students informed about FLOC was the final topic discussed by the supporters. The distribution of leaflets and the appearance on WSND's "Talk It Up" radio program were two of the suggestions. "We must keep the momentum going," one participant said. The group then talked about various fundraising events to increase exposure to their cause.

Spreading the boycott to Saint Mary's, the Morris Inn, and the University Club was the next topic discussed at the meeting. Whether to contact students at SMC or to first approach John Duggan, SMC president, was debated.

Carter's guidelines ensure wage increase

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Carter administration raised its voluntary wage guidelines yesterday so the nation's workers could receive wage increases of up to 9.5 percent this year and remain in compliance with government inflation-fighting efforts.

The administration, accepting a labor-backed recommendation, set a new guideline range of 7.5 percent to a 9.5 percent for pay and fringe benefit increases, up from last year's 7 percent guideline.

The guideline is the limit that the administration would like to see for wage increases this year. Since it is voluntary, however, the government can't force compliance.

The increase from last year's 7 percent ceiling was announced by Alfred E. Kahn, the president's chief anti-inflation adviser.

No decision has yet been made on this year's voluntary guidelines for price increases by businesses, according to officials of the Council on Wage and Price Stability, which oversees compliance with the anti-inflation program.

The increase in the pay

As the final weekend before the crucial Illinois presidential primary approaches, fifty supporters of George Bush from Notre Dame and St. Mary's plan to join a three-state caravan of volunteer students that is traveling to Chicago tomorrow.

Separate groups of students from Detroit and Indianapolis will join the Notre Dame caravan at about 12:30 p.m. tomorrow along I-94 near Michigan City, Indiana. A separate caravan will come from Milwaukee.

All the students will meet with Ambassador Bush in downtown Chicago, and then campaign by manning phone banks and going door-to-door. Tomorrow night will be a free night on the town. The group plans to return to Notre Dame at about 5 p.m. Sunday.

Students join Bush caravan en route to Chicago

All students interested in joining the Bush caravan should contact Jim King (1184) or Jim Niehaus (277-1494) or Torie Giesler (5432smc). Students with cars are especially needed.

...Police

seems to me that the students have an obligation to be good citizens, too."

Quigley went on to say that students in general are not at the heart of the problem. The neighborhood has greatly benefited from student involvement in the community - from assisting the elderly during the harsh winters to tutoring children. A small percentage of students, however, manages to erase much of the good done by persisting in revelry until 5 or 6 a.m. in the morning, when they abuse property, and habitually behave unconscientiously.

Although vandalism by students is not common, Quigley noted that the stop sign at South Bend and Notre Dame Avenues has been replaced seventeen times this year at a cost to city taxpayers of $70 per sign.

"We don't want to live anywhere else," Quigley said. "But people, elderly people who have lived in these homes for decades, are being forced to move out because of the rudeness or ruthlessness of people inflicting themselves upon them," he claimed.

Quigley conceded that off campus conditions are not good for students - although the northeast area boasts a lower average crime rate, students are more likely targets of crime.

"We must work together to achieve the best possible conditions, because students are especially vulnerable," he said. "But students must avoid setting up adversary conditions by insisting that they be allowed to drink if they are under 21," he said. "That is the law, and we object to the fact that underage drinking is so prevalent, and the fact that the neighbors must put up with the consequences," he said.

guideline has the backing of organized labor, business and public representatives, who had recommended the higher wage figures Jan. 22. The recommendations were drafted by a special committee President Carter set up to advise the council on wage matters.

President Carter had been expected to make the announcement as part of his new strategy to fight inflation, which in January surged at an annual rate of 18 percent.

The administration's decision on the pay guidelines ended weeks of speculation about whether the administration would agree to such a hefty increase in wages at a time inflation is soaring.

Labor leaders, including those who participate on the council's Pay Advisory Committee, had argued that the boost was necessary to get workers to comply after last year's 13.3 percent surge in prices.

But others, especially in the business community, pointed out that the larger wage increases will be passed on to consumers in the form of higher prices, thus exacerbating inflation this year.

Candidates go to battle in debate

CHICAGO (AP) - Four Republican candidates debated last night, with three ganging up on Rep. John B. Anderson and Anderson accusing George Bush of half-truths that are "as dangerous and deceptive as a lie."

Anderson, Bush, former California Gov. Ronald Reagan and Rep. Phillip M. Crane of Illinois - survivors in a narrowing field of candidates for the Republican presidential nomination - faced one another in a 90-minute, televised debate sponsored by the League of Women Voters.

They blamed President Carter and Democratic Congresses for running up deficits that fuel inflation.

Each of the Republicans said he is devoted to a balanced budget, but Crane said Anderson's House votes were those of a big spender. Bush and Reagan also took slaps at Anderson, evidence of his emergence as a possible winner in the Illinois presidential primary election Tuesday.

His foes criticized Anderson on Social Security, on his record of votes on House appropriations bills, and on his proposal for a 50-cent-a-gallon gasoline tax. Anderson advocates the tax as a conservation measure, with proceeds to be used to reduce Social Security taxes by 50 percent.

Anderson accused Bush of misstatements. "I have to tell him that a half-truth is as dangerous and deceptive as a lie," he said.

The Illinois Congressman said Bush has deceived voters by accusing him of advocating cuts in Social Security benefits. "Now wait a minute, that's not true," he snapped across the stage at Bush.

Chicago Sun-Times endorses Tighe as Republican delegate

by Bruce Oakely

Frank P. Tighe III, a sophomore in the College of Arts and Letters, was endorsed yesterday by the Chicago Sun-Times as a delegate to the Republican National Convention from Illinois' 11th District. Tighe is one of fourteen candidates in the district, and one of three pledged to John Anderson.

"The endorsement is a pleasant reward for a lot of hard work that began last October," said Tighe. "I began garnering signatures in my district then, and in December I contacted Anderson over Christmas break. I signed a pledge to support Anderson at that time. In early January, I filed my petition - with 700 signatures - at state headquarters in Springfield."

Some of the candidates opposing Tighe are well known on the Chicago political scene: His opponents include a former U.S. congressman and three current ward committeemen. Tighe is especially pleased with the Sun-Times endorsement because it gives him greater voter recognition, which is essential in combatting his more experienced adversaries.

Tighe will lead a group of students to solicit support at the polls in the Illinois primary Tuesday.

"We've got two vans going to Chicago Monday night," he said. We will work at the polls all day Tuesday, and we have a victory party planned Tuesday night. We will then return for classes Wednesday."

(Anyone interested in joining the group should contact Tighe at 8992).

Hard work at the polls and voter recognition are crucial for Illinois delegates, because of the state's unique blind-ballot system. The system, instituted last summer through the work of Governor James Thompson, provides for separate elections of presidential and delegate candidates. Delegate's names appear on the ballot independent of the presidential candidate whom they support.

This means that a presidential candidate who sweeps the popular vote is not assured of a single delegate to the convention, because the delegates who support him may lose their primary contests.

The Sun-Times, in its endorsement of Anderson and his delegates, called the blind-ballot "an abomination" that "embarrasses the state."

Echoing these comments, Tighe claimed that the rules "make sense for Thompson and nobody else." The rules make it more likely, Tighe said, for the more recognizable names - those candidates currently in state positions - to be elected delegates to the convention.

Presumably, Thompson could wield greater influence over those delegates on the state payroll. There have been rumors that Thompson is interested in the vice presidency, according to Tighe.

Tighe's disapproval of Thompson's maneuver is ironic because Tighe first became involved in the political process in Thompson's 1976 gubernatorial campaign, run in conjunction with Gerald Ford's Illinois campaign for the presidency.

Thompson ran again in 1978 - the '76 victory included the understanding that only a two-year term would be served in order to set up off-year state elections - and Tighe again worked in the campaign, which also resulted in Thompson victory.

Continuing his political activity, Tighe served with Larry Hau as co-chairman of the Anderson campaign at the recently concluded Mock Convention. Hau, whose diligence in gathering petition signatures helped Anderson get on the ballot for the Indiana primary, and Tighe were pleased with the support Anderson received at the Mock Convention.

Anderson led after the first ballot, and although a Ford movement cost us in subsequent ballots, we were happy with the number of hard-core delegates supporting Anderson at the Mock Convention," Tighe stated.

Anderson has a solid appeal on college campuses, according to Tighe, because he is more of a moderate than the other

Fisher commented, "In the old days it was a place, so long as it stayed stable, that you could be brought up and raised in. Now it's not a very pleasant place to be, and people are constantly moving through it." Fisher added, "It was up to me to write about what was there."

In addition to his writings on Birmingham, Fisher read a collection of short poems with the theme of "The Puzzle of Perception." These included: "The Only Image;" "The Sign;" and "The Least," dealing with perception and the difference between seeing and looking.

