Lewis accuses Registrar of hampering vote drive

Laura Larimore
Senior Staff Reporter

As the May 6 Indiana primary nears, County Registrar Coreen Wroblewski continues to make student voter registration as "difficult as possible," according to Paul Lewis, executive coordinator and head of the campus voter registration drive. At present, the effort has signed approximately 170 voters of an initial goal of 2500.

After requesting 30 authorized deputy registers and 1500 registration forms, the Notre Dame group received 4 deputies and 100 forms. This shortage has seriously hampered registration efforts, Lewis said. An additional problem is the Registrar's stipulation that to obtain one other form, one must be turned in.

"We wanted to blitz the campus, in the dorms and dining halls," Lewis explained. "But these problems have made it virtually impractical. If we started in the dining hall at 5:00 we'd have to stop at 5:15 when we ran out of forms," he continued.

The registration drive began last Wednesday on the campus. The group has worked one day in the dining hall, Lewis said.

Lewis stressed that a student can temporarily resign his home state registration in order to register in Indiana. "He could reregister at home this summer, in time for the November election," he said.

Lewis cited evidence from Wroblewski that other minority groups in South Bend are more fairly treated. The black community has 27 deputies and the League of Women Voters was allotted 400 registration forms, he reported.

Wroblewski justified the discrepancy with several reasons. The printer of the forms failed to meet the requisition by the county, she told Lewis.

As a second reason, the Registrar challenged student residency. "Why does she allow any student registration at all if she believes it's illegal?" Lewis responded. According to Richard L. Hill, City Attorney, Notre Dame residents do meet residency requirements.

Wroblewski also maintained her office is understaffed. The student group is trying to be as helpful as possible with registration procedures, Lewis defended.

House works on balanced budget

WASHINGTON (AP)—The House Budget Committee got to work yesterday on a 1981 federal budget proposal that includes a $1.4 billion surplus and tax reductions opposed by the Carter Administration at this stage of the war on inflation.

Rep. Robert N. Giaino, D-Conn., chairman of the House budget panel, presented the proposal with a declaration that rising inflation "makes a balanced budget imperative."

Giaino's proposal, which will serve as the framework for House budget action, calls for $15.9 billion in new spending cuts, including an end to Saturday mail deliveries and the state share of federal revenue sharing.

In an inflation-fighting move last Friday, President Carter announced a revised version of his spending plan for fiscal year 1981. He called for $13 billion in spending cuts to balance the budget, including a $1.7 billion reduction in the general revenue-sharing program that would eliminate aid to states.

Administration officials said the president has yet to make final decisions on most of the cuts.

Meanwhile, House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass., and about a dozen Democratic members of the House Appropriations Committee met Wednesday with Carter to discuss the processing of his spending plan.

The committee chairman, Rep. Jamie I. Whitten, D-Miss., later told reporters the group urged the president to set broad spending targets and permit appropriations subcommittees to decide the details.

Asked whether Carter had agreed, Whitten said, "You

McCambridge attacks alcohol abuses

by Earl Rix

Academy award winning actress and confessed alcoholic Mercedes McCambridge challenged a small but entranced audience in an emotional attack on contemporary attitudes concerning alcohol and alcohol abuse last night in the library auditorium.

McCambridge blasted those who tolerate alcohol abuse in their families and among their friends. "Nobody becomes an alcoholic without the consent of the family or the employer. To the degree that you tolerate intolerable behavior, you are responsible for it."

She defined alcoholism as a disease and cited medical research supporting biochemical predisposition to alcoholism. "I personally believe that it is largely inherited," McCambridge said.

A girl in the audience did not initially accept the concept of biological causation and described a friend who "drinks too much because she is lonely."

"What is important is why you drink and what it does to you," McCambridge responded. An alcoholic is a person who drinks against his or her best interest. To a shocked audience, McCambridge said that the girl who drank to relieve her loneliness was indeed an alcoholic. She then accused the audience of "doing a dance around the word 'alcoholic.' It makes us think about how far we have gone in reducing the stigma," she said. The questioner was speechless.

In criticizing the stigma attached to alcoholism, McCambridge described the acknowledgement of her alcoholism before the Senate in an attempt to call attention to the disease as "the roughest morning of my life. My disease is as legal as diabetes, under the law. Alcoholism is the only disease where the victim is held responsible if the treatment fails. You will feel sorry for the diabetic and you will throw the alcoholic in the drunk tank," she charged.

"We are eminently salvageable, and well worth the while," McCambridge said about alcoholics. She challenged the audience to confront their alcoholic friend and to "love that person enough to have him hate you for a while."

In response to a comment that most people only drink to get comfortable, McCambridge emphasized that "alcoholics start drinking for the same reasons everyone else does. It made me comfortable for a while - it is making you comfortable for a while, but one out of eight of you is on your way to hell!"

At the conclusion of her presentation, McCambridge received a standing ovation from the crowd. In addition to her accomplishment on Broadway, film, radio, and television, McCambridge was formerly the honorary chairman of the National Council on Alcoholism and is currently president of the Livengrin Foundation Inc., a highly successful alcoholism treatment society, in addition to her many other contributions and citations for her work on alcohol abuse. The lecture was co-sponsored by student government, the student union and psychological services.

Talks with Carter

Begin, Sadat to visit Washington

WASHINGTON (AP)—Prime Minister Menachem Begin of Israel and President Anwar Sadat of Egypt will visit Washington for separate talks with President Carter in April, White House officials announced yesterday.

White House press secretary Jody Powell, announcing the new move in the bogged-down talks over Palestinian autonomy, said the dates for the meetings had not been set.

Powell said the Israeli and Egyptian leaders would visit Washington "to review the progress and pace of autonomy negotiations for the West Bank and Gaza."

"The negotiations are being conducted in accordance with the principles of the Camp David accord," which the three leaders signed in September 1978, Powell said.

The agreements reached between the United States, Israel and Egypt provided for negotiations to settle the question of Palestinian autonomy on the West Bank of the Jordan River and the Gaza Strip, Arab territories occupied by Israel following the 1967 Middle East war.

Israel, Egypt and the United States have agreed to accelerate the pace of the negotiations on self-rule for the 1.2 million Palestinians of the occupied West Bank of the Jordan River and Gaza Strip. But it appears doubtful agreement will be reached by the May 26 deadline spelled out in the Camp David accords.

Begin said Tuesday the talks were stalled on three Egyptian demands - that Jerusalem Arabs participate in Palestinian elections, that the Palestinian government include legislative as well as executive powers, and that Israeli security arrangements be a subject for agreement by the Palestinians.

In 1978, Carter closeted the two Mideast leaders at Camp David for 13 days until they agreed on two framework agreements that were honed into the formal peace treaty six months later.

Assailant seriously wounds former Evansville mayor

EVANSVILLE Ind. (AP) - Former Mayor Russell G. Lloyd, a 47-year-old attorney and father of six, was gunned down in the living room of his home yesterday and doctors said his chances of survival were "very minimal." A 36-year-old woman seen driving away from the house in a pickup truck was arrested about an hour later.

Sculptor demonstrates mettle in first-ever bronzed elephant

OL PEJTH RANCH, Kenya (AP) - New York sculptor Mihail, trying to make art history as the first to cast a live elephant in bronze, found a big bull in the bush yesterday, had drugged and made a mold from life as the sedated pachyderm lay amid thorn trees on this game preserve. "It's easy. I feel very relaxed," the sculptor said as he stood on the elephant's ear during the two-hour moldmaking process, after which the groggy animal wandered back into the wilderness. It was one of Kenya's most bizarre wildlife expeditions, but one the sculptor hopes will serve a good cause.

Right to Life stresses education

by Tim Vercellotti

One of the main objectives of the Notre Dame/Saint Mary's Right to Life group is the education of students on the abortion issue. This pro-life organization carried its campaign one step further by presenting a program entitled "A Seminar of Abortion" last night in Walsh Hall.

Mary Anne Hughes, the coordinator of the group, narrated a slide presentation based on the work of Dr. and Mrs. Jack Willke, who are leaders in the fight for a human life amendment.

The seminar treated two questions, one dealing with the point at which life begins, the other concerning the protection of human life.

Hughes discussed the development of the fetus, mentioning the existence of bodily functions such as breathing and swallowing at eleven weeks after conception, the presence of an audible heartbeat at eight weeks, and the fact that brain waves can be measured as early as six weeks into the pregnancy. Hughes stated that an embryo is human at an even earlier stage. "I conclude that life begins at fertilization," Hughes said.

As part of the program, Hughes challenged some of the commonly held ideas concerning abortion. Hughes said that the question of viability, the child's ability to live outside the womb, was an improper basis for deciding the humanity of a fetus. She explained that advances in technology in the field of premature births are continually pushing back the time of viability.

Hughes also pointed out that the abortion conflict is not rooted only in religious beliefs; it is also a scientific and biological issue.

Another argument that Hughes addressed was the question of whether or not a fetus is conscious of itself. Hughes asked the audience to consider the fact that comatose people may not be aware of themselves, yet they are not put to death.

Unwanted children were also brought into question. "Must this be restricted to babies?"

Rogers to emphasize values of poetry in talk tonight

Professor Stephan Rogers will discuss the question "What if Education Were Like Poetry?" tonight at 8 in the library lounge.

Rogers is a graduate of Notre Dame's Great Books program, the General Program of Liberal Studies in which he currently holds a professorship. He did his graduate study as a Danforth fellow at Harvard University from which he took a Ph.D.

in comparative literature. He has authored a book, Classical Greece and The Poetry of Chenier, Shelley and Leopardi which appeared in 1974. He has written numerous articles encompassing such topics as myth, literature and liberal education.

Recently, Rogers has been engaged in experimental teaching and research along with Professor Esmee Bellalta of Notre Dame's Department of Architecture to provide new design criteria for the special pedagogical needs of the blind.

In his February lecture on "Poetry and the Kinds of Truth," Rogers rejected the positions of those who emphasize that poetry "corrupts the spirit" and "perverts the mind" or that poetry, at best, is decoration or mere entertainment.

"If poetry is a way to the possession of truth, and if the possession of truth is knowledge, then poetry is a way of knowing," he said. "It follows that poets and teachers of this art have a place at the modern university, though, the investigators of knowledge have shifted their attention away from those fields of the imaginative reason where the Psalmist was the voice of God, and Homer was the educator of Hellas."

Professors comment on recent primary losses

by Michael Mader
Staff Reporter

Although Ted Kennedy and George Bush will continue with their presidential campaigns after heavy losses in the Illinois primary Tuesday, the two candidates have little chance of winning their respective party's conventions, two government professors said yesterday.

'It looks like Kennedy's dead.'

"It looks like Kennedy's dead," said Peri Arnold, associate professor of government.

"It obviously hurts his campaign," commented John Roos, also an associate professor in the department.

"Bush's chances are now 300 to 1. He will fade out," Roos observed about the campaign of the former CIA director. "Bush is dead. It is hard to prepare a case that he is not," Arnold echoed. "Bush will continue. He is a very tenacious, unemployed politician," Arnold added.

Ronald Reagan's twelve point win over John Anderson, however, is seen as damaging but not as an end to Anderson's campaign hopes. The loss in Illinois means that Anderson "simply goes from a 50-1 shot to a 70-1 shot," Roos wagered, while adding, "Reagan becomes an almost overwhelming favorite to win the Republican nomination."

A large amount of Anderson's vote was attributed to crossover voting by Democrats and Independents. "The Illinois defeat reminds us that he is potent, but does not have much clout within the Republican party," Arnold said. Arnold emphasized that Illinois should not be considered Anderson's home state, or one which he should have won. Anderson is not well known outside of his district in Illinois, according to Arnold. However, Arnold expressed surprise that Anderson did not win and in fact lost by twelve points.

With the decline of Anderson, Bush, and Kennedy, the Presidential race seems to be pointing to a Reagan-Carter matchup. Both Roos and Arnold said Carter has a better chance in such a matchup. "Carter has the least chance of losing," Roos said, while explaining that neither candidate will enjoy much popularity. "It will be an apathetic election, with voters not being permanently satisfied with their choices," Roos predicted.

"I'd say that without the economy as an issue, Carter is a shoo-in," Arnold said. He cautioned, however, that "the economy is a wild-card. If it blows up, any Republican could get elected." The economy could make "a scenario which makes Reagan strong and Carter very weak."

The two government professors think that Kennedy will not fare well in the New York primary, which takes place next week. "The Illinois loss hurts his chances," Roos commented. Roos said that the lawmakers in the state will be more supportive of Carter, mainly because it will be to their advantage to support the apparent winner. "He will get killed in New York," Arnold foresees. Arnold sees the Jewish vote as volatile and says that Kennedy might swing it to his advantage, but "he is not going to win," Arnold said.

The string of Carter victories has different meanings to the professors. "If there is one main factor to be singled out, it is that the Democrats don't like Kennedy," Roos stated. Arnold agrees that "Kennedy is a bad candidate for the moment," but maintains that Carter's victories say nothing about Democrats. With his overwhelming victories, Carter appears to be a candidate of strength. "His strength is just a mirage. His victories over Kennedy are like beating up a scarecrow," Arnold said.

Nuclear casualty

TMI may not reopen

Harrisburg, PA (AP) - It's likely the Three Mile Island nuclear plant may never reopen because of mounting expenses and public pressure, an electrical engineer told the Public Utility Commission yesterday.

Dr. Robert Parente is a consultant with Theodore Barry and Associates, which the PUC hired to do a 10 month audit of General Public Utilities. GPU owns the Three Mile Island nuclear plant, site of the nation's worst commercial nuclear power accident last March.

Parente said GPU has underestimated the cost of cleaning up the reactor damaged last March. He said it could cost well over $1 billion to clean up and restore the crippled unit.

He emphasized that no one has been inside the reactor building yet so it's been impossible to assess the damage.

"Within the limitations of that," he said, "in my view the most likely outcome is for it never to return to service but for it to be decommissioned."

Parente said the unit, known as TMI-2, might be able to resume operations if "everything broke right" and there were no regulatory delays, but he said that possibility is "totally unlikely."

He is similarly pessimistic about the reopening of TMI-1, an undamaged reactor that has been idle since the accident pending federal safety hearings.

Soviet music grows soft

The stirring songs that once glorified the toil of Soviet workers - a sort of music-to-build-locomotives-by - are being pushed aside by new sounds of soft rock and pop.

The new tunes mark a swing in musical tastes that has some ideological officials worried. A generation ago, famous patriotic melodies blared out with bugles, drums and massed choirs were leading instruments of Soviet propaganda for the masses.

The strident "Song of the Motherland," the triumphant "Boldly Forward, Comrades" and a host of others boomed from factory loudspeakers. They typified the Soviet Union's early years and the battles of World War II.

The old songs have held on to some popularity and are still regulars on radio and television. But new composers are steadily cutting away at the brass band tradition, writing instead gently lyrical songs, even for patriotic themes.

And many new songs have nothing ideological about them at all.

The national trade union paper, Trud, complained in a recent editorial that the national song repertoire has turned increasingly to "songs of love, modern versions of gypsy romances and light western tunes."

The top songs in Moscow at the moment include "Summer Night," a soft rock love song; the lyrical "Looking for you," on a similar theme by top Soviet singer Alla Pugacheva, and "Summer Rains," a love song by Mark Minkov.

Miss Pugacheva's lusty singing covers a variety of themes, from love to the problems of women in modern society to the effect of stardom on her own life.

Revivals of traditional Russian folk songs are popular, too, as well as rock and pop from East European countries. Authorities seem to have made their peace with rock as a genre, including Western tunes, which regularly turn up on state radio.

But authorities still call for more songs on "worthy" and "significant" themes.

One modern pop group that has received official praise is the group Pesnyari, one of whose members, Leonid Bortkevich, is married to former Soviet gymnastics star Olga Korbut.

The group has a lyrical song extolling the western Soviet republic of Byelorussia among its hits.

Another patriotic number, the rock song "My Address is the Soviet Union" by the group Samotsvety, is a dancing hit at Soviet youth cafes.

The Moscow Summer Olympics, too, have found their way into pop music. One contemporary composer in good standing is David Tukmanov, who has a hit called "Olympiad-80." It includes the line, "Welcome to the Moscow Olympics, welcome to Beautiful Moscow."

Despite such songs, Trud complained that many other composers do nothing to bring listeners a Communist spirit, "not to mention any cultivation of high aesthetic tastes."

The same issues came up last November at a nationwide conference of the Union of Composers. A Moscow composer, Eduard Kolmanovsk said songs with "deep, significant themes were being forced into the background by light, Western-style tunes."

Tikhon Khrennikov, the long time chief of the Composers Union, added that "ideological opponents" of the Soviet Union were trying to make the work of a "sensation-loving" Soviet musicians appear to be a new wave in all Soviet music.

Young Soviet musicians are full of experiments with advanced jazz, electronic music and new forms of rock. But patriotic music in the very oldest Soviet style - that of the 1920s and 1930s - is still being composed.

"Day of Victory," a stirring song about World War II, composed in 1975 and recorded in a rich baritone with orchestra accompaniment, has become a modern day classic.

The old favorites are an inseparable part of Soviet history.

One of the most famous, the 1936, "Song of the Motherland" with music by the late Issak Dunaevsky, includes such lines as "From Moscow clear across the nation, from the southern mountains to the northern sea, a citizen can stride like the owner of his great unlimited country."

Soviet music is still supposed to serve the state and the Communist Party. But its tone is softer now than the blaring hymns to socialism of the past.

Leboyer method of childbirth reduces labor

BOSTON (AP) - One method of childbirth tries to soften the shock of entering the world by delivering babies in a hushed, darkened room and bathing them gently in warm water. But a study shows those children are no happier or healthier than those born by more conventional means.

The Leboyer approach to childbirth has been adopted by many hospitals since it was proposed five years ago by Dr. Frederick Leboyer in his book "Birth Without Violence."

The new study, conducted at McMaster University Medical Centre in Hamilton, Ontario, compared 28 infants delivered by the Leboyer method with 26 who began life with "gentle but conventional" deliveries.

After eight months, there was no difference between the two groups of children, the researchers reported.

The study was directed by Nancy M. Nelson, an epidemiologist, and was published in Thursday's issue of the New England Journal of Medicine.

The Leboyer babies were delivered in a hushed labor room lit only by a single gooseneck lamp.

They were then placed on their mothers' abdomens and gently massaged. Instead of cutting their umbilical cords at once, doctors left the babies attached to their mothers for three minutes. Then their fathers placed them in warm baths.

"Birth is a tidal wave of sensation, surpassing anything we can imagine," Leboyer wrote in his book. He theorized a gentle transition from the womb to the world would produce healthier babies.

The Canadian doctors compared the health, irritability and responsiveness of the two groups of babies during the first hour of life. Then they repeated the exams after a day, three days and eight months. At the same time, they questioned the mothers about their experiences.

"Our results suggest that the Leboyer procedure has no advantage over a gentle, conventional delivery in influencing infant and maternal outcomes," they concluded.

The Canadian doctors noted some obstetricians do not want to use the Leboyer method because they object to "delivering in the dark, delaying the cutting of the cord and bathing the baby." But they said their study shows the procedure does not increase the risk for either the mother or the baby.

The study also found women who delivered by the Leboyer method spent less time in labor. For the Leboyer women, the first stage of labor - the time from the first contraction until the cervix is fully dilated - lasted an average of seven hours. It was twice as long for the women who gave conventional births, but the doctors attributed this difference to psychological factors.

The researchers reported the Leboyer method for many women raised "the expectation of a later positive experience," making it apparent to the doctors that "psychological factors influence the physical progress of labor."

Carter fails to halt inflation

WASHINGTON (AP) - Since taking office in 1977, President Carter has thrown everything but a balanced budget, wage and price controls and the kitchen sink at inflation - all without success.

Now he is trying a balanced budget, which leaves wage and price controls and the kitchen sink in reserve. He has said he will not use controls.

The latest Carter anti-inflation program, announced last Friday, is the fourth in the past three years. Although Carter has said each program should help, inflation has progressively worsened.

As measured by the Consumer Price Index, inflation was 4.8 percent in 1976, the year before Carter took office. It was 13.3 percent last year, and prices have increased at an annual rate of 18 percent so far in 1980.

Here's a look at how Carter has tried to cope with inflation since he has been in office and the results:

1976 Campaign

-During the campaign, Carter said Congress should approve standby authority for the president to impose wage and price controls. He also advocated requiring big businesses and labor to notify the government in advance of price and wage increases. However, he dropped both of these ideas soon after taking office. With inflation at 4.8 percent, he said his first priority would be full employment.

Jan. 31, 1977

-Carter proposed a $31 billion economic stimulus program that included major tax reductions and a $50 tax rebate for Americans--aimed at reducing unemployment--while committing himself to a balanced 1981 budget to help control inflation. "This administration will never let its guard down against inflation, which robs us all," he said. His goal was to reduce inflation to below 4 percent within two years.

April 15, 1977

-Inflation was worsening and Carter announced his first anti-inflation program that included a labor-business team to co-operate in restraining inflation, plus a hospital cost containment program and pledged anew to balance the 1981 budget. At the same time, he scrapped his tax rebate plan as "a mistake." Inflation was in the 5 percent to 6 percent range. Carter's new goal was to reduce inflation to 4 percent by the end of 1979.

Jan. 20, 1978

-Inflation was 6.8 percent in 1977, and Carter announced his second anti-inflation program that called on business and labor to accept price and wage increases "significantly less" than the average of the past two years. Inflation and unemployment need to be battled "simultaneously," Carter said. He abandoned his balanced budget target for 1981. He forecast a 6.1 inflation rate for 1978.

April 11, 1978

-In another inflation speech, Carter repeated his call for business and labor to restrain wages and prices, proposed a 5.5 percent cap on pay hikes for government white-collar workers, and named Robert Strauss as his special anti-inflation adviser. He again ruled out controls and higher unemployment as a solution to rising prices. Inflation appeared headed for 7 percent for the year.

Oct. 24, 1978

-Carter unveiled his third program, including voluntary wage and price guidelines and a wage insurance plan to insure workers against losses from inflation in return for their cooperation. He hoped to reduce inflation to between 6 percent and 6.5 percent in 1969, down from an expected 8 percent in 1978. He named Alfred Kahn to succeed Strauss.

Nov. 1, 1978

-Worried about the effect of inflation on the dollar, the administration and the Federal Reserve Board announced a dollar-support operation that included a major increase in interest rates. It appeared the board would spearhead the struggle against inflation by pushing interest rates to record heights.

Jan. 23, 1979

-Inflation was 9 percent in 1978, and Carter called in his State of the Union address for redoubled efforts, although he said "It is a myth that we must choose endlessly between inflation and recession." However, he said the unemployment rate then about 5.8 percent, probably was too low for a successful struggle against inflation.

Sept. 28, 1979

-Carter announced an accord with the AFL-CIO to involve organized labor with his anti-inflation effort. A government pay advisory council with business and labor participation was established.

Oct. 9, 1979

-Carter vowed to support new moves by the Federal Reserve Board to increase interest rates. He said he would do "whatever it takes" to control inflation.

Jan. 28, 1980

-Inflation hit 13.3 percent in 1979 and the administration forecast 10.4 percent in 1980. Carter unveiled his 1981 budget, containing a deficit of $15.8 billion, but said it "ensures that the federal budget will not be an inflationary force in the economy." For the first time, a presidential budget officially predicted a recession.

March 15, 1980

-In an unprecedented reversal, Carter scrapped his January budget and said he is developing a new one that provides a budget surplus of as much as $13 billion for 1981. He imposed controls on credit and a fee on imported oil that will raise the price of gasoline by 10 cents per gallon. The administration now says inflation will be just under 12 percent in 1980. A recession is still in the forecast.

Reagan's successes combine conservatives, other groups

NEW YORK (AP) - Ronald Reagan has swept to victory in the Republican primaries by putting the votes of moderates, independents and middle-income voters together with his hardcore support among the conservative GOP rank-and-file, Associated Press-NBC news polls say.

Neither Rep. John Anderson nor George Bush has been able to build sufficient support among those groups that hold the key to any possible GOP victory in the general election to defeat Reagan consistently.

Among the Democrats, the polls say Sen. Edward M. Kennedy is right that President Carter's policies are not getting the endorsement of the voters in the primaries. But while the voters may not agree with Carter's policies, they are clearly rejecting Kennedy in favor of the incumbent.

In Illinois, the core of Reagan's support came from conservatives, who gave 66 percent of their ballots to the former California Governor, the AP-NBC News Poll of GOP voters on Tuesday found. That was about the same level of support Reagan got from conservatives in earlier primaries, according to earlier AP-NBC News voter polls.

But Reagan added the votes of others to that core.

In Illinois, he took 41 percent of the moderate votes, while Anderson got 45 percent.

Only in Massachusetts, where Reagan was a close third to Anderson and Bush, did his support among this group dip below the Illinois level. He got only 19 percent of the moderate vote in the Bay State.

Reagan has also managed to blunt Anderson's drive for the votes of independent voters, who now make up nearly two out of ten Americans. In many cases, they can vote in partisan primaries.

Anderson aimed to build large margins among independents to offset Reagan's edge among conservatives.

But in Illinois, Reagan took 40 percent of the independent vote, while Anderson took 47 percent. Bush got only 9 percent.

That's about as well as Reagan did among independents in New Hampshire and not quite as well as he did in three Southern primaries.

Again, only in Massachusetts did Reagan do poorly among independents, getting only 19 percent of their vote to 46 percent for Anderson and 26 percent for Bush.

Middle-income voters are critical to any general election campaign. And Reagan has been doing very well among that group in the GOP primaries.

Reagan got the support of 51 percent of those with incomes from $15,000 to $35,000 a year in Illinois, while Anderson got 36 percent of their votes. Bush got 10 percent.

'Disturbing price increases'

Carter requests price reports

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Carter administration's anti-inflation agency announced Tuesday, it is asking special price reports from 250 businesses, including oil companies, "because of disturbing price increases" in recent months.

The government announced separately that Americans' personal income increased in February by only $6.9 billion, or 0.3 percent, the smallest amount in more than four years.

Consumer spending also slowed sharply during the month, an indication that consumers may be reaching the limit of their purchasing power in the face of high inflation and a sluggish economic growth.

In its announcement, the Council on Wage and Price Stability said it is seeking special price information from 150 oil companies and 100 other businesses, including those in air transportation, paper, cement, hotels, food processing, retailing and machinery.

A spokesman, Mike Gelb, said there have been "disturbing price increases" in these industries as reflected in the government's index of wholesale prices. The special price reports will help the council determine whether the increases have been in violation of the administration's voluntary price guideline.

Inflation worsened sharply in recent months, with consumer prices rising an annual rate of 18 percent and wholesale prices up at a 20 percent rate.

The administration's latest inflation forecast for 1980 is an overall increase in consumer prices of about 12 percent, and that presupposes a substantial easing of inflation after mid-year.

The price information the council is requesting is for the three-month period ending in January. It said the information is due in 10 days.

While the council said it is requesting information from the 250 companies, which it did not name, it said it is ordering price reports from some petroleum companies that failed to comply with previous requests. It did not name these companies, either.

The council has authority to require price information, by court subpoena if necessary, but lacks authority to order price changes even where it considers prices to be unjustified.

The council also announced that it is requiring all companies with annual sales in excess of $100 million to file regular price reports by May 15, a total of 2,500 companies.

President Carter announced on Friday that as part of the administration's stepped-up effort to control inflation, the council will extend its price monitoring to companies with sales in excess of $100 million companies.

Previously, only companies with sales of at least $250 million had been required to file regular price reports.

Meanwhile, the effort by the government to slow the economy through higher interest rates was reflected in a slowdown in consumer spending activity in February, Commerce Department figures showed.

Hughes asked. She pointed out that if lack of love was the case, then the elderly may also be in danger.

During the program, as pictures of babies in various stages of development were flashed on the screen, Hughes continually challenged the audience to ask themselves "Is this a human life?"

Hughes called the question of protection of unborn children a civil rights issue. She described abortion as "the big killing the small," and "the strong killing the weak." As a result of abortion, according to Hughes, 1.4 million babies died in 1978, more than the total U.S. casualties for the Civil War, the two World Wars, and the conflict in Korea and Vietnam combined.

Hughes ended the presentation by saying that more education is needed on the subject of abortion before people can make decisions concerning the issue. She also pointed out that a human life amendment is possible, but she led the road to such a law "a long, hard struggle."

The last date of deputized registration is Friday, after which students will have to go downtown to the city/county building. "If necessary, we will sponsor some sort of mass transportation early next week," Lewis stated.

In a related area, off-campus students are eligible to vote in city elections, unlike on-campus residents who may only vote in county and state contests.

"With a population of over 2000 undergraduate and graduate students, the off-campus students could have a substantial impact in a city election," said Shannon Neville, outgoing off-campus commissioner.

Mark Kelley, the new OC commissioner concurred with Neville. He said he believed a drive for voter registration off-campus would be successful.

"If we could get 2000 people to vote, we could raise the level of citizenry in student neighborhoods," Kelley commented. He said he hoped the students would be less apathetic about a city election than they are about student elections. "We wouldn't be just students, we would be city residents," he added.

Kelley also said that tentative plans to go into the predominantly student apartment complexes, such as the Notre Dame and Campus Views Apartments to register voters were being discussed.

Any student wishing to register may contact Paul Lewis, Sean Heffernan, or Greg Anselmi, authorized deputies.

don't ask for flat commitment from the president."

Meanwhile, Senate Democratic Leader Robert C. Byrd urged Carter to submit his proposed list of cuts without further delay. The Senate Budget Committee is expected to begin work on its spending plan before the end of the month.

The process of arriving at a final budget has been complicated this year. After January's inflation rate was pegged at an 18 percent annual rate, Carter repudiated his original spending plan, which called for a $15.8 billion deficit, and said he would submit a balanced budget--the first for the federal government in 12 years.

There were more signs of a worsening economic picture yesterday. Despite soaring oil industry profits, the overall performance of U.S. businesses weakened in the last quarter of 1979 and analysts say the pattern will continue.

At a news conference yesterday, Giaino said his budget plan, which includes $15.9 billion in new spending cuts, represents "some painful choices (that) will require sacrifice from millions of Americans. But there is no painless way to balance the budget."

Mad Love

Linda Ronstadt (Asylum)

Don't expect any more soft country-rock albums from the alluring chanteuse, Linda Ronstadt. After riding upon a crest of success for so long, she has moved her slick Los Angeles/Eagles sound towards different stomping grounds: New Wave.

On Mad Love, Ronstadt makes some bold explorations of the rougher rock sound, and the end result is sometimes disastrous, and sometimes marvelous. Ronstadt knows this could be a dangerous experiment, since it may alienate devoted fans more accustomed to her softer style. In a recent national interview, she said:

"I don't know how this album will sell. I'm sure I'll be attacked: 'Linda's sold out, trying to be trendy, gotten away from her roots.' Well, I can't worry about what the critics say, but you have to admire her confidence and willingness to try new things."

How does the new Linda sound? Surprisingly not much different. Peter Asher, slick producer par excellence, and most of the usual L.A. "Section" session musicians are back. Ronstadt hasn't abandoned the mellower style; she has tried to expand and build upon it. When she remembers where she came from, the harder Ronstadt is intriguing and enjoyable. When she crosses the threshold into punk, she is terrible. Period.

The rockier sound is directly attributable to Mark Goldenberg and Ron Glaub, guitarist and bassist of the New Wave group, The Cretones. Goldenberg and Elvis Costello (who has just released another fine New Wave LP of his own, Get Happy!) wrote most of the songs.

The successful songs are "How Do I Make You," "I Can't Let Go," and "Justine." On all, Linda keeps the harder guitar riffs perfectly in balance with her milder harmonious style. The end result is gutsy, snappy, catchy, and sexy, although she occasionally slips into a Deborah Harry (from Blondie) impersonation. Fortunately, Ronstadt has enough vocal power to avoid Harry's sweetly artificial notes.

The best tunes, however, are the Elvis Costello creations, "Party Girl," "Girls Talk," and "Talking in the Dark." Costello has an affinity for inspiring lyrical entendres and hypnotic rhapsodic melodies of such range that only Ronstadt can rise to the challenge and fill the measures with any real depth.

The bad songs are painful to hear, at best. One cannot help but wince when Ronstadt forgets her gift for healthy melody and speaks the lyrics in a pseudo-English punky accent on "Cost of Love." On "Hurt So Bad," Linda tries to blend country sentimentality and New Wave anger in an emotive, pained vocal that pronounces each syl-la-ble with condescending grace—a pathetic experiment. The single Neil Young composition, "Look Out for My Love," just doesn't fit on the album at all—Neil does his harder songs much better on Rust Never Sleeps, and Linda does him an injustice here.

Mad Love, in short, is an admirable experiment, though in many respects, a failure. If Linda can remember to keep her glorious gift for accurate tonality and the energy of New Wave in balance, then she provides hard rock with some much needed natural melody. Linda's strength is that she can sing. If she could do this consistently in a New Wave format, she'd have a milestone.

