Hall presidents call for student input in future evaluations of rectors

By SCOTT BEARBY
Assistant News Editor

The Hall Presidents' Council is dissatisfied with the administration's methods and decision to remove Carroll Hall Rector Father Steve Gibson.

They want the students to have more input in the evaluation and hiring of rectors in the future.

HPC made these statements at a special session held last night to continue discussion on the administration's procedures in the hiring and firing of rectors and to draw up an official response for Vice President for Student Affairs Father David Tyson.

Tyson met with HPC Chairman Kevin Howard before the meeting to detail the procedures used when hiring rectors. According to Howard, there are four steps which rector candidates need to take before the University will hire them.

There are three major areas the University concentrates on when initially judging candidates, according to Howard. Anyone seeking a rector position passes to a first screening after they are judged to possess the necessary disciplinary, administrative, and pastoral abilities.

Tyson, along with administrative officials Father Francis Cafarelli, Sister Jean Lenz, and John Goldrick conduct a second screening. At this point, according to Howard, a final set of prospective rectors goes through another interview.

This interview is with a four member team, which does include four hall resident assistants.

Other than the four resident assistants, students do not have a great deal of input. Unlike previous years, students were not given an opportunity to evaluate rectors. Howard said the administration viewed the old survey as too unscientific and are currently having a new evaluation form devised.

HPC is seeking to have a bigger student voice in determining what qualities should be looked for in a rector. Based on ideas submitted from each hall, a list will be compiled and given to Tyson. This list included such factors as approachability, fairness, and consistency when dealing with students. It also stressed the fact that rectors should be able to take charge of day to day hall functions and be a good administrator.

Carroll Hall President Steve Kern asked the HPC to issue a strong statement against the administration's alleged firing of Gibson.

According to Kern, Carroll Hall is in the midst of a campaign to make students aware of the administration's action. Included in these plans is a mass in front of Carroll on Sunday night.

Presidential campaign of Jackson discussed

By MARK S. PANKOWSKI
Copy Editor

"The goal of the Jesse Jackson campaign was not to win the presidency or win the vice presidential nomination," said Professor Lorn Foster of Pamona College, speaking last night on Jackson's recent run for the presidency.

"The basic goal of the campaign was black empowerment - to increase the number of registered black voters, to increase the number of blacks running for office, and to increase the number of blacks helping out in campaigns," Foster said.

Foster, a professor of government and black studies, said the main support for the Jackson campaign came from "social movement organizations," most notably, he said, "the black church."

"(His campaign) was a social movement. It was not traditional. There were no professionals running the campaign," said Foster.

Besides the Jackson campaign, Foster also spoke about the man himself. Jackson, he said, was not a "political leader," but a "social leader."

"Jackson was an outsider. He was not in the mainstream of the Democratic campaign," said Foster.

"Reverend Jackson was somewhat of a renegade. Some adored him, some were skeptical about him, and some hated him. Whatever you thought of him, he created an aura of excitement just because of his presence."

Foster, who was speaking on the topic "The Jackson Campaign as a Social Movement: An Analysis of the Jesse Jackson Presidential Campaign," said the reason Jackson lost the election was "not because of the issues."

"What was most disheartening was that (Jackson) was discredited strictly because of his race," he said, adding that many in America are "skeptical of blacks who have power."

"Blacks will crossover to vote for whites, but on the other hand, it is difficult to convince a majority of whites to crossover to a black candidate," he added.

Foster, whose lecture was co-sponsored by the Black Studies Colloquium and student government, also addressed Jackson's relationship with the press. "The press had a love-hate relationship with Jackson," he said.

"Jackson spoke extemporaneously and he spoke flamboyantly. On the other hand, he was a terrible story to cover," he said.

"Spending time with Reverend Jackson was like a protestant prayer. It was a new experience every day." This created problems for reporters, said Foster, because they had deadlines to meet and they "were never sure where (they) might be that day."

Band kicked off stage at Senior Bar

By KEVIN YOUNG
Staff Reporter

Was it justifiable censorship? That was the question Wednesday night at Senior Bar when the Urban Guerrillas, the Minneapolis band of the year, was thrown off stage by the management.

John Bowie, manager at Senior Bar said, "The band was blatantly offensive. That song '---- My Mother' was the last straw."

The band opened their performance by asking the crowd, "Are you drunk enough to drink semen?" and abruptly ended their show with their song "---- My Mother".

According to the band, the man who hired them, senior Bill Borg, had seen their show before. Larry Sahagian, the spokesman for the band, said, "We've done the same show in many other high schools and colleges and never had any complaints. Bill saw our show and he hired us."

Borg had a different opinion. He said, "This was not the same act that I had seen. They were worse last night."

About being thrown out, Sahagian stated, "We only did two things that were objectionable. If we had known it was going to be such a big deal we wouldn't have come. The crowd didn't want us to leave. They were cheering us on for more music."

Bowie disagreed. He said, "The patrons were disgusted. I received numerous complaints about the band."

Borg claims that he talked to the band before the show. He said, "I didn't specifically warn them, but they should have known better. I told them that it was a private university, and they would have to be careful."

Whether thrown out justifiably or not, the Urban Guerrillas want their money. They were booked for Wednesday and Thursday nights at $250 a night, and they want all $500.

Bowie said, "We are still consulting our lawyers about that matter of payment for Thursday night's show. We'll reach a decision tomorrow."

SMC investment policy examined

Editor's Note: This is part four of a five part series dealing with the problems in South Africa and the relations of this conflict to the Notre Dame community. Today's article focuses on Saint Mary's investment policies in corporations with interests in South Africa.

By ANNE GALLAGHER
Senior Staff Reporter

Does Saint Mary's College invest in American companies in South Africa that support that nation's government policy of apartheid?

They just don't know. According to Jason Lindower, controller and business manager of the College, and Dr. Jack Ruhe, chairman of the business and economics department, that question cannot be answered at the present time.

While the College does invest in at least one South African company, both men, members of a newly formed ad hoc committee on College investments, said they believe investment may be a good choice if the companies are promoting racial equality and are "good corporate citizens."

Lindower said he recently learned from investment advisors that part of the College's endowment has been invested in the Newmont Mining Company, located in South Africa, since 1977.

Such investigation of the College's investment policies is fairly represent the views of the College."

