Brown wins Heisman with surprising ease

NEW YORK - The surprise at the 53rd annual Heisman Trophy awards ceremony was that there was no surprise.

Notre Dame's senior multi-purpose back Tim Brown, despite stories in recent weeks which made him a sudden underdog to win, walked away with this year's trophy Saturday night, far outdistancing Syracuse quarterback Don McPherson.

"I think it goes without saying, but I'm truly honored to be standing before you today," Brown said in accepting the award from Eugene Meyer, the president of the Downtown Athletic Club. "I'd like to take this opportunity to thank my coaches, my teammates, and definitely my parents for sticking by me through the bad times and the good times. God bless you all."

Brown finishes with 1,442 points, 611 points ahead of McPherson's total of 831. Afterward, Brown admitted surprise at the margin of victory.

"I thought (that the margin) was real close after reading all the articles and hearing all the comments on radio and television," Brown said. "To tell you the truth, I thought it would be real close. I guess all the votes were in before last weekend (the 24-0 Notre Dame loss to Miami)."

Gordon Lockbaum, Holy Cross' two-way threat, finished third with 657 points, followed by Michigan State tailback Lorenzo White with 632 and Pittsburgh's running back Craig Heyward with 170. Brown captured five of the six regions in the voting. McPherson won in the Northeast.

"Right now, I think everyone around here, including myself, is in a state of shock," Brown said of winning. "I really don't know what to say about the Heisman. I think in a couple of years from now, I'll realize what it means.

"My first emotion was that I just wanted to cry because I was sort of relieved that everything was behind me. I'm happy, everyone in my family is happy, and my coaches are happy. We don't know (where the trophy is going) yet, but we'll find a place."

After the award, Brown received the obligatory phone call from President Ronald Reagan.

"He congratulated me for winning the trophy and told me to say hi to my family," Brown said of the call.

Brown finished the year with 1,847 all-purpose yards and seven touchdowns. He was named the National Player of the Year by both the Walter Camp Foundation and Scripps-Howard News Service. He has been named the first-team All-American by the Associated Press (the first time the AP selected a player as a return specialist), the Camp Foundation, the Football Writers Association of America, Kodak (American Football Coaches Association), Scripps-Howard, and Football News.

Brown holds Notre Dame career records for pass reception yards (2,493), kickoff return yards (1,613), combined kick return (2,089), kickoff returns for touchdowns (3), and punt returns for touchdowns (3, all in 1987, which is also a season mark).

Brown is the seventh player from Notre Dame to win the Heisman Trophy, the most for any school. Brown is the second player from Woodrow Wilson High School in Dallas, which also produced 1938 winner Davey O'Brien. It's the first time in Heisman history that two winners have been from the same high school.

Protests in USSR and U.S. occur as summit nears

Associated Press

WASHINGTON - Soviet and American officials, on the eve of Mikhail Gorbachev's arrival in Washington, hinted Sunday that a compromise on "Star Wars" testing is possible, while a massive demonstration in the U.S. capital and a violence-marred protest in Moscow underscored differences on human rights.

Thirteen months after the breakup of the last superpower summit, Gorbachev heads to Washington on Monday for three days of talks with President Reagan and the signing of a treaty to eliminate intermediate-range nuclear missiles (INF) over three years.

Both leaders say they are optimistic about making progress toward a bolder agreement to cut long-range strategic nuclear weapons by half, paving the way for another summit by next June in Moscow.

Acknowledging a shift in the once rigid Soviet opposition to Reagan's "Star Wars" missile defense plan, known formally as the Strategic Defense Initiative, White House chief of staff Howard Baker said the Kremlin's position "now is a little different than it appears to have been a few weeks or a few months ago."

Interviewed on NBC's "Meet the Press," Baker predicted that Gorbachev would move forward on strategic-weapon cuts "perhaps without requiring as a precondition that the president abandon SDI or reduce SDI or postpone SDI, which he's not going to do."

Meanwhile, a crowd estimated by police in the range of 200,000 took part in a demonstration march and rally in Washington to press for free emigration of Soviet Jews.

Led by author Elie Wiesel and Soviet emigre Natan Sharansky, the demonstrators carried signs asking "Where is glasnost for Soviet Jews?" and flags emblazoned with the Star of David. Some carried banners with the names of people refused permission to leave the Soviet Union.

"No camps and prisons can extinguish the light and candle of freedom," Sharansky told the crowd.

Reagan did not attend the rally, but he pledged his sup-

Survey verified, varied attitudes found

By JIM RILEY

Results of a second student survey have confirmed the preliminary findings of the survey sponsored by student government, but they have also pointed out some differences between the attitudes of graduate students and undergrads.

The survey, conducted by two statistics students, used a sample size of 100 students as compared with the 1,100 students who answered the student government survey. But the sample size was large enough to reflect the attitudes of the student body as a whole, according to the students.

The students selected a representative sample of the questions used by student government and conducted the surveys by phone.

Most of the results were not significantly different than the results of the student government survey, said Kathleen McGowan, one of the students who ran the survey.

Differences occurred when graduate students were included in the survey.

In answer to the question, "Do you consider yourself to be an integrated part of the Student Body?" only 60 percent of graduate students said they did compared with about 84 percent of the undergrads.

Higher percentages of graduate students rated faculty approachability as very good or good than did undergraduates. "This could possibly be attributed to the idea that smaller classes for grad students give more one-on-one opportunities," said Kevin Fearnow, the other student who conducted the survey.

The survey results suggested that drinking habits carry over to grad school because there was no significant change in the results of the questions pertaining to alcohol when graduate students were included in the survey, Fearnow said.

"We were able to get more feedback about the questions since (the survey) was done by phone," he said. This feedback pointed out weaknesses in two of the survey questions, according to Fearnow.

Many students were unsure where to place themselves on the "How often do you drink

Robert Bork, former Supreme Court nominee, may leave the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia to join the conservative think tank American Enterprise Institute, according to a published report. Newsweek, in its latest issue, quoted sources close to Bork as saying he is preparing to give up his court seat, possibly by the end of the year. The magazine reported that Bork has told friends that he is bored with the administrative law cases that dominate the court docket. - Associated Press

Eighty-nine percent of the Soviet people and 83 percent of Americans believe there would be no winner in an all-out nuclear war between the superpowers, according to a poll released Sunday. The poll, sponsored jointly by Newsweek magazine and the Soviet press agency Novosti, also revealed that majorities of American and Soviet citizens feel positively toward the other side, although each remains wary of the other side's system of government. - Associated Press

Dieters who can hold the line -the waistline, that is -during the holiday season are winners in the weight-loss game. So many people have trouble sticking to diets after Dec. 15, according to an article in the current issue of Cosmopolitan, that diet counselors now advise just treading water over the holidays. The Christmas season is a time of heightened emotions for most people, said Sybil Ferguson, founder of Diet Center, and feeling either happy or sad can make you eat more. There's one piece of good news for dieters. They can dive into the holiday turkey because there are only 187 calories in four ounces of light meat turkey with the skin on, and only 160 calories in dark meat without the skin. - Associated Press

Local taxi fares amount to 'highway robbery'

Fade in

"Welcome back. We're talking to Jay Leno. So Jay, is there something that is bothering you, something you want to get off your chest? I guess what I'm getting at is what is your beef?"

