FBI investigated groups opposed to U.S. foreign policy

Associated Press

Washington - A New York-based legal group charged Wednesday that the FBI violated the civil rights of hundreds of people in conducting a six-year investigation into organizations opposed to U.S. policies in Central America.

The FBI acknowledged that it had conducted an investigation into the Committee in Support of the People of El Salvador, or CISPES, but maintained that it was looking into "alleged criminal activity rather than the motives and beliefs of those being investigated."

And in an interview late Wednesday, Justice Department spokesman Pat Korten contended that the Center for Constitutional Rights, which has had the FBI documents for nearly two months, released the papers Wednesday because "they are attempting to influence the Contra aid vote in the U.S. Congress."

"This has little, if anything, to do with the FBI and has a lot to do with their attempt to influence the Congress," Korten added.

Rep. Don Edwards, D-Calif., chairman of the House subcommittee on civil and constitutional rights, criticized the FBI's conduct.

"We want the FBI to catch spies, terrorists and crooks and put them in jail, not keep political groups under surveillance, even ones that disagree with the president," Edwards said.

The Center for Constitutional Rights, founded in 1966 to provide "legal support to progressive movements," obtained 1,320 pages from FBI files through the Freedom of Information Act. Many of the pages contained blacked-out sentences or paragraphs, and the center said the documents represent only about a third of the government's files.

Margaret Ratner, the center's education director, said the FBI began its investigation in 1981 to determine if any members of CISPES, a group working to end U.S. intervention in Central America, were foreign agents.

The FBI's field offices found no evidence to back up that claim, she said, so the focus of the investigation was turned into a "foreign intelligence-terrorism" inquiry "even though no basis for such existed."

"The new category allowed the FBI to utilize 'special techniques' that are considered illegal when applied to domestic investigations," she said.

Police, ND to improve relations

By ERIC M. BERGAMO
Senior Staff Reporter

The Judicial Council received a report Wednesday night on a meeting between members of the Student Rights Committee and representatives of the South Bend Police Department, St. Joseph County Sheriff's Department, Notre Dame Security and the Office of Student Affairs.

"We wanted to develop some sort of plan to better our relations between the local law enforcement agencies and the students," Student Rights Committee Chairman Artie Feles said of the meeting.

The meeting, held Jan. 23, was attended by South Bend Police Chief Charles Hurley, St. Joseph County Sheriff Joseph Nagy, Notre Dame Director of Security Rex Rakow and Assistant Director Phillip Johnson and administration officials Dr. John Goldrick, Anne Firth and Elizabeth Pawlicki, said Feles.

Feles said that relations between students and the South Bend Police have been strained in the past, but have improved recently.

The committee brought up questions about the rights of

Vote on Kennedy goes to Senate

Associated Press

WASHINGTON - Anthony Kennedy's Supreme Court nomination sailed unanimously through the Senate Judiciary Committee on Wednesday and went to the Senate floor for an expected swift confirmation.

Majority Leader Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., a committee member, said he would be willing to waive procedural requirements to allow a Senate vote Friday or next Monday on President Reagan's selection of the federal appellate judge from Sacramento, Calif.

The committee's action was praised by Reagan and Attorney General Edwin Meese III, with the president saying it "gives us considerable confidence that the nation will soon have a full court." Reagan said: "I look forward to a positive vote soon by the Senate that will bring this distinguished and scholarly legal mind to the court."

Before the 14-0 vote, senators praised the 51-year-old Kennedy as open-minded, an advocate of the constitutional right of privacy, one who respected Supreme Court precedent and a judge with an expansive view of constitutionally protected liberties.

But liberal senators also said Kennedy's former memberships in clubs with few women members, and some of his more than 400 decisions, showed an insensitivity to women and minorities. These lawmakers expressed hope, however, that Kennedy would change his views on the job.

"We learned that Judge Kennedy is a case-by-case judge," said Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., whose comments summed up the liberal position.

"Nor, it appears, does he have an agenda to reverse scores of important Supreme Court decisions. Rather, Judge Kennedy has respect for many of the major rulings that the court has handed down in the last three decades."

Despite the unanimous vote, there were moments of acrimonious debate at the committee meeting - not about Kennedy, but over the defeat of Reagan's first nominee for the high court vacancy, Robert Bork.

Bork was so much on senators' minds that Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa., kept referring to Bork in his remarks when he meant to say Kennedy.

The most vivid statement came from Sen. Gordon Humphrey, R-N.H., who said he was looking for a reason that Kennedy was cautious during his confirmation hearings, in setting boundaries on the right of privacy.

Saint Mary's professor begins anti-Contra hunger fast

By KATIE KEARNEY
Assistant Saint Mary's Editor

In an attempt to increase public awareness of United States involvement with Contra aid in Nicaragua, Peter Smith, a Saint Mary's associate professor of mathematics, is fasting from Jan. 25 to Feb. 3.

Smith said he and about 25 other members of the Pledge for Resistance group are also "trying to challenge people to write and call their congressmen and say they are against any aid to the contras."

According to Smith, the fast is in solidarity with the Vietnam veterans who are fasting on the Capitol steps in Washington, D.C. with the hope of influencing Congress' Feb. 3 vote against continuing aid to the contras.

He said the group is fasting "to express the depth of our concern for the atrocities being committed against the Nicaraguan people with our weapons."

Smith is allowing himself only water for this week, but he said he does not believe it will interfere with his teaching ability.

"I've been O.K. so far," Smith said. "The mornings are fine, but I get tired by the afternoon. Most of my classes are in the mornings and on Monday, Wednesday and Friday," he added, "so I think I will be alright."

Smith and four other members of the Pledge for Resistance group recently pleaded not guilty to criminal trespassing charges in connection with the Dec. 24 sit-in at the office of Third District Congressman John Hiler office to protest U.S. support of the Contra Rebels in Nicaragua. They are presently waiting for a court date to be set.

Smith, a long time peace activist, has been arrested twice before in similar situations. He also is responsible for the three crosses on U.S. 31, just south of the Saint Mary's entrance.

Smith said the middle cross is there to "call people's attention to the situation in South America," and is inscribed "Pray for peace, work for justice." The other two crosses stand for Nicaragua and El Salvador, which Smith said he believes are the "two countries our money is causing the most problems for."

Beware of becoming a human hood ornament

You car dodgers are a nutty lot. You dash across ice-covered streets, dodging traffic, in the dark, against the stop light, in a snow storm.

You all are taking one heck of a chance. After all, there are lot of drivers out there like myself -unaccustomed to driving on ice blocks.

Some of us, for example, are from sunny Florida. Down there snow rarely, if ever, covers the road. The only thing slippery on the street are dead possums.

So we're not used to driving on two feet of icy white stuff. Trying to avoid doing a 360 on four wheels is a new experience for us.

So is trying to see in an Indiana blizzard. Sure, down South our windshields may be hit with a bird dropping now and then.

But even that never covers the entire windshield, so we have no problems seeing while driving.

Ice and snow are different matters, though. With that on my windshield, I know how Mr. McGoo feels when driving.

Seeing the road, then, much less staying on it, is a challenge.

And it's not just some of us from the Sunbelt who have trouble driving in the winter here. Maneuvering on icy roads is a nightmare for anyone.

To be running anywhere near the road in this weather, then, is just plain crazy -- which means you car dodgers are just plain looney.

Now, everyone has run across the road against traffic at least once in their lives. And everyone has walked too close to the roadside. But you car dodgers do it consistently.

You seem to like dashing into oncoming traffic near the Commons and Bridget's. You love to forego the warmth of the Joyce A.C.C. to jog and breathe exhaust on Notre Dame Avenue. And you glory in walking behind cars backing out on ice-covered parking lots.

You like wearing dark-colored clothes at night, giving new meaning to the words "effective camouflage." You're fond of running out from behind parked vans and trucks.

But you hate stop lights. Green, yellow, or red, you don't stop for any light.

You even ignore your Mom's heartfelt advice: "Now, honey, don't forget to look both ways before crossing the street."

Mark Pankowski

Managing Editor

I guess you assume drivers can see you at night. I imagine you think cars can stop without sliding and spinning on the ice.

Unfortunately, you're wrong. Dead wrong. You're luck is going to run out. No matter how skillful a driver is, no matter how careful, he won't be able to stop in time. And you'll be plowed.

You'll be eye-to-eye with the driver, him in the car and you on it. You'll be a human hood ornament.

The driver will feel guilty. His car will be dented. You'll be squashed. And your friends and family will be crushed.

All this can be avoided, however. The next time you're jogging near or running across the road, assume the driver doesn't see you. Assume he can't stop his car without it sliding.

Heck, assume he's just arrived from Florida. That way you won't end up like all those possums down there.

Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis on Wednesday criticized the Reagan administration's "failed and illegal" policy in Central America and said he would challenge a Pentagon order to send National Guard troops there. A new poll showed George Bush gaining on Republican rival Bob Dole in Iowa.

In Michigan, meanwhile, Republicans waded through credential challenges to 1,800 delegates to this weekend's state GOP convention, where Bush and Rep. Jack Kemp are expected to split most of the 77 national convention delegates at stake.

In Boston, Dukakis switched gears and said he would file a federal lawsuit against a Pentagon order to deploy 13 Massachusetts National Guardsmen, a public relations unit, to Panama and Honduras for two weeks in late May.

"I wasn't aware you had to go to Honduras or Panama to learn how to write a press release," Dukakis said.

Dukakis had said Monday he would honor the Pentagon order under protest. But Wednesday, Dukakis, a critic of aid for the Contra rebels in Nicaragua, said he will challenge a 1986 federal law that stripped governors of their peacetime power to block National Guard assignments abroad. If there is no ruling by the May 28 deadline, Dukakis said he would obey the order.

Republican Pete du Pont, with Paul Revere's Massachusetts home as a backdrop, accused Dukakis of "forgetting the lesson that we cannot mistake peace for freedom. We did not during our war for independence and we cannot now as the Nicaraguan resistance strives for freedom."

Another Republican contender, former Secretary of State Alexander Haig, campaigning in Dixville Notch, N.H., said he did not initially support aid for the Contras, but the United States now cannot afford to abandon the rebels.

"We created the covert movement and now to cut and run on it would send a devastating message to Moscow, Havana and the rest of Central America," he said. "We simply cannot do it."

Bush, campaigning in Wyoming and South Dakota, took comfort from a USA Today-CNN poll of 200 likely GOP caucus-goers in Iowa that indicated the race there is tightening. The survey said Dole was ahead, 33 percent to 25 percent. Nine days earlier, a similar poll put Dole on top, 41 percent to 26 percent.

Dole, campaigning in North Conway, N.H., predicted that in the long run, the Democrats would benefit from the vice president's contentious interview with CBS anchor Dan Rather over the Iran-Contra arms deal.

"Democrats are not going to let this issue die," Dole said.

Bush, in Casper, Wyo., expressed sympathy for the state's struggling oil industry. The onetime Texas oilman said, "I know what it's like to have a rig sacked."

Violence in Jerusalem persists

Associated Press

JERUSALEM -Newspapers published reports Wednesday of soldiers beating Palestinians and one quoted a trooper as saying he was ordered to club Arabs at random, not just rioters as Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin has declared.

Soldiers in the occupied Gaza Strip hit and kicked members of a CBS-TV crew who filmed other troopers arresting and striking a Palestinian. The army apologized.

In an Arab neighborhood of Jerusalem, police armed with assault rifles and clubs fired tear gas and rubber bullets at about 75 young Arab protesters.

"Somebody there will get his head smashed. We'll break their bones," Associated Press reporter Sergei Shargorodsky heard a policeman say. The officers entered only the edge of the neighborhood and the protest ended without casualties.

Palestinians began rioting

Dec. 8 in the West Bank and Gaza Strip, which Israel captured from Jordan and Egypt in the 1967 Middle East War. Israeli gunfire has killed 38 Arabs, according to U.N. figures, and Rabin said the policy of beating rather than shooting took effect Jan. 5.

The daily tabloid Hadashot published an interview with a soldier in Gaza whose description of his orders contradicted Rabin's statement that beatings were not used as punishment, but only to quell riots.

"In order to make people in the camps aware of the army's presence during curfews, we were given orders to knock on doors, enter inside and take the men out," reporter Menachem Shizaf quoted the 20-year-old soldier as saying.

"We entered almost every other house. We stood the men outside with their faces against a wall, and while questioning them, the soldiers beat them with clubs. The men screamed in pain," the soldier said.

"This whole business caused serious arguments among soldiers. Over time, the number who opposed the beatings grew, but no one refused an order."

THE NCR $300,000 STAKEHOLDER ESSAY COMPETITION FOR STUDENTS

THE MISSION

THE CHALLENGE

THE RULES

TO CREATE VALUE

At NCR, we've found that in order to create value, we must first satisfy the legitimate expectations of every person with a stake in our company. We call these people our stakeholders, and we attempt to satisfy their expectations by promoting partnerships in which everyone is a winner.

- We believe in building mutually beneficial and enduring relationships with all of our stakeholders, based on conducting business activities with integrity and respect.
- We take customer satisfaction personally: we are committed to providing superior value in our products and services on a continuing basis.
- We respect the individuality of each employee and foster an environment in which employees' creativity and productivity are encouraged, recognized, valued and rewarded.
- We think of our suppliers as partners who share our goal of achieving the highest quality standards and the most consistent level of service.
- We are committed to being caring and supportive corporate citizens within the worldwide communities in which we operate.
- We are dedicated to creating value for our shareholders and financial communities by performing in a manner that will enhance the return on their investments.

TO WIN

We're so committed to our mission that we're encouraging the next generation of leaders to re-examine America's business values. We're doing this by holding the NCR Stakeholder Essay Competition which all full-time undergraduate and graduate college or university students may enter. Entries should explore the topic: "Creating Value for All Stakeholders in Corporations and/or Not-for-Profit Organizations."

The student chosen as the first place winner will be awarded $50,000 cash. Plus, the entrant's school will receive $100,000 in NCR data processing equipment. The second place winner will receive $15,000 cash and the entrant's school will receive $35,000 in equipment. One hundred $1,000 awards of merit will be given to chosen participants. In addition, selected award-winning entrants will be invited to attend the first NCR International Symposium on Stakeholders to be held June 9 & 10, 1988, in Dayton, Ohio.

- 1) The NCR Stakeholder Essay Competition is open to any full-time undergraduate or graduate student attending an accredited college or university in the United States or its territories.
- 2) Entries must be original, unpublished work on the topic: "Creating Value for All Stakeholders in Corporations and/or Not-for-Profit Organizations." Essays must not exceed 3,000 words. Areas of discussion may include, but are not limited to: Ethics, Corporate Governance, Strategic Management, Social Responsibility, or Managing Change as these topics relate to managing for stakeholders.
- 3) Entries must be typed, double-spaced on 8½" x 11" bond paper, one side only. A separate cover sheet should list the entrant's name, school, home address and title of the essay. Subsequent pages should be numbered sequentially and include the essay title in the upper right margin. Winners will be required to produce proof of current full-time college or university enrollment.
- 4) All entries must be postmarked by March 31, 1988, and received by April 15, 1988 to be eligible for consideration. Submit entries to: NCR Stakeholder Essay Competition, NCR Corporation, Stakeholder Relations Division, Dayton, Ohio 45479. NCR is not responsible for, and will not consider, late, lost or misdirected entries.
- 5) In the event any prize winner is a minor, the cash award will be made to his/her parent or guardian.
- 6) Awards to individuals will be reported as income on IRS Form 1099. All taxes are the responsibility of the recipients.
- 7) Award winners will be required to sign publicity releases and affidavits of eligibility and compliance with all rules governing the competition. Failure to return executed affidavits and releases within 15 days of receipt will cause the award to be null and void.
- 8) All entries become the property of NCR and will not be returned.
- 9) By participating in this competition entrants agree to these rules and the decisions of the judges which shall be final in all respects, and further agree to the use of their names, likenesses and entries for NCR advertising and publicity purposes without any further compensation.

State and territorial judges will consist of panels that include NCR stakeholders. Final selections will be made from state and territory winners by a national panel of judges.

If clarification is necessary, call (513) 445-1667, 8am-5pm EST.

Award winners will be notified on or about May 16, 1988. To obtain a list of finalists, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to:

Aspirin: 'an amazing drug'

Associated Press

BOSTON - People have taken aspirin since ancient times, but the ubiquitous white tablet has become a glamour drug of modern medicine, good for a growing list of seemingly unrelated ills.

"It's an absolutely amazing drug," says Harold DeMonaco, director of pharmacy at Massachusetts General Hospital.

Impressive enough are its best-known attributes - aspirin's power to ease pain, lower fever and relieve inflammation. But that's just the beginning.

In its latest and perhaps most dramatic incarnation, aspirin turns out to be a potent weapon against heart attacks. A study published in Thursday's New England Journal of Medicine shows that healthy men who take aspirin every other day can cut their risk of heart attack almost in half.

"Anyone practicing medicine has always been amazed at how utilitarian aspirin is and how widely it has been used for many different purposes," said Dr. Lawrence Cohen of Yale Medical School.

If aspirin is a miracle drug, as the people who make it like to say, then it's a miracle that's already widely experienced. The Aspirin Foundation, a trade organization, says Americans take more than 80 million aspirin tablets a day.