A new committee made up of students, faculty, administrators, and Sisters of the Holy Cross, completed a statement on corporate responsibility in investments two weeks ago. The statement addressed the South African issue, as well as such topics as corporate response toward women and minorities. This account was adopted by the Board of Regents last Saturday.

In this statement, the committee listed three specific goals which must be fulfilled when considering investment for the College. These goals were:

- Looking for and investing in firms whose mission statements and/or actions ensured dignity of persons and the quality of life and the environment.
- Considering annually at least one issue for education for all campus constituencies.
- Identifying current issues of social concern and recommending appropriate investment strategy.

LaFortune "business district" could meet student's needs

The student-run stores at Notre Dame are evolving. And the next two years will determine if student-run stores will meet student needs effectively in the future. "Our experience is that students can be very responsible (running businesses.) If it's a student-run business, with students running it and working it, the business can be more responsive to students' needs," said former Student Activities Board Business Manager Chuck VanRavenswaay.

VanRavenswaay was the first to hold the position of SAB business manager. The position was created two years ago specifically to become a link between the SAB manager and the individual business managers. This link has brought a unified direction to the SAB businesses.

Will the five current stores continue with the same type of merchandise in the future? The SAB Business Manager Rob Hoover said changes are already on the drawing board.

The Student Saver general store and the Rock du Lac record store will merge if the administration clears the change, according to Hoover.

"If we combine the stores, it will help both," said Hoover. He said the strengths and weaknesses of the two stores are different. For instance, Rock du Lac is in a high-traffic area, which is good for a business. The Student Saver is in a poor-traffic area, but it sells products which are more essential for students' every day living. A merger would benefit both businesses, according to Hoover.

The biggest changes will result from the renovation of LaFortune. The renovation will begin this summer and is scheduled for completion in the fall of 1986.

While the renovations are in progress, the student stores will have temporary locations.

More important to the future of the businesses will be their permanent place in the overall renovation scheme of LaFortune.

The renovated basement of LaFortune will contain a "business district" composed of the SAB businesses and the businesses presently located in Badin Hall.

"The renovations will help us immensely," said Hoover. "For instance, you can wander around here (LaFortune) for days and never find the t-shirt shop," he said.

"It is the key to the future," said VanRavenswaay. "Once they (the businesses) get down there, (the basement of LaFortune) I think it will be a turning point," said VanRavenswaay.

Frank Lipo

Copy Chief

The renovation of LaFortune will not solve every problem with the student businesses. The newest student store, the Student Saver, has the most bugs to work out.

Hoover said the administration does not have direct control over the day-to-day operations of the businesses. But they can influence the long-term direction of student businesses. The allocation of space in a remodeled LaFortune is one such case of administrative decisions affecting student businesses.

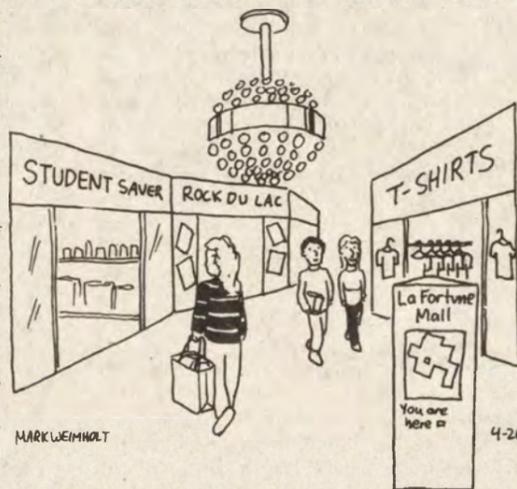

The Student Saver is an exception to the rule which governs the other student businesses, according to Hoover. "Part of the accepted proposal was that the administration would have approval over what the store sells. . . . Unfortunately it will continue that way," Hoover said.

"It's in a crummy location, with crummy hours and, right now, with crummy inventory. We're waiting for the administration to approve a list of 40 items and they're kind of dragging their feet on it," Hoover said.

The original agreement stressed the Student Saver would be allowed to sell only "generic" items, according to Hoover. Hoover said this restriction is too stringent. The Student Saver is not requesting the right to sell the same items as the bookstore, just brand name products that would attract students, he said. Some products aren't even available under a generic label, for instance, contact-lens solution, said Hoover.

These problems, however, will not be impossible to overcome. The SAB now has a structure which has proven it can effectively manage student businesses. Hoover stressed he will be working closely with the student activities office on the renovations in the next year.

Cooperation with the administration during the LaFortune space-allocation process and feedback from the students on which businesses should be included in the "business district" are essential to assure a smooth transition which will serve the needs of the student body.

Two SMC juniors chosen to enter U. of Chicago early-entry program

By SHANNON OAKES
Staff Reporter

At least two Saint Mary's juniors will not be spending the summer on the beach as they get a head start on graduate school work at the University of Chicago.

Kristi Stathis and Maribeth Kehl have been selected to participate in the early-entry program of the university's Graduate School of Business.

The program, new this year, was designed by the University of Chicago to encourage liberal arts majors or students with a well-rounded education to consider attending MBA school.

"It's a great opportunity. It will help me a lot. I'm looking forward to it," said Kehl, a math major with a minor in business.

According to program administrators, the varied backgrounds of the liberal arts students will enable them to offer additional skills to potential employers.

"It will make a difference in the working world," said Stathis.

Saint Mary's is one of twelve small liberal arts colleges across the country who participated in the program. The College was picked because of its "reputation for strong liberal arts and the graduates that attended MBA (at University of Chicago) and did well," said Gail Mandell, associate professor of humanistic studies and chairman of Saint Mary's selection committee.

Selections were based on the students' grade point averages, non-academic participation, previously held jobs, writing and speaking skills and community involvement.

In addition to Mandell, Jack Ruhe, chairman of the department of business and economics, Mary Ann Rowan, director of admissions, and Mary Lou Gorno, of the University of Chicago's MBA School participated in the selection process.

Stathis, a government and communications major, said this is a "unique opportunity."

"Having to compete with business majors could have been detrimental to me. This program offered me a much better opportunity to get into a school of the caliber of the University of Chicago," she said.

The program, which runs from late June to late August, enables undergraduates to receive MBA credit for the classes they take. The students are on full scholarship at this time.