End of the Century The Ramones (Sire)

Gabba gabba hey!

Gee whiz, what else can I say except that the best darn rock band in the world has just released a swell album destined to take its place alongside such rock classics as Cheap Trick's In Color and either volume of Abba's Greatest Hits. Yet unlike these albums, the Ramones' End of the Century surpassed them with a much more intense emotion and a greater social significance.

Now, suppose that you were to approach me today and say, "Hey, Mike! I've got a challenging philosophical problem from you. Describe the Ramones in just one word." Confident of my great knowledge, I cockily reply, "Fun!" Yes, fun. The Ramones embody the true spirit of rock 'n' roll. One can not help but be caught up in their infectious rhythms. Everyone wants to do the "Blitzkrieg Bop," don't they? There is no such thing as a depressing Ramones song. When they want to address topics of great social significance, they simply adopt a light-hearted view of the subject. For example, take note of the treatment of child abuse in "Beat on the Brat." Yet, they don't laugh. They maintain a certain element of seriousness and this is part of their charm. I often wonder how these guys dressed in black leather jackets, examples of virility ad infinitum, can be so serious about the nonsensical stuff they sing. But how can anyone keep a straight face listening to Joey croon "Baby, I Love You," while looking at his cover picture at the same time.

Phil Spector contributes his production techniques on End of the Century and this adds to the fun of this album. The bells in the background of "I Can't Make it on Time" seem ludicrous when associated with Johnny's bludgeoning guitar. Once again, the Ramones lighten their message and make us laugh.

The significance of this album will probably never be measured. The Ramones tackle such pressing problems as mercenaries, insurance policies, groupies, and what sights to see when touring a Communist country. And speaking of touring, there's even a song about roadies called "Danny Says." It makes Jackson Browne look like a wimp.

The Ramones' End of the Century is no disappointment to the millions of Ramones fans the world over who expect great rock 'n' roll from them. If you let me down and don't run out and buy this album immediately I'll probably lose my sanity (lose it?) and do something irrational like go headbanging with Suzy or self-administer a lobotomy. I really like this album. It accurately captured the fun spirit of rock 'n' roll. Just listening to this album makes me wish that I had a driver's license.

Collegiate Jazz Festival Returns

The Notre Dame Collegiate Jazz Festival has over the years blossomed into one of the premier jazz events in the nation, and this year's program promises to continue that tradition. The Festival, now in its twenty-second year, will open on Friday, March 21, at Stepan Center.

Headlining this year's event will be such well-known and respected jazz personalities as Billy Taylor, Herb Ellis, Tony Williams, Zoot Sims, Milt Hinton and Dan Morgenstern. These celebrities will serve as talent judges for the Festival.

Joining these masters at the Festival, the oldest and largest event of its kind in the United States, will be a wide range and variety of highly talented college performers. A total of 15 college jazz groups, from eight states, are scheduled to perform at the Festival, playing every form of jazz from Dixieland to Swing, Be-bop to Fusion.

Taylor, called "Mr. Jazz" by International Musician Magazine, and ranked among the top ten pianists by critics, is not only an extraordinary jazz musician, but also a versatile composer, author, arranger, and conductor. A member of the Board of Directors of the American Society of Composers, Authors, and Publishers (ASCAP), Taylor has added to the musical contributions of the likes of Roy Eldridge, Charlie Parker, and Dizzy Gillespie.

A master guitarist, Herb Ellis has played with many of the greats including Jimmy Dorsey, Ella Fitzgerald, and Oscar Peterson. Joining Ellis and Taylor will be highly acclaimed drummer Tony Williams. Voted 1979 Drummer of the Year in Downbeat Magazine's Reader's Poll, Williams has carved his own niche in the American jazz scene, after getting his start with Miles Davis at age 18. Sought-after saxophone player Zoot Sims has also ranked in Downbeat's poll and is a welcome addition to the 1980 Festival. Morgenstern needs little introduction to jazz lovers. Former editor of Downbeat Magazine, Morgenstern is a highly respected critic and author and is widely recognized as one of the top critical authorities in jazz today.

Bassist Milt Hinton, nicknamed "The Judge," has played and recorded with Cab Calloway, Dizzy Gillespie, Count Basie and Louis Armstrong. He also served as co-chairman of the jazz panel for the national Endowment for the Arts.

The first music session opens Friday evening at 7:30 with a performance by the Notre Dame Big Band. Other groups set to perform Friday include the Ohio State University Octet, The Indiana University Jazz Combo, and ensembles from the Universities of Iowa and Alabama.

At 10:30 p.m., Taylor, Ellis, Hinton, Williams, and two other musicians will take the stage for the "Judges' Jam," one of the high points of the Festival.

Saturday offers both daytime and evening programs. The Purdue University Big Band will open things up at 12:30 p.m., followed by such other respected groups as the Northeastern Illinois University Jazz Ensemble, the Notre Dame Jazz Combo, The Michigan State University Jazz Ensemble, and the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee Big Band.

The third music session will open at 7:30 pm with a performance by the New England Conservatory of Music Jazz Ensemble. Other groups performing Saturday evening will be the University of Iowa Jazz Combo, the Ohio State University Jazz Ensemble, The University of Wisconsin-Madison Combo, and the University of Akron Jazz Ensemble.

Admission prices for the general public are $5.00 for Friday evening program, $2.50 for the Saturday afternoon performance, and $4.00 for the Saturday evening festivities. All-session passes are also available at $8.50 for the general public and $7.50 for Notre Dame-Saint Mary's students.

In retrospect

ND of old boasts married students

Editor's Note: This article is the first part of a two part series about married students at Notre Dame. Today's will include a historical scan of married students life-style just after World War II. Tomorrow's will study contemporary lifestyles of married students at Notre Dame.

By Anne Duffy

The married student population at Notre Dame today is less than three percent of the total student body. Merely a ghost of the number that existed just after World War II. Manifestations of this "golden age" for married students remain: the "Verville" plaque located between the Towers and the Memorial Library, veteran professors and other staff members; student "Notre Dame babies," and Frank Carrico.

Verville was an arrangement of 30 prisoner of war barracks that University and Federal housing authorities had dismantled from a military camp in Missouri and brought to the South Bend campus. There were 117 families in Verville, and each barrack was 20 feet long, 100 feet wide and divided into a kitchen, two bedrooms, a living room and a bath.

There was not much cabinet space and the hot water heater, washer, and dryer (if the students had them) could only fit into the kitchen. Each unit was warmed by a space heater built into the floor of the living room. The rent was not high, just $27 a month. When the University installed outdoor garbage pails, it was raised to $30 a month. When they black-topped the surrounding area because of the great amount of mud (and children), the rent went to $33 a month.

The post-war flood of married veterans applying to Notre Dame with the aid of the GI Bill put pressure on the traditional University policy against admitting married men. In 1946, the dam of administrative resistance shattered and Verville was born.

There were other births and Verville grew. The residents there laughingly referred to it as "the fertile valley" since there were 106 "Notre Dame babies" born there between 1946 and 1947. Furthermore, married students were not allowed housing in Verville without a family.

Doris Bull, the wife of the present director of personnel and resident of Verville for nearly two years, said in a recent interview; "It was a really close-knit community because nobody had much money. It was just a big family and everyone knew they wouldn't be poor forever." She explained that in many cases, forty neighbors would share one car, and during the early days at Verville, one telephone. She proudly added that Fr. Theodore Hesburgh's first assignment at Notre Dame was chaplain of Verville.

Frank Carrico remembers those poignantly close relationships. Frank, 77, has worked with married students at Notre Dame for the past 23 years, having just retired December 1.

In his early years, he worked as a foreman at Studebaker. When he left on sick leave, Father Wilson asked him to supervise maintenance for Verville. "I had done that kind of work before. I'd built houses and had wired," he says and adds: "I came here and liked it and never tried to work anywhere else."

"There were good people--some people you just hated to leave in old Verville. We had some people over there, and the morning they left I didn't even come to work. I didn't want to see them leave," Carrico said. He added that the couples had parties and bridge clubs in the old hall there. The marrieds had more time than couples at Notre Dame do today. Prices were not as high and women did not have to work.

Carrico later worked at the present married student housing locations--University Village and Cripe Street Apartments--for 18 of his 23 years as a Notre Dame employee. He remembers well the day in 1961 when Verville was bulldozed to make room for the Memorial Library; and when the first "Notre Dame baby" returned to Notre Dame as a student in 1968.

Combine jobs, families

Career women adopt flexible lifestyles

by Patty Rydle

Mary Theis, assistant director of counseling and Career Development at Saint Mary's, has 2 children. During her children's younger years, Theis worked part-time. Later she taught at a Montessori school which her children, Chris and Corinna, attended. "Working it all out" depends strongly on her husband's flexible schedule and friends who help out.

Women today do have many viable lifestyle options from which to choose. When planning for the future they must take into account the possibilities and implications of a career, marriage, and children. "Juggling" both a career and a family, however, is no longer fit for only the Superwoman. There isn't any set system to follow, no prototype to pattern oneself after.

Professors and administrators at Notre Dame and Saint Mary's who are also wives and mothers have chosen their various lifestyles and have arranged their lives accordingly. Each of them speaks enthusiastically about her family and her career, and each has a system with their own particular "golden rules" to keep things running smoothly.

It seems the main ingredients are awareness of what one wants, the organization to achieve it, and--very importantly--a cooperative, not merely supportive, husband.

Originally intending to stay home with her children, and later deciding to work, Theis feels there is no loss in learning through experience what is best for you. Some basic rules she lives by include: always giving each child some attention alone, staying open to communication from her children, and honestly discussing their problems and suggestions. Organization, cooperation, and honesty are what keep her "system" working.

A professor of Art at Saint Mary's, Carol Carter has been married 10 years and has a two year old boy, Joseph. For the first 4 months of his life, Joe was cared for by a "grandmotherly figure" who had babysat 80 other children before him. During the summers, Carter was home herself, and later a neighbor helped out. Now Joe is old enough to attend the Early Childhood Development Center at Saint Mary's.

Carter considers her upbringing to be a very traditional one. Education was stressed as necessary to get a good job which would serve only as a "back-up" in case of the death of her husband or divorce.

However, she feels equally weighted in both her career and her family. To handle this she has had to "edit the junk" from her life. Carter feels she has raised a very happy and lucky little boy who "has a mother who can be enthusiastic."

Penny Jameson, associate professor of Psychology, is another Saint Mary's Faculty member with children. She has two boys: Rex, 10, and Matthew, 8. She finds now that as they get older they require more, not less, time. It is a demanding situation which requires a well planned life, discipline, and "quality" time spent with her children.

For her, a career she enjoys and family life balance each other out. Time spent at each helps to keep the other in perspective.

At Notre Dame the percentage of women faculty members is much smaller than that of Saint Mary's and those with children are fewer still. Kathleen Maas Weigert, assistant Dean of the Collegiate Seminar, is one of those few. She is the mother of two girls, Karen, 8, and Sheila, 6.

She returned to part-time work ten days after each birth and has utilized day care centers always. Still, she mentions, she managed to breast feed both children.

One of her cardinal rules is that of restricting business to business hours and reserving the evenings and weekends for her family. Otherwise, she feels work could creep in and take over her life.

She also feels that if a 2-career marriage is to work, the husband must play an equal role in the family life.

All of these women are "educators," but they educate in a sense larger than one restricted to classroom activities. For their students--young women who may one day have to play "superwoman"--they are teaching a valuable lesson: women can be wives, mothers, and professionals. And professionals, whether are men or women, know how to balance all their roles.

Netters take first outdoor match

by Michael Ortman
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame tennis team responded to its first taste of outdoor competition of the season by coasting past visiting Cincinnati yesterday afternoon, 8-1. The win was the third straight for the Irish men and improved their mark to 4-2. The loss was the third in as many days for the Bearcats during a three-match swing through Indiana.

"I think the fact that we got in one day of practice outside (on Tuesday) was a big plus for us," said senior captain Carlton Harris. "Seeing a lob against a blue sky is a lot different than seeing it against the lights inside. This was their first day outside this year."

Harris enjoyed his day in the sun (and a few clouds) as he made short work of Andy Porter, 6-1, 6-2, playing in his number-two singles spot. Harris later teamed with junior Herb Hopwood at number-one doubles to polish off Porter and Keith Winter by an equally lopsided count 6-2, 6-1. Hop-wood breezed through his number-three singles match in beating Gary Samuels, 6-4, 6-2.

All nine matches were decided in straight sets which contributed to a much-welcomed early finish on a brisk afternoon at the Courtney Tennis Center.

The only Cincinnati victory came in the number-one singles matchup between Irish freshman Mark McMahon and Bob Kronauge. The Bearcat captain beat McMahon 6-3, 6-4, but suffered strained knee ligaments in the process and was forced to sit out the doubles competition.

Sophomore Tom Hartzell and Tom Robison also coasted to straight-set victories, posting 6-1, 6-4 and 6-2, 7-5 wins respectively at the five and six singles positions. Hartzell had to rally from a 1-4 deficit in the second set.

Mark Hoyer scored Notre Dame's first team point of the afternoon, doing away with Steve Levine in less than an hour, 6-3, 6-1.

The win had special statistical significance for Irish coach Tom Fallon. It marked his 348th win at Notre Dame, tying him with active fencing mentor Mike DeCicco for Notre Dame's all-time coaching victory mark for all sports. Fallon will shoot for the 350-win plateau this weekend when the Irish play host to Wisconsin-Oshkosh on Friday afternoon at 3 p.m. and Indiana State the next day at 1 p.m. Both matches will be at the Courtney Tennis Center, weather permitting.

Fisher, coming out of the loser's bracket, suffered its initial tourney loss to Pangborn. That game was decided in overtime and was also a one-point affair. Pangborn finished with a perfect 12-0 record, 8-0 in the regular season and 4-0 in the tournament.

... Bathon

and started to pick up some of the fundamentals."

Bathon progressed quickly and earned a monogram in her first season of inter-collegiate competition as reserve with a 6-6 record. Last year as a junior, she ended her second fencing campaign with an 18-14 record as the number three fencer on the team. Despite these successful seasons, Bathon, an intense perfectionist, was not satisfied with her two-year performance.

"I had higher expectations in my first two years, even though I was new to the sport," emphasizes Bathon. "I felt that I really didn't get the fencing time necessary to develop as rapidly as I should have."

This year, Bathon is the number two fencer and the result is a fine won-lost mark and the high finish in the Great Lakes.

"The Great Lakes performance is definitely my greatest thrill at Notre Dame," exclaims Bathon. "Finishing third was exhilarating. It has given me a lot of confidence because now I know I can fence with the best."

Bathon emerged from the first two rounds of the Great Lakes tournament with six wins and only two defeats. Both losses came at the hands of Wayne State freshman sensation and Australian native Gina Farahazy.

The 6-2 record allowed her to advance to the third round. After that round, a fencer must win two consecutive matches to move up to the finals round. Bathon won her first bout and confronted the more experienced Farahazy for the third time in the tourney. This time, Bathon was obsessed with a desire to upset the Australian.

The "possessed" Bathon took a 6-5 lead in the eight-touch match. She could not maintain her margin however, and fell 8-6.

"I knew I lost, but that bout really helped me in the tournament," confesses Bathon. "The fact that I had come close to beating her gave me the confidence to do well in the finals round."

Bathon lost to the Wayne State fencers, but defeated St. Mary's fencer Sharon Moore, Irish teammate Dodee Carney and Case Western Reserve star Janet O'Brien to earn the third-place medal. Bathon is the first Notre Dame woman fencer to win a medal in the Great Lakes tournament since Kathy Valdiserri in 1976.

"Liz has proved that she's the most improved fencer on the team," declares Irish fencing coach Mike DeCicco. "The fact that she went from never fencing before college to claiming third place in the Great Lakes is remarkable."

What are the reasons for her quick success?

"She fences more with her head than with her body," adds DeCicco. "She is so smart that she minimizes her mistakes. That's what it's all about in fencing."

Bathon says DeCicco and her other teammates played major parts in her rise from reserve to fencing star.

"At first I learned a lot of the fundamentals from Pat Gerard (former Notre Dame women's coach and national champion)," says Bathon.

"And then the rest of the team and Coach DeCicco have helped me. It is absolutely phenomenal the amount of comradery among the team, both the men's and women's teams. DeCicco makes the team close and makes sure that everyone is helping their teammates."

"We are so successful because we have Coach DeCicco. He's more than just a coach. He is an influence both on and off the mat."

Maybe that's why Bathon has additional roles on the team this year.

"Liz is the one on the team that keeps us loose and helps us to relax before a meet," says Susan Valdiserri, next year's team captain. "She brings a lot of candy and small joke-type toys which make us laugh."

"Liz is the team leader," adds DeCicco. "She's an inspiration to the entire group."

Bathon puts her heart and soul into the sport of fencing. That is why she is especially upset over recent events concerning non-revenue producing sports.

"It really disturbs me that fencing is termed a minor sport," states the outspoken Bathon. "Minor implies substandard, and in no way, shape or form are we below standard. We may not produce money, but year in and year out we produce one of the top teams in the country. And we are as dedicated and we work as hard as anyone on the football field or the basketball court."

Virginia wins NIT crown

NEW YORK (AP) - Jeff Lamp hit four free throws in the last 19 seconds last night and propelled Virginia to a 58-55 victory over Minnesota in the final of the National Invitational Tournament.

Trailing 53-52, Virginia put together a string of six free throws to regain the lead and hold off the Gophers in a frantic finale of the 43rd NIT. Ralph Sampson, Virginia's 7-foot-4 inch freshman center, hit two free throws with 1:31 remaining to give the Cavaliers a 54-53 lead.

Sampson, who scored 15 points for the 24-10 Cavaliers, was named Most Valuable Player of the tournament.

In the consolation game Eddie Johnson scored 25 points and keyed a crucial second half surge that lifted Illinois to an 84-74 victory over Nevada-Las Vegas.

Johnson, a 6-foot-8 junior, scored three baskets in a little more than a minute to move the Illini from a 49-48 deficit to a 54-49 lead with 13 minutes left in the game.

finance the last four years and was a Rhodes Scholarship candidate in the province of Ontario. Ontario received two of the grants and he was one of the last four candidates.

The entire West All-America squad was composed of players from the Western Collegiate Hockey Association. Goal-tender Roy Schultz of Wisconsin, a sophomore, backs up the team that is composed of three defensemen and three other forwards besides Meredith. The extra skaters were selected because of ties in the balloting. The All-America team is sponsored by the Titan Hockey Stick Company.

The All-American defensemen include Howard Walker of North Dakota, Dave Feamster of Colorado College and junior Theran Welsh of Wisconsin. The other forwards on the team besides Meredith are Mark Taylor of North Dakota, Tim Harrer of Minnesota and sophomore Murray Eaves of Michigan. Harrer set the record for goals in a season by a WCHA player with 45 this year.

West all-star coach Bob Johnson of Wisconsin will announce the rest of his team March 23. Only Meredith, Harrer, Taylor and Feamster are seniors and thus, eligible for the all-star game.

...Gridders

Kiel and Grooms head the list. Kiel led Columbus (Ind.) East High to an unblemished season and the state's AAA title. An accomplished passer, he is also known for his strong foot. His longest punt was 70 yards, which is good news for a team whose punting game has been virtually non-existent since the graduation of Joe Restic.

Grooms is the most highly-touted of all high school quarterbacks this year. He followed in the footsteps of Ohio State's Art Schlichter at Miami (Ohio) Trace High, and piled up 2,993 total offensive yards in two years. Interestingly, many so-called grid experts claim that Grooms has a better arm than his high school predecessor.

Chris Brown, from Owensboro, Ky., is another quality quarterback recruit. Last year he passed for 1,300 yards and 14 touchdowns, in addition to running for 600 yards and four TDs.

His 4.3 speed in the 40-yard dash, coupled with the stiff competition at quarterback, might make Brown a prime candidate for a defensive back position.

Devine landed a blue-chipper when signing Chicago Weber's Tim Marshall (6-4, 240) to a letter-of-intent. Known best for his defensive tackle skills, he should challenge for a starting berth. And when defensive coordinator Joe Yonto travelled to Connecticut to sign tackle Roosevelt Reede (6-4, 260), the defensive outlook began to look all the more rosy.

Also among the most promising of recruits is Cincinnati's Rick Naylor, another of the many stars at Moeller High to enroll at Notre Dame. Naylor (6-3, 210), a linebacker, might be able to step right into the picture, especially if the Irish use the 3-4 defensive alignment that they have supposedly been talking about.

All the recruiting analysts and scouting services include Notre Dame in their lists of schools that had top recruiting years. It's just too bad that the freshmen-to-be won't have the good fortune of experiencing those exciting spring drills.

Faced with a do-or-die situation, Grace Hall pulled away from undefeated Howard Hall in the fourth quarter and claimed a 52-39 interhall basketball victory last night at the ACC. The Grace win forces a Sunday evening showdown between the same teams for the championship of the Division-A double-elimination tournament.

Playing before a crowd of nearly 250, Grace had little trouble finding the net. The predominantly-sophomore lineup hit on 25 of 44 field goal attempts - including nine-for-twelve fourth-quarter shooting - for a .568 accuracy.

"We had to pull them out of their 2-3 zone just before the half," said Grace forward Tim O'Connor, who had 12 points on the evening. "We just weren't really doing as well against their zone as we felt we should have."

After Howard had deflated a seven-point Grace lead to three, 22-19, the victors held the ball out on top, forcing the defense to come out of its zone. Howard kept pace with Grace - in fact, the defending interhall champs took a brief lead at 29-28 - but the north-quaders outscored their opponent, 20-9, in the final 12 minutes.

"They can't handle us in a man-to-man defense - but maybe in a zone," added O'Connor, whose team lost to Howard by 12 points in the regular season. "But who knows? We have to play them again."

And Howard standout Kevin Dix knows exactly what his squad will have to do when the two teams square off again Sunday evening at seven.

"We really have to move the ball better," he said. "We didn't move it as well as we should have tonight. We had a little too much one-on-one action, probably more my fault than anyone."

Dix, a first-team Bookstore Basketball selection last year, had 11 points, while teammate Jim Dolezal was high with 14.

Grace was led by Curt Bailey's 14 points in addition to O'Connor's 12. Nonetheless, Bailey remained cautious when looking ahead to the next meeting.

"They're gonna come back really tough," he insisted. "It will definitely be a lot closer. It's tough to beat anyone twice in a row - and they're not just anyone. They hadn't lost in two years. Maybe that is why we were so ready tonight."

Howard coach Mike Berryman made it clear that his squad will indeed be ready for the rematch.

"Look for us to play quite a bit better Sunday," he offered. "We've got to get more picks down low - which we didn't do tonight.

"I really feel the guys played an excellent game. Everything just didn't go in our direction. Dix got in foul trouble early (three in the first 12 minutes) and that got us out of our game a little."

Berryman added that he was somewhat "surprised that we lost our composure at the end of the game. I made a big mistake by not calling timeout with five minutes left."

Howard came out of the winner's bracket of the tournament with two wins after a perfect eight-game season. Grace won the loser's bracket, beating Flanner - the team that had put them in the bracket.

In the nightcap of the double-header, Pangborn claimed the Division-B interhall title with an amazing come-from-behind victory over neighbor Fisher, 39-38.

With 23 seconds remaining, and Fisher owning a 38-35 lead, Pangborn freshman Rick Chryst stole an in-bounds pass at half-court and raced for a lay-up. Six seconds later, Fisher forward Mike Briganti was fouled and missed the front end of a one-and-one.

After a jump ball, Pangborn's Paul Deangelis was intentionally fouled by Briganti on a lay-up attempt. Deangelis calmly sank both free throws with seven seconds left, and Fisher could not connect on the subsequent possession.

Pete Smith led Fisher with 10 points, while Bill Hathaway had nine. Joe Gruber was high point man, scoring 14 points for Pangborn.

Meredith makes All-American team

By Brian Beglane
Sports Writer

Greg Meredith, a senior from Toronto, Ont., was one of eight players named to the Titan Western All-America hockey team, the American Hockey Coaches Association announced yesterday. Meredith, the leading goal scorer at Notre Dame, became the fifth Irish hockey player to earn All-American status.

The voting conducted by the AHCA will serve as the nucleus for the East-West Senior All-Star hockey game, to be played Thursday, April 10, 1980 at the Civic Center in St. Paul, Minn. Meredith, a right wing, is one of four seniors who automatically qualify for the first annual classic.

"Obviously I'm very thrilled at making the team," said the 6-1, 205-pound forward. "I was not expecting to make it, and being named to the squad is, personally, very satisfying."

Meredith led the Irish in scoring this year with 40 goals and 31 assists for 71 points. He rewrote the school record books for goal scoring, breaking the standards for goals scored in a season by a senior and by a right wing as well as taking over the top spot on the career goals list with 104 (Eddie Bumbacco was the previous record holder with 103).

With his 71 points, Meredith also broke the record for points in a season by a right wing. That previous mark was held by Ian Williams, with 69.

"It's very pleasing to see such an outstanding young man as Greg get honored like this," said Notre Dame coach Lefty Smith, who also serves as president of the AHCA. "He really has been a key to our program over the last four years. Notre Dame will not be losing just a great athlete this May—it also will be losing a great student and person."

Meredith has carried a near 4.0 grade point average in

Gridders begin annual spring fling

Players despise it. Coaches emphasize it. Trainers worry about it. Reporters overplay it. Most others probably don't care about it.

It's spring football practice, that month-long rigmarole in which superstars attempt to stay away from injury, regulars attempt to remain regulars, non-regulars attempt to become regulars, and coaches insist that they are "looking forward to a very successful and exciting fall season."

Nonetheless, the ritual commences at Notre Dame this afternoon when coach Dan Devine leads his sophomores, juniors, and seniors-to-be onto Cartier Field for the first of 20 NCAA-allotted spring drills.

The Irish will get an earlier start than usual, due to the late date of Notre Dame's spring mid-semester vacation. And ironically, it appears that Devine and staff will be blessed with the best weather they've had in a few years.

All the spring activity will lead up to the Blue-Gold (or Green-Gold, if you wish) contest on May 3, but whether or not all of that activity will produce some concrete answers remains to be seen. Regardless, the questions will come from all directions.

The most often-asked question, of course, will hope to find the winner of the quarterback roulette competition. While in most springs the coaches' depth chart will list a No. 1 quarterback, this year could be, and most likely will be, an exception. The chart will probably read No. 1-A, No. 1-B, No. 1-C,...

Who might win the quarterback job? That would be a great idea for a pull-a-name-out-of-the-hat pool. Just think of the possibilities. Tim Koegel, Greg Knafelc, Mike Courey, John Skronski, Randy Wright, Eddie Hornback, Blair Kiel, Scott Grooms. Their names have all been mentioned (the last two players won't join the competition until they enroll as freshman in the fall).

One thing remains obvious. With such a talented trio of returning receivers—Pete Holohan, Dean Maszta, and Tony Hunter—the quarterback has to have a decent arm. And, with fullback Pete Buchanan returning after missing last season with a broken ankle, the quarterback should have ample time to let it go.

But we could toss the possibilities around for days and days. The questionable positions won't be determined until the fall anyway. So let's take a look at some of the highly-touted high school seniors who will be coming to South Bend in August.

ND fencers strengthened by rapid rise of Liz Bathon

by Leo Latz
Sports Writer

Liz Bathon's fencing career parallels the miraculous rags-to-riches story of the 1980 United States Olympic hockey team.

The United States icers, a group consisting of players from all parts of the country, had only six months to prepare for squads which played together for several years.

Bathon picked up a fencing foil for the first time as a college freshman. She had less than three years of fencing experience when she met the likes of Wayne State's foreign-import fencers this season. They have been fencing for more than ten years.

The U.S. hockey team seized the gold in Lake Placid with a combination of guts and unharnessed enthusiasm.

Bathon captured third place in the prestigious Great Lakes Fencing Tournament by utilizing plenty of determination, hustle and lots of "spunk."

She is a 5-3 dynamo on the fencing strip and literally drives her opponents off the end of the mat with her constant attacks. As a result of her aggressive style of fencing, Bathon has won 30 of her 41 matches this season.

On March 8, Bathon proved again that hard work coupled with the desire to excell spells victory, as she attained the highest Notre Dame placing in the Great Lakes. The medalist finish ranks Bathon among the Midwest fencing elite.

"I knew when I came to Notre Dame that I wanted to compete in some kind of athletic activity," explains the senior science major. "I took fencing in gym class my freshman year and I really enjoyed it. So I went to the team's practice in April of that year

SMC election

Sweeney ticket wins

by Mary Leavitt
Staff reporter

A quiet campaign ended last night as Kathleen Sweeney, Joan McCarthy and Nini Stoll were announced as the victorious ticket in the Saint Mary's Student Body election by Mary Mullaney, election commissioner.

The Sweeney ticket ran in the election against the ticket of Suzanne Schreiber, Bernadette Calarco and Marie Liz Hackel.

"I was very happy with the way this election was run," Mullaney said. "The only thing that disappointed me was the poor turnout of student voters. Only 56 percent of the campus voted this year as compared to 73 percent last year," she commented. Mullaney attributed the lack of voter turnout to the short campaign period.

"The candidates did not have as much time to campaign this year as they did last year," Mullaney explained. "I don't think the students were altogether aware of the elections."

In addition, Mullaney believed that a lack of controversy in this year's elections could have hurt the turnout.

"Neither ticket was really fighting this year," Mullaney said. "They each kind of went their own ways. Last year the tickets were quite comparable and therefore more controversial," she observed.

Despite the lack of turnout, Sweeney was quite pleased with her victory. "I am very excited over the results," she said. "It was a most cordial campaign, and the other ticket really had class. I hope we'll be able to work together for the betterment of Saint Mary's," Sweeney commented.

Schreiber, Calarco, and Hackel were optimistic about their ticket's loss. "We're glad we ran," Schreiber said. "There is no animosity between us. We wish them luck and we'll help them in any way we can," she concluded.

Denies charges

St. Joe County Registrar defends position

Laura Larimore
Senior Staff Reporter

Corrine Wroblewski, Saint Joseph County Registrar, defended her position today against accusations of hindering student voter registration made yesterday in The Observer by Paul Lewis.

"We're not trying to discourage student registration," Wroblewski stated. Iris Hile, the Republican co-chairman (along with Wroblewski) of the 10-member bipartisan Voter Registration Board, also affirmed the actions of the registration office. The office is under the jurisdiction of the Saint Joseph County Clerk.

In response to the charge that she denied students deputies and registration forms, Wroblewski said the accusation was unsubstantiated.

"We give deputies to definite programs, such as the League of Women Voters and certain high schools," Wroblewski commented. She implied a lack of preparation in Lewis' approach. "I felt he was belligerent, unlike the others (Sean Heffernan and Greg Anselmi)," she added.

Wroblewski and Hile reported they have together distributed 500 forms to Notre Dame students, including 200 given today to the College Republicans. Lewis denied this, giving 270 as the total amount.

To Lewis' initial request for over 1,000 forms, Wroblewski replied, "We have never given out 1,000 forms to anyone at Notre Dame during my eight years in office."

She explained that the law requires the Registrar to keep a strict account of all forms. "Giving out so many makes the job very difficult, especially accounting for the ones never turned in," she said.

Wroblewski gave this requisite of the state as justification for the turn-one-in, get-one-back method of obtaining new forms.

She also cited previous voting records. In 1978, 92 of a community of 2,100 voted; in November, 1979, 583 voted. This community consists of all on-campus Notre Dame students and affiliated personnel, who vote in Portage Precinct

One. At present, there are approximately 900 registered voters in the precinct.

A complication to the registration record-keeping is the requirement of a purge. Anyone who has not voted in an election in a period of 24 months previous to the preceding June 1 is automatically stricken from the record, Wroblewski explained.

Both Wroblewski and Hile said they would be more than willing to aid students in registration if they came downtown. They defined their position as one of registration, not recruitment.

"We feel those who take the time to come down and register will also be the ones to vote," she said.

Wroblewski also clarified registration deadlines. Registration may be conducted by deputies until midnight Saturday, with forms required to be submitted by 4 p.m. Monday. The final date for voter registration at the registration office is April 7 for the May 6 primary.

U.S. appeals to World Court for decision on hostages

THE HAGUE, Netherlands (AP) The U.S. government, appealing for an urgent World Court decision on the Tehran hostages, warned yesterday that Iran might hold the 50 Americans indefinitely and thereby undermine world peace.

"The signals which are now coming out of Iran suggest that the detention of the hostages may continue indefinitely," Roberts B. Owens, State Department legal adviser, told the International Court of Justice.

"No one in this courtroom has any way of knowing whether the Ayatollah Khomeini will continue to hold the hostages in captivity for a month or for a year or for a decade."

