Leprechaun attacked by cadets

By CELESTE FREIND
News Staff

At the Air Force game Oct. 17, Leprechaun Brian Stark learned the occupational hazards that come with the job of mascot to the Fighting Irish.

A group of approximately twenty cadets pounced upon the unsuspecting Leprechaun, hoping to capture him and pass the mascot up through the Air Force stands.

The Leprechaun, showing his fighting spirit, refused to cooperate and fended off the cadets with the help of the male cheerleaders and security guards.

Remarking on the unprovoked attack, Stark said, "Actually I would love to be passed up in our stadium, but I'll be damned if opposing fans are going to embarrass or debase either our team, our mascot, or any symbol of Notre Dame."

Stark claimed that it is a tradition at the Air Force Academy to embarrass and harass the other team's mascot, and he refused to have Notre Dame look bad.

In a similar incident that afternoon an Air Force cadet attempted to steal a flag from the Irish sidelines. While fighting to retrieve the flag, the Leprechaun was hit in the nose by a cadet and had to be treated by a trainer to stop the bleeding. The trouble, however, didn't end there.

As Stark was being attended to by the trainer, another cadet blind-sided the Leprechaun, sending him into an aluminum bench.

"What ticks me off most about it," said Stark, "was not that I got hurt; that's part of being a mascot, but rather the fact that I had a game to cheer for, and that's serious business to me. It's important to me to pay attention to the team and the fans, and after a while the attacks made that difficult to do."

Soviets say Gorbachev is ready for summit

Associated Press

MOSCOW - Mikhail Gorbachev is ready to visit Washington this year and sign an agreement scrapping medium-range nuclear missiles without a link to restrictions in the "Star Wars" system, Soviet officials said Tuesday.

"We have no doubt that an agreement relating to intermediate-range missiles and shorter-range missiles will be signed," Foreign Ministry spokesman Boris Pyadyshev said at a regularly scheduled news briefing.

In Washington, a U.S. official said Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze would visit the U.S. capital, by Soviet request, at the end of the week to discuss a third meeting between the Soviet leader and President Reagan.

ND investments hurt in market

BY LIZ PANZICA
Copy Editor

The loss Notre Dame's endowment suffered because of the drop in the stock market last week was not as great as it might have been, according to Father Richard Zang, investment officer of the University.

The University had decreased the percentage of the endowment in the market in recent months, he said.

"We had a portion of the endowment in the market, and it suffered along with the market," he said.

The University stock had experienced major growth in the recent bull market, but the drop "wiped out about one year's worth of growth out of the five years," said Zang.

Zang could not specify the exact dollar amount lost.

The University has suffered a paper loss because the market value of the stocks it holds has decreased.

However, Zang said, "generally speaking our investment managers feel they want to retain our investments." Zang said the principle of the stocks will fluctuate, but University holdings remain the same.

Despite the stocks loss of market value, the University "income remains the same off the dividends," said Zang.

"There is concern (over the loss) but the endowment was positioned in a defensive way so we have not lost as much as the market," he said, adding that in the last year and a half the University increased investments in bonds and decreased their investments in common stocks.

The University invests in between 75 and 50 percent of the endowment in the stock market.

According to Zang, the University had only about 50 percent in the market at the time of the drop last week. Zang said in early 1980 the University was at a high point with 75 percent of the endowment invested in the stock market. Zang said that the market then became too full priced and risky for University investment managers, and they gradually reduced the stock allocation in late 1986.

The drop on the stock market has led to gains in other University investments, Zang said.

Zang said that the University increased investment in government bonds while reducing stock allocations. Because of the unstable stock market "the price of government bonds have been bid up," said Zang.

The University Investment Committee will meet Nov. 12 and decide what action, if any will be taken because of the loss.

Zang said, "All economists are reappraising the growth." But, Zang said, "most of the invested funds are sturdy long term investments."

HPC hears plans for student-faculty interaction

By KRISTIN COLLIGAN

Professor Tom Schwartz and Father David Tyson announced plans to better integrate the academic and residential lives of Notre Dame students at the Hall Presidents' Council meeting Tuesday night.

Tyson, vice president of student affairs, explained that the administration would like to achieve the "goal of the betterment of student life" through programs to develop residential life.

To help achieve this goal the College of Arts and Letters has appointed Schwartz to the newly-created position of College Fellow. This position is designed "to enrich the undergraduate life of the on-campus Notre Dame student" through student-faculty interaction.

Schwartz described a Hall Fellow's program which would involve each dorm working with six or seven faculty members from any of the colleges of the University on a regular basis.

Activities would be up to the dorms, but Schwartz suggested that dorms could sponsor informal discussions, seminars, lectures or social events with faculty members. "The College would like to get the faculty and students in touch with each other," Schwartz said.

Tyson urged participation in the Hall Fellow's program and expressed the intentions of the Office of Student Affairs to "expand residentiality over the entire campus."

Another effort to "bridge the gap between student and academic life" is being undertaken by the Alcohol Task Force.

Tyson said the task force is currently investigating the effect of alcohol on the "wellness and health of the Notre Dame community."

Tyson emphasized that the Alcohol Task Force is not a

Appreciate the Mestrovic masterpieces in our midst

I couldn't help but feel Ivan Mestrovic's ghost hovering over Notre Dame when I first visited the campus some four years ago.

I had listened to Mestrovic stories from as long as I could remember. The artist was born in my grandparents' Croatian homeland to parents who instilled within him a love of God and country that he translated into a lifetime of art, much of which he shared with Notre Dame.

Mestrovic is an artist whom Rodin called "the greatest phenomenon amongst sculptors." He is honored and respected all over the world for his religious and nationalistic art. But there are Notre Dame students living in the midst of the largest American Mestrovic collection who don't even know who Mestrovic is.

"Maestro," as he was called during his tenure at Notre Dame, was a short but strong, bearded man with deep, black eyes. His Slavic work ethic kept him working long, intense days. "I long ago vowed that I would work up to my last day," Mestrovic had vowed. He was working in his Snite studio on the January day in 1962 when he died.

"Maestro" was enticed by then Notre Dame President Father Theodore Hesburgh to leave Syracuse University and come to Notre Dame in 1955.

Mestrovic had already been a legend in the international art scene. In 1915, he became the first living artist to be honored with an exhibiton at the Victoria and Albert Museum in London, and in 1947, he repeated his success, breaking a seventy-five year tradition by having his exhibition run at the Metropolitan Museum of Art while he was still living.

Mestrovic and Hesburgh both thought Notre Dame would be the ideal environment where the artist could continue his art and where it could be appreciated because of the "religious sense" of the campus.