"We'll Dave, I've got two beefs this time. I was at Notre Dame last week and two things there really irked me. First of all, the cabs out there in South Bend do a great job ripping you off on your way to campus. And if that isn't enough, someone should be arrested for the prices that the flower shop charges."

"Sounds like you've got a load to get off your chest, Jay."

"You bet, Dave."

Fade out

So maybe it was just a fantasy, but these are hardly unfounded gripes.

Taxi cab operators in South Bend have given new meaning to the term highway robbery. While I have never been a victim of this heinous crime, stories abound of $25 return trips from the airport and roundabout excursions through South Bend before reaching a final destination.

It's time for students to take a stand and challenge these fares. In order to do so, however, we all must be better informed about what fares we should expect, and when to complain.

There are three major cab companies operating in South Bend: Allied, Roseland, and Yellow. The drivers for each of these companies lease their cabs from the parent company and are therefore required to abide by the fares set by the headquarters.

All three companies charge an initial $2 pick-up charge, but that's the only charge they all have in common. Both Allied and Roseland charge $1.20 per mile; however, Yellow only charges $1 per mile. Yellow continues to appear the better bargain when you compare the extra charges tacked on by the cabbies. Roseland charges $1 extra for every extra person. Allied also charges this extra dollar but only to and from the airport. Yellow allows up to five people with no extra charge. Roseland also reserves the right to charge for "excessive" loads of luggage. Neither Allied nor Yellow charge extra for luggage.

I'm not about to accuse any company in particular of overcharging beyond these base fares, but from what I understand they all have drivers who try to make an extra buck or two.

There is no reason, if you take a Yellow cab from campus to the airport, that the total fare should cost more than $8 ($2 pick-up fee & 6 miles at $1 mile). A trip to the mall should run only about $5. If you use a different company you can make the necessary additions to the fare.

Happy Birthday

Today is Laura S.'s birthday. Call her up and wish her a happy one. By the way Laura, we do expect to see you dancing on pool tables tonight.

These cabbies affiliate themselves with a large company in order to have the benefits of name recognition, advertising, and a central dispatcher. If there are enough complaints against a driver, he will be let go by the company. Therefore it is in the driver's best interest to appease the customer. Don't be afraid to ask about your fare. Tell him what you think he should have charged, and ask him to explain his own calculations. From this moment onward, if you get overcharged it's no one's fault but your own.

My second beef is with Irish Gardens. I dreaded going to the Gardens before my SYR Saturday because I hate feeling I'm being ripped off. At $3 for a rose, someone's making a bundle at our expense. Nowadays I go off campus for flowers where the most expensive rose goes for about $2.50, but you are more likely to pay $1.50.

There is really no reason why Irish Gardens should charge so much. The only people they're taking advantage of are students.

To add insult to injury, in the past year they have raised their prices from $2 a rose to $3. Why? Most likely because they wanted extra money and they knew the students, as captive, campus-bound consumers, would pay whatever outrageous price was asked. The time has come to bring the prices back down to a reasonable level. I'm not alone in resenting the exorbitant overcharge.

So Jay, you're not alone.

Senate considers tax increase

Associated Press

WASHINGTON - For the third time in six years, the Senate is about to decide whether taxes should be raised to reduce the federal budget deficit.

Senate leaders hope to take a final vote this week on a $23 billion tax increase that is the centerpiece of a plan to slash the deficit by $76 billion over the next 22 months. Spending cuts that account for most of the saving are wrapped into a giant money bill on which a Senate vote also could come late in the week.

The framework for the anti-deficit measures was worked out by President Reagan and congressional leaders in a much-publicized effort to show that the partisan differences can be put aside in the national interest.

Nevertheless, there is opposition to the plan from those who are against any tax increase and from others who say the spending cuts are much too timid.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, chairman of the Finance Committee, which wrote the tax bill, predicted it will pass because it is "as painless as possible" - meaning the impact will hardly be felt by typical taxpayers. The burden will fall almost entirely on corporations and upper-income individuals.

Sen. William Roth, R-Del., said he probably will vote no on the tax plan. He characterized it as "economic leeching," saying "raising taxes when we are trying to strengthen the economy is like bloodletting for an anemic patient."

Even so, Roth said, "I expect the whole thing to get through because the president and the leadership are behind it."

Most of the tax provisions were approved by the committee before the Oct. 19 stock-market crash. But it took the disruption in the financial markets to coax Reagan and congressional leaders into negotiations that produced the base of the deficit-reduction plan a month later.

As part of that agreement, Reagan had to drop his oft-stated opposition to any tax increase - just as he did in 1982 and 1984.

This year's tax bill is smaller than either of the two earlier increases. The bill passed in 1982 was estimated to cost businesses and individuals about $50 million in the two years that followed immediately. The 1984 legislation had a two-year pricetag of $27 billion.

Researchers meet to curb spread of AIDS

Associated Press

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. - Behavioral scientists and medical researchers at an international AIDS conference sponsored by the Kinsey Institute agreed Saturday they must work together to curb the spread of the deadly disease.

"While the advances in immunology, epidemiology and virology have come along quickly, there is a growing concern that bench science alone cannot outrace this epidemic," said Dr. Michael Gottlieb, chairman of the American Foundation for AIDS research and the scientist credited with first identifying the disease, in 1980. "There's a growing appreciation that the involvement of behavioral scientists is necessary to curb this epidemic."

The Kinsey symposium, "AIDS and Sex: An Integrated Biomedical and Biobehavioral Approach," featured about 70 researchers and specialists in the disease and is slated to continue until Tuesday at the Indiana University Memorial Union.

Acquired immune deficiency syndrome is a viral disease (with no known cure) that disables the body's immune system, making victims susceptible to a variety of illnesses. It is found most commonly in male homosexuals, who transmit the virus through anal sex, and in intravenous drug users who share infected needles.

About 40,000 people have been diagnosed with AIDS, according to the Federal Centers for Disease Control, and more than half that number have died.

A theme of the conference is that the disease is spread primarily through sexual behaviors, and that doctors need the help of social scientists to learn from victims about their sexual practices to understand how AIDS is transmitted. Many heterosexuals who engage in similar practices are also at risk and need counseling, researchers at the conference said.

Until a cure for the disease is found, Gottlieb said, the best way to slow or halt the spread of AIDS is to tell people how it is transmitted.

"It's hoped of course that these strategies will allow continued expression of the most basic human feelings," he added. "There are moralistic forces in our society which would have us believe that human sexuality causes AIDS, and of course this is not true."

"It's important to distinguish between measures and strategies which encourage appropriate AIDS awareness from those which seek to limit sexual expression on religious or moral grounds."

Cooperation among scientific disciplines has helped resolve other problems, said Bruce Voeller, president of the Mariposa Education and Research Foundation, a sex research group based in Topanga, Calif.

Soviet judge urges reform of USSR legal system

Associated Press

MOSCOW - The Soviet Union's highest-ranking judge urged better legal defense for citizens, less government interference in the judicial process, and shorter pre-trial detention periods in an interview published Saturday.

Vladimir Terebilov, chairman of the Soviet Supreme Court, also said that numerous violations of the law occurred under the rule of Josef Stalin.