Owen did not elaborate on what the "signals" might be, but he apparently was referring to the disagreements and indecision among Iranian leaders about whether and when the hostages might be freed.

Winding up for the United States in a case first put before the court Nov. 29, Owen said tenuous U.S. hopes for a quick release of the hostages were dashed in early March when a U.N. investigative commission visiting Tehran was frustrated in its mediation mission.

He said the court, main judicial arm of the United Nations, is the most promising hope for the ultimate release of the hostages and he called for a swift final judgement.

"If it becomes clear that a country like Iran can seize diplomatic agents and hold them hostage for indefinite periods of time in order to coerce desired political action, it can only lead to a complete unraveling of the fabric of peaceful international relations," Owen said.

Owen's presentation to the 15-member court ended three days of public sessions called to hear the U.S. case in detail. The court will now consider the case in private and issue a judgement, but it will probably take several weeks.

Signs grew in Tehran, meanwhile, of definitive delays in any action to free the hostages, who have spent 138 days in the hands of Moslem militants holding the U.S. Embassy.

Revolutionary leader Khomeini says the new Iranian Parliament must decide the hostages' fate, but vote counting in last Friday's first round of parliamentary elections was going more slowly than anticipated.

Budget plan may cut mail services

WASHINGTON (AP) - House budget-writers yesterday recommended an end to Saturday mail deliveries and federal law enforcement grants as part of their drive to balance the 1981 federal budget.

The House Budget Committee urged those actions despite sign of new strain in the coalition pressing for approval of $15.9 billion in spending cuts and a $1.4 billion surplus in fiscal 1981, which starts Oct. 1.

The $15.9 billion in reductions, generally supported by the congressional leadership and the White House, were proposed Wednesday by the committee chairman, Rep. Robert N. Giacomini, D-Conn.

Although President Carter called last week for a balanced budget, the president has yet to submit a revised version of his 1981 spending plan. The budget he proposed in January called for a $15.8 billion deficit.

Overall, Giacomini's budget proposal for fiscal 1981 calls for spending $612.4 billion, revenues of $613.8 billion and a surplus of $1.4 billion.

The committee still faces tough votes on controversial proposals to eliminate the $1.7 billion state share of revenue sharing and to cut $1 billion from Carter's proposed level of defense spending.

N.O.W.'s charges frustrate frisky lawyers

FORT WAYNE, Ind. (AP) - The National Organization for Women has launched an investigation of male Allen County attorneys whose female clients claimed they solicited sex in exchange for reducing or eliminating legal fees. The alleged practice apparently has been going on in several law offices and amounts to solicitation for prostitution, said Kate Love-Jacobson, President of the NOW chapter in Fort Wayne. "We know it's happened enough that now we're going to launch a full-scale investigation," she said. The investigation began about a week ago, she said, based on 15 complaints from women during the past several months. NOW hopes the inquiry will result in prosecution for solicitation wherever the evidence supports that action, Love-Jacobson said. "We don't want revenge, though," she said, "We just want it stopped."

Deadly bacteria

Soviets deny germ warfare

MOSCOW (AP) - The Soviet Union confirmed to U.S. Embassy officials yesterday that there was an outbreak of deadly anthrax last April in the Ural Mountain city of Sverdlovsk, but denied the epidemic was the result of a germ warfare accident, sources said.

They said the Soviet reply came in response to a query made by top embassy officials Monday. The sources, who asked not to be named, said the State Department instructed the embassy Saturday to ask the Foreign Ministry to explain mounting evidence that there had been an epidemic and it was the result of a biological warfare accident.

Top embassy officials were called to the Foreign Ministry yesterday morning to receive the Soviet reply, which acknowledged the anthrax outbreak in Sverdlovsk, an important industrial center 1,000 miles east of Moscow, according to the sources. Anthrax, a potentially fatal disease for cattle and humans, is caused by bacteria.

A Foreign Ministry official also took the highly unusual step yesterday afternoon of telephoning Western correspondents to "resolutely reject" attempts to question Soviet good faith concerning the five-year-old international convention banning production and use of bacteriological warfare agents.

In Washington, State Department spokesman David Passage said the Soviet explanation was "a satisfactory initial response" and the United States would study it carefully.

Department officials, speaking privately, said the department had discerned the anthrax outbreak from a series of rumors and eyewitness accounts reaching the West from emigres.

On Wednesday, the State Department said it believed a Soviet biological warfare accident left "a substantial number of fatalities, perhaps running into the hundreds."

While the Foreign Ministry was privately telling American diplomats the outbreak had occurred, the official Tass news agency denied reports of an accident at a bacteriological warfare plant in Sverdlovsk.

Over Pakistan border

Soviets pursue Afghan rebels

BAJAWOOR, Pakistan (AP) - Afghan rebels who brought their families across the high mountain border in the Hindu Kush range yesterday to shelter in Pakistan said they were pursued all the way by Soviet helicopter gunships.

"More than half the people in my village were killed," said Shakir Brasul, a young, bearded Pathan warrior from Kotapur village in Afghanistan's Konar province on the other side of the mountain.

He got across the border with a group of about 60 survivors, including women and children of all ages. "It was so cold coming over the mountains that four children in our group died of exposure," Brasul said.

As he spoke the sound of heavy guns and explosions rumbled through the mountains that divide Pakistan from Konar, where Soviet and Afghan government troops launched a large-scale anti-rebel operation 20 days earlier.

His group was the latest to reach the Khazana refugee camp, only 10 days old but already cramped because 5,000 refugees a day stream in from Konar.

Brasul said it was a four-day climb through the snow-covered ridges to the safety of the border a couple of miles from the refugee camp.

The rebels said the Soviet and Afghan troops used Mig fighter bombers, artillery and tanks against the mountain villages and later dropped parachutists to mop up resistance.

The rebels were forced to abandon their villages and took to the mountains, where they continued fighting until their ammunition ran out, Brasul said. "Russian helicopters flew overhead constantly trying to locate us and kill us, but most of the time we managed to hide amidst the boulders on the mountain slopes and avoid detection."

The Russian troops have been in Afghanistan since late December, when they backed a government coup and remained to help the government put down the rebellion by these devoutly Moslem, anti-communist tribesmen.

The camp of 500 small green tents, allocated one per family, is pitched in neat rows in a field next to a small river. There are more than 600 families here but many more are scattered in nearby villages in the Bajawour Valley or live out in the open because there are not enough tents.

Parade selects Murphy

A Notre Dame senior is one of a group of campus leaders across the nation selected to accompany outstanding newspaper carriers on a tour of Yugoslavia and Greece. Martin Murphy of Naperville, Ill. was named by Parade Magazine as a chaperone for the April 15-28 trip.

Majoring in accounting and economics in the College of Business Administration Murphy has been a leader in the Neighborhood Study Help Program, a volunteer program involving more than 300 Notre Dame and Saint Mary's students who tutor grade school students in 20 centers in the South Bend School Corporation. Murphy has served as a tutor, director of a tutoring center and currently is transportation coordinator for the program.

Murphy said he considered volunteer work to be his most rewarding Notre Dame activity and his participation in the annual Mardi Gras program was prompted by the distribution of proceeds to several area charities.

Inaugural ceremonies today will honor Fred R. Dallmayr, the first holder of the Packey J. Dee Chair in Government and International Studies. Events will include a public lecture by the new Dee Professor, entitled "Political Philosophy Today," to begin at 4 p.m. in the Center for Continuing Education auditorium.

Although this is his first year in residence at Notre Dame, Dallmayr was named to the endowed professorship in September 1978. From July 1978 through June 1979, he held a fellowship for independent study and research from the National Endowment for the Humanities and was a research fellow at Nuffield College, Oxford University, during the fall term.

Dallmayr is a political theorist whose major interests include contemporary political theory, contemporary European political thought, theory of social science, and modern political thought.

"Professor Dallmayr is both a fine scholar and a creative, subtle thinker," Dr. Peri Arnold, chairman of the Department of Government and International Studies, said. "His work in 20th century European political and social philosophy will greatly strengthen our already strong field of political theory. Furthermore, he reinvigorates the tradition of eminent European scholars in the department. He not only holds a Munich doctorate as well as an American Ph.D., but he also maintains close ties with the European scholarly community."

A native of Germany who received U.S. citizenship in 1962, Dallmayr received a Doctor of Law degree from the University of Munich in 1955, an M.A. from Southern Illinois University in 1956.

New doubts arise in hostage situation

(AP) - Iran's attempt to elect a new Parliament bogged down yesterday in slow vote-counting and complaints of improprieties, casting new doubt on just when the revolutionary government will be ready to make a decision on freeing the U.S. Embassy hostages.

Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, in a Persian new year broadcast to the nation, chided those who have accused some groups of fraud in last Friday's voting. Such loud complaining before the rest of the world is anti-Islamic, he said.

In Washington, U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim, apparently concerned over increasing public anger among U.S. politicians, told reporters that any American attempt to end the crisis by military force would "create an explosion" in the entire Middle East.

Republican Sen. Richard Lugar of Indiana, in a statement Wednesday endorsed by Senate Republican Leader Howard Baker, called on the Carter administration to prepare for a naval blockade of Iran and for mining of its ports.

Revolutionary leader Khomeini has said the new 270-seat Parliament, or Majlis, must decide whether and when to release the hostages, who spent their 138th day in captivity yesterday. Iranian officials have predicted this decision could not be made before mid-May.

But by yesterday it was clear that the vote counting from last Friday's first round of parliamentary elections was going more slowly than anticipated. Final results may not be known until early April, election officials said, virtually ensuring that the second round of voting will be delayed a week or more beyond the planned date of April 4. This in turn would probably mean a further postponement of a decision on the hostages.

The second round of voting will consist of runoffs in districts where no candidate won a majority last Friday.

Allegations of fraud are further complicating the electoral process. Most of the complaints are aimed at the clergy-dominated Islamic Republican Party, which leads in the early election results.

The ruling Revolutionary Council has named a commission to investigate the allegations, and President Abolhasan Bani-Sadr met yesterday with Khomeini to discuss them.

Haight-Ashbury

15 years can make a difference

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) - Fifteen years ago, a street sign marked the crossroads of young America.

Orphaned by the death of a beloved president, cast into the army by what they felt was an unjust war, given material wealth without moral guidelines for using it, a new generation fell apart and came together at the corner at Haight and Ashbury.

Fifteen years ago. It was a time of flower children, the Jefferson Airplane and the Grateful Dead. Of marijuana and LSD. Of communal living, long hair and outrageous clothing that once and for all divorced the young from the old.

It was, Paul Kantner recalls, a time of innocence - "a never-never land."

"It was an experimental time," says Kantner, who helped found the Jefferson Airplane back then and is the only original member of the band, now called the Jefferson Starship.

"We trusted the drugs we took, almost offered ourselves as guinea pigs for a whole new way of dealing with each other."

Joan Didion was less kind. In "Slouching Towards Bethlehem," she called what was going on here in the mid '60s "social hemorrhaging."

"San Francisco was where the missing children were gathering and calling themselves 'hippies,'" she wrote, and she meant the Haight-Ashbury.

But now the magic is gone, along with the posters that once converted the walls of Haight Street into a miniature Peking, announcing free concerts in nearby Golden Gate Park and promoting the slogans of the left calling for one world, one people.

Today, Haight-Ashbury is like many neighborhoods in the city, sporting a variety of shops and restaurants, noble Victorians being renovated, and a sizable gay community bringing in new business.

Few signs remain of the time when the anti-war movement flourished and Grateful Dead leader Jerry Garcia poured forth the first psychedelic chords from his black and gold Gibson.

"In the beginning, it was a very pleasant thing," says Alex Holcombe, whose jewelry store has operated on the corner of Haight and Ashbury since 1932.

"But it degenerated into a very heavy drug culture. I never went out of business, but we did lose 19 stores on this street."

Dr. David Smith, founder and medical director of the Haight-Ashbury Free Clinic, has seen it all.

"You saw the beginnings of the counterculture and psychedelic scene as early as 1964," he says. "In '65 and '66 it accelerated, and in '67 it peaked, the primary things being the rock groups and the expanded use of LSD."

The clinic opened in 1967, operating 24 hours a day, says Smith, and treating as many as 200 patients a day, mostly for bad LSD trips and short term outpatient care.

Today, the clinic has evolved and expanded to include five sections, including detoxification for heroin addicts and a women's center, as well as a volunteer training branch and a research department.

By 1970, the Haight-Ashbury was in the throes of a major heroin epidemic. The innocence that had heralded the new age had given way to crime and violence. The rock stars had long since packed up and moved to more pleasant surroundings in the suburbs.

"It turned into a jungle," remembers Kantner, who blames that on the police. "They allowed it to happen almost gleefully. Sort of to let the flower children face the tough world."

The Haight looked, according to Smith, "like a bombed out ghetto."

"There was so much crime and violence that only the most hardy of businessmen could hang in there."

But hang in there they did, and the neighborhood made a comeback.

"I would say that 1971 and 1972 was when there were some major community organization successes and the neighborhood started getting together," says Smith. "The community started taking control and believing that they could handle it through rehabilitation rather than the urban redevelopment plans that were advocated by city hall."

"As soon as things started improving, there was a big influx of different populations, including the gay community," says Smith. "They came in and bought a lot of the houses and renovated them, and they opened a lot of shops and worked to improve the area."

Renovation brought new problems, however. Real estate prices skyrocketed, with some rents jumping as much as 300 percent when apartment houses were sold. Neighborhood organizations fear that redevelopment will result in a street decorated with tourist shops, driving land prices up further.

There still are people on the street who look like character actors out of the original play, although Kantner says he doesn't feel a lot of life in the Haight. But Smith and others who work and live there are happy with the way things are turning out.

"The old idealism still survives, but it's tempered with reality," said Smith, adding that as far as he is concerned, the neighborhood has gone from being one of the most dangerous in the city to one of the safest.

□ Perhaps the most clear-cut proof of change in the Haight, however, is supplied by Kantner. He stills goes back every so often, but when he does it's not to play free concerts or take drugs. He goes to the MacDonald's on the end of Haight Street and buys his daughter a cheeseburger.

Gas prices soar overseas

(AP) - The next time you pump $1.20-a-gallon gasoline into your car - and think longingly back to last year when it was half as much - consider the poor motorists in other countries. You could have it worse.

You could be driving in Bulgaria, where the price of a gallon of regular gasoline doubled to $4.32 last year, or in Italy, where a gallon of high-test would set you back $3.02, up 71 cents in a year.

An Associated Press worldwide survey, conducted in late January, found that gasoline prices in most countries jumped as the world price of crude oil doubled to nearly $30 a barrel over the past year.

In Hong Kong, gasoline climbed to $1.72 from $1.12, prompting one wealthy factory owner to forsake his luxury Mercedes-Benz and Continental cars for a compact Honda.

Israeli schoolteacher Shlomo Eidaw said a 53 percent increase in gasoline prices over the past year has meant "there's no way I can afford to drive my car to work instead of taking the bus" for his daily 24-mile round-trip commute.

"We take the car only if we have a lot of shopping or for trips, which are very infrequent these days," Eidaw said. Israeli gasoline prices have risen to $2.60 a gallon from $1.70 a year ago.

In Denmark, bus use in metropolitan Copenhagen jumped 10 percent as the price of a gallon of gasoline climbed to $2.55 from $1.45 a year ago. Even in oil-rich Britain, gasoline now costs $2.34 a gallon, up from $1.64 a year ago.

A survey by the Greater London Council said the price rise apparently has spurred a drop in the number of cars

Notre Dame married couples encounter many difficulties

Editor's Note: This is the second part of a two-part article about married students at Notre Dame. The topic is the present social and living conditions that exist for this silent minority.

Liz and Jim Niehaus are married undergraduates at Notre Dame. They account for two of the 39 wedded undergraduates. Two-hundred twenty-five graduate students combine with that number to equal the total population of married students at Notre Dame. Looking for cheap housing near to campus, Liz and Jim Niehaus studied the options available to married students.

The Niehauses discovered that Notre Dame offers 117 units in a housing complex called University Village, one-half mile from campus. One criterion at the Village is that the residents have children. For those who do not have children, there are 24 apartments provided on Cripe Street.

The University Village apartments have two bedrooms, a living room, bath, and a kitchen. The Cripe Street apartments only have one bedroom, but otherwise their layout is the same.

Fr. Michael Heppen, director of housing, explained in a recent interview that his office is not directly responsible for providing married students with housing arrangements. According to Heppen, the student managers of the Village and Cripe Street apartments arrange the leases.

"I don't know if there are married students who are not able to get married student housing or not," Heppen said. He added, "I haven't had any complaints so I assume we're doing well in that area. There are no changes to be made in the foreseeable future." A random sampling of 27 married students at Notre Dame were surveyed as to whether or not they had difficulties finding housing arrangements. Nine said "yes" and 18 answered "no."

As the Niehauses have a young daughter, Stephanie, they chose to live in University Village. The young family tried other non-university sponsored local apartments, but Jim noted that "at University Village you can't beat the rent and the kids have a lot of playmates and babysitters."

However, the couple observes an unusually difficult problem of communication there. The problem is with the English language. There are many married foreign graduate students who have come to Notre Dame having previously received degrees in their own countries. Although the students do speak English, many times the non-student spouses do not.

Liz Niehaus explains that the foreign graduate students at Notre Dame are generally older than other graduate students and have been able to establish families. She added that the American ethic tends towards later marriages, particularly in this fairly conservative Catholic university.

According to Frank Carrico, the retired Director of Maintenance for the Village who worked there for 18 years, all 100 units there are usually filled. "If there aren't people in 'em, they are paying the rent just to hold 'em," he said. Overcrowding at University Village is a big problem for many on the waiting lists. Enwere Dirke commented: "I applied for housing accommodations at University Village in the summer semester. The manager tells me the list of waiting students is so long I do not have a chance. Now I live in South Bend where my stipend isn't even enough to pay my rent, not to talk of other expenses."

Sociology graduate, Pat Herimann has found the Cripe Street apartments very agreeable: "The rent is reasonable, the apartments are clean and the carpentry is nice. They are small but there is just enough room." Notre Dame bought the Cripe Street apartments, built in 1970, from Portage Realty approximately five years ago.

"They were kind of bad when we got them; they had bad plumbing and bad closets," says Frank Carrico. He replaced all of the bathroom fixtures in the apartments, and he checked three times a day to make sure everything was running smoothly.

Located between the Village apartments and those on Cripe Street is the University Village Center, a house owned by Notre Dame which has been turned in to an all-purpose center by tearing down a wall between the living room and the dining room. Fr. Kevin McGrath, OSB, a Benedictine from Alabama working on his doctorate in Theology at Notre Dame, resides there as the married students' chaplain. The center is open to all couples to use and various activities including Lavage Childbirth Sessions, Brownie Scouts meetings, and men's Sunday chess clubs have gone on there.

"Being a student myself, I know what it entails, and working with the married students at University Village, I know what family life entails. I find that it's a challenging combination and realize that I'd like to be of whatever help I can to them," reflects Father McGrath.

He does not understand his job to be the same as those who work for Campus Ministry with unmarried students. He deliberately stays in the background.

"In a way I've felt that they have been the step-children of the University -- left on their own, yet, they like not being in the middle of things," McGrath said.

He stressed that the families value their independence and that he must, therefore, take a different approach with them than if they were on campus. He said that he likes to remind them that he is there to help them by casual encounters. He added, however, that he knew that the villagers would be upset if they did not have a chaplain.

The Financial Aid Office deals with a number of Notre Dame's 254 married students. Two-hundred and two are receiving financial aid this semester. Mr. Joseph Russo, Director of Financial Aid, said in a recent interview: "I would not reward a married student with a scholarship because he is married, nor would I take it away."

Russo stresses that many married students come to the Financial Aid Office solely for advice. He told that he often sits with students just married, and works a budget out for them.

Married students have different tastes in recreation from those of single students. The Niehauses say that there are few social events set up specially for married students. They find they do not fit into the on-campus social atmosphere that involves going to the bars and drinking, or going to parties in dormitories in order to meet other singles.

Another married student agreed saying: "Socially, this University seems to me to be one large keg."

The managers of the married student apartments will sometimes arrange large-scale community activities, but generally the students have small get-togethers among themselves, continued Jim Niehaus. His wife, Liz, remembers only three large social events for married students in their three years as a married couple at Notre Dame: a Summer of '77 village-wide picnic, and the annual Knights of Columbus Easter Egg Hunt and Christmas Tree Lighting.

Instead of meeting other couples at the bars, many University Village residents meet each other via their children on the playground behind the apartments. Men and women both make this trip "out back." If both spouses are students, they arrange to escape having classes at the same time so that one parent can babysit. Yet, if both parents do have classes at the same time, or if one parent works, they are on their own to find babysitters. Nothing has been arranged by the University or by the apartment managers. Finding babysitters, perhaps, is one of the married students' biggest problems.

Like most single undergraduates, many married couples enjoy Notre Dame sports. However, some quarrel with administration policy for spouses' football tickets. They hold that since there are so few married undergraduates, the spouses should be able to sit with their partners in the student section. Instead they are given tickets in the end zone with the graduate students.

Still, the married students are not asking to tumble Notre Dame's single-oriented social atmosphere. Out of 27 interviewed, 20 responded that the atmosphere was generally agreeable, six responded negatively, and one did not comment.

They seem to agree with the student that said: "Married students have difficulties peculiar to their state, but because of his responsibility to his family, he must make certain adjustments to his schedule, and omit some of the usual campus activities... It comes with the territory."

A.C.S. revises recommendations for routine medical tests

NEW YORK (AP) - With evidence mounting that early detection does no good in lung cancer, the American Cancer Society said yesterday it no longer recommends routine annual chest x-rays for heavy smokers.

The society also revised recommendations for tests for cancer of the cervix, colon, rectum and breast after a study by Dr. David Eddy of Stanford University of the cost versus effectiveness of such tests.

A statement from Dr. Saul Gusberg, the society's national president, said the revisions "deliver essentially the same health benefit as the previous recommendations at a greatly reduced cost, risk and inconvenience."

But Gusberg cautioned that they apply only to people who don't have any symptoms of cancer. People with symptoms should see a doctor immediately, he said.

For lung cancer, the society dropped a recommendation that people with a higher-than-normal risk get an annual chest x-ray. "High-risk" persons were those over age 40 who are heavy smokers or work with known carcinogens like asbestos.

Eddy's study concluded that tests for lung cancer, which include chest x-rays and sputum cytology, a test based on mucus from the lungs, do indeed detect the disease at an early stage. But he said lung cancer is so hard to cure that "there actually is evidence from a half-dozen studies that such early detection does not reduce mortality."

Besides, Eddy said, x-rays themselves carry a small health risk, and there is "serious risk" of wasted time and money when tests are "false-positive," that is, they indicate a cancer where none exists.

In other revisions, the society:

Dropped a recommendation for an annual Pap smear to detect cervical cancer, recommending instead a Pap smear every three years for women aged 20 to 65 and those under 20 who are sexually active.

Dropped a recommendation that men and women over 40 get annual tests for blood in the stool and an annual exam with a proctosigmoidoscope, an instrument that looks for cancer of the colon and rectum.

Strengthened its recommendations for the use of x-rays to detect breast cancer. The society previously urged routine annual mammograms for women over 50, those over 40 with a family history of breast cancer, and those over 35 with a personal history of breast cancer.

If election were held today, Harris poll predicts Ford the winner

NEW YORK (AP) - A new ABC News - Lou Harris poll says former President Gerald Ford would defeat President Carter if the 1980 presidential election were held today.

In addition, the poll said Ford may now be a slight favorite over Ronald Reagan among Republicans and independent voters for the GOP presidential nomination.

The poll was taken last week and completed before the final results of Saturday's South Carolina primary were known. Reagan won that GOP primary so decisively that the second-place finisher John Connally dropped out of the race yesterday.

The poll said Ford would get 54 percent of the vote to Carter's 44 percent if the November general election were held now. Two percent of the registered voters interviewed were not sure.

But Carter would defeat Reagan by a 58-40 margin, the same poll showed. Two percent were not sure.

Republican and independent voters in the poll were asked for their choice for the GOP presidential nominee.

Ford was named by 33 percent and Reagan by 27 percent.

Because of the sampling error margin involved in these figures - ABC-Harris polls generally have error margins of about 6 percentage points either way - one can only say that Ford and Reagan split the vote, with Ford perhaps slightly ahead.

A surprising finding of the poll was that Rep. John Anderson, R-Ill., was the choice of 15 percent of the GOP-independent group. That put him in a virtual tie with George Bush, who received the backing of 14 percent.

Others received 7 percent. Four percent of the voters polled were not sure.

Those results compare to a ABC-Harris poll taken in November 1979 which showed Ford with 25 percent, Reagan 30 percent, Bush 6 percent, Anderson 2 percent and other candidates 25 percent. Twelve percent named no one or were not sure.

The number of voters polled was not available from the pollster.

Supreme Court rules companies liable in DES controversy

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) - Any company marketing a drug that could cause cancer in the daughters of women who took the drug may be liable even though their product was not involved. The California Supreme Court ruled yesterday.

The 4-3 decision, written by Justice Stanley Mosk, could affect not only the 200 drug firms which made or marketed diethylstilbestrol (DES), a synthetic compound of the female hormone estrogen, but possibly other firms involved with drugs which may have caused similar injuries.

Attorneys for Judith Sindell, 29, Los Angeles, and Maureen Rogers, 27, Fontana, had argued the companies "knew DES was carcinogenic and harmful, but still marketed the product in a crass desire for money."

The women alleged they developed precancerous and cancerous tumors as a result of DES their mothers used to prevent miscarriages. Mrs. Sindell sued for $11 million and Mrs. Rogers for an unspecified amount.

Superior courts in Los Angeles and Ventura Counties dismissed the class actions but a Court of Appeal reinstated them in April 1978 and the defendants, Abbott Laboratories, Rexall Drug Co., Eli Lilly and Co., E.R. Squibb and Sons and the Upjohn Co., appealed to the state high court.

The court's decision means the cases now will be returned for trial to determine if the women can prove their allegations.

The plaintiffs claim between 1941 and 1971 the defendants produced and sold DES which may cause cancerous vaginal and cervical growths. The cancer, adenocarcinoma, manifests itself after a latent period of 10 or 12 years. It is a fast spreading and deadly disease which requires surgery.

DES also causes adenosis - precancerous vaginal and cervix growths.

The suit contended defendants were negligent because "they knew or should have known" DES was carcinogenic and that it was ineffective in preventing miscarriages.

The drug companies argued there was no basis for legal action because the women could not identify the manufacturers of the drug their mothers took.

The decision, joined in by Chief Justice Rose Bird, Justice Frank Newman and Justice Pro Tem Clinton White, agreed liability generally depended on proving injuries were caused by the defendant.

But it said there were exceptions, adding "between an innocent plaintiff and negligent defendants the latter should bear the cost of the injury."

The decision said that advances in science and technology create goods which may harm consumers and cannot be traced to any producer.

"The response of the courts can be either to adhere rigidly to prior doctrine, denying recovery to those injured by such products, or to fashion remedies to meet these changing needs," the court added.

The dissent by Justice Frank Richardson, joined by Justices William Clark and Wiley Manuel, said the decision was unwise because the "ramifications seem almost limitless."

The majority, the dissent added, "effectively makes the entire drug industry, or at least its California members, an insurer of all injuries attributable to defective drugs of uncertain or unprovable origin, including those injuries manifesting themselves a generation later."

At Three Mile Island

Leak poses no threat

MIDDLETOWN, Pa. (AP) - Technicians worked to find and plug a leak causing a slight increase in radiation inside the Three Mile Island nuclear power plant's auxiliary building yesterday. Officials said it posed no health threat.

Officials suspected the airborne radioactive particles came from a small water leak in a pump system that adds water to the plant's primary reactor cooling system.

The plant has been out of operation since it was damaged on March 28, 1979, when the reactor lost cooling water and overheated in the worst accident in the history of U.S. commercial nuclear power plants.

Monitors inside the building, which adjoins the giant reactor containment building, first detected the increase at 1 a.m. yesterday.

Although plant operations theorized an extremely low amount of radioactivity escaped into the air, it could not be detected on sensitive monitors in the building's ventilation system.

"The main thing is we're not seeing any changes on our outside monitors. We know something is going out, but we can't detect it," said plant spokesman Sandy Polon.

"It's a very small leak. We've not seen any release that would exceed limits," said John Collins, chief of operations at the site for the U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission.

Plant officials would not speculate on the type of radioactive material. However, Collins said it may have been particles of radioactive cesium released when the leaking water evaporated.

News of the leak came after hundreds of angry residents, some waving signs and a few wearing gas masks, vented their fears over a proposal to purge radioactive gases as a way to speed the cleanup of the badly contaminated plant.

Thomas Geruskey, head of state Department of Environmental Resources, said the state favors the venting plan because leaks will continue at the plant until it is cleaned up.

"Even though they may be small, there may be greater ones in the future in bad weather conditions, giving higher exposures to the individuals offsite than a controlled venting situation would," he said.

Economics sponsors lectures

The Department of Economics is sponsoring a pair of lectures given by Gar Alperovitz, co-director of the National Center for Economic Alternatives.

The first lecture entitled "Inflation, Basic Necessities & the Distribution of Economic Power" is scheduled for 4:15 p.m. Monday in room 122 of Hayes-Healy.

"Community as a Fundamental Economic Strategy," the second talk, will be held at 8 p.m. Wednesday in the Galvin Life Science Auditorium.

Alperovitz enjoys a distinguished list of academic credentials. In addition, he has authored several articles which have appeared in the New York Times and the Washington Star. He has also authored several books.

Alperovitz has been quite active with labor groups. He has served as Legislative director in both the U.S. House of Representatives and the Senate, and is also the former president of the Cambridge Institute.

At present, from his Washington based office, he analyzes economic policies and offers proposals for restructuring the American economy.

... Budget

By voice vote yesterday, the House Budget Committee approved the recommendation to cut $836 million by ending Saturday mail deliveries and reducing subsidies for bulk mail.

The panel's vote does not mean Saturday mail deliveries will definitely end, however. Even if approved by the full Congress, the proposal could be averted if the U.S. Postal Service raised rates or made other cuts to achieve the savings.

Rep. Jim Mattos, D-Texas, said the Saturday mail proposal might also be defeated when it reaches the House floor and suggested the committee simply recommend an $836 million postal cut without mentioning Saturday deliveries.

Meanwhile, Rep. James M. Hanley, D-N.Y., chairman of the House Post Office Committee, attacked the proposal to end Saturday deliveries, saying such a move "would not serve the American people well."

The budget committee also recommended saving $100 million through elimination of the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration, which has provided grants to local police departments for research and equipment since 1968.

The LEAA proposal brought the first sharp clash between Gaiimo and committee liberals as Rep. Elizabeth Holtzman, D-N.Y., denounced the cut as "gratuitous."

Democratic liberals openly threatened to break with Gaiimo in a dispute over a proposed $50 million cut in the $321 million legal aid program.

Setting oil prices

Art Buchwald

WASHINGTON-A lot of people are starting to get suspicious that the price of gasoline and oil in this country bears no relation to what is really going on in the OPEC countries.

This, of course, is not true. The oil companies have a very scientific method of computing fuel costs and are extremely careful in justifying every price increase in their fuel.

This is how one oil company does it, and I'm sure the others follow similar guidelines.

Every morning at exactly 9 a.m. the "Executive Committee for Price Raises" meets in the private dining room for breakfast.

A typical session goes like this:

There are 12 men in the room laughing and joking.

Halberstam walks in and Middlecoff says, "You're late."

"Sorry about that," Halberstam says, "I just had a new grandchild."

"Congratulations. This calls for a celebration. What do you say, gentlemen, in honor of Halberstam's new grandchild, we raise the price of regular gasoline by 1 cent?"

"Since it's his first grandchild, I say we should raise it 2 cents."

"No objections. So, done."

"That's damn decent of you. Wait until I tell Ella, she'll be thrilled. Where's Walker?"

"Walker's in the hospital with a kidney stone. We're praying he passes it."

"Maybe we should send him flowers."

"We thought we'd raise the price of heating oil 3 cents. That would do more for his morale than flowers."

"Great idea. Where's Burnside?"

"He's in New York getting the Advertising Man of the Year Award for his brilliant commercials proving the Windfall Oil Co. makes less profits than the Public Television Network."

"Hey, let's surprise Burnside when he comes back by adding 2 cents a gallon to diesel fuel. We'll call it the Burnside Raise."

"It's done."

"I have a joke. If you guys laugh, you have to promise to up motor oil 5 cents a tank."

"Okay, Kelly. But if anyone has heard it, you only get a 2-cent raise."

"It's a deal. Guy goes into a doctor and the doctor says, 'you're very sick. I'm going to have to operate.' The guy says, 'I want a second opinion.' So the doctor says, 'Okay, you're ugly too.'"

Everyone slaps their thighs and Kelly gets the 5-cent increase.

"Say, did we put up the price of airline fuel when the U.S. Olympic hockey team beat the Soviets?"