In an appealing poem called "Irreversible," Fisher described funny misconceptions achieved when the letters of one or more words are altered.

Fisher, interested in jazz piano himself, also read a critical essay entitled "The Thing about Joe Sullivan," dealing with the story of Joe Sullivan, a remarkable jazz pianist as reflected by Fisher. In "Bonadine's Reply," Fisher wrote about a work of William Shakespeare, by creating an imagination in Bonadine, a character in Measure for Measure.

In "Poet," Fisher's theme of the avoidance of finiteness in poetry is similar to John Cage's ideas, which Cage presented Wednesday evening.

Deliberates 26 hours

Indiana jury acquits Ford

(AP) - At Ford headquarters in Dearborn, Mich., "Everybody was highly elated" with yesterday's news that an Indiana jury had acquitted the automaker of reckless homicide charges.

For the father of two of the girls whose deaths in a fiery 1978 Pinto crash led to the unprecedented criminal trial of a corporation, the verdict was "very disappointing."

In Washington at Ralph Nader's Center for Auto Safety, the sentiment was that the jury's decision was "pre-ordained" by unfavorable rulings on the prosecution's evidence in the course of the 10-week trial in Pulaski Circuit Court.

And General Motors declared that its competitor was "entitled to the verdict of acquittal."

After 26 hours of deliberations, the jury of seven men and five women cleared Ford of three counts of reckless homicide in the deaths of three young women whose 1973 Pinto exploded in flames when it was struck from behind on a northern Indiana highway.

"Well, I'm very disappointed," said Earl Ulrich, whose daughters Judy, 18, and Lyn, 16, died in the crash along with their cousin, Donna, 18. "But this (verdict) has nothing to do with us. This was the State of Indiana against Ford Motor Co."

Ulrich, who said he and his wife heard the verdict on the news at their home in Osceola in Northern Indiana, declined to say whether they planned to bring a civil suit against Ford. Of the verdict, "I felt let down. I feel like the prosecution didn't get all their story in. They were very limited in their evidence. I think they did all they could under the circumstances."

Ulrich concluded that "It's not the end of the world. I just accept it and go on from there."

"In view of the judge's restrictions against the introduction of supporting evidence, but letting in the Ford crash tests, I felt the decision was preordained," said Clarence Ditlow of the Center for Auto Safety, which was instrumental in pressuring for the original Pinto recall. "However, in the next case, with a better judge or with a different striking vehicle, I feel sure Ford or any other manufacturer would be convicted."

Henry Ford, 63, who stepped down yesterday as chairman of the board of the No. 2 automaker, said he would have left the post last October, except for what he called "a lot of things facing the company then."

Asked for examples, Ford replied, chuckling, "Such as lawsuits."

Word of the acquittal in Indiana was brought into the directors meeting and, "Everybody was highly elated," Ford said.

Ford President Phillip Caldwell said the company was delighted to "have a principle upheld by a jury of our peers."

Caldwell said he believed the most important fact underlined by the trial was "at speeds in excess of 50 MPH, it is next to impossible to make them (colliding vehicles) foolproof ... there must be a responsibility on the part of people who use products as well as people who design them."

"General Motors believes that the jury reached the proper verdict," said a statement read by a GM spokesman.

'All hostages alive' says State Department

WASHINGTON (AP) - The State Department said yesterday it now has convincing evidence that all 50 Americans taken hostage in Tehran four months ago are alive and remain within the U. S. Embassy there.

Until now, the department has said it could not be certain the 50 Americans, taken hostage in the embassy on Nov. 4, were all alive or that some had not been taken elsewhere by their captors.

But a department official, declining to be identified, said Thursday "the preponderance of evidence" showing the hostages to be alive and all within the embassy compound was accumulated in a "relatively recent period."

No outside observer has seen all the Americans, nor has mail been received from all the captives. A United Nations commission, which had been expected to see all the hostages, returned from Tehran on Tuesday without being permitted inside the embassy compound.

"We have come to the conclusion that all 50 are alive and inside the compound," the State Department official said.

"That, however, in no way changes what I've been saying. We do not have a first-hand confirmation, nor can I tell you even now that anybody has seen all 50. I cannot make that flat assertion."

"But from an accumulation of recent reports of one kind or another we have concluded that the preponderance of evidence is that all 50 are alive and inside the compound," the official said.

The official said this conclusion "is not based so much on what any member of the commission said but on an accumulation of reports from various sources, which I cannot detail."

Republican candidates.

Anderson has not been afraid to cross party lines or to take liberal stands on issues, and Tighe believes this has initiated a lot of resentment from the other GOP candidates. But he also suspects that this makes Anderson a more formidable opponent for the Democrats: an Anderson-Carter confrontation would pit a moderate against a moderate, and this could make it tougher on the Democrats than a moderate-conservative contest.

"Anderson runs a campaign of ideas, rather than broad platitudes," Tighe noted. "He runs on programs - some people don't like those programs, but he is the only candidate who is proposing any programs."

The political experience has been gradually rewarding for Tighe, who expects to continue his involvement in the future, possibly to the extent of seeking an elected office.

There are bad moments, though:

"Sometimes it can be degrading," he noted. "Some people will slam the door on you before you've said word one. And I've been approached by the Bush people asking for my support for the winner of the presidential primary in the district, regardless of my pledged support. I am not legally bound to Anderson, but to switch allegiance at this point would be political suicide - I could never get support for a campaign again."

Assessing his experience in light of his recent success, Tighe concludes:

"It has been a good way to meet some important people and to learn to talk about politics. I'll be doing it again in four years."

Female minister speaks at SMC

by Pam Degnan
Senior Staff Reporter

Jacqueline Means, the first woman to be ordained an Episcopalian minister, spoke before an audience of thirty five last night in Carroll Hall - reflecting on her life as a priest, nurse, and divorced mother.

Attendance was poor due largely to the scheduling of the Sophomore Literary Festival during the same week.

Means, who was raised Roman Catholic, broke 2000 years of church history by becoming the first woman Episcopalian minister. Conversion from Catholicism to Episcopalianism occurred, Means noted, because of church "suffocation and strangulation."

"When I left the Catholic Church, I felt that I was finally free to be what I wanted," Means said. "I believe that the Church should not dictate people's lives."

Rev. Means warned the predominantly female audience that women will always face social and liturgical barriers. Means cited the ordination of a woman bishop as a real challenge.

The minister also said that there is really no hope for the Catholic Church as far as ordaining women priests.

"Unless Catholics elect an American pope or break ties with Rome, women priests will be an impossibility. You have to break cultural ties in order to achieve anything," Means said.

As a priest and the divorced mother of four, Means admitted that she is being constantly pulled between her private and public life.

"It's really hard to balance both worlds. In the beginning I was afraid that I would be neglecting either my parishioners or my children but in time I learned to cope with all my problems," Means said.

Means also discussed her divorce as a learning and growing experience.

"Divorce is a no-win situation. My divorce has taught me more about myself in terms of how to approach life and how to understand the complex emotions of people," Means commented.

Means concluded her 35 minute speech with some thoughts on abortion. As a licensed practical nurse, Means recalled the time when she witnessed an abortion three years ago.

"I almost fainted. I guess it really bothered me. I have a lot of mixed feelings about it," Means explained. "I used to think everything was black and white. Nothing is just right or wrong anymore," she concluded.

Anti-inflation strategies include balanced budget

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Carter will today unveil his newest anti-inflation strategy, which is expected to include the first balanced budget in 12 years and a new tax that would raise gasoline prices 10 cents a gallon.

White House officials said Carter will announce his anti-inflation plays at 4:30 p.m. (EST) in a White House speech and will hold a news conference at 9 p.m. tonight (EST) to discuss them further.

In announcing Carter's plans, officials said all details of the strategy have not yet been worked out and will be announced later.

In addition to seeing a higher tax on gasoline, Americans also are likely to feel the bite of the new Carter program in higher interest rates, credit controls and an end to Saturday mail delivery, among other things.

Carter is expected to propose $12 billion to $15 billion in spending cuts for 1981, and to impose a new tax on imported oil that would raise the price of gasoline an additional 10 cents a gallon.

Carter already has authority to impose the tax. He also has authority to impose credit controls. However, some of the spending reductions would have to be approved by Congress.

The result of the cuts in spending would be a slight budget surplus in 1981 in contrast to the original Carter budget, submitted in January, which provided for deficit spending of $15.8 billion. The nation has not had a balanced federal budget since 1969.

As a part of the package, the independent Federal Reserve Board is expected to take steps to hike its discount rate by one or two percentage points, sources said. It wasn't known whether the board would announce its action simultaneously with the president's announcement.

The rise in the discount rate, which is the interest the board charges on loans to member banks, could cause another upward surge in the interest rate banks charge on loans to businesses and consumers.

The Chase Manhattan Bank, the nation's third largest, boosted its prime rate to a record 18 1/4 percent yesterday.

