Nothing is safe around the LaFortune Student Center these days as workers continue digging, building and banging in the hopes of finishing the renovation by September of 1986. According to Don Dedrick, director of the physical plant, winter will not affect the completion date. Story below.

The renovation of LaFortune Student Center continues to make progress and is scheduled to be completed by September of 1986, according to Don Dedrick, director of the physical plant.

The project is on schedule, said Dedrick, and the coming of winter should not affect the completion date.

In the next several months, Dedrick said workers will continue to construct the addition on the east side of the building as well as continuing the renovation of the existing building.

This means some inconveniences for the students, he said. "We'll have to close off portions of the building to work on it," Dedrick said, "and there will be quite a lot of dust and noise as there has been."

They are trying to minimize the disruption of the upper offices, he added, by doing the renovations there in the summer when students won't be here.

Dedrick explained the progress of the renovation in a step-by-step manner. First the walls in the basement had to be removed and rebuilt for the new business area which will include the flower shop, travel bureau, and hairstylists.

Next, the workers had to remove the game room to begin construction on the new addition on the east side of the building.

These first two steps are well underway, Dedrick said, and workers are now beginning to remodel the center stairway and put up columns for the exterior addition.

The excavation for the new center stairway will then be done as well as the installment of the new toilet facilities, he said.

Finally, Dedrick said, the new expanded Huddle will be opened up.

Joni Neal, director of student activities, attends progress meetings with the contractors every two weeks and said she is very happy with the progress so far.

There have been no major changes in the original renovation plan, according to Neal, although workers have encountered some construction difficulties.

"They have found some construc-

Convicted spy receives life sentence

Associated Press

NORFOLK, Va. - Arthur Walker, a retired Navy officer convicted of supplying secrets to a Soviet spy ring run by his brother, was sentenced to life in prison yesterday by a judge who refused to "treat this as a slap-on-the-wrist case."

Walker, a 51-year-old retired Navy lieutenant commander, told U.S. District Judge Calvitt Clarke Jr. that he wished to "apologize to all the citizens of this country for what I did."

"I dishonored myself. I devastated my family. Nobody could be any sorer," he said.

Clarke then sentenced Walker, of Virginia Beach, to the maximum of three life terms and four 10-year terms on seven counts of espionage, with the sentences to run concurrently. Walker, who was also fined $250,000, will be eligible for parole in 10 years.

Walker's wife Rita, the only witness at the sentencing hearing, testified that he became suicidal while he was spying and had an affair with his brother's wife in the late 1960s and early 1970s.

His brother, John Walker Jr., 48, a retired Navy chief warrant officer, and John Walker's son, Navy seaman Michael Walker, 22, pleaded guilty to espionage Oct. 28. In exchange for his cooperation with authorities, John Walker is to receive a life sentence and his son is to serve 25 years.

Arthur Walker's attorneys argued that his role in the spy ring was less significant than his brother's or nephew's, but Clarke disagreed.

"Arthur Walker was an older brother and an officer and had been entrusted by his government with far greater responsibility than either John Walker or Michael Walker," the judge said. "I can't treat this as a slap-on-the-wrist case. The evidence is all to the contrary."

Defense attorneys, who had tried unsuccessfully to get a plea bargain for Arthur Walker, said they were stunned by the sentence and would appeal to the 4th U.S. circuit Court of Appeals in Richmond.

"The message that's gone out from this is... if you're going to do it, do it big and don't try to help because you can make them deal with you," said Samuel Meekins, one of two defense attorneys.

Arthur Walker described his role to FBI agents shortly after his brother's arrest May 20, but Assistant U.S. Attorney Tommy Miller said the government believed he has concealed the extent of his involvement.

HPC to students: Student Senate's fate in your hands now

By SCOTT BEARBY
Assistant News Editor

The "new beginning" of disbanding the Student Senate proposed by five student leaders is one step closer to implementation after the Hall Presidents' Council voted to send the proposed amendment to the student body.

By a narrow vote of 18 for, six against, and one abstention, HPC approved the amendment, which calls for senate disbandment. A two-thirds approval vote was needed for the measure to go to a student vote.

According to Ombudsman representative Maher Mouasher, Ombudsman will begin preparations for the vote, which will take place sometime next week, possibly Tuesday.

Before the vote, hall presidents and concerned students debated whether disbanding senate is the way to make student government most effective or whether other options needed to be considered.

Mouasher, who spoke as a concerned student, called the decision to restructure student government a "big step" and asked HPC to consider whether enough time was spent on developing the plan for long term use. "Is this the best it can be?" he asked.

"Simply juggling factors around will lead to another restructuring" in the future, something Mouasher said has been done "every two or three years."

Student Body President Bill Healy

responded by saying research was done throughout the summer by Student Body Vice President Duane Lawrence and others. Healy called the proposal "well thought out" and added he "didn't see what more work could be done without spinning our wheels."

Both Lewis Hall President Mimi Soule and Pasquerilla East President Carie Hand agreed HPC needed to vote for the amendment in order to make student government effective. Soule said some members of her hall said they didn't feel student government is serving who they are supposed to and felt the restructuring was a good idea.

Student Senator K.C. Culum said that although Lawrence may have spent the summer doing research, a proposal was not actually drawn up until one-and-a-half weeks ago. Philip Coghlan, a concerned student, added that changes made last week at a special HPC meeting on the amendment show not enough time has been spent in detailing necessary information.

During the meeting, Healy distributed a proposal he will be making to the Campus Life Council, which along with the HPC will gain additional responsibilities, that calls for a student affairs committee of the CLC to be formed.

Cavanaugh President Bill Lytle said the CLC committee "is what I am looking for" in establishing an outlet for student voice.

Lawrence explains proposed change

The Student Senate presently acts as a forum for student discussion. It initiates discussion of administration policies which concern the students, it allocates the student activities budget and it approves appointments to cabinet positions, according to Duane Lawrence, student body vice president.

But it might not be doing this much longer.

An amendment to the student government constitution was passed last night by the Hall Presidents' Council which would eliminate the senate. The amendment, written by Lawrence and HPC chairman Kevin Howard, will be brought to a student referendum vote next week, probably Tuesday.

According to the amendment, the student body president will assume the role of initiating student discussion. The Campus Life Council will act as a forum for discussion on administration policies concerning the students.

The student influence in the CLC will not be weakened by the presence of the six rectors and two faculty members, according to Lawrence.

"What many students do not realize is that many of the rectors do not always agree with the administration's policies," said Lawrence.

Student Body President Bill Healy intends to form a student committee of the eight student members of the CLC in order to consolidate student opinion, said Lawrence.

The HPC will assume the power to modify the constitution. A two-thirds vote of the HPC would be necessary to propose an amendment to the student government constitution. A unanimous vote in the HPC or a two-thirds majority of the student body will be needed to ratify an amendment.

The amendment also will grant the HPC the power to call a meeting of the student body president and the CLC within 10 days. Under the amendment, the HPC will be given the power to approve appointments to cabinet positions.

The dissolution of the senate will not result in any true in-

As winter begins to set in, so does student apathy

*The woods are lovely, dark and deep.
But I have promises to keep,
And miles to go before I sleep,
And miles to go before I sleep.* — Robert Frost,
Stopping by Woods on a Snowy Evening

It's that time of year again. Fall break is over. Thanksgiving is just out of reach. Christmas is unrealistic. And students are becoming restless and bored with the routine of life in the Notre Dame community.

The evidence is all around us.

Classes are past the midway point. Most everybody has used up all their unexcused absences. By now, students have their professors pegged and vice versa. As B.B. King said, "The thrill is gone."

At work, people are less enthusiastic about their jobs. Restless. Looking for something new but not expecting to find it.

Social life is becoming predictable. Freshmen, having finally made it to the wonderful world of college - with the obligatory wild parties and togas - have become wisened old veterans who nod stoically as they recite the difference between an SYR and a formal.

Student government isn't as fun as it used to be.

Look at all those issues that ignited the collective student mind a few weeks ago. Student Senate disbandment. The Dillon Decision. The Healy recall referendum. The South African issue. Parietals.

The referendum on the disbandment of the Student Senate wasn't held last Tuesday, as was originally planned. Nor was it held yesterday. It might be held next week, or maybe not at all, depending on what the Hall Presidents' Council decided last night.

Vice President for Student Affairs Father David Tyson responded to what he termed an "incendiary" resolution from the Student Senate to define the limits of the University's jurisdiction over students with a nicely-worded, well-thought out response, closing with, "I am more than happy to respond to the request and hope my clarification is helpful." Sssssss. Out go the flames.

The movement to hold a recall election for Student Body President Bill Healy and Vice President Duane Lawrence has fizzled. What was once a group of emotionally-motivated students demanding their right to representation eventually became an exercise in cooperation and the rebirth of some sense of unity within the Healy administration.

Students protesting apartheid, the systematic discrimination and oppression of people in South Africa, were shouted down at the Notre Dame football game with chants of "More investment!" and "Go to hell!" Whatever happened to integrity? Or even class?

When concerned student leaders published convincing pleas in The Observer for students to write Tyson about unfair implementation of the parietals regulation, only a handful of students took the time to respond.

This kind of attitude could justify the statement, "Notre Dame students aren't just apathetic; they're pathetic."

But that would be a defeatist attitude. It's not that bad. This lack of motivation, if you will, can be blamed on the depressing weather that is beginning to settle into the area, or all the construction students have to walk around on the way to class, or the seemingly infinite distance between breaks or even weekends, or the long lines in the dining hall at 12:55 when you have a 1:15 class.