It's also a miracle with drawbacks.

Aspirin makes the blood less likely to form clots, or thrombosis. This is how it prevents heart attacks. But at the same time, this increases the chances of unwanted bleeding.

"Aspirin is a major cause of bleeding in our society," says Dr. Daniel Deyken of Boston University Medical School.

"Thrombosis is an even larger cause of grief, but you can't get away scot-free."

Studies have shown that one dose of aspirin can make a person's stomach release up to a teaspoon of blood. People with active ulcers are usually urged to avoid aspirin.

Aspirin also can cause stomach upsets. Prolonged, heavy doses can interfere with kidney function. Use in children with fevers has been linked with a rare illness called Reye's syndrome.

For these reasons, experts caution that people should consult their physicians before taking aspirin day after day to prevent heart attacks.

Because aspirin is so common, many people don't take it seriously, said Dr. Arthur Jackowitz of West Virginia University's School of Pharmacy.

German abducted in Lebanon

Associated Press

BEIRUT, Lebanon - Seven gunmen seized a West German in Syrian-policed west Beirut on Wednesday. A radio report said a Shiite Moslem militia leader ordered the abduction to pressure West Germany into freeing his two jailed brothers.

The kidnapping occurred as Mohammed Hamadi, accused in a TWA hijacking, took the stand in the Duesseldorf trial of brother Abbas Hamadi, who allegedly abducted two West Germans in Beirut last year in a bid to free him.

The third brother, Abdul-Hadi Hamadi, heads the security apparatus of Hezbollah, the most militant pro-Iranian faction in Lebanon.

Ralph Rudolf Schray, 30, was grabbed as he walked across a sidestreets off the Hamra commercial thoroughfare at 11:05 a.m., said a police spokesman, who by regulation cannot be identified.

The stocky, blond Schray works for an engineering company and has lived in Lebanon for most of his life. Police said the kidnappers had called Schray's Palestinian uncle, but made no demands. The uncle refused to talk to reporters.

"The kidnappers did not state any demands," the police spokesman said, adding that it was not clear who they were.

However, a high-ranking official with Abdul-Hadi Hamadi's militia informed a relative of Schray that Abdul-Hadi ordered the abduction "to put pressure on Bonn so that it would release his two jailed brothers," the Christian-run Voice of Lebanon quoted the relative as saying. It did not name the relative.

Earlier, the judge in the Hamadi trial warned that if the Schray kidnapping were linked to the proceedings, "it could make the situation tougher here."

Schray was the first foreigner abducted in Moslem west Beirut since June. His kidnapping brings to 22 the number of foreigners held hostage in Lebanon. One other West German is a captive, and his abductors have demanded the release of Mohammed and Abbas Hamadi.

Substitute fat cuts calories

Associated Press

NEW YORK -NutraSweet Co. on Wednesday unveiled the first all-natural substitute for fat that mimics its rich taste and texture but cuts the calorie content in ice cream, butter and other foods by up to 80 percent.

Visions of guilt-free treats inspired medical experts and investors alike to develop the substance, which is being called Simplese and is made of ground-up protein from fresh egg whites or milk, the company said.

Simplese does not require regulatory approval, and products using it could reach the market within 12 to 18 months, Robert Shapiro, NutraSweet's chairman and chief executive, told a crowded news conference. NutraSweet is the maker of the most widely used no-calorie sweetener.

Simplese could help reduce diseases stemming from fat-heavy diets that cause 100,000 premature deaths annually in the United States, said Vernon Young of Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

"My colleagues and I are really very excited," said Young, a professor of nutritional biochemistry who was recently appointed to the scientific advisory board of the Skokie, Ill.-based NutraSweet.

Simplese could help people lose weight and cut their cholesterol intake by providing a way to do so without sacrificing taste, Young said. "Food," he said, "is meant to be enjoyed."

The fat substitute even received a cautiously favorable reaction from the Center for Science in the Public Interest, a Washington-based watchdog organization.

The center has been lobbying against Procter & Gamble Co.'s proposed fat substitute, olestra, which was announced last May and is being scrutinized by the Food and Drug Administration.

"It (Simplese) certainly offers interesting possibilities, although it doesn't mean automatic health benefits to consumers," said Dr. Michael Jacobson, the center's executive director.

In Washington, FDA spokesman Bill Grigg said, "The NutraSweet Co. has not yet provided the FDA with enough information for an appraisal, but the agency will look at the substance to determine whether it presents any regulatory, or in particular, safety issues."

New AIDS virus found in patient

NEWARK, N.J. -A second AIDS virus that was discovered 2 years ago in West Africa and later spread to Europe has now been discovered for the first time in a patient in the United States, researchers said Wednesday.

The researchers at the University of Medicine and Dentistry of New Jersey said it is the first time the virus has been seen in the Western Hemisphere.

The virus is called HIV-2, for human immunodeficiency virus, type 2. That distinguishes it from the original AIDS virus, designated HIV-1.

Officials at the New Jersey hospital said the patient in whom HIV-2 was found has developed AIDS as a result of the infection.

The officials would not release the identity or location of the patient and would not say when the diagnosis was made.

Gail Lloyd of the government's Center for Disease Control in Atlanta confirmed that the case is the first diagnosis of HIV-2 infection in the Western Hemisphere.

The university said in a statement that investigations have revealed no evidence that the patient with HIV-2 has spread the virus to anybody else in the country.

Dr. Myron Essex, a researcher at Harvard University, has maintained the HIV-2 virus does not cause illness as severe or in the same frequency as the HIV-1 virus, a view disputed by researchers in the United States and France.

"It was inevitable that we'd see a case here. But there is no cause for alarm," Essex said Wednesday.

Luc Montagnier of the Pasteur Institute in Paris, who discovered HIV-2 and was one of the discoverers of the original AIDS virus, said illness caused by the HIV-2 virus is exactly the same as the illness caused by HIV-1.

Kirk Petersen, a spokesman for the New Jersey hospital, declined to reveal any more details about the diagnosis and said further questions would be answered at a news conference Thursday.

Last June at the international AIDS conference in Washington, researchers predicted that the virus would soon arrive in the United States, but they said it would not herald a second AIDS epidemic.

The FBI got its authority to conduct the probe from an executive order signed by President Reagan in December 1981 that allows the bureau and the CIA to watch people even if they are not suspected of breaking the law or acting on behalf of a foreign power, Ratner said.

"The CISPES files gathered by FBI headquarters show that the investigation was used as one of the pretexts for the harassment and surveillance that was being reported to us, and that hundreds of individuals and organizations came within its sweep," she said.

Ratner said the center is considering filing a lawsuit to stop the FBI from conducting similar investigations in the future.

off-campus party-goers, procedures on alcohol sensor tests and the poor attitudes of some students and some police officers, Feles noted.

The officials were receptive to what the committee had to say, he added.

"We offered some, they offered some and we got along without any problem," Feles said.

Nagy explained that "police don't go looking to bust parties" but have responsibility to others in the community, Feles said.

If a student has a complaint about an officer's actions, the police officials said, the student should "immediately" call the department and talk to either the shift commander or a superior officer, Feles said.

"The impression that we (the committee) got was that they (the police) really care about Notre Dame students," Feles added.

A program to have student representatives join police during their regular patrols in the neighborhood is being considered, Feles said.

"This way we can meet with patrolmen on a one-to-one basis in a non-confrontational setting," Feles said, adding the program will help to improve relations between students and the police.

The Council also heard about procedures for the upcoming student body president and vice-president, student senate and class officer elections by Jim Grace and John Wilson of Ombudsman and Student Government Chief of Staff Mike Jaeger.

The members were informed to pick up election materials at Student Government offices between 4-6 p.m. on Feb. 15 for student body elections and 4-6 p.m. on Mar. 7 for class officer elections.

Run-off elections will be held if no candidate receives a simple majority, Jaeger said. He also asked for help in counting votes the night of the election.

Baby abandoned in freezing home

Associated Press

CHICAGO - A 7-month-old baby found abandoned in an unheated apartment wearing a wet snowsuit but no shoes, socks or gloves will not need surgery to save her frostbitten limbs, as another child did last week, doctors said Wednesday.

Dominique Starns was suffering from hypothermia and frostbite when found early Tuesday by a friend of her 18-year-old mother. Wayne Brown said he had demanded that the teen-ager tell him where the baby was, then discovered Dominique lying on frozen rags in the abandoned West Side apartment.

Officials estimated she had been left alone for at least two days, but she was reported to be fine Wednesday at Mount Sinai Medical Center.

Carolina Starns was charged with felony child abandonment. Prosecutors met Wednesday to decide whether to ask a judge to grant temporary custody of the infant to the Department of Children and Family Services, said Terry Levin, spokesman for the Cook County State's Attorney.