Meanwhile, the administration yesterday formally increased its voluntary wage guideline for 1980 to a range of 7.5 percent to 9.5 percent, indicating it hopes most unions will settle on 8.5 percent pay increases this year.

Alfred Kahn, the president's chief inflation adviser, said in a statement, that "under normal circumstances, wage and salary increases should average 8.5 percent."

CLC needs reform

The Campus Life Council's latest rejection of a proposal to allow kegs in student residence halls proves that the CLC can no longer be taken seriously as an advisory body. The proposal, which failed to garner the two-thirds majority needed for passage, was founded in common sense, supported by the vast majority of students, and the next logical step in Fr. John Van Wolvlear's "party room experiment." That it was flatly rejected by the faculty and Administration members of the CLC is only the most recent sign of these two bodies' disregard for student sentiment and paranoia over treating the student body as adults.

The larger problem, however, is the CLC itself. If one were to judge the CLC by its record this year, one would have to conclude that it is a useless and, as Fr. Richard Conyers suggested, a self-defeating organization. The purpose of the CLC is to advise, yet how can it advise when those who are to be advised consistently shoot down the advice before it can be formally submitted? The purpose of the CLC is to be deliberative, yet how can it deliberate when (faculty and Administration members refuse to attend the meetings assuring there will not be a quorum, and that the discussion will be meaningless? In short, neither the Administration representatives nor the faculty representatives take the CLC's advisory capacity seriously.

To remedy this situation, The Observer believes that the CLC must be restructured so that it is viewed as a responsible and imaginative body. At present, the CLC is the student body's only official means of forum communication, with the Administration, but the Administration holds this body in its power. It is time to be released from that power.

First, the CLC should be restructured without the Administration represented as a voting body. This is a simple appeal to common sense. If the Administration consistently defeats student suggestions before they can air them in an official capacity, then Administration representation on the CLC is little more than a safeguard for the Administration. This safeguard assures the Administration that they will never see something they have not already had a hand in approving first.

Second, faculty representation should be dropped from the CLC. This group, by virtue of their election of representatives who refuse to attend the meetings, has illustrated it does not care about campus life.

Third, the CLC's approved proposals should be submitted directly to the University provost. The vice-president for student affairs, because he is represented on the CLC, is too close to the problem to objectively judge the merits of the CLC's proposals. It is no secret that there are personal conflicts between some CLC members.

Finally, the CLC should have a wider student representation, and one not chosen strictly from the various organs of student government. By choosing a group of students with more diverse interests and backgrounds, the CLC is bound to get more imaginative and meaningful student commentary on campus life.

The Observer believes that these reforms are necessary for the CLC to survive the crisis of self-justification it now faces. The first step toward achieving these much-needed and long-overdue reforms is recognition by student leaders and Administration officials that the CLC is, at present, impotent and purposeless. Unless some changes are made soon, The Observer, like Fr. Conyers, would not blame the CLC if it "voted itself out of existence."

'I CAN'T PUTT WHEN YOU KEEP SCREAMING, 'JERRY! JERRY!' LIKE THAT!'

The question

To Keg or not to Keg

Paul J. Riehle

Warning: This column is long and I may bore you with details, but doing so is a necessary evil. I encourage you to read this, familiarize yourself with its contents, and challenge your rector/rectress and the Administration with its argument, for their responses we may initiate the process of change.

When I watched the hands go up to shoot down the CLC keg proposal, I was frustrated and mad—really mad! This was something for which we students had worked all year. An almost identical proposal was passed 12-3 way back last September 10, but was rejected by Fr. VanWolvelcar because we were already running a party room experiment and "It seems only reasonable that we conduct one such experiment at a time...However, should our 'party room' experiment prove successful, I would be encouraged toward thinking about a 'keg' experiment toward the end of the year." One has to wonder if he was only dangling a carrot in front of our heads, distracting us to run without ever allowing us to reach our goal.

The same keg proposal was re-submitted a semester and one-half following its initial rejection; this was surely enough time to evaluate the use of the party rooms. In fact, the conclusion from discussion one month ago in the CLC and the report of its party policy committee was that "party rooms have been generally successful." It is true that there have been some minor problems with party rooms, but they are here to stay, as indicated by the large university investment this year to upgrade them. One of the major deficiencies of party rooms—and I'm sure every Hall President will agree with me—is that we cannot serve beer in large aluminum containers (i.e. kegs); as a result, the rooms often lie vacant simply because of the expense of throwing a party. Besides the cost factor, there are many other reasons to allow kegs in party rooms. Kegs minimize the problem of refuse and greatly facilitate clean-up. The absence of bottles and cans eliminate the accumulation of trash in the room; the cups used with kegs are easily stacked and disposed of. Plastic cups also eliminate the safety hazards of broken bottles. Finally, beer just tastes better out of a keg.

Last September, the arguments against kegs such as their proliferation throughout dorms and responsibility were effectively countered by noting that each Hall's staff has the same control that they now have. Furthermore, the legal liability remains the same despite the size of the container from which the beverage is served. When asked last Monday why he voted against kegs, Dean Roemer responded that the Administration was concerned about alcohol abuse; this type of thinking illustrates that opposition to kegs is only Administration phobia. Looking at kegs rationally, one realizes that there would be greater control than previously possible, thereby producing more normal socialization and healthier relationships. The number of kegs permitted at a party would depend on the size of the room and the number of people attending. You can keep tabs on the amount of beer simply by counting the kegs. It's a lot easier than counting quarts and then cases to see how much is being consumed—that's nearly impossible!

Furthermore, regulations can be added to the party room guidelines to increase control. Suggestions I've heard are disallowing the purchase of additional kegs after the party has begun, limiting the number of kegs tapped at one time, and prohibiting the tapping of kegs within an hour and a half of the predetermined time of the party's end. With these measures you reduce the often-mentioned problem of getting smashed trying to "kill the keg".

I read Fr. Conyers letter to the editor yesterday with an approving eye; there are definitely some things wrong with the CLC that need to be corrected. However, even more important than legislative mechanics is the need for attitudinal changes. Neither kegs on campus nor the CLC composition is ultimately the question, but these allow for focus on the real problem: The Administration at Notre Dame neither respects nor trusts its students. One cannot reach any other conclusion when a proposal with complete student backing is rejected without rationale. If there are reasons, then let the Administration come forth and give them; let them respond in a clear, rational, and responsible manner. We need to know because we're losing faith.

The DuLac manual states that "rational, experienced legislation is an aid to comradeship essential to a volunteer society;" it goes on to add that students are expected to abide by its laws "but also to criticize and help improve them year by year". In the Administration attitude toward kegs, I see a lack of rationality correspondingly reducing comradeship as our criticism falls on deaf ears. Because we are not complying with the DuLac manual, it follows we will have a difficult time realizing the ideals which it was meant to inculcate.

When Fr. Hesburgh gave the invocation during the opening night of last week's Mock Convention, he prayed that Notre Dame students wouldn't become "apathetic toward government". Government, however, like charity, begins at home. If the present practices continue, apathy toward both the Administration and toward Student Government will increase to the detriment of all, and in contradiction to the expressed principles of the University.

I call for a reasoned University response toward an experimental keg policy; kegs in party rooms have become symbolic of our ability to obtain response to reasonable requests of the Administration. We need rational answers. We need to know we're included in decisions. And we have to be included.

The SMC myth dispelled

Dear Editor:

As a graduating senior at Saint Mary's, I feel compelled to write this in response to a common and unfair fallacy: the SMC myth. For four years I have watched this misconception grow, idealistically hoping that it would change as a result of a few, well-set examples. However, I see little or no change in the attitudes of both students and professors on either campus.

According to this myth, a Saint Mary's "girl" (more affectionately referred to as a "Smick Chick"), is at Saint Mary's for one purpose and one purpose only—to secure a husband and obtain that valued "Mrs. degree." References to Saint Mary's as merely a finishing school are common. Many believe education to be of secondary importance to Saint Mary's students. The shocked looks of disbelief that Saint Mary's women actually do obtain successful careers only serves to illustrate this misconception.

I do not wish to criticize anyone who is engaged, since an "Mrs. degree" does not negate the value of a liberal arts degree. I am merely pointing out that this is not the sole intent of every Saint Mary's student. I am asking you to give us a fair chance at proving ourselves as intelligent, competent women; to look beyond the generalizations.

Granted there are women at Saint Mary's who hope to secure a husband at the end of four years, and for them, that's fine. However, it is a blatant generalization to assume that all Saint Mary's students are mindless females with little concern for a career-oriented future.

In part, the stunted social life at Saint Mary's and Notre Dame bears some of the blame for this myth. The weekend exodus from Saint Mary's to Notre Dame, partially due to the restrictive limitations of parietals (which is a whole other article in itself), does not enhance the Saint Mary's image. Instead, the Saint Mary's student comes off as a silly, giddy "girl," eternally "scoping." This statement is true in some cases, but a generalization nonetheless.