It's all these things and it's none of these things.

Even though life at Notre Dame has seemingly become temporarily stagnant academically, socially and politically, this doesn't mean the party's over. This is what is called a lull.

The campus is just catching its breath.

The same thing happened last year at this time. The most controversial topic in the letters section of The Observer a year ago was whether the "Women of Notre Dame" calender was sexist. How easy it would be to replace this phrase with "USC cheerleader picture." The rhetoric is the same. Not what you would call demanding.

The year before that was even worse. This date in 1983 graced the campus with the burning question of whether more laundry facilities should be made available to men. Yawn.

Eventually, precedent has shown us that things will pick up. Just sleep late when you can. Drink plenty of orange juice (cold and flu season is just around the corner). And sharpen your steely knives for the next round of controversy.

Heavy snow almost obliterates the highway sign at Baxter, Calif., where the California Highway Patrol closed Interstate 80. At least seventeen deaths have been reported in the west so far following one of the heaviest snowfalls on record. Story below.

At least 17 dead following series of record breaking snow storms

Associated Press

Up to two feet of snow fell yesterday over northern Arizona and Utah as a storm turned eastward after piling up huge drifts in the Sierra Nevada, stranding hunters and hikers and breaking records for cold temperatures.

At least 17 deaths had been blamed on a series of winter-like storms since last week, but most hikers and hunters reported missing in Northern California had been found as of yesterday. Trucks slid off roads and power lines fell in Utah, and schools were closed in northern Arizona.

"We're projecting significant winter weather across the mountains at fairly low elevations for this early in the season, and significant snow should remain over the mountains" into today, Jack Hales of the National Severe Storms Forecast Center in Kansas City, Mo., said early yesterday.

Winnemucca, Nev., posted a record low of 8 degrees below zero yesterday, and Yakima, Wash., had a record low of 7 degrees. Eureka, Calif., on the northern coast, had a record low of 31 for the second day in a row. To the east, Caribou, Maine, had a record low of 6 degrees.

The heaviest snow yesterday moved into northern Arizona and Utah. Ten inches of snow fell during the night in northern Utah at the Alta ski resort, after up to 14 inches fell in the state's mountains Monday. The Alta, Snowbasin and Snowbird resorts had accumulated 22 to 24 inches.

In northern Arizona the city of Flagstaff, at an elevation of about 7,000 feet, got 10 inches in five hours and schools were closed. Grand Canyon had 14 inches and 24 inches of snow was on the ground at Jacob Lake, on the sparsely populated Kaibab Plateau between the Grand Canyon and the Utah border.

An estimated 250 elk hunters remained stranded by up to 4 feet of snow in the Cascade Mountains of Washington. One woman was found dead yesterday in a pickup, apparently a victim of carbon monoxide as the engine was kept running for heat, said Yakima County emergency service spokeswoman Karen Dean.

"It's probably going to take all week to get everybody out," said Jack Bartley, Yakima County search and rescue coordinator, adding that 50 to 75 had walked to safety by early yesterday and National Guard helicopters rescued 31 Monday.

In Northern California's mountain counties, at least 45 people including campers, hikers, hunters and others had been led to safety as of yesterday by sheriff's deputies and rescue ski patrols from isolated areas of the Sierra Nevada and El Dorado National Forest, said Erik Holst, a forest spokesman.

Snow snarled traffic yesterday in mountain passes north of Los Angeles, and a mudslide in the fire-denuded mountains north of Ojai closed state Highway 33, officials said. Snow was 13 inches deep at Big Bear Lake in the mountains 85 miles northeast of Los Angeles, and snow fell over parts of Riverside County, east of the city.

In contrast to the cold, record highs were reported yesterday in the Southeast, including 85 at Jackson, Miss.; 78 at Paducah, Ky., and 79 at Huntsville, Ala. The high of 80 at Memphis, Tenn., topped a record that had stood since 1879.

General claims overthrow of Liberian government

Associated Press

A fugitive general claimed yesterday he had overthrown Liberia's government, but a man identifying himself as head of state Samuel Doe said by telephone from the executive mansion that he was still in charge of the West African nation.

The U.S. embassy spokesman in Monrovia said that the center of the Liberian capital was calm at mid-afternoon and that Doe loyalists had taken the government radio station back from the rebels. He said some soldiers who apparently were rebels were still on the streets.

The London bureau of NBC, said its staff telephoned the executive mansion in Monrovia and interviewed a man who said he was Doe.

"The situation here is under control, and I'm still in power," the man said. "I want to appeal to the Liberian people to be calm and all those that came with (rebel leader Thomas) Quiwonkpa to put down their arms and report to the nearest police officer."

He said loyalist troops had killed "about 15 rebels" who attacked the executive mansion before dawn.

The U.S. embassy spokesman, Richard Gilbert, said in a telephone interview with Associated Press Radio in Washington: "as far as we know all Americans are safe. We've advised people to remain in their houses, off the streets."

Gen. Quiwonkpa was among the leaders of the bloody 1980 "sergeants' coup" that brought Doe to power, but his former comrade accused him of plotting two years ago and Quiwonkpa fled the country.

Correction

In the Student Senate story yesterday a portion of Vice President for Student Affairs Father David Tyson's letter to Bill Healy, student body president, was inadvertently omitted. The following is the complete text of the letter:

"I am writing in response to your letter of November 4th and the Student Senate Resolution N.B. 1. I trust that you will communicate my response to the Senate.

"I will attempt to be clear with respect to the University's position on sanctions taken against groups away from the University. Any member of the University community, student, faculty, or administrator, can bring embarrassment or disgrace to the University by their actions by virtue of the fact that they are identified as members of the community. However, it is quite a different matter when members of the community take it upon themselves to act as agents of the University by flying flags, entering contests on behalf of the University, etc. In the latter case, the University has and will continue to impose sanctions on these parties when their actions, on behalf of the University, are in opposition to the values and principles which are at the foundation of Notre Dame's mission. The sanctions imposed are contingent upon the circumstances involved and the judgement of those charged with the decision-making.

"There have been individual students in the past who have engaged in activities away from the campus that have been disparaging to the community and have been adjudicated by appropriate law enforcement officials and the courts. In these cases, the University has not imposed further sanctions. These cases, on the other hand, are quite different from a student or group of students who de facto set themselves up as agents of the University. In my opinion, the Office of Residence Life has been consistent and fair when examining complaints that are brought to our attention from other cities or campuses. I should also point out that I am much more concerned with the fairness of a decision which is not always guaranteed by consistency.

"In closing, allow me to say that I am perplexed by the tone of the Resolution in that I have always responded to Senate requests for clarifications, etc. Regardless of the incendiary tone of the Resolution, I am more than happy to respond to the request and hope that my clarification is helpful."

Heart patient undergoes tests

Associated Press

LOUISVILLE, Ky. - Artificial heart patient William Schroeder underwent a pair of CAT scans as doctors tried to identify what caused him to become lethargic during the weekend, a hospital spokeswoman said Monday.

Schroeder, who has suffered strokes twice since receiving his Jarvik-7 mechanical pump Nov. 25, was taken to Humana Hospital Audubon late Sunday night for the first of the computer enhanced X-rays, said Donna Hazle, the hospital's director of public relations.

The second tests were performed

Monday. Doctors hadn't released any information on either set, she said.

The 53-year-old federal retiree was returned to his specially equipped apartment across the street from the hospital after each test, Hazle said. He receives 24-hour nursing care.

Schroeder showed "symptoms of lethargy" when he arrived at the hospital Sunday, Hazle said.

Since his first stroke, which occurred Dec. 13, Schroeder has suffered memory loss, has been weak and has had trouble speaking. The second stroke occurred in early May. He has been undergoing physical and occupational therapy for several months to help overcome the lingering disabilities.

Meanwhile, implant recipient Murray Haydon has shaken a slight fever and continues to recuperate in his coronary care room, Hazle said in a tape-recorded update on his condition.

Haydon, 59, uses a respirator every other hour he is awake, she said.

The retired Louisville autoworker received his pump on Feb. 17 and has been confined to the coronary care unit for all but two weeks since then.

Blind man with two black belts uses karate to fend off mugger

Associated Press

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. - A blind man with two black belts in martial arts said Monday he used karate chops to fend off a mugger who tried to rob him of $1.

"He might have thought a blind person was an easy target, but I wasn't an easy target," said Todd Alan Carter, 18.

Carter, blinded from a gunshot wound last November, said he had rarely used his karate expertise until Sunday, when he gave the would-be attacker a big surprise.

He said he was walking home from the Daytona Mall at 8:45 p.m. when the incident occurred.

"I wasn't really paying attention to where I was going, I must have been daydreaming, and took a couple of wrong turns . . . and was lost," said Carter, who uses a red-tipped white cane.

As he was trying to find his way back to the Florida Rehabilitation Center for the Blind, where he lives, he was approached by a man who demanded $1 from him.

"He asked me if I had any money to borrow and I said no. Then he nudged me from behind and wanted to know if I had any money he could take," said Carter, who was carrying $15 in cash and wearing a gold chain at the time of the attempted mug-gling. Frightened, he attacked the man.

"I just acted on instinct," Carter said. "I elbowed him in the chest and went to hit him in the groin area. Then he turned around and hit me."

He hit the mugger in the throat and the man fell to the ground, choking.

"I just took off and never knew I could run so fast," Carter said. He asked a motorist for help and returned to the center.