He said courts are still rehabilitating some victims of that repressive time - 240 in the last three years, he said.

Stalin was general secretary of the Soviet Communist Party from 1922 until his death in 1953.

In Terebilov's interview with the Communist Party daily Pravda, he did not mention Stalin by name. He noted, however, that what he called the repression and illegal practices of the 1930s and 1940s could not be omitted from any discussion of the Soviet judicial system.

The present, 30-year-old system "needs perestroika," or reconstruction, Terebilov said.

The 13,000 or so courts in the nation and investigative panels must be "more independent and responsible," he said. Courts are currently deemed independent, but Terebilov said party, government and other officials had interfered in the judicial process in the past.

He proposed "additional guarantees that would exclude outside interference," including a specific law to punish those who attempt it.

"It is necessary to ensure significantly more effective guarantee of the rights of the accused to a defense," Terebilov said.

He said lawyers should be better trained and better paid and defendants should have the right to a lawyer as soon as they are charged.

Under present Soviet law, a defendant is not entitled to a lawyer until investigation of the case is complete. That can take months.

Terebilov also called for new laws limiting pretrial detention to six months, and only for unspecified serious offenses.

In recent newspaper and magazine articles, several ranking justice officials have discussed planned reform of the Soviet Union's criminal code and justice system.

China opens Bible factory

Associated Press

NANKING, China - A printing plant devoted to printing Bibles opened Saturday for the first time in China since the Communist victory in the civil war in 1949.

More than 200 people, including representatives from Christian organizations in China, government officials and Christians from nine countries, gathered in a warehouse of the Amity Press near Nanking for the dedication ceremony.

"The Bible is an important book for all of humanity," said Bishop K. Ting, president of the China Christian Council. "Chairman Mao (the late Communist Party leader Mao Tse-tung) said that unless one studied Christianity, there would be no way of understanding Western history, Western literature and Western philosophy."

He presented Oswald Hoffmann, president of the United Bible Societies, with one of Amity's first Bibles.

"The good news is Jesus Christ... is now to be read by Chinese people in their own language from Bibles printed on their own press," Hoffmann said.

During the chaotic decade of the 1966-76 Cultural Revolution, possession of a Bible was a crime, and many Bibles were destroyed.

nouncing its agenda at the beginning of the next term as to specific programs that will be offered.

"This is not a counseling office, and it's not intended to be a counseling office," he said, "but it is a resource."

"(The office) is for information, education, and efforts to lessen the damage done by alcohol and drug use in the lives of the students at the University," he elaborated.

Dannison, who has had twelve years of experience in the drug and alcohol field, had previously been a family therapist with a mental health center in Benton Harbor, Michigan.

"I think that the grant is intended to help promote the acquiring of knowledge and attitudes that would help the students here to contribute to the lessening of the grip that substance abuse problems have over individuals, families, and even systems such as businesses, church communities and universities," he said.

The two-year grant was appropriated by the Fund for the Improvement of Post-Secondary Education - a division of the Department of Education, according to Dannison. The grant supports a full-time director and secretary and helps fund individual programs associated with the office, located at room 210 in LaFortune Student Center, Dannison added.

One of the new office's concrete plans is to soon use the results of the alcohol and drug survey which was mailed to 1500 random students recently, Dannison said.

Questions on the survey dealt with amounts of drugs and alcohol consumed, types of drugs used, and its relationship to school performance. Students were asked to estimate their drug and alcohol usage over the current semester as well as the two previous semesters.

"There has been some fear that the survey had been an investigative tool," said Dannison. "We are simply interested in getting a finger on the pulse of the student community in terms of what they do and don't do."

"It is the furthest thing from our intention to single out any student individually," Dannison said, adding "Equally important is that the student is protected by research ethics, federal law, and the campus Human Subjects policy from being exposed."

Because the surveys are still in the process of being turned in, no results are yet available. There will also be second and third mailings for the survey. "We need to have as high percentage of response as possible," said Dannison.

The survey will help guide the efforts of the office, which will be open Monday through Friday from 8:30 a.m. - 5 p.m., according to Dannison.

Only religious music appropriate for worship place, says Vatican

Associated Press

VATICAN CITY - The Vatican announced Saturday that only religious music should be allowed in Roman Catholic places of worship, reflecting concern about the increasing use of churches as concert halls.

"The most beautiful symphonic music . . . is not in and of itself religious," declared the Vatican's Congregation for the Divine Cult in a nine-page document. "It is not legitimate to program in a church the execution of music that is without religious inspiration."

Playing or singing music without religious content "would not respect the sacred character of the church," it said.

Some Catholic bishops have criticized the performances of non-religious music in Catholic churches.

"This is not a restrictive document," Monsignor Pere Garriga Tena, undersecretary for the Congregation for the Divine Cult, told a news conference Saturday.

He said it was a "clarification" of existing canonical law that forbids "all that does not consent to the holiness" of a sacred site.

The document requires that church officials seek advance clearance from church authorities for any concert, and stipulates that no fees can be charged for performances of sacred music.

Seniors should consider volunteer work

Editor's Note: The following is the second in a monthly series from the Center for Social Concerns.

As the end of the first semester approaches, seniors are really beginning to think about what they want to do with the next few years of their lives. Many Notre Dame students at least consider volunteer work. Four years at Notre Dame help students realize how much they have been given, and how much less so many other people have. Volunteer programs are one way that we can share our gifts and talents with others who have not had all the advantages we have had. Volunteer programs come in a wide range of "shapes and sizes." Not every program is for every person, but if you look hard enough you are bound to find one that fits your personality, talents, goals, and expectations—a program that challenges you while expanding your horizons and perspectives in directions you wish to pursue.

We would like to tell you about the volunteer program which we are currently a part of—the Academia Cristo Rey Program. Academia Cristo Rey is a Catholic, co-educational school in Ponce, Puerto Rico. The fundamental purpose of this program is to help Spanish-speaking students in grades 1-6 learn the basics of English, Puerto Rico's second language.

This is the first year for the Academia Cristo Rey program, so it is not yet very structured. While this can be extremely frustrating at times, it also gives us an enormous amount of input. Within certain boundaries we are free to make the program into what we want—we can shape the program to fit the needs and opportunities we perceive. The school is very open to suggestions, and almost anything is worth a try; if it does not work, you just try something else! People with a lot of great ideas, and a lot of patience, can really put their creativity to work. We figure a lot out as we go along, but when something finally clicks we feel as if we have conquered the whole world.

Each of us has our own set of reasons for being here, but common threads seem to run through our decisions. Something about the program just stuck in our minds and would not let go. Part of it was the challenge of starting and establishing a new program. Another major factor was the location. Puerto Rico allows one to go outside the continental United States and experience a Latin American environment, while its commonwealth status allows one to retain at least some of the security of the States. Despite the inevitable adjustment, the idea of being immersed in a new culture was definitely appealing. The cultural aspect gives one the chance to learn and experience new customs, to see new places and do things one might never have a chance to do otherwise; and it is an opportunity to force oneself to learn and speak the Spanish language.