I guess I'm just plain tired of a question that always makes me bristle. "How could you not even apply to Notre Dame? You're an intelligent person."

Well, believe it or not, there are some intelligent people here who chose Saint Mary's because it offers unique opportunities to each student as a woman and as a potential career woman. And yes, Virginia, you actually can get an education at Saint Mary's — and a damned good one, at that.

Reagan's pro-life stand questioned

Dear Editor:

Recent letters in The Observer have implied that Ronald Reagan is a supporter of pro-life principles. These letters have presented a misleading impression.

As governor of California, Mr. Reagan supported and signed into law the 1967 "Therapeutic Abortion Act," which permitted abortion in cases of rape, incest, and health. As a result, abortions increased from 518 in 1967 (when abortion was only permitted to save the life of a mother) to over 138,000 in 1972. Over 340,000 abortions were performed under the law with Mr. Reagan's signature. The inclusion of the broad area of physical and emotional health apparently legalized abortion on demand in California, and was supported by Reagan.

A Feb. 29 letter endorsed Ronald Reagan for his "clear" anti-abortion position. However, he has taken at least 3 different positions on the abortion issue in recent months. In a July 29, 1979 letter to Rep. Hyde, Reagan justified abortion only to save the life of the mother. One month later, the National Right to Life News reported that Reagan supported a human life amendment if it allowed abortion for health reasons (as in 1967). This past February 7, Reagan issued a statement to pro-lifer Nellie Gray that indicated his backing of a "no exceptions" amendment.

Mr. Reagan's position on abortion is obviously better than any of the current "major" candidates, who are all anti-life: John Anderson, George Bush, Jimmy Carter, and Edward Kennedy. (However, it is obviously inferior to Philip Crane's excellent pro-life record.) Reagan realizes that if he wants to win in 1980, he needs Right to Life support. If he wants that support, he must adhere to pro-life principles.

Independent presidential candidate Ellen McCormack recently referred to Mr. Reagan's "...unfortunate tendency to talk about Right to Life when it is politically convenient, while--on the other hand--ignoring Right to Life when that course of action seems politically inconvenient." We must consider whether Reagan is truly pro-life, or whether he is such a candidate who, as Father Hesburgh stated at the National Conference on Abortion, will agree "superficially on this issue of abortion."

Until Mr. Reagan specifically states his position on abortion, and demonstrates that he will endorse pro-life efforts if elected, it will be politically dangerous for the Right to Life movement to support him. And it is certainly misleading to pro-life voters when The Observer publishes letters stating that Mr. Reagan supports Right to Life convictions when he appears more concerned about the pro-life vote than pro-life principles.

Victims of rape need compassion

Dear Editor:

This letter is in response to Marie Caulfield's insensitive and unknowledgeable attack on Katherine Catanzarite's letter concerning rape and incest and abortion.

Ms. Caulfield states that Ms. Catanzarite was being very self-righteous in her letter. I find it very difficult to reconcile compassion with self-righteousness. Ms. Catanzarite was asking for compassion on our part in order to see that abortion in cases of rape and incest is not always a black and white issue. She refused to judge those women who had or will have abortions due to those circumstances.

Rather, it is Ms. Caulfield's letter that is self-righteous. She equates abortion with murder, even under these circumstances. She is trying to impose her particular religious beliefs on those who do not share the same views. Although she does not directly say so, Ms. Caulfield virtually calls those women who have abortions, because they became pregnant through rape or incest, murderers.

Also, extremely disturbing was Ms. Caulfield's insensitivity towards rape victims. She casually concludes that rape is just another example of how life is not always fair. This complete lack of sensitivity and insight into the plight of rape victims lessens her credibility to even comment upon the situation.

I will never be the victim of rape or incest, nor will I have to decide whether or not to have an abortion due to these circumstances. I am not in a position to judge those who do; only my God can do that. The best I can do is offer compassion and understanding towards the victims. Perhaps Ms. Caulfield should have a talk with her God and see if He would want her to do the same.

Women athletes share in ND tradition

Dear Editor:

Some ironic things happened in this year of debate over Title IX. Number one, the women's basketball team was invited to Nationals. Number two, four women swimmers—three on the men's varsity team, and one on the women's club—made national cut-off times in several events.

The Administration has said that it does not want to recruit women athletes to Notre Dame. But spare the expense and time, Father Joyce & Co., there are already several women enrolled at Notre Dame, having passed the admissions requirements and paying full tuition, who are ready, willing, and capable of sharing in the Notre Dame tradition—because they want to.

Molinelli: dead or alive???

Dear Editor:

What's all this about Michael Molinelli being dead? Let's be adult about this. The whole thing is foolish. It's stupid to think that a lot of meaningless clues and signs should lead us to believe Michael Molinelli is dead.

What if in Bulgaria (or is it Yugoslavia) the walrus is a symbol of death? What makes people think O.P.D. means "Officially Pronounced Dead" instead of "Ontario Police Department" or "Only Paying Democrats?"

Who is really sure that all those hidden number 9's mean something just because if it is recorded backwards it sounds like "turn me on dead man?" Why bother?

Frankly, if Molinelli is dead, who cares?

Marriage on the rocks

Art Buchwald

WASHINGTON—I'm not too sure of the statistics, but it seems to me that more and more young people are getting married these days. That's the good news. The bad news is that more and more of them are breaking up.

Ordinarily this would be their own business except for the fact that many of us have thousands of dollars tied up in wedding presents we bought for the couples at the time of the ceremony.

With the price of silver, crystal and china going sky high, there has to be some way of protecting the innocent, when a marriage goes awry.

A group of us were discussing this the other evening.

Melissa said, "Did you hear the Warbucks kids have split?"

"There goes 200 bucks worth of Waterford glass," Joe said. "I told Edwina not to go crazy just because the wedding reception was held at the Pierre."

"Well," said Edwina, "The Warbucks gave our kids a six-place setting of Spode last year."

"How are your kids doing?" someone asked.

"My daughter moved out of the apartment two months ago. She decided he wasn't for her."

"But they were only married last June! I know because we still have the bill for the silver chafing dish we bought them."

Edwina got defensive. "I don't know why you should complain. We gave your son and daughter-in-law a Tiffany lampshade, and I understand she's now living with a rock star."

If you think that's sad," Diana said, "we gave the Benedict kids a Cuisinart three months ago and their marriage was just annulled. It didn't last as long as the warranty."

Ted said, "There has to be a better way of dealing with modern marriages. We can't just keep buying wedding presents for young people these days and seeing them go down the drain."

"What do you suggest?" I asked.

"Well, this may sound a little crazy, but why couldn't we give the gift to them on lease? As long as they remained married they could use the present, but if they broke up the gifts would revert back to us."

"It's a wild idea but it does have merit," Joe said. "We sure could use the Swedish steak knives we gave the Talberts."

Melissa said, "There's something tacky about giving a wedding present to a couple and telling them it isn't theirs. There should be an incentive for them to stay married. Suppose we told them that if they remained married for five years they would get the title to the gift?"

Joe said, "That seems like a good bet, I don't know too many young couples who have stayed together that long."

I also liked the notion but I said, "How do we do it legally?"

Eddie, the lawyer in the group, said, "We can draw up a lease contract which they can sign on their wedding day. We'll hold the parents responsible if they refuse to give the gift back. If the idea catches on we could get sheriff's deputies to actually pick up the stuff. They do it with automobiles; they can certainly do it with wedding presents."

"What I like about the idea," said Edwina, "is that it will impress on the young people that marriage is very serious business, and if two people don't work at it they have a good chance of losing their Corningware."

Scholz Shares Masterpieces

Many persons feel art, some understand it; but few both feel and understand it. Hillard

"I collect art only to preserve, study and share it. Then, I give it to the public," said Janos Scholz, world famous art collector and musician.

"Few people are as generous as Janos Scholz," said Stephan Spiro, curator of the Snite Museum of Art at Notre Dame.

"Most collectors in Janos' position would keep their collections private," said Dean Parter, director of Snite.

Clearly, Janos Scholz could be called a phenomena in the world of art. In the nearly 70 years that Scholz has been collecting, he has amassed one of the most prestigious and renowned collections in the country.

Scholz is very well known in the Notre Dame community. In 1967, he loaned 50 drawings to the exhibition "The Life of the Virgin," and, in 1970, he made loans to "The Age of Vasari." He has served on the Art Gallery's Advisory Council since 1968. He has also spoken here numerous times and gave a cello concert in 1973. His gifts to the university include fine manuscripts and 19th century European photographs.