Carter has been practicing karate since he was 7 years old and has a second-degree black belt in the Japanese-style karate known as yoshika and a first-degree black belt in ju-jitsu.

Hudson's 'lover' sues actor for giving him AIDS disease

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES - A man who says he was Rock Hudson's lover filed a $10 million lawsuit yesterday charging that the late actor, doctors and two other people conspired to hide the fact that Hudson had AIDS.

In the suit and in a separate $10 million claim filed against Hudson's estate, Marc Christian, 31, said he is living in "extreme fear that at any moment he will receive a death sentence" by learning that he contracted acquired immune deficiency syndrome from the actor.

"It is probable that claimant has contracted AIDS from Hudson, and as a consequence, will incur medical expenses to prolong claimant's life and make his inevitable death as painless as possible," said the claim filed by celebrity attorney Marvin Mitchelson.

Mitchelson said the separate actions were filed because the claim, not actually a lawsuit, requires 10 days of waiting time before the estate accepts or rejects it.

Meanwhile, Mitchelson filed an actual lawsuit for bodily injury, mental suffering and damages for fraud and deceit against the estate's executor. Hudson's secretary and an unspecified number of doctors.

The suit said Hudson and Christian "became lovers in March 1983 and thereafter continued a social and sexual relationship with each other."

The suit alleged that when Hudson learned he had AIDS about June 8, 1984, he did not tell Christian and hid the fact from him until July 23, 1985.

The suit said Hudson, 59, who died Oct. 2, told Christian his extreme weight loss was the result of deliberate dieting, exercise and anorexia.

Mitchelson said that Christian has been tested for AIDS and does not know yet whether he has the disease.

There is no known cure for AIDS, a disease that cripples the body's immune system and leaves its victims vulnerable to infections and other diseases, including rare cancers.

Researchers believe AIDS can be spread through sexual contact, contaminated needles and blood transfusions, but not by casual contact. It is most likely to strike homosexuals, abusers of injectable drugs and hemophiliacs.

Coffee drinkers face three times greater risk of heart problems

Associated Press

BALTIMORE - A person who drinks five or more cups of coffee a day has an almost three times greater risk of having heart problems than a non-coffee drinker, according to a study of more than 1,000 doctors released Monday.

Findings from the study, which tracked 1,130 white males who graduated from The Johns Hopkins Medical School here between 1948 and 1964, were presented in Washington at the 58th scientific sessions of the American Heart Association.

Information on drinking habits was obtained from the graduating physicians at five-year intervals for up to 25 years. No information was obtained on whether the type of coffee was caffeinated or decaffeinated.

A person who drinks at least five cups of coffee daily has a 2.8 times greater risk of having heart problems than the non-drinker, the study found.

Even when other risk factors - smoking, high-blood pressure, cholesterol levels and age - are considered, the study determined there is still a 2.5 times increased risk, the researchers reported.

Other studies into possible links between coffee consumption and coronary heart disease have resulted in contradictory findings, said Dr. Thomas Pearson, an associate professor and director of the Johns Hopkins Precursors Study. Some found a link, while others did not.

A spokesman for the National Coffee Association, Bill Brooks, said 10 of 12 major studies found no relationship between coffee drinking and heart disease. In one of the two studies that did, the findings were later reversed, he said.

American coffee drinkers consume an average of 3 cups a day, the association said.

Sweetener linked to seizures

Associated Press

BOSTON - A new report suggests that NutraSweet might trigger epilepsy in some susceptible people and recommends that doctors question seizure victims about their consumption of the popular artificial sweetener.

In a letter in the latest issue of the British journal Lancet, Dr. Richard Wurtman describes three cases in which people had their first epileptic seizures after drinking large amounts of soft drinks that contained NutraSweet.

Wurtman theorizes that the sweetener - known generically as aspartame - lowers levels of chemicals in the brain that protect against seizures.

In his letter, Wurtman said the three cases "can only suggest an association between aspartame and seizures." But he added that they are "compatible with evidence that high aspartame doses may produce neurochemical changes that, in laboratory animals, are associated with depressed seizure thresholds."

Officials of G.D. Searle & Co., which makes NutraSweet, said Wurtman's findings were not scientifically controlled, and the apparent link could well have been due to chance.

"We have every confidence in its safety, and our confidence is based on the research," Dr. John Heybach, Searle's director of medical and scientific affairs, said of NutraSweet. "It's the most extensively researched food additive prior to its approval in history."

Wurtman, a physician at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, has been a frequent critic of aspartame since it was introduced in 1981 as the tabletop sweetener Equal. Now it is used in dozens of products, including pudding, chewing gum and diet soft drinks.

Healy added he didn't see any problem in establishing the committee, which would consist of the student body president, HPC representative to the CLC, judicial coordinator, Student Activities Board chairman, and the five student senators if the proposal is passed in its current form.

During the meeting, Lawrence announced that Notre Dame is well short of its goal in fundraising efforts for the United Way. According to Lawrence, the goal was for each student to average $3 in donations, but contributions thus far are much less than that amount.

In other business, Junior Jamie Cantorna addressed HPC on efforts to start a halfway house for ex-offenders in South Bend. He explained that the house will be patterned after one established by Vanderbilt University in which students live with the ex-offenders.

Eight students would be needed to live with eight ex-offenders, once the house is established. Approximately $75,000 is still needed by the group in order to begin operation, according to Cantorna.

Cantorna said a general informational meeting will be held Nov. 18 in the Center for Social Concerns at 7 p.m.

Badin Hall President Judith Windhorst brought up the issue of University Food Services concession stands during home football weekends. She views the stands as competition for concession stands run by student organizations and halls, who use profits for student use. Healy said the issue is being looked into.

Senior Mark Herkert, who is seeking to have the University implement courses to promote alcohol awareness, also addressed HPC on his efforts. He told HPC he spoke with Father William Beauchamp, assistant to University President Father Theodore Hesburgh, who will speak "with the appropriate people," according to Herkert.

Change

crease in power for any of the other three bodies of student government, according to Lawrence. The student body president, the HPC, and the CLC already exercise the same duties, he said.

"It is not as though the CLC or the HPC will be taking the place of the Student Senate. The duties have always been there, they have just been doubled up (with the senate)," Lawrence said.

Lawrence said that the "student voice" has always been the student body president, as evidenced in the recent jurisdiction controversy concerning the Dillon tailgate in Ann Arbor. Lawrence also said that the role of initiating administration policies concerning the students has always been the role of the CLC, as it is officially recognized by both the Board of Trustees and the administration.

Lawrence added that the allocating of the student activities budget always has been done by the budget committee under the jurisdiction of the student body president.

In a budget dispute earlier this year, the administration ruled in favor of the budget committee over the senate, said Lawrence.

The final duty of the senate, confirmation of cabinet positions, which Lawrence said is a "rubber stamp," will be assumed by the HPC.

The senate, in its present form, only has been in existence for five years. The last senate was established in 1969 and voted itself out of existence within three years.

Although Lawrence and Howard are responsible for the actual amendment, Healy, Student Activities Board Manager Lee Broussard, and Judicial Coordinator Karen Ingwersen also sponsored the amendment.

16 Argentine officers on trial for negligence during Falklands War

Associated Press

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina - A military prosecutor on Monday accused former armed forces chiefs of negligence in Argentina's humiliating defeat by Britain in the Falklands War and asked that they be given prison terms of up to 12 years.

Sixteen army, navy and air force officers are on trial for their part in the war that began April 2, 1982, when Argentina invaded the Falklands, a British colony, and ended 74 days later when British troops recaptured the islands off Argentina's southern coast.

Air Force Gen. Hector Canale, prosecutor for the Armed Forces Supreme Council, recommended 12-year prison terms for ex-president and former army commander Gen. Leopoldo Galtieri and former navy chief, Adm. Jorge Anaya. He called for an eight-year sentence for the former air force chief, Gen. Basilio Lami Dozo.

They were the three members of the ruling junta of the military government in power at that time. Other recommended sentences include prison terms of three to four years, but not all have been disclosed.

Canale's charges marked the start of final arguments in the two-year-old court martial and the first time all 16 defendants sat as a group before the Supreme Council, the nation's highest military tribunal.

Defense Minister Roque Carranza called the proceedings "the most important military trial in Argentine history."

"It is necessary to establish all responsibility for military conduct" in the war, he told reporters at the army's logistics command headquarters in the northern Palermo district, where the trial is being conducted.

Reporters and the general public are barred from attending the sessions. Some representatives of the Defense Ministry and the committees defending the accused agreed to brief reporters on the proceedings with the condition they not be identified.

Argentina lost 712 combatants in the war and Britain 255.

The court martial was initiated in November 1983 on the recommendation of a military commission that found the junta led Argentina into war "when it was not prepared for a confrontation of such characteristics."

It also accused military leaders of "incomplete and defective planning" and of "failing to take advantage of concrete (diplomatic) opportunities for an honorable and feasible solution to the conflict."

The military ruled Argentina from a coup in 1976 until December 1983, when the elected civilian government of President Raul Alfonsin took office.

French AIDS patient dies despite new treatment

Associated Press

PARIS - A French doctor who helped develop a new treatment for AIDS announced Monday that one of his patients had died, but he said the experimental program has shown great promise and is being expanded.

Dr. Philippe Even of the Laennec Hospital in Paris said the patient, a 38-year-old French male homosexual, died Saturday. The man "had suffered from full blown AIDS for at least a year," and first underwent experimental treatment with the drug cyclosporine three weeks ago, Even said in a telephone interview.