It was the second time in as many weeks a young mother from the Chicago area had been charged with abandoning a child with no protection against a numbing Midwest winter.

"We average one (abandonment) a month and she pretty much fits the pattern," Dave Schneidman, spokesman for the child-welfare agency, said of Carolina Starns. "Young, single, unemployed, facing another mouth to feed, a responsibility that must seem overwhelming."

"People should weep as much for the mother as for the child," he added.

Spokeswoman Jan Sugar said doctors estimate Dominique had been abandoned at least 48 hours when found.

"Everybody here was cheered because she responded so well to warming, and she will not lose any of her appendages," Ms. Sugar said. "She was dehydrated, but she's taking fluids well."

She said several callers already had offered to donate money to help the child and that at least one offered to become a foster parent.

Racism persists in rivalry

Associated Press

EVANSVILLE, Ind. -The basketball coach at Bosse High School said Wednesday his team no longer will play Heritage Hills High School in Lincoln City because of a series of racial taunts, including the burning of a cross this week.

"I'm not going back," said Bosse Coach Joseph Mullan.

"I'll forfeit before I go back. If I was a parent of one of those players, I would not allow them to be subjected to that kind of abuse."

The cross-burning, usually associated with the white supremacist Ku Klux Klan, took place about a half-mile from Heritage Hills as the Evansville team's bus stopped at a railroad crossing, Mullan said.

People riding in a pickup truck and a car appeared to be tracking the bus and communicating by citizens band radio as it neared the school for Tuesday night's game, the Evansville coach said.

Mullan said several young people could be seen running from the 6-foot flaming cross. The players and cheerleaders on board the bus were shocked, Mullan said. The Bosse team received a police escort out of Spencer County after winning the game, 77-75.

"I think 'appalled' is the word that you use here," said David Bennett, assistant principal at Heritage Hills.

Bennett said he did not know whether anyone connected with Heritage was responsible for the incident, but that police had been asked to investigate. Bosse Principal Robert Adams said he was considering terminating a contract between the two schools that provides for basketball games, the only sport in which the two play each other.

The cross burning was not the first racial incident involving the schools, Mullan said.

Two years ago a Heritage Hills fan threw an empty chicken box on the court after a game between the schools and made verbal taunts, Mullan said. Then, four years ago a group of Heritage Hills fans showed up for a game wearing hubcaps and crocheted watermelons around their necks, the coach said.

Mullan said 22 percent of Bosse's students and four of the basketball team's five starting players are black. Heritage Hills has no black basketball players.

"We normally just receive a lot of verbal abuse" at Heritage Hills, Mullan said. "We did receive some of that last night. They were making sounds like monkeys, which really affects some of my black players."

None of the Heritage Hills team members or coaches have participated in the harassment, the Evansville coach said.

Bosse standout Gary Frazier said the Tuesday night insult helped spur his team-leading performance.

"On that last play, I saw the 'T' in Patriots (on a Heritage Hills jersey) and it reminded me of the burning cross we saw on the way here," Frazier, who is black, told The Evansville Courier. "That inspired me."

The 6-foot-5 senior made the deciding basket in the Bulldogs' victory with less than two minutes remaining, and stole a pass with six seconds left to preserve the win.

Weight jokes need rethinking

Dear Editor:

What's the difference between a beached whale and an ND chick? Three pounds.

How do you breach the gap? Feed the whale.

What's the difference between a Lyons chick and a stick of butter? None-They're both 98 percent fat.

Jokes like these have become standard campus humor and an accepted source of material for events such as the Morrissey Christmas skits, Sorin's talent show and the annual Keenan Revue. This form of humor is commonplace, and continued exposure to such jokes results in immunity to their implications and potential consequences. Women are expected to be good sports, take these jokes in stride and appreciate "fat jokes" as being "all in good fun." But jokes with such serious stigma attached necessarily have equally serious repercussions.

As hall staff of a women's dorm, we feel a responsibility to express our concern about the impact these "jokes" can have. Our culture is one which places great importance on a person's exterior, and women are made to feel the connection between self-esteem and physical appearance. Weight-related humor magnifies this pressure to be thin to maintain their self-esteem.

We recognize that "fat jokes" do not necessarily lead directly to the overnight development of an eating disorder. However, these jokes create the delusion that with thinness comes acceptance. Distortion of expectations becomes so great that food abuse seems an appropriate vehicle to increased self-esteem. Here at Notre Dame, women abuse food and abuse themselves to avoid being categorized as objects of these attempts at humor.

These jokes are abusive and insensitive, and seem to us to be blatantly inappropriate entertainment for an intellectual Christian community. If Notre Dame is indeed the community we like to think it is, then we all need to be aware of the effects of our actions on fellow community members. Someone must pay the price for laughs gained at the expense of others, and Notre Dame women cannot afford the cost of "fat jokes." Directly and indirectly, Notre Dame men are also affected by the attitudes tied to these jokes. Negative stereotyping limits both men and women in their development and adds strain to an already inhibited social atmosphere.

Eating disorders are a human problem and as such require a human response. As the opening night of the Keenan Revue nears, and moreover as we continue daily to face these issues, we ask you, men and women both, to consider just how funny those "fat jokes" really are.

Homeless belong in national light

Dear Editor:

In his attempts to clarify the debate on the homeless, Glenn Fogarty writes on Monday, Jan. 25, that "the very nature of the present homeless population dictates a need for more than simply some beds and a roof." He goes on to say that "help for the homeless... (should be) help that is well-intentioned but more importantly, well-planned and specific." I cannot disagree with these statements.

But beyond these easy, albeit worthwhile generalities, Fogarty is misinformed about the numbers and the nature of the homeless, about the causes of homelessness and about what is currently being done to help the homeless in the United States.

First, Fogarty places the number of homeless between "250,000 and 350,000" persons. That figure is presumably taken from the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) study in 1984. Soon after the 1984 study, a House subcommittee revealed serious flaws in the study, including deliberately low estimates and incomplete sampling. A later subcommittee investigation found a cautious number of 1.5 million homeless persons in America.

Second, Fogarty misrepresents the major dynamic of homelessness. The number of homeless persons in the United States has increased about 600 percent since 1976, due mainly to the rapid increase in the number of homeless families with children, the fastest growing sector of the homeless. Today there are over 500,000 homeless children in the United States. According to Jonathan Kozol in "Rachel and Her Children," three-fourths of all homeless persons in Massachusetts are children and their parents.

Third, Fogarty says that the root cause of homelessness is "behavioral difficulties" and that the common denominator for nearly all of the homeless is a "varying degree of mental illness." The truth is that about 30 to 40 percent of the homeless population suffers from mental illness, but that more than half are economically dislocated. Nearly half of the homeless held jobs in the last five years.

Furthermore, the main reason for the rise in homelessness is the lack of low-income housing. Half a million low-income housing units are eliminated every year to gentrification, arson and demolition. Add to this the near doubling of all rent prices in the ten major cities since 1975, the 66 percent decrease in federal spending on housing since 1981, and changes in the urban economy that exacerbate unemployment for unskilled labor.

Behavioral difficulties? For a certain sector of the homeless, specifically the mentally ill, participation in the economy is indeed difficult due to individual problems. But for 60 to 70 percent of the homeless population, structural changes in the urban economy, including high rent, unemployment, and eviction, have a more profound impact on the number of homeless.

Fourth, Fogarty claims that "funds for such a system are readily available if one looks closely." In fact, federal housing assistance has dropped about 75 percent since 1981, from $33 billion to $8 billion. And more than half of the assistance for the homeless has come from non-profit private foundations, not from public monies. It is clear that "readily available" funds are not accessible.

Finally, the crucial mistake in Fogarty's article lies in his lack of prescription. Where does he look for solutions? He derails homeless advocates for placing homelessness on the political agenda. Unfortunately for Fogarty, that's exactly where the issue belongs.

The New York Times said recently "Americans are ready to put housing back on the nation's agenda." Those, like Fogarty, who minimize the problem of homelessness, or the lack of low-income housing, of unemployment in our central cities, only prevent the issue from gaining attention that it warrants. Our cities have at least 1.5 million homeless people. These people deserve to be a topic of our political debate.

A valediction forbidding mourning

This column is not the column I considered writing. I considered writing about The Observer's coverage of AIDS-awareness in Tuesday's paper. I would have praised The Observer for its efforts at calling its readers' attention to the AIDS crisis, and to the need world. I have received hundreds of letters telling me as much. None of them has ever told me, "On the faces of dying smokers, we must see the face of Christ."