But the cultural benefits run much deeper than this. Intercultural interaction is a valuable and important step in breaking down the barriers that often exist between people of different backgrounds. By working together, people learn to value their differences instead of fearing them. It is hard to understand how people feel until you have been through similar experiences yourself. Programs outside the U.S. give one a chance to experience being on the other side—the outside—and seeing the world from a different perspective.

The Hispanic population in the U.S. continues to grow at an enormous rate, and Latin America continues to draw increasing world concern in areas of social justice, politics, economics, etc. Working in Puerto Rico gives one a chance to experience something of this different way of life, it gives one a chance to do at least a little bit to change things, even if it only helps a small group of people and may only visibly help one or two. Puerto Rico may not be the roughest or neediest place "south of the border;" it is a lot more "Americanized" than we had expected, but it is still behind the times. Beyond the affluent tourist areas, Puerto Rico has a long way to go, and education is the key to progress.

As with most programs, the Academia Cristo Rey Program is not for everyone. You have to love children, and it helps if you are extremely patient. (Don't worry—if you are not when you get here you will be by the time you leave!) The kids are the great. Oh, they have their days, but every time you start to wonder why you came here and why you stay, one of them will kiss you or smile at you, or a parent will come up and tell you how much their son or daughter loves you and cannot stop talking about you—and you know why you are here. You cannot help feeling in love with them! We were initially taken aback to find that the school is in a more (relatively) middle class neighborhood rather than in the lower class setting we expected. If your heart is set on working in extreme poverty you probably will not be satisfied here—but these children need us too. And, again, the program is still in its developing stages. Right now, we are trying to incorporate outside community service into the program, thereby expanding the program's service component and adding at least the option of working with the very poor. Hopefully, we can establish this at year's end.

The program has great potential and numerous possibilities. It is still somewhat unstructured, which some people may not like, but people with enthusiasm and ideas can do so much with it. Volunteer work may not always be the most prestigious choice in the eyes of the world, but think about it. It is a way to incorporate your faith and your values into your life. Whether you do it for God or for the world or for yourself, it is only one year of your life, and chances are you will get so much more out of it than you could ever give. And if you don't do it now, when your life is relatively free of commitments, you probably never will. Just think about it. (We would be happy to answer any and all questions. You may contact us through Mary Ann Roemer at the Center for Social Concerns.)

Lisa Meyer, Beth Thompson and Byran Maddox are 1987 graduates of Notre Dame, now working in Puerto Rico.

P.O. Box Q

Problems abound in playoff system

Dear Editor:

I am writing in response to Dennis Corrigan's Nov. 20 column regarding a college football playoff system. In his column, he indicates that the top sixteen teams, as selected by the computer, should be chosen for the post-season playoffs.

Could a playoff system work? I think not!

First of all, Corrigan's perspective is biased; he is viewing the issue with strong regard to Notre Dame. Also, it is hard to compare records, opponents and team strength when there are conference teams and independents. This is because conference teams play games within their conferences, for the most part, once the season begins. Thus, it is difficult to compare relative strengths of different teams. Besides, how is one to determine the difference between the sixteenth and seventeenth ranked teams?

With a playoff system, coaches would employ tactics to win at all costs. This is because there would be a legitimate number one, encouraging more cheating, as if there are not enough violations already. The NCAA would not have enough manpower to investigate various programs. If this should occur, who then is the real winner in college football?

An anonymous author once said, "If it ain't broke, don't fix it." Looking back at the final AP and UPI polls over the last ten years, it seems that only once has a distinction come between what "number one" and "the best" meant.

The playoff system would add four weeks to the college season, meaning the final two teams will have played 15 games, clearly too long. Must we go to such extremes to crown a national champion? Are we speaking here of colleges or sports factories? Are the players called "student athletes" or "athletic students"? Adding a playoff system to college football would be like adding fuel to a fire which might only result in a blazing inferno of athletic immorality!

DAMIAN SHINER

'You're feeling very, very sleepy...'

BRIAN REILLY
accent writer

You are feeling sleepy. You are in a deep, deep sleep. On the count of three everyone on stage will become a duck-quacking is the only way you can communicate with anyone. On the count of three you will ask the person next to you when the flock is heading south for winter. Wait, what's this? I just found out that one of the ducks is having a birthday today. Flap your wings and quack Happy Birthday to him."

Tonight you too will have an opportunity to become a duck. Hypnotist Gary Conrad will be performing at 9 p.m. in Washington Hall, sponsored by the Student Union Board.

The duck routine is just one of a number of "experiments" which Conrad performs on students. They may dance like an Arabian belly dancer, live out past lives or laugh hysterically at audience members, whom they think are naked.

One of Conrad's tricks is to bring one big, muscular guy and one pretty, petite girl on stage, hypnotize them, and have them switch roles. The guy believes that he is a ballerina and tip-toes across the stage, while the girl, convinced she is a guy, chews tobacco and pumps iron.

Calvin and Hobbes

Conrad's hypnotism is more than just entertaining, though. It also can help students with their studies by showing them the amazing powers of memory. For example, Conrad "takes" a hypnotized subject back to his kindergarten classroom. "What's your teacher's name? Who sits to your left? Your right? Two rows behind you?" The answers are astounding. Through hypnosis, long "forgotten" memories are retrieved from the subject's subconscious mind. Students in the audience often wonder if these hypnosis methods which allow them to remember kindergarten experiences can help them recall information from text books read only a few months ago.

This week students will have the opportunity to discover the answer for themselves by attending a series of seminars in hypnosis given by Conrad. "Once you attend one of these seminars, your life will never be the same," says Conrad. In these workshops, people learn how to hypnotize themselves. Conrad introduces them to the hidden power of the mind and shows how they can harness it to achieve dramatic results in their lives. Increased self-confidence, information recall, self-induced anesthesia, "photographic" memory potential, reduced test/interview anxiety, and personal goal achievement are among the benefits which can be obtained.

"Whatever the mind can conceive, the body can achieve through self hypnosis. Any area where increased concentration levels are needed--studying, test taking, athletic performance, interviewing-- these techniques will get results." Several college and professional sports teams use self-hypnosis techniques to maximize their athlete's performances. Self hypnosis is also a documented aid to losing weight, quitting smoking and scoring higher on exams. Conrad, who works in the Army Reserve's Public Affairs Division, has used these hypnosis techniques with the Army's Special Forces, the New York City Police Department and the F.B.I.

Conrad's performance is sponsored by the Student Union Board. Admission is $1.00.

Seminars will be held in the Notre Dame room on the second floor of Lafortune from 4:00 to 6:30 p.m. on Tuesday and Wednesday and at 8:00 p.m. on Wednesday. Topics to be included are increased self confidence, interview techniques, weight loss, and test preparation.

Hickey offers suggestions on improving dorm foodsales

By RENEE GAU
Business Writer

Editor's Note: This is the second in a series of articles on Notre Dame's dorm foodsales.

As a conscientious shopper, someone who wants the best for the least money, you probably have compared the price of your favorite munchies at a number of places: Kroger's, the Huddle, The Commons, and of course, your dorm. Actually, if you have not you aren't the only one. Students usually do not have the time, inclination, nor the opportunity to do so. Therefore, most people take for granted that the food offered at their foodsales is at least fairly priced.