But most important of all, Scholz is now permitting the Snite Museum of Art to exhibit the show "Janos Scholz, Musician and Collector," which contains more than 250 objects owned or at one time in the collection of Scholz. Among the works being displayed are Italian drawings, European graphics, Turkish rugs, Renaissance bronzes and a viola da gamba created by the greatest German violin maker, Jacob Stainer.

This exhibit is not about the objects themselves though, but rather, it is about the man who collected these objects. Scholz has devoted a great part of his life to collecting and to sharing his collection with others.

Scholz developed a passion for art at a very young age. As a boy in Hungary, he participated in excavations of prehistoric and Roman sites around his home. He built a library and categorized these early finds in order to preserve some of the heritage of his country.

Despite his love for art, Scholz' first love is music. He graduated from the Royal Academy of Music in Budapest and, in 1932, joined the celebrated Roth Quartet. He traveled with the quartet to the United States in 1933 where he was offered citizenship.

Traveling around the United States with the quartet gave Scholz an excellent opportunity to purchase fine pieces for his collection. His first major collection was of Northern graphics and consisted of more than 1,000 pieces. Today, it is placed in the Philadelphia Museum of Art.

For the past 20 years, Scholz has been teaching. Upon meeting him for the first time, the average person would have to realized that this man was made to teach. As he speaks in his heavily accented voice, it is easy to tell that he loves his life and what he is doing with it.

"I have been teaching my students in my Park Avenue apartment," Scholz laughed. "They say I am too old to be on staff at the university so they give me all sorts of titles and now my students come to me. It is good to be so personal. I know each of my students by name and what makes them click."

Janos Scholz in his study

Scholz cited the 60s as a time which he found hurtful to students academically.

"There was a terrible slump then," Scholz said thoughtfully. "Who knows why and who knew what to do? I had a hard time understanding. My students would come to my old New York house and see that it was nice and start shouting about capitalism. They did not know that I can be just as liberal too if not more."

Scholz described himself as a violent union member in Hungary.

"Yes, I was a card-carrying union member," Scholz said. "But some of the union members, they were kooky. They always had to be right. I got into many violent scraps because of this. Once, I even busted a whole musicians' union single-handedly."

"I am glad the hard days are over with my students," Scholz continued. "Now, they are all so eager to learn. I try to open their eyes to what is true and what is false in art. I tell them, 'Forget about the name of the piece or the age it was done in. Concentrate on the object itself, what it represents and how it was conceived.' I try to show my students how each piece is perfect in its own way."

Scholz believes that students benefit from observing art.

"you must be willing to give and accept what is there," Scholz said. "I give my students drawings to smell, taste and touch. The secret of a good teacher is that he must light his pupils' inner fire. I teach them to shoot high, but to never lose their footing."

Scholz smiles and continues, "I have collected so many things in my life, but I enjoy other things. I play my cello and cook. It is all very normal. I don't consider myself famous."

He pauses. "Life is different now. It is miserable to see my old friends dying off. But I am keeping up. I have such a good life."

The "Janos Scholz, Musician and Collector" exhibition has opened in the new Snite Museum of Art and will be there until May 28. Hours are 1-5 p.m. on Saturdays and Sundays and 10 a.m. - 4:45 p.m. on weekdays. The art museum is part of O'Shaughnessy Hall, immediately northwest of the stadium.

ALL FEMALE CAST & CREW

Jaquez Directs

'Uncommon Women'

Theater major Lisa Jaquez, though active in the Notre Dame/Saint Mary's Theater, was tired of plays "like Hamlet, with fifty guys and three women." So she decided she was going to direct a women's show, for a class 'practical', "if it killed me."

Uncommon Women and Others, a two-act rowdy comedy by contemporary American playwright Wendy Wasserstein, was the answer, "a play for women, about women, by a woman," according to Jaquez. But the ND senior took her idea one step further, organizing a backstage technical crew that consists only of women students.

Jaquez commented that while male students did not resent being excluded from the backstage crew, a few offered to dress up as women for parts in the play. Such offers were declined.

Uncommon Women presents the reunion of five graduates of Mount Holyoke in a restaurant in 1978, then flashes back to 1972, back at the university, when the women were all seniors. Any woman who has lived in a women's dormitory can easily relate to the seniors' banter about sex, drugs, and James Taylor, and occasional soul-searching questions.

"There's something about the show that's special to me," Jaquez remarked. "Guys will like it, but it'll really hit the women--they'll recognize the situations."

The five central women in the play are Muffet (Anne Slowey), a thoroughly charming miss who takes life one-day-at-a-time; Rita (Adri Trigiani), a cheerfully-loud Italian determined to "make it with everything," including a shoebox; Samantha (Judy Curlee), who's out for her M.R.S. degree; Holly (Carol Cera), a very well-dressed and indecisive Jewish girl; and Kate (Annie Patterson), an all-American student unsure whether to pursue a career in law.

Other women in the "college" scenes include Mrs. Plumm (Mary Jo Hicks), the girls' kindly, bird-watching housemother; Susie (Joan Quinlan), a bouncy rah-rah who unfortunately never gets exhausted; and Carter (Mary Pigott), an intensely private freshman.

"There really is no plot-action, the play gives an overview of a modern woman's dilemma, the problems she faces," Jaquez explained. "Some of the women end up very successful, some don't; that's the way it is in life. All the characters are bright and witty, and have a certain awareness of themselves, and their roles in society. They've all gone to a school where they were raised to believe in themselves as women."

"It shows women working together for equality in everything, and the importance of friendships."

Uncommon Women and Others will be performed April 15, 16, and 17 in Regina Auditorium, at 8 p.m. Admission is free.

LETTERS TO A LONELY GOD

The Need For A Vineyard

Rev. Robert Griffin

At breakfast in the North Dining Hall, the young man asked me what I thought of the non-denominational, fundamentalist Bible-study group he had joined on campus. "The priests seem against it," he said, "and I don't understand why. Bible study has helped me deepen my relationship with the Lord." Obviously, the name of the faith-game is our relationship with the Lord, and priests should be the cheerleaders as young Christians move toward the Cross. Clerics opposing Bible study seem too institutional to be trusted.

"If Bible study helps," I said, "no priest should really mind." The words sounded grudging; I only meant to say: "Don't limit yourself." Fundamentalists act as though they never knew the Bible had a home. Separating the Scriptures from the Church they belong to is as limiting to Christians as to deny the sun and moon the sky to shine in.

"I'm not against the fundamentalists you belong to," I said. "In fact, I've had one of your teachers as guest preacher at Sunday Mass.

I'm willing to furnish young Christians with all the help that they need. I grew up with Bible-Study groups in the Baptist church. The Baptists furnished me with a half-way house of faith between the Congregationalists and the Episcopalians, on my way to becoming a Catholic.

"Inheriting a faith," I said, "is like inheriting an estate. You don't settle merely for the bank accounts, the telephone stock, and the silver teaspoons. You ask for the title of ownership as proof of legitimate possession. You claim the fruit cellar, the vineyards, and the portraits of uncles who have been hanged as horsethieves. All of these things belong to you as your father's gift."

He murmured words about having no use for fruit cellars; anyway, it was breakfast time, and still very early, so what would he want with a vineyard?

Bible faiths are nice, and sometimes very deep; and I wouldn't want to speak slightly of a Bible faith. But I've never seen a Bible faith yet that has much of a grasp on the Eucharist. I wanted so badly for the young man to believe in the Eucharist: the memorial of the Lord's Passover, the bread and wine signifying the death and life of the Lamb of God, our peace and reconciliation with the Father. From the Gospel alone, the Word of God of the very young Church, fresh and new from the breath of the Paraclete --before the Didache, Corpus Christi, and the Pange Lingua; before candles were lighted before tabernacles comfortable with the holiness of the Lord's Real Presence-- how could I make this young man understand his need for a vineyard?

"The Bible," I said, "did not create itself. People created the Bible. Other people, having authority from Jesus to preach the Gospel, authenticated their work as inspired, because the Bible cannot authenticate its own inspiration. The Community of people, inspired by God to write or teach the Gospel truth, were believers belonging to the Church, exercising their ministries of faith. Their Bible, presenting God's word in the form of poetry and parable, myth and symbol, is not self-explanatory. Without the tradition of interpretations, handed down for centuries in the Church, the reality of the Jesus-figure would be lost to us in the richness of New Testamental imagery. Primitives, reading the Scriptures without footnotes, would be hard-pressed to figure out the doctrines of the Incarnation and the Trinity. Fundamentalists, like the youngest altar boy, owe a debt of gratitude to the clarifications and definitions of ecclesiastics and scholars, meeting in solemn councils governed by popes keeping faith with the apostles.