South Bend is a long way from the tiny village of Vrpolje, Croatia, where Mestrovic was born in 1883.

When I visited Vrpolje, nestled in the heart of pastoral Slavonia, I decided that the countryside is colorful enough to have inspired a Monet. But I realized then that it had inspired someone just as important.

Mestrovic emigrated from his homeland after the painful Croatian struggle against Yugoslav communism. But he never ignored the plight of his people. He dedicated the remainder of his life and art to the peaceful tradition of his people.

He shared the work of his late years with the Notre Dame community. "Christ And The Samaritan Woman At Jacob's Well," more commonly referred to as the fountains in front of O'Shaughnessy Hall, is one of the most visible of Mestrovic's Notre Dame works. The "Pieta" in Sacred Heart Church, "The Last Supper" in the North Dining Hall, and "Moses" at the Hesburgh Library are among the most popular of his Notre Dame works. His former studio, in the Snite museum, houses some of the artist's smaller sculptures.

This year the University purchased the remainder of Mestrovic's art from his estate. Directors at the Snite are planning on integrating more of his works around campus so that it can be appreciated by a wider audience.

Mestrovic translated his staunch principles into his art, creating a legacy which Notre Dame is privileged to know.

He had hoped that the Notre Dame community would appreciate the legacy he left here. But unfortunately, amid new architecture and ideas, Mestrovic's art often goes unnoticed by those who live right in its midst.

The October backdrop cradles the Mestrovic art with the intensity of a Notre Dame autumn. Now is a good time for students of life and art to appreciate the work of one of our own.

Candygrams and bazaar planned by SMC board

By CHRISTINE MCCANN

Saint Mary's Board of Governance opened its meeting Tuesday night on a festive note, with the discussion of Halloween candygrams and the annual Christmas Bazaar.

Vice-president Smith Hashagen said that Student Government will sponsor a candygram sale today and Thursday. The candygrams cost fifty cents each and will be delivered on to students at both Saint Mary's and Notre Dame on Thursday and Friday.

Hashagen added, "It's really a nice thing to do for your friends, for a small price. We hope you all take advantage of it, and encourage your friends as well."

The annual Christmas Bazaar, chaired by Mary Carol Cahill, is still in the planning stages. The event is slated to run from Dec. 7 through Dec. 11, and will feature the sale of a variety of holiday treats and gift ideas.

The Board is also planning a Pool Party which will take place in the Regina Hall Pool. Planned are kick-board races, diving for pennies, and a belly-flop contest.

In other business, a Gripe Night is planned for Sunday, Nov. 1. This will give students an opportunity to express their opinions and complaints to representatives of the Board of Governance.

A table will be set up at the sundae bar during the dinner hour.

Stock prices make tentative rise

Associated Press

NEW YORK - Stock prices rose $37 billion on Wall Street Tuesday as earlier gains in Asian and European markets encouraged investors to shift some money back into the jittery stock market.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which on Monday lost nearly 157 points in its second-worst point decline ever, reversed course and rose 52.56 points to 1,846.49.

Nine stocks rose for every eight that fell in price.

Euphoria from higher prices in Tokyo and Hong Kong sparked a quick rally in New York, sending the Dow average soaring nearly 90 points in early trading.

But traders chipped away at the advance as the day wore on, selling stocks that had made gains during the morning. The Dow slipped to a gain of about 29 points shortly after noon before regaining ground later.

The rush of money out of stocks and into bonds slowed on Tuesday, with some money heading back into equities, breaking a trend that had helped depress stock prices since the devastating 508-point drop in the Dow on Oct. 19.

Another factor pushing the Dow higher was an announcement by International Business Machines that it would spend an additional $1 billion to buy back its own stock. IBM, one of the 30 companies in the Dow average, rose $6.50 a share to $118.50.

The market paid scant attention to news from Washington that orders to factories for "big ticket" durable goods rose 1.1 percent in September, the first increase since June.

The biggest problem facing Wall Street, analysts said, remains a lack of confidence, both in the market itself after last week's $500 billion collapse and in the ability of the White House and Congress to trim the federal budget deficit.

"Until we get something really concrete (on the budget), people are going to be doubtful," said Ralph Acampora, an analyst with Kidder Peabody & Co. He warned, "The market will wait for no man."

In Washington, President Reagan and congressional leaders were optimistic negotiations would result in a plan to cut the deficit. Reagan said Tuesday the stock market plunge "has alerted us of potential dangers on the economic horizon."

It was a lack of trust that caused prices to slip from their early gains Tuesday, the analysts said.

"There has to be some light at the end of the tunnel or some confidence that the markets will stabilize," said Hugh Johnson, a senior vice president with First Albany Corp.

The shift from bonds to stocks caused bond prices to drop sharply, with the Treasury's 30-year issue off about $18.75 per $1,000 in face value. Its yield, which moves in the opposite direction of its price, jumped to 9.07 percent, from 8.90 percent late Monday.

The Task Force will be holding forums in several residential halls the week of November 9th to the 15th.

Student Body President Pat Cooke, a member of the Alcohol Task Force, encouraged students to attend these meetings, stating "we want to get input from a wide cross-section of people."

The Student Union Board announced plans for the upcoming Navy game.

The students are all being asked to wear green for the game, and each room will receive a poster of the Leprechaun for their window. The SUB asks that everyone display the posters to show alumni the Notre Dame school spirit.

Stark mentioned that the incident was ironic when just the week before he had said in Blue and Gold Illustrated, "The Leprechaun this year has a profound respect for Notre Dame and NO ONE is going to embarrass the Leprechaun in Notre Dame stadium or anywhere else. There is no sacrifice too great when Notre Dame pride is on the line."

The Leprechaun believed that he sacrificed no quarter to the cadets and in doing so preserved the pride of The Fightin' Irish.

Stark claimed, "The bottom line is that the cheerleaders and team lived up to the pride and spirit of Notre Dame. After all, we won."

Insurance bill to pass

Associated Press

WASHINGTON -The Senate worked toward passage Tuesday of a catastrophic health insurance bill to protect America's elderly against the devastating costs of serious illness.

Debate leading to votes on a handful of amendments and the bill itself came after weeks of behind-the-scenes negotiations that gained White House support for a compromise version that closely tracks basic provisions of House-passed legislation, but contains important cost-containment provisions for a new prescription drug benefit.

That administration support -coupled with the already wide bipartisan backing for the measure -assured eventual passage.

However, Senate rules allowing unlimited debate left uncertain when the floor vote would come on the measure, which was approved unanimously by the Senate Finance Committee last summer.