After graduation the students may defer for up to three years or enter MBA school upon receiving their undergraduate degrees. They are guaranteed admission.

In addition to taking courses this summer, the students will also attend seminars given by prominent businessmen.

"I can get information from people that I would not normally meet," said Stathis.

Mandell said the University of Chicago said a business background is not necessary. The students chosen for this program have the confidence, intelligence and capabilities to perform well, she said.

According to both Kehl and Stathis, some background in business would not hurt because the program is on the graduate school level.

"I think it's really an honor for the University of Chicago to include Saint Mary's," said Stathis. "I encourage people next year to look into the program."

Center nominates educator of year

By CHRIS BEDNARSKI
Senior Staff Reporter

William Bennett, secretary of education, has been nominated by the Thomas J. White Center for Law and Government as educator of the year.

The award, named in honor of Thomas J. White, a 1937 Notre Dame graduate and well known attorney, "annually seeks someone advocating educational policies consistent with those of Mr. White," said Professor Douglas Kmiec, White Center Director. White has continually advocated the financial ability of parents to choose between public and private education for their children, said Kmiec.

Bennet will speak at 12 p.m. Tuesday in the Law School lounge.

Bennett has suggested students meet aid cuts with "Divestitures of certain sorts, stereo divestiture, automobile divestiture, three weeks at the beach divestiture."

Although Bennett may support giving parents the financial ability to choose at the elementary and secondary levels, his stance is different for the college education. In the February 25 edition of Newsweek, He said the federal government "can't afford to give every student the opportunity to go to the college of his choice."

Bennett supported President Reagan's proposed denial of federally guaranteed student loans to families with incomes over $32,500. When Congress raised that proposed limit to $60,000, with an $8,000 limit on the total amount of aid, Bennett called the compromise "extremely reasonable." "People in higher education, I would think, would be very happy with the proposal."

Bennett has been criticized for his choice of Dr. Eileen Gardner as an official in the newly created Office of Education Philosophy and Practice. Gardner, in a 1983 paper, written while serving as an analyst for the Heritage Foundation, a conservative research center said "Laws for the education of the handicapped have drained resources from the normal school population, probably weakened the quality of teaching and falsely labelled normal children."

Gardner, and another Bennett aid, Lawrence A. Uzzell, both advocate ending most federal aid programs to education, said an April 17, New York Times article.

Gardner has even called for the elimination of the Education Department. In the New York Times article, Bennett would not comment directly on this, but did say, "I do not think government would be worse off without me or anybody else in this job."

Bennett was chosen by a committee of very prominent educators from, among other places, Harvard, The University of Texas, and The University of Tennessee. "He has been a strong proponent of tuition tax credits and educational vouchers," said Kmiec.

in the minority to the American public. Americans would prosper in the years to come. At least most of them would.

It was also around this time, 1909 to be exact, that two black people were lynched every five days. Blacks also could not vote, were legally segregated and were not even considered equal to whites under the law.

But despite this progress, advancement is still needed in social and economic circles, not just for blacks, but for all minorities. One program which is helping to achieve greater equality for minorities is called affirmative action.

Affirmative action is a program designed to give qualified minorities the opportunity to pursue their dreams, whether they be in the job market or in education. It is not designed, as many people may think, to prioritize less qualified minorities over higher qualified whites. The intentions of affirmative action are simply to open doors to those who have had the doors closed upon them for so long.

To understand the need for affirmative action, it is necessary to understand that doors do need to be opened to qualified minorities. There is discrimination in this country, and the following statistics on blacks in America, even 20 years after civil rights, demonstrate this fact.

-Out of 2,100 daily newspapers in this country, two-thirds do not have a single black person in the newsroom.

-Of the 2,200 predominantly white colleges in the United States, only 12 have a black president.

-Out of 9,500 commercial radio stations in this country, only 119 are owned by a black person.

-Of the 9,000 television stations in the United States, only ten are black-owned.

-Only two to three percent of all the professional doctors and lawyers in this country are black.

-Of the 50 governors and 50 lieutenant governors in the United States, none are black.

-Only 5,000 of the elected officials in this country are black. That is one percent of the 500,000 elected officials in the United States of America.

Despite the need to correct the obvious imbalance in the social and economic realms of our society, many people are still worried that affirmative action keeps qualified people from getting jobs or educations because quotas must be filled.

This simply is not the case. Affirmative action only requires, by law, that higher qualified minorities be first priority over anyone who is less qualified than they. Quotas are simply an easy way to assure this. Quotas require that a certain number of qualified minorities be admitted to a school or offered jobs.

This is a simple, yet effective, way of preventing some of the discrimination in our society which results from underqualified whites being accepted to schools or being offered jobs simply by virtue of their color.

Some argue that because of quotas there are more incompetent professionals, such as doctors and lawyers, because unqualified minorities are allowed to practice in various fields, rather than qualified whites.

In 1980, however, the American Medical Association announced there were two million surgeries performed by incompetent doctors in that year. Realizing that only three percent of the doctors in America are black, this means 97 percent of the incompetent surgeries were performed by non-black surgeons.

Obviously the problem is one of institutions admitting unqualified people, not just unqualified minorities. Certainly the admittance of qualified minorities would not hurt the medical, or any other, profession.

It is clear that despite the need for social and economic equality for minorities, it will not happen overnight. It did not happen in the first 20 years after civil rights and it will probably not happen within the next 20 years.

But equality will not just happen by itself. The people and government of this country must make a concerted effort to overcome the difficult task of helping minorities achieve equality. And programs such as affirmative action can lessen the amount of time it takes for minorities to achieve social and economic equality.

Where was the support for player and family?

Dear Editor:

On Saturday, April 20th, I had the privilege of witnessing a joyous celebration of life amidst a dark cloud of death. At True Vine Baptist Church in Blue Island, Ill., Reverend Lewis presiding, the death of Melvin Eugene Flemons (brother of Notre Dame tail back Lester Flemons) was mourned and his life brought forth into the light of truth. It is in this light that Melvin will reap the fruits of the seeds he had sown as the Father judges the worthiness of the fruits of his twenty-nine years of toil.

In this life I have been many things - friend, foe, liar, thief, son, hypocrite, lover and more than I can recall. In light of this I would be the last to judge the acts of another human being.