Unknown to most, however, the price list in each foodsales differs from dorm to dorm as much as prices differ between the Huddle and Kroger's. Moreover, management techniques, incentives and services also vary greatly from dorm to dorm.

The foodsales operations on campus are verifiable businesses, each generating revenue to cover costs and supply capital for dorm expenses. Yet each earns that revenue under completely different methods of management. From Alumni to Walsh, all are independently organized and no common rule exists to create a foodsales chain across campus.

There are pro and cons to such an independent business system on campus.

One advantage is that the ambitious and upcoming student entrepreneur can use innovative ideas in marketing and management. For instance, Howard foodsales managers Stacy Navadel and Laura Gonzalez conducted a survey in their dorm asking for suggestions for their menu.

On the other hand, because the managers of foodsales exercise such control they accidentally may exploit their customers through price variations, inexperienced management, or poor service.

Director of University Food Services William Hickey was asked to offer some advice on how foodsales can be better operated.

He first said that over extension is part of the management problem of foodsales. "You can't try to be everything, to everybody...you've got to take a few things and do them well," he stated. Hickey said that there is a great need for continuity of management across the campus so that students can be better served and protected—given the best food for the best price and service.

Hickey suggested two standards which managers should uphold at all times. First and foremost is sanitation and second is managerial accountability. He said, "There has to be accountability for what goes on in (foodsales) in terms of money, prices" and smooth operations. Hickey added, "The (managers) have an obligation to the students in the dorm to provide service and provide it on time."

John Kleisner and Ted Meissner, co-managers of Morrissey foodsales, understand this all too well. Commenting on one of the biggest drawbacks to managing foodsales Kleisner said, "(it) can't be blown off. I am held responsible for the job to get done. I can't just call in sick." Meissner stated emphatically, "I have to reschedule my life around it."

Each manager also faces the problem of marketing. Hickey suggested that managers should restrict their menu to one which their technology can handle, while at the same time meeting the needs of the students by offering an occasional special. Pangborn foodsales manager Brian McKinley agrees and said, "People love to hear they're getting a deal."

Another aspect of marketing is employee service. Dillon foodsales co-manager Bill O'Neill said, "you don't want people to get a negative attitude...you want to entice them to buy more...that's why good employee service is the most important (aspect of foodsales)."

Employees have a responsibility to their jobs, but sometimes the managers have difficulties with them. Another Dillon manager explained, "you have to have a good attitude and want to work (foodsales). As a manager, I can't understand why (the employees) can't be friendly and keep good records. They should try to develop a better attitude."

As a last bit of advice, Hickey suggested better utilization of social space around the foodsales area. Hickey explained that the huge success of the Huddle is due largely to the availability of a socially conducive atmosphere. Foodsales managers could make their allotted space more comfortable by playing music or putting up posters.

Given Hickey's advice on improving foodsales marketability, diligent managers should be able to improve their businesses.

Students should demand the most of the hall foodsales operations and expect the best possible in quality, price and service. Through following these pointers foodsales managers will be able to meet this demand.

BMW sales falling as stocks take dive

The stock market crash and weak dollar have hurt the sale of BMW cars in the United States. Not surprisingly, BMW stock (traded in Germany) has fallen 40 percent since August. Drexel Burnham Lambert analyst Khaled Abdel Majeed suggests that the stock is a good buy at $266 a share since the dollar is weak. Majeed points out that BMW can make up for the losses incurred from a weak dollar because it is not uncommon for luxury cars to have very high sticker prices. The stock could benefit after the 1988 models are introduced and should appreciate when the dollar stabilizes.

For the first time in eight years, not one state has an unemployment rate over 10 percent. September saw Louisiana's unemployment rate fall to 9.9 percent. The Northeast and Mid-Atlantic regions continue to lead the nation in low-unemployment. There are six states in these two regions that have unemployment rates under three percent. September was also the twenty-sixth consecutive month that New Hampshire led the nation in low-unemployment.

Tired of that tax class? Why bother with the class when H&R Block can do the job at a substantial discount on tuition. H&R Block, the Sears and Roebuck of the tax return preparation industry, now has 40,000 employees and over $700 million in revenues according to Inc. Magazine. The company has no major competitors and a customer return rate of 80%. With the 1986 Tax Simplification Act, many more consumers should turn to H&R Block to help them sort through the new, complex, bewildering rules.

The latest salvo in the beer war between Anheuser-Busch and Miller is a pamphlet released by Anheuser-Busch to be distributed in bars. The pamphlet is aimed at discrediting Miller's Genuine Draft beer. According to A-B all brewers cold filter their beer while Miller suggests in their ads that only Genuine Draft is cold filtered. The pamphlet continues to say that the reason why Miller calls their beer genuine draft is because the beer is not pasteurized. Instead, Miller uses a process of sterile filtering which removes some of the flavor and body from the beer. Anheuser-Busch also adds that sterile filtering is cheaper than pasteurization and does not consistently produce quality beer.

DOW ignores new job figures

Associated Press

Washington—Unemployment fell to its lowest level in more than eight years last month, but while some economists cheered the news as a show of greater-than-expected U.S. economic strength it failed to clear away the stock market's pessimism.

The Labor Department reported Friday that unemployment dropped to 5.9 percent in November from 6 percent the previous month, aided by a manufacturing boom.

But on Wall Street, lingering worries about the weak dollar and the federal budget deficit helped push stocks lower, driving the market close to the depths it reached in its Oct. 19 crash.

In addition to a broad market decline, the Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks fell 9.79 points to close at 1,766.74. That left the Dow at its lowest point since it plunged more than 500 points to 1,738.41 on Black Monday, Oct. 19.

The weak dollar failed to rally strongly Friday despite a coordinated round of interest-rate cuts on Thursday by European central banks.

A weaker dollar is seen as raising the danger of higher interest rates and higher inflation, both of which hamper stock prices.

In addition, Wall Street analysts said the market still was reacting negatively to disappointing sales reports

Thursday from leading retailers. Consumer spending is a major component of U.S. economic growth, and a slowdown during the crucial Christmas sales season could foretell an economic slump.

The new unemployment figures put U.S. joblessness at its lowest since a 5.7 percent rate in July 1979.

Most of the improvement was in manufacturing, where employment has grown by 381,000 since October 1986.

The gains were tempered slightly by falling employment among general merchandise retailers. Employment there slipped by 35,000 in November, indicating lower-than-expected hiring related to the holiday season.

ACHA powers collide at JACC

Irish split series with Dearborn, snap 8-game streak

By STEVE MEGARGEE
Sports Writer

This weekend's hockey series between Notre Dame and Michigan-Dearborn was supposed to indicate which school had the premier team in the American Collegiate Hockey Association.

But all the weekend split at the JACC decided was that the two teams are too equal for one squad to stand out. Notre Dame won the first game, 5-3, while the Wolves took Saturday's second game, 6-2, to hold on to first place in the ACHA.

"These are two pretty evenly matched teams," said Irish coach Ric Schafer. "They have a couple of forwards who are really cute with the puck and quick. Whatever team is on will be the winner."

That is just how the series worked out. Notre Dame, now 9-2-2 overall and 3-1-2 in the ACHA, played perhaps its best game of the season on Friday. Dearborn (11-2-3, 4-1-1) dominated Saturday's matchup.