Moreover, differences between the House and Senate versions made inevitable the need for a conference committee to work out final details.

But the eventual parameters of the basic benefit and financing package that eventually will emerge from those House-Senate negotiations -as well as the virtual certainty that some legislation will be passed and signed by President Reagan -came into focus with word that the administration supports the compromise.

Talks to reduce deficit begin

Associated Press

WASHINGTON - Pledging to leave politics at the door, negotiators for Congress and the Reagan administration began searching Tuesday for a mixture of tax increases and spending cuts that would reduce the federal budget deficit enough to pacify world financial markets.

President Reagan said the volatile financial markets are signals of potential dangers for the economy. "Anyone who doubted that these threats to our future growth were serious should have been set straight in the last couple of weeks," he said in a written statement.

"We owe it to the nation to get the job done," the president added.

Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd said successful deficit-reduction negotiations would "show that the two parties can work together and that the government can respond to the need."

"I just hope the action is bold enough and soon enough to reassure the markets and the American people," added Senate Republican Leader Bob Dole. But he agreed that political differences among negotiators would be put aside; "We'll leave politics at the door," he said.

Workers prepared the Capitol's LBJ room for the sessions by wheeling out several round tables and replacing them with a square model.

Democratic and Republican leaders in the Senate and House named 14 members to negotiate on behalf of Congress.

Treasury Secretary James Baker heads the administration team that includes White House Staff Chief Howaru Baker and James Miller, director of the Office of Management and Budget.

Whatever the negotiators come up with will be subject to approval by both houses of Congress and the president.

Byrd said the starting point for the talks should be a deficit-reduction bill awaiting final action in the House on Thursday.

Scientists promised freedom

Associated Press

BEIJING -Chinese leaders are determined to uphold intellectual freedom and increase financial rewards to scientists who are needed to modernize the nation, a government official said Tuesday.

Song Jian, the minister for science and technology, spoke at a news conference for the approximately 400 foreign and Chinese reporters gathered to cover the first Chinese Communist Party congress in five years.

The beginning of the news conference was briefly disrupted by the arrival of a reporter from Taiwan, the fourth to defy his government's ban on travel to the mainland.

Congress meetings have been closed since the opening session Sunday, and the official media issued only sketchy reports on the activities of the nearly 2,000 delegates inside the Great Hall of the People.

The Xinhua News Agency said delegates began Tuesday to approve lists of candidates for the new 209-seat party Central Committee, which generally meets annually to set policy.

The congress and Central Committee meeting are expected to replace aging, conservative officials with younger, development-minded technocrats who recognize the need to stabilize policies toward intellectuals.

Song was asked repeatedly how China can expect its scientists to work for national development when they have suffered repeated persecution during leftist campaigns throughout the country's 38-year history.

"It is true that some intellectuals... were greatly wronged during the Cultural Revolution," Song said, referring to the 1966-76 era of extreme leftist rule. "We, including myself, all suffered from that period, and we are sure that what happened then will not recur in China."

He insisted that intellectuals faced no discrimination in a state dedicated to peasants and workers, and said the Central Committee planned to adopt unspecified measures to improve the living and working conditions of intellectuals.

Representatives from 46 MBA schools will be available to speak to students about the programs at their respective schools at the annual MBA Mini-Forum sponsored by Career and Placement Services. The forum is planned as an informal, informational day and will be held Thursday from 12 to 4 p.m. at the Center for Continuing Education, said Jeff Rice, assistant director of Career and Placement Services.

Students of all majors who are considering MBA school or who want to get more information on this alternative are encouraged to attend.

The purpose of this forum is to enable students to learn all their options so that they can make knowledgeable decisions about careers and higher education. Many students are unaware of deferred admissions or special programs such as combined law and business degrees offered by different MBA schools, added Rice.

Students attending the forum will have the opportunity to speak with representatives from a variety of schools including Duke University, Indiana University-Bloomington, University of Michigan, Northwestern University, and University of Southern California.

"Most MBA schools are highly selective," said Rice, "however, they are looking for individuals with the talent to successfully complete their program, not a student of a specific major."

Students from 25 area schools in Michigan, Illinois, Indiana, and Ohio have been invited to attend the forum as well. Attendance this year is expected to match or exceed last year's attendance of approximately 200 students.

Iraq: Iranian tanker raided

Associated Press

KUWAIT -Iraq said its warplanes raided a tanker in Iranian waters Tuesday night in the campaign to destroy the oil exports that finance its enemy's war effort.

A brief military communique issued in Baghdad said the planes attacked a "large naval target off the Iranian coast," the customary reference to a tanker, shortly after 7 p.m. It did not identify the vessel and shipping sources in the Persian Gulf could not confirm the claim immediately.

In Kuwait, which has been hit recently by three Iranian missiles and a terrorist bombing, an official was quoted as saying civilians will be trained to help defend the sheikdom.

Preventing attacks by Iranian-trained saboteurs appears to be the plan's main objective. Iran, which has been at war with Iraq since September 1980, accuses Kuwait of supporting its adversary.

The 13th convoy of Navy ships and U.S.-registered Kuwaiti tankers moved up the gulf Tuesday to the home anchorage, where three Silkworm missiles fired in a week hit two tankers and a major oil-loading facility.

Shipping officials in Kuwait said the convoy was in the central gulf but did not know its precise position. An official of the state-run Kuwait Oil Tanker Co. said: "we will not comment on tanker movements."

Iraq said earlier in the day that its air force made a "successful and effective raid" on the Agha Jari oil field in southwestern Iran. Iran said one plane was shot down.

Reagan administration officials in Washington said that, despite China's denial of arms deals with Iran, a shipload of Chinese-made artillery shells was delivered in the past week and the two countries may be close to another sale of Silkworm anti-ship missiles.

Hussein Musavi, the Iranian prime minister, said in Tehran that his country's economy will not be affected by a ban on U.S. imports of Iranian goods that President Reagan ordered Monday. Reagan also prohibited some exports to Iran because of "continued and increasingly bellicose behavior of the Iranian government."

Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency, monitored in Cyprus, quoted Musavi as saying: "Reagan's act is another stunt and a futile bid to save his lost dignity both inside and outside the United States."

Col. Khalid al-Quoud, Kuwait's civil defense director, was quoted Tuesday in the English-language Kuwait Times as saying military training of volunteers would begin next week.

S. Korea gets new constitution

Associated Press

SEOUL, South Korea -South Korean voters overwhelmingly approved a new constitution

Tuesday, establishing direct presidential elections and other democratic reforms demanded in massive anti-government riots last summer.