"Yeh, I think we did by 20 cents a gallon..."

"Well, I don't know about you guys, but I think those kids played one helluva game, and I believe we should add another 5 cents to show those Russians what this country is really all about."

"You won't get any resistance from us."

"We're moving right along."

"I wish we could figure out one more reason to boost the price at the gas pumps this morning. Don't forget Monday is a holiday and we won't be meeting until Tuesday."

"Hey, look out the window, everybody. There's a red robin-- the first one I've seen this year."

"That's good luck. What do you say we add 3 cents on unleaded super premium in honor of Jeremy seeing his first red robin? All in favor say aye. Opposed? The ayes have it. Well, it looks like we've had a good morning."

"Hey, we forgot the natural gas division."

"Didn't we give them a 5 percent increase last Friday?"

Abortion: The Church's stand

Kirk Brandfass

Katherine Catanzarite closed her letter of March 7 with the question: "Does God agree with you?" The answer is simple and straightforward: Yes, God does agree that abortion in cases of rape or incest is morally wrong. As Catholics, we know this to be true because God speaks to us through the Pope, His representative here on earth, and the position of the Church on abortion is crystal clear: Abortion is forbidden. The only "gray" area for a Catholic on the abortion issue is whether he or she will decide to adhere to the Church's teaching or decide to oppose the Church's teaching. On this issue, as a Catholic, there is, quite literally, "nowhere to hide."

Those who would give the impression that the Church's position on abortion is somehow unclear are, quite simply, wrong. Even if well-meaning, sympathetic, and compassionate, a person who believes that the Catholic Church allows abortions in cases of rape or incest is, again, simply and clearly, wrong.

The Church does allow medical operations to save the life of the mother even if such operations result in the death of the fetus. However, by definition this is not an abortion because there is no intent to take the life of the unborn child. Abortion, by definition, is for the purpose of taking the life of an unborn child. Therefore, when we understand the terms involved, it becomes clear that the Church does not allow abortions at all.

It is apparent therefore that on this issue, for Catholics, the issue is "black and white." Whether one chooses to follow the Church's teaching is ultimately up to the individual and his conscience, but informed individuals should know that there is no way to correctly state or even give the impression that the Catholic Church's position on abortion is anything less than black and white: the Church forbids abortions.

No compassionate person could be blind to the far-reaching and often irreparable emotional damage that can result from rape or incest. And no one should seek to minimize this damage for fear of even giving the impression of being callously dogmatic. But an understanding of the possible damage which can result from such savage acts does not change the fact that such effects can not legitimize abortion. Abortion is the intentional taking of an innocent life. The intentional taking of an innocent life is murder and even the most compassionate and sympathetic reasons can not legitimize murder.

Realizing the severe degree of damage which can result from the acts of rape or incest, the proper response is comprehensive, professional assistance for the victim. This position lays bare as false the oft-heard, irresponsible accusation that pro-life people are insensitive to the plight of the mother.

The phrase, "havens of gentleness," scornfully noted in Ms. Catanzarite's letter, could properly apply only to those who would both assist the mother and defend the life of the innocent child. I should think it self-evident that such a phrase could never be applied to those who would intentionally deprive that innocent child of his life, for whatever the reason. Professional assistance for victims of rape or incest is mandatory but one should realize that this assistance is for the benefit of both mother and child.

The child in these situations has committed no wrong; he is the valuable and innocent result of an admittedly reprehensible act. Those who would allow abortion in cases of rape or incest must produce an answer for the soul-searching question, "how can one legitimate the taking of an innocent child's life?" I know of no noble or morally acceptable answer to this question. Surely sympathy for the mother's mental distress cannot be accepted as an excuse for taking the life of an innocent child. To accept such an answer, and to follow it to its logical conclusion, would allow abortion whenever the mother would allege that she is suffering mental distress. This would clearly result in the taking of a virtually unlimited number of innocent lives. I hope that we would all find that spectre to be an abominable insult to humanity, a morally unconscionable situation.

A coach with moral substance

Colman McCarthy

WASHINGTON--A subversive is loose on the American sporting scene. He is Morgan Wootten, the nationally known basketball coach at De Matha Catholic high school in Hyattsville, Md. His charges have slam-dunked their way to so many victories over the years (649 wins, 92 losses since 1956) that a few weeks ago a search committee from North Carolina State offered Wootten a five-year, $700,000 contract.

Keep searching, Wootten told them. Although flattered that his winning ways were worth that much to the educators of North Carolina, Wootten kept his head when the $700,000 was dangled before him. The trouble was, his head had yet to be filled with the idea that Big Money equaled the Big Dream.

Instead, it contained different thoughts, including some he developed in his other work at De Matha, teaching history. "I have always told my history students and basketball players," he explained to reporters, "that their top priorities in life should be God, family and education -- in that order. Money was never included and never has been the primary factor in my definition of happiness for myself and my family."

The promoters and profiteers in American sports will have to muzzle this infidel accordingly for such heresies. But for me, Wootten from Hyattsville joins the company of a few inspired coaches I had in high school.

Like Wootten, my coaches were men of double disciplines.

The man who taught me basketball also taught wood-working. The latter was derided by the straight-A contingent as a baby-sitting course for the basketball goons. I almost thought so myself, until years later I read an essay by Willa Cather: "If I could get a carpenter to make me some good bookcases, I would have as much respect for him as I have for the people whose books I want to put on them. Making something well is the principal end of education." My basketball coach had said the same, whether we were practicing the fast break or the art of the coping saw.

My golf coach in high school was also my English teacher. For him, reading and golf were contemplative acts. Both were ruined by noise and speed. Literature and golf -- personal and soft experiences -- could be refuges from life's harshness.

Golf is put down by those who think it is the sport of big-bellied capitalists. The fat rich do indeed play the game, but my high school coach had nothing to pick from but a few skinny kids who learned the joy of the sport as caddies.

"Golf is a lifetime recreation," he would say, "not just a youth-time game." And then in English class, he would insist that literature was also for life.

not merely for school. I decided then to stay with both. Refuge would be needed.

James Thurber had the whimsical view that 95 percent of American males dream at night that they are on the mound at Yankee Stadium striking out all the great sluggers. I must be in the other five percent, because when I dream about sports it isn't Babe Ruth or Reggie Jackson who appear, but my old coaches on the sidelines.

Except that they weren't on the sidelines, any more than Coach Wootten of Hyattsville is marginal in the lives of his high school kids. My coaches had gone beyond the single and fixed idea that the sports world is the only world, with citizenship limited to the talented. Life, too, these men taught, is also about carpentry, literature and long walks over warm grass.

Coach Wootten's ideas about God, family and education might be no more than reactionary platitudes had they come from, say, a professional or even a college coach. By then, the athletes have mostly been conditioned. Their individuality has been submerged beneath the pressures to win, be rich and be famous.

In high school, this fairy-tale grandeur can be put in perspective by a coach who has moral substance. Then when his own temptation comes, he knows what to treasure.

The Truth in the scriptures

Dear Editor:

From his comments in the March 10 issue of The Observer, it seems that Bill Toohey is absolutely certain that Jesus was a pacifist and "totally rejected violence," just as the Christian theologians are also absolutely certain that the term "resurrection from the dead" is not a reference to a monotheistic doctrine of reincarnation.

Approximately two years ago a letter appeared in The Observer in which I challenged the chairman of the department of theology and any other theologian at Notre Dame to a public debate on the meaning of the term "resurrection of the dead." I am now challenging Bill Toohey or any other theologian at Notre Dame to a public debate on whether Jesus "totally rejected violence."

Of course, I do not expect a reply to this challenge any more than I expected a reply to my first challenge. People who claim to understand the scriptures but who do not, in fact, understand the scriptures, tend to avoid those situations which either make their lack of understanding more widely known or tend to increase, unnecessarily the risk of unemployment. An investigation of the Truths in the scriptures is, after all, entertainment at its best, just so long as the individual makes certain that any of those Truths do not interfere with how one makes a living.

Reagan electable as a candidate

Dear Editor:

Perhaps the most frequently cited poll of the past few weeks has been one pitting Gov. Ronald Reagan vs. President Carter in a general election. Carter leads Reagan in this poll, 58-40. This survey has incessantly been cited as gospel proof that Reagan cannot win in November against Carter by such people as John Anderson, NBC, CBS, and ABC. I think it is very important that we keep our perspective on this poll, concerning which, a few observations should be made.

1) In New Hampshire, the Boston Globe poll of voters indicated a dead heat between Ronald Reagan and George Bush. The results were quite different: Reagan 50 percent, Bush 23 percent.

2) In the People's Republic of Massachusetts, not exactly Reagan's strongest area, another Boston Globe poll taken one month before the election showed Bush over Reagan by a 61-16 margin. Reagan came within two percent of winning in the state which went for McGovern in 1972.

3) One week before the election in Illinois, the Chicago Sun-Times poll showed Anderson leading Reagan, 39-31. The Tribune had Anderson ahead by a 33-31 margin. Again, the results indicated otherwise, as Reagan carried Anderson's home state with a comfortable 48-37 percent victory. The much heralded crossover vote did vote 47 percent for Anderson. What has been ignored, however, is that Reagan won 40 percent of the Democrat and Independent voters, according to NBC News.

The point of these examples is to illustrate that which should now be obvious, i.e. that the polls mean nothing when it comes to the election. The polls always seem to show Reagan in bad shape until he begins his campaign in each state, at which time his popularity soars.

Those who claim that Reagan is unelectable ignore a number of significant facts. First, they ignore the fact that Reagan is the best campaigner in politics today. They also fail to note that Reagan won the governorship twice by an average of 750,000 votes in California, where Democrats outnumbered Republicans 2-1. Finally, they ignore the fact that Reagan has a huge target to run against, James Earl Carter. Never in American history has the office of President been occupied by a man of such incompetence. The possibility of his reelection is truly frightful.

So let's be realistic. If we are going to talk about electability, let's talk about the facts. Governor Reagan is electable. Reagan can, must, and will be elected our next President.

In defense of the CLC

Dear Editor:

As a member of the Campus Life Council, a group under considerable criticism of late, I read with interest the recent articles in The Observer about it. I think that Fr. Richard Conyers and Paul Riehle have brought out some of the important problems concerning the keg proposal, and the CLC in general. They have raised some of the weaknesses inherent in the CLC which, of late, have led to some disappointing results for myself and others.

With one of the articles, however, I have some personal objections. That article is an editorial written by The Observer (March 14). In the editorial, The Observer claims that "the CLC can no longer be taken seriously as an advisory body," and several other charges. I wonder where The Observer gets its justification for making these requests. It seems irresponsible to me that The Observer would have such harsh criticism of the CLC when it actually knows little about its operation. The Observer infers that the student representatives are incompetent, calling for "a wider student representation" in order to get "more imaginative and meaningful student commentary on campus life." And, yet, the main source of information on campus issues, The Observer, does not even send a reporter to most of the meetings.

I agree that there are some problems with the present composition and lack of power of the CLC, but at this point there does not seem to be a good alternative available. There has been discussion, in the CLC, about possible changes in its composition, but the consensus, thus far, is that the present structure is the most representative. I disagree with The Observer's claim that the CLC "can no longer be taken seriously" and that it is "useless." I think most CLC members would agree that we have done some very positive things this year.

Before it criticizes the CLC for being irresponsible, I think The Observer should assume a little responsibility itself. If they come to the CLC meetings and learn, firsthand, how it operates, then maybe they will be justified in their future opinions of it. Until then, I think it is unfair for The Observer to influence student opinion on a very important topic.

Services thank ND community

Editor's Note: The following letter was sent to Fr. Hesburgh by Fr. Edwin Broderick, executive director of the Catholic Relief Services.

Dear Fr. Hesburgh:

Hardly a month goes by that we are acknowledging a gift from the Notre Dame Community. Donations come to us from students, faculty and alumni. Letters telling us of their efforts on our behalf have been received from the Campus Ministry, Third World Relief Fund, Cambodia response, Holy Cross Fathers and Brothers and the World Hunger Coalition. (I just hope I have not left out anyone.) In every case, their efforts were to both raise funds and, more important, to raise the conscious level of awareness.

Needless to say, this overwhelming response of your good people has certainly been an inspiration to all of us here at CRS. I am indebted to them for their generosity and great compassion.

There are times when a mere "thank you for everything" seems to be quite inadequate. This is one of them, but I am sure you know the depth of my appreciation and that of the CRS family.

Molinelli 'dead' to our community

Dear Editor:

I am writing in response to the letter by B. P. Goyer concerning Michael Molinelli, the author of "Molarity." First, I would like to express my conviction that the strip is still being composed by Mr. Molinelli. I have examined the writing carefully and have discovered that it is indeed that of the cartoonist himself.

To address the claims which Goyer appeals to in order to support the theory that Mr. Molinelli is deceased and therefore could not be the author of the strip any longer, I wish to make public the fact that I have been in contact with the cartoonist and have in my possession a postcard that was sent to me by the allegedly late Michael Molinelli himself. He is, as has been announced in The Observer several times, abroad this year with the Notre Dame Architect Rome Program. The postcard to which I refer has a picture of a statue of the Madonna di Monte Alfeo. Mr. Molinelli relates in his note on the back of the card that this statue sits on top of the mountain where his family comes from. Mr. Molinelli is far from being physically dead: he is in bell' Italia, searching for his roots.

I do concede that there have been some very cryptic symbols in "Molarity" lately. Indeed, upon examining more closely the strip referred to in Goyer's letter, I find one that was not mentioned. In the last panel, just above the author's signature appears on a sweatshirt the message "Bye Notre Dame." In today's cartoon, there are a couple of other clues which seem to indicate that Mr. Molinelli has met with some cruel fate. In the first panel, Jim Mole appears to be holding a skull; in the last panel, on the desk are the words, "I was." To most people this would seem to be a clear indication that Mike is no longer among the living. However, it is my belief that these clues are not to be taken in their literal sense.

As one who has spent a year abroad, I know that among students who spend time away from their home campus there is often the feeling of being "dead" to friends on the home campus. Very few friends find the time to keep their promise to write to those abroad. It is my contention that Mr. Molinelli feels dead in this very way. He must be employing his comic strip to lament the fact that he hears nothing from the people for whom he writes "Molarity."

I propose therefore that we, the students of Notre Dame and Saint Mary's, do everything in our power to resurrect Michael Molinelli from his "death" to our community. Let us deluge him with letters. In fact, why don't we attempt to make this a universal resurrection and write to all those friends abroad to whom we made promises to write?

Michael Molinelli's address this year is:

O'Hanlon's: ND's best kept secret

by Chris Needles
Sports Writer

They are not university-sponsored, not even as one of those "minor sports" we hear so much about. They don't even enjoy club status. Nonetheless, O'Hanlon's Notre Dame Men's Volleyball team is currently in first place in the Western Division of the Midwest Intercollegiate Volleyball Association (MIVA). The trouble is--they are the best kept secret on campus since Dan Devine's "blue-to-green" scheme for the 1977 Southern Cal game.

Last year, a group of 20 volleyball fanatics got together to see if they could organize a team and, if possible, play intercollegiately. Thanks to the sponsorship of Mr. John O'Hanlon, proprietor of O'Hanlon's Warehouse Liquors of South Bend, and a $300 grant from student government, their dream became a reality. Now, the squad, in first place with 17 points, is competing against the *varsity*squads from such institutions as Purdue, Michigan, Northwestern, Ball STATE* AND Miami of Ohio. Now that's progress!

"Well, there was just a bunch of us that wanted to play competitively on the collegiate level," says team member Bill Strotman. "We got together, and thanks to Mr. O'Hanlon, we are where we are today."

Obviously these guys have more than just a passing interest in the game of volleyball. Most of us are satisfied with intramural competition and, of course, all of us enjoy playing it on the beaches in the summer with those bikini-clad beauties. But O'Hanlon's squad wanted just a little bit more, so they actively pursued the minute possibility of varsity competition with other universities. And the rest, as they say, is history.

As one examines the team roster, there is one name that catches the eye right away. That name is Kevin Hawkins, whom we all know and love as one of the "walk-ons" on Digger Phelps' basketball team. Hawkins, a junior from Los Angeles, also just happens to be the tallest member of the volleyball team at 6-5. He uses that superior height and his incredible leaping ability to his advantage on the volleyball court, and is a valuable asset to the squad.

But, of course, he cannot do it alone. Although the members of the rest of the squad do not enjoy the notoriety that Hawkins possesses, they are just as valuable to the squad. There is that often-heard-of blend of youth and experience present, with one law student, two seniors, five juniors, one sophomore, and two newly-recruited freshmen comprising the eleven member team.

O'Hanlon's team is predominantly a tall squad, with six of its players standing at least 6-2. Freshman Barry Smith, who hails from Lancaster, NY, stands at 6-4. Team captain Dennis Regan (a junior from Newport Beach, Calif.), first-year law student John Klebba (Des Moines, Iowa), junior Al Schumacher (South Holland, Ill.), and senior Gary Metzler (Grand Rapids, Mich.) all stand at 6-2, providing a formidable sight for the opposition. Senior Tom Meaney (6-1) and sophomore John Pierce (6-0), though they lack the size of the others, are very adequate performers nonetheless.

But volleyball is not just a game for the skyscrapers to show off their spiking skills. There is a place in the game of volleyball for the "little man", and 5-9 Brent Beutter (a junior from nearby Mishawaka), 5-10 Clark Gibson (a freshman from Torrance, Calif.), and 5-11 Bill Strotman (a junior from Park Ridge, Ill.) fill that role admirably.

Besides clinching the Western Division of the MIVA with 17 points, the ND squad owns among its accomplishments a second place finish in the recent Indiana State Championships at Ball State University. The squad defeated teams from Earlham College, Indiana-Purdue at Fort Wayne, and Purdue before falling to the host Cardinals, who just happen

Angela Athletic Facility

Blue Wave, ND co-sponsor USVBA tourney

by Beth Huffman
Women's Sports Editor

Saturday Angela Athletic Facility (AAF) and Clay High School will be the site of a United States Volleyball Association (USVBA) power play tournament cohosted by the Blue Wave and O'Hanlon's volleyball clubs. The invitational has been alternately billed as the ND-SMC Invitational, the SMC-ND Invitational and the second-annual Golden Dome Invitational. Without the harping over who gets top billing the two campus volleyball groups join a 26-team field in Saturday's competition of power play.

"Power denotes a higher level of play. It means not recreational volleyball," says Erin Murphy, head coach of the Blue Wave. "Volleyball has progressed so much that there is a need for distinction, we don't pat the ball around like someone in a backyard."

The Division A tournament, Division A being the second highest level of play sanctioned by the USVBA, is a collection of 26 teams--16 women's and 10 men's--with members representing a broad level of ages, experience and motives.

"There'll be people from all age groups," offers Murphy, a graduate of Lewis College. "A couple of clubs will be all-star high school teams like South Bend Turner's, which has girls from Adams, St. Joe's and other area schools. They could beat a college team. It's interesting that they play at the same level but the ages vary."

Murphy, also the head coach of Saint Mary's varsity volleyball team, founded the Blue Wave this year to keep her players in the volleyball swing of things. The club practices three days a week and conditions two days besides boasting an winning basketball team in the Saint Mary's intramural tournament.

"Our season is so short, from September to November, that they have to play more," says Murphy of her charges. "Next year they would have forgotten everything without playing. It would take a month to get them back to where they had been the previous year."

Teams will travel to the competition from such sites as St. Charles, Missouri, and Columbus, Ohio. The host teams can thank the USVBA for the tournament's publicity.

"The tournament is approved by our organization. The USVBA publishes a newsletter with tournaments listed," explains Murphy, also the assistant athletic director at Saint Mary's. "All the clubs have to do is call for information."

Murphy expects the host Blue Wave, which placed second at the Kellogg Invitational in January, to be one of the better teams along with a few other talented clubs in the women's division.

"Valparaiso ought to be good, they are Division II in college and the coach plays on the team," says Murphy. "Kellogg Community College also has a national reputation in volleyball."

Not to be excluded from the favored teams according to Murphy are those from St. Charles, Ball State and Chicago.

In the men's division the Blue Wave's mentor expects the clubs from Western Michigan, Indianapolis, Valparaiso and Notre Dame to be the front runners.

"You can't rule out Notre Dame as one of the favored," states Murphy. "They have been winning at a lot of big tournaments lately."

Saturday's invitational will begin at 9 a.m. with five pools--three women's and two men's--in round robin play. Each club will play all the other teams in its pool two games ending at 11. The record of games won in pool play will boost teams to the semi-finals which begin at 6 p.m. in the AAF. The semis will be based on the best of three games to 11 points. The championship matches for both men and women will follow the semi-finals as the top two teams clash in the best of three games to 15.

Individual trophies will be awarded to the members of the winning teams in both the men and women's divisions while the second place clubs will each receive team trophies.

The tournament means much more to the Blue Wave and O'Hanlon's than another trophy on the wall, according to Murphy.

"Besides volleyball we have gained valuable experience through traveling and meeting others. We all pitch in and have fun, too."

Erin Murphy--player-turned coach

By Kate Huffman
Sports Writer

Erin Murphy, after an accomplished career as a volleyball player, selected to channel her skills towards the helping of others--not so unlike the player-turned coaches Frank Robinson or Ray Meyer.

Robinson started playing baseball in the sandlots, broke into the majors with Cincinnati and went on to play for the Orioles and Cleveland before taking over as manager for the Tribe. Meyer, a standout All-American selection at Notre Dame switched his talents to teaching and came up with a nationally ranked basketball team.

Coach of the Blue Wave, Saint Mary's club volleyball team, Murphy's career parallels that of the two famous men.

Murphy, a native of Morgan Park, Ill., started playing volleyball for her grammar school team. "At first it was just another sport to me," says Murphy, "like most kids, I played any sport they could come up with. But in the eighth grade I had a really dedicated coach who really sparked my interest in volleyball."

Murphy went on to play for Mother McAulley High School in Chicago, where she captained the team her senior year. While Murphy was at Mother McAulley, the team took the city championship three years in a row.

Playing for her high school team didn't satisfy Murphy's love for volleyball. She was invited to play for the Morgan Volleyball Club, appropriately named after the founder of volleyball, William Morgan. Murphy would practice up to two hours a day with Mother McAulley's team and then go straight to practice with the club for anywhere from two to six hours.

The hard work payed off for all of the members of the Morgan Club. The club captured the 1974 Prep National Championships and the 1975 Junior Olympic title. It also qualified for the 1974 AAU nationals, where Morgan's took 15th place and the 1975 United States Volleyball Association nationals, returning to Chicago with 12th place.

Murphy moved from the prep scene to the college schedule in 1975. She attended George Williams College in Downers Grove, Ill., on full academic and athletic scholarships. Her skills helped the team capture the Illinois State Championship and sixth place at the Collegiate Nationals during the '75-76 campaign.

In 1976, Murphy transferred to Lewis College in Joliet, Ill., where she again received full academic and athletic scholarships. The team took second place in the state tournament that year. The following year the squad from Lewis again placed second in the Illinois tournament. The team finally triumphed in Murphy's senior year, taking first place in the state tournament, placing second in the Midwest Regionals, and finishing sixth at nationals. Murphy added leadership to her list of credentials, captaining the team her last two years at Lewis. She was also named MVP of the team two of her last three years on the college scene.

During the off season, Murphy again turned to club play, this time with the Chicago Rebels Volleyball Club, one of the most noted teams on the USVBA tour. In 1976, the Rebels took the Illinois State Championship, the six-state USVBA Region VI championship, going on to take sixth place at the USVBA national tournament. The squad also took the USA Eastern Zone championships.

While playing with the Rebels, Murphy acquired a great deal of volleyball experience on the international level. The team was in great demand to play touring teams. The Rebels traveled around the country putting on exhibitions with such teams as the Russian men's and Canadian men's Olympic teams, the U.S. women's Olympic team and the Japanese women's national team.

"It used to be that volleyball was mostly played by older people," reflects Murphy, "but because we were so young, people wanted to watch us play."

Murphy has nothing but fond memories of all of the years she has spent on the volleyball court. "Even with all of the hard work and long hours we put in, for me, the benefits far outweigh the work. I can honestly say that I never regretted one minute of the workouts, whether it was intramural, varsity, club, or whatever."

Like Robinson and Meyer, Murphy has left the court and turned her attention towards helping other promising players. She is now in her first year as head coach of the St. Mary's volleyball team and the college's club team, the Blue Wave.

Murphy looks on her entire career in sports as an enriching experience. "Sports teach you how to get along with people, how to play within rules that have to be kept, to discipline yourself, but most importantly to me, they give you an opportunity to set a goal for yourself and achieve that goal. Most people don't set goals for themselves but athletes are very lucky because we have that opportunity and it can give a whole new meaning to your life."

Marybeth Brennan leaps to make the return.

to be ranked 8th in the nation by the NCAA.

This weekend, the students of Notre Dame will get an opportunity to see their relatively unknown volleyball team in action at Saint Mary's Angela Athletic Facility. The squad will be hosting a tournament, along with SMC's Blue Wave team, featuring ten top-flight men's collegiate squads and sixteen of the best female teams in the Midwest.

"We should have a good chance of winning the men's tournament," comments Strotman. "We've been playing well lately, with clinching the division title and all that. It ought to be exciting."

So, now the secret's out. Yes, there is a championship volleyball team on this campus. They call themselves O'Hanlon's Notre Dame volleyball team and they play an exciting brand of volleyball. And they aren't in first place in the MIVA because of Irish Luck either. It just goes to show that, as the saying goes, "where there's a will, there's a way." That 'will', if everything goes as planned, can be transformed into an MIVA championship and, if possible, national prominence.

World War III Gives Warning

"Black Horse One Zero, Black Horse One Zero, this is Shovel Six. Confirming Charlie One's sighting as follows: large armored formation has passed through inter German border Zero Three Zero Five Zulu approximate brigade in size. Inform Black Horse Six that Shovel is engaging Out."

These are the words that open Gen. Sir John Hackett's chilling fictional history, The Third World War, August 1985. Translation: a massive Russian armored force has just crossed the West German border --the "next" war has started.

Hackett, former commander of the British Army of the Rhine--an integral part of the NATO European defense system is certainly in a position to know what could happen, and although it is not one of the easiest tasks in the world to conjure up pictures of death and destruction in one's mind, The Third World War goes a long way toward putting the reader right in the middle of the world's most serious crisis to date--the crisis that could very well spell an end to our way of life.

An American intelligence ship in the Gulf of Aden is sunk by Soviet ships. The President of Mexico assassinated. India and South Africa turn into chaotic states of internal strife. Then, following growing discontent at home, culminating in riots in East Berlin, the Russians take a bold gamble and invade Yugoslavia.

The time is August 1985, and as things turn out, the Soviets have miscalculated with their adventurism in Yugoslavia. U.S. Marines are flown in and much to the surprise of rapidly advancing Russian troops, engage Soviet troops in bitter combat. The Marines pay the price in heavy casualties, but in turn decimate the Russians in the battle. To save face, the Russian have no recourse but to launch an all-out attack on Western Europe. World War III has begun.

The purpose of this review is not to delve into the outcome of this mind game in detail, so I'm going to leave you with the thought of numerically, superior Warsaw Pact forces sweeping into NATO's defense lines with a swiftness, devastation, and merciless intensity that would make Hitler's Blitzkrieg look like playing cowboys and indians.

Hackett recounts the conflict with a meticulous narrative set at a time immediately following the conflict, looking back on the catastrophe through fictional news stories and captured military records. It's heavy material, and at least a rudimentary knowledge of weapons systems and military terminology is needed just to keep up, but if the reader fits that bill, this book can control your eyes, and not let go until the last bullet, the last laser, the last intercontinental ballistic missile, is fired.

The book is not some lunatic writer's sadistic fantasy. It's a responsible, well-researched, and perhaps prophetic warning to the world of what could very well be staring us in the face.

There are some surprises in this war. If it means anything to you, I think it is comforting to read that any future war doesn't necessarily have to end up in a total nuclear holocaust. but that doesn't mean nuclear weapons aren't used. Or chemical weapons. Or space weapons. If you're more confused now than ever, good. That's a great indication you might want to read about the Third World War before it happens.

One hint before I finish: We won't be speaking Russian in 1990...

The Devil You Know

Rev. Robert Griffin

Late Sunday evening, after the last Mass was said, and the cheer-leading for Jahweh had ended for another week, I admitted the Devil to my room, and we played the name of being agnostic. The Devil, reeking of perfume from Pucci, wore a Pierre Cardin shirt and a Princess Mara necktie, like the ones Jeannie gave me for Christmas. He sported a new moustache that's the spitting image of my moustache; and he had the air of a gentleman who has recently lost a great deal of weight. The advantages, to the Devil, of looking like me, is that I don't waste time doubting whether he really exists. As long as I can admit my own existence, I don't have problems establishing the identity of the evil one.

"As usual," he said, taking my Pall Mall away from me as soon as I had lighted it, "You're working too hard, setting up land deals in Disneyland." In separating me from my cigarettes, he makes one of his cleverest appearances as an angel of light.

"I feel fine," I said, "but who invited you? If you don't mind, I'd rather be alone."

"You are alone," he said. "Except for you, this room is as empty as an atheist's heaven. I'm just the night shadow of the doubt you're afraid of, the darkness hugging the corners of your mind. If you pray, a flight of angels will be sent to keep you safe. Isn't that what the Divine Ineptitude has promised?"

"It's like a game of politics between you and Him," I said, "where neither candidate speaks well of the other."

"Except," he said, "that Old Tinchorn keeps insisting that the meek shall inherit the earth. They could hardly complain if He eventually cheats them; otherwise, if they complain, they wouldn't really be the meek, and shouldn't be inheriting anything."

You can't argue with the Devil; to tell the truth, I don't even try. On Sunday evenings, after the cheer-leading of worship, I'm a little discouraged with God. The Devil, sensing the weariness, cheered me up with the offer of an unruly passion. Out of habit, I rejected it, but I'm unredeemed enough to be grateful.

"He ruins Himself," I complained. "He seems to like to be defeated. I like Him so much, but He doesn't deserve to be a winner."

"I could have made it easy for Him," the Devil said modestly. "I could have given Him the whole world to bootlick the legs of His throne; but He wouldn't share. He didn't want to be partners; He insisted on doing it His way." His way, for Frank Sinatra, was the height of macho. His Way, for God, was merely self-destructive.

"Blessed are they that mourn," I tell them, "for they shall be comforted. Blessed are the merciful, for they shall obtain mercy. Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God. Blessed are the peacemakers, for they shall be called the children of God."

"Honeyed words, like opium," the Devil sneered. "And He calls me the Father of lies."

"Experience always ends with death," I said. "In the green leaf of nature, life keeps re-appearing, until winter overwhelms it. But when the great globe of earth itself is cracked, and the earth and seed are consumed in fire, what will become of existence? Will God give back life then that He wouldn't lift His hand to save now?"

"I watched Him die," the Devil said. "Proud, mean, spiteful, He preferred to suffer. When He finally died, I covered Him with darkness. He couldn't prevent me from helping Him when He was dead, and I covered Him with darkness, because I didn't like to look at Him."

"I guess," I said, "that when you finished with Him, He didn't look very much like God any more?"

"What," he said, "is He supposed to look like except a skinny kid who is going hungry, or a sick woman whose friends have left her, or a poor man who needs clothes to keep him from freezing. He looked like all of them. I could never respect a superior whom I had to pity."

"He ruins Himself," I said, "and I'm worn out from trying to get people to take Him seriously. It's very tiring, teaching them lessons about grains of wheat, falling into the earth and dying, so that they might bring forth new life."

"He couldn't forgive me," the Devil said. "I offered Him the kingdoms of the world and the glory thereof that He could have shared with His beggars, and He couldn't forgive me. With His dying breath, He forgave everyone who hurt Him, but He couldn't forgive me, and it hurt me for quite a long time."

He didn't seem like a bad devil, as he sat there, looking like me, grieving for himself, loving God and hating Him in the same emotion.

"Why do you suppose He wouldn't forgive you?" I said.

"Our argument began a long time ago," he said, "when I said to His creatures: 'Would you like to be like' - he hesitated, refusing to say the name - 'like His Nibs?' His Nibs, when He found out, got very angry. He said it wasn't supposed to be that way at all; that He wanted to become like those low, vile creatures Himself; that was the way He had planned creation. I said it was ridiculous; He should raise creatures to His level, not descend to theirs. Did He expect outstanding angels like myself to look like vile vermin? He said that He didn't expect anything from His angels except that they should await their marching orders. I said that if marching orders meant kowtowing to silly creatures, He could shove them up St. Gabriel's horn, because I marched to the beat of a different drummer. The He told me to get out, and I told Him I was getting out, but He could send for me when he had come to his senses. He hasn't sent for me yet, so I keep taking His creatures away from Him, tempting them with offers of the kingdoms and glory of the world that His Nibs, with His slumming, had no use for."