He described the man as "a desperate case" and said his death had not been unexpected, given the advanced stage of the case and the patient's multiple infections.

Even and fellow researchers Dr. Jean-Marie Andrieu and Dr. Alain Venet announced at a news conference Oct. 29 that cyclosporine had proved effective in fighting AIDS, or acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

Geneva boosts security for summit

Associated Press

GENEVA - The government announced Monday that 2,000 Swiss soldiers would join 1,400 policemen to beef up security and help ensure that Geneva remains "an island of public peace" during next week's summit meeting between President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev.

State police director Guy Fontanet said border and airspace controls will be tightened and that soldiers are under orders to shoot at any trespasser not stopping on first warning.

Gen. Henri Butty, who is in charge of the army troops, said 15 light tanks with light combat weaponry would be deployed for the summit.

Soldiers from German-speaking Switzerland also are getting a crash course in French, focusing on these four words: "halte ou je tire" (Halt or I shoot).

Police Chief Fontanet, who asked citizens for understanding and patience during the summit, said, "We want to ensure that Geneva will remain an island of public peace."

tion problems because of the age of the building," Neal said. "For instance, they had trouble pulling up the flooring in the basement because there were so many layers of it."

Neal said the dust and noise have been an inconvenience but they were an expected part of the renovation. The biggest inconvenience, she said, has been for the Student Activities Board because of the student groups and businesses that had to be shut down or relocated.

Shanigans had to be moved into the Scholastic office and Right to Life was moved into the Student Government offices.

The Dome's darkroom had to be moved to the Fitzpatrick Hall of Engineering and the Morrissey Loan Fund has been temporarily relocated to the third floor of the Administration Building.

Some of the inconveniences caused by the renovation are already being felt by the student businesses.

Irish Gardens had to move its entrance to the south side of the building. According to Irish Gardens manager, Cathy Snakard, "At first we had less business because people didn't know where we were, so we had to put up signs."

Snakard said that Irish Gardens will be moving again at the end of the semester to where the International Students Organization used to be, on the north side of the building.

The renovation has also been a big inconvenience for the T-shirt Shop and the Student Saver which had to be closed down until the renovations are done, said Rob Hoover, student activities board business manager.

The businesses will reopen next semester, he said, and will have spots in the basement.

Darby's Place, however, which was also closed down for the renovations, will not be reopened. There would be no place to put Darby's after the renovation, according to Hoover.

In addition, he said, "Due to all the new businesses that will be moving into the basement, they want to lock it up earlier instead of having people study down there."

Bob Newhouse, last year's manager of Darby's, said he is disappointed about the decision not to reopen Darby's. "I think it's sad that we will be losing the only place on campus open 24 hours for students to get together to study or talk."

Overall, though, Hoover is optimistic about the new business area in the soon-to-be renovated LaFortune.

"It will be beneficial for the students because they will be aware of where everything is," Hoover said, "and it will be beneficial for the businesses because, with a permanent location, they will have more traffic."

Moreau unmasked

features writer

Ever heard of a "Come as your favorite sinner or sin" party? What about one with Jim Jones, Kool-Aid, Faustus and chocolate cake, in attendance?

Where do you think such an event could be found? Dillon? Farley?

Think again. This time about Moreau Seminary.

You know the place. It's that concrete fortress across St. Joseph's Lake with the immense steel cross in front of it and all the locked doors that this reporter found great difficulty penetrating.

It is also the place some 72 seminarians studying to become priests of the Holy Cross Order call home.

Mike Tomsovic of Chicago is a collegiate there in his third year of undergraduate study. "I was taught by priests of the congregation of Holy Cross in high school," he explained. "I'd like to return to my high school and teach English."

Jim Skyspeck, a candidate at Moreau earning undergraduate philosophy hours was called to the cloth ever earlier. "I developed the concept of becoming a priest in elementary school," said Skyspeck. "I was attracted to the Holy Cross congregation by its diversity of mission and sense of community. I would someday like to be a retreat coordinator or be involved with college chaplancy."

The men living at Moreau are either in their second year of undergraduate study or in one of the phases that follows receiving 18 undergraduate credit hours in philosophy. First-year undergraduate students in the program live in the Old College.

One might think that the men living at Moreau Seminary would feel lonely, or alienated from the rest of the Notre Dame community as a result of the seminary's location. Tomsovic and Skyspeck are quick to contradict.

"We are encouraged to be involved with both Notre Dame and Saint Mary's so we are not lonely," said Tomsovic. "We are encouraged to bring our friends to our activities here."

Tomsovic has certainly answered his calling to a social life. He plays both clarinet and bass clarinet and is a member of the marching band, the concert band, and "other various musical ensembles." He is also the editor of the band's newspaper.

All of the seminarians are required to do some social work for which they are not paid. This service is called an apostolate and is worked into the men's daily schedules.

There are various ways the men offer their services. Tomsovic has been a Sunday school teacher and has played basketball with handicapped children. "Undergraduates are encouraged to work through the Center for Social Concerns," he added.

The Moreau community has various activities to promote fellowship among the seminarians according to Skyspeck. "We have morning and evening prayer and daily mass. We eat our meals together and must do the dishes once a week." There are also other household chores which the students complete together.

In addition to these daily duties, there are weekly events for the seminarians and their guests "just to be together" said Skyspeck.

"Every Thursday we have a soiree," he explained. "We have a mass, a rather good dinner, and evening prayer. The soiree then follows until the last person leaves." The costume party previously mentioned was the soiree on Halloween night.

"I think there is more of a sense of community here than in a dorm," said Tomsovic.

Life in the seminary is different from living in a dorm in other ways, too.

"All of our rooms are singles. We don't have parietals. We do have 'house obediences,'" explained Tomsovic. "We also have better food," Skyspeck added.

House obediences are the household chores the men are required to do, of which there are four types. The social commission is in charge of keeping the recreation rooms clean. Keeping the cars running and taking care of the kitchen are the stewardship commission's responsibility. The mission and education commissions take care of the library and seminar rooms, while the prayer commission keeps the chapel clean and the pews polished, among other things.

"We are encouraged to be involved with both Notre Dame and Saint Mary's so we are not lonely."

"The building is a seminary of yesterday, though," one seminarian said. "It was built so that every sound can be heard by everyone, including snoring."

"Even though we don't have anything like parietals, we have respect for others," explained Skyspeck. "Because sound does travel so much and guys are studying or trying to sleep, we'll go to one of our rec-rooms or the dining room if we have friends over."

Overall, the men living in Moreau don't seem to feel isolated from the rest of the Notre Dame community. They have their fun and they have their goals. "We have a real community within this house," said Skyspeck, summing it up.

Jim Letourneau, Mike Glynn and Jeff Liddell lead mass at Moreau Seminary.

Ticket dilemma shows how students are treated

I walked into my apartment the other day and was startled to find my roommate sprawled out on the couch, his rear end propped up on five pillows and an ice bag placed gingerly across his nose.

Mike Wilkins

here, there and back

"Skip a car payment?" I quizzed.
 "Worse. I went to the ACC."
 "Football players on a rampage again?"
 "No, I went to the basketball stadium."
 "I heard Digger has been pushing the boys pretty hard."
 "I wouldn't know, I couldn't tell from where I was. I went to the ACC to check out our seats for basketball season, you know, just to see if they were as bad as we really thought they were."

"And?"
 "Well, I walked up into the bleachers and found our seats and sat down and started watching practice, but I couldn't see anything. Tim Kempton looked like he was one foot tall and David Rivers just looked like a fly buzzing all over the place."
 "Pretty bad, eh?"
 "That's just the beginning. I went to get up out of my seat and I, well, I..."
 "You didn't fall off of the bleachers did you?" I asked disgustedly.
 "No. I got splinters in my butt."

I laughed, but the humor of the situation seemed to escape him.

"It's not funny. I mean it, I went to get out of my seat and I got these splinters in my tail. It hurts like crazy. I want my padded seat back."

"What happened to your nose, scrape it on the rafters?"

"No, while I was up there I got a nosebleed. Must have been the altitude."

"Get serious."

"This is serious. This is our fifth year here and we finally have a chance to see a truly gifted basketball team. And where are we sitting? In the bleachers. We won't be able to tell the difference between Barlow's baseline jumpers and Royal's slam dunks. Something is wrong here."

"But they ran out of student tickets in the padded seats. Then they ran out of student tickets period."

"Well, that's a crock. You would think after following that team for four years, we would get a better treatment. I mean, I went to all those games - games against teams that sounded, and played, more like they were a large dorm than a small college. Now I get a chance to see a true national contender and I am not even close enough to tell what color we are wearing."

"Come on, the seats can't be that bad."

"The point isn't how bad the seats are, the point is that we should not be punished just because we already have our degree and have decided to come back here for more school. The Double Domers should be getting first pick of tickets. We should at least be sitting with the seniors instead of with the sophomores. We've paid our dues. We've backed the team for four years. Our butts deserve padded seats. Besides, we won't be able to see Stupid Cheerleader Tricks."

"Just be glad you're not a freshman. Some of the freshman didn't get tickets at all."

"That's even worse. It just goes to show where the students rank around here: somewhere between the alumni and the pond scum - and I think we are closer to being in the pond than being in the padded seats."

"So what are you going to do?"

"I'm going to clean my binoculars, pack my nose with cotton and stuff a pillow down the back of my pants. And if that doesn't work, I'm going to go down and sit in Ticket Manager Mike Bobinski's seat. And I'm going to bring about 200 freshmen with me. He took our seats, the least he can do is give us his."