Riot police in downtown Seoul battled protesters who urged voters to boycott the referendum. Police said about 40 demonstrators were arrested.

In another political development Wednesday, Kim Dae-Jung formally split the South Korean opposition by announcing his candidacy for president.

Election officials declared the referendum approved early Wednesday. The approval rate was 93 percent with nearly all the ballots counted; only a simple majority was needed.

Officials said 80 percent of the country's 25.6 million eligible voters cast ballots.

The constitution reduces the power of the presidency and increases the authority of the legislature and the judiciary.

President Chun Doo-Hwan, who took power with military backing in 1980, bowed to opposition demands for reforms in July and announced that he would step down when his term ends Feb. 25.

In addition to Kim Dae-Jung, vying for the presidency are rival opposition leader Kim Young-Sam, government candidate Roh Tae-Woo and former prime minister Kim Jong-Pil are campaigning to succeed Chun.

Kim Dae-Jung told reporters he had no choice but to run because of the expectations of his followers. "I have confirmed that the overwhelming majority of our people support me enthusiastically," he said.

Opposition supporters had been trying to get Kim Dae-Jung and Kim Young-Sam, the RDP president, to keep their earlier promises that just one of them would run, but they both refused to abandon their presidential ambitions.

The opposition fears the candidacies of the two Kims will split the opposition vote during the mid-December election and boost the chances of Roh.

South Korean newspapers announced the referendum results in banner headlines in Wednesday editions. News reports said the government would accept the constitution Friday after final vote tabulations.

Making economic sense of market chaos

Almost everyone is thinking and wondering about last week's stock market crash. Economists are supposed to have explanations. I am learning economics but my understanding comes mainly from gut feelings I've been carrying around ever since the Reagan revolution began. We use a great deal of common sense in making economic decisions in our personal lives. Why can't we apply that same common sense to national economics? Let me attempt to draw a few parallels here.

David Carrier

guest column

Consider for a minute personal finances. The most basic reality is that we never seem to have enough money. So we're forced to make some hard choices. We might spend it all on one thing. But we have many needs and wants, making it more sensible to spread it around, satisfying as many of them as possible. If we put it all in one item and that item falls out the window, we won't be very happy.

We can increase our limit by borrowing, if the banker is confident we can pay it back. If we can't, there will be a great deal more interest to pay, and that cuts into spending on other things we'd rather have. When you can't repay right away, one good way is to pay tuition. It's making an investment, one that enhances competitiveness and productivity, and therefore the ability to pay back loans and otherwise make a contribution to society. However, if someone were to use an educational loan to buy beer or a car and could not pay for tuition, we'd think he or she made a serious error of judgement. In fact, we would predict a dim future for that individual when he or she had to drop out of school.

Reaganomics has been a nightmarish combination of the above bad choices—all for the sake of a good party.

First, President Reagan refused to acknowledge there was a limit to what we could spend. A government has the option of printing money, but that's inflationary. So he borrowed heavily while cutting taxes, figuring new investment would carry the day. To top it off, he did this during a recovery, normally a time when one would pay old debts and stash a bit of a surplus. He quadrupled spending in six years, exceeding the amount of debt incurred by all previous administrations combined. A substantial portion of it was financed by foreigners whose confidence or political sympathies could change at any time. They could take it all home again tomorrow.

The budget and trade deficits are only part of the story. Like the prodigal student, once we had the money we made a serious error of judgement and spent it in a very ridiculous way. Huge segments of the population never saw any of it. Ask people in the middle or lower economic classes, or who are living in the geographical area between the two coasts whether or not they felt the Reagan recovery. Farmers, factory and service workers, women, and minorities have all seen layoffs, declining wages, and broken dreams. Who really recovered?

Think about it. At the consumption end, wealth ended up in the hands of the already wealthy. They bought Mercedes' (not Cadillacs), stocks, Ferris, expensive real estate, stocks, overseas bank accounts and vacation homes, trips to Paris, and still more stocks. Had we spread it around, it might have had a better multiplier effect, benefitting many more individuals and communities here at home. But we spent it in large clumps on people who already had more than they could use effectively. Too much of it went overseas and into the stock market. Then one day a half-trillion dollars fell out of the window. Whoops!

How about the government part of the equation? Some spend their money on education, health, job creation, public transportation, infrastructure, research on foreign markets and new products, and facilitation of exports. In this way they cooperate with industry and people in a way that enhances productivity and therefore, their competitive edge in the world.

The U.S., on the other hand, has seen an erosion of this type of support. Instead, we've spent it all on what President Eisenhower thought was the single greatest threat to our national security—the military-industrial complex. Nothing has a greater capacity for sucking wealth from the economy. The diversion of resources includes research, scientists, technology, and whole industries in addition to investment. And it has a few very expensive toys to show for it all. Do you know anyone with an X-ray laser? Would you know how to use one? Star Wars doesn't even exist yet and it's eaten billions.

In contrast, infrastructure such as a subway system serves many people and businesses for many years. It employs many workers in its construction, maintenance, and operations. We can dig miles of tunnels and lay as much track for what it costs to build a B-1 bomber. We can even use the subway and feel good about it!

What about our ability to repay the debt that financed it all? The largest portion of that debt is interest payments. As we curtail spending, that percentage will increase exponentially and little will remain for other things. Since we've made miniscule contributions to productivity, our ability to make money hasn't increased along with the debt. We'll be spending so much on interest and so little on production a recession is inevitable. Our position will look much like Latin America's does today.

Finally, on the investment side, we have corporations. How have they contributed to future productivity and competitiveness? The best measure we have is the trade balance, which has fallen through the floor and shows no sign of recovery. Apparently the other industrialized countries don't want more of our goods at any price. We might interest third world buyers, but they entered their depression years ago. They can't buy our products when they're spending their foreign exchange on debt repayment. The best we can hope for from them is that they don't default now.

When I look at what corporations have done with their increased wealth, I see nothing but fattened executive salaries and mergers and takeovers. I don't see new investments in machinery, retraining for employees, exciting new products, higher export sales, or increased cooperation with labor. They know they've neglected investments in tangible capital and human assets in favor of paper acquisitions. It's no wonder they've demonstrated such a lack of confidence in continued growth.

Why did the stock market crash? Inflation, high interest rates, and the threat of war in the Middle East are merely triggers. We've seen them before and they did not produce a crash, much less a depression. We've even seen budget and trade deficits before. So I don't believe this "correction" necessarily signals impending doom. I hope it doesn't have to come to that.