By now, the Devil had begun weeping, as though he regretted taking creatures away from their Maker, but taking creatures away, was what a Creator, who wouldn't compromise, made a poor devil do. Sweat was beading brow, and he had begun reeking rather vulgarly with the smell of burning sulphur. Afraid that he might hurt me, I threw holy water at him, to make him disappear. "Et tu, Brute? Then falls Caesar," he said with great dignity. With words from a scene he had rehearsed before, the archvillain of the world left my room, like an actor playing tragedy with wounds from a personal sorrow.

There is an evil part of me that makes me nervous: the night shadow of a doubt I'm afraid of, a darkness hugging the corners of my mind. On days like Sunday, when I preach too much, making God somewhat smaller than myself, feeling sorry for Him because He may not exist - if He does exist, why the suffering? - the Devil comes to tell that God bears him a grudge.

As a member of the Devil's party, I know that the Devil lies. God doesn't bear grudges, but the Devil nurses a grudge. The Devil resists the mercy to forgive God for being outcast and leperous. The sin of not forgiving is the Devil's sin against God Who, so far, seems to have lost most of the battles.

An old lady once praised the Devil with the remark: "You've got to admit that He's a hard worker. On Sunday evenings, when I've finished cheerleading, I wish like the Devil that I could say of God; 'He's a hard worker.'"

Mom, Stick to Bingo

Mrs. Eileen A. F. prominent resident of the township of Lower Merion, Pa. braked to a screeching halt in front of Mapes Five and Dime store and hooked her horn. Mr. Mapes, a hulking, shapeless man in his early fifties, sporting the latest in polyester chic, slowly ambled to the car window. Mrs. F. whipped a check out of her wallet.

"Would you mind cashing this for me?"

The check, a good one, too, represented an entire week's worth of grocery money - money to feed the five voracious little mouths at home. Mr. Mapes gazed at the check for a long moment. His gaze shifted to Mrs. F's face. He looked at the check again.

"Can we make a deal?"

Apparently, Mr. Mapes had gotten a hot tip from his bookie at Liberty Bell race track. He was talking a gelding named Black Destroyer

"Why don't you just go ahead and place the bet yourself?", asked Mrs. F.

"Well, I've already put down some money, and, well, I've gotta pay the help."

The help, seven punky thirteen year olds, had their little noses pressed against the store window to make sure Mr. Mapes would not try to run away.

"Look Mrs. F., a horse is a sure thing. If you go halves with me on this bet, you could get those new living room curtains."

"I don't know, I've got a husband and five kids at home."

"Yeah, and do you got a mink coat at home?"

"What race is it?"

Black Destroyer was running in the ninth race. The track was hard and fast. The race started precisely at the designated time; Black Destroyer ran without mishap and finished last.

That night, Mrs. F. fixed scrambled eggs for dinner. She said she was too tired to fix a big meal. Then after dinner, while her family was watching reruns of "Voyage to the Bottom of the Sea," she turned up the T.V.

really loud so no one could hear anything, which was good, since she didn't want anyone to overhear the call she was about to make. Since half the bet was Mr. Mapes', she could therefore extort enough money from him to enable her to take it through the weekend.

"What do you mean you can't give me the money yet?"

"Well, a lot of those little twerps had put in overtime, and cash turnover was high today and there's nothing in the cash register. What can I say?"

What could Mrs. F. do?

Her children, sensing her distress, without understanding its cause, rallied around her to offer their comfort and support.

"Mom, I need new sneakers."

"Shut up."

"Mom, I need them bad. See, my toes are sticking out."

"I'll break your toes and then you won't need any sneakers." And so it went. Finally, Mrs. F. became desperate. There were no eggs left to scramble, no hot dogs to defrost.

The sounds of her children wailing for peanut butter forced her to extreme measures. Storming her way into Mr. Mapes' five and dime, she planted herself next to the cash register, and as the Narberth Little League bought their post-practice bubble gum, she snatched the change from the cashier's hand until she had collected the amount Mr. Mapes owed her. Then, she set about her weekly shopping.

"Why are you giving me such a lousy cut of pork roast," she screeched at the butcher, "I had to wait around for two hours while some little creeps at the soda fountain traded Jim Palmer for Joe Morgan and I want value."

Gasoline targets announced

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Energy Department yesterday announced gasoline conservation targets, which each state is expected to meet during the next three months.

The targets call for a nationwide reduction of about 6.7 percent in gasoline use during April, May and June, compared with the corresponding months of 1979.

The proposed state reductions range from a low of 1.1 percent in Wyoming to 17 percent for Alaska.

Department representatives said the percentages for each state are not actually related to the amount of gasoline used in the states last year. They said the percentages represent an idealized estimate of what last year's figure would have been in each state under "normal" conditions - when adjusted for the effects of weather and fuel shortages, for example.

The targets set by the department are voluntary and each state is to decide how to meet its target. The states are to submit plans to the federal government, detailing ways to achieve the goals.

Department spokeswoman Maria Uharenko said this means an individual motorists can't tell what kind of a fuel-saving effort is expected, until his state government spells it out.

Students are finding it increasingly difficult to concentrate in class or on tests with Spring Break just one week away.

State initiates plan to combat Curene 442

ADRIAN, Mich (AP) - The mainly Mexican-American working class people of Sunnyside are struggling to understand that they must wear shoes in the summer and keep dust outside because of a substance they cannot see and have no Spanish word for.

The substance in Curene 442, a synthetic chemical which makes plastic unbreakable. Scientists say its yellow particles have permeated the air and soil in Sunnyside, a neighborhood on the outskirts of Adrian.

The Curene in Sunnyside comes from the Anderson Development Co., the only U.S. manufacturer of the chemical. Chemist Amos Anderson founded the firm in Adrian in 1967 and has made Curene for the past 11 years.

Residents are mystified by the public debate over Curene - which has caused tumors in rats and dogs. While it has yet to make any person sick, scientists say Curene may also produce cancer in humans.

But Curene is a small worry in the lives of people in Sunnyside, who felt isolated by poverty and municipal neglect long before they heard of the chemical. They say they've complained for years about foul industrial odors, the lack of running water in many homes, inadequate sewers and unpaved streets.

Many houses are little more than tarpaper shacks. Dozens of windows are broken or covered with cardboard.

The mistrust of government and industry has been sharpened as lawyers, scientists, politicians and bureaucrats squabble over cleaning up Curene 442.

"Nobody cares about Sunnyside," said Maria Gonzalez, a recently elected county commissioner. "Politically speaking, if it were where the rich people live, there would have been some immediate attention."

"These poor Chicano and white people don't have the political clout that it takes to get something done."

Sunnyside didn't even learn of the potential chemical dangers until social workers successfully urged the county to print flyers in Spanish and hire a Spanish-speaking employee, she says.

Ms. Gonzalez went to the state for help. She claims city officials ignored Curene because Sunnyside is on the fringes of Adrian, and the county lacks the money.

The state responded with a never-before-tried "decontamination" plan that could cost taxpayers up to $6 million.

... Gas prices

entering the British capital, a two percent weekday decline and four percent on weekends. "We might use the car once a month over the weekends now," a British housewife told the AP. "A year ago, it was every weekend, and now I think twice about driving to the supermarket in London on weekdays."

In Italy, however, gasoline consumption climbed eight percent from the 1978 level despite the price increases. U.S. gasoline use fell five percent in the same period.

The average price of a gallon of regular gasoline at a full-service U.S. station was $1.13 in January, up from 68.42 cents a year before, according to the Lundberg Letter, a publication that covers the industry.

In many areas, prices are expected to continue to climb as the new Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries price boosts that hit in late January and early February work their way down to the pump.

Those increases will hurt poorer countries especially. In Kenya, where the World Bank estimates annual per-capita income at $2.70 the price of a gallon of premium gasoline has risen to $2.18 a gallon from $1.57 at the end of 1978.

But motorists aren't paying more everywhere. Big cars clog streets and highways in Venezuela, OPEC's fourth-largest member, where the price of premium has remained at just 30.8 cents a gallon over the past year.

A traveler who visited Saudi Arabia this month said the oil cartel's largest producer has even cheaper fuel: High-test at 29 cents a gallon.

In Mexico, another major producer, the state oil monopoly has frozen the price of gasoline at 46 cents a gallon for regular and 65.4 cents for premium since November 1976.

And in Canada, where controlled domestic crude oil prices are 60 percent below the world level, drivers pay 81 cents a gallon for regular gasoline, up from 71 cents a year before.

In many countries, high gasoline prices are due not only to rising crude oil prices but to high taxes as well.

Taxes make up 53 percent of the price of gasoline in Belgium, where a gallon of premium fuel now sells for $3.11 - up from $2.37 a year ago - but motorists there don't seem to be deterred by the price increase or the high tax.

"When prices go up, people may drive less for a brief while, but they soon go back to their normal driving habits," said a spokesman for the Belgian Petroleum Federation.

Japan's government said the average price of a gallon of gasoline, including an 85 cents-a-gallon tax, has risen to $2.13-$2.45 from $1.42-$1.85 a year earlier.

American taxes, by contrast, average only 14 cents a gallon, newsletter publisher Dan Lundberg estimates.

Italian taxes account for 64 percent of the country's $3.02 a-gallon price, while Portuguese drivers were paying a 73 percent fuel tax as their oil import-dependent nation's premium gasoline price climbed to $2.95 a gallon from $2.49 a year ago.

W. Europeans leave decisions up to Olympic committees

STRASBOURG, France (AP) - Britain and The Netherlands found no support yesterday from the rest of Western Europe for a boycott of the Moscow Olympic Games.

An overwhelming majority of the ministers and secretaries of state for sport, meeting under the aegis of the 21-nation Council of Europe, favored leaving the decision to their national Olympic committees.

They said their governments opposed making recommendations to the committees until the approach of the May 24 deadline for accepting invitations to the Summer Games.

The Netherlands' Secretary of State for Sport, C.G. Wallis de Vries, said he and his British counterpart, Hector Monro, were the only ministers who spoke in favor of a boycott.

Sources said France took the lead in opposing anti-Soviet action, Sports Minister Jean-Pierre Soisson arguing that it would be an intolerable interference of politics in sport.

Soisson originally opposed even putting the boycott issue on the agenda, threatening to stay away from the meeting, sources said. Later he agreed to attend, provided the talks were discreet and given minimum publicity - a condition rejected by Britain and West Germany.

De Vries said he warned his colleagues here that if they went to the Olympics while the Soviet Army was on Afghanistan soil, they would be letting the Kremlin "use sport for a very bad policy. Let's not forget that the Russians have crossed another country's border."

But he said he could understand other countries "not wanting to take a decision too prematurely."

De Vries said he had the feeling other countries might end up supporting a boycott. He pointed out that no country, not even France, had stated outright that it would attend the Games.

But even those countries which the U.S. State Department had listed as publicly favoring a boycott - Norway and Luxembourg - turned out to be undecided.

And Sweden and Switzerland, true to their neutralist tradition, insisted that governments even refrain from issuing guidelines to their Olympic committees as they debated whether to attend the Games.

Portugal is understood to support a boycott. But it did not take the floor at yesterday's session.

Soaring energy costs may create jobs for human laborers

WASHINGTON (AP) - The soaring cost of energy may be prompting employers to return to an old means of production that some government economists say is becoming cheaper than machines: human labor.

Labor Department economists estimate that up to 1 million jobs were created in 1979 because businesses have found it economical to substitute labor for energy-draining machinery.

Labor Secretary Ray Marshall, a trained economist, has been promoting this theory, which has received either scant attention or skeptical responses from most other economists.

The theory suggests that despite the jolts that the economy has suffered because of high energy prices, employment will remain healthier than conventional forecasts of sharply rising unemployment this year.

Marshall estimates that of 2 million jobs created in 1979, between 750,000 and 1 million resulted from substituting labor for energy, which rose more than 30 percent in price last year.

"I am seeing it happen all over the country," Marshall said. "If you reduce the speed limit to conserve fuel, you need more truck drivers. If you're putting in more insulation to keep from losing heat, you need labor to do it."

Nancy Barrett, a deputy assistant secretary of labor, estimates based on the limited research done in this field that each 1 percent rise in the price of energy leads to an increase of about 33,000 jobs.

She said this explains why unemployment has stuck at about 6 percent since mid-1978, defying economic forecasts of between 6½ and 7 percent unemployment by the end of 1979. Each 1 percent of unemployment equals about 1 million people.

Ms. Barrett says this trend also may be a main factor in last year's disturbing decline in productivity, which measures how efficiently goods and services are produced. President Carter's Council of Economic Advisors, however, rejects this conclusion.

Marshall's theory does not mean that the workforce is actually larger because of higher energy prices. The country's 200,000 laid off auto workers can vouch for that.

Rather, labor-for-energy substitution appears to cushion the harmful effects that rising energy prices might otherwise have caused. For example, Ms. Barrett said, the rise in energy prices last year slowed economic growth at a cost of 1 million conventional jobs. But that loss may have been fully offset by the increase in energy saving jobs.

Hostages, guerillas request negotiations

BOGOTA, Columbia (AP) - The Colombian government agreed yesterday to a request from hostages and guerrillas in the Dominican Republic Embassy to resume face-to-face negotiations, deadlocked for a week over the guerrillas' demand for the release of alleged political prisoners.

The talks, first set for today, were postponed until Monday after Foreign Minister Diego Uribe Vargas met with President Julio Cesar Turbay Ayala, diplomatic and government sources said.

"At the request of the ambassadors held hostages and the chief of the terrorists, the Colombian government has agreed to resume the negotiations," Uribe Vargas told reporters as he entered the presidential palace.

The foreign minister said he received the request Wednesday in a telephone call from Ambassador Richard Valan, one of the 32 foreign diplomats and others held hostages.

The request for new talks may signal the first major break since the M-19 guerrillas seized the embassy during a diplomatic reception on Feb. 27.

Galan called the foreign minister less than 24 hours after Uribe Vargas stated on a nationwide radio and television broadcast that the government would not budge on its refusal to meet the guerrillas' "non-negotiable" demand that 28 alleged political prisoners be freed.

In the broadcast, the government said reopening the talks indicated a softening of the M-19 position. However, there

Hoosier inmate-explosion forces prison renovation

(AP) - Indiana prison officials, faced with an inmate population that increased 21.5 percent last year and is still growing, are reorganizing procedures and considering renovation to relieve overcrowding.

The Indiana State Prison at Michigan City, about 40 miles east of Chicago, was originally designed for 1,200 inmates. Its population is now 1,673, and warden Jack Duckworth estimates the facility can handle up to 1,725 inmates.

The 1,300 inmates at the Indiana Reformatory at Pendleton are about 200 more than officials would like to maintain. "At the present rate, we will be at the capacity in a few months," Duckworth said of the 19th Century state prison. "We are identifying areas we can rearrange from their present use, such as cells used for storage, and we will be pressing every available bed into use."

The prison has been troubled by several outbreaks of violence the most recent when inmates held three guards hostage in March 1979 before releasing them unharmed when prison authorities agreed to discuss their grievances.

At the reformatory, superintendent Norman Owens said two men might have to put in each cell if the population continues to expand.

"Any administrator would like single bunks in all dormitories (cells) and in the cell blocks," Owen said. "This tends to create less trouble."

A problem associated with overcrowding is the lack of jobs at both facilities. Prison officials say a job shortage promotes idleness and increases the probability of violence.

"As people don't have constructive activities in which to engage, it gives them too much idleness, and this presents management problems," Duckworth said.

Larry Hembree, executive director of Public Action in Correctional Efforts, said inmates have become "sensitive" to growing population at state institutions.

"They (inmates) said they are putting beds everywhere and it's getting pretty crowded," Hembree said. "It's getting strained, and some of them (penal institutions) are kind of scary."

Owens said the reformatory is considering reconverting old buildings on the grounds to house inmates and initiating a program to manage inmates in small units.

"This will be very critical to managing a large number of inmates if the populations continue to go up," he said.

Computer unreliable in crisis ; runs amuck

WASHINGTON (AP) - The worldwide computer system built to warn the president of an enemy attack or international crisis is prone to break down under pressure, according to informed sources who have worked on or examined the system.

The system already has failed in at least two critical situations, the sources said.

A team of government auditors concluded that the computers, considered a bargain when they were installed nearly a decade ago, are fundamentally deficient in design and cannot be used effectively for military command purposes.

The auditors say the pentagon has spent $1 billion trying to make its World Wide Military Command and Control System work, yet the system - called Wimex - remains unacceptable slow and unreliable.

The manufacturer agrees the system doesn't work very well but says it could be modified to improve its performance.

Defense Department officials privately acknowledge they have had repeated problems with the computer network, but they insist they can get by without it when they have to.

James F. May, one of several experts from industry brought in to survey Pentagon computer operations, told The Associated Press the Wimex system is "at best very fragile."

And John H. Bradley, an electronic engineer who helped test the computer network during its development, says he was fired after he went over his bosses' heads to warn the White House that the president shouldn't depend on Wimex to tell him of a Soviet attack.

The Defense Department says the President doesn't depend solely on Wimex because there are two other, faster systems designed to detect a nuclear strike. However, a task force reporting to the president's Office of Management and Budget found that at least one of those "suffers frequent power interruptions due to electrical storm activity in Colorado."

The Wimex system was designed to warn the president and military chiefs of an enemy attack or security crisis such as the seizure of an embassy. The system also should provide up-to-date information about U.S. forces and options in any given area or situation.

Wimex consists of 35 Honeywell 6000-series computers at Military bases or in underground vaults at 27 sites, connected by a complex network of coding and decoding devices, ultra-sophisticated sensors and various processing machines.

However, according to the General Accounting Office, Wimex simply doesn't work when it's need most.

And a Pentagon document defending the system said that generally the "computers render effective support. The principal exception occurs in crisis situation, when commanders need quick answers to a broad range of possible questions."

"That," said one congressional expert, "constitutes and admission that it can't perform its primary mission."

Though details are still classified, sources said Wimex computers "Crashed" during the combined Navy, Marine Corps and Air Force operation to free the crew of the American merchant ship Mayaguez after it was captured off Cambodia in 1975.

A Pentagon spokesman contends that during the Mayaguez incident the computers were used very little and performed adequately. He added, however, that during another, unidentified crisis about the same time, the Wimex operator put off normal maintenance and the computers broke down. Superiors were told it would take 20 minutes to resume operations, it actually took more than two hours.

"It was aggravating," the officer said, "but nobody got killed, nobody lost his head."

An expert of the equipment said, "In general, the Wimex systems don't come back up. If you're down even for a second, thousands of transactions were supposed to occur. In trying to determine what happened, you have to determine what was lost...There are alternative designs that don't have this problem."

Asked how Wimex functioned during the recent Soviet military thrust into Afghanistan, a Pentagon official replied simply: "Classified." Pressed to say if his answer would be the same if the system had performed well, the same official said, "I don't know."

... Colombia

has been no sign the guerrillas were willing to give up. The fifth round of face-to-face talks ended March 13 when both sides said they would resume only when the other gave in.

Officials at the U.S. Embassy said yesterday that American Ambassador Diego Asencio called them Wednesday for the first time in five days. Asencio is one of 13 ambassadors and acting ambassadors reportedly inside occupied embassy who had telephoned their staffs daily until the talks broke off.

The government of President Julio Cesar Turbay Ayala, who has called the embassy occupation the worst crises in Colombia's 170 years of independence, has offered to fly the guerrillas out of the country but not to meet their other demands, M-19 stands for Movement 19, referring to elections on April 19, 1970, the guerrillas claim were fraudulent.

Colombian authorities have said they would not ransom the hostages, but would allow other countries with hostages in the embassy to pay ransom. The guerrillas originally requested $50 million for release of the hostages, but apparently dropped the demand early in the negotiations.

...Devine

"I like having people think I'm conservative," he admits. "Writers, players, other coaches; it's just not me to always be excited and carried away. Sometimes people get the wrong impression from that but I can't help it. Usually the people who criticize my behavior are the people who don't know me very well but that's ok, too. I'm all for letting people believe what they want about me."

A play which often times works to his advantage when he decides to call a not-so-conservative trick play, or give a rare "fire-and-brimstone" pre-game talk.

"You see," he chuckles, "by playing the role of a deadhead conservative, I can surprise a few people once in a while."

Yet some people, sportswriters especially, like to intimate that maybe Devine just doesn't care. But that isn't the case at all as evidenced by the schedule he keeps. On Wednesday, for example, he left the office at 7:30 p.m., worked at home until 2 a.m. and was on the phone with assistant Brian Boulac shortly after seven the next morning.

"I just like to pretend I don't care," he sighs. "And if people want to criticize me for that, fine. Now if a writer that I really know and respect said something bad about me then that would hurt me deeply. And if one of my players said I didn't care, I'd quit this job tomorrow."

"You see, my basic coaching philosophy hinges on being myself. If I were to offer any advice to a young man starting out in this business, I'd say just be yourself."

The 55-year old Devine has lifetime statistics of 164-54-8 and stands third in the NCAA in total triumphs. He's been in the winning locker room, at every major bowl game as either an assistant or a head coach and he's been honored with seven post-season all-star head coaching assignments.

"Hey," he says with a wink. "Just between you and I, I really do care."

... Iowa

Virginia in the championship game Wednesday.

"We have two teams still alive (in the NCAA), and I personally felt that there might be a third one," Olson said. "I thought Ohio State had the best shot of any of us to get in," but the Buckeyes lost a 72-68 semifinal to UCLA.

"There have been some great (Big Ten) teams involved in the tournaments and some awful goods teams in the other three that didn't make it," said Olson, referring to Wisconsin, Michigan State and Northwestern.

The Big Ten season was a brutal one, and the league title wasn't decided until the last game of the season when Indiana beat Ohio State.

There were "upsets" galore, and the three teams that didn't get postseason bids can brag of beating the top squads: last-place Northwestern toppled Purdue, Wisconsin downed Ohio State and Michigan State whipped Iowa.

"We've felt all along that the Big Ten was the toughest basketball conference in America."

The Big Ten schools had such a habit of knocking each other off that when Olson was asked if he was surprised at the outcome of a particular game, he replied, "I'm surprised at anybody winning anywhere."

The Big Ten's dominance in postseason play has become a tradition. Indiana won the 1976 NCAA title by defeating Michigan, and last year Michigan State bumped off Indiana State for the NCAA crown while Indiana won the NIT at the expense of Purdue.

"What happened last year with Michigan State and Indiana and this year certainly indicate that this is the best conference in America," said Olson.

"Visions and Dreams"

Scenes from eight plays by Shakespeare will be interpreted through dance by the Southold Dance Theater this Sunday, at 3 p.m., in Saint Mary's O'Laughlin Auditorium. The program, titled "Visions and Dreams," will be performed with another piece, "The Firebird."

Actors will read lines from the plays as Ann Dunn and Marcia Heintzberger dance to a collage of music. The plays from which scenes have been drawn include A Midsummer Night's Dream, Hamlet, Macbeth, and Richard III.

Among the characters who come to life through dance are Lady Macbeth urging her husband on to murder, Sir John Falstaff in a fit of melancholy over old age, and the spurned Ophelia drifting through insanity to death.

The scenes used in "Visions and Dreams" were selected and edited by Dunn in conjunction with Professor Paul Rathburn, who teaches Shakespearean courses at Notre Dame. Shakespeare's words will be interpreted at Sunday's performance by Ron and Linda Jacoby.

Tickets are $2.50 for students and senior citizens, and $5 for general admission, and are available at the door or may be purchased in advance at the O'Laughlin box office, the Century Center box office, or Buttons and Bows stores.

Curis paces Schwenk's upset

Catherine Curis scored 12 points last night as Schwenk's Swift Swishers (9-3) upset previously undefeated Blue Wave, 24-20, in the championship game of the SMC intermural league. The Blue Wave (11-1), which had beaten Schwenk's by two points in overtime earlier in the season, were lead by the floor leadership of Amy Morris.

In the consolation game, the Cager Commandoes easily defeated the Smucks, 37-23, for third place.

Judo club attends Invitational

Four members of the ND-SMC judo club attended the Calamazoo Annual Invitational Tournament last Saturday. Mark Kuntavanish, the club's president, and Grace Romzick each took third place. Tina Schifani and vice-president Diane King took fifth in their respective weight classes. The club's instructor, black belt Charles Hooks, took second in the heavyweight competition.

Kuntavanish commended the club's improvement and said it was due to the expert instruction of Hooks.

IU track coach critical

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) - Indiana University track coach Sam Bell was listed in critical condition Thursday after suffering a heart attack earlier in the week, doctors said.

The 52-year-old Bell was in the intensive care unit at Bloomington Hospital undergoing treatment for what a university spokesman described as a "massive" heart attack suffered Tuesday night.

Bell has coached the Hoosiers to 12 Big Ten championship in cross country, indoor and outdoor track.

Pigeons

Against Iowa, 23-8, Crum said he isn't planning anything special, because his team is so young.

Of the top seven players only one - All-American guard Darrell Griffith - is a returning starter. The other six include a freshman, four sophomores and a junior.

"With a young team, you have to concentrate on doing what you do and not on what the other team does," Crum said.

"If you practice against the other team's plays, you get into the game and start thinking about what they are doing, instead of what you are supposed to be doing," he said.

But Crum is not ignoring Iowa either.

"They are a lot like Memphis State," Crum said of Iowa. "But they are bigger and have better players, Iowa will be tough for anybody to beat."

That is something that the 43-year old coach has been trying to impress on his team. "I've caught these guys living in the past," he said.

"They've been watching videotapes all week, but guess which games - Kansas State, Texas A&M, and LSU. I said, 'Look, fellas, if you can't afford to go to the movies, watch videotapes. But do you mind watching Iowa?' They're not old enough to understand."

He is a former assistant coach under UCLA's Johnny Wooden and having taken a Louisville team to the NCAA finals three times before, Crum understands the pressure his team is under.

Or does he? "Pressure? There's no pressure on me. We could lose both games and I would still feel good," Crum said.

"If someone told me we'd do this with four sophomores and a senior after losing (starting center) Scooter McCray, I'd have said, 'You are sick. My name's Tucker, not Sucker.'"

Believe it or not, Devine cares

In anything as transient as a university community the patterns of change are a wistfully accepted way of life. Freshmen grow up to become sophomores, juniors become seniors and, at Notre Dame, seniors turn into card-carrying, money-giving alumni, complete with green hats, leprechaun neckties and two tickets to every football game but U.S.C. That's why they never make soap operas about college life. Everything happens too fast.

Dan Devine has spent the greater part of his life involved with all of it—26 of his 30 years in coaching have been at the college level so he's had some time to observe the changes.

"Oh, the environment is different around colleges today," he ponders. "But the important element, the kids, are basically the same. I have this notion, although sometimes it appears a bit naive, that a coach is a teacher. At least I like to believe that's my primary role. When I was at Missouri, they granted me a full professorship complete with academic tenure."

And he likes what he's teaching. "I have fun coaching football," he smiles. "I love my job and I love the people I work with. In fact, the thing I enjoy most is getting to talk to my players and help them through problems both on the field and off. It isn't easy being a coach, but it's very rewarding."

And the rewards don't rest exclusively in the myriad of plaques and trophies that adorn the plaid-papered walls (blue and green plaid, what else?) of Devine's tastefully-appointed office. On one wall there's a plaque proclaiming him a Cavanaugh Hall Fellow; on another is the memento that marks his being named the National Football League's Coach and Man of the Year. He's got game balls and game photos and game paintings and even a congressional proclamation that "officially" made Notre Dame the number one football team in 1977. However, he has little trouble selecting the most meaningful piece in the collection.

Frank LaGrotta

"You could have everything in this office but the game balls and this," he says, holding a plaque that hangs right next to the door which reads:

"To Dan Devine and the Fighting Irish
Thanks for never giving up
The Notre Dame Student Body"

"They gave me this after we lost to Southern Cal two years ago in that comeback in the Coliseum," he points out proudly. "It means an awful lot to me."

And it's one of the reasons he's as excited about this year's spring practice as he was the first time he stepped on a football field with a whistle.

"I love it," he says. "But you have to love it because if you don't the pressures and problems will get to you."

That's something else he's familiar with—pressures and problems. You see, one does not follow a legend like Vince Lombardi at Green Bay without feeling the pressure. One does not take over for someone like Ara Parseghian at a place like Notre Dame without much more of the same. Yet he willingly accepted both positions with equal aplomb. Why? The answer rests in another aspect of Dan Devine's personality that most people never see.

"I guess I like pressure," he grins. "In fact, you might say I thrive on it." Which comes as a surprise to someone first observing his almost sleepy mild manner and passive, soft-spoken ways.

Spring grid report

Devine delays start of drills

It appeared to be a beautiful day to open spring football drills. The sun was shining brightly, helping the temperature reach into the middle fifties. Nevertheless, yesterday's scheduled opening day for Notre Dame spring football drills was cancelled.

Despite the somewhat-unseasonable warm weather, the grounds at Cartier Field are not quite thawed out. The frozen patches of earth forced the football coaching staff to meet and temporarily suspend all spring football activity. In fact, there is a good chance that nothing will commence until after Easter break, due to the number of mid-term exams next week.

Irish coach Dan Devine did accomplish something yesterday, however. He signed Greg Golic, brother of former Irish linebacker Bob, to a letter of intent. Golic, a 6-7, 242-pound tackle from Cleveland's Saint Joseph High School, becomes Notre Dame's 26th grid recruit this year.

Iowa Coach Olson sings praises of Big Ten

IOWA CITY, Iowa (AP) - When Coach Lute Olson isn't singing the praises of Iowa basketball, he's glad to talk about the glories of the Big Ten.

"We've felt all along that the Big Ten was the toughest basketball conference in America," said the man whose team plays Louisville Saturday in the NCAA semifinals at Indianapolis.

"It's been that way for a number of years. It's only been since the expanded tournament field that people have found out how tough the conference is."

Seven Big Ten teams got postseason tournament bids this year - the most from any conference in the country. The closest competitors were the Atlantic Coast with six entries and the PAC 10 with five.

The top four finishers in the Big Ten - Indiana, Ohio State, Purdue, and Iowa - were invited to the NCAA tournament, while Minnesota, Michigan and Illinois went to the NIT.

Purdue and Iowa are in the NCAA semifinals, along with the PAC 10's UCLA and Louisville of the Southeast Conference.

The NIT final four also included two Big Ten teams - Minnesota and Illinois - along with the ACC's Virginia and Nevada-Las Vegas an independent. Minnesota bumped off Illinois to meet

'Fuzzy-cheeked' frosh key UCLA

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Larry Brown is used to working with the professionals so it came as a surprise when the first-year coach of the UCLA Bruins came up with fuzzy-cheeked freshmen in his backcourt.

He truly did try not to do it. It wasn't his original idea.

Brown started with lettermen sophomores Tony Anderson and Tyren Naulls at the guard spots.

Then Rod Foster and Michael Holton began taking control with Foster the shooter and Holton setting up the offense for the young Bruins, who barely made it into the NCAA tournament after finishing fourth in the Pacific-10.

The guards set things up but another move by Brown, moving 6-foot-6 Mike Sanders to the high post despite his lack of size put the Bruins on their winning way.

They've lost only three times since that switch.

Looking forward to meeting Purdue in the semifinals of the NCAA championships, the Bruins can look back on their domination of the tourney in the past 15 years, with 10 championships between 1964 and 1975.

Those were the John Wooden teams but nobody expected Larry Brown, in his first season and without a conference champion, to come close. Yet in the playoffs, the Bruins beat Old Dominion, DePaul, Ohio State and Clemson to reach the semifinals group of four.

"I always felt we had a future, but I didn't know when the future would be," said Brown Tuesday. "I feel very good that people continue to come to look at UCLA and they have seen the improvement we continued to exhibit this year."

"I've told my kids to feel good about what they have accomplished this year, but now that we've made the Final Four, we should go after it, because I've always believed in this team, all year long."

"I want them to appreciate what they have accomplished, but I want them to go out and play the way they are capable of playing."

Freshman Foster is the higher scorer with an 11.4 average, while Holton is at 5.2. Foster, from New Britain, Conn., is quick and able to get the fast break away like lightning.

Crum plans nothing new for Iowa

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) - Louisville Coach Denny Crum has revealed his secret plan for defeating Iowa in Saturday's NCAA semifinal basketball game at Indianapolis.

"We're not going to do anything different," Crum said after a recent practice. "If you can't win by doing what got you where you are, then you can't win at all."

The Cardinals got where they are by combining a blistering full-court press with a fast-break offense. Their 31-3 record attests to the success of Crum's strategy in his ninth year at Louisville.

"We want to make the other teams play the full 94 feet for the entire game," he said.

"Very few teams have been able to keep up with us."

Part of Crum's rationale for using the press is that "with our size and youth we'd get killed if we didn't force the other teams to play our style."

However, Crum admits that that style of play has also caused some problems for the second-ranked Cardinals.