I will say that there were many football players who wanted to go to the funeral and pay their respects but none were allowed to due to a scrimmage game on Saturday morning. Three injured players were allowed to attend the service but what about the friends of Lester who were not injured?

I can only surmise Gerry Faust believed that the players needed the practice and who am I to say otherwise? But I do know that Lester Flemons needed his friends.

Gerry Faust speaks of the players, coaches, and staff being like a family. If this is true then they should support and love each other like a family. Where was the support? Where was the love?

The Director of Minority Affairs, Edward Blackwell, also did not attend the funeral. However valid his reasons may or may not have been, the fact still remains that the Flemons family did not receive the personal support of the highest ranking black official at the University. The beautiful and well-meaning flowers and the plant sent to the family on behalf of various black organizations were well-appreciated by the Flemons family, but where was the love?

There is love shown by sacrificing a scrimmage or a meeting to be present in times of sorrow and pain. I too am guilty of not always showing my love and being there when needed. Preoccupied with our own affairs we tend to not notice the pain of others and the necessity of being present.

I am not questioning the sincerity or attempting to impugn the integrity of anyone as I am probably the most imperfect human that can be found. I am however simply reminding them that they, as we all, will one day stand in the light of truth next to our actions of the past and be held accountable and judged accordingly. I pray that myself and all who stand in the light may stand as proud and confident as Melvin Eugene Flemons.

Response to a death was not of a family

Dear Editor:

How many times have we heard "we are all a Notre Dame family"? Who belongs to the Notre Dame family and what does it mean?

This past week a member of the football team lost a brother after a lingering illness. Many of his teammates expressed the desire to attend the services. However, a Saturday scrimmage took priority. (Three injured players and a graduate assistant were allowed to represent the team.) Where was a coach or someone from the athletic department? Where were the rectors from Howard Hall?

Had the loss been a parent, would the same decision have been made? Was not the loss of a brother high enough on the list? Was it because a black person was involved? Perhaps there was a fear of going into a black neighborhood of Chicago or into a black church.

A family gathers in grief, that is what a family is all about.

Kroeger does not grasp horror of the Holocaust

Dear Editor:

I was very disturbed with some of the comments Dave Kroeger made about Reagan's proposed visit to a German cemetery containing SS graves. The crudity of some expressions made me shiver. How dare you call six million dead Jews "a bunch of bones lying halfway across the world"?

Have you ever tried to imagine what it would be like to get tattooed with a number and to see your family and friends gassed or mutilated by SS officers.

Your comment "Holocausts are a dime a dozen" displays incredible mental shallowness. Holocausts are tragedies not to be forgotten. The fact that they occur regularly should not mean that they are a fact of life. If people like you refuse to understand these events then our generation is doomed.

There are better ways to recognize Germans. Reagan could have visited Rommel's grave and others who tried to overthrow Hitler's regime. He could have honored the positive contributions of Germans to the world.

Could Catholics bring death to Catholicism?

Rev. Robert Griffin

Letters to a Lonely God

I can imagine that final night when the last Catholic priest ever heard of on earth, said the last Mass that history remembers.

He gathered a dozen Christians in a basement room, read them lessons from the Gospel of John, and then celebrated the Eucharist. After Communion and the Final Blessing, he blew out the candles on the table of the Lord - all that was left was the darkness.

The world didn't come to an end, of course. The myth of the Second Coming was one of the errors of Rome. History continued as a record of chaos and suffering. But the great harlot out of Babylon, guilty of endless fornications with whomever would supply her with power and money, was dead as a doornail. It was said that the old bitch could have survived for another thousand years if she hadn't relied on such stupid procurers to serve as pope.

Nostalgia for the old religion hung around like a ghost. Christians continued to celebrate Christmas because they loved the legends of the Divine Child's birth. At Easter, they promoted the rumors of a crucified and resurrected God. The problem was, nobody except the diehards believed in the Christian folktales.

The church was the repository of the documents attesting to the miracles in the life of Jesus. The Church had made a business of collecting the gospels and apostolic writings into the book called the

New Testament. The world had only the Church's opinion that the New Testament was inspired. Once the Church bit the dust, faith in the New Testament as the Word of God became moot because the only evidence alleging its worth was its acceptance by the Church, so famous for deceiving itself.

The Protestant churches carried on the feasts, but after the disappearance of the mother institution, the days of the denominations were numbered. For all of them, the power structure quartered in Rome turned out to be the Great China wall of their defense. Their identity always represented some modification of the Church's identity as they tried to be purer or less political than Rome. They just stopped being impressive. If Rome was a lie, the reasoning went, and the lesser breeds upstaging the hoary old mother couldn't be authentic either.

And so, like all great empires, the kingdom ruled over by the popes went to its grave. The reactionaries wept for the good old days. Some of them tried to invent a new power structure to take the Church's place. They couldn't think of a founding myth that would capture the popular imagination, and they weren't any more successful in converting a new people than those foolish Moonies were.

Every now and again, the rumors of a new Incarnation circulated. However, the surviving Catholic patriarch, who claimed to be in touch with the Holy Spirit, just shook his head, saying: "He tried it once. Dollars to doughnuts, He won't try it again."

It's hard to pinpoint the year that Christianity died. The priest who said the final Mass in the basement room was killed by the Communists, betrayed by one of the Catholics who sat at the table as a latter-day Judas. The priest knew he was one of the last of his line; probably the very last, unless God was keeping a spare that He wasn't talking about. The priest gave the left-over Eucharist to one of the women to take care of, as long as the Sacrament endured under the form of bread. He hoped for a new miracle of the multiplication of loaves by which Christ would keep His promise to stay around always.

In the last homily, the priest said: "We have come to an end of the holy symbols. Jesus gave us this sign of His death and suffering. After His resurrection, He said, we would celebrate it as the Living Bread that comes down from heaven, the food on which the hungry sheep are nourished. From tonight on, God will withhold the manna and the people will perish without food and drink in the wilderness. Of all the mysteries relating to evil, this is the hardest to understand. Why, God, do you consider us so undeserving? The only answer He gives us is silence."

It wasn't a great curtain speech, though the soul-searching sounds sincere. It seems like a damned shame that God couldn't have left us something of Christ's message to hang onto.