Nevertheless, important actors in the financial markets have an awareness of underlying weaknesses in the economy that they're responding to. They see overvalued stocks, uncompetitiveness in the face of a huge trade deficit, and declining productivity concurrent with the largest budget deficit ever. They see an impending flight of foreigner's dollar holdings if our currency devalues further. They'd like to see something done about it, and instead we have a president who denies anything is wrong and continues to spend on the most inefficient industry in America.

I'd feel a lot better about the crash if I thought we had increased our real economic strength over the last seven years. Instead we have a paper value of American companies that's artificially high and an ability to repay our debt that's frighteningly weak. I have a feeling the difference between them is how far we could fall.

Paper wealth has a very scary property. When you set a match to it, it goes up in flames. Last Monday the match was lit. We might be able to put it out with drastic reductions in spending and by making tangible contributions to our productive strength and competitiveness. If we don't solve these problems, maybe we'll be able to borrow or hyperinflate our way out, no one really knows.

We do know what could happen if we go on as if nothing's wrong, as they did in 1929. History will very likely repeat itself—because we failed to learn from it.

David Carrier is a graduate student in Economics.

New Love and Rockets LP fires out of sight

accent writer

Wow! The new Love and Rockets album Earth-Sun-Moon hasn't left my turntable since it came out, and each time I hear it, I catch another new shade of meaning. Understatement and experimentation are woven throughout the lyrics of these twelve new tracks by the English trio. Unbelievably, the listener is not completely lost as the songs unfold and run away and come back.

Yes this album is typical Love and Rockets, but it is important to understand that what is typical of this fantastic band is atypical of the music world. Consider these lyrics: "When you're up, it's a long way down. When you're down, it's a long way up."

During this song, entitled "No New Tale To Tell," David J sings these words in such a way that their powerful meaning isn't stressed. In a unique move, the band leaves it to the listener to delve into the nuances and shadowed depths of the song by himself. Thus, the meanings become very individual and personal for each listener. This is true artistic expression and it shows.

For those who aren't fanatics already, here's a little history of Love and Rockets. In the beginning there was Bauhaus: four members, many albums, and much popularity and influence in England and worldwide. Then, in 1983, there was a breakup, and from the debris of Bauhaus emerged Tones On Tail.

The music of Tones On Tail was a little weirder than Bauhaus, but in the same dark and moody vein. In 1984 Tones On Tail produced The Album Pop, which was really a culmination for the band. It contained their huge club and cult hit "Go!".

The Tones On Tail band/project eventually drifted off, and in 1985 a new group released an import album strangely titled Seventh Dream of Teenage Heaven. This new group was Love and Rockets. Its members had been the core of Bauhaus and Tones On Tail all along, so another collaboration was almost guaranteed and certainly welcomed.

David J on vocals and bass, Daniel Ash on vocals and guitar, and Kevin Haskins on drums produced a magnificent "debut" as Love and Rockets. Songs like "Haunted When the Minutes Drag," "A Private Future," and "Ball of Confusion" (available on the first pressings) are virtual masterpieces of acoustics and vocals working together to create different moods. Calmness, frenzy, and crashes are all present on this first album. The lyrics are quite incredible as well.

The year 1986 brought a domestic contract with Big Time Records in the U.S., and Express, the second release for L&R. This album was more pop, and seemed a little unfinished, but was still way ahead of most other bands that year. "All In My Mind" was the first single and was less acoustic and more upbeat. Some critics claimed that the band had sold out, but now Earth-Sun-Moon disproves that claim.

The band is not afraid to take chances and experiment. They don't take themselves too seriously either, as the cut "Lazy" shows. The first single is "No New Tale To Tell," and it rocks out. The video is unique and a little bizarre, but so is this band. Other choice cuts to hear are "Mirror People" and "Waiting For the Flood." Really though, there is not a weak song on the entire album. All in all, a great album by a great band.

Energetic Def Leppard is truly 'animal'

MARK NEMEC
accent writer

The Observer / Dave Fischer

Bass guitarist Rick Savage unleashes in animalistic fashion as Def Leppard rocked the ACC last night. After a three-year absence, the group returned to the concert scene with a roar on its current tour.

Def Leppard's lead singer Joe Elliot stated last night, "In the immortal words of Robert Plant, 'It's been a long time since we rocked and rolled.'" Truer words were never spoken.

When last seen, this band was riding high on their Pyromania album and tour. After the auto accident of drummer Rick Allen and the subsequent amputation of his left arm, however, the band fell on hard times. Now, after three years, Def Leppard is back with their new album Hysteria, and the tour rocked and rolled into the ACC last night.

Hysteria, a one hour compilation of twelve new songs, has come under fire by some critics, including myself, as being too mellow and mainstream. During the entire 90-minute concert, however, they sang only five of their new songs. And the crowd did not mind one bit.

Opening band Tesla took the stage at exactly 7:30, a surprise to everyone, and started the night well. This band from northern California is one to watch for the future. They have a no glitz, all guts style to their music; and for a new band, they sounded sharp. This band has much potential, and with time and experience, they could be one of rock's top acts. They used the in-the-round format well for forty-five minutes straight and got the crowd rocking.

After a thirty-five minute intermission, the lights dimmed, and Clint Eastwood's famous "Do you feel lucky" speech boomed through the speakers. Def Leppard took the stage to "Stage Fright" and "Rock, Rock til You Drop", both from Pyromania. They slowed it down a bit with "Women" the first song off Hysteria, then went back to the old with "Hit and Run" and "Too Late for Love."

The next song up was the title track "Hysteria," accompanied by an incredible laser show that looked awesome off the dome of the ACC. The lasers kept blazing through the next three songs, "Gods of War", "Dig Hard the Hunter", and an extended version of their old classic "Bringing on the Heartbreak".

The last set started with "Foolin'," continued with the new "Animal" and, for the food fanatic, "Pour Some Sugar on Me." It ended with "Let It Go" and an extended version of "Rock of Ages".

The concert flowed very smoothly, and even after a three year hiatus, Def Leppard still has what it takes to bring a crowd to its feet. Elliot can still belt out those high notes, and guitarists Phil Collen and Steve Clark, along with bassist Rick Savage, sounded incredible.

But the effort was most evident in Allen, who, with only one arm, never missed a beat. He performed with three snare pedals at his left foot, a bass pedal at his right foot, and cymbals and more drums for his right hand.

The band ended with "Photograph" and "Good Golly Miss Molly" as an encore. Here's hoping Def Leppard puts as much energy into their next album as they did on stage last night.