The fear of getting AIDS almost generates a greater panic than the fear of getting lung with weakness, for their personal tragedies. Sometimes, for a little while, I also feel anger at the scandal they caused and the pain and embarrassment they brought their families, because I believe they had the grace to do better. But finally, I learn some lesson from them, even if it's a general lesson like "No man is an island." I have no problem in seeing any of their faces as the face of Christ; but not as Christ, the sinless victim. They are no worse than any other sinners; the forgiveness of sinners is what Christianity is all about; and one of us does not cast stones at the other. But the problem in the Church today is that sinners don't ask to be forgiven; they insist on being white-washed. If they destroy themselves by folly, they regard themselves as more sinned against than sinning.

The terrible truth is--if I can believe what I read--some AIDS patients learn nothing from their experiences. Their only regret is that their lives can't continue in the same carefree way, as though there were no consequences to be faced as a result of their, or my own, or any man's, unabridged hedonism. Even if I weren't a Catholic, I shouldn't buy their point of view. I don't wish to see them racked by guilt as they face the end. But couldn't they have the kind of sorrow a smoker has when he's coughing his lungs out, realizing that the troubles he has have been brought on himself?

This, as I have mentioned, is part of the column I didn't write; but if I had written it, I would have moralized even more. What stopped me from writing it? It was the fear of sounding like Jimmy the Greek. Maybe, in spite of myself, I sound as ignorant or insensitive as Jimmy the Greek; if so, I'm sorry. All I have ever wanted to do is to warn people, especially the young, about hurting themselves. Now that the campus is serious about dealing with the AIDS crisis, I don't want to see you sugar-coat ugliness with sentimentality.

Some of you, hating what I say, will accuse me of minority-bashing, though that's far from my intention. Others, hating the minority, will use any old stigma to beat up the sick and dying. Perhaps the rest of you will forgive me for sounding like Jimmy the Greek, and believe that I'm telling the truth when I say it means the world to me to be understood as trying to be fair.

But, in dealing with AIDS patients, I don't want to be limited to a valediction that prohibits mourning. Why waste the truth about a sad death? "Don't cry for me, Argentina" doesn't make much of a funeral anthem.

cancer from the side-stream smoke of a cigarette addict. AIDS patients are regarded as more untouchable than the certified untouchables of the Hindu caste system. Ostracizing human beings because we're needlessly fearful or ignorant is a reprehensible fault in a Christian. As a priest, I have been warned over and over again about the injustice of casting stones--at a wino, a junkie, a loser; there, but for the grace of God, go I: a hemophiliac, an IV drug-user, a bi-sexual.

But in our efforts to bend over backward to be fair in our treatment of unfortunates, we tend to gloss over a dismal, though salutary, piece of awareness. The AIDS illness has spread as a result of an unprecedented orgy of sexual self-indulgence in certain American cities where members of a minority life-style gather en masse. It is frequently pointed out that the number of casual, even anonymous, sexual contacts made among them in the course of a year numbers in the hundreds, or even in the thousands.

The simple truth is, we should see the face of any loser as the face of Christ.

Experience shows that a creature's physical well-being is diminished as a result of abuse. Human beings, in their physical make-up, are rather finely calibrated. I can destroy myself by the use, or the over-use, of drugs, alcohol, tobacco, fats, sweets, or any other excess. If I die of lung cancer from smoking, I will not feel ill-used if my friends are warned off by the horrible example I gave them. Ex-smokers at the point of death have been appearing on television to warn viewers of the consequence of smoking. AIDS-patients, dying, could have a message to leave us as a warning about having sex with the stranger who buys you a drink.

Some priest friends of mine have died of AIDS. I weep for all of them: for their early deaths, for the loss to the world of their talents and goodness, for their inability to cope of educating the campus about the truth of AIDS. Would it be churlish to ask why, in a two-page spread, The Observer didn't make a greater effort to inform us of the facts about AIDS when the essential warnings can be summarized on a single-sheet handout? If "education is the only vaccine available," The Observer should get on with the work of educating us; and this includes more than a list of phone numbers we might call and seminars we might attend. Let's face it: no forum around here gets as much attention as The Observer. Some informative columns from writers who know what they are talking about could do a lot to dispel the myths. Two of the toughest facts of life that need to be emphasized are: (1) the sexual revolution, with its ad libitum pairing off, is over; (2) the use of condoms could help prevent the spread of disease. There's nothing startling here, nothing arcane or clinical, nothing you haven't heard before. Yet lives could be saved if the sexually permissive would put restraints on themselves.

We were advised by The Observer that the administration of Saint Mary's and Notre Dame must provide information about preventing AIDS. This is true, but isn't it ironic? Neither school sponsored the sexual revolution; in fact they did their best to discourage casual sex. Now that the horse is out of the barn door, they're reminded rather forcefully of their duties as educators to get old Bessie back again, like parents called upon by dating teenagers who are now facing a problem. Those kids used to tell their parents that they knew what they were doing.

I love The Observer staff; I owe them so much. Long-winded as I am myself, I wouldn't dream of accusing them of preaching. Even if I were, preaching isn't so bad as long as it doesn't turn sentimental. Does it help, when you're asking for compassion for AIDS victims, to get sentimental? I read: "In the faces of AIDS victims, we must see the face of Christ." The simple truth is that we should see the face of any loser as the face of Christ. I'm a smoker. This means that in the eyes of millions of non-smokers, I'm guilty of a filthy habit that endangers the rest of the

"I used to live in Keenan, and I'm definitely going to the Revue and the party. Former residents get tickets automatically. I think it's popular because people like to make fun of the University. Some of the stuff you see on stage is pretty raw, and was originally cut from the skits, but it shows up anyway. If other dorms tried to do a Revue, it just wouldn't work."

Jerry Graf

"I would have liked to go to the Revue, but I didn't feel like lining up for tickets. It's interesting, in a sense, that what you do and see every day is put on stage and exaggerated, which is what makes the Revue funny. You can see yourself in those situations and laugh."

Mazlin Mohammad

"I'm not interested in going. I'm sure a lot of it is good fun, but it would bother me if there were too many cut-downs. One of my friends said that she was tired of hearing Notre Dame and Saint Mary's being cut down over and over again, and she's not going back for more."

Anne Marie Wolf

"I wasn't able to get tickets. I've never been to it, so I have no idea why it's so popular. I'd like to go sometime, though."

Florentine Hoelker
Freshman

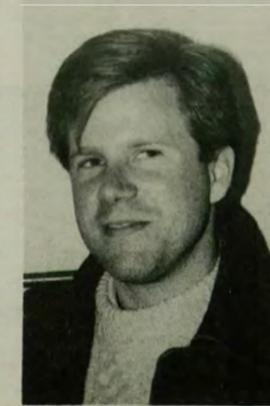

"I'm going to the Revue Friday night. Someone gave me an extra ticket. I guess you have to have connections to get a ticket. I'm a freshman, and I'm going because I heard it was one of the big things at Notre Dame, and I have a lot of friends at Keenan. I think it's popular because it's put on by students."

Rita Robinett
Freshman

"I'm in the Revue. I sometimes wonder why it's so popular. I guess it's because this is such a boring time of year. It's a lot of work for the people involved. At auditions, you don't think any of the stuff is funny, but for some reason on Thursday night, first show, it all comes together. Every year, people seem to enjoy it more and more."

Phoenix Open begins today

Associated Press

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. -The perception, Bob Tway said, is that he had a bad year in 1987.

"That's not right. It wasn't a bad year. It just wasn't a great one," Tway said before a practice round for the $650,000 Phoenix Open golf tournament which begins Thursday.

"People think I had a bad year because I didn't live up to their expectations. I can't let myself be concerned with that. Because of the year I had in 1986, their expectations may have been too high," he said.

In 1986, Tway won the PGA national championship and three other titles. He just missed the money-winning title with $652,780. He was the PGA player of the Year.

Last year, he did not win a tournament. He dropped from second to 47th on the money-winning list.

Tway is in a 144-man field involved in the chase for a $117,000 first prize.

Vandy rolls past Kentucky

Associated Press

NASHVILLE, Tenn. -Scott Draud scored 22 points, 18 on 3-point goals, to lead Vanderbilt to an 83-66 Southeastern Conference victory over Kentucky Wednesday night.

The victory snapped a 13-game Vanderbilt losing streak to Kentucky and allowed the Commodores to improve to 12-4 for the season and 5-3 in SEC.

Kentucky, who last lost to Vandy in the 1981 SEC tournament in Birmingham, Ala., fell to 13-3 overall and 6-3 in the SEC. The last time the Wildcats lost to Vanderbilt in Nashville was in 1979.

The Commodores, who connected on 11 3-point shots during the game, outscored the Wildcats 20-8 in the final 8:05 of the game to seal the victory.

Rex Chapman topped Kentucky's scorers with 18 points.