So far as we can judge, He took back all His grace, because the old Christian values seemed wiped out. The politicians still talked about love. But they forgot to say that greater love than this no man has, that he should lay down his life for his friend. The teachers paid lip service to truth; what they mostly had in mind was opinion polls.

Vision, once the prerogative of prophets, became the stock in trade of fortune tellers. The world was a tough place to live in when the Church was alive and kicking. It really turned mean once the State was in charge of defining sin and morality. The forgiveness of one's enemies became as outdated as the idea, once widely held, that the earth is flat.

In all the visible universe, in addition to the stars, the spring and other changes of season, only one miracle remained: Israel, Judaism - the Chosen People kept the name of God alive and honored. In spite of hell and high water, Abraham's family endured, as fixed in faith as the everlasting hills anchored to the foundations of the earth. They believed, as they will always believe, in the God Who keeps His promises. In this way, they enjoy an advantage over the rest of mankind.

The survival of Israel looks like a greater miracle than the resurrection of the Lord because their whole history is a continuous resurrection of life coming out of the scenes of death. Why does God grant them the miracle of survival?

God doesn't tell me what's on His mind. However, in visiting Jewish homes, it has struck me that Yahweh's heart must be moved by the way His first-born children stay faithful to their religious tradition. Even in times of trouble, the youngest children in the endangered ghettos asked their elders the question which begins the Passover: "Why is this night different from all other nights?" This loyalty, above everything, identifies the faithful Jews who keep Judaism alive as a holy religion.

God never said that Christians couldn't keep their Church until the end of time. He didn't say that it wouldn't go so far underground that it would disappear from history, either. I can only imagine the way Christianity might be remembered at its premature burial, if it lived through a century during which it was totally eclipsed.

The New Israel described by St. Paul has a serious lesson to learn from the Israel that made covenants with God in the desert. One small lesson that seems obvious to me: I've never heard a rabbi on a talk show badmouthing the Chief Rabbi of Jerusalem. I've never read articles and letters (written in ignorance) sent to the newspapers from students at Brandeis, cheapening the tribal beliefs and dismissing them as of no value.

A Jewish tale tells of the rabbi who called the police to arrest an outlaw who asked him for sanctuary. Later, God rebuked the rabbi: "If you had bothered to look at the face of the outlaw, you would have seen he was the Messiah." Catholics should be particular about the traditions they trade off: one or two of them may be part of the truth that makes them free. The enemies of truth could be laughing at the Catholic naivete that throws away a pearl.

The New Testament warns us bluntly that we're in a war with the principalities and powers of darkness. Sometimes, when I look over the battlefield, it seems the way that Pogo says: "I have seen the enemy, and they is us."

Movies

Anthony Edwards and Robert Carradine, stars of "Revenge of the Nerds."

•Be sure to be on hand this weekend at the Engineering Auditorium to watch the Revenge of the Nerds. You won't want to miss this story of some lovable underdogs who rise to the peak of popularity after putting some campus hot shots in their places.

Showings will be at 7,9 and 11 tonight and Saturday night and admission will be $1.50.

•In the Annenberg Auditorium tonight Camera Buff will be presented for $2.50. Mixed in this comedy are sharp satire of the cinema/ critical/bureaucratic establishment and a fascinating self-reflective commentary on the nature of cinema itself. This is a story about a man whose home movies of his newborn daughter quickly burgeon into an artistic cinematic career.

COMING ATTRACTIONS

FEATURING THIS WEEKEND

Music

•South Bend Symphony will present Grant Johannesen on the piano at the Morric Civic Auditorium at 8 p.m. Saturday night. The orchestra will accompany Johannesen in a performance of Chopin's Piano Concerto No. 2 and will perform Barber's Second Essay and Brahms's Symphony no. 1. Those interested in purchasing tickets should call 232-6343.

Art

•At the O'Shaughnessy Gallery East of the Snite Museum will be displayed a selection of recent work by Don Vogl, a prolific artist and a member of Notre Dame's Department of Art, Art History and Design. Represented this weekend will be a palatable palatable entree of large abstractions, watercolor landscapes of the American West, West, and a small ceramic sculptures.

Nazz

John Tyler and Mike McCaughey will mellow out the Nazz tonight with guitar and song, beginning at 9. At 10:30 the action quickens with a heavy metal extravaganza by Wicked Sh--, who will play heavy metal favorites and rock classics.

Saturday, Mark Luchini and his guitar will entertain, beginning at 9 p.m.

•Carnival for the Arts at the Century Center is the place to be tonight and Saturday night. It's exciting... it's unique... it's the Best Party in Town! The carnival will create all the excitement of the Big Apple as it underscores the 1985 theme of "New York, New York." Tickets for the annual Michiana Arts and Sciences Council fundraiser, from 6 p.m. to 1 a.m., are $6.50 in advance at the Century Center Box Office, or $7.50 at the door.

Misc.

•An Tostal, that perennial favorite, continues to celebrate Spring this weekend. Today's events include the Dating Game, Keg Toss, Loudmouth, Trivia Bowl, Recess 101 and a midnight movie. Tomorrow's events climax with the famous mud pits, plus the Road Rally, Obstacle course, water polo, and a grand finale dance on the Library Mall in the evening. And if you can keep a straight face at 6 p.m. in Washington Hall, you will win $25 in the "We Can Make You Laugh" comedy show. Don't miss Sunday's exciting conclusion to the Bookstore Basketball tournament, or the ultimate frisbee games. For details, see the An Tostal booklet.

•Don't forget, tomorrow is your last chance to turn in answers to the Notre Dame/Saint Mary's trivia contest and win $20! Leave answers, with your name and address, at the Observer office.

Mass

The celebrants for Mass at Sacred Heart Church this weekend will be: Father Robert Kennedy at 5:15 p.m. (Saturday night vigil). Father Francis Cafarelli at 9 a.m. Father David Tyson at 10:30 a.m. Father Mark Poorman at 12:15 p.m.

by

Robert Quakenbush

THE GIPPER'S GHOST®

CAST OF CHARACTERS

THE COACH: Joe Kelly was everything the nation's sportswriters had come to expect in a Notre Dame head football coach. He was Irish. He was Catholic. He was a loser.