I've never turned in my credentials as a hard-shelled Baptist; I've never lost my license as a Congregational liberal. I've never forsworn the persuasions of my days of dalliance with the Anglicans, admiring the poetry of Crammer in the Prayer Book more than I admire the prose of Spellman in the Catholic News. My favorite ghosts are Protestant ghosts; my cherished saints are Protestant saints; and I hope to keep company in heaven with the Old-Time Religionists who have died clinging to the Old Rugged Cross; more familiar to me than the Spanish mystics, the disembowelled virgins, the reformed rakes of Umbria, and the French nuns proteged by the Jesuits, canonized in the Roman Martyrology. Some of my finest ex-friends are Fundamentalists, and I hope it always may be so. But Fundamentalists make me nervous by their simplicities with chapter and verse. Here, in the North Dining Hall, was this young Christian, talking of his relationship with Jesus, making me feel institutional with the dead weight of the Church's sins on my back; and I wanted him to be my cheerleader as I move toward the Cross.

"Kid," I said to him in summary, "the Church has its faults. It becomes stained with the limitations of every culture it takes root in. But in its sacraments, its ritual, and its faith, it heals the deepest needs of man; and the whole heals better than any of its parts, whether that part be bell, Book, or candle. Be careful of the Church, because it is unique among the institutions of the earth. If it should perish, through the attacks of its friends or the neglect of its enemies, there is no other structure, defending truth and grace, that can take its place."

When I left the young man, he might have been satisfied, in his spiritual legacy, to be left with the telephone stock and the silver teaspoons. I hope I left him with some questions to ask his executors about the vineyard and the family portraits. I have had breakfasts that were less productive in my thirteen years of eating at the North Dining Hall.

Pacino "Cruising" for a Bruising

the film does not intend to depict the entire homosexual community, just a particular fringe of it. The warped, alienated, and ultimately dehumanized fringe, the sado-masochistic segment.

"Cruising" is all of the above, and more. Not that "and more" means better. It's just one of the strangest, most unsettling movies ever produced.

Director William Friedkin ("The Exorcist") has put together a poorly edited, shabbily screenwritten flick. "Cruising's" only saving grace is a dazzling display of surreal, bacchanalian images of New York decadence which consistently make the viewer's skin crawl. As one watches "Cruising," one feels as if he were in hell. At any moment, I expected Dante to stroll up the aisle with Virgil.

"Cruising" is a film packed with sexual violence, sleazy bars, infernal passions and enough debauchery to make any closet Calugula drool with pleasure.

Put simply, it is not a movie for the fainthearted, the fastidious or the fundamentalist. "Cruising" is a visual bruise.

The film opens with the discovery of a human arm floating with the flotsam in the East River. Soon thereafter, the viewer finds himself in a cavernous gay bar. Two men in that jammed abode cruise the scene, find one another to their liking, and proceed to a nearby hotel. After some Dionysian revelry, one leathered Captain, adorned with sailor's cap, knifes his lissome partner in the back. As life slowly ebbs away from the victim in this brutal scene, the swaggering, butcher demomically proclaims "you made me do that."

Enter Steve Burns, the typically tough talking, likable cop on the beat played by Al Pacino. Burns' macho, unsophisticated style hardly prepares him for his new assignment: to go undercover into the netherworld of New York's steamy, leather idolizing S&M bars to search for the killer.

Since he physically resembles the victims, Burns' boss (Paul Sorvino) feels he can lure the murderer into a trap. Once set up, New York's Finest will pounce on the unsuspecting fiend, thus sparing the gay community from any further heart palpitations.

Burns' subsequent assimilation of the homosexual lifestyle begins to unhinge him. Although Friedkin titillates the audience with pseudo-innuendo and ersatz profundity (Is Burns, deep down, gay? Is he suffering from sexual confusion, a loss of sexual identity, as the investigation grinds on?), it's never quite clear what Burns is thinking about, or what his real emotions are in his novel, frenzied, hypersexual environment. Although Pacino has remarkably communicative eyes, they don't compensate for actual character development and genuine dramatic dialogue, two commodities which are woefully, and glaringly, lacking throughout "Cruising."

As the hunt for the killer escalates, it is accompanied by the incessantly pulsating, sledgehammer rock music which heightens the intense, dangerous, cutting-edge quality of the hunt.

The music serves as an unnerving subliminal catalyst for the viewer, evoking dark, mysterious images that groups like Black Sabbath and Alice Cooper pioneered during their heyday in the early '70s. The music's sinister quality reached its zenith as sweaty, sinewy men muscled, bumped and bruised one another on the packed dance floors, becoming an orgy of turgid, twisting, writhing flesh in search of the ultimate score.

The ending of this movie is impossibly ambiguous, thus maddeningly disappointing. If Friedkin was trying to be subtle, it backfired; the result is just plain ludicrous. I left the movie exasperated at the stupidity of a director who is supposed to be one of Hollywood's biggies.

One thing's for sure. Al Pacino is slipping. His illustrious talents are being stifled, if not outright sabotaged, by the insipid scripts that he's chosen of late. He wasn't anywhere near as convincing a supersleuth in "Cruising" as he was in the classic "Serpico." Although "Cruising" is a genuine disappointment, it was not nearly as malodorous as his previous bomb "...And Justice For All."

Thank heaven for small favors. If he makes many more like the last two, Pacino will soon be relegated to the celluloid's dung heap of also-rans. And what a shame, and waste of talent, that would be.

Wake up, Al. You're beginning to snore us to death.

The advertisements warn the potential viewer: "This picture contains harsh and vulgar language, sex and violence. May be considered shocking and offensive." The movie opens with a disclaimer, stating that

Alumni stomps Stanford, Dillon nips Grace in Interhall playoffs

by Mark Perry
Sports Editor

Those traditional South Quad rivals, Dillon and Alumni, will be battling again this Sunday, this time for the interhall hockey title, as both teams won semifinal games yesterday at the ACC. Alumni used a three-goal spurt in the first five minutes of their game against defending champion Stanford, as the Big Green cruised to a 5-1 win in last night's opener.

In the second game, Dillon tallied a late goal to edge North Quad champion Grace, 4-3.

Alumni's Mike O'Connor and Randy McNally scored a goal apiece in the first two minutes of their contest against Stanford, as the South Quad champions swarmed Stanford goalie Al Levorone. Nick Marrone's shot from inside the left point five minutes into the first period gave Alumni a 3-0 lead that would never be challenged.

Brian Dean was the only bright spot for Stanford, as he scored the Studs only goal with 9:45 left in the period on a screaming slap shot from the left point on a breakaway. Dean tested goalie Frank Schornagle several times after that goal, but the Alumni netminder was up to the task, including a great glove save on another breakaway.

O'Connor scored his second goal of the night late in the first half, working a great two-on-two break with linemate Mike Marrone, who had assisted on the earlier goal.

The second period was scoreless until late in the game, when Rich Conlon scored off a pass from Tom Acton to ice the game for Alumni.

Dillon gained the early advantage in the second semifinal match, as Mike Duggan poked in a shot on Dillon's first rush after the opening faceoff, only 20 seconds into the game.

But Grace set the stage for the night when they scored a few minutes later, as Tim Collins directed a shot past Dillon's Dan Marchiori on a mad scramble in front of the net. The first period ended with a 1-1 tie.

Marchiori was outstanding in the nets on a Grace power play early in the second half, turning back several shots, but Grace came back to score two quick goals. Greg Fisher outran a defender on a clearing pass and slipped the puck between Marchiori's pads to give Grace the lead, and Pete Livingston tallied on a quick wrist shot off a faceoff to make it 3-1 with 10 minutes left.

Leo Duggan started the Big Red on the road back a few minutes later, as he grabbed a rebound on the right side of the net, swept behind the goal, and then stuffed a shot past a surprised Bill Burke to make it 3-2.

Then Duggan assisted Tom Ebzery on the tying goal a few minutes later.

The score remained a 3-3 tie for several minutes, but just when it looked like an overtime was coming, Mike Reff slipped a backhand into the net off a pile up to give Dillon the lead with 2:02 left.

Grace tried valiantly to come back, pulling their goalie with 39 seconds left while they were on the power play, but Dillon defenders and Marchiori kept the puck out of the net.

Dillon and Alumni will face off for the interhall title this Sunday at 1:30 p.m. at the ACC.

... Duke, Purdue, UCLA win

Purdue-76, Indiana-69

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) - Drake Morris and Keith Edmonson scored 20 points apiece as 20th-ranked Purdue stunned No. 7 Indiana 76-69 in a semifinal game of the NCAA mid-east Regional basketball tournament last night.

The Indiana-Purdue game was the rubber match between the intrastate archrivals, who split a pair of Big Ten contests in the regular season. Purdue, 21-9, built a 37-26 halftime lead, despite playing the last 10½ minutes of the first period without All-American center Joe Barry Carroll. He was benched with three personal fouls and scored just four points in the half.

The Boilermakers started the second half with two free throws by Edmonson and possession of the basketball, thanks to a technical foul assed against Hoosier Coach Bobby Knight after the first half had ended.