"Great idea. Think it will work?"

"Sure. We'll call it the Pond Scum Section. Even if we don't get to sit there, at least they won't have to change the name."

Theatre going holds many advantages over movies

When you are looking for something to do on a weekend night, how often have you considered going to the theatre? If you are like most people, you probably have not given it much thought. And that is really unfortunate, for the theatre can be a great experience.

William Wilson

the word most mangled

It is really quite strange how people who give no second thought to going to see a movie will not even begin to consider going to see a play. What is the basis for their prejudice against theatre?

Everyone should support their local theatre organization, and there are many ways to do this. The most obvious and simplest is to attend performances. While I don't mean to take anything away from movies, there are many things about the theatre that make attending a play worthwhile. For one, theatre offers a live performance with real people. This can be quite exciting. Going to see a show with a date and saying to him or her that you know the person onstage is quite impressive. You might even be surprised and see one of your friends onstage, which would explain why he or she seemed to disappear for a few hours each night for several weeks. In addition, how many people can go to a movie and honestly say they know Harrison Ford or Clint Eastwood?

One of the most exciting things about a live performance is the ability of the audience to look for things other than what is going on in the spotlight. In a movie, we can see only what the director wants us to see. But in the theatre, we can look at different things and look at the whole play from a different perspective. In addition, the audience has the ability to affect the performance and make the performance strong or weak. This cannot be done while viewing a movie.

Most people think the theatre is too "heavy." This is not true. While many plays have some strong message, they are at the same time funny, sad and very entertaining. One need only look at the recent production of "End of the World" by Notre Dame/Saint Mary's Theatre to know that this statement is true.

And not every play has some deep social message. Many have been written for simple entertainment. In fact, nearly every play has just as much potential for entertainment as a movie. And let us not forget many plays have become movies, such as "Amadeus." Some people feel they don't want to go see a play because they know nothing about it. Yet people will still spend four dollars to go see a movie they know little about. All one needs to do is to ask someone what the play is about. We are lucky here at Notre Dame and Saint Mary's because we can easily call up the box office or the theatre department and ask about the show.

Notre Dame/Saint Mary's Theatre is only one of the many local theatre organizations we will encounter in our lifetimes. When we go home over the summer, we can find at least one theatre group in our hometowns which would love our support.

Another way to support your local theatre is to become involved in working on a production. Anyone who has done this can tell you that it is an experience unlike any other - to work for several weeks and turn out a product that sparkles is a great feeling. If you think there is a Dustin Hoffman inside you bursting to get out, tryout for a role in a performance. One does not need to worry about the leading role; there are several supporting roles which are just as important. If you are not an actor, there are many other things which you can do: one can work on lights, sound, stage crew, set construction; the list is endless.

But attending performances is the best way to support your local theatre group. You don't need to get dressed up to go, unless you are going to see a show on Broadway, and even here dressing up is not a requirement. But for most of us, we can wear to a play exactly what we would wear to a movie. And at the same time, one can get dressed up and go to dinner before the show, making for a great evening. The price usually is not that large of a factor either. Notre Dame/Saint Mary's Theatre usually charges four dollars for a play which is less than or equal to the cost of one movie admission.

So the next time you are looking for something to do, why not try a play? During the rest of the year, Notre Dame/Saint Mary's Theatre is putting on productions, all of which should be great. Forget any bad experiences you have had with high school drama. To find out more about these productions, call the theatre department at your school. And don't forget to support your local theatre groups when you go home over semester break or for the summer. They too will be offering excellent entertainment worth your while.

Women priests will be necessary in the future

Dear Editor:

Terry Kibeltis' article in the Nov. 11 Observer was very thought-provoking. Though I do not profess to be a "woman's-libber", I agree that the Catholic Church should reconsider its position on the issue of women as priests. In this day and age, when the number of priests and seminarians is rapidly declining, I believe women priests will be a necessity for the Church to survive. I have no doubt that the ability of women to be priests is as good, or even better, than many men. If the Catholic Church truly wants the best for its followers, then it should allow the priesthood to be open to all. The old traditions of the Church are beautiful in many ways, yet through Vatican II and other such reform movements, they must be changed for the good of the people. After all, the Church is the people of God. Contrary to the belief of many, the people of God are both men and women.

Student thanks friends who helped in bad time

Dear Editor:

In August of 1983, I entered the University of Notre Dame. Driving up Notre Dame Avenue, I was awed by the sight of the Dome, and by all the people coming to school. But the thing that impressed me most was the way the upperclassmen attempted to help the freshmen make a smooth transition into college life.

This spirit and kindness best exemplified itself to me this past week. On Monday, Nov. 4, my sister Joan committed suicide. It is a tragedy when a 17-year-old dies, and it seems even more so when it is someone in your own family.

The spoken words, the flowers, and the cards were all greatly appreciated. The list of people who displayed such kindness is too long to name everyone, but I would like to thank two people in particular. To Father Edward "Monk" Malloy goes my deepest thanks. He had the unenviable position of being the person to tell me what had happened, and was a great comfort. And to Pam Butler goes my love. She will never know how much joy I felt when she walked into the church.

So to all of those in the Notre Dame/Saint Mary's community, I extend my thanks to all of you who helped me through this difficult time.

University has acted to defeat own objectives

Dear Editor:

I would like the readers of The Observer to reflect on the following statements regarding the recent actions of the University against two parietals violators.

Any community which overtly seeks to stimulate the essentially positive and communal aspects of human beings in its society, which seeks to promote the expression of compassion among its people in an effort to increase cohesion, and which prepares legislation to achieve these tenets, must do so in a just and cautiously reflective manner.

Christian communities strive to achieve these goals. Notre Dame strives to realize these goals as a Christian community; however, the University recently has acted in a manner counter-productive to these goals.

The University has told two students to temporarily leave the University because one student was promoting and exercising compassion by consoling a fellow student. The University ignored the intentions of the students and parochially looked only at the inadvertent violation of parietals regulations. In addition, the social ramifications of a parietals violation can, unfortunately, be slanderous.

Anyone of authority, from the security guard to Associate Vice President for Residence Life John Goldrick, from Vice President of Student Affairs Father David Tyson to University President Father Theodore Hesburgh, who had any chance to exercise understanding in the situation, failed to do so, and in a manner counter-productive to the cohesive and compassionate ideals for which a Christian community strives.

In an effort to enforce a rule which the University validly deems constructive and positive, it has alienated many students and faculty through its ignorant and unreflective actions against those students involved.

The University had the compassion and intelligence to judge the intentions of the students as honest and innocent. The University failed to employ compassion and intelligence in its ultimate decision. The University has not acted as a cohesion-seeking authority. It has rather made abominable the very notions of compassion and understanding.

Therefore, the University should reverse its judgment and reverse its actions against the students. A constructive and compassionate community should not remove its law violators, it should act rather to rectify the situation; and in this case, the violation was unintentional and completely unharmed.

The University should learn from those it has dismissed in this case what it means to be compassionate. It should apologize to the students and faculty in order to regain the ground it has lost by alienating itself, and so learn the importance of reconciliation.

Blumb should 'get clue' before hurting morale

Dear Editor:

I would like to talk about a couple of things pertaining to Notre Dame football. First, I want to say Tom Galloway's article was good. You students who booed Steve Beuerlein at the Navy game are total zeros. He is a Notre Dame player - you should be ashamed of yourselves.

Second, I would like to comment on Jeff Blumb's article about facts and whatever else on Nov. 1. I understand that The Observer is an independent newspaper and their reporters have the freedom to write what they want, but get a clue guy. I am not disputing any of the facts, that is not the point. The point is that you are bringing down Notre Dame morale. People are aware of your facts and your efforts are negatively affecting fans. You keep saying that the Irish could possibly go undefeated the rest of the season, but that is very unlikely. Duh. So what are you saying to the players and students, "Get ready for a loss"? Sure, going undefeated is not easy - it's not easy for anybody. We have got a good thing going, why do you have to try and ruin it? I don't think criticizing Gerry Faust in the middle of the season benefits Notre Dame football and fans.

Although The Observer is independent, I wish the sports people would be positive about Notre Dame football. Don't coat your articles with candy, but don't do it with salt either. Build on our positive points. Increase student morale. The power of positive thinking does wonders - unlike telling somebody they are not very good or they are just lucky or wait till next year. The Notre Dame football team has been positively thinking for the last month - look at the results!

FACT - Notre Dame has won their last 4 games.

FACT - Nobody has come within 14 points of us in our last 4 games.

FACT - We have been executing better and playing with more intensity this past month.

OPINION - Notre Dame will continue to play well, finish 8-3 and top it off with a big bowl win.

GO IRISH!

Open house sponsored by student government

Dear Editor:

To students, faculty members and administrators:

On Thursday Nov. 14 at 4 p.m. student government will be sponsoring an open house, open forum. We will be open to all questions, comments, and suggestions. In attendance will be student senators, executive coordinators, Adworks personnel and the student body president, vice president and the treasurer.

We hope you will take a few minutes to bring your concerns and questions over to the 2nd floor, LaFortune Student Center on Thursday. We will be serving refreshments and answering all questions until 6 p.m. We look forward to seeing you on Thursday.

Cancel of referendum in students' best interest

Dear Editor:

Lately, headlines have blared the negative word "postponed" in reference to the negotiations and work being done within the Hall Presidents' Council. The word does not accurately reflect the activity and has caused the HPC to fall victim to condensed press coverage.