THE LEGEND: Knute Rockne, Notre Dame's head football coach during the golden age of sport. No coach, past or present, pro or college, had ever matched his winning percentage.

THE LORD: Notre Dame's "Number One Fan," God Almighty. Only His divine intervention might restore the lustre to the University of Notre Dame's golden football tradition.

THE QUARTERBACK: Hart Collins, a former all-state high school quarterback, faces his greatest challenge as a sophomore signal-caller for the Fighting Irish of Notre Dame.

THE GIPPER: Rockne's first All American at Notre Dame, George Gipp suffered an untimely death yet still won immortality. He assumes the secret identity of Dutch Reagan when God returns him to Notre Dame to lead a quest for the national championship.

Joe Kelly was everything the nation's sportswriters had come to expect in Notre Dame's head football coach. Irish. Catholic. And a loser.

Two years. No wins. Twenty-two losses.

Thank God he had three years left on his contract.

So, when the Fighting Irish lose their season opener to the Michigan Wolverines by the humiliating score of 45 to 7, Notre Dame's "Number One Fan" — God Almighty — decides it's time for divine intervention.

God assigns the souls of Knute Rockne and George Gipp — the greatest coach and the greatest player in the school's history — the awesome task of resurrecting a winning tradition at Notre Dame.

Assuming the name Dutch Reagan, The Gipper joins the Irish football team. He enlists the help of sophomore quarterback Hart Collins in a quest to restore the lustre to Notre Dame's golden tradition by winning the national championship.

The result is an exciting, inspiring and, at times, hilarious story of the spirit of Notre Dame.

McMonigle joins SMC track team, throws javelin and runs short races

By ANDREA LaFRENIERE
Sports Writer

Setting a new school mark in the javelin event has been the highlight of Megan McMonigle's first year as a member of the Saint Mary's track team.

McMonigle, a sophomore from Savannah, Ga., who is double-majoring in English writing and fine arts, had never participated on a track team until this year. She joined the team primarily for the javelin events but soon started to compete in short distance and relay events.

"I thought javelin would be fun, so I gave it a try," she explains. "There was a lack of people for the other events, so I began running races, too."

"My biggest accomplishment this season was in the javelin. I progressed from an initial throw of 78 feet to a throw of 115 feet, seven inches. I was really surprised and excited when I set a new record," she adds.

McMonigle attributes her success in the javelin throw to several factors.

"I jog occasionally, and I swim to strengthen my back and arm muscles," she says. "I also work a lot on sprinting, which is really important before the javelin release."

Saint Mary's track coach Jean

"Megan's given us a lot of strength in the javelin that we didn't have," Kerich says. "She's shown self-discipline, and she's had a strong desire to succeed. Because of that she's added a lot to our team."

McMonigle, who will study in Rome next year, says she hopes to qualify for the National Track and Field Competition when she returns to Saint Mary's her senior year.

"I'm going to try to get some training from a college coach who specializes in field events while I'm in Rome. Hopefully I will be able to add a few feet to my throws."

Kerich says she believes McMonigle has a good chance to qualify for the National Competition in her senior year.

The Belles will travel to Richmond, Ind., tomorrow to compete in the Little State Meet, held at Earlham College. The meet, which will mark the end of the season for the Belles, is scheduled to begin at 9:15 a.m.

Megan McMonigle

Kerich says she believes McMonigle has a lot of natural ability in the javelin throw and contributes a great deal to the team.

After two years

Golfer Fuhrer now can contribute

By JOHN COYLE
Sports Writer

If Notre Dame golfer Steve Fuhrer were a boxer, he would be the Rocky Balboa of the fight world.

After having been cut in both his freshman and sophomore years, he still continued to fight and finally made the team in this, his junior year.

Fuhrer talked to head coach Noel O'Sullivan before fall tryouts and asked him what he had to do to survive the cut. O'Sullivan told him what was needed and, according to the head coach, Fuhrer went out and did it.

"As a freshman, he didn't make the team because he wasn't organized, both athletically and academically," O'Sullivan explains. "Last year, he lacked the patience and sticktuitiveness necessary for good golf. But this year he had the organization and perseverance to finish first out of 65 Irish golfers in the Notre Dame Open, which won him a spot on the squad."

Fuhrer certainly has not wasted any time making up for the time lost during his first two years of college. Last fall, he was one of two Irish golfers to be named to the Mid-

American City Conference team. On the Notre Dame team's spring trip to Florida, he played very well despite a shoulder injury. The junior from Oakmont, Penn., also is having a strong spring season, and O'Sullivan could not be more delighted.

"It's been a very enjoyable experience to see Steve come so far," his coach says. "He's performing excellently and he's just a joy to watch."

The Irish will need Fuhrer to play well if they are to have a good weekend. The golf team travels to Columbus, Ohio, where it will participate in the four-day Kepler Invitational. Twenty-four teams from the Big Ten, the Mid American Conference and major independents from district four all will be vying for the top spot.

Notre Dame has had a pretty good record in tournaments this spring and seems to be confident it they can continue its improvement. It is a very young, enthusiastic team, and, according to O'Sullivan, it is ready for this weekend.

"We are looking to do well," he says. "We have been playing well recently and I think we will be competitive in Columbus. The players are anxious to show their stuff among all these major powers."

Steve Fuhrer certainly will be hoping to show his best stuff.

ND freshman Chenail contributes skill to baseball team's pitching

By TRISH SULLIVAN
Sports Writer

"Me...? You want to do a feature on me? Are you serious?"

That was the first reaction from freshman pitching sensation Kevin Chenail (pronounced Sha-ni) when he heard he was going to be the topic of an article. Modesty is just one of Chenail's strong points off the diamond, while confidence is what he exudes on the mound.

A native of North Adams, Mass., Chenail was a four-year letterman in basketball as well as baseball for Drury High School. As a junior and as a senior he captained both squads and was named to all-conference and all-Western Massachusetts teams.

Following this productive high school career, Chenail received the ultimate honor by being drafted out of Drury by the Cleveland Indians.

"I had no idea whatsoever that I was going to get drafted," recalls Chenail. "In fact, the times that the scouts came to watch seemed to be the times I did my worst. Actually, I was drafted in a low round."