"We are a quick, explosive team that plays with a lot of enthusiasm. But the constant press causes spurts," Crum said.

Those spurts showed up dramatically in Louisville's NCAA Midwest Region victories. Two of the games ended in overtime.

Against Kansas State in its first tournament game, Louisville squandered a 61-54 lead with 7:44 remaining to force an overtime with the score 67-67. The Cardinals won 71-69 on a last-second shot.

In the second round against Texas A&M, Louisville outscored the Aggies 13-2 in overtime to pull out a 66-55 victory.

And against Louisiana State in the Midwest Championship game, Louisville trailed by as many as eight points in the first half. In typical Cardinal fashion, they spurted to a 31-29 advantage at halftime, and went on to win, 86-66.

ND releases sports proposal to comply with Title IX

by Michael Lewis
Executive News Editor

Notre Dame released its long-awaited proposal to comply with Title IX Saturday, calling for a major women's basketball program, cutbacks in the present hockey program, and major efforts to "improve athletic revenues" by charging students for football tickets, raising ticket prices, and creating an athletic endowment.

Hockey is the only current sports program that will lose scholarships under the proposal.

The plan will be presented to the Board of Trustees for approval, probably when the full Board meets on campus beginning May 2.

In a major break with tradition, Notre Dame students will be charged for football tickets. Students will be able to buy tickets at a 50 percent discount. The plan calls for an increase in football ticket price to $12 per game, so students can expect pay $6 per game next fall.

The initial women's grant-in-aid will be concentrated in women's basketball, which is expected to begin Division I competition in three to four years. The University's women's team currently competes in Division III.

Athletic Director Edward Krause said the University will "go all out" to field a top-flight women's team, but said that other women's sports will receive grants-in-aid "right away."

Krause did not know exactly how many scholarships will be offered to women next year.

Richard "Digger" Phelps, coach of the ND men's team, will assume overall responsibility for the women's program.

Krause added that the University will begin interviews for a new coach of the women's team, and that current coach Sharon Petro will be one of those considered.

The University will reduce the cost of hockey by decreasing hockey scholarships from 20 to 18 next season. Further cuts were implied by the statement, but Krause said he does not know what further measures will be taken.

Hockey ticket prices will also increase, but Krause was unable to specify the amount. Students now pay $1 per game with a season ticket, and $1.50 per game at the door. Other hockey spectators pay $3 per game.

In addition, Notre Dame will try to reduce the travel costs of participating in the Western Collegiate Hockey Association. The

by Kelli Flint
Senior Staff Reporter

President Carter's budget cuts will probably have a negative effect on two of the five federally funded financial aid programs at Notre Dame, according to Joseph Russo, Director of Financial Aid.

Russo expects negative results

The three student aid programs that will probably not be affected by the budget situation are the Supplementary Educational Opportunity Grant (program), the College Work-Study program, and the National Direct Student Loan program (NDSL). "Carter's budget cuts will not affect the tentative appropriations made for these programs for the 1980-81 term," Russo said. "These programs are campus-based, and will probably remain the same as this year."

The two programs facing possible problems are the Basic Educational Opportunity Grant (BEOG) program and the Guaranteed Student Loan program. "These have become the first and second most expensive federal aid programs in recent years," Russo said. "There is concern over the growing cost increase of these programs."

The maximum BEOG allotment was $1800 this year. "An increase to $1900 was being considered," Russo said. "Due to cutbacks, the extra $100 will probably not be granted."

"There was serious concern over the Guaranteed Student Loan program before the budget cut," Russo said. "Because of the budget cut, the senate is looking more closely at the amounts of the program and its cost to the government."

According to Russo, one aspect of the Guaranteed Loan program that the senate may consider is the guideline for eligibility. "Family income guidelines are currently not a factor for a student's eligibility as a result of the passage of the Middle Income Students Assistance Act in 1978," Russo said. "Any student is currently able to take a loan and receive federal interest subsidies while in school. The current budget situation could mean a closer look at the lack of income ceilings in the program."

Russo added that there may very possibly be an increase in interest rates on loans. Presently interest on the NDSL is

Shah leaves Panama for Egypt

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) - The deposed shah of Iran left Panama for Egypt yesterday aboard a chartered American jet, ending a 100-day residence in this tropical country where he faced extradition proceedings, U.S. and Panamanian officials reported.

White House security advisor Zbigniew Brzezinski said in Washington that the self-exiled monarch left Panama in order to receive medical attention. Physicians have said the shah suffers from lymphatic cancer, which may have spread to his spleen.

Iran's revolutionary regime, seeking the return of the shah on charges of mass murder and corruption, has said that his departure from Panama would delay the release of about 50 American hostages held by militants in Tehran. A legal representative for Iran said Saturday he planned to meet a Monday deadline to file evidence with Panamanian authorities to support the case.

A Panamanian government spokesman said the shah, "having received a personal invitation from Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, chose to move to Cairo." Brzezinski also said the shah had accepted Sadat's longstanding invitation of asylum.

However, spokesmen for Sadat issued another denial yesterday that the Shah was en route to Egypt.

A Panamanian air force officer who asked not to be identified said White House advisor Hamilton Jordan also left Panama for Washington aboard a U.S. government jet. Jordan arrived here Friday, apparently to arrange the shah's departure.

The Panamanian officer said the shah was aboard a DC-8 jet chartered from Evergreen International Airlines of Oregon. A Panamanian air traffic controller said the company had filed a flight plan which called for a refueling stop in the Azores Islands in the Atlantic Ocean at 8 p.m. EST.

The officer said the shah, accompanied by his wife Farah, eight aides, their pet dogs, and 1000 pounds of luggage, departed from Tocumen Airport here at about 1:40 p.m. EST.

At midday, Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi, 60, and his wife flew on a small private plane from their residence on Panama's Contadora Island, accompanied by former Panamanian ambassador to the United States Gabriel Lewis. Visibly sad, the former shah thanked Panama for its hospitality.

Panamanian television reported that Jordan and Torrijos, a former Panamanian president, met with the shah Saturday on Contadora Island, where the former monarch has lived since Dec. 15 after receiving medical treatment in the United States.

Director of Security Terry wishes to handle recent complaint by ND student personally

by Margie Brassil
SMC News Editor

Director of Security, Glenn Terry has decided to personally handle the complaint brought against three ND security guards by a student last Tuesday. The complaint was filed by Sophomore Gordon Geraci against Ray Garcia, Tom Costa, and Ken Wilbur, charging them with verbal abuse and harassment.

The incident between Geraci and the guards occurred last Sunday night when Geraci tried to get his ID in return for a 15 minute pass. According to Geraci, he went twice to the Main Gate for his ID. The second time, he made a wise-crack to the guards. Garcia reportedly then flared up at Geraci.

"He threw down his badge and said he was resigning. He then began cussing at me and came forward as if to hit me and had to be restrained by Costa," claimed Geraci. Geraci alleges that Costa then began to indirectly threaten him.

Geraci spoke with Terry when he filed his complaint on Tues. Terry had then said he would try and get a hearing set up with Geraci, the guards, and a University representative. According to Terry, he had referred the matter to Dean Roemer, who then referred it back to him.

"It is better for me to handle it than in the department," said Terry. "I don't have the necessary mechanism to get a

Grain embargo costs taxpayers eight billion dollars

NASHVILLE, Ind. Speaking to a group of Indiana Farm Bureau leaders, David L. But so far, no sales have been completed, he said.

James Viana, a spokesman for the non-profit research institution where Okun was a senior fellow in economics, said Okun suffered a massive heart attack at his Washington home. A liberal and a Democrat, Okun was the key economic adviser to President Johnson during a period of rapid expansion of government programs to aid the nation's disadvantaged.

Japanese-American senator proposes internment

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Sen. S. I. Hayakawa says it's "too bad" if fellow Japanese-Americans don't like his plan for interning Iranian citizens "the way we did with the Japanese in World War II." In an exchange with Rep. Norman Mineta and Rep. Robert Matsui, the senator told his fellow Japanese-Americans, "I want to make it perfectly clear - this is different from the Japanese situation." Hayakawa said his proposal would define U.S. embassies as U.S. territory, making citizens of any nation invading an embassy subject to arrest, detention or deportation.

Israeli Cabinet allows Jews to settle in Arab city for first time

JERUSALEM (AP) - In a decision likely to complicate already stalled palestinian autonomy negotiations, the Israeli Cabinet voted for the first time to let Jews settle in an occupied Arab city.

The Cabinet approved by an 8-6 vote, with three abstentions, a proposal to establish two schools in which Jewish students would live full-time in the Arab city of Hebron on the West Bank of the Jordan River. The last Jewish residents of Hebron left the city after Arab rioting in 1929.

Opponents of the settlement plan said they would appeal the vote to the Foreign Affairs and Security Committee in the Israeli Parliament, and Prime Minister Menachem Begin agreed to delay action until the committee meets. The Parliament begins a one-month recess Thursday.

Israel has built more than 50 settlements on the occupied West Bank but has not allowed Jews to settle in Arab cities. However, Begin has come under pressure from right-wing Israelis to carry out the Hebron move.

The settlement issue is regarded as one of the major stumbling blocks to a successful conclusion, targeted for May 26, of Palestinian autonomy negotiations. There has been little progress in the talks to determine the nature and extent of the autonomy, and President Carter has summoned Begin and Egyptian President Anwar Sadat to Washington for separate meetings next month.

Begin said yesterday, he would respond in the next few days to a letter he had received from Sadat and would call a special Cabinet session before leaving for his meeting with Carter.

Israeli news reports said the letter from Sadat to Begin placed responsibility for the outcome of the autonomy talks entirely on Israel. The Egyptians have placed greater emphasis on progress being made by the date set in the Camp David peace accords.

Israel, Egypt and the United States began negotiations on Palestinian autonomy last May with a one-year deadline for establishing an autonomous Arab administration on the West Bank and Gaza Strip where there are 1.2 million Palestinian Arabs. The territories were occupied by Israel in the Mid-east War of 1967.

The United States and Egypt have been pressing for an end to Jewish settlements on the West Bank. Washington has criticized the settlements as an obstacle to peace.

The Israeli cabinet declared in February that Jews have the right to settle anywhere in the Biblical land of Israel, which includes the West Bank and Hebron, a city of 50,000 Arabs 20 miles south of Jerusalem that is the burial site of the Patriarch Abraham and is considered holy by both Moslems and Jews.

However, the vote on the Hebron settlements was postponed more than a month because of its controversial nature.

Cabinet spokesman John Salem said after yesterday's seven-hour meeting: "The political implication of the decision was the main issue discussed." He also said the Cabinet wanted to make it "very clear and very direct" that Jews would not be barred from Hebron or anywhere else.

Available institutional funds offset recent increase in SMC tuition

by Katie Gilligan

Due to the recent rise in the tuition fees at Saint Mary's for the 80-81 school year, many students have expressed concern in regards to meeting this increased financial demand. However, according to Director of Financial Aid, Kathleen Jeffries, a substantial rise in available institutional funds should permit a broad range of distribution.

These funds, which include grants, scholarships and endowments, are awarded on the basis of individual need. Although 53 percent of the Saint Mary's student body is on some type of financial aid, the rise in tuition will only affect the institutional scholarship funds. As Jeffries points out, there will be more funds, and not necessarily more scholarships. In this way, either more lower-figure awards can be given, or perhaps, fewer, but more expensive ones, can be distributed.

During this school year, $330,095 was available, yet due to the new tuition increase, there will be approximately $336,310 available to the students. Currently, 385 students are using these funds, and next year's expected enrollment does not show a marked increase in those wanting financial assistance.

Like all types of loans, money from Saint Mary's institutional funds is distributed on the basis of need. "Need" is defined by the family's income, assets, current debts, medical or unusual expenses, the number of dependents, and the number of dependents enrolled at the post-secondary level. The family is expected to pay a calculated sum, which will then be accompanied by the aid. Although this calculation is federally mandated, there is no clear cut-off point when determining the eligibility of a family.

Another financial aid division at Saint Mary's, the Work/Study Program, which received a $68,000 increase in funds over the '78-'79 school year, is hoping for equal assistance.

Last year, the program received only $46,260 as opposed to this year's originally slated $75,000 which rose to $114,725. Next year's figures are undeterminable at this time, but Jeffries promises a "comparable student work program."

The funds received from the government are used to pay for 80 percent of the students' wages, while Saint Mary's pays the remaining 20 percent.

If, however, a student is employed by the college but not because of financial need, then Saint Mary's must pay the full salary.

Therefore, because there are a frozen number of available jobs, it is financially advantageous for the college to employ only those involved in the Work/Study Program. The money that Saint Mary's would have to use to pay those not in the program can then be reallocated for other programs, including the institutional scholarship program.

Despite the tuition hike, and the rate of inflation, Jeffries stated that the number of those who would seek financial aid for the '80-'81 school year would remain "fairly constant", with the possibility of only a "slight increase."

team will compete in the WCHA next season, but the University will "explore other options, including membership in a geographically more compact league," according to the statement.

Student fees for football tickets, a first for Notre Dame, is part of the attempt to increase athletic revenues.

With the ticket price increase and the student fee, next season will probably bring record gate receipts for ND football.

University President Fr. Theodore Hesburgh said the time had come to charge students for football tickets.

"I think we were the only school in the world that gave free football tickets to its students," he said. "Now we can't."

Krause said he believes the student fee will not affect student attendance. "Students pay for hockey and basketball, why not football," he said.

The proposal also calls for the establishment of an athletic endowment to help meet the costs of the University's varsity, club and intramural sports, but neither the statement nor Krause could offer specifics on this endowment.

Hockey coach Charles "Lefty" Smith called the endowment "a great move." "It has to be done in this day and age," he said.

three percent, and interest on a Guaranteed loan is seven percent. "In the Higher Education Amendments pending legislation, an increase from three to seven percent is proposed for the NDSL," Russo said. "The Guaranteed Student Loan faces a possible increase from seven to nine percent. These increases from seven to nine percent. These increases may affect the 1981-82 term."

"It is not impossible that the budget cutbacks will create problems for students this fall, but they will most probably affect students this time next year," Russo said. "Lender participation in the Guaranteed Student Loan program is a problem. At present, the government pays lenders up to 16 percent on student loans. This is done to increase the availability of loans for students. If controls and limits are put down, the availability of loans will be reduced. Fewer lenders will be willing to put up with the red tape and possible additional costs."

"The Guaranteed Student Loan program is the most commonly used loan program at Notre Dame," Russo said. "The costs of the program are spiraling."

"Many students attending private schools have a limited choice between public and private institutions," Russo said. "The effects of Carter's budget cut could make it more difficult for these students to attend private institutions."

Russo added that because of the elections, the significant changes in federal aid will probably not take place until the 1981-82 school year.

"Public pressure in an election year from middle families who benefit from these programs will greatly offset a major change for the 1980-81 (school) year."

"From now on anybody who owns a factory that makes radioactive waste has to take it home with him to his house."

Sr. Maureen Feidler lectures on Catholic viewpoint of ERA

by Mary Ellen Woods

Sr. Maureen Feidler, representing Catholics for ERA, addressed a small crowd in the Library Auditorium Lounge last night. In her lecture, Feidler presented a Catholic perspective on the Equal Rights Amendment.

Drawing from "a distinctive Catholic, religious and scriptural tradition," Sr. Feidler examined the text of the ERA. She pointed out that the proposed amendment consisted of only 52 words.

The amendment is prohibitive, she emphasized. It does not force any action, nor is there any connection with abortion or the use of lavatory facilities.

"Equality for men and women is an integral part of the Judeo-Christian tradition," noted Feidler. Vatican II, formal Church doctrine, states that any form of discrimination is contrary to God's intent. Sr. Feidler sees ERA as an implementation of the teachings of Vatican II. She also pointed to the gospel as a norm for equal rights, citing Jesus' treatment of the women of his day.

Sr. Feidler emphatically told the audience of the situation today for the women of America. "Women earn $.59 for every $1 that men earn," explained Sr. Feidler, quoting a U.S. Government report.

This situation is not getting better. "In fact the difference is broadening," she said. In the last decade, women earned $.63 for every $1 earned by men.

This discriminatory situation can only be corrected by ERA, according to Feidler. The ERA will guarantee equal rights for both men and women.

Sr. Feidler proposed to end her often dramatic presentation with a discussion of the myths and distortions surrounding the ERA. In fact, her comments were concerned solely with the connection of abortion and the proposed amendment.

"The ERA is guilty by association in regards to the question of its relation to abortion," demonstrated Sr. Feidler.

ERA has no legal connection with abortion, according to Feidler. It purports to deal with the protection of those rights that are of concern to both men and women. As Sr. Feidler pointed out, men cannot become pregnant. Pregnancy being a necessary precondition to the desire for an abortion, the question of equal rights and abortion can and will not be tied to ERA, she said.

The floor was then opened to questions from the audience. Sr. Feidler was asked to comment on the need for ERA in light of the Fourteenth Amendment and the Civil Rights Amendments. She noted that as presently interpreted, "these are not grounds for protection against sex discrimination."

An interesting point was raised regarding the benefits of ERA to men. According to Sr. Feidler, the rights to be granted alimony and child custody, as well as the responsibility of women to aid in military duty would be of service to men.

The discussion frequently devolved to heated debate as Sr. Feidler was asked to defend ERA against arguments questioning its effectivity, relevancy and ability to protect the rights of women in particular situations. Sr. Feidler replied confidently, if emotionally, that she knew how the amendment would be implemented, pointing to the ridiculousness of the fear that men and women would be forced to share the same rest room facilities.

Sr. Feidler requested support of the Notre Dame community in the up-coming national, Pro-ERA march on Chicago on May 10. The march on Chicago is vital, according to Sr. Feidler, in the drive to have Illinois ratify ERA before the 1982 deadline.

According to Terry, the guards' version of the incident differed from Geraci's. The guards claimed it was Geraci who was belligerent when he tried to get his ID returned.

Terry said the matter will be handled confidentially. "Any problems with personell is a confidential matter. What I decide could possibly lead to friction on campus, which would not be good," he said.

Geraci could file a complaint with Roemer against Terry's actions, according to Terry. He added, however, that his decision concerning the guards would be final.

Geraci said he would talk with Terry about the matter before going to Roemer.

Arts Festival enters final planning stages

Maribeth Moran
Senior Staff Reporter

The Senior Arts Festival has gone into the final planning stages, according to Kim Gumz, this year's chairman.

"This year is the testing ground for it (the festival). Last year it was an innovation. The Festival should continue on, and to do this it should prove its validity," Gumz said.

Senior Arts will run from Sunday, April 12 through Saturday, April 19 and will feature seniors' creations in various fields of the fine and performing arts.

Works of senior artists will be featured in the Isis Gallery all week long, along with musical performances at the Nazz. This year for the first time, the Festival will include some musical performances at Senior Bar.

Washington Hall will be utilized for dramatic performances and readings as well as the showing of some films produced by the members of the class.

Gumz emphasized that participation in the Festival is not limited to majors in the fine and performing arts disciplines.

"It can bring an entire class together. It is also probably the last time we will do such a large scale activity together," she remarked.

Anyone interested in participating in the Festival should contact one of the following people; Architecture, Rick Burroughs at 7695; Dramatic Performances or Original Films - Liz Bathon at 277-3288; Poetry and Prose - Dave Perry at 8836; Dance - Chris Le Blanc at 1327; Music Performances - Laura Sisson at 1674, and Art Works - Bruce Richardson at 1354 or Beth Schweitzer at 6785.

Observer approves promotions

The Observer production department has approved two promotions in addition to those announced last week.

Kennedy campaigns to overcome underdog image while Reagan relaxes

(AP) - Sen. Edward M. Kennedy worked yesterday to overcome his underdog image in New York's delegate-rich presidential primary this week, while a relaxed, confident Ronald Reagan all but rejected his Republican rivals as possible vice presidential running mates.

And in an incident that could cause him trouble in the agricultural heartland, Reagan told a farm audience in Wichita, Kan., he was not familiar with full parity - a federally subsidized price level for farm products that is a major political issue in the Middle West.

"I'm going to stay in the race," Kennedy on a national television interview before he toured a poor black neighborhood in New York City and met with Orthodox Jews.

The Massachusetts senator, who so far has won only two primary and caucus contests compared with President Carter's 18 election triumphs, again attacked Carter's handling of economic, energy and foreign issues.

Kennedy said he would not withdraw from the race even if Democratic Party leaders asked him to.

Meanwhile, a Gallup poll done for Newsweek magazine said Carter and Reagan were running about neck and neck in voters' eyes if they are the major party nominees. Forty-five percent of those questioned leaned toward Carter and 44 percent toward Reagan in the poll, which has a margin of error of 4 percent either way.

Forty-eight percent, incidentally, replied that they thought the primaries thus far were not a good way to choose the best-qualified candidates, while 40 percent approved of the system.

At stake in the New York primary tomorrow are 282 delegates to the Democratic National Convention in New York next August. On the same day, primary voters in Connecticut will select 54 convention delegates.

A public opinion poll conducted by the Social Science Research Center at the University of Connecticut, released Saturday, said that 45 percent of Democratic voters and 42 percent of Republicans were undecided which way they will vote tomorrow.

A daring and thinking Republican

Colman McCarthy

WASHINGTON--As a dark horse turned into a bright horse, the galloping John Anderson of Illinois has had a change of fortunes equal to his change of views.

In his early years in Congress, 1962 and 1963, his conservative voting record earned him two zeros from the Americans for Democratic Action, the watchers of the left. Then he went wild and soared to 8 and 11. But in 1966, as though the 8 and 11 were numbers on a timetable and he was holding a through ticket to reckless liberalism, he jumped off the train and went back again to zero (His latest rating was 55).

After Massachusetts and Vermont of 1980, the zeros Anderson gets now are from the right. Headlines call him a liberal, and he presents himself as a maverick moderate. It is a new public perception, though Anderson himself saw it coming as far back as 1970 when he told an interviewer that except for the "real rightwingers" back in his congressional district, he was supported by all factions of Republicans and Democrats. The right, he said, "thinks that because I've moderated some of the positions I held originally, I'm sort of Benedict Arnold."

Although the hanging parties of the right won't be stringing up Anderson now, the question for everyone else, particularly liberals, is whether Anderson is refreshing merely because he is a daring and thinking Republican among the rote and the dull--the Reagans, Bushes and other sleep inducers--or is he worth noticing because, as William Haslitt said of Jeremy Bentham, "He meditates the coming age."

If it's the first, why bother? It was only dumb luck that Anderson found himself pitted against Reagan, Bush, Crane, Connally, Baker, and Dole. How could he not seem profound? He may be in for still more luck, with Gerald Ford thinking of giving up his lifelong goal on the fairways of breaking 90, and becoming a candidate. In the context of the primaries, Anderson is a horse among mules. But that doesn't make him a thoroughbred.

A large debt, for sure, is owed him for the lively politics he has offered so far. It's been good theater. He speaks his own mind. He doesn't care much for safe applause lines. He has said a few things that will end up in the quotation books. Best of all, he has made the right kind of enemies: those Republicans whose thought, as George Orwell described a mind set of his day, "is a kind of playing with fire by people who don't even know that fire is hot."

Conceding all that, and even being grateful for it, the cheering for Anderson may be premature. No one yet knows exactly how free he is of his old positions or of the thinking processes that led to those positions. He told the gun lobby in New Hampshire where to go last month, but in 1971, when he came up against the supersonic transport zealots, he took safe refuge in the jobs argument: he supported SST appropriations because aircraft employees--especially those in his own district--shouldn't be asked to restrain themselves for other work.

It is heartening that John Anderson has been moving more and more to the left. But when lifted out of the context of backward Republicanism and placed into the context of the political renewal that the tense times call for, he brings to mind the remark of W.H. Auden: "It is a sad fact of our culture that a poet can earn much more money writing or talking about his art than he can by practicing it." With John Anderson, we are excited by the way he talks about politics, but we know little of how he practices it.

He is known, for example, as a religious man. He took his duties seriously as a trustee of the Rockford, IL, Evangelical Free Church. He told his House colleagues in a floor debate a few years ago that stopping "the tide of secularism in our land is a most desirable objective." But this is standard fare. Jimmy Carter is religious, yet his politics are not noticeably altered by the teachings of Christianity.

The change that has come to John Anderson is one of contexts. He has shown that a market exists for a thinking Republican graced with a developing mind. But the country needs more than that. It doesn't need a Republican or Democrat. It needs a politician who is above the conventions of party politics. The country's current politics are assuredly not conventional.

Ford proves crime can pay

Pat Toomey

It appeared to be an open and shut case. From 1971 through 1976, Ford Motor Co. had sold the Pinto X knowing that it was not a safe car. Ford's own crash tests had shown that the fuel tank ruptured in crashes at speeds as low as 18 m.p.h. Ford engineers had come up with a number of modifications that would have made the car much safer at a cost of less than $10 per vehicle, but they had been rejected.

In 1978, Ford started to pay a price for their decisions. Government pressure had finally forced Ford to recall the car and make improvements, but by then, the damage had already been done. People had burned to death in Pinto crashes, and lawsuits were popping up. One jury in California had awarded $127 million to a crash victim. But the biggest trouble of all was brewing in Elkhart, Indiana.

That August, three teenagers, Judy, Lynn, and Donna Ulrich, had burned to death when their 1973 Pinto was struck from behind by a van. In September, County Prosecutor Michael Cosentino got a grand jury to indict Ford for reckless homicide. A legal precedent was being attempted.

Our judicial system has always employed a "pocketbook" strategy for corporate offenders. It has been assumed that fines will stop corporations from acting illegally. Unfortunately, when your pocketbook contains a few billion dollars, no fine is big enough to hurt you. Michael Cosentino was using a new strategy. If fines were not enough to scare a corporation, perhaps criminal penalties were.

Needless to say, Ford was extremely concerned about this strategy. The Elkhart case was not that important in itself, but it could set a shattering precedent and destroy Ford's corporate image. Ford hired James Neal, a former Watergate Prosecutor, and gave him a top-notch legal staff. A complete law library was set up in Winamac, the trial site. Eventually, Ford would spend over $1 million for its defense.

Cosentino, meanwhile, had a $20,000 budget and a crew of volunteers. He did, however, seem to have the evidence. Boxes of Ford records showed that they knew the Pinto's deficiencies when they marketed the car. Unfortunately, Cosentino's documents dealt with 1971 and 1972 Pintos. Although the 1973 Pinto was nearly identical to the 1971 and 1972 models, Neal argued that only documents dealing with the 1973 model should be allowed as evidence. Incredibly, Judge Harold Staeffeldt agreed.

With the documents out of the way, the "closing speed" of the Ulrich Pinto and the van became the key issue. According to the prosecution, the Pinto was going anywhere from 15 to 35 m.p.h. while the van was going 50 m.p.h. at the time of the crash, a closing speed of 15 to 35 m.p.h. The defense agreed that the van was going 50 m.p.h., but claimed that the car was stopped when the crash occurred. No one could be expected to withstand this kind of crash, they claimed.

Cosentino produced seven eyewitnesses who stated that the car was moving at speeds up to 35 m.p.h. at the time of the crash. Ford had no eyewitnesses, so they did the next best thing. They had already used their limitless resources to dig up any dirt they could find about prosecution witnesses. They now used these same resources to hunt down two hospital employees who had spoken to the car's driver before she died. According to both employees, she said she had stopped the car to pick up the gas cap when the accident occurred (she had forgotten to replace the cap at a self-service gas station).

Ford followed up these witnesses by showing the jury models of other subcompacts. Previously, Judge Staeffeldt had restricted the prosecution to discussing only the 1973 Pinto, but now he allowed Ford to discuss other 1973 subcompacts. Ford's expert witnesses showed the jury how unsafe these other cars were. The same people who told us how great these cars were seven years ago were now telling a jury how unsafe the cars actually were.

In the end, Ford was acquitted, of course. Cosentino is now considering an appeal based on some of Staeffeldt's adverse rulings, but he probably knows the futility of trying any further. A California congressman introduced a bill which would have allowed Cosentino to introduce evidence about other model year Pintos, but it will take time for that bill to get passed, if it ever does. For now, Ford has proven once again that you can get away with murder if you have enough money.

Apocalypse, When?

Francis Ford Coppola is right. It is "Apocalypse Now." What was true for the people of Jesus' day is applicable today. They were given a frightening projection of the terrifying experience of the Last Days. But the apocalyptic strategy was to draw from such future projections lessons and pointed exhortations for the present moment. People were to realize that, in a real sense, the future was already happening.

The same is true for us. We don't have to go past our morning headlines to discover the current application of the catastrophic biblical vision. We see, to note but one of numerous examples, Amnesty International's annual report, which documents that executions, arbitrary arrests and imprisonment and staged disappearances contribute to what is presently a global pattern of human rights abuse.

With such data, plus the additional cataclysmic vision of world starvation and impending nuclear war, one senses the fulfillment of what William Butler Yeats anticipated in his famous poem, "The Second Coming":

Things fall apart; the center cannot hold

Mere anarchy is loosed upon the world,

The blood-dimmed tide is loosed, and everywhere

The ceremony of innocence is drowned;

*The best lack all conviction, while the worst
Are full of passionate intensity.*

But there is another purpose of apocalyptic writing beyond admonition, warning and "final notification." In the strictest sense, these writers had as their purpose the intention to comfort a people distressed and anxious about the future by showing that it is God who is in final control of the world. There is the promise that God will not be absent: "earth and sky may pass away but My words will never pass away" (Mark 13, 31). In the midst of bad news, there is good news: The Lord will be present in His power to sustain the people.

Easier said than done. It's a challenge to us to believe this, to believe that, in a world obviously out of control, God is in control. It's crazy and absurd...like every Christian gamble. We are, for example, meant to live in such a way that it would make no sense unless God exists, unless God cares. In a world going crazy, we crazy Christians are called to affirm joyfully our faith in God.

And all we have to go on to do this is His word...and our willingness to believe in it. But does He know what He is talking about? That's the question. Does Jesus' own experience bear out the truth of what He said?

It is necessary to take a hard look at the Passion, where Jesus faces His own personal apocalypse of pain, judgment and destruction. Jesus' personal world collapses with as much catastrophe as can be found in the most shattering apocalyptic writing. In the midst of His own apocalypse, Jesus was willing to believe that the Father was in control of His world: "Into Your hands I commend My spirit."

And then a marvelous thing happened. It wasn't the end-time, the obliteration of Jesus' world; it was just the end of waiting for the beginning of glory that would have no end at all. Which means that Jesus' message to us is simple: "You see how I lived? You do the same. You see where I am now? That is your destiny as well-joy and happiness that has no end-time, but is everlasting...for those who are faithful to the end!"

One last point: Joy is not only our final destiny; it is meant to be our possession here and now. It follows from the crucial fact that God is not only not absent--His life is within us. This is the cause of our joy, in the midst of all our apocalypses. "Joy," Leon Bloy once wrote, "is the most infallible sign of the presence of God." Our joy flows necessarily from the realization that the God who comes to heal, to restore life and to liberate is alive within our hearts.

Thus in the midst of our crazy world, inundated with evidence for despair, we can make our own the words of Scripture: "Shout for joy, O daughter Zion; sing joyfully, O Israel! Be glad and exult with all your heart, O daughter Jerusalem... the Lord is in your midst, you have no further misfortune to fear." Crazy Zephaniah could say that at a time of decadence and tragedy. "Rejoice in the Lord always! I say it again. Rejoice! The Lord himself is near." Crazy Paul could say that at a time of persecution and crisis.

Have you ever noticed that there are probably as many tears at a wedding as at a funeral? The bride's mother may even bring two handkerchiefs (one for her husband as he contemplates the bills?). Usually we say that they are tears of joy. But I suspect there is a mixture: tears of joy for obvious reasons, and tears of sorrow with the awareness that many rough days lie ahead for the starry-eyed couple. How appropriate this is; for life is ambiguous.

All our joys seem tainted with sorrow--the "quiet before the storm," the pessimist would say. But all of our sorrows seem to fade away after their initial sharpness--"Time heals all wounds," the optimist would say. However, we do need more than time for a healer. Ultimately, we need God's presence, the source of our joy in the midst of our way of the cross.

Spring rites and Vernal feasts

*When in April the sweet showers fall
And pierce the drought of March to the root, and all
The veins are bathed in liquor of such power
As brings about the engendering of the flower...*

from the Poet of Spring, Geoffrey Chaucer

Spring has always been a time for celebration. Though all ancient civilizations had their unique cultural festivals, one theme is common to them all. Spring was a time of death and rejuvenation, and ancient people, out of fear and wonder, traditionally honored the gods they saw as responsible for the earth's fertility.

In Egypt, the ancient Feast of Sed, probably the oldest festival of which any traces have survived, was enacted to ensure the rejuvenation of the land.

The pharaoh, being the intermediary between the people and the gods and endowed with divinity, was required to perform the seasonal rites of rejuvenation. He was equated with Osiris, God of the mysteries, (Him whom one may not name), and thus the pharaoh became the dispenser of bounty who filled Upper and Lower Egypt with strength and life.