The postponement was not a result of a loss of the two-thirds majority needed to send the proposal to the student body. It was done as an act of concern for the governmental structure and the opinions of the student, not as a result of the inadequacy of the HPC. Within this action may also exist the effort to avoid the creation of a senate as a campaign tool to be promised and abolished every few years. The conflicting views within HPC which have arisen during negotiations have made the members aware of the rough transition they would face under the proposed amendment - that of establishing HPC as an increasingly political body, rather than a single voice within the political structure. Such a realization is good cause for alarm.

Top priority in the minds of the hall presidents is the respect of their constituents. To lose this would be to lose the effectiveness for which they strive. No other elected student body better represents the frustrations, satisfactions, motivations, concerns, and spirit of the Notre Dame student. It is a privilege which they respect and do not want to jeopardize at any cost. Have faith in the decisions of the HPC.

No document or organization will ever be flawless. No hasty action will ever be free from reconsideration. The price of a belabored reconsideration is too high to pay when the effects of a carefully considered decision can be enjoyed within a reasonably short period of time.

Kathy McCarthy
Breen-Phillips Hall President

Students did not treat Hickey with politeness

Dear Editor:

William Hickey, the director of University Food Services, calls the Night Oak Cafe "more of a headache than anything else." I would have said unhesitatingly "Right on," except that more annoying to him must be the manner Kurt Weidmann, The Observer, and others went about having the "Night Oak Open" sign removed.

Sure, the sign looks tacky over the entrance to a gothic-romantic style hall. However, couldn't protestors have gone politely to Hickey first? How about judging his motivation as selfish pride or profit? How about a few words of appreciation for a director and staff that have worked in an unselfish and unheralded manner to turn around the manifold aspects of University Food Service? How about some sensitivity and gratitude from the people who prattle so much about their personal and social concern?

they exhibited why they are nationally ranked.

With the loss, Notre Dame's record drops to 10-17, while the Boilermakers' victory gives them a 26-3 mark.

Throughout the game Purdue played with the confidence of a team with 25 wins against an opponent that is still trying to build a competitive program. They were very confident, almost cocky - and with reason.

Statistically, they beat the Irish in almost every category. Purdue had six service aces to the lone Irish ace, set at a .500 compared to Notre Dame's .284.

Exciting and Challenging Career Opportunities

Master of Business Administration

A small, highly selective MBA program has been designed by The Ohio State University to provide professional management education to students with nonbusiness academic backgrounds. This two-year full-time program

- facilitates a high level of student and faculty-student interaction
- has no prerequisite course work
- is especially attractive to students with liberal arts, scientific, and other nonbusiness backgrounds
- is built upon a tightly integrated study of foundation management tools and concepts
- offers the opportunity to concentrate in one or two management fields through elective course work
- is offered by one of the top 25 schools of management in the country and is accredited by the American Assembly of Collegiate Schools of Business

Last year's graduates were very successful in finding career opportunities. Examples of positions they selected include the following:

- assistant to the chief executive officer, Midland Mutual Life
- field marketing manager, Ford Motor Company

- management trainee with an international assignment, Chase Manhattan Bank
- assistant product manager, Pillsbury
- financial analyst, Hewlett Packard
- inventory control manager, IBM Corporation
- account executive, Merrill Lynch
- consultant, Price Waterhouse
- management trainee with an international assignment, Procter and Gamble

Michigan will be one of Midwest's toughest

Associated Press

Michigan Coach Bill Frieder, who perhaps has the best college basketball team in the Midwest and maybe in the nation, gets skittish when talk turns to Top Twenty rankings.

"You're not going to get me to talk about the ratings. They're nice for the fans and all that, but I'm not going to get caught up in it," he said. "The nice thing about our sport is that it's all decided in March and then there's no doubt who's No. 1."

The Wolverines were Big Ten Conference champions and ranked second nationally at the end of last season. They had a 26-4 record and won 17 games in a row losing to Villanova, the eventual NCAA champion.

This season, they return all five starters.

There's no weakness in a lineup that boasts 6-foot-11 senior Roy Tarpley, the Big Ten's most valuable player, at center, and guards Gary Grant and Antoine Joubert.

Add 6-7 freshman Glen Rice, Michigan's high school "Mr. Basketball," to that group and Frieder's only fear is that his players might be overcome with their own celebrity.

"That's my biggest concern," he said. "These kids have got to go out and win it on the floor. They can't be affected by what they read in the papers or hear on television."

The Big Ten sent a league record six teams into the NCAA tournament, but Illinois, 26-9, was the only team to do well, before losing in the Eastern Regional semifinals to Georgia Tech. Coach Lou Henson has four of his five starters back, including stellar guards Bruce Douglas and Doug Altenberger, a pair of red-shirted 7-footers on the wing and promising freshman Lowell Hamilton.

Iowa, 21-11, replaces departed twin towers Greg Stokes and Michael Payne with 7-0 redshirt Brad Lohaus. Coach George Raveling has to solve the Hawkeyes' late-season slides. Getting increased production from starting guards Andre Banks and Jeff Moe could be the key.

Indiana, which suffered through Coach Bobby Knight's first losing season in the 1984-85 conference, is the darkhorse. But the picture is brightened with Olympian Steve Alford having one more year of experience, and the additions of junior college transfer Andre Harris and freshman Ricky Calloway.

Notre Dame, led by sophomore point guard David Rivers, likely will be the highest-ranked of the Midwest's strong independents.

But Coach Joey Meyer's DePaul team, better adjusted to its young coach and stronger with 6-9 forward Dallas Comegys, figures to push the Irish for that distinction.

Notre Dame could be better than last season, when the Irish were 21-9, but a schedule that includes North Carolina, Duke, Louisiana State, Indiana and DePaul home-and-home might mask the improvement.

A lack of outside shooting hurt DePaul last season. Freshman Rodney Strickland could cushion the loss of point guard Kenny Patterson and solve the outside shooting woes.

University of Kentucky head basketball coach Eddie Sutton gives instruction to forward Winston Bennett (25) during a recent practice. Sutton hopes to keep the Wildcats winning with his "Three D's of success, Dedication, Discipline, and Defense."

ND ranked 12th in preseason poll

Associated Press

ATLANTA - Georgia Tech's No. 1 ranking in The Associated Press preseason college basketball poll is a double-edged sword because "a tremendous amount of pressure" comes with the recognition, Yellow Jackets Coach Bobby Cremins said Tuesday.

Georgia Tech got 28 first-place votes and 1,192 points from the nationwide panel of 63 sports writers and broadcasters to edge North Carolina for the top spot. Georgia Tech beat the Tar Heels 57-54 in the Atlantic Coast Conference tournament championship game last season.

Notre Dame, the only independent in the Top Twenty, was one of seven teams to receive first-place votes. The Irish finished 12th and received one vote for the top spot.

Georgia Tech and North Carolina were among five ACC teams placed in the Top Twenty. In third place was Michigan, one of two Big Ten teams in the Top Ten.

The Tar Heels got 13 first-place votes and 1,148 points. Michigan had 13 first-place votes and 1,141 points.

The No. 4 team was Syracuse, one of two Big East teams in the Top Ten, with 936 points. No. 5 was Kansas, with four first-place votes and 921 points.

The ACC's Duke got two first-place votes and 911 points for the sixth-place ranking, and Illinois of the Big Ten got one first-place vote and 847 points for seventh place.

Georgetown of the Big East, last year's national runner-up, got one first-place vote and 824 points for eighth; No. 9 Louisville of the Metro Conference had 687; and Auburn of the Southeastern Conference rounded out the Top Ten with 670.

Last year's national champion, Villanova, was not ranked, nor was St. John's, a fellow Big East school and Final Four participant. Both teams lost several key players to graduation.

Georgetown has been in the NCAA championship game three of the last four years, but now faces life without star center Patrick Ewing. The Hoyas were the top team in last year's preseason poll and held that spot for all but five weeks.

Canadiens score 3-2 win over Islanders

Associated Press

UNIONDALE, N.Y. - Rookies Stephane Richer and Kjell Dahlin scored a goal apiece and rookie Patrick Roy kicked out 26 shots Tuesday night to lead the Montreal Canadiens to a 3-2 National Hockey League victory over the New York Islanders.

Richer scored the only goal of the first period and Dahlin connected in the second to give the Canadiens a 2-0 lead. Roy made the lead stand up with some sharp saves in goal as Montreal extended its unbeaten streak to five games (3-0-2). The victory also snapped New York's four-game unbeaten streak.

Richer scored his ninth goal of the season when he knocked in a rebound, following a shot by Chris Nilan, from the side of the net at 12:08 of the first period.

Dahlin scored off a neat pass from Guy Carbonneau from in front of the net at 12:57 of the second period. The goal was the eighth of the season by Dahlin.

Pat Flatley's seventh goal of the season off a rebound of his own shot from inside the faceoff circle at the 15:07 mark of the second period trimmed Montreal's lead to a goal.

But Chris Chelios made it 3-1 on a wrist shot from inside the blue line on a power play at 5:42 of the final period.

John Tonelli scored his sixth goal of the season on a power play, with 37 seconds left in the game after the Islanders had pulled goalie Billy Smith. Mike Bossy and Bryan Trotter got assists.

THERE'S AN ARMY OF CHOICES OUT THERE.

It's not easy. Sometimes the number of choices you have seems mind-boggling. But sometimes, when you know what you want, freedom of choice is a great thing. Look at today's Army.