Irish move to ninth; top six unchanged in AP Poll

Associated Press

The Notre Dame football team jumped one place in the Associated Press College Poll, moving from tenth to ninth after Saturday's victory over Southern Cal.

The top six teams remained the same in this week's poll, while Michigan fell out for the second time in three weeks.

Top-rated Oklahoma's 24-6 victory over Colorado earned the Sooners 40 of 60 first-place votes and 1,176 of a possible 1,200 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and sportscasters.

Nebraska, a 56-3 winner over Kansas State, received 13 first-place votes and 1,134 points while the other seven first-place ballots went to Miami of Florida, which defeated Cincinnati 48-10 and totaled 1,108.

Oklahoma, Nebraska and Miami are ranked 1-2-3 for the fifth week in a row. Last week, Oklahoma led Nebraska 42-12 in first-place votes and 1,179-1,134 in points.

Florida State and LSU were idle last weekend and received 986 and 952 points, respectively. Auburn remained No. 6 with 900 by defeating Mississippi State 38-7.

But Clemson fell seven spots to No. 14 after its loss to North Carolina State. UCLA beat California 42-18 and moved up from eighth place to seventh with 842 points, Syracuse crushed Colgate 52-6 and climbed from ninth to eighth with 774 points and Notre Dame jumped from 10th to ninth with 732 by downing Southern California 26-15.

Florida made the Top Ten for the first time this year. The Gators, 11th a week ago, were idle but rose to 10th place with 612 points.

The Second Ten consists of Indiana, Georgia, Tennessee, Clemson, Ohio State, Alabama, Oklahoma State, Penn State, South Carolina and Michigan State.

Last week, it was Florida, Georgia, Tennessee, Michigan State, Indiana, Ohio State, Alabama, Penn State, Oklahoma State and Michigan.

Michigan, which fell out of the rankings two weeks ago but got back in last week, dropped out again by losing to Indiana 14-10.

Notre Dame's two races over break, the Indiana Intercollegiate and a dual meet against USC, served to increase the team's optimism entering the Districts.

At the Intercollegiate on Saturday the 16th, the Irish finished just 10 points behind Indiana for second place. Steady senior Dan Garrett once again paced the Irish with a second place finish.

Notre Dame placed two other runners, Ron Markezich and Mike O'Conner, in the top five, and were in a position to win the meet. But a large-too large gap between the Irish fourth and fifth place finishers, however, allowed Indiana to slip through for the victory.

"If our fifth man (Mike Smoron) could have stayed with our fourth man (Pat Kearns)," said Irish Coach Joe Piane, "then we could have beaten Indiana, and that's encouraging. We're improving every week."

Last Saturday's meet against USC did nothing to hurt the team's ever-growing confidence. A 17-41 rout of the Trojans set an excellent tone for the team to move into its District training.

Running in rainy and cold weather at the Burke Memorial Course, Garrett (who admittedly was "a little tired of finishing second"), Markezich, and O'Conner again led the way. A lone Trojan, Ray Griffin, broke the Irish's pack, as freshmen Pat Kearns and Ryan Cayhill finished fifth and sixth for the Irish.

Garrett thinks his team is an excellent position entering the Districts. "No one knows about us. We lost to Loyola at the beginning of the season, and people wrote us off. There's no pressure on us, because no one expects us to be strong. We could surprise people."

Wisconsin and Illinois are expected to run away with the first two spots at the Districts—both being among the top ten teams in the country. The third spot, though, is completely up in the air, with the Irish competing against Michigan, Central Michigan, Indiana, and a number of other teams the national bid.

"We ran really well," Ryan said. "It was a good team effort."

Saying the Irish had a good team effort was, perhaps, an understatement. With top runner Theresa Rice having a somewhat off day, the rest of the team picked up the slack. Ryan had been looking for consistency, and he got it at this meet.

Senior co-captain Julia Merkel finished ninth with a time of 18:27, followed by Jenny Ledrick in the 13th spot at 18:34. Rice came in 15th with a 18:40 clocking, followed by Kathleen Lehman in 23rd and Linda Filar in 27th. Other Irish harriers were Wendy Murray in 40th place and Terese Lemanski in 47th. The top three Irish runners took second, third, and fourth in the small school division.

"We only had 46 seconds between first and fifth place," Ryan said. "We came back and were able to beat Ball State (who beat the Irish at the Notre Dame Invitational earlier this season). The team is beginning to peak and are all running good times."

The third-place finish showed just how far the cross country program has come in just two years of existence. The individual performances along with the team results continue to improve with each meet.

"Our fifth-place time this year was as good as the first-place time two years ago," Ryan said. "I think it was a good step for the program. A lot of teams are now beginning to take us seriously. We're coming on stronger than last year at this time."

The harriers couldn't have picked a better time to peak with the North Star Conference Meet and the NCAA Districts looming on the horizon. The reasons for the improvement are simple.

Rice has emerged as one of the top runners in the district, while the veteran Merkel continues to improve on her times and finishes at a time when she could be looking to the future. Ledrick, only a freshman, has been a model of consistency at the No. 2 spot. Lehman remains steady in the No. 4 position while Filar, Murray and Lemanski push each other to better times while fighting for the final spot.

Add the return of junior standout Terry Kibelstis to the lineup after being sidelined with a stress fracture, and Ryan thinks the Irish can make good showings in both upcoming meets.

"I don't think we've had one week where we've had a solid performance from the top five," he said. "One of these meets all five will click. We've had minor injuries and nagging injuries here and there."

Now is the time for the runners to put all of that behind them.

SMC tennis wins District tourney

By HEATHER ATKINSON

The Saint Mary's tennis team completed its fall season by winning the District Tournament held in Anderson, IN last weekend.

Thirteen teams competed, and for every match won, they received one point. The Belles finished with a score of 38 points, followed by DePauw with 30 and St. Francis with 18. As the champions, Saint Mary's will advance to the national tournament, which will be held in Kansas City in May. "I'm really excited we won," said Head Coach Debbie Laverie. "I thought it would be really close between us and DePauw."

In the singles finals, the Belles defeated all of the DePauw players whom they had never beaten before. These proved to be very big wins for the team.

Freshman Sarah Mayer won the number two singles over her St. Francis opponent, 6-4, 4-6, 6-2.

"As a freshman, she's done an outstanding job all year. We can always count on her," said Laverie. "She beat players this weekend who had a lot more collegiate experience than her, and she showed a lot of heart and desire to win."

Sophomore Jane Schnell won the number six singles, defeating a DePauw player 6-2, 7-5.

"Jane wasn't in the starting line-up last year, but has worked hard all summer and has won a lot of matches for us," said Laverie. "Her hard work has become a real contributing factor for the team."