Indiana 75, Ohio St. 71

COLUMBUS, Ohio -Dean Garrett scored 22 points and Lyndon Jones 21 as Indiana used a revised lineup to beat Ohio State 75-71 in a Big Ten Conference game Wednesday night.

Indiana, 10-6 overall and 2-4 in the Big Ten, trailed by as many as seven points early in the game and by three points midway through the second half. The victory put an end to a two-game Big Ten losing streak.

Keith Smart, who hit the winning field goal in last year's national championship game, did not play until the final 1:39 and was scoreless. Forward Rick Calloway, a three-year starter, did not play at all.

Joe Hillman added 13 points and Jay Edwards 11 for the Hoosiers, who were 18 of 18 at the free-throw line.

Garrett was 10 of 10 at the free-throw line, while Jones, a freshman who was averaging 4.5 points a game, hit 9 of 10 field goal attempts.

Jerry Francis had 20 points and Jay Burson 19 for Ohio State, 10-6 and 3-3, which had a three-game Big Ten winning streak end.

Indiana, which had been shooting 45 percent from the field in the Big Ten, hit 27 of 51 shots for 53 percent. Ohio State was 25 of 58 for 43 percent.

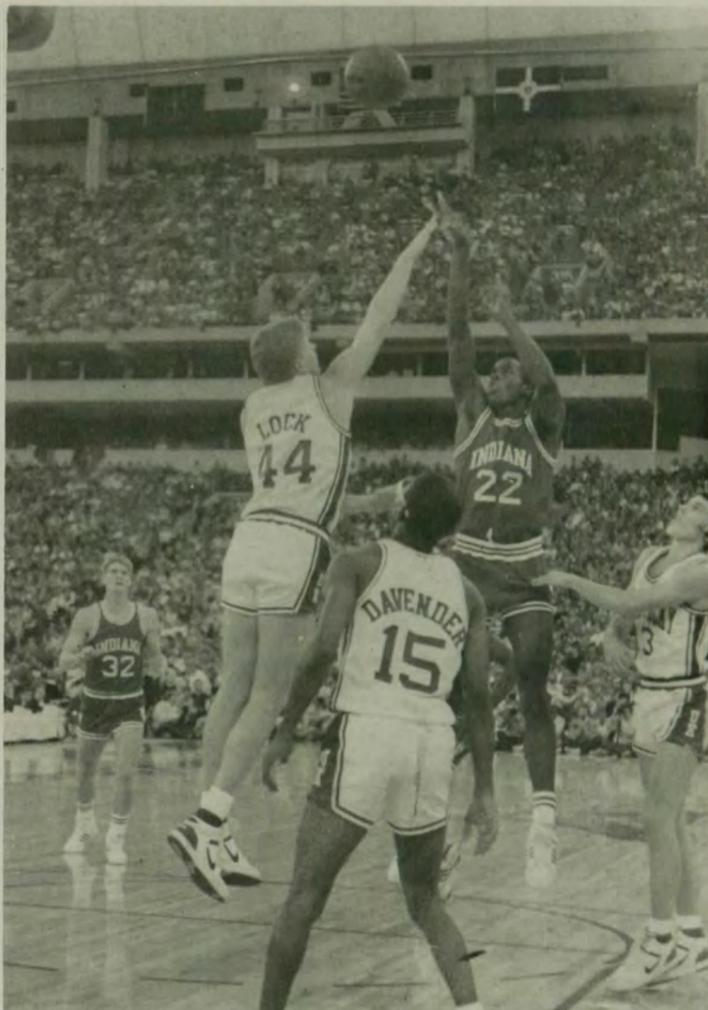

Ohio State took its last lead at 54-53 on a Francis hook shot with 9:45 remaining. Indiana then hit its next three shots from the field - one each by Garrett, Hillman and Jones - to take a 59-54 lead.

Oklahoma 109, Iowa St. 86

NORMAN, Okla. -Harvey Grant scored 30 points and grabbed 12 rebounds Wednesday night as 10th-ranked Oklahoma sprinted to a 109-86 Big Eight victory over No. 12 Iowa State.

In other college basketball action Wednesday, Georgetown erased Boston College 58-36, Lafayette edged Lehigh 66-64, St. John's scalped Villanova 60-55, Florida A&M rattled South Carolina State 85-78, Georgia trounced Ole Miss 86-70, Virginia Tech gobbled Virginia 66-64, Auburn slapped Alabama 84-74, Florida topped LSU 61-50, Tennessee toppled Mississippi State 63-48, DePaul crushed Marquette 81-66, Minnesota defeated Michigan State 59-56, North Carolina State stopped Maryland 83-81, Miami blew past Providence 83-77, Syracuse whipped Seton Hall 87-66 and Nebraska tipped Kansas 70-68.

The Observer / Jim Carroll

Dean Garrett (22) and the Indiana Hoosiers put their Big 10 slump on hold Wednesday night with a 75-71 win over Ohio State. Rob Lock's Kentucky Wildcats did not have quite as much luck, getting trounced by Vanderbilt 83-66 in a Southeastern Conference showdown.

ing. We're not going to win if we don't get down and scrap with teams."

Butler's shooting Tuckered out in the second half, as it hit only 5-of-19 field goal attempts (26 percent). But the Bulldogs, the best free-throw shooting team in the country, connected on 20-of-23 from the stripe in the second half (including 10-of-10 from Tucker), and shot 21-of-25 (84 percent) for the game. That's a mere one percent above their mark for the season. Irish head coach Digger Phelps wasn't thrilled at raising that mark.

"We did a lousy job of taking away one of their biggest weapons - free throws," said Phelps. "But overall, I thought we played a good game. I mean, we shot 72 percent in the first half and only led by five. We thought if we stayed aggressive in the second half we could rattle them. I give a lot of credit to our defense in the second half, and to Joe Frederick, Kevin Ellery and Tim Singleton, who all helped turn that seven-point deficit into a five-point halftime lead."

Sophomore Keith Robinson also hit two big shots during that stretch and turned in a solid overall performance. The 6-9 forward scored 14 points and grabbed five rebounds in only 22 minutes. Robinson is beginning to feel very comfortable with Phelps' system and considers this game a step in Applications for Theodore's Student Managers for the 1988-1989 school year will be available in the Student Activities Office after Feb. 5. They must be turned in by Feb. 22.

Irish open varied schedule in first match with an Ivy

By FRANK PASTOR
Sports Writer

It is often said that variety is the spice of life. If this is indeed the case, then the Notre Dame women's tennis team looks to enjoy the zesty flavor imparted by its spring schedule.

For starters, the Irish kick off their dual match season Friday through Sunday at the Yale Quadrangular in New Haven, Connecticut.

Other teams participating in the Quadrangular include Yale, Brown and Wake Forest. The inclusion of Yale and Brown marks the first time the Irish have faced Ivy League competition.

"They have a lot of depth in their lineup," said Irish coach Michele Gelfman. "They play excellent all-court games and are consistent baseline players."

Ivy League competition is only part of a unique schedule the Irish plan to tackle this spring. In a spring break trip to the University of Nevada-Las Vegas, Notre Dame will play Cal-State Northridge, Colorado-Boulder, UNLV, Alabama, Princeton and Utah. Add this to the traditional diet of Midwestern schools from the Big 10 (Michigan, Michigan State, Ohio State, Northwestern, Wisconsin) and Mid-Eastern Michigan (Toledo, Eastern Michigan, Western Michigan, Miami of Ohio) and you get an idea of the variety on this year's schedule.

The Quadrangular follows the standard dual match format, which consists of six singles and three doubles competitions per match. Gelfman plans to concentrate more on singles this week. Last week's practices were devoted almost exclusively to doubles play in preparation for the Gopher Doubles Invitational.

The women emerged from last week's Gopher Invitational with three solid doubles teams. The dynamic duo of freshman CeCe Cahill and senior captain Michelle Dasso comprise Notre Dame's top doubles combination.

Gelfman chose to postpone a challenge match between the challengers of Stephanie Tolsted-Kim Pacella and Alice Lohrer-Natalie Illig. Gelfman cited "a number of academic commitments" which the women were expected to fulfill as the reason for the delay.

The challenge match will be played after the team returns from this weekend's tournament.

Overshadowed by the outbreak of these new doubles pairings at last week's Gopher Invitational was the return of Lohrer to the lineup. An injury suffered during the fall campaign kept her sidelined for much of the season.

"Alice came back with flying colors," enthused Gelfman. "She's still not 100 percent yet, but probably around 80 percent. She should be back to normal by mid-February. That will be a good indicator."

The Observer / Suzanne Poch

With the Notre Dame women's tennis team opening its spring dual match season this weekend, sophomore Alice Lohrer has returned to action. Lohrer was out with an injury for much of the fall season.