The loss offset a brilliant performance by Indiana freshman Isaiah Thomas, who led all scorers with 30 points. Mike Woodson added 14 points for the Hoosiers before fouling out with 4:01 remaining. Carroll and Mike Scarce had 11 points apiece for Purdue.

UCLA-72, Ohio State-68

TUSCON, Ariz. (AP) - Freshman Rod Foster and sophomore Mike Sanders scored 19 points apiece as the UCLA Bruins upset 10th ranked Ohio State 72-68 last night to move into the finals of the NCAA West regional basketball tournament.

The Bruins hit 5 of 6 free throws in the final 37 seconds of play to seal the victory. UCLA will square off against Clemson, in the regional championship Saturday afternoon at the University of Arizona's McKale Center.

The Buckeyes led by as many as seven points in the first half, behind the scoring of Calvin Ransey outside and Herb Williams inside.

But the quickness of UCLA began to pay off late in the period as Foster, Sanders and Darren Daye led a Bruin charge that left Ohio State at least temporarily bewildered. The Bruins tied the game with 4:30 remaining in the half on a Sanders hoop and forged a 35-31 lead at intermission.

Clemson-74, Lamar-66

TUSCON, Ariz. (AP) - Forward Larry Nance and center John Campbell combined for 31 points to lead the Clemson Tigers to a come-from-behind victory over the Lamar Cardinals, 74-66 in a semifinal game of the NCAA West basketball regionals last night.

The Cardinals led through much of the game, grabbing their biggest lead at 47-37 with 16:11 left in the game. However, the taller Tigers reclaimed the lead for the first time since midway through the opening half, 59-57, with just under eight minutes to go in the game on a jumper by guard Chris Dodds.

The Tigers gradually raised their margin to 65-60 with five minutes remaining and promptly went into a stalling game, forcing the Cardinals to foul. Although the Tigers missed on several one-and-one opportunities in the closing minutes, Lamar was unable to take advantage, throwing the ball away several times.

Freshman Steve Dziabis (above) travels to Detroit, Mich. for this weekend's NCAA Indoor Track Championships. Other Irish qualifiers include the two-mile relay team of Jay Miranda, Tim Macauley, Pete Burger, and Chuck Aragon. Dziabis will compete in the 600 yard event. [photo by John Macor]

1980 Notre Dame tennis captain Carlton Harris gets in some practice for his team's home opener.

Netters prepare for home opener

by Michael Ortman
Sports Writer

Be it ever so humble, there's no place like home.

There may be only three tennis courts in the Athletic and Convocation Center, and they may be chipped and scuffed from mobile homeshows and the like, but the Notre Dame tennis team is glad to be playing on them just the same.

After posting a 2-2 record after their first four matches (all on the road), the Irish men open a 10-match home stand Sunday afternoon at 1 p.m. against the much-improved Ball State Cardinals.

"Ball State is coming off an excellent spring trip, in Florida," notes Irish head coach Tom Fallon. "They got a lot of good tennis in down there against some quality competition. I know they're going to be ready for us."

Eighth-year coach Bill Richards brings to South Bend a team he calls the strongest he's had at the Muncie, Ind., campus. The 1-2 record his team accumulated in Florida includes a 7-2 win over Florida Southern and a pair of close losses to Central Florida (4-5) and Rollins (3-6).

The Irish haven't played shabby competition either. Notre Dame's two wins came at Eastern Michigan (8-1) and Iowa (7-2). The two defeats were at the hands of Big Ten powerhouses Michigan (0-9) and Wisconsin (3-6) with the Badgers winning two three-set doubles contests to take the match.

"It's certainly going to be an advantage for us to be playing at home for a change," says Fallon, who is rapidly approaching his 350th career victory at Notre Dame. Last Sunday's win at Iowa brought his 24-year totals to 346-129 and leaves him two short of fencing coach Mike DeCicco for Notre Dame's coaches all-time victory mark. "In a way, we're fortunate to be 2-2 at this point. The win over Iowa was easily our best performance thus far, and I think it was just what we needed to get things going."

The Irish roster will be the same as it was last weekend with freshman Mark McMahon playing number-one singles followed by the team's senior captain Carlton Harris. Juniors Herb Hopwood and Mark Hoyer will fill the number three and four slots, and sophomores Tom Hartzell and Tom Robison will play five-six, respectively.

The doubles lineup will also remain intact with Harris and Hopwood teaming at number-one and McMahon and Hoyer at number-two. The most effective pair thus far, in terms of wins, has been the duo of sophomore Jim Falvey and freshman Tim Noonan which sports a 3-1 record.

Seating is available in the ACC, and there is no admission charge.

the Irish finished fourth. The two teams, however, did not meet.

The results of the regional held last weekend, might lead to a touch of overconfidence on the part of the Roonies, but Petro isn't counting on that.

"I think they're too good to be cocky," she warns. "They're without a doubt the best team I've seen play this year."

Indeed, coach Mary Hansen has built a powerhouse at LaCrosse, led by a pair of talented juniors. Lorraine Petzlaff, a 5-7 swingman, is the Roonies' top scorer with a 12.1 average. Petzlaff also hands out 4.4 assists per game, tops on the club.

Darcia Davis, who co-captains LaCrosse along with Petzlaff, is the Roonies' top all-around player. The 5-10 center carries averages of 11.2 points and 8.2 rebounds per outing. Ann Mahnke (11.0 ppg) joins Davies and Petzlaff in double figures. Reserve Judy Hamsmann is the Roonies' top rebounder, grabbing 8.3 boards off the bench.

IRISH ITEMS— Five Irish players had friends or relatives at Wednesday night's game in Tacoma. Molly Cashman, Maggie Lally, Missy Conboy, Jane Politiski, and Jane Jergesen. Sophomore forward Patti O'Brien and Jergesen, a freshman guard, both saw action late in the game after missing over a month with injuries. O'Brien grabbed a rebound and won a jump ball two days after having a cast removed from her ankle, while Jergesen got into the scorebook by converting one of two free throws. A small, but enthusiastic crowd greeted the Irish at Michiana Regional Airport last night.

START WITH A COMPANY THAT IS GROWING AS FAST AS YOU ARE

Progressive Companies is a family of specialized insurance companies which provide insurance coverage for owners of recreational vehicles, personal automobiles, and commercial transports. Our friends who are erecting this bar chart couldn't think of a simpler way to tell you: We're growing rapidly and we intend to follow this pace in the future.

We've succeeded because we have been highly innovative in a stodgy industry. We are young — our President is in his forties, and the median age of our senior managers is in the thirties. We are resourceful — we have discovered highly profitable ways to service markets others have ignored. We are demanding — we ask a lot from our people because the growth we're planning takes considerable effort, intelligence and dedication.

We can't use career paths or promotion timetables. Advancement is based solely on achievement, not seniority or politics. That's the way we have grown, and that's the way we'll continue to grow. Rapid increases in responsibility mean rapid increases in compensation. This won't impress you until you discover that our starting salaries are even higher than those of many Fortune 500 corporations.

On March 19, we will tell you more about ourselves and available positions in a presentation at 7:00 p.m. in the Shamrock Room of the Morris Inn.

All individuals interested in performing in the following capacities should make a point of attending.

uncoordinated. I never thought I had any athletic ability." Then how did the impressive history of the Irish captain come to be written?

"The mental aspect of fencing gets me through all its physical demands," Carney relates. "I enjoy the intellectual challenge, the brain to hand coordination. I hate to run and train - I only do it because it helps me with my footwork and endurance."

Carney made the move to Notre Dame when UVA's fencing program was threatened due to lack of funds and the departure of its coach. She earned the number one position on the team her first season with the Irish and has never relinquished that standing. Her squad has posted an 11-2 mark this year en route to a second place division finish and a birth in the national finals.

Dodee is more than satisfied with the fencing program at N.D. and heaps tremendous praise on her coach Michael DeCicco.

Pigeons

by Jim McClure/Pat Byrnes

"I didn't realize when I came here that he was the reason Notre Dame's program was so good. Now that I'm here I understand - his fencing experience and teaching ability are great, but his personality pulls this team together."

There is some amazement on Carney's part when discussing the lack of interest surrounding the fencing program. "It seems incredible to me that the fencers, especially the men who have been champions, do so well nationally and yet some students aren't even aware that we have a fencing team."

The English major has no specific career plans after graduation but would like to move to an area offering a good amateur fencing program. The 1984 Olympics are a possibility in her mind if she attains national ranking as an amateur.

"Fencing has been a part of my life, bringing the two worlds of the body and the mind together. It's made me realize that you can't emphasize one so much that it negates the other - the relationship between the two is important."

"When I'm fencing really well I'm in another world - total euphoria. I'm constantly trying to put myself in that world emotionally when I'm competing."