The Hebrew spring festival was known as the Pesach or Passover which began as the full moon neared the vernal equinox at which time the firstlings of the lambing season were offered. There were sacrifices to the fertility divinity.

The Pesach was combined with the asoth or Feast of Unleavened Bread, an agricultural rite recorded in Exodus and Deuteronomy as the annual commemoration of release from the Egyptian yoke. The various traditions connected with the Hebrew spring festival were interpreted in terms of these biblical events.

Greece offers us Dionysius, god of Spring. Ceremonies began on Feb. 11 when the second fermentation of wine came to an end and was ready for drinking. According to Robert Vacca, assistant professor of Modern and Classical Languages, the Greeks were "very uninhibited" in their methods of celebration. Heavy drinking followed with lads jumping on wine skins and girls being swung in swings to promote fertility.

Greater Dionysia lasted from March 9-13 and was the last of the Dionysian festivals to be instituted in Athens. Vacca explained that for these five days, everyone from the lowest slave to the wealthiest citizen was equalized in the spirit of celebration.

When the Greeks held their Dionysian festival, the state even paid for the celebration to insure that everyone could enjoy the coming of the season. The orgiastic and ecstatic Dionysian rites, prominent in the vintage festivals became rather sobered and turned into occasions for presenting the finest literary achievements of poets and dramatists from 500 B.C. onwards.

According to Vacca, the Dionysian theater had a seating capacity of 17,000. Actors performed comedies and tragedies, representative of the age's classic drama, for three of the five days.

The Romans also had their unique way of celebrating. Prior to the calendar reforms of Julius Caesar, March was the first month and was dedicated to Mars, the agricultural god. Apart from also being the war god, Mars was invoked to promote the prosperity of crops, flocks, and herds in addition to the welfare of the farmer and his household.

Statements made by St. Augustine in De Civitate Dei, yield information on these festivals and games. The Romans sacrificed cows to Tellus Mater (Earth Mother). Ewes and cows were fumigated in order to propagate freely and provide a plentiful supply of milk. The Romans believed that if the animals ran through fire, they would be more fertile.

The Robigalia was a ceremony to avert red mildew from the wheat. It involved a prayer to Robigus, the placing of incense and wine into a fire on an altar, together with the flesh of sheep and the entrails of a dog.

The Floralia celebrated the goddess of flowering plants. It involved licentious games coupled with excessive drinking. In 173 B.C., the event became an annual festival by Senate decree. The obscene features of these rites were relics of an earlier fertility cult performed to ensure the earth's fruitfulness.

The Lenuaria was an expulsion ritual practiced in order to drive out evil spirits who were believed to be excessively rampant in the spring.

The Lupercalia which originated as a rustic purification festival for flocks and herds, evolved into a fertility rite on the Palatine Hill. Young men would run around the base of the hill, striking all whom they encountered in order to make themselves fertile.

Even the American Indians had their special way of celebrating Spring. In a gentle custom, they removed their moccasins from their feet in order to demonstrate their reverence for what they considered the pregnant earth.

Another spring celebration which can be more closely identified with, is the drama of Redemption at the Easter Festival -- a climax of the liturgical year. In the representation of the death and resurrection of Christ, the crudities of earlier observances have disappeared. The fundamental structure, however, has been retained.

Thus Easter is celebrated at the full moon nearest to the spring equinox between March 21 and April 25. The blessing of the Easter fire represents a survival of a prominent custom of holding fire festivals at this season. The Paschal Candle itself has solar associations and is a life-giving symbol. At first, it illuminated the nocturnal Vigil rites, but then it was reinterpreted to express victory over sin and death and the power of darkness.

From Adon, meaning Lord, both Adonis, god of Spring and Adonai, the Supreme being derive their names. All the beauty of early spring rejoicing is in harmony with Easter. Thus the lilies in the wheelbarrow will always jolt their way to the shrines and altars.

If you really get enthused with spring, you could follow the example of one Englishwoman centuries ago, who was overcome with spring dew. As she said, "it's the only thing to wash one's face with." So extreme was she in her belief that she got up every morning at 4 to perform this ritual. Following suit, many English people proceeded to collect dew from the grass with silver spoons and bottle it.

Committee plans Senior Trip to Carribean for October break

by Bridget Berry
Staff Reporter

The Senior Trip will definitely be held over October Break next year, Coordinator Mike Geis said yesterday. "We won't be certain until tomorrow, but it looks like we'll be going to the Bahamas," he added. Geis said that a meeting is scheduled for 3 p.m. today, at which time Father Mario, assistant director of student activities, will report on the costs of a trip to Nassau. Then a final decision should be made. Although the Nassau trip was not included as a possibility on the survey distributed to Juniors after Joe Doyle's article in the March 7 South Bend Tribune, Geis said that he expects everyone to be satisfied. "It meets the two main criteria," he explained, "Sun and an island." It should be considerably cheaper than other alternatives, Geis said. "There is a lot to do and it will be less of a problem politically," he added. October Break runs from the 19th through the 26th. Geis said that the Seniors will leave Sunday to accommodate Saturday's game. Expenses will include seven days and six nights in Nassau, he said. "We figure it will cost somewhere between $400-$450 including car rental on the island," Geis said. He added that the San Francisco trip which would have lasted half as long was priced at about $350. "When the surveys came back," he said, "Jamaica was the overwhelming preference." But the trip would have cost about $500, he said. Plane fare alone is $370.

Juniors were asked to fill out the survey distributed in response to the "Rumor that the Irish - Southern California game would be moved back into the first week of December thus ending the ABC college series," Geis said.

The San Francisco trip was originally planned to include this game in the itinerary.

Although the Senior Trip-Committee was informed of the change almost two weeks ago, they were obliged to attribute everything to hearsay until ABC made an official announcement today, Geis explained yesterday.

"We are supposed to submit a bill to ABC for the added costs of printed materials and cancellations," Geis said.

Two versions

Senate debates balancing the budget

WASHINGTON (AP) - Republicans and Democrats are squaring off in the Senate to see which side can come up with a more appealing plan for balancing next year's federal budget.

The Senate has set aside tomorrow for debating the separate approaches, both of which would result in a balance between spending and income in the 12 months that begin next Oct. 1.

The Republican version goes a step further and limits spending during that period to a fixed percentage of national income - a move that Democrats insist would force severe cuts in many programs.

While the Senate prepares instructions for its Budget Committee, the House will consider the spending plan already recommended by its budget-writers. That plan would cut $16.5 billion from the budget submitted by President Carter in January and would result in a $2-billion surplus.

Rep. Robert Giaimo, D-Conn., chairman of the House Budget Committee, anticipates problems in getting that budget passed. The reason: liberal Democrats insist the budget-cutting fever would gut social programs they've been swearing by for years.

With inflation running at an annual rate of 18 percent, the drive to reduce government spending and balance the budget has taken on new life this year. The Carter administration and congressional leaders say a balanced budget will be a major signal to workers and to financial markets that the government means business in the anti-inflation battle.

Nine Democrats and 37 Republicans have signed the GOP plan, which is sponsored principally by Sen. Bill Roth, R-Del. That resolution simply directs the Senate Budget Committee to ensure that the next budget does not exceed 21 percent of the Gross National Product, a measure of all goods the nation produces.

That would limit spending to either $596 billion, as Roth says, or $584 billion, according to Democratic opponents.

Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, chairman of the Budget Committee, insisted such limitations would make it more difficult for Congress to deal with the ups-and-downs of the economy and would force unrealistic cuts in spending.

In an effort to sidetrack the Roth resolution, Muskie won endorsement by the Democratic Caucus of a substitute that would require a balanced budget and earmark any surplus for tax cuts. And to give the Senate a clear choice, it would show where additional cuts could be made in order to reach the 21-percent level preferred by Roth.

The Senate will continue talking this week about Carter's proposed "windfall-profits" tax on the oil industry, which also is a major part of the war on inflation.

Republican-led opponents of the bill, which would cost oil producers and royalty owners an estimated $227.7 billion in the 1980s, are drawing out the debate in an effort to force the convening of a new Senate-House conference committee that would write a more acceptable version.

his main competitors for the GOP presidential nomination - George Bush or John B. Anderson - would be the team player Reagan says he would want in a vice presidential running mate.

Reagan dodged a reply about Bush, without endorsing him in any way. About Anderson, he said: "How could you choose a fellow as vice president who says he doesn't want you as president and couldn't support you? It's a case of his turning me down."

Later, at an "agriculture day" event, Reagan was asked whether he favored 100 percent of parity - a subsidized farm price level intended to give farmers the same purchasing power they had before World War I. "I am not as familiar with some things like that," he replied as a murmur of surprise swept his audience of farmers.

Bush scoffed at the Connecticut poll results and proclaimed himself "the new me" who talks only about issues and not public opinion surveys. He also challenged the Carter administration to explain why the deposed Shah of Iran left exile in Panama, and said he hopes the United States is trying to see that the shah gets the medical treatment he needs.

Griffith dedicates tournament to friend

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) - Louisville's Darrell Griffith was a man possessed in Saturday's 80-72 NCAA basketball tournament semifinal round victory over Iowa.

Aboard the team bus on the way to Market Square Arena, the All-America guard said he was feeling sad.

"He told me he was thinking about Jerry back home," said Louisville assistant Wade Houston.

At a pep rally Friday in Louisville, Griffith had told about 1,000 fans that he was dedicating the tournament to a friend who had cancer. That friend is Jerry Stringer.

"They go back to grade school," Houston said.

Stringer was the basketball team manager at Louisville's Male High School, a team Houston coached and Griffith guided to the 1975 Kentucky high school basketball title.

Houston explained that Stringer's disease was diagnosed about six months ago as bone cancer, and the resulting medical battle has proved upsetting to Griffith.

"Darrell saw Jerry right before we left Louisville," Houston said. "It made him sad. So he dedicated the game again to Jerry on the bus."

In Saturday's game, Griffith exploded for 16 of Louisville's first 18 points and finished with a game high 34 points.

"All we could do was go to the boards and watch Darrell," said sophomore forward Derek Smith.

"Iowa took us out of our fastbreak offense and played tough defense, so we had to play their game," said forward Wiley Brown. "We had to go to Darrell, and he came through for us."

There was no stopping the 6-foot-3 Griffith. Besides hitting 14 or 21 field goal attempts, he also led both teams with six assists and pulled down five rebounds.

"Griffith is a great player," said Iowa Coach Lute Olson. "The tighter we played him, the better he shot the ball. He played as well against us as any player ever was."

bruise.

"It wasn't a re-injury," explained Olson. "The doctor was concerned that if we didn't keep it iced, he'd have swelling. We expect him to play Monday."

Lester, Iowa's all-time scorer, who missed about half his team's games this season due to two operations on his right knee, never returned.

"It hurt us in terms of leadership," said Olson about the loss. "We were suddenly forced to go with six players, instead of seven."

Brown's 'toughest' decision brings success to UCLA

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) - The Bruins are back. UCLA once again is competing for the NCAA basketball title. Tradition is being served, largely because first-year Coach Larry Brown had the guts in mid-season to fly in the face of tradition.

"It was the toughest decision I've ever had to make," reflected Brown on the eve of the Bruins' matchup against Louisville Monday night for the NCAA championship. "But I had messed the team up pretty good in the beginning of the year, and I had an obligation to UCLA to get this program where it belongs."

With the Bruins struggling at 8-6, Brown told his players he was making some lineup changes. Seniors Darrell Allums and Gig Sims, as well as sophomores Tyren Nauls and Tony Anderson were benched. This went against the accepted way of doing things at UCLA, where seniors are usually catered to and pampered.

"I was doing things because I didn't want to hurt peoples' feelings," said Brown. "It wasn't working, and I know why. I wasn't being myself. I wasn't coaching the way I know I can coach. I wasn't being fair to myself, to my players or to the program."

So Brown inserted talented sophomore Mike Sanders into the starting lineup, and also gave increased responsibility to his "four young whackos" - freshmen Rod Foster, Michael Holton, Darren Daye and Cliff Pruitt.

"I've never seen a group as talented as these kids," said Brown. "They have no fear. They honestly believe they are better than anybody - and sometimes they are."

Since Brown shuffled his lineup and simplified his offensive and defensive patterns, the Bruins have won 14 of 17 games. They made it into the expanded 48-team NCAA tourney, where they knocked off top-rated DePaul, among others, on their way to the final.

It was the chance to work with youngsters like the "four whackos" at a place like UCLA that made the job so attractive for Brown. After 6½ years of coaching in the pro ranks, he was a nervous wreck when he left the Denver Nuggets under fire on Feb. 1, 1979.

Leaving the Nuggets to coach at UCLA might be like going from the frying pan to the fire, and while he got burned early, Brown says he's never been happier.

"I've never had a relationship with players like I have with these kids at UCLA," said the 39-year-old native of Brooklyn, N.Y. "The nature of the college game leads to unselfishness, which is not the case in the pros. There you read about super players instead of super teams."

"I wanted to be a teacher and have a real relationship with my players, and I wasn't getting that satisfaction in the pros."

Brown almost took the Memphis State coaching job, but turned it down. The UCLA post, however, was one he could not refuse.

... Era

The freshmen starters on the UCLA team include Rod Foster and Michael Holton in the back-court. One of the starting front court players is a sophomore, center Mike Sanders, while forwards Kiki Vandeweghe and James Wilkes both are seniors.

"I'm sure they'll press us as soon as we leave the dressing room," said Brown. "If we get into a schoolyard game with them, we'll be in deep trouble."

"We'll have to play team defense and try to stay away from one-and-one situations."

The Bruins have assumed the unofficial title of this year's "Cinderella Team" - a tribute to their late-season resurgence after a poor 8-6 start. They finished fourth in the Pacific - 10 Conference and were among the last teams invited into the expanded 48 team field.

"I set so many negative records at UCLA this year that I don't even want to think about it," said Brown. "I can only thank the NCAA for enlarging the field this year so a fourth-place (conference) team could be invited."

The Bruins, though, have been playing as well as any team these days and come flying into the championship game with a string of five NCAA playoff victories. With Saturday's victory, they improved their record to 22-9.

The championship game, following the third-place consolation game between Iowa and Purdue, will be witnessed live by more than 17,000 fans while millions more will watch on national television.

ward to the tiebreaker having lost the first set of the match after taking a 4-2 advantage only to lose it, 4-5. But in this deciding best-of-nine points third set, McMahon rallied from a 1-3 deficit to take the match, 5-3.

In another singles match decided in a similar fashion, number three Hopwood defeated Grant Rolley, 6-2, 6-7 (4-5) and 5-2 in the make-shift third set.

The win was coach Tom Fallon's 349th in his 24-year career, surpassing fencing mentor Mike DeCicco for second place on Notre Dame's all-time coaching victory list. Only retired baseball coach Jake Kline has more wins with 552. Fallon also posted 62 wins as wrestling coach before 1969, bringing his grand total to 412.

Saturday's grudge match with Indiana State was sweet revenge for the Irish who lost to the Sycamores a year ago, 6-3. The match was all but decided following the six singles competitions with Notre Dame winning four of them.

McMahon did away with Tin Capulong, 6-2, 7-5 and junior

Mark Hoyer battled to a hard-fought victory over Chuck Norman in the number four singles match, 7-5, 7-6 (5-4). Sophomores Tom Hartzell and Tom Robinson wasted little time in beating Galen Scott and Steve Hudack at the number five and six singles respectively, 6-1, 6-0 and 6-3, 6-1. Robison improved his singles record to 5-1, best on the team.

The two Irish losses came at the number two and three singles. But after the disappointing losses, Harris and Hopwood joined forces to take the number one doubles competition, 6-2, 2-6, 6-4. You could tell things were going well for Notre Dame when Carlton Harris lost control of his racquet after a serve. As the defenseless Harris watched his racquet slide all the way to the net, Hopwood put away the Indiana State return for the point.

"We're about where we expected to be at this point," said Fallon. "Things are looking very good for the rest of the season, and that goal of 20 wins still isn't out of the question. We can only afford one more loss, but with the great attitude on this team, we may not lose any. The leadership this year has been great with Carlton (Harris, senior captain), and these guys have a real winning attitude. They take defeat hard. It seems like every day it's somebody different whose having a hot day, picking up for somebody who might be a little down."

Fallon is especially pleased with the progress of freshman McMahon. The San Diego, Calif., native owns a 4-4 record thus far with three of the four losses coming against NCAA tournament participants. "I think Mark is gaining more confidence with every match," said Fallon. "I think his determined performance against Capulong and especially Van Lieshoot this weekend showed that."

Fallon will take the team to sunny Mexico City and Acapulco, Mexico, on Thursday afternoon for a ten-day, ten-match workout/vacation. The team will be the guest of a group of former Irish players under Fallon. "The major objective of a trip of this nature is conditioning," says Fallon. "Playing a match a day on mostly clay courts in Mexico's high altitude would get anybody into top shape."

The Irish will need to be in top form upon their return as they will play 15 matches in a 23-day span starting with Belarmine on Friday. April 11 is the first match of the Notre Dame Quadrangular Tournament. "I'm looking for the team to be playing it's best tennis right after we get back. With Hawaii, Ohio State, Indiana, Kalamazoo and Western Michigan coming up in a hurry, they're going to need to be."

Men grab bookstore slots ...

The 320 available spaces in this year's Bookstore Basketball tournament were quickly filled yesterday afternoon. Sign-ups were held in the LaFortune Ballroom and assistant tournament commissioner Mary Beth Sterling announced that the roster was completed in "a little over an hour."

"When we filled the 320 spaces, we started a waiting list," pointed out Sterling, acting in place of retiring tournament commissioner Leo Latz who was out of town. "It is unfortunate that we cannot accommodate everyone who wants to play, but it looks like it will be impossible to expand the field this year."

Last year's tournament roster was enlarged from 256 to the present field of 320 teams. Latz has announced that a new commissioner will be named sometime this week and participating teams will be able to pick up their tournament schedules right after spring break. The finals of the tournament will be played on Sunday, April 27.

Ellen Dorney, commissioner of the Women's Bookstore Basketball Tournament, has announced that there are still spots available in this year's tourney after yesterday's sign-ups. Teams of five who still want to enter should call Dorney at 6987 to enter.

teammates, both California natives, Dennis Regan and Kevin Hawkins as the only O'Hanlon's players with high school volleyball experience.

Goralski organized the East Coast team, winners of the Illinois Benedictine College Invitational in January, just a year ago with players from the South Bend YMCA. The club consists not only of Goralski, who has been active in volleyball for 20 years, but Al Blazeovich and Doug Kendall, two former players for Ball State, a college with a nationally known volleyball tradition. Also on the East Coast squad are five players fresh from high school graduation last spring.

Windy City, an all-star team from Chicago, dominated the women's 16-team division during the tournament, losing just one game on the day. Ironically the Windy City team players can barely be billed as women; the club consists of girls 15 and under preparing for the National Junior Olympics, an event in which Windy City is one of the favorable teams.

Goralski will next prepare the O'Hanlon's team, just an interest group under Notre Dame athletic terminology, for the Midwest Intercollegiate Volleyball Association (MIVA) championship to be held April 12 at the University of Michigan.

"We'll have one week after break, we hope, to practice," said Goralski of the Notre Dame team. "If the space is made available in the ACC then we'll get in some practice time and I'll bring in the East Coast for scrimmage. Since January we've been unable to hold more than four practice sessions at the ACC."

Lacrosse team opens season, defeats Ball State, 17-4

The Notre Dame Lacrosse team began its season yesterday with a 17-4 whalloping of Ball State University. The Irish were led by Mike Norton who scored a hat trick.

Nick Gehring added two goals and three assists, while Mike Lynch, Carl Lundblad, and Jaz Ortiz each added a pair of goals in the overall team effort by Notre Dame.

Al Pinado had a superb game in goal, stopping 16 stops. He had some help from his stalwarts on defense: Tim Michaels Maurice Beshlian and Mark Tallmage.

The Irish stickmen, defending their Midwest University Club division championship, travel to Texas over spring break to take on five opponents. They will face teams from the Houston Lacrosse Club, University of Houston, Texas A&M, Dallas Lacrosse Club and Texas Tech.

Scholarship reduction clouds WCHA's future

by Brian Beglune
Sports Writer

Notre Dame's proposal to reduce grants-in-aid and travel costs for the University's hockey program could have a significant impact on the Western Collegiate Hockey Association, to the extent of possibly determining the future of the league.

In an announcement made Saturday morning, the University stated "efforts will be made to cut back on the substantial subsidy to ice hockey by a gradual reduction in the number of grants-in-aid and by an attempt to reduce travel costs." The hockey team is the only sport which will receive a cutback in scholarships as a result of Notre Dame's plan to upgrade women's intercollegiate athletics.

University president Fr. Theodore Hesburgh, C.S.C., confirmed earlier reports that the hockey team will lose two of its scholarships after this year, bringing the total number down to 18. Future cutbacks, however, were implied in the statement.

"The team will continue as a member of the Western Collegiate Hockey Association next season while exploring future options, including membership in a geographically more compact league," the statement said.

The 10-team member WCHA goes as far west as Denver and Colorado Springs and as far east as Ann Arbor, Mich. That spans approximately 1,000 miles. The desire of Notre Dame and other schools to cut back on the travel involved with league play is a crucial issue in the WCHA's future. The league's future could very well be determined by how it decides to handle this issue of travel.

"There will be a meeting with the league later this week," said Irish coach Lefty

Smith. "Three other schools - Michigan, Michigan State and Michigan Tech - and we are going to inform the WCHA that we want some sort of realignment for the league."

"We (the four teams) all agree something has to be done. Travel costs are just too high and realigning the league is a realistic solution to the problem. In essence, Notre Dame is going to be the leader in this move to get the league realigned."

Several possibilities exist for realignment. The WCHA was close to one of them two years ago when it had voted to split into two divisions, but at the league meetings last spring, the member schools voted overwhelmingly to stay as a 10-team loop, killing the proposed divisional idea.

The notion of the WCHA and the Central Collegiate Hockey Association merging into one league was proposed last spring by CCHA commissioner Frank Jacoby. "We favored the idea," said Jacoby, "but they (the WCHA) rebuffed us." The CCHA currently has six teams and will probably expand to seven next year.

The proposal to form a new league with seven schools from the state of Michigan and Notre Dame also has been aired over the last year. If that would happen, the WCHA would lose Notre Dame, Michigan, Michigan State and Michigan Tech. The CCHA would lose Western Michigan, Northern Michigan, Lake Superior State College and Ferris State.

These options remain to be discussed, but as for next year in the WCHA, Smith feels his team can compete.

"We won't have much depth, but we will have a solid base for a team," he explained. "We have got a lot of people coming back and if we succeed in getting the recruits we want for next year, we should be okay."

East Coast, Windy City win tourney

by Beth Huffman
Women's Sports Editor

East Coast, a men's volleyball team from South Bend, thwarted Notre Dame's O'Hanlon's hopes to win its own tournament by topping the Irish 15-10, 15-6 in the finals of the 26-team SMC-ND Invitational held over the weekend. In the women's division it was the Windy City club that outlasted Ball State, 15-10, 15-7.

The East Coast club, in its first year of existence, gained a berth in the finals by sweeping pool play 8-0 and topping Art's Bar of Lansing Michigan, in a best of three match during the semi-finals. Similarly, Notre Dame won its pool and defeated a team, the Bel Air Ducks of Indianapolis, in a best of three contest.

Mel Goralski, not only the coach for Notre Dame, but also a player-coach for the winning East Coast, complemented Barry Smith, a 6-4 freshman from Lancaster, N.Y., on his outstanding tournament play for the Irish. Smith joins two

Quickness

Title game reflects Wooden era

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) - For the teams involved, the NCAA basketball championship game tonight will be just like looking in the mirror.

"It's going to be a classic matchup of two quick teams," underscored Louisville Coach Denny Crum Sunday in the ceremonial pre-game press conference prior to the game against UCLA.

There's more to it than that, though.

Along with the similar attributes of quickness, the finalists also have relatively short lineups and are similarly studded with young players. Louisville has three sophomores and a freshman among its top five players and UCLA starts an all-freshman backcourt.

The comparisons continue down to the type of offense the teams run - the high-post. Both coaches got the idea from former UCLA Coach John Wooden.

There's a reason for that in Crum's case, of course. He played at UCLA and coached there under the ultra-successful Wooden, who won 10 NCAA championships with the Bruins.

"I had the opportunity to learn from the best coach I've ever seen," Crum said about Wooden.

Crum also had the opportunity to learn from his own experience in these NCAA playoffs. He coached in the 1972 and 1975 championship round, ironically losing both times to UCLA in the semifinals.

He holds no animosity against UCLA as a result of those losses, however.

"I wouldn't be here today without them," said Crum. "I learned everything I know from UCLA."

One of the crucial things that Crum learned was the importance of the pressing defense - a tactic that has carried the tough Cardinals through the Midwest Regionals and past Iowa into the national final with a stately 32-3 record.

"A lot of people look at us as a run-and-gun team," said Crum, "But our strong point is our defense. You don't get this far without it."

Most everyone in Market Square Arena, though, no doubt will be more cognizant of Louisville's offense - particularly Darrell Griffith's offense. The Louisville "skywalker," with the 48-inch verticle jump, scored 34 points in the Cardinals' 80-72 victory over Iowa in Saturday's semifinals.

UCLA Coach Larry Brown hopes to keep the 6-foot-4 guard considerably below that figure Monday night.

"We haven't decided yet who's going to guard Griffith," said Brown. "I don't think you can stop him altogether. But if we can make his shots tougher and keep him off the foul line, we'll be doing the job on him."

Griffith can do more than just score, though. Brown is aware of the All-American's all-around game.

"He reminds me a lot of David Thompson," said Brown, who once coached the pro superstar with the Denver Nuggets. "Griffith is very unselfish. He will give the ball up to a teammate if he is double-teamed. He's not afraid to take the big shot. He helps out on the boards, and he makes the big play to get his team going."

Griffith will be the third All-American player that the Bruins hope to contain in this tournament. Earlier, they were successful against DePaul and Mark Aguirre in a second-round upset. The West Regional winners then beat Purdue and 7-1 Joe Barry Carroll by a 67-62 score in Saturday's semifinals.

The sensational senior won't be UCLA's only problem, of course. The Cardinals have a well-balanced lineup that includes freshman Rodney McCray at center, sophomores Wiley Brown and Derek Smith at the forward positions, and Jerry Eaves, another sophomore, at the backcourt spot

Irish netters rage past weekend rivals

by Michael Ortman
Sports Writer

When you're hot, you're hot. Right now the Notre Dame tennis team is on fire.

A weekend sweep of visiting Wisconsin-Oshkosh and Indiana State improved the season mark to 6-2, extends the current winning streak to five straight and has some people wondering if the Irish can do anything wrong.

Friday's 9-0 thrashing of Oshkosh wasn't the sleeper that the score might indicate. Although the team outcome was hardly in doubt for very long, a few of the matches went down to the wire in decisive third sets.

Notre Dame's second and third doubles teams had little trouble, coasting to straight set victories in about 45 minutes. But the number one tandem of Carlton Harris and Herb Hopwood had to rally back after a first set loss to beat Jim Van Lieshoo and Dave Luedtke, 4-6, 6-2, 7-5.

Van Lieshoo, a member of Wisconsin's Junior Davis Cup team, struggled with Notre Dame's number one singles man Mark McMahon for two sets winning the first in a decisive nine-point tiebreaker, 7-6 (5-4). After McMahon won the second set, 7-5, the two played another nine-point tiebreaker in place of the standard third set because of limited available court time at the Lafayette South Racquet Club. The cold weather forced the match indoors, and the ACC's courts were occupied by the auto show.

McMahon did not look for-

Shah settles in Egypt; Iranian threats persist

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) -The deposed Shah of Iran settled into a hospital overlooking the Nile River yesterday, finding a permanent refuge in Egypt after a year's wandering around the world.

Angry Iranian officials warned that the shah's latest move, his eighth since fleeing the Iranian revolution in January 1979, would obstruct progress toward resolving the crisis over the U.S. Embassy hostages in Tehran. One official revived the threat of putting some hostages on trial.

[see related story on page 4]

Tehran radio called for a march on the occupied embassy today to denounce what it said was a "treacherous plot" by the United States and Egyptian President Anwar Sadat to help the shah escape extradition proceedings in Panama.

The Moslem militants holding the Tehran Embassy said again their 50 American hostages, captive for 142 days, would not be freed until the shah and his fortune returned to Iran.

In Washington, a senior Carter administration official dismissed the threat of hostage trials, but the State Department nonetheless issued a warning that "the Iranian government is aware of the consequences and condemnation that would take place" if the Americans were tried.

The ailing Mohammed Reza Pahlavi and his wife, Farah Diba, took off from Panama on Sunday aboard a chartered American jetliner that refueled at a U.S.-Portuguese air base in the Azores islands and landed in Cairo yesterday.

By Tim Vercellotti
Staff Reporter

The Campus Life Council attempted, on three different motions, to take immediate action concerning a possible reorganization of the body at a meeting last night. Each time the motion failed.

Midway through the meeting, Mickey Turzai, former Keenan Hall vice-president and Senior class president-elect, proposed that the term of office for members of the CLC be extended and elections for new student representatives be postponed, in order that current members may reconsider the composition of the council.

Any proposed changes that might result from this evaluation would then be presented to the Board of Trustees of the University at their May meeting.

According to Turzai, discussion is necessary to prevent the CLC from getting caught in a continuous cycle.

"We must seriously reconsider who we represent, and what the CLC can or cannot do," Turzai explained.

This type of question, involving a change in the preamble to the CLC constitution, requires that two-thirds of the nineteen members of the council must vote in favor of the motion. The motion failed, with nine members in favor of the change, three opposed, and three abstaining.

Alperovitz lectures on economics

by Michael Mader
Staff Reporter

Declaring a gloomy picture of inflation and stating that "no one knows where the economy is going," Gar Alperovitz spoke to a group of 120 yesterday afternoon on "Inflation, Basic Necessities, and the Distribution of Economic Power" in the Hayes-Healy building.

Alperovitz has been an eco-

Speaker Gar Alperovitz

economic director for both the House of Representatives and the Senate, and is a former president of the Center for Economic Development. He has a masters degree in economics and a Ph.D. in political economy. He is now affiliated with the National Center for Economic Alternatives.

Alperovitz began his talk by defining the traditional conservative paradigm of attacking inflation. The usual method of handling inflation is to plan a recession or to slow down the economy, Alperovitz said. A slowdown can be accomplished by four thrusts: balancing the budget, tightening the money supply, cutting back on government regulations, and cutting back on the laborer's wages.

A balanced budget can have good psychological effects, but in a practical sense, "a balanced budget has very little to do with the inflation problem," Alperovitz said. Tightening the money supply is usually accomplished by rising interest rates on loans which adds to inflation rather than taking away from it. "To tighten the money supply will only slow growth. It puts the economy through a wringer," Alperovitz noted.

A cutback on government regulations will do little, according to Alperovitz. It is estimated that these cutbacks will reduce inflation by 0.7 percent, which is almost insignificant compared to the 18 percent facing Americans this year, he noted. Cutting back on wages, Alperovitz admitted, would slow inflation significantly, however he cannot see where the U.S. can start cutbacks. The problem is that last year, inflation rose 13.3 percent while wages rose, on the average, eight percent. "This is a five percent cut in real income in one year," Alperovitz calculated while adding that the American laborer cannot sustain such a cutback much longer.

President Carter's inflation plan encompasses all four thrusts, Alperovitz pointed out. "The plan, which Carter's advisors would probably admit if pushed, will add to inflation by one or two points," Alperovitz said. Congressmen support the actions of Carter because they believe that is what they are supposed to do to stop inflation, according to Alperovitz. "Until the paradigms change, politicians will continue to do what they do," Alperovitz summarized.

Most of the 120 attending Dr. Alperovitz's lecture were economics students attending at the request of their teachers. Although the crowd was attentive and murmured several times about figures presented by Alperovitz, as the lecture wore on, the students began to leave. When Alperovitz finished his hour-and-a-half-long lecture, only 30 persons had stayed for the question period. Those that stayed, however, asked questions for 45 more minutes, some wanting confirmation of the perceptions of the talk, some merely curious, while others were cynical about Alperovitz's views.

After introducing conservative views, Alperovitz concentrated on what he sees is happening and solutions to problems posed by inflation.

Senior Bar appoints Quinn

By Colleen Short

The four managers of the Senior-Alumni Club (Senior Bar) for the 1980-81 year were announced last night by Dean of Students James A. Roemer. Kelly Quinn is the new general manager and first woman to gain that position in the club's 15 year history, David Link is the new Business Manager, Michael Gies was named inventory manager and Robert Carey will be club manager.

Nineteen students applied for the four positions. Eight possible candidates were then selected by this year's managers, Tom McGrath, Clare Stack, Craig Zebold and Dick Wallach. After an extensive interview process, Roemer and Prof. Ken Milani, financial advisor of Senior Bar, selected the final four.