In Friday's game, Dearborn outshot the Irish, 10-3, in the first period, but behind sophomore Irish goalie Lance Madson, Notre Dame held a 1-0 lead after a period.

"In the first 10 minutes, if we were to award a prize for effort and keeping us in the game, we'd give Lance Madson the game puck, the game goal net and even throw in the Zamboni," said Schafer.

Dearborn's Joe Burton tied the game less than two minutes into the second period, but then the Irish started to take command. Tom Smith's goal gave Notre Dame a 2-1 lead after two periods. Matt Hanzel scored twice in the final period, and Bruce Guay also tallied, as the Irish won, 5-3.

Notre Dame's second line keyed the victory. Hanzel had two goals and an assist, Tim Kuehl recorded two assists and Brian Montgomery scored one goal.

"It was a really good hockey game," said Schafer. "There were only four penalties the whole game. The conduct was great."

"It was a great effort. That's a good team we played. We had to work hard, and we did. They have a couple of good guns we were able to quiet."

But on Saturday, the Wolves had their guns ready and fired away. Dearborn scored twice in the first period and three times in the second period, while Notre Dame could not amass any kind of offense. By the time the Irish staggered into the third period, Dearborn led, 5-0.

"Michigan-Dearborn was exceptional," said Schafer. "They outworked us for most of the game, and things were just going their way. We gave up some goals early on that just hurt badly."

"Lance Madson let a couple in that normally are routine saves for him, but how can you fault someone who plays well every other period of the season?"

Notre Dame finally put together several scoring threats in the final period, but by then Dearborn goalie Mike Klavon had gotten into a rhythm. The Irish still got two goals from Tim Kuehl and Bob Bilton, but it did not make much of a dent on the outcome.

Pat Marody led the Dearborn attack with two goals and an assist in the 6-2 victory. Joe Burton added a goal and one assist, and Ron Duda had two assists.

"They didn't make a whole lot of mistakes," said Schafer. "You didn't see us stealing the puck from them or standing alone in front of the goal."

"They have a number of upperclass forwards who are clever stickhandlers and goal scorers in (Mike) Humitz, Osburn and Moradi. Their goaltender played very well today. He came up with some awfully good saves."

Kentucky outlasts Indiana

Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS - The first Big Four Classic was the last for the seniors of the schools involved and both winning teams needed the experience of the upper classmen.

In the second game, No. 2 Kentucky, which starts four seniors, needed overtime to beat fifth-ranked Indiana 82-76. Each of the Wildcat starters scored in double figures with Cedric Jenkins scoring 14 points and grabbing 10 rebounds.

Actually, it was Kentucky's only non-senior starter who hit the shot that won the game.

Sophomore Rex Chapman, who had been suffering through a poor shooting performance for him, nailed a 3-pointer with 1:48 left in overtime to give Kentucky a 78-76 lead.

"It was a spur of the moment thing, we were down one and needed to get something going," Chapman, who finished with 20 points, said. "I saw Cedric set a good pick for me and when I came off I let it go and it felt good when it left my hand."

Indiana, 2-1, forced the overtime when freshman Jay Edwards hit from the baseline

freshman-sophomore guard combination of Smith and Williams.

"Rivers played so well and he is a fine basketball player," Crum said. "He showed what a senior guard can do against inexperience. We did not contain him well."

But Phelps said he was happy that a cram session of film-watching helped the other players in the offense to make major contributions.

"After we lost to Indiana Tuesday night, all we did Wednesday was look at four reels of game film and saw how we played too quick and how many three-pointers we didn't need to take," Phelps said.

"I felt if David was in control to create and then worry about scoring, the the other players would get more involved."

Gary Voce added 12 points and six rebounds, and Mark Stevenson had 10 points and seven boards. Rivers also had seven rebounds.

As much as Irish offense hummed along, the Louisville offense just could not get in tune. Notre Dame hit almost 55 percent of their shots, including 63 percent in the first half, while the Cardinals struggled and hit just 37 percent from two-point range and were unsuccessful in 14 attempts from three-point range.

Louisville had a lot of players who couldn't exorcise their shooting futility. Herbert Crook, Williams and Kenny Payne combined to hit a frigid 11 of 37 field goals and Payne and Williams put the icing on the cold shooting by missing all 10 of their three-point attempts.

Smith, the Cardinals' highly-touted freshman guard, hit just one-of-five before fouling out.

"I think other than Pervis, I doubt if we had any player play up to his ability," said Crum. "I thought some of our sophomores, juniors and seniors played like freshmen, too. They were basket cases out there and I'm not sure why."

Despite losing to Indiana, who fell to Kentucky in overtime, 82-76, in the second half of Saturday's doubleheader, Rivers and Stevenson said that game helped them prepare to play Louisville, Notre Dame's second straight big test on the road.

"I think it gave us confidence because even though we didn't play very well at all, and Indiana's a very good team, we were able to stick with them at certain points," Rivers said.

"This was a really good game for our whole team because we played well for the whole 40 minutes," Stevenson said. "The Indiana game taught us to keep our concentration high for the whole game, because we slipped at times against them."

The Irish didn't let up in the second half. Notre Dame immediately added to the 14-point lead and with driving, double-pump windmill layup by Rivers and a left-hand baby hook by Voce, it had its biggest lead of the day at 55-33, with just over 13 minutes to play.

Kentucky center Robert Lock rejects a shot by Indiana's Dean Garrett. The Wildcats held on for an 82-76 overtime win over the Hoosiers twice. The 6-9 Voce took some of the pressure off Irish point guard David Rivers by establishing himself as a scoring threat from the inside.

"I felt Voce was the most important reason we established our game plan," Phelps noted.

Rivers was brilliant. His 32 points attest to that.

But Voce gave Phelps the kind of performance that kept Louisville guessing.

He pump-faked the Cardinal shot-blockers, getting them off their feet. He ran the floor, finishing off a Scott Paddock steal with an authoritative dunk. And he summed up Louisville's offensive frustration when he swatted a Crook shot out of the air and into press row.

"I think we did well against their big men," Voce said. "Pervis got 23, but overall I think we slowed them down."

"Those guys are big and they're good shot blockers and rebounders... I've been working in practice on trying to pump-fake more often. Sometimes that's what you have to do to get a shot off against guys like that."

Ellison slouched on a bench in the Louisville lockerroom after the game was over. This time his long arms and lanky frame were not enough to intimidate an opponent into staying out of the middle.

"Their whole squad played well," he said of the Irish. "They know their roles. When you look at the stats, all that comes to mind is David Rivers. But Gary Voce was tough. He isn't a dominating player, but all in all he played well."

Once-lowly Saints clinch playoff spot

Associated Press

The San Francisco 49ers and Washington Redskins, who make a habit of being in the playoffs, were joined there Sunday by the New Orleans Saints.

The Saints? the NFL's perennial losers, the team that went 20 years without a winning record?

Yes, those Saints, who not only are winners this year at 9-3, but are headed for postseason action for the first time.

New Orleans assured itself of at least a wild-card berth Sunday with a 44-34 victory over Tampa Bay. That left the Saints one game behind the 49ers, 23-12 winners at Green Bay, in the NFC West.

San Francisco qualified for the playoffs for the fifth straight year and is 10-2, the best record in the league.