Other Saint Mary's singles players who were victorious were Buffy Heinz winning (7-5, 6-3) and Mary Turk (6-3, 6-2), both defeating players from DePauw.

In doubles, Charlene Szajko and Mayer and teammates Turk and Schnell won their matches.

"Both girls have had a lot of physical problems throughout the season but have showed a lot of determination and have never let themselves get down mentally," said Laverie.

The duo of Heinz and Jennifer Block were defeated but gained points which helped the team to win the tournament.

The district tournament marked the end of the Belles' fall season.

The Saint Mary's volleyball team lost a tough match to Tri-State College over break. The Belles will host a six-team tournament this weekend.

Tough loss for SMC volleyball team

By KATHY JENSEN
Sports Writer

Looking forward to home. That is what the Saint Mary's volleyball team is doing after suffering a heartbreaking loss to Tri-State College October 15. Both teams were undefeated in the Northern Conference, so losing in four games, 16-4, 10-15, 13-15, 6-15, was especially upsetting to the Belles, who fell to 13-6.

"We suffered a tough loss, but we are looking forward to rebounding and coming home this weekend to our own tournament," Coach Sue Medley said.

Junior Margaret Feldman, the Belles' team captain, recorded 12 kills, freshman Katie Killilea had 9 kills, and junior Tammy Suth contributed 7.

Sophomore Mary McCarthy displayed strong setting (24 for 24 with one ace) and freshman Colleen Feldman set 11 for 13, also with one ace.

After another tough road game against Manchester, a conference opponent, the Belles will return home to host a six-team invitational on October 30 and 31.

"Some of the best teams in our division and in the state will be at this tournament," Medley said. "We are definitely up against some tough competition."

Soccer team suffers first loss of season, 3-1.

The Notre Dame soccer team returned from the West Coast after break with its first loss of the year, a 3-1 decision at the hands of an inspired Portland squad last Thursday.

Before the loss, the Irish extended their undefeated string to 14-0-1 by slipping past a pesky DePaul squad on Saturday, October 17th.

Against Portland, Notre Dame got off to a shaky start by giving up a goal just 37 seconds into the game, and were never really able to get back on track. The Pilots got another goal later in the first half before Bruce "Tiger" McCourt was able to put the Irish on the board midway through the second half. Joe Holloway of Portland put the game out of reach by closing the scoring shortly after McCourt's goal.

Head Coach Dennis Grace was not terribly pleased with his team's attitude going into the game, but gives Portland credit for being an excellent squad.

"(The Pilots) are a heck of a team," said Grace, in his fourth year as the Irish mentor. "They beat Duke up there after Duke had won the national championship the year before. I give them a lot of credit, but we were just a little too relaxed going in. We took them (the Irish) up there to show them the Great Northwest and they went right out and became full-blown tourists. The boys just didn't have their game faces on."

"We can definitely play with those guys," said Grace. "They never really put us away because we were always scrapping. Tiger's goal made things interesting, but they (Portland) were the better team."

DePaul, a considerably weaker opponent than Portland, gave then-unbeaten Notre Dame a scare by holding Notre Dame to just one goal after being heavily scored upon by much lesser teams earlier in the season.

"You could tell the guys were in the middle of midterms when they played -they all had their accounting faces on," said Grace. "They had seen that DePaul had gotten beat 10-2, 8-0, 9-0, and 11-1. They had visions of school scoring records in their heads. Even though they lost, this game made DePaul's year. To hold us to one goal was a great big deal to them -and rightfully so. I guarantee they played their best game of the year against us. They had nothing to lose against us and they played like it."

Irish hit the big time at Wake Forest Invitational

By STEVE MEGARGEE
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame men's tennis team had a nice time visiting the big time collegiate tennis atmosphere at the Wake Forest 4 Plus 1 Invitational on Oct. 17-18.

But the final team results indicated that the Irish are not yet ready to live in that type of environment.

"What we didn't do was embarrass ourselves, but we didn't distinguish ourselves either," said first-year Irish coach Bob Bayliss.

Notre Dame tied with Illinois for seventh place in the eight-team tournament which featured six potential Top 20 teams for the spring season.

In an experimental time-saving format, the Irish played three dual matches which included four singles matches and one doubles match. Regular dual meets have six singles matches and three doubles matches.

The Irish lost all their matches by 4-1 scores, falling to Wake Forest, Vanderbilt and Northwestern. Individual winners for Notre Dame were Dan Walsh, who beat his Wake Forest opponent, 6-4, 6-3, the doubles team of Mike Wallace and Dave Reiter in the Vanderbilt match, 6-4, 5-7, 6-4, and Wallace in the Northwestern match, 6-2, 6-1.

"I'd have felt a lot better if we'd won our matches, but I went into it knowing we were in a little bit over our heads," said Bayliss. "But there were some close individual matches and nobody shut us out."

The Irish received an unusually enthusiastic welcome to Wake Forest. Television cameras were rolling as the Irish got off the plane, each player received a carry bag and T-shirt, and the tourney included a pre-tournament press conference and a coat and tie dinner.

"Ian Crookenden (the tennis director at Wake Forest) went out and got the best teams in the country he could get. USC backed out, and we took their place in the tournament because I wanted our team to get this kind of competition," said Bayliss. "They spared no expense and really did it right."

Bowls

The Sugar, Fiesta and Citrus bowl games each had representatives at the Southern Cal game Saturday and are other possible New Year's Day sites. Scouts from the Gator, Liberty, Freedom, Hall of Fame, Peach, Sun and Bluebonnet bowls also were in the press box to observe the Irish.

Absent from what Peach Bowl representative Harvey Robertson called 'the mecca' was a scout from the Aloha Bowl, site of Notre Dame's last postseason bowl game, and 27-20 loss to SMU, in 1984 under then-coach Gerry Faust. Rumor has it they were visiting the University of Akron.

The team tumbled off cloud nine two days later with a frustrating 2-0 loss to the University of Maryland-Baltimore County. "Our only disappointment over break was Maryland," said Lindenfeld. "We had 39 shots on goal and never scored."

Back on their home turf Saturday, Notre Dame regained enough form to beat Calvin 1-0 and revenge an annoying loss from last year.

Marshall scored the lone goal three minutes into the first half on a play off a penalty corner. The corner was taken by Janet Budnick and stopped dead for Marshall's shot by McGlinn. The Irish were unable to score again despite taking 30 shots on Calvin's goal and having 7 more penalty corners.

"We outplayed them with some excellent execution, but we should have scored more and we had some problems defensively," said a somewhat disappointed Lindenfeld.