Elway wins an admirer in Starr

Associated Press

EVANSVILLE, Ind.—Bart Starr, the most valuable player in the first two Super Bowls, is impressed with quarterback John Elway of the Denver Broncos.

Elway, whose National Football League team will take on the Washington Redskins in Super Bowl XXII in San Diego on Sunday, is a careful orchestrator of a rhythm passing game, fundamentally strong, disciplined and a master technician, Starr said.

"You combine all that with the ability to sprint away from defenders," he said during an appearance in Evansville. "There's such pressure on the defense it's hard to describe."

When Starr led the Green Bay Packers to a 35-10 victory over the Kansas City Chiefs on Jan. 15, 1967, the contest was called the World Championship Game. About 30,000 seats in the Los Angeles Memorial Coliseum were empty.

The showdown between the NFL and AFL champions wasn't called the Super Bowl until the next year, when the Packers defeated the Oakland Raiders 33-14. But Starr wasn't surprised the championship quickly became a national institution.

"Even in those early years, I detected that the game was something very special," he said. "I knew it was a unique happening. I'm proud to have been a part of it."

Starr talked to reporters Tuesday before an address to the Evansville Association of Sports Enthusiasts. He is promoting his recently released autobiography, "Starr," written with Murray Olderman.

The three-time NFL passing leader has watched nearly every Denver home game the last two years and thinks the Broncos are determined to atone for their 39-20 loss to the New York Giants in last year's Super Bowl.

"I think they're on a mission this year," he said. "It will take a superb effort from the Redskins to derail the train."

Starr, who was elected to the Professional Football Hall of Fame in 1977, had a 53-77-3 record in nine years as head coach of the Packers.

In an era of domed stadiums and artificial turf, he remembers a 1-yard sneak for the game-winning touchdown against the Dallas Cowboys at Lambeau Field in 1967 when the temperature was 16-below. Starr prefers natural grass and outdoor football, but doesn't criticize the innovations.

"Now it becomes part of the game, adjusting to the artificial turf and unique noise levels," he said.

He also doesn't object to NFL rules changes in the late 1970s that gave the offense more freedom.

"The general intent is very good," he said. "It gave increased exposure for the pass and I see nothing wrong with it. It's properly accepted as progress."

Starr is affiliated with a group hoping to gain an expansion franchise in Phoenix, and had no comment regarding the move to that city by the St. Louis Cardinals, which is pending NFL approval.

Starr had praise for the philosophy espoused by late coach Vince Lombardi, who stressed individual sacrifice for the sake of the team.

"Everyone subordinated their own individual desires and egos to win and keep on winning," he said. "We won more championships in a shorter span than any team has won."

Nowosielski sparks fencers

Depth is key for Irish in match with rival Wayne State

By SCOTT BRUTOCAO
Sports Writer

Leszek Nowosielski and the rest of the fencing team will have their hands full as they compete this weekend, traveling to Wayne State on Friday and to a six-school meet in Dearborn, Michigan, on Saturday.

The undefeated Irish will face one of their toughest rivals in Wayne State. Competition in Saturday's meet includes Chicago, Cleveland State, Detroit, Eastern Michigan and Tri-State.

"We are going to face a very tough Wayne State team," says Irish coach Mike DeCicco. "They have added three very talented European fencers, one foilist and two epeeists, but lack our depth."

"We'll need to perform well in sabre and foil to defeat them, but I think we're ready. This will be quite a test for our young fencers."

One young fencer is Leszek Nowosielski, a freshman sabreman, who has had his share of testing in the past.

"He came to us as a highly experienced fencer from Canada," said DeCicco. "He's not only an athlete. His high school credentials are excellent."

Nowosielski was born in Montreal, Canada, and raised in Ottawa, where he learned how to fence in 1980. He was

"He's an outstanding sabreman, one who is destined to be an All-American caliber fencer, even as a freshman," says DeCicco.

His Canadian fencing reached a peak in 1987 when he won the Canadian Junior National Championships, which ensured him a spot in the Junior World Championships, held this year at Notre Dame. Only three fencers from each country are invited to compete.

Nowosielski has traveled to faraway places to fence, including Madrid, Spain, where the best junior fencers in the world assembled for the Junior World Cup. He finished 34th out of 90 contestants in the worldwide competition.

"If he's willing to work hard, he may be a future National Champion," says DeCicco.

Nowosielski is thinking the same thing.

"We've got a pretty strong team," he says, "And I'd like our team to place at least third in the NCAAs, if not first."

"I'd also like to win the National Championship individually, if not this year then the next."

Ferdinand named Horse of Year

Associated Press

NEW YORK -Ferdinand, who beat Alysheba in a battle of Kentucky Derby winners in the $3 million Breeders' Cup Classic, was named 1987 Horse of the Year on Wednesday.

Theatrical finished second in the voting, which was as close as Ferdinand's nose victory in the Classic last fall.

Ferdinand and Theatrical finished one-two in voting by the writers and trackmen of the Daily Racing Form and racing secretaries from member tracks of the Thoroughbred Racing Associations. Theatrical, a grass specialist, beat Ferdinand in voting by the National Turf Writers Association.

Ferdinand beat Theatrical 30-15 in the Daily Racing Form voting, but only 8-7 in the TRA balloting. A one-vote switch in the TRA balloting would have made Theatrical Horse of the Year.

Theatrical's margin over Ferdinand in the NTWA voting was 21-19. Alysheba finished third in the voting of all three groups. Java Gold, Manila, Groovy and Miesque also received votes.

Earlier this month, Ferdinand won the Eclipse Award as best handicap horse of 1987. Theatrical was voted grass champion and Alysheba was selected as the top 3-year-old. The Eclipse Awards will be given out at a dinner in New York Feb. 5.

Charlie Whittingham, Ferdinand's 74-year-old trainer, said he was "pleasantly surprised" but not "overly surprised" by the Horse of the Year honor. He said the deciding factor was Ferdinand's victory over Alysheba in the Nov. 21 Classic at Hollywood Park. "I think he should be a better horse this coming year," Whittingham said. "He's big. He's sound."

Boilers don't feel pressure

Associated Press

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. - Purdue's best-in-the-nation 16-game winning streak is something the Boilmakers don't want to think about, something they can't afford to dwell on.

"That's what's surprising about this team. They've stayed pretty loose, played the games as they come," says Coach Gene Keady, whose second-ranked team is unbeaten in six Big Ten Conference games and takes a 17-1 overall record to Bloomington on Saturday to face slumping Indiana.

"One of the things we've been good about is not talking about any strings, not worrying about it, just trying to improve each week," said Keady, whose 90 conference victories over the past eight seasons is tops among all Big Ten coaches.

Returning four starters from last year's 25-5 conference cochampionship team, the Boilmakers were also ranked No.2 in the 1987-88 preseason poll before losing to Iowa State in the second round of the Big Apple NIT in November.

Purdue is coming off a nationally televised non-conference victory at Louisville and will have had a week's rest before challenging the defending NCAA champion Hoosiers, who backed into a conference co-championship with Purdue last year when the Boilmakers lost their final game to Michigan.

But Purdue is the only Big Ten team with an overall series advantage against Indiana, having won 90 of their 150 games since the two rivals first played in 1901. It's been difficult winning in the Hoosiers' Assembly Hall, however, where Purdue has won only three times in the past 16 years, twice under Keady.

Indiana, losing career scoring leader Steve Alford from last year's national championship team, was 9-6 overall and 1-4 in the Big Ten going into Wednesday night's game at Ohio State.

"One of the things that has really helped us (this year) has been our balance," says Keady, who is 90-42 in Big Ten games and 166-66 overall with Purdue. "We've had five different leading scorers this year; we've had six different leading rebounders, even though we haven't been a great rebounding team. We've really been a team of great balance."

The Boilmakers have shot .600 or better from the field four times, including .661 against Louisville. For the season, Purdue has hit 52.5 percent of its shots while holding opponents to 45.2 percent. Only five opponents have shot better than 50 percent.

Applying defensive pressure like this has helped spur the Notre Dame hockey team to a 17-2-2 record this season. Marty Strasen details the rise of the hockey program on page 16.

Broncs, 'Skins revenge-minded

Associated Press

SAN DIEGO -To a man, the Denver Broncos claim that losing the Super Bowl last year gives them the motivation that will carry them to victory on Sunday.

Almost to a man, the Washington Redskins are telling them: "Hey, wait a minute. We're losers, too."

As Sunday's Super Bowl between the only two teams this decade to reach the NFL title game two years in a row drew a day nearer, a subtle game of onedownsmanship was going on. Each team was trying to claim it is the bigger loser.

It's almost as if to win a Super Bowl, you have to lose one first.