There's the Active Army and the Army Reserve. If you qualify for Active, you serve 2-4 years, choose from over 300 skills to train in, and in over 80 of those skills you could be eligible for up to $25,200 in college money.

If you already have a job or are in school, consider the Army Reserve. All it takes is one weekend a month and two weeks a year. Plus, you'll learn a useful skill and earn over $1,200 a year.

Both choices give you career experience, physical conditioning, new friends, good pay, and a chance to serve your country. It's all up to you. Call your local Army Recruiter.

Kansas City Royals pitcher Bret Saberhagen shows his style in the seventh game of the World Series against the St. Louis Cardinals on October 27, 1985. Saberhagen was chosen by the Baseball Writers Association as the 1985 Cy Young Award winner Monday.

Saberhagen outdistances Guidry to claim A.L. Cy Young Award

Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Mo. - Bret Saberhagen, who won two games for Kansas City in the Royals' World Series victory over the St. Louis Cardinals, Monday became the youngest pitcher in American League history to win the Cy Young Award.

"This is great for me and great for Kansas City," the 21-year-old right-hander said at a news conference.

Saberhagen, only three years out of high school in southern California, was earlier named the World Series' Most Valuable Player.

In his second year in the major leagues, Saberhagen posted a 20-6 record with an ERA of 2.87. With remarkable control and poise and sharp command of several pitches, he had 158 strikeouts and issued only 38 walks.

"An award like this is definitely a team award," he said. "If you don't have 25 guys fighting for you every time you go out there, then you don't have a chance."

Saberhagen's wife, Janeane, gave birth to their first child, Drew William, the day before Saberhagen pitched the Royals' 11-0 victory over St. Louis in the seventh game of the World Series. He admitted with a laugh that he may have trouble topping his storybook season next year.

"I guess all I can do is try to win 21 games, win three World Series games and have twins," he said with a laugh.

Saberhagen admitted that he was surprised at his big margin of victory in voting by members of the Baseball Writers Association of America. He was named on 27 of 28 ballots and received 23 first-place votes, gathering 127 points to 88 for runner-up Ron Guidry of the New York Yankees.

John Schuerholz, Royals general manager, appeared with Saberhagen at the news conference and admitted, "The success we've had this year is almost hard to comprehend."

"None of it would have been possible without a lot of hard working and dedicated players like Bret Saberhagen. We're very proud of him," Schuerholz said.

The right-hander said he planned to work hard in the off-season and come back a better pitcher next year.

"My curveball and my slider aren't where I want them to be," he said. "There's always room for improvement. Maybe I can put on a few pounds and throw the ball a little harder next year."

Saberhagen is the first Kansas City pitcher to win the award and only the fifth from the American League West. Saberhagen, who turned 21 on April 11, was the fifth youngest pitcher in major league history to win 20 games.

Guidry was the only pitcher named on all 28 ballots - two writers from each of the AL's 14 cities. Saberhagen was not selected by Ray Sosa of the Chicago Sun-Times, who had Minnesota's Bert Blyleven first, Royals reliever Dan Quisenberry second and Guidry third.

Saberhagen was the Royals' ace, leading Kansas City's charge to the AL west title, the American League pennant and World Series. He pitched complete games to win the third and seventh games of the Series, though his postseason achievements did not figure in the voting, which was conducted prior to the playoffs.

At one point, Saberhagen won seven consecutive decisions and had another five-game winning streak.

As a rookie in 1984, Saberhagen was 10-11.

Guidry, who won the award in 1978, was 22-6 with a 3.27 ERA, two shutouts in 11 complete games and 143 strikeouts in 259 innings this year.

Guidry, 35, rebounded from the worst season of his nine-year career - he was 10-11 in 1984 - to help the Yankees finish second in the AL East. He won six of his last seven starts and had a streak in which he won 12 straight decisions.

Blyleven, the league's strikeout leader with 206, was third with 9 points. He was a combined 17-16 with a 3.16 ERA for Cleveland and the Twins, to whom he was traded in August. Blyleven had one first-place vote and four for third.

Points were awarded on a 5-3-1 basis.

Others receiving votes were Quisenberry, Charlie Leibrandt of Kansas City, Doyle Alexander of Toronto, Britt Burns of Chicago, reliever Donnie Moore of California, Toronto's Dave Stieb, and Mike Moore of Seattle.

Christian's two goals spark Caps past Oilers

Associated Press

LANDOVER, MD. - Dave Christian scored two short-handed goals and Alan Haworth had a goal and an assist to power the Washington Capitals to a 5-2 National Hockey League victory over the Edmonton Oilers before a sellout crowd Tuesday night.

Haworth scored his 11th goal of the season at 2:09 of the first period, extending his NHL-leading consecutive-game goal-scoring streak to nine, a club record.

The 8-6-2 Capitals never lost that lead.

Mike Gartner got his 11th goal of the year at 10:12 of the opening period when Washington was a man down. The three short-handed goals broke a 10-year-old Washington club record.

Glenn Anderson brought the 11-3-1 Oilers to within a goal at 4:55 of the second period when he scored his 14th of the season.

Christian got the first of his short-handed goals at 2:30 of the third period, while the Capitals were a man short. Before the penalty expired, Wayne Gretzky again reduced the lead to a single goal, at 3:00.

Washington regained its two-goal margin when Bob Carpenter scored a power-play goal at 10:50 of the period, assisted by Haworth and Greg Adams.

Experienced offensive tackle

Perrino anchors veteran Irish line

By JOHN COYLE
Sports Writer

Notre Dame's Mike Perrino is a perfect example of a veteran player, whose poise and knowledge of the game can be a decisive factor in the final outcome. A strong tackle, Perrino is part of an all senior starting offensive line, which has been playing together for the last few years.

Experience can be the difference between winning and losing. It is the experienced athlete, such as Perrino, who plays best under pressure and is able to make the most of his ability, taking advantage of the opponent's weaknesses.

And with this offensive line, familiarity has not bred discontent, but rather, development of the players as a group. Perrino said he believes that the offensive front five have a distinct advantage over younger players in the crucial situations.

"We're a tight group, having played together the last few years. We work really well together," explains Perrino. "In the pressure situations, we don't get flustered. When it's fourth-and-two, we feel that's what we're here for, to get the job done."

The Elmhurst, Ill. resident has, indeed, been getting the job done during his career at Notre Dame. Perrino has played in 32 games, 28 of which he has started. Head offensive line coach Carl Selmer said he is confident of the abilities of the starting strong tackle.

"He's big and strong and a very good pass blocker. He's a smart player, who makes split second decisions at a very difficult position. He makes very quick adjustments, when the circumstances call for them," says Selmer.

Besides being an outstanding football player at York High School, the 6-5, 278 lb. senior was also an impressive wrestler. As a high school junior, Perrino was 31-4 and set a school record with 17 pins. He won the Illinois Wrestling Federation heavyweight title and also finished fifth in the U.S. Wrestling Federation, a national meet.

Rather than risk injury, the highly recruited Perrino did not compete in wrestling in his senior in high school year, but said that his football skills have benefitted from wrestling.

"Wrestling was a lot of fun, but I knew my future was in football. It did help, though, for body control and my physical development. It also gave me a sense of balance," noted Perrino.

On most teams, offensive linemen receive little credit for their efforts but at Notre Dame, Perrino said that linemen are more appreciated. He also said that the success of Allen Pinkett brings some personal satisfaction.

"At Notre Dame, almost everyone is in the spotlight. Also, blocking for Allen the last three years, I hope that I'm partly responsible for his success and that I've helped him achieve his records. Not everyone notices, but I know what I have done," explained Perrino.

The economics major has his sights set on Penn State this week as the Irish prepare to meet the number-one ranked team. Perrino said that the Nittany Lions must be wary of playing Notre Dame.

"This is what Notre Dame is known for, knocking off the number-one teams. This is the bread-and-butter of our season. We must play our game like we did last year."

"I can't believe they have improved that much and we have gotten worse. We have also improved a lot. There must be some doubt in their minds because it's basically the same teams as last year," notes Perrino.

Notre Dame will be counting on experienced players like Perrino to lead the Irish to victory.

The Observer/Hannes Hacker

Mike Perrino stands up a Purdue defensive lineman on a pass play earlier this season. Perrino and the rest of the experienced Irish offensive line have matured as a unit to provide tailback Allen Pinkett large holes in recent victories.

Lindbergh dead after tragic auto accident

Associated Press

STRATFORD, N.J. - The parents of hockey star Pelle Lindbergh said their goodbyes to their brain-dead son Tuesday after giving doctors permission to remove his organs for transplant donations.

Philadelphia Flyers team physician Edward Viner said that the organs probably would be removed "within the next 24 hours" but that Lindbergh's elderly parents wanted more time with their only son before allowing the operation to begin.

"Privately, they must hope there could be a miracle ... but they're anxious not to lose the potential of helping others," Viner said of the family's decision to donate Lindbergh's vital organs.

"From a purely medical point of view, he's been dead since 5:40 a.m. Sunday," said Viner, who described Lindbergh's existence as "a state of semi-living."

Sigge Lindbergh flew from Sweden Monday to his son's bedside, where the goaltender's mother, Anna-Lisa, and fiancée, Kerstin Pietzsch, have kept a vigil since the accident.

Lindbergh, 26, was legally drunk when he left an after-hours bar and drove his red Porsche 930 into a concrete wall in front of a Somerdale elementary school, authorities said.