Washington got into the playoffs for the fifth time in six years and won the NFC East for the fourth time in seven seasons with a 34-17 decision at St. Louis.

MIAMI - The Orange Bowl got just what it wanted—a New Year's night showdown between No. 1 Oklahoma and No. 2 Miami for the national title.

The Miami Hurricanes concluded their regular season with an 11-0 record Saturday by beating South Carolina 20-16 to set up the meeting against the Sooners, also 11-0.

Miami learned it would receive the Orange Bowl bid almost three weeks ago but had to beat No. 10 Notre Dame and No. 8 South Carolina to make the bowl a winner-take-all championship football game.

Miami has handed the Sooners their only two losses in the last three seasons.

berth secured, needed a last-minute touchdown to beat the Minnesota Vikings, 30-24, to clinch the Central. The Vikings are the only other NFC Central team with a winning record.

All three AFC divisions are muddled, with the Central in a three-way tie among Cleveland, Pittsburgh and Houston. Indianapolis helped create that situation with a 9-7 victory over the Browns, giving the Colts the lead in the East.

Denver's 31-20 decision over New England lifted the Broncos past San Diego, a 33-18 loser at Houston, and Seattle, which was beaten 13-9 in Pittsburgh. The Broncos, 8-3-1, lead the West with the AFC's best record.

Irish left wing Tom Smith (20) scores the go-ahead goal in the second period of Friday night's game against Michigan-Dearborn. The goal gave Notre Dame a 2-1 lead, which eventually resulted in a 5-3 win for the Irish. Steve Megargee has details of the weekend series on page 10.

Another person who was relieved by Brown's win was Jim Brock, Executive Vice President of the Cotton Bowl Committee. For the third time in the last four years, the Cotton Bowl will feature the Heisman Trophy winner. In 1985, Bo Jackson led Auburn to he Cotton Bowl against Texas A&M, where the Tigers lost, 36-16. One year earlier, Doug Flutie and Bostron College went to Dallas where they beat Houston, 45-28.

"I'm very excited," said Brock. "Tim Brown is certainly deserving of the Heisman. I was a little nervous, but I made some calls on my own and found out that Brown was ahead. We've been very lucky to have three of the last four winners in the Cotton Bowl."

Swimmers execute flip turns in one of the freestyle events at the National Catholic Swimming and Diving Championships hosted by Notre Dame over the weekend.

Meet impresses coaches

By GREG GUFFEY
Sports Writer

It was, to say the least, incredible.

The first-ever Collegiate National Catholic Swimming and Diving Championships attracted many of the top athletes in the country to the Notre Dame campus. It was the beginning of a new tradition in collegiate swimming. It was something that can only get bigger and better.

"I think it was the best championship anybody could run," Villanova coach Ed Geisz said. "Tim Welsh ran the best championship for men and women in the country. It was an exciting meet."

"I told my team I was thrilled to be a part of it," Fordham coach Don Galuzzi said. "It was excellent planning, and we really enjoyed our stay. We're already looking forward to it next year in Villanova."

Irish coach Tim Welsh, Galuzzi, and Geisz had talked about organizing such a meet for years, but nothing had ever materialized. Finally, the three schools combined efforts with Welsh volunteering as the host for the inaugural event. After the dust and smoke had cleared from 15 record-setting performances, Welsh could not believe the dramatic success of the meet.

"I've probably spent more time and more energy on planning and working than I thought," Welsh said. "Even with that, it was more fun, more exciting than I ever imagined. The spirit of the teams was a verification that this was the right thing to do."

Most coaches were quick to credit part of the success of the meet to the spacious facilities at Rolf's Aquatics Center. Only in its second year of operation, the facility left lasting impressions on the teams.

"The facilities here are wonderful," Geisz said. "The water is the right temperature, and it is fast. I think it is one of the best facilities in the country."

"The facility is an excellently-planned facility, not just for competitive swimming, but for total recreation," Galuzzi said. "It is competition geared, but also allows for the total program."

Welsh credited the success of the meet to a number of people, stressing the importance of the volunteers that donated valuable time and knowledge.

"What makes Notre Dame special is that the people that ran the meet are all first class people," he said. "There were three major parts. The first was freshman Jim Byrne's parents who volunteered to do all the scoring on their own computer system. Second was the sports information department. They did a magnificent job of covering pre-meet, during the meet, and the post-meet. Finally was the core meet staff from the head official to the student volunteers."

The huge success of this meet, though, leaves Villanova's Geisz at a disadvantage when preparing for next year's meet.

"I don't know how we can improve on it," he said.

of 16 places available, we had six of them. We're a Fighting Irish team in that we stay in the race from the prelims until the final person touches the wall. This pool has allowed us to train a great team."

The Irish women also turned in a good team performance, taking second to a strong Boston College squad, 837.5-626. Notre Dame was a solid second throughout the entire championship meet.

"We're delighted with the women," Welsh said. "We told the women at the beginning of the meet that if we could get second we would think it was an outstanding team performance. The women achieved this by a lot of people scoring and a lot of people improving."

"The kids did really well," Boston College coach Tom Groden said. "I was very happy with the performance. Notre Dame took the lead on the first day, and the kids responded to it. It was well worth the trip out here."

The Irish won the 200 medley relay and the 200 free relay. Becky Wood won the 100 and 200 breaststroke, Amy Darlington the 200 freestyle, and Andrea Bonny took the 1-meter diving title.

Welsh saw the impressive showings from both teams as a great stride for the Irish swimming program.

"We think of the two teams as one," Welsh said. "The programs are in the same place. We're together and moving ahead. There's no measurement at the amount of confidence our team has gained. The most important thing is to open our eyes at what the next step will be. We're not at the top, but we can see it from here."

IRISH ITEMS - Welsh was named men's coach of the meet, while Boston College's Groden took the honors on the women's side... Villanova's Chris Craft took the male athlete of the meet, and Cindi Luciani of Providence was the female athlete of the meet... Craft qualified for the Olympic trials with his times in the 100 and 200 butterfly, and Geisz thinks he can get a spot on the team... Villanova will host the meet next year... A total of 15 pool records were set during the weekend... Villanova's time of 3:03.91 in the 400-freestyle relay was the fastest time for that event in the United States this year... The Irish women downed Fordham in a dual meet Sunday 111-104... The Irish men lost to Villanova 122-95 Sunday, but downed Fordham 139.5-78.5

HOW THIS RAKE CAN SAVE YOUR LIFE.

This simple garden tool is a firefighter. It can help you clear away brush and leaves that act like kindling around your home. And you.

So if you live near the forest, do a little raking. And that's not all. Landscape your home with a fire retardant plant like ivy. Use spark arrester screens on your chimney and vents. And put fire retardant material on your roof and underneath your house where it is exposed. Because a forest fire burns more than trees.

Remember. Only you can prevent forest fires.

Irish learn lesson, dump Louisville

By RICK RIETBROCK
Assistant Sports Editor

INDIANAPOLIS - Notre Dame looked like a star pupil Saturday and showed a Hoosier Dome classroom of 43,601 people what it learned by thrashing Louisville, 69-54, in the inaugural Bank One Big Four Classic.