In the interviews, the applicants were presented with crisis situations which past managers experienced. "We wanted to see how they would handle the situations. We looked for patience, tact, and the ability to think quickly," said present general manager McGrath.

Roemer added, "We looked for a team that could work well together. The four of them have demonstrated a great deal of team spirit, integrity, and responsibility in their past endeavors."

According to Roemer, the general manager of Senior Bar must be able to motivate fellow employees and handle any situation quickly and prudently. "She (Quinn) impressed us as the person most able to live up to all the demands of the position. She demonstrated a great deal of intelligence in her handling of the hypothetical situations we presented to her," Roemer said. "She is quick, straightforward and honest. One fantastic lady."

Will Quinn encounter problems because she is a woman? The consensus is that she will not.

"Kelly impressed us as a person who can withstand pressure from her peers. She seems to be able to handle tough situations as well as anyone," Roemer commented.

McGrath agreed. "Kelly may be abused because she is a woman, but she is very intelligent and very well qualified and she is tough enough to handle any problem that may arise."

Quinn stated, "A long-standing tradition has been overthrown. I don't see the fact that I am a woman as a deterrent, but I will have to work that much harder to ensure a successful year. The job would be a challenge to anyone--male or female."

On plans for next year's Senior Bar, Quinn said, "I am really impressed with the present bar managers--I only hope that we can do as good a job as they have," she added, "I'm thrilled to death for the upcoming year."

Oil engineers plug hole in runaway Mexican drilling rig

MEXICO CITY (AP)—Engineers finally managed to cap Ixtoc I, the runaway oil well offshore in the Gulf of Mexico that spewed more than 3.1 million barrels of crude oil since it blew up June 3 and fouled beaches in Southern Texas, a spokesman for the Mexican petroleum monopoly said yesterday. The Pemex spokesman said a third and final cement plug was successfully introduced into the well 50 miles out at sea shortly before midnight Sunday, shutting off the flow of crude oil and natural gas.

Bummed Belgian bank sues Chrysler to recover loan

DETROIT (AP)—Chrysler Corp. said yesterday it had been sued by a Belgian bank to recover a $10 million overdue loan. It was only the second such suit, though Chrysler has earlier admitted its overdue loans totalled $28.5 million at the end of February, plus $110 million overdue on letters of credit to Japanese banks. More suits could stymie Chrysler's efforts to arrange $550 million in new bank loans and other credits, which the automaker must do to qualify for the $1.5 billion in loan guarantees approved by Congress. The company has said it hoped to qualify by the end of this month.

Gunmen assassinate bishop as horrified nun looks on

SAN SALVADOR* El Salvador (AP) — Gunmen entered a church in which Archbishop Oscar Arnulfo Romero of San Salvador was celebrating Mass yesterday and assassinated him, according to a nun who said she and 20 other persons saw the killing.

The nun, who asked not to be identified, said in a tearful telephone interview with The Associated Press that Archbishop Romero, an outspoken critic of the violence in this small Central American nation, was shot in the chest as he celebrated evening Mass.

Kennedy, Bush seek revival

(AP)—Sen. Edward M. Kennedy feverishly courted New York while Texas Yankee George Bush sought revival in his childhood Connecticut yesterday on the eve of primaries which threatened to shred their once-impeccable credentials as serious presidential contenders.

Despite his claim that New York—where a whopping 282 Democratic convention delegates were at stake—would put his withering challenge to President Carter back on track, the latest polls indicated that Kennedy would reap only ruin from the Empire State.

The New York Daily News said that while Kennedy ran about even among the state's Jewish voters—about one-third of the total—he still trailed the president by 20 points, or 56 to 36.

At least two Kennedy aides were prepared to tell him to quit if he loses New York badly. But Kennedy said he wouldn't do that, since he was "chemically and viscerally" suited to nothing less than a fight to the end.

On the Republican side, front-runner Ronald Reagan was already a winner in New York, where the GOP contest effectively boiled down to a choice between his slates of delegates and those who were uncommitted. There was no preferential vote in the GOP balloting, in which a total of 123 delegates were allocated.

Reagan had nine delegates already, since they were uncontested. Bush had 6 uncontested delegates, but was head-to-head against Reagan for only 31 more in 11 of the state's 39 congressional districts. Uncommitted slates were uncontested in races for 61 delegates, but many of those were likely to support Reagan, since he was the favorite of the state party organization.

That left Bush focusing on Connecticut, the state where he grew up and the spot where he vowed only a week ago he would rebound from a string of disastrous showings. But a University of Connecticut poll showed Reagan with a sizable lead, though Bush sought salvation from an unusually large bloc of undecided votes.

Rep. John B. Anderson, R-Ill., also was on the ballot in Connecticut, but he was seen running third in the contest for the state's 35 GOP delegates.

Democratic Party 'gag' tape causes officials embarrassment

WASHINGTON (AP) - If the Republicans needed any help in lampooning President Carter, they could have gotten it last weekend from none other than Democratic Party headquarters.

Callers who dialed a certain telephone number at the Democratic National Committee heard a recorded spoof of the president, complete with background banjo music, taped excerpts from Carter speeches and at least one raw expletive from a country-rock star at a Carter concert.

Embarrassed Democrats said the message, entitled "Quest for the Presidency 1976," was all a terrible mistake.

It was a party tape, they said, and was being used in a live test of telephone equipment for a dial-in message service at the Democratic National Convention in New York next August.

When party officials discovered yesterday that people had learned of the gag tape and were dialing the number at Democratic headquarters to listen to it, the tape was quickly yanked.

"We were just testing out the equipment," pleaded Bob Hirschfeld, chief of broadcast services for the committee's news department. "We weren't expecting anyone to call during that time. That number has been out of service for at least a year and a half."

Hirschfeld said he erased the entire three-minute tape. "It will never be on again," he said.

On the tape, heard by reporters before it was removed from the playback machine, a serious-voiced narrator said Carter obtained "seed money" to start his 1976 presidential campaign by signing on as a donor for the "Atlanta Sperm Bank."

A second motion, also concerning the composition of the CLC, was proposed by Michael Sexton, Zahm hall's vice-president for the 1979-80 academic year. In his proposal, Sexton suggested that the four student representatives to the CLC, who are currently elected from among the hall vice-presidents, instead be chosen not only from the vice-presidents, but also from any past student representative to the CLC.

The motivation behind this, according to Sexton, was promotion of experience and continuity on the CLC. This motion also met defeat, with twelve votes for, one against, and one abstaining. Professor William Eagan, a faculty member of the CLC, cast the abstaining vote, stating that, "It isn't feasible to piecemeal the operation."

As the end of the meeting approached, Student Body President-elect Paul Riehle moved that the original motion to extend the term of office for members of the CLC, and the postponement of elections for new student representatives be reconsidered.

Riehle added that there would be a limit on the extension and postponement, the limit taking effect two weeks after students returned from spring break. This suggestion was also turned down, with twelve members voting aye, none nay, and two abstaining.

The CLC finally agreed upon a proposal that a committee would study the composition and the effectiveness of the CLC, and then make a report to next year's CLC at their first meeting in April.

In other business, the council discussed the question of a student center, and passed a motion appointing a committee to study the possibility of such a center.

Moiria Baker, Lewis hall rector, pointed out that a student center is needed. "I think it would in part remedy the situation. LaFortune isn't adequate for student needs," Baker said. She called the recent repairs to the student union building "band-aid work."

Fr. John Van Wolvlear stressed the fact that a good presentation to the administration is needed to get the funds for such a center. "If it's presented properly, we can get a foot in the door," Van Wolvlear said.

Possible sites for the student center included the land where the fieldhouse stands, the Knights of Columbus building, and the soon to be vacated facilities of WNDU.

The meeting closed as members of the CLC congratulated each other on this year's accomplishments. Among the accomplishments named were the administration's consideration of the extension of the lunch hours, and changes in DuLac.

As the final meeting of the 1979-80 CLC broke up, Father Van Wolvlear remarked that the CLC was "trying too much too late" in proposing changes in the preamble of the constitution of the advisory body. But Fr. Richard Conyers, Keenan rector called the meeting "an exercise in futility."

SMC Student Government accepting applications

By Deidre Dalton

Saint Mary's Student Government is presently accepting applications for Commissioners for the 1980-81 Board of Governance, President-elect Kathleen Sweeney said last night. The Governance Board is made up of the Student Body President, Vice President of Student Affairs and Vice President of Academic Affairs, who preside over the Commissioners.

The Commissioners that make up the Board of Governance according to Sweeney, are the Election Commissioner, the Off-Campus Commissioner, the Development Commissioner, the SAPB Commissioner, the Spiritual Commissioner, the Athletic Commissioner, the Judicial Programs Board Commissioner and the Public Relations Commissioner. Class presidents and hall presidents are also Commissioners on the Board of Governance.

Sweeney said the Board is "a channel of communication where the officers can articulate their ideas and goals and also a board to hear the ideas of the students through committees." The Board, Sweeney added, "decides the direction the student government should take by listening to these ideas."

The structure of the Board will basically remain the same as this year's Board, noted Sweeney. She also emphasized the Board's flexibility, saying "We want to absorb new ideas and new people."

Application deadlines have been extended until this Friday. Applications may be picked up in the Student Activities Office.

Concerning Iran

U.S. warns against retaliation

WASHINGTON (AP) - The United States warned Iran yesterday against punishing the American hostages held in Tehran as retaliation for the departure of the deposed shah from Panama.

Insisting that the decision of Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi to leave Panama for Egypt was made by the former monarch alone, Carter administration officials also tried to cool tempers in Tehran by offering to improve relations once the 4½-month-old hostage crisis ends.

The officials said the Soviets pose a common danger to U.S. and Iranian interests in the Persian Gulf and reaffirmed an offer to discuss American aid after the 50 American hostages are liberated.

The shah's sudden departure from Panama on Sunday upset "the hell out of people" in Tehran, a senior administration official acknowledged. And yet he dismissed a threat by Ayatollah Sadegh Khalkali, an Iranian prosecutor, to put the Americans on trial and then jail them. The official said this was "not a very possible or probable outcome."

Even so, the administration issued a warning through State Department spokesman Hodding Carter that "the Iranian government is aware of the consequences and condemnation that would take place" if the hostages were tried.

A White House official, who asked that he not be identified, indicated the administration does not attach "the same degree of concern" to the trial threat that it did when Iranian officials earlier suggested the Americans could be placed before courts.

"The concern we would feel has not changed," this official said, "but our assessment of the problem is certainly less than it was before."

For the most part, officials within the administration indicated they felt the ultimate fate of the American hostages would not be affected by the shah's move to Egypt. He left Panama after two presidential advisers, Hamilton Jordan and Lloyd Cutler, held quiet negotiations with those in his entourage.

The Iranian government had hoped, through legal proceedings, to have the shah returned to Tehran for trial as a war criminal. Punishing him is the principal demand of the Moslem militants who seized the hostages and the U.S. Embassy on Nov. 4.

Panama has no extradition treaty with Iran. However, Iranian officials had taken a number of steps to circumvent that problem.

Still, the White House officials said flatly that "there was never any prospect that the shah would have been extradited to Iran and that was made clear to him and to his people."

The families of the hostages were assured on Saturday that the shah would not return to the United States. "He (the shah) had made no request to come back here," the White House official said. "Those involved did not consider that to be the best option."

However, another U.S. official said the option of returning to the United States was open to the shah but that he and his doctors decided against it.

submit documents requesting his extradition for alleged mass murder and corruption during his three decades as Iranian monarch.

U.S. officials said medical reasons led the shah to accept Sadat's long-standing invitation to reside in Egypt. The shah's doctor's say he requires surgery to remove an enlarged and possibly cancerous spleen, but U.S. specialists and Panamanian physicians had been wrangling over who would be responsible for the operation in Panama.

Iran's prosecutor general was one of the first Iranian officials to react to the news that the shah had flown to Egypt.

Denouncing Sadat as an American "stooge," Siyed Karim Moussavi Ardabili said the shah's move was "a violation of international laws" that "is going to cause great difficulties to the hostage issue."

Ayatollah Sadegh Khalkali, a leading Iranian revolutionary and former chief judge, told reporters in Rome that hostages accused of espionage would be put on trial and jailed if found guilty.

He said the trials would take place after Iran's new Parliament convenes—something not expected before mid-April at the earliest, Khalkali, a member of the Parliament, also said the other hostages would be freed at that time. Khalkali was in Rome en route to Libya for an official visit.

It was also clear that the shah and those around him were worried by Panama's willingness to consider the Iranian extradition request—even though some Panamanian officials said he would never be sent back to Iran.

Looking haggard and much older than his 60 years, the shah was met by Sadat at the Cairo airport. The two accompanied by their wives, took a helicopter to the Maadi military hospital, near the Nile five miles south of the city.

White House rejects athletes' counterproposal

WASHINGTON (AP)—The White House apparently has rejected a counterproposal by American athletes to participate in the Olympic Games in Moscow this summer and, at the same time, protest the Soviet military presence in Afghanistan.

A White House aide, who asked that he not be identified, said yesterday a similar proposal was considered two months ago, before President Carter called for a complete boycott of the Games, and it was rejected.

The official said, although he had not studied the athletes' counterproposal, "It's obviously unacceptable. The president has made his decision."

Members of the Athletes Advisory Council met over the weekend to hammer out the proposal under which they would be permitted to compete in Moscow but would protest against the Soviet Union by boycotting all the formal ceremonies.

They would not participate in the opening and closing parades or show up to receive any medals they might win. They also would arrive in Moscow just before they were to compete and would leave immediately after, remaining in the Olympic Village or at the training facilities during the time they were on Soviet soil. They would do no sightseeing or engage in other tourist activities.

In a formal statement, the Council said: "We feel, consistent with President Carter's position, that a visible, peaceful demonstration is the most effective means by which the world and the world's athletes can present this message to the people of the Soviet Union."

The counterproposal came a day after the athletes visited the White House and were told emphatically by President Carter that the United States would not participate in the Summer Games in Moscow.

"I can't say at this moment what other nations will not go to the Summer Olympics in Moscow," Carter told the Council members and other athletes and coaches. "Ours will not go. I say that not with any equivocation. The decision has been made."

The actual decision to boycott the Games, however, must be made by the U.S. Olympic Committee, which has said it would respect the wishes of the president but has yet to take the final action.

Snow in Kansas; church shelters storm victims

JETMORE, Kan. (AP) More than 100 travelers huddled in this small southwestern Kansas town yesterday after spending the night on pews behind the pulpit when they were stranded by one of the worst blizzards in the state this century.

The 135 unexpected overnight guests at the United Presbyterian Church, including a baseball team from a Colorado junior college, were among thousands who took refuge from the snowstorm across the state at motels, National Guard armories and even a city jail.

The storm also left up to a foot of snow in the Oklahoma panhandle, where rescue crews freed dozens of people stranded in snowbound vehicles Sunday night.

"The area is paralyzed," said Phil Shideler of the National Weather Service in Topeka. Winds up to 45 mph accompanied the fast moving storm and reduced visibility to near zero in some spots.

"You could write a novel about this," said the Rev. Stan Adamson of the church in Jetmore, which has a population of about 1,000. He described how two mothers and their children were separated from other families in their party when their car made it to Jetmore, but two other cars became marooned north of town.

"They were really worried because there were children in the other cars. The mothers were here from 6 o'clock until about 9:30 and the sheriff came in carrying the kids. It was quite a poignant reunion. There were a lot of tears and kisses."

The 22-member baseball team from Trinidad State Junior College was also stranded overnight in the church. "The baseball team even found a bunch of teen-age girls, and they played cards most of the night. Playing cards in the church," Adamson said laughing. "Fortunately, we're United Presbyterians, and we don't mind that."

...Economics

"What is happening is not a generalized inflation. It is not a wage-price inflation, but a price-wage inflation," Alperovitz said. Typical inflation is a result of wages driving up prices, while at this time, prices are driving up wages. Alperovitz analyzed the cause of price hikes and concluded that superinflation in the four basic necessities was the largest factor.

Inflation in the four-year period of 1976-80 for the basic necessities rose from 3.7 percent to a January-annualized 25.2 percent, while inflation on other commodities remained consistently between 6.5 and seven percent, according to Alperovitz.

Alperovitz divided basic necessities into four sectors and analyzed the problems and solutions of each one. In the housing sector, "there is a severe shortage due to the baby boom turning into the family boom," Alperovitz noted. Concentration on tighter budgeting, one of the four thrusts of Carter's plan, closes down on house development, rather than opening up the field, Alperovitz said. The solution to the housing problem will come by planning housing on the national and local levels. The planning does not mean concentration on construction, but on all aspects, including credit control and tax incentive, he concluded.

In the health sector, Alperovitz sees third parties as the reason for medical costs piling up. Alperovitz suggested a solution would be to look into a national health care program.

A scarcity of grain in the future will reach deep into the food sector, because the animals which provide meat and dairy products depend on grain, Alperovitz noted. "We are the only country that allows shortages to ricochet throughout the economy," the economist cautioned.

Oil in Gulf

Explosion sears offshore site

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) - An explosion and fire seared an offshore drilling platform in the Gulf of Mexico early yesterday, killing two men, injuring 29, and leaving four persons missing, officials said.

The rig, drilling a gas well about 100 miles off the upper Texas coast, erupted into flames in the pre-dawn hours, sending men in the crew of 41 scurrying for safety. Only six escaped injury.

The Coast Guard in Galveston said a fixed wing aircraft, a helicopter and the cutter Pont Monroe were searching for the missing crewmen, who were said to have been in the vicinity of the explosion.

Wild well fighter Red Adair put a crew on a nearby rig to assess the damage and determine how best to put out the raging fire.

The cause of the explosion was under investigation.

The survivors were taken by boat to another rig five miles away to await medical personnel airlifted from the coast.

Helicopters ferried them to John Sealy Hospital in Galveston. All 29 injured, many on stretchers, had arrived by noon, said Sealy spokesman Miles Kanape.

Fourteen were treated and released Kanape said, and others were admitted or held for observation. The injuries ranged from burns to "multiple trauma" involving fractures, abrasions and cuts, he said.

A medical corpsman who had flown to the scene told some reporters that many men were injured when they donned life jackets and jumped into the water. However, a company spokesman said evacuation capsules were used. The platform itself is about 100 feet above the water line.

The drilling platform is operated by Pennzoil for a group of owners, but Pennzoil had only one man on the rig, said company spokesman Bob Harper in Houston. The others were contract workers for Pool Offshore Co., located in Harvey, La.

Rescue operations were hampered by high winds and waves as a cold front moved through the area.

At one point, a helicopter trying to transport the most seriously injured had to be tied to the platform to keep from being blown overboard. But at about 7:15 a.m. it managed to lift off with the first of the injured for the trip to Galveston, which took more than an hour.

Harper said many of the men got off the platform via two evacuation capsules, which he said "look a lot like flying saucers." Each holds 28 persons.

The capsules are completely sealed and have a small power unit aboard that allows persons inside to lower the unit into the water and then move at relatively slow speeds.

"Our boats picked them out of the capsules," Harper said. "We had a 185-foot work boat and a 90-foot standby boat at the rig. That's standard procedure."

One 19-year-old survivor, Gary Owen, who worked for a caterer, told his father he had ridden the evacuation capsule. Young Owen, who suffered cuts on his elbow and kneecaps, would not discuss his experience.

"Coming back has been the story of this team all year," said Smith, who put in two killing foul shots at the end for Louisville. "This shows a lot of people. They called us a team that would fold, but we really showed them." The victory was especially sweet for Crum, a former UCLA player and assistant coach. His Louisville teams had lost three times before to the Bruins in the NCAA playoffs. "This time it was our turn," Crum said. "I love it. This is the greatest. The kids really held their poise and hit the free throws down the stretch."

UCLA coach Larry Brown applauded Griffith as "a great player" and applauded the entire Louisville team for its poise. "It boiled down pretty simply to the fact that they made the shots and we didn't," Brown said.

halftime advantage. The North Quad challengers held their biggest lead, 33-24, at the very outset of the fourth quarter. It was shortly thereafter when the momentum turned completely around.

Keenehan scored eight of his ten points in that fourth-quarter stretch, while Dix, having trouble connecting from the floor, hit all of six free throws in that span.

"For the first three quarters the ball just wasn't going in at all," Berryman said. "They played a really tough man-to-man defense, which drove us out of our offense. They cut off our passing lanes and they cut off our driving lanes."

But when Howard finally got its passing and driving lanes back, it was Keenehan that helped his squad capitalize on it.

"Keenehan really came through amazingly," Berryman said. "He was a freshman playing like a senior. He had two super drives at the end that showed lots of guts for a freshman that was working with all juniors."

Keenehan, meanwhile, felt that it was Howard's defensive play that sparked the comeback.

"In the first game against Grace (52-39 Grace win last Wednesday) we weren't aggressive at all," Keenehan said. "We started playing aggressive defense in the fourth quarter, and that's when we got it going. We came up with a lot of steals, and were able to get our running game going."

Dix led a balanced Howard attack with 12 points, while Paul Mazanec and Keenehan had 11 and 10, respectively. Tim O'Connor led all scorers and hit 15 for Grace, while teammate Rich Damberg had 11.

"I guess if we had to lose to anyone, I'm glad we had to do it to Howard," Grassey said. "They have some real class players. Dix and Mazanec, for example, are both all-state players from high school."

In the women's interhall championship, Breen-Phillips edged Walsh, 22-19, in a close struggle the entire way. Jan Schlaff led the victors with 12 points, while Carrie Luepke had eight for Walsh.

The Breen-Phillips triumph gives that dorm championships in both women's football and basketball.

...Fallon

the Physical Education Department and guided the Irish wrestlers for 18 years. In 1957 he added tennis to his coaching duties, a job he has come to cherish more and more as the years pass.

"Maybe I'm mellowing out as I get older," admits Fallon, "but I've enjoyed coaching more the last couple of seasons, mostly because of the types of kids we've had the great leadership. I find a high positive correlation between good leadership, a good captain and the success of the team. We had that last year with Mark (Trueblood) and again this year with Carlton (Harris)."

A whole lot of internal leadership and a little dash of Tom Fallon--the secret to Notre Dame's success for the past 25 years. "You name the captain," he says, "and I'll tell you whether or not it was a good season."

Fallon knows what his job is, and does it well. "I find that when you get to the college level of coaching, most of these kids games are set. There's not a whole lot you can do about individual technique. Take (Mark) McMahon (this year's number one singles player), for example. It would take major surgery to give him a big serve," he says with a smile. "But it's amazing what attitude can do. Sometimes when these kids get really enthused about it, they play better than they're capable of. I don't think the coach is as much a motivator as the team's morale and the leadership of the captain."

"You name the captain, and I'll tell you whether or not it was a good season."

"The job of a college coach today is to offer the best in the way of facilities, opportunity to develop, organization, a good schedule and a certain amount of discipline."

As the 63-year old coach reflects on his tennis career, certain moments highlight the Fallon era. What would any coach remember better than the year his team won it all?

"You'd have to say the National Collegiates in 1959 was the best," he smiles of the first of two unbeaten seasons. "Actually, we tied Tulane under the scoring system they had then."

But his is quick to point out, "We'd have won hands down if we'd had the present scoring system, but they'd only let you take four players at the time."

Since then, Fallon has wracked up an impressive 350-131 tennis record, second only to retired baseball coach Jake Kline on the all-time Notre Dame coaching victories list. Including his wrestling wins, Fallon totals 412 behing Kline's 552. Add to that four Eastern Collegiate Championships and 21 (on the way to 22) winning seasons, and it spells nothing but success.

Fallon realizes that there are a number of teams in the country that his teams could never compete with...but they do, nonetheless. "The kids don't mind losing to Michigan 9-0," he says, "because they know that they'll never improve playing weaker opponents."

At present, the university allots two full scholarships for Fallon to divide as he pleases, three grants fewer than the NCAA's maximum limit of five, a situation he is willing to live with.

"If we had a full scholarship program here, there's no doubt in my mind that we'd be nationally ranked every year, but I'm not sure it's worth the price. Take the few NCAA champions, for instance. Guys like Billy Martin, John McEnroe and Jimmy Connors--they go to a school and announce they're going to win the NCAA championship their freshman year and then go pro. As a coach and a teacher, I'm not sure I want that guy. The high turnover rate hurts the other guys on the team, and that guy isn't getting out of college what a student-athlete should--a meaningful degree.

"Most top-20 schools have gone all the way in terms of time and money," he adds. For example, they now have about five indoor tournaments during the winter. At the last NCAA meetings, I asked a guy from Princeton, 'How can your kids afford that much time away from school? The minimum amount of time you'd be missing would be about 10 days.' But Princeton says they can do it. UCLA says they can do it. In all justification, I couldn't take these kids away from school for that long."

It seems that every week we hear about another athlete or group of athletes that received credit for a course he or she never took or has someone else take an exam or some other unethical (not to mention illegal) tactic, somehow connected to making their team the very best. In the long run, both the school and the athlete suffer.

Tom Fallon's teams may have faded from the national stage that they once performed on, but two things have remained constant--winning and learning.

Tomorrow--30 years worth of memories.

...Statement

Whereas Wisconsin, Minnesota, North Dakota, and the like can walk out the back door and pick up quality hockey players, northern Indiana isn't exactly a farm system for the National Hockey League.

And third, the Irish now must kill the opponent's two-man power play all season long. Why should Notre Dame play with a hand tied back?

If the baby had been born without an arm, it would be accepted a little easier than watching the parent cut it off.

If the University is trying to set a precedent for other schools to follow, it's going about it the wrong way. Besides, it was Notre Dame that voted against a "geographically more compact league," in 1978 and again last year. Why the sudden change of tune?

Griffith leads Louisville to title

INDIANAPOLIS (AP)—When the Louisville Cardinals need someone to take over in the late stages of a game, they only look for one player.

And, as usual, superstar Darrell Griffith came through for them.

"I felt I had to take charge. I'm the senior," Louisville's All-American guard said last night after leading the Cardinals to the NCAA basketball championship with a tense 59-54 victory.

Griffith scored a game-high 23 points, including seven in the last six minutes, to help turn around the tough defensive struggle with UCLA and gain Louisville its first national title.

"I knew the other guys could do it," Griffith said. "But I felt it was my responsibility."

Griffith also scored 34 Saturday to help the Cardinals beat Iowa, 80-72, in the semifinals at Market Square Arena.

Griffith scored 11 hard-earned points in the first half against a tenacious UCLA defense that held Louisville to a poor 11-of-31 shooting performance. The Cardinals only managed to score 26 points in the first half and went into the dressing room at intermission trailing by two.

"Coach (Denny Crum) told us we weren't hustling," said Louisville forward Derek Smith. "He told us to go out early during intermission before UCLA did and just loosen up."

Louisville might have been loose, but the game was tight the rest of the way — until Griffith made his presence known. The Cardinals trailed by five points in the late stages before rallying behind the high-flying, six-foot-four Griffith, who leaps as high as any college player in the country with a 48-inch vertical jump.

Howard retains crown

by Paul Mullaney
Assistant Sports Editor

Things didn't look that rosy for Howard's interhall basketball team as time became scarce in last night's championship game against Grace in the ACC pit.

With only seven minutes left in the contest, Howard trailed by eight points, 35-27. Coach Mike Berryman's squad had only been able to connect on 10 of its first 36 field goal tries. And it looked as if Howard just might have to turn over the title which it claimed in last year's championship game over Morrissey.

But how things changed. Howard, largely on the efforts of junior Kevin Dix and freshman Bob Keenehan, outscored its rivals, 16-5, the rest of the way and claimed the 1979-80 Division-A title with a 43-40 victory.

"We went out of our pattern at the end," said Grace player-coach Gary Grassey. "It just seemed like nobody really wanted to put them away. We just fell flat, and we gave them way too many easy shots in the last five minutes."

Grace jumped out to an early lead (5-0) and coasted to a 21-16

Fallon gets older, gets better

Editors Note: This is the first of a two-part series on Notre Dame's winningest active coach, men's tennis mentor Tom Fallon.

By Michael Ortman
Sports Writer

The year was 1956. The Dodgers nipped the Yankees four games to three in the World Series. Rocky Marciano retired as the heavyweight boxing champion. The Montreal Canadiens won the Stanley Cup for the second straight year. Baseball star Ted Williams was fined for spitting at a fan. The nation was in the process of reelecting Dwight Eisenhower. Notre Dame's football team suffered through a dismal 2-8 season, while Paul Hornung reaped in all the post season laurels. And Notre Dame announced that wrestling coach Tom Fallon would add tennis to his coaching chores.

Things haven't changed as much as you might think in the past quarter century. The Bucs squeaked past the Orioles in seven. Ali says he's retired.

The Canadiens could do it again ("God forbid," cry the Flyers). Billy Martin was in trouble with the Commish for picking on a fan. Carter seems certain to renew his lease on the White House. The Irish football team had its worst season in 15 years while Vegas Ferguson grabbed most of the headlines. And Tom Fallon is still the Notre Dame tennis coach.

"My understanding at the time was that the job was to be temporary," says Fallon. "I had no idea that I would be here as long as I have. That's the wonderful thing about this place, I guess. You're appointed to a position, and the next thing you know, you're celebrating your 25th anniversary. The years go by so quickly."

Fallon's ties to Notre Dame go much farther back than his years as a coach. Like every young man he has ever had on a team, he too was a Notre Dame student. Following his graduation, Fallon spent four years as a naval officer and upon his discharge, completed his graduate studies at Columbia University, receiving his masters and doctorate in 1951.

Later that year, he returned to Notre Dame as a member of

A statement with something to say

Editor's note — This is the first in a two-part series offering initial interpretations of this weekend's statement dealing with the University's proposed compliance with Title IX. Today — women's athletics and scholarship cuts. Tomorrow — tickets, prices and the endowment.

"How quickly they forget the 1969 New York Mets," said comedian George Burns in a plug for Oh God, in which he played the title role. "What about the microwave oven?" he continued.

If only George could read the statement released this weekend regarding Notre Dame's long-awaited compliance with Title IX. A mini-miracle indeed — a statement from the Golden Dome which actually says something, although the details aren't quite clear. But then, who expected all the answers, anyway?

Now, the play-by-play:

Initially, [new] athletic grants-in-aid will be concentrated in women's basketball. Notre Dame's current NCAA Division III women's basketball team is expected to phase into Division I competition in three to four years. Richard [Digger] Phelps... will be given the... responsibility of overall supervision of the women's program.

Now, the color commentary:

First, let's set the record straight, folks. Notre Dame has no NCAA Division III women's basketball team. The Irish women are in the AIAW's Division III (Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women), a completely separate governing body.

A few pertinent facts — just because the women's basketball team is advancing to Division I, that does not mean that the other women's sports must follow suit. Unlike the NCAA, the AIAW permits one sport with no scholarships to remain at a lower level of competition while the scholarship-rich sports climb to Division I. On the other hand, Notre Dame's mens' swimming and soccer teams, which have no scholarships, must compete at the Division I level because the football and men's basketball teams do. Three cheers for the AIAW!!!

Secondly, which division a women's team competes in is determined by the number of scholarships it offers. The AIAW has placed a limit of 12 scholarships on basketball (three less than the NCAA's 15). A Division II school can offer not more than 50 percent of that maximum. The very first scholarship dollar granted to a women's team automatically elevates it from Division III to Division II.

With that in mind, it looks like Digger will coordinate initial recruiting efforts and scholarship allocations. Whether any of the current players will receive any full or partial grants-in-aid is unknown at present. As far as recruiting is concerned, Digger starts at a disadvantage since the AIAW's national letter of intent signing date was March 3 (the first Monday in March, according to the bylaws). The vast majority of the quality players have already been gobbled up by the Old 'Dominions, the Tennessees and the Marylands.

Digger will also have a major voice in the selection of a possible new coach. Current coach Sharon Petro is a candidate.

What can one say about Digger running the transition except good luck. If anybody can sell basketball, it's Digger Phelps.

Back to the play-by-play:

Current grants-in-aid to Notre Dame male athletes... are unaffected... with the exception of hockey. Efforts will be made to cut back on the substantial subsidy to ice hockey by a gradual reduction in the number of grants-in-aid and by an attempt to reduce travel costs. The team will continue [in] the WCHA next season while exploring future options, including membership in a geographically more compact league.

Petty and pointless are perhaps the best adjectives for this section. It appears that the Irish will skate with 18 scholarship players next season while the rest of the WCHA goes with 20. Some schools might be able to live with this quite easily. For Notre Dame, it may be the straw that breaks the camel's back.

Just think about the handicaps the Notre Dame team is and will be faced with. First, academic requirements close the door on the very finest hockey players (for the most part). There's nothing that can be done about this. To the contrary, Lefty Smith is quite proud, as Notre Dame should be, that every Irish hockey player has graduated, a claim no other school in Division I can make.