Free agents negotiate

Associated Press

NEW YORK - Major league baseball's largest group of free agents had the opportunity to negotiate with any team starting Tuesday amid indications that club owners will hold the line on big salaries and long-term contracts.

Eleven players beat the Monday midnight deadline, bringing the total to 63, the biggest number to file since the process began in 1976.

As part of new labor contract reached in August, this marks the first year that players do not have to go through a re-entry draft, which limited each free agent's dealings to 13 teams.

Such teams as the Kansas City Royals, Texas Rangers, Cleveland Indians, Philadelphia Phillies, Los Angeles Dodgers, Montreal Expos, Chicago Cubs, Houston Astros and even the New York Yankees, to a smaller degree, have claimed they presently have no plans to enter the free agent market.

The last 11 players to file included Hal McRae, veteran designated hitter for the world champion Royals, and infielder Bobby Grich of California. The others were infielders Dickie Thon of Houston, Tony Perez of Cincinnati, Ivan DeJesus of St. Louis, Indians outfielder Benny Ayala, and pitchers Bruce Kison of Boston, Bart Johnson of the White Sox, Marty Bystrom of the Yankees, Mike Norris and Tommy John of Oakland.

The biggest prize is slugging outfielder Kirk Gibson, who made $685,000 last season and opted for free agency when the Tigers offered him a three-year deal.

Don Fehr, acting executive director of the Major League Players Association, said he is wary about the owners adopting a tougher policy on free agents.

"There's a new (free agent) system in effect now, and it's too early to tell if the owners are attempting to destroy it," he said.

George Steinbrenner, the Yankees owner, said, "This isn't collusion or anything remotely like that. It's just a matter of everybody getting disgusted with the way they've been conducting business, and I'm as guilty as anyone."

Dick Balderson, Mariners' vice president, said he isn't impressed by the available free agents this year.

"The quality out there is not the quality there was last year or in the past," he said.

Irish volleyball team drops match to Purdue

By KATHLEEN McKERNAN
Sports Writer

They had their moments. But unfortunately for the Irish women, those moments were not too long or too frequent, as Purdue easily defeated Notre Dame's volleyball team 15-7, 15-10, 15-9 last night at the ACC.

"We played well in spots, poorly in others," Notre Dame Head Coach Art Lambert said after the loss, "and with a team like Purdue you can't do that."

The Boilermakers, 16th-ranked in the nation proved to be too much for the inconsistent Irish.

Purdue's senior all-America candidate Marianne Smith paced their attack with 15 kills, while teammates Lisa Reichl and Kim Corwin contributed 12 and 11 respectively. While Notre Dame's Karen Sapp had 10 kills herself, the Irish hit for the paltry percentage of .153.

"Our middle killed us both on offense and defense," Coach Lambert admitted. "We couldn't take care of the quick stuff in the middle."

Notre Dame did have the momentum for brief periods in all three sets. They had the lead in the first set 6-2 at one point; they also managed to retain possession for as many as three or four points before losing the momentum to Purdue time outs and side outs.

Sapp's performance, Kathleen Morin's team leading 12 digs, and a strong effort from freshman Zanette Bennett kept Notre Dame in each game. Soon, however, Purdue brought in their own freshman as

Stanford makes finals with 1-0 win over Hogs

By KENT WELDON
Sports Writer

The torrential downpour of rain that stopped just before gametime soaked Cartier Field, but could not stop the Stanford soccer team as they pulled out a victory last night over Holy Cross, 1-0.

The Hogs had their backs to the wall as they could not afford to lose the finals of the loser's bracket, in order to meet Off-Campus in the championships.

The Hogs came out strong on the offensive in the first half dominating play.

"We had a lot of opportunities, but their defense played well. Their team would bend but would not break," said Holy Cross captain Frank Laughlin.

Both captains felt that the rain drenched turf affected the play of the teams as time after time players lost their footing.

The Studs could only muster two shots on goal in the first half, one of which was hit a post. But, three minutes into the second half Dave Stevenson knocked a Rob Zielinski throw-in past the Hog goalie.

"We played a sloppy first half, but put things together in the second half by scoring early. Both teams played a good game," said Stanford captain Jim Byrne.

The play of Bill Gannon, Kevin O'Brien, and Tim Kennessy, for the Hogs, was supported by a vocal Holy Cross crowd. The entire Stud defense is to be commended.

The Holy Cross team ends a solid season at 8-2. Stanford, at 8-1, can look forward to playing Off-Campus in the championships.

Prep seniors set to sign today

Special to The Observer

Today is the first day of the early signing period for high school seniors to sign the national letter-of-intent to play college basketball.

The Notre Dame men's team is expected to sign at least four players, all of which have previously given their verbal commitment to attend the University. The four are Joe Frederick, a 6-3 guard from Cincinnati; Scott Paddock, a 6-9 forward from Plantation, Fla.; Tony Jackson, a 6-6 forward from Weston, Conn.; and Keith Robinson, a 6-9 forward from Buffalo, N.Y.

The Irish women's team is not likely to have any signings today. Notre Dame coach Mary DiStanislao is still waiting to hear from two recruits and could find out their decisions today.

The early signing period runs through next Wednesday and will be followed by another in the spring.

Some policy changes needed in college athletics

Last Saturday, fate allowed college football a reprieve, but policy changes will be needed in order to repair the sad state of college athletics.

The Georgia Bulldogs - although having had a run-in or two with the NCAA themselves over violations - took the cause of justice into their game with the Florida Gators and emerged victorious, 24-3. This defeat forced the Gators out of their number-one spot in the Associated Press poll, a situation that had angered many.

You see, Florida has been proven guilty of violating over 100 NCAA rules in relation to its football program under former Head Coach Charley Pell. The Gators have broken the rules to get where they are now. Why should they be rewarded in any way?

They shouldn't be, and that is exactly what is wrong.

Although the Georgia victory will in all likelihood prevent the Gators - a team on probation - from winning the national championship in the AP poll, there was clearly a possibility of this happening beforehand. With only three more victories, Florida would have sat out a New Year's Day bowl because of sanctions against them, but almost certainly would have emerged as the national champion in that poll generally given most weight by those across the country.

Because of the violations, the Gators were placed on three years probation. They are not allowed to go to a bowl game, cannot win the SEC title and cannot be shown on television. This is all in addition to a reduction in the number of football scholarships the school can offer in the coming years. But this is still not enough punishment, because an analysis of the situation uncovers many parties that continue to gain despite the wrongdoings.

One can begin with the school itself. Although a school on probation is not allowed to appear in the UPI poll (voted on by coaches), the AP poll enforces no such rulings. Its position is to merely look at a team's record and its schedule, and to rank in accordance with those factors. If a team plays Division I college football, it has the opportunity to be ranked, whether on probation or not.

Eric Scheuermann

Assistant Sports Editor

Many do, as they should, disagree with that. A team that cheats should not be allowed to benefit from that action, as Florida does when it is allowed to finish high in the AP poll. In fact, the question comes up as to why the team should not be forced to disband for a certain time period. Florida's success now, at least in part possible because of past cheating, cannot help but lead to more success in the future.

"How long do we just keep grinning and patting the kids on the back and hurting college football?" asked Douglas Looney of Sports Illustrated. "Something must be changed."

Only harsher penalties will help to end the constant cheating that goes on. If a school and boosters of that school know that the school could conceivably lose its program if infractions are discovered, you can be sure they will be less likely to risk anything.

Galen Hall, head coach of the Gators since Pell's ouster last year, also benefits a bit from the situation. Florida boast a 15-1-1 record under Hall, and has been labeled a genius by fellow coaches. But the fact remains - even if the cheating has stopped under Hall - that there are players helping the Gators win today that are only there because of recruiting violations.

And before one passes Hall off as the white knight in this fiasco, it is interesting to note that not only was he an assistant under Pell at the time of the violations, but he was also an assistant under Barry Switzer at Oklahoma in 1974. That year's Sooner team was, strangely enough, the last team on NCAA probation to win a national championship.

Finally, perhaps the biggest gainers in this mockery of college athletics are those players receiving the illegal payments to attend a certain school. At this point, athletes risk absolutely nothing by accepting payments. Even if the violation is discovered, the player is not punished.

Thus, a player receives the best of both worlds. He can be "taken care of" by his school, without worrying about anything happening if the school is found out. Many athletes that received payments at Florida are still playing for the Gators, with chances to advance to professional football.

"The same athletes involved in violations are the same ones getting pro contracts," said Notre Dame head basketball coach Digger Phelps. "Take away their eligibility based on the extent of the infraction and see what happens."

It is not hard to see what would happen. If a star athlete knew his college athletic eligibility would be taken away if he was found accepting payments, he would be less likely to accept this money. After all, it is usually an athlete's performance in college sports that leads to a professional career.

It does "take two to tango." This way, the athlete would be punished as well as the school.

Last week, a tradition-filled basketball program also was under seige. Reports published in the Lexington Herald-Leader alleged widespread violations of rules in the Kentucky basketball program during former coach Joe B. Hall's 13-year tenure.

The way the Wildcat fans reacted to the reports is an example of what is wrong with college sports. It is the opinion that cheating is fine because the risk of such action is so low. The benefits to be received far outweigh costs that will most probably never be felt.

"I've been bred here like a fine horse," said Wildcat supporter Mrs. Coburn Cashman, "and if I want to give them a thousand dollars, if I want to give them a car, so be it. If the boosters are going to give (the players) something, that's great. I think those boys work their tails off."

That is the attitude that must be changed in college athletics.