The Irish offense appeared to have learned from its poor performance against Indiana, while Louisville looked like it has some homework to do, in putting together a 19-4 run midway through the first half. That streak put the Irish on top, 39-23, and Louisville head coach Denny Crum admitted that after the surge, "we were never in the game."

With just over eight minutes to go in the first half, Pervis Ellison, who finished with 23 points and was the Cardinals' only effective scoring threat, powered in a layup and was slapped by Scott Paddock to pull Louisville within one at 20-19. But Ellison missed the free throw and the Irish exploded.

David Rivers hit a 12-footer, drove through the lane and hit a soft scoop shot and added a pull-up jumper in the lane that bounced on the rim three times before falling through to give the Irish a seven-point bulge.

LaBradford Smith hit a layup, his only field goal of the day, but freshman Tim Singleton hit an 18-footer with the 45-second clock down to five, Rivers added a 17-footer and three-pointer to continue the Notre Dame run.

Louisville's Keith Williams canned a jumper, but the Irish kept the pressure on. Sean Connor, who had just come off the bench, promptly drilled a jumper from the left side and Singleton got a steal and layup.

The surge was punctuated with a nice example of ball reversal, something Irish head coach Digger Phelps was longing for against Indiana. The Irish sent the ball around the Louisville defense from Rivers to Singleton to Connor for the jumper that gave the Irish the 14-point lead with just over three minutes left in the half.

The Irish held that margin and went in at half with a 43-29 advantage.

Rivers again led the Irish scoring with a career-high 32 points against Louisville's

Swim teams surprise foes, finish second

By GREG GUFFEY
Sports Writer

In the end, the favorite prevailed, but it was anything but easy.

With only five events left in the three-day competition, Villanova trailed surprising Notre Dame, 555-545.5. The powerful Wildcats, however, took control in those five events and went on to take the first-ever National Catholic Swimming and Diving Championships title 757.5-727.

While Wildcat coach Ed Geisz was ecstatic over the victory, he never thought it would be so hard to accomplish. All 17 Villanova swimmers had to swim personal best times in order to down the Irish.

"We knew it could go down to the wire," Geisz said. "It was one of the most exciting championships my team was ever in. The Notre Dame team was unbelievably strong. I don't know where they got their swimmers, but they did one hell of a job."

"If you had told me that we would have the lead after the 100 free on the last night, I would not have believed it would happen," a jubilant Tim Welsh said of his Irish squad. "But we knew it was possible, especially after the prelims. The team created the determination and excitement and carried it out."

The Irish men set 10 school records with the second-place finish. Paul Godfrey paced the Irish effort with first-place finishes in the 500 and 1650 freestyle events, but it was the team depth that accounted for the strong finish.

"The thing we're proudest of is approaching the top of the heap through team depth," Welsh said. "We went ahead at the end of the 100 free because

Irish front line rises above UL big men

INDIANAPOLIS - More than 43,000 screaming fans surrounding a small hardwood surface in the made-for-football Hoosier Dome can make even the largest of college basketball players seem small.

So can a zone defense. And a little hard work.

That's how Notre Dame's big men handled a larger and more experienced Louisville front line and routed the 13th-ranked Cardinals by a 69-54 score in the Big Four Classic on Saturday afternoon.

Irish head coach Digger Phelps said before the game he did not think Notre Dame had the front line to match up with Louisville. He probably was right, but what his squad lacked in height and experience it made up for with a game plan that kept the Cardinals outside.

"They used their zone defense as a means of stopping our inside game, and it worked," said Louisville's 6-9 forward Pervis Ellison, who managed 23 points and was the only Cardinal threat from inside the paint.

Starting center Fulton Spencer (7-foot-1) and forward Herbert Crook (6-7) were not nearly as effective against the Irish, who employed a packed zone for most of the game. Spencer was held scoreless on only one field-goal attempt. Crook scored 10 points on 5-of-13 shooting, with most of those shots coming from the outside.

The rest of the Cardinals were off the mark from the field as well. Keith Williams was 3-of-10 and freshman sensation LaBradford Smith was 1-of-5 before he fouled out in the second half. Louisville shot 37.1 percent as a team. As if they weren't throwing up enough bricks from 12-15 feet, the Cardinals missed all 14 of their three-point attempts.

"I wanted Louisville to beat us from the outside, and I felt we had to get the ball inside," Phelps said.

The plan worked to perfection.

Senior center-forward Gary Voce was a factor in the lane on both ends of the floor, scoring 12 points, pulling down six boards and stealing the ball

Brown endures criticism of his selection

NEW YORK - How do you spell relief? Saturday night in New York Irish senior flanker Tim Brown spelled it H-e-i-s-m-a-n.

It's odd that after winning college football's most prestigious award, Brown felt relief - not happiness, jubilation, or ecstasy, but relief. On one hand, he was relieved that it was finally all over with. After all, he'd been dealing with Heisman hoopla all season long.

But what he was most relieved by was that the events of the last two weeks were done. After sub-par performances in consecutive losses to Penn State and Miami, Brown went from Heisman shoe-in to Heisman drop-out in the eyes of some media members who said that maybe Brown wasn't as deserving as they had made him out to be. Suddenly, Syracuse quarterback Don McPherson was very much in the picture.

"It really is (a relief)," Brown said after the award. "I found out this week that I was a bad person, and I didn't know that. I was relieved that everything was behind me, and I didn't have to worry about what people were going to say about me in the papers."

The criticism was such that Brown began to take it personally.

"It did in a way because I think I'm a pretty good person when people have bad things to say about me," Brown said of the attacks on his play. "I took it personally as if they were attacking me as a person. Whatever they were saying, I don't feel they had any right to say it."

Brown, who at times in the post-award press conference appeared grim and tight-lipped under the onslaught of critical questions, endured the trial which tried to determine if he really was the best player in college football this year or if he got the award for his career at Notre Dame.

Dennis Corrigan

Sports Editor

"I think that half the people vote on careers and half vote on one season," Brown answered. "It's not really right for me to say which one I was. I had a good four years at Notre Dame, and I also had a good year."

The questioning went so far as to ask Brown if he thought there should be two awards - a career award and a season award.

"I think that's taking it a little too far," Brown said. "This is tough enough for a lot of people. To try to come up with an award like that would be really tough."

Of course, a big criticism of Brown's winning was that he played at Notre Dame, where almost every game is played on national television.

"I'm not going to sit here and apologize for making the decision to go to Notre Dame," Brown said. "I made that decision based on my life, not football."

One thing is clear, Brown deserves this year's award. No player meant as much to his team as Brown meant to the Irish. He faced double and triple coverages. Teams refused to kick to him after seeing him reel off long returns, one after another. Still, he piled up impressive numbers.

Even more impressive was the quality of teams he did it against. Of the Irish opponents this season, nine, including Texas A&M, will play in bowl games. Brown wasn't racking up yards against the Colgate of the country. If Syracuse played the schedule that Notre Dame did, it would be on television more. The simple fact is that the Irish played opponents around the country, and the networks put on what the people wanted to see.

Of course, there may be a simpler reason for the treatment Brown received. McPherson won the Northeast region, which includes New York. Their candidate finished a distant second to Brown. Spell this s-o-u-r-g-r-a-p-e-s. They turned what should