Currently sporting a 7-5-2 record, the Irish have several chances left to perform with the momentum they displayed over fall break. They travel to Springfield, Missouri at the end of this week to play Southwest Missouri on Friday and Southern Illinois-Carbondale on Sunday.

Notre Dame runners in top form at Intercollegiates

Women take third at Indiana IC

By GREG GUFFEY
Sports Writer

Women's cross country coach Dan Ryan has his team ready for the stretch run after a third-place finish at the Indiana Intercollegiates over fall break.

Indiana won the event with 27 points, followed by Purdue in second and the Irish with 91. Ball State and Indiana State, two teams that fared better than the Irish last year, took fourth and fifth. Notre Dame did manage to defend its small school title, beating St. Joseph's by 24 points.

Like a heavyweight boxer waiting to throw his big left hook, the Notre Dame men's cross-country team is gearing up for its knockout punch.

The Irish harriers ran extremely well over the Fall Break and moved two steps closer to the all-important NCAA District IV Championships (Nov. 14). Notre Dame must place in the top three in order to qualify for the NCAA Championships, which has been the team's goal since August.

Field hockey wins two on road

By KATIE CRONIN
Sports Writer

Before you ask... Yes, the Notre Dame field hockey team did have good fall break. They went 2-1-1 on tour in Washington D.C. and returned home to beat Calvin on Saturday.

"We didn't know what to expect from the D.C. teams, so we just went out and played competitively. It wasn't them chasing us around, it wasn't us chasing them around. They were good games," said reserve goalie Suzanne Waters.

The Irish played American University first and battled to a scoreless tie in a physical grass game that went into two overtimes. The Irish tried 11 shots on goal, American attempted 14. Respectively they had 5 and 8 penalty corners. Coach Jill Lindenfeld commended goalie M.J. Beetel for an outstanding game.

"The team played well, but we missed JoAnne Marshall, absent from left back because of LSATs, and we lost Benet DeBerry in the second half because of an injury," said Lindenfeld.

Notre Dame faced Catholic next with both Marshall and DeBerry back in the line-up and beat them 3-2 in another physical game played on a sloppy grass football field. After a scoreless first half, senior Annie McGlenn put the ball in the cage for the Irish 53 seconds into the second half. McGlenn scored again with an assist from Mary Wagner at 5:10. After Catholic's first goal Wagner, showed the Irish determination to win, scoring at 22:35. The score was 3-1 until the last ten seconds of the game when Catholic scored on a penalty stroke.

"It was a hard game, very back-and-forth. We were the better team, but they had one First Team All-American who dominated the play," commented Lindenfeld.

The Irish played their best against Georgetown, winning the grudge match 3-0. Mindy Breen had a one-on-one score against their goalie in the last minutes of the first half and the gap was widened in the second half with scores by DeBerry and Christine Gregory. En route to victory, Gregory and Breen traded assists and Notre Dame took 33 shots on goal to Georgetown's 7.

"We played phenomenally," said Beetel. "It was the best game I've ever seen. There was no letdown of intensity in the entire game."

"They played absolutely beautiful as a team. I've never seen them play like that. Everything gelled. The offense was great," praised Lindenfeld.

see IRISH, page 14

The Irish field hockey team travelled to Washington, D.C. and posted a 2-1-1 record over break. Katie Cronin details the trip at left.

Bowl reps have eyes for the Irish

It's coming soon to a stadium near you. Real near you. Like at the corner of Dorr and Juniper Roads.

It's called the Bowl Bid Derby and in fact it has already started. On Saturday no less than 18 representatives from 12 postseason Bowl games came to Notre Dame Stadium to watch the 10th-ranked Irish run past Southern Cal and improve their record to 5-1. They'll be here again this Saturday, and the two weekends after that.

In case the bright suitcoats don't give them away, the bowl emblem patch on the coat's pocket will.

While all of these representatives would tell you that it is much too early for any commitments, 'tis the season for the bowl bid derby to heat up. Automatic bids to conference champions will be decided in the next few weeks as conference rivals do battle, and major independents like Florida State, Miami, Notre Dame and Syracuse (yes, Syracuse) are all vying for their moment in the sun on January 1.

Or January 2, like last year's "dream game" of Penn State and Miami for the national championship in the Fiesta Bowl. This coup d'etat over the traditional Big Four bowl games (Rose, Sugar, Cotton and Orange) gave munchkin bowls a gleam of hope to nab top contenders for the national title, and thus large television market shares, but not without forking over millions of dollars.

So where does this put Notre Dame, which did not play in bowl games from 1925 (when a Rose Bowl win brought the Irish their first-ever national championship) to 1970 (when Texas beat Notre Dame in the Cotton Bowl for the No. 1 ranking)?

As evidenced by a premature No. 4 ranking a few weeks ago, national pollsters and bowl officials appear just as ready for Notre Dame to regain its spot among the football elite as the Irish fans are. With the national attention Notre Dame football garners, television ratings and fan interest would be high for a 10-1, or even 9-2, Irish squad in a New Year's Day bowl.

Officials from the Cotton Bowl, where Notre Dame last secured a national championship in 1977, have said that they would even be interested if the Irish went 8-3, but probably would not invite any other team with a similar mark.

The 100th anniversary of Notre Dame football, leading Heisman candidate Tim Brown, and the charisma of head coach Lou Holtz all make the Irish a sought-after unit among bowl officials, as evidenced by the 18 men in bright coats and patches Saturday.

So let's take a moment to peer into the crystal ball, which is anything but crystal clear.

The Rose Bowl is out of course, reserved for the Big Ten and Pac-10, neither of which has a solid favorite to go to Pasadena, nor a true contender for the national title.

The Orange Bowl could be this year's version of the Fiesta Bowl, bringing No. 1 and No. 2 together for a championship clash. Oklahoma and Nebraska, which have both seemed peerless to date, are on course to crash head-on November 21, with the winner getting the Big 8's bid to the Orange Bowl and loser going to another major bowl.

Should the Irish continue their winning ways against Navy, BC, Alabama and Penn State, the other spot in that Orange Bowl matchup would most likely be contingent on the winner of the Miami-Notre Dame game on November 28. Bowl bids will be officially extended November 21.

With one bid committed to the winner of the Southwest Conference, the Cotton Bowl could be looking at the Irish; it's just a matter if Notre Dame is looking back. The SWC is struggling this year, and 3-3 Texas leads the conference thus far. Last week's AP Top 20 listed no teams from the most investigated conference in football, the first time no Southwest Conference team appeared in the poll since 1967.