"I certainly remember both our Super Bowls," said Washington Coach Joe Gibbs, whose team beat Miami 27-17 in 1983, then was routed 38-9 by the Los Angeles Raiders the next year.

"The first one was one of the great experiences of my life. But I also had a bitter, bitter experience the next year when we lost. You'd think it would have been enough to be here, but it wasn't."

That was the general tenor of the debate over which team feels worse about its loss.

The Broncos were beaten 39-20 to the New York Giants a year ago. They claimed that the aftermath of that defeat - Denver coach Dan Reeves uses the word "haunted" to describe his feelings - has given them an unquenchable thirst that can be slaked only by victory on Sunday.

"Everybody but one team ends the season unhappy,"

Reeves said. "But the unhappiest team of all is the one that loses the Super Bowl."

The Redskins buy that argument.

But they don't buy the corollary - that because the Broncos lost last year, they have more motivation.

"There was nothing worse than that," said linebacker Neal Olkewicz, one of 13 Redskins left from the 1983 winner and one of 18 who played in the 1984 loss.

goal Schafer was aiming at before his team ever took the ice.

"It gives us an opportunity to chase some of the better student-athletes to join the team," Schafer said.

"I think everyone was surprised it happened so soon," McNeill added.

Also coming soon is a tougher schedule.

Next year the Irish plan to meet traditionally-strong teams like RPI, Boston College, Army, Ferris State, Illinois-Chicago, St. Cloud State and possibly Yale.

"The first couple of years, with big-name schools, you have to come to their place before they consider playing at yours," Schafer said. "We've got Ferris State for a game, Illinois-Chicago for one game and St. Cloud State for a couple of games here."

Perhaps the JACC should go out and buy a few "Sold Out" signs for the future.

Irish burn Butler with hot shooting

By PETE SKIKO
Sports Writer

Put all thoughts of a pre-Kentucky letdown out of your mind.

It took about half the game to do it, but the Notre Dame men's basketball team was able to finally shake loose of the Butler Bulldogs last night at the JACC, 85-66, behind 26 points from David Rivers and red-hot 61 percent field goal shooting.

But the seemingly lopsided win was very much in doubt until early in the second half, mainly because of the sweet touch of Butler's Chad Tucker. Tucker, a 6-7 fifth-year senior, scored 17 first-half points (31 for the game) and almost single-handedly kept his team in the game early.

The Bulldogs, who average less than three three-point field goals per game, connected on 6-of-7 of them in the first half alone to all but nullify Notre Dame's torrid 72 percent shooting in the half. And the sparse crowd became edgy as Butler bolted out to a 31-24 lead with 6:18 left in the half.

But the Irish went on a 16-4 run to close out the half and swing the momentum back in their favor. The key basket in the run was contributed by Rivers, who drove the lane, arched his back to avoid a defender, and tossed the ball in from behind his head while falling down. That gave the Irish breathing room at 38-34, and got the crowd into the game.

The second half was an exercise in physically wearing down a smaller team. The Irish outrebounded Butler 39-18 for the game. But Bulldog head coach Joe Sexson didn't think that the size difference was the deciding factor.

"Our 'blue collar' work was terrible," said Sexson, in his 11th year as Butler's mentor. "I was extremely disappointed with our defense, hustle, and our general ability to get physical with (Notre Dame). We might not have won tonight had we done those things - Notre

Vogel, swimmers await big meet with St. Bonaventure

By GREG GUFFEY
Sports Writer

During his first two years with the Irish swim team, Brian Vogel had to concentrate on a variety of events because of the lack of depth on the team. As a result, his performance suffered.

But, oh how the times have changed for Vogel. With the addition of a strong freshman class and more overall team depth, Vogel concentrates his efforts on basically one event, and the effects are more than noticeable.

Vogel now spends his pool time preparing for his specialty event, the breaststroke, and he has been turning in first-place times on a consistent basis. His best time of the year was a 2:11.70 clocking in the 200 breaststroke at the National Catholic Meet earlier this year.

"That's why I feel I'm coming out of the light in the breaststroke - because I can concentrate on one thing," Vogel said. "It's enabled me to focus much more on what I need to do. It's enabled me to set up training patterns for the week and to put in a certain amount of breaststroke yardage."

Vogel knows he will be in for his stiffest challenge of the season Saturday when St. Bonaventure invades Rofs Aquatic Center. The Irish dominated the East Coast squad until a few years ago when the Bonnies began to give scholarships. Given the recent success of the squad, Vogel and the Irish will be looking for some revenge this weekend.

"This is the biggest dual meet of the season," Vogel said. "We've been rivals for years."

Irish coach Tim Welsh is equally excited the arrival of St. Bonaventure.

"St. Bonaventure is one of the oldest, strongest, and most intense rivalries on the schedule," Welsh said. "The men are looking toward it as the key point on the schedule. We think we have a team that is competitive."

The women's squad, meanwhile, travels to Illinois State on Friday and then hosts St. Bonaventure on Saturday.

"The women have an extremely difficult weekend ahead," Welsh said. "Illinois State is the defending Midwest champion, and they're an excellent team. The women swam at St. Bonaventure last year and won due primarily to the absence of St. Bonaventure divers."

While he has been pointing to this meet all season, Vogel also realizes he is lucky to be on the team. He overcame injuries sustained in a car accident last summer and worked his way back into shape.

Vogel credits his emergence from those injuries into one of the top Irish contributors to the training program and coaching of Welsh. The squad trained in Arizona over semester break, and frequently practices twice a day.

"Arizona was better in a lot of ways because we got to swim outdoors," Vogel said. "It was 14 days of solid training. It was made affordable, so the whole team could go. It drew the team closer together."

Vogel, a native of Clarksville, Tennessee, who also competes in the individual medley, says he has learned to combat the pressures of collegiate swimming and the rigors of the numerous meets.

"Success in swimming is 70 percent mental," Vogel said. "You have to set aside time to relax and get away from the pool and from studies. We're in the water close to 20 hours a week. It's important to take a break every day and put everything aside."

While Vogel sets an individual goal for each meet, he does have one long-term feat he is pushing toward.

"There's nothing more that I'd like than to finish in the top three of the breaststroke at the Midwest championships," Vogel said.

And with his recent performances, that dream may not be too far in the future.

Schafer gives ND hockey new, winning, look

The Joyce ACC is a strikingly different place on Friday and Saturday nights this year.

First-year Notre Dame hockey coach Ric Schafer planned it that way, and things couldn't have gone much better. His Irish are really stirring up some trouble under the dome.

Don't be surprised if you're greeted inside the gate by a handwritten sign hanging on the ticket window. On green paper two words were scribbled in pen this past Saturday:

"Sold Out."

It's no wonder the ticket salespeople had to make their own signs. With the teams of last year and the year before posting records of 12-21-1 and 11-16-1, respectively, they never had to worry about filling the place.

The 1986-87 Irish, with their 17-2-2 record against many of the same teams that beat them in the past, drew 1,895 fans this past Saturday night in an 8-4 victory over North Dakota State. Crowds of more than 1,500 people are the rule, not the exception, this season.

"Fantastic," Schafer said of the new surge of support for Irish hockey. "We're really pleased. I just hope the word is out that you can have a good time at a Notre Dame hockey game. We've provided them with good entertainment."

But don't worry about the signs. Flash a student ID and you're in the place. The next difference you'll notice is that you won't hear organ music anymore. What you will hear is perhaps the most unusual rendition of the Notre Dame Victory March ever played.

Marty Strasen

Assistant Sports Editor

Peter "The Whip" Abowd has taken care of that, to the delight of some and the dismay of others. Abowd, of "100 Years" fame, handles a jazzed-up, pop-style version of the fight song and the National Anthem on the keyboards and electronic drums. He also belts out a few other numbers before face-offs, and has a Pee Wee Herman-recorded laugh for when the Irish really need a lift.

"That stuff's pretty crazy," said Irish captain and leading point-getter Mike McNeill.

"We've got 750 kazoos," Schafer added. "We're waiting for some dorm to say they want to be a kazoo band. I'm waiting for the first Notre Dame kazoo band to form, and we'll provide the kazoos."

But once you're past the door and you get used to The Whip's two-and-a-half-hour concert, have a seat and see what the real difference is at the Joyce ACC this year. Notre Dame hockey.

Beating teams to the puck, crisp passing, clean checks and not much after-the-whistle activity have put 17 wins in the books.

"It's the work ethic," explains McNeill. "Everyone seems to be working harder in practice, and it's showing up when we go out on the ice in games. We seem a lot more confident. I think that comes from winning right off the bat."

"We know what we can do now. Now it's just a matter of going out and doing it every weekend."

What the Irish have done has paid off in more ways than the victory column. The team has been given 10 scholarships over the next four years, a