Regardless of what round it came in, invitations don't go to just anyone, and Chenail represents one of the best in his field. He made the decision not to go with Cleveland, and says it was not a difficult decision in the least.

"A career in the majors is a great opportunity, but there was more to consider after high school. It (major league ball) doesn't provide a stable future at all, and I wanted to have something to fall back on, something solid."

Just as easy for Chenail was the decision to attend Notre Dame. Recruited by many colleges, Chenail had grown up hearing the stories about the Irish tradition. Although Notre Dame did not recruit him as heavily as other schools, Chenail went after Notre Dame, using any connection he could think of.

"I had my high school coach contact Coach (Larry) Gallo and then sweated over hearing as to whether I'd be admitted. I knew I could have gone elsewhere, but I had a good feeling about this place. I was willing to come sight unseen if they would have me."

So the 6-4, 195-pound rookie packed his bags for South Bend. In his first start with the Irish, Chenail produced a three-hitter in a 7-1 victory over Wisconsin.

"I get nervous before any game, but it is a good kind of nervous," he says. "Once the game starts, the anxiety goes away. It is just the feeling right before that first batter steps into the box. Luckily for me, the first batter I faced in college wasn't one of the best, so that helped to keep my enthusiasm going."

Through seven games (24.2 innings), Chenail has allowed 21 hits, ten runs - of which six were earned - and seven walks, while recording 20 strikeouts. Chenail's record stands at 2-0 with one save and his 2.19 earned run average is good enough to place him second among pitchers in the Midwestern City Conference. Stats like these appear to show a smooth transition from high school, but Chenail does notice a few differences in collegiate life.

"It is a big adjustment as far as academics is concerned," he admits. "The workload is doubled easily. As far as baseball is concerned, it's a very different experience. In high school, the pitcher had to think a lot on the mound. Here, the catcher makes most of the calls, and our catchers call a great game."

Although he hasn't even been here a full year, Chenail is the first to say how much he has learned and how much further he has to go on the road to improvement.

"Just by being a part of this team I have learned so much. You can't help but learn from the talented upperclassmen on the squad. Statistics don't really tell the story. The seniors are the guys that hold this team together and I am very lucky to be with them."

As his freshmen year comes to a close, Chenail still is excited about being a member of the Notre Dame community, and would file only one slight disappointment.

"This team is great and I wouldn't want to play anywhere else. I am very fortunate that my parents were willing to work so hard to get me here and I respect them tremendously. And Chuck Freeby really adds professionalism to the games. I only wish we could get more fans to come out and hear his great introductions."

Irish fans would be well-advised to take the advice and flock to Jake Kline for an afternoon of baseball. With quality players such as Kevin Chenail on the field, there won't be many disappointments.

"struggle" is exactly what Wittenberg has done in its first two outings against the Irish, as Notre Dame has outscored the Tigers, 42-4.

The Wittenberg game does represent something meaningful, though, as it is the seniors' final home game at Notre Dame. Ten members of the Class of 1985 will play on Cartier for the last time, including four-year goalie Rob Simpson, all-time leading scorer Bob Trocchi, and top defenseman Justin Shay.

Irish lacrosse team must win against MLA foe Wesleyan

By MIKE SULLIVAN
Sports Writer

Will Notre Dame repeat as Midwest lacrosse champion?

That question should be answered this weekend when the Irish lacrosse team plays host to a pair of Midwest Lacrosse Association opponents, Ohio Wesleyan and Wittenberg.

Ohio Wesleyan will visit Cartier Field tomorrow at 1:30 p.m., while Wittenberg will try to upset Notre Dame on Sunday in another 1:30 game.

For all intents and purposes, though, the weekend revolves entirely around tomorrow's matchup. Ohio Wesleyan, ranked No. 3 in the nation in Division III, presents a major challenge to Rich O'Leary's Irish squad, which must beat the undefeated (13-0) Battling Bishops if it wants to stay in the race for the MLA title.

"If we want to repeat, the Wesleyan game is a must win for us," says O'Leary, whose team finds its back against the wall after losing a costly MLA game to Denison last weekend. "If we lose two games to the top two teams in the league, there's almost no hope that we'll be considered for the championship (which is decided by a panel of judges). And we shouldn't be."

In order for Notre Dame to avoid elimination from the MLA race, however, it is going to have to do something it has never done before - beat Ohio Wesleyan. This will be the fifth meeting between the two schools, and the Irish have yet to figure out a way to beat the Bishops. Last year, Wesleyan was responsible for Notre Dame's only MLA loss, a 12-5 defeat at Delaware, Ohio, and O'Leary and his players do not have to be reminded of this fact.

"They're the only team we've never beaten in the Midwest," says O'Leary. "They beat us convincingly last year, and there's nothing more the seniors would like than to beat them. And it would be that much better to beat an undefeated team. It would take some of the sting out of last week's loss (to Denison) because it would be such a big win for us."

A win over Wesleyan would indeed be big, not only because the Irish have never beaten the Bishops, but also because Wesleyan is such a formidable opponent. The fact that it is a Division III team means little in lacrosse because Division I and III schools frequently compete (there is no Division II). Not only have the Bishops cleaned up on their Midwestern opposition, but they have also beat some very good Eastern teams.

"Wesleyan has been scoring a lot of goals, which is a direct relationship to their talent," explains O'Leary. "They probably have the most talented team in the Midwest."

"We're just going to go out there with the attitude that, if we play as well as we possibly can, we can control the ball and force them to make some mistakes. If we're patient, don't take chances, and capitalize on their mistakes, we should be able to beat them."

It will be very important for Notre Dame to avoid falling behind early. The Irish have never been a strong come-from-behind team, as last year's loss at Wesleyan exemplifies. In that game, the Bishops jumped out to a 5-2 first-quarter lead and never looked back. The same thing happened at Denison last week when the Big Red massacred the Irish in the first half, eventually moving out to a 15-0 lead before winning, 16-9.

Fortunately for the Irish, they usually play much better at home. The last time they lost on Cartier was two years ago to, you guessed it, Ohio Wesleyan. However, unlike most Wesleyan-Notre Dame games, that game was close until the end, when the Bishops wound up on top, 14-12.

"Playing at home is always a plus for us," says O'Leary. "For a team like a lacrosse team that doesn't expect large crowds, a vocal crowd can do wonders."