For Dodee Carney, it's a way of overcoming her handicap of ability.

pointment for Greg Meredith in his career as an Irish icer is the much publicized fiasco in attempting to decide the future of hockey at Notre Dame. With the same fervor in his voice as he put forth just a month ago to the administration of the University, Greg reiterated his position of making the sport a first class operation to insure success.

"The university right now recognizes that it wants to let the hockey team play only if it makes money. They should find the resources and students alike, then it would be sure to break even. You can't send a team on the ice without publicity," the captain noted thoughtfully.

What will Greg be doing after graduation? The Atlanta Flames of the NHL have already contacted him about the possibility of turning pro, so he hopes to finish the season healthy and talked to the Omni-based hockey club after the playoffs. If Greg signs with the Flames, he'll join Olympic goalie Jim Craig, ex-of Boston University, in the Peach Tree City.

Notre Dame hockey followers know what kind of a void losing this steady, dependable right winger will create. Good luck, Greg, you'll be missed . . .

GRAND FORKS, N.D.--The Notre Dame hockey team does not have to wait for the NCAA Final Four in Providence, R.I., to participate in a national championship game. That showdown takes place at the Winter Sports Center here tonight and tomorrow evening when the Irish face off against top ranked North Dakota, the Western Collegiate Hockey Association champion for the last two years, in a two-game, total goals second round playoff series. WNDU-AM will broadcast both games back to South Bend beginning at 8:25 p.m. local time.

The Irish, now 18-18-1 overall, won a first round WCHA playoff series for the second time in their nine-year league history last week by defeating Michigan, 11-7, the total goals series. Ironically, North Dakota was the victim the last time (1972-73) Notre Dame won in the first round.

"North Dakota certainly will be ready for this series," said Irish coach Lefty Smith, "so we have to make sure we are ready ourselves. This series will be even tougher than if we were playing them in the NCAA tournament because they are the No. 1 team in the country and we are playing them in their own backyard.

"We will have to be a disciplined club this weekend because it should be a physical series. We played them well last series even though we lost both games. I feel, however, we are a group of competitors which can rise to the occasion. It will be a very difficult task and now is the time to meet the challenge before us."

North Dakota won the Jan. 11-12 series, 7-4 and 3-1, for its fifth and sixth victories, respectively, over the Irish. The Nodaks post a 27-8-1 overall record this year, including 18 in a row at home. Coach Gino Gasparini's club trounced Michigan State, 13-4, in the first round of the playoffs.

"We realize North Dakota's successful record at home," Smith said, "but that gives us all the more incentive for the series. Remember, we broke a 17-game unbeaten streak at Michigan during the season."

The Irish take a 12-8-1 road record into this week's series. Injuries, which Notre Dame could not avoid all season long, also have taken their toll on the lineup.

Sophomore center Dave Poulin will be sidelined for the second week in a row with a thigh contusion he suffered in the last regular season series of the year. Senior defenseman John Friedmann also will sit out with a partially separated shoulder. Junior John Cox once again will get the call to step in at defense.

Because of the injuries, Smith will skate with the same lines as last week with one change. Freshman Mark Doman will skate at left wing on the fourth unit with Dave Lucia and John Higgins.

Smith also said he will definitely go with Dave Laurion in goal tonight and if he plays well, the sophomore netminder also will get the nod for the second game of the series.

After this weekend, three teams from the west (WCHA and CCHA) will remain in contention for the two bids to the NCAA tournament in Providence. The top team of the three will automatically get a bid while the remaining two will meet in a one-game playoff next week at a sight to be determined.

The three teams will be seeded during a conference call of the NCAA tournament committee at 9 a.m. Monday morning.

Senior Co-captain Greg Meredith will lead Notre Dame against the North Dakota Fighting Sioux in the second round of the WCHA playoffs this weekend. [phot by John Macor.]

Women return from coast, prepare to face LaCrosse

by Craig Chval
Sports Writer

The next stop for the Notre Dame course, United States Geography 101, otherwise known as the women's basketball team, will be LaCrosse, Wis.

Coach Sharon Petro's nomads, just back from an oft-delayed flight from Seattle and a harried nearly-missed connection in Chicago, will take to the air again tonight bound for God's Country, as J. Heilman Brewery likes to call it.

The Irish earned another fling with the friendly skies by virtue of a come-from-behind, 57-48 victory over Pacific Lutheran College in Tacoma Wednesday night. Notre Dame, which reached the magic 20-victory circle (20-9) for the first time in its three-year existence, is one of the final 16 teams in the AIAW Division III national championship.

Petro's players stopped back in South Bend just long enough to attend Friday classes and find out how far behind they were after missing the better part of two weeks of academics.

"All of the traveling we've done lately has created some problems as far as keeping up in school," says Petro. "But every time I turn around they're studying. I just hope the girls can keep their minds on basketball a little bit."

While Petro and her squad fret about finding a happy medium between basketball and books, the University of Wisconsin-La Crosse Ronnies threaten to cause an even bigger headache.

LaCrosse boasts a 24-4 record, a number five national ranking and the Division III Midwest Regional championship. The Ronnies ran roughshod through the Midwest Regional where

Kentucky, Indiana, OSU lose

Duke-55, Kentucky-54

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) - Gene Banks hit a game winning free throw with 22 seconds remaining and his Duke teammates withstood a furious closing rush by Kentucky as the 14th-ranked Blue Devils upset the fourth-ranked Wildcats 55-54 in a semifinal game of the NCAA Mid-east Regional basketball tournament last night.

The victory boosted Duke, 20-8, into Saturday's regional championship game against Purdue.

Kentucky had a chance to win the game after calling time out with nine seconds to go, but All-American guard Kyle Macy missed a 17-foot jumpshot with five seconds left. The ball caromed to the free throw line, where Kentucky's Dirk Minniefield launched a desperation shot that fell short. Kentucky's Derrick Hord was unable to tap home the follow-up shot before the horn sounded.

Optimistic Meredith leads the attack

by Michael Previte
Sports Writer

He is the captain of a ship that has sailed many turbulent waters in the 1979-80 hockey season. A quiet, hard-working player who exemplifies leadership through example both on and off the ice. Through four seasons at Notre Dame, he has amassed an amazing total of 101 goals as a steady dependable right winger who can be counted on to score in clutch situations.

Greg Meredith has enjoyed his four years at Notre Dame. Avid Irish fans knew there was something special about the Toronto native when he notched 23 goals in his rookie season of 1976-77.

The records, of course, speak for themselves. As the Irish approach this weekend's semifinal playoff series at Grand Forks, N.D. (that's North Dakota for all you diehard domers,) Greg is only two goals away from tying Eddie Bumbacco's all-time Irish scoring record of 103 tallies set in 1974.

Being the articulate, modest team leader that he is, Meredith shunned all talk of goals, scoring records or personal thrills. He spoke of a close knit team operating under adversity due to injury. He candidly stated what it would take to defeat the Fighting Sioux.

"... If everyone plays as well as they are capable of playing, I think we have enough to stay with them."

"It's very difficult to say," said the husky captain. "We'll need one of our top efforts of the year. They are very physical so the games will be tough." But, he adds wryly, "... If everyone plays as well as they are capable of playing, I think we have enough to stay with them."

Of course, Greg would like nothing better than to see the team pull together and knock off a heavily favored home team, as they did in December. It was then that the squad was so decimated by injury that Marcus Welby would have been helpless. Alas, all the Irish did was visit the Big Red (Ivy League) Machine at Cornell and sweep the weekend series. "My proudest moment in a Notre Dame uniform," Meredith adds.

In reflecting on his four seasons as a member of the Notre Dame community, number six stresses his involvement as a student first and hockey player second. Such a philosophy made him a finalist candidate for a Rhodes scholarship earlier this year.

Meredith calls this hockey team "something unique." "The caliber of people we have on our team all have the same goal-excellence in athletics and education. This gives us a healthier sort of atmosphere. The camaraderie is always there."

As top fencer

Carney relies on intellect, emotion

by Kelly Sullivan
Sports Writer

A wise man once said that success in athletics is only 10 percent physical and 90 percent mental. One athlete who swears by this "mind over matter" philosophy is Notre Dame fencer Dodee Carney.

One might gather from Carney's accomplishments that she is a natural born athlete. She ranks number one on the women's team, sports a 31-8 record, and serves as the squad's captain. Carney, who transferred to ND after two years at the University of Virginia, has qualified for the women's nationals every one of her four years as a college fencer, and will lead the Irish when they compete for the national championship March 27-29.

But the senior from Sanford, North Carolina, has relied on intellect and emotion to obtain these statistics. Carney admits that she has little natural ability. In high school, athletics had been a way of life for her, but athletic success had not.

"I was a really poor volleyball player and a last place swimmer," she says. "I've always thought of myself as really