It may take more than a large crowd to beat Ohio Wesleyan, but Sunday's opponent, Wittenberg, is another story. The Tigers represent one of those Midwestern lacrosse programs that is struggling to become competitive. And

ND baseball team wins, ties with Bowling Green

By MIKE CARNEY
Sports Writer

With the end of the season fast approaching, the Notre Dame baseball team is beginning to put it all together. At Bowling Green Wednesday, the Irish combined clutch hitting and excellent relief pitching to earn a win and a tie in a non-conference doubleheader to boost their season record to 17-22-2.

In the first game, the Irish jumped out to a 3-0 first inning lead that quickly turned into a second inning deficit of 6-3. Starter Joe Dobosh was knocked out in the fourth inning after giving up 7 runs. Coach Larry Gallo then called on his new-found bullpen ace, Buster Lopes. Lopes, who was a starter at the beginning of the season, has been moved to the bullpen for the rest of the season.

"We've had some problems with relief pitching earlier in the season," Gallo said, "so I decided to move Lopes into the bullpen. He was an excellent relief pitcher last summer and has the ability to throw very hard for two or three innings. He has the added advantage of good control of his pitches, especially his breaking ball."

Lopes also seems happy with the move.

"I think I am primarily a relief pitcher," Lopes says. "At the beginning of the year I was losing a lot of games in the sixth and seventh innings. This way I can pitch every day and really help the ballclub."

With Lopes holding the Bowling Green bats in check, it was up to the Irish batsmen to do the rest. In the fifth inning, the Irish exploded for four runs to put them up for keeps. The key hit of the inning was by pinch hitter Mike Dorning. Dorning collected the game-winning RBI with a two-run scoring single.

Other good offensive performances were turned in by second baseman Jackie Moran, who went 2-4 with two runs scored, shortstop Tom Shields, who was 2-2, including his sixth homerun of the year, and Mike Trudeau, who hit a single-season Irish record-breaking twelfth double. The final score read 10-9 in favor of the Irish. Lopes got the victory, evening his season record at 4-4.

Game two was stopped after the sixth inning because of darkness. The score at the time was 5-5. The Irish fell behind early again but battled back to tie the score in the sixth. Steve Powell started for the Irish and went 4 1/3 innings, giving up five runs. Lopes went the remaining distance.

Moran continued to be hot at the plate, as he went 1-2. Rich Vanthour-nout also had a big game collecting his 57th and 58th hits of the year. This broke the old record of 56 hits set by Mike Metzler last year. Dave Clark ably filled the DH spot, going 2-3, and Scott Rogers added a line shot homerun to boost the Irish attack.

Irish tennis team sweeps Belles, 9-0

Gentle Thursday was kind to the Notre Dame women's tennis team.

As An Tostal events kicked off yesterday afternoon at Saint Mary's College, the Irish finished their regular season on an optimistic note as they quickly shut out the Belles, 9-0, at the Angela Athletic Facility.

The victory over the Belles improved Notre Dame's spring record to 18-4. Combined with a spotless 5-0 fall record, the Irish close the books on the 1984-1985 season with a spectacular 23-4 mark, and the most successful season in the team's eight-year history.

"There is a great attitude on this team and it has developed with each match," said Notre Dame head coach Sharon Petro. "Considering our season and the way we've been playing, getting the National Championship now would be icing on the cake."

Since Notre Dame already qualified for next month's NCAA Division II National Championship Tournament in California, yesterday's meet against the Belles was anti-climatic. The Irish dominated the meet from the outset, easily claiming all nine matches without splitting sets.

With the meet locked up at 6-0 going into the doubles matches, the Irish saw fiercer competition from Saint Mary's as the Belles scrambled to chalk up points. While Notre Dame won each of its first sets, 6-0, the Irish seemed to let their guard down during the second sets.

Senior co-captain Lisa LaFratta's tendinitis affected her play at No. 2 doubles, causing her to miss some shots during the second set, while teammates Cathy Schnell and Michelle Dasso at No. 3 doubles struggled to pull out their second set, 7-6.

"There was a lapse of concentration out there," said Petro. "But the meet went pretty much like we expected."

Saint Mary's spring record falls to 5-2 after yesterday's loss to the Irish and marks the midway point in the Belles' season. Saint Mary's qualified for the May 18 NALA National Championship Tournament in Kansas City and plans to use the remainder of its season to develop poise against top midwestern teams.

"We coasted in the fall and we want to get some tournament toughness," said Saint Mary's coach Joanne Nester. "We plan to play tougher matches so we'll play tougher at the Nationals."

Both Saint Mary's and Notre Dame eagerly anticipated yesterday's match, rekindling some of the rivalry between the two schools. In the first meetings between Notre Dame and Saint Mary's, the Belles dominated the Irish. As Notre Dame's program developed, the meets became more challenging. Now, the contests usually finish with lopsided results in Notre Dame's favor.

"There is a good, intense rivalry between Notre Dame and Saint Mary's which strengthens our cerebral part of the game," said Nester. "It's a psychological experience to pit ourselves against someone who we know is as strong as Notre Dame."

SMC assistant AD Dillon resigns four-year-old post

The Saint Mary's athletic department announced yesterday the resignation of Timothy J. Dillon, Assistant Director of Athletics and Recreation, to become effective June 1, 1985.

According to the athletic department, Dillon, who has been with the College for four years, is leaving to pursue other professional interests.

"It is going to be hard to replace someone who cared about students and promoted Saint Mary's athletics as much as Tim Dillon did," said Athletic Council President, senior Ellen Byrne. "He always did all that he could for the athletes and the athletic department, and was honest and straight-forward in his efforts - something which I think has been lacking in the present administration's handling of athletics as a whole."

Dillon, who helped set the groundwork of the athletic department four years ago, has worked in coordination with Notre Dame in hosting the N.C.A.A. fencing championships and the Junior Olympics and he has been a driving force in gaining national recognition for Saint Mary's.

Senior Kerry Klein, Student Intramural Coordinator and Athletic Council member stated, "I think his resignation is really unfortunate. He has done a fantastic job. It is a big loss to the College, but especially to the students. He has so much potential and could have done so much more for the athletic program - if only he had not been stripped of all responsibilities and stifled by what I consider to be an obvious case of discrimination."
