Reagan defends military strikes on Iranian targets

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Reagan said Monday he ordered military strikes against Iranian targets because of "irresponsible behavior" toward U.S. ships, and served notice that Tehran will "pay a price" for such aggression in the Persian Gulf.

Defending attacks on Iranian military platforms in the southern gulf, Reagan said: "we aim to deter further Iranian aggression, not provoke it." He renewed the U.S. call for Iran to accept a United Nations resolution demanding a ceasefire in the Iran-Iraq war.

Reagan used an appearance before a business audience to comment on U.S. reprisals for the mining of the frigate USS Samuel B. Roberts. His use of force won bipartisan support on Capitol Hill.

"I have something in the nature of a bulletin for you," he told representatives of the Associated General Contractors organization in the Old Executive Office Building auditorium.

"Earlier today, our Navy made a measured response to Iran's latest use of military force against U.S. ships in international waters as well as its continued military and terrorist attacks against a number of nonbelligerents," Reagan said.

"We've taken this action to make certain the Iranians have no illusions about the cost of irresponsible behavior," Reagan said.

"They must know that we will protect our ships, and if they threaten us, they'll pay a price," Reagan said. The president told his audience that "a more normal relationship with Iran is desirable -- and we're prepared for it."

But Reagan said that "such a relationship is not possible so long as Iran attacks neutral ships, threatens its neighbors, supports terrorism and refuses to end the bloody war with Iraq."

Besides destroying the two offshore Iranian oil platforms used for military purposes, the U.S. Navy either sank or damaged four small Iranian gunboats and bombed two Iranian navy frigates that had fired missiles at U.S. planes. Iran attacked oil facilities off Sharjah and fired on at least two U.S. vessels.

No American injuries or fatalities were reported, but Defense Secretary Frank Carlucci said a Cobra attack helicopter with two crewmen aboard was late in returning to a Navy cruiser and that a search had been mounted for the aircraft.

Peace corps internship open to ND students

Notre Dame students are invited to compete for an internship in the Peace Corps, said Kathleen Weigert of the Center for Social Concerns.

The semester-long internship, sponsored by the Peace Corps and Campus Compact, a national public service consortium, allows students to live and work with Peace Corps staff in Third World countries.

Applications for the internship are presently available at the Center for Social Concerns, the Peace Institute or at Assistant Dean Robert Waddick's office, said Weigert.

The internship "is open to freshmen, sophomores and juniors who are American citizens . . . who have the potential to live and work overseas," said Weigert. Students of all majors are eligible to apply and "we are hoping that people of all kinds will want to do this," she said.

The student can select the semester -- summer, spring or fall -- in which to participate upon applying for the internship, Weigert said.

Experience living abroad is not necessary or required, said Weigert. The internship has been designed for those students "who have demonstrated interest in community service," she said.

Weigert said the internship is "a reward for and a further intensification of it (community service)."

The applications are due on April 27 by 5 p.m. to the Center for Social Concerns. The applications will be reviewed immediately by a selection committee and three finalists will be chosen, said Weigert.

ND student founds Notre Dame-Jane M. Beres Memorial Fund for leukemia

By JULIE RYAN
News Staff

Notre Dame junior Tricia Jansen has undertaken a special project to benefit leukemia research. Inspired by an occurrence at the 1988 Winter Olympics, Jansen started the Notre Dame-Jane M. Beres Memorial Fund for leukemia research.

The fund was established to raise money in memory of Jane M. Beres, the sister of U.S. Olympic speedskater Dan Jansen. Beres died of leukemia this year.

Although she shares the same last name with the Olympic athlete, the Jansens are not related. When she first heard about Dan Jansen and his sister, Jansen said she wanted to do something to help.

"I heard about Dan in an interview a few weeks before the Olympics," Jansen said. "We are both from Wisconsin, have the same last name, and both have large families. His family especially reminded me of my family. It struck me as feeling close to him."

When the Olympics were on television, said Jansen, she watched for Dan Jansen in his events.

Before he was about to race, the skater found out his sister just died, according to Jansen. As a result, he fell twice during the race.

Bands jam at ND for cystic fibrosis

By VICTOR CUCINIELLO

Eight bands performed at Stepan Center last Friday to raise money for those suffering from cystic fibrosis. Dave Temeles, a sophomore from Dillon Hall, organized and coordinated the event which may have netted over $3500.

Temeles' cousin, who suffers from cystic fibrosis, motivated him to direct his efforts toward raising money for the disease.

The benefit was made possible with the help from the special events department of Student Government, along with financial help from Student Activities, Temeles said.

None of the bands were paid for performing, said Temeles, but two professional bands, Material Issue and Sergeant Friday, were provided with hotel arrangements and given traveling expenses.

Currently, Temeles said, he is applying for club status. He said he plans to organize a dance-a-thon that will take place at Notre Dame as well as at eight other universities.

During the summer, Temeles will participate in a conference called Goal Unlimited, he said. The conference will instruct 30 high schools on the procedures involved in organizing a dance-a-thon for cystic fibrosis, Temeles said.

Temeles said he hopes all his efforts will give rise to a nationwide movement to battle the disease and raise money for research.

Cystic Fibrosis is a genetic disorder which affects the body's ability to break down a thick gummy mucous which clogs a persons lungs and eventually leads to death, Temeles said. Fifty percent of the people afflicted with the disease live until the age of 22, with very few living past their twenties, he said.

In Brief

Bridget McGuire's sign was stolen late Saturday night, said Teresa Bauer, the bar's president. The sign, more than 12 feet across, served as the logo for "Bridget McGuire's Filling Station" at the intersection of Eddy Street and South Bend Avenue. Bauer, a Saint Mary's alumna, said she felt the sign must have been taken by "Notre Dame or Saint Mary's students because they're our main customers." The sign's disappearance is "amazing because it's so big," she said, adding that the building will be redone over the summer. "It's pretty expensive and time consuming to make (the sign) and paint it," said Bauer. -The Observer

Now for a completely different . . . attitude

Let's face it. Monty Python's "Life of Brian" is disrespectful to traditional Catholic faith. And very sacrilegious. Offensive, perhaps? Maybe.

But more than anything else, "Life of Brian" is funny.

I saw it this past weekend at Cushing Auditorium for the zillionth time and it was funny again.

On Friday, the Observer printed a letter from a reader who was offended that Notre Dame and/or Saint Mary's would show the movie and allow Graham Chapman to "lecture" at O'Laughlin Auditorium. Poor guy. He missed a good movie and he'll probably miss a humorous lecture. All because he's blind.

"Blessed are the cheesemakers!?!? Did he say cheesemakers?!?!? What's so special about cheesemakers??"

"These words are not to be taken literally of course. He means the makers of all dairy products."

Okay, maybe Monty Python humor is a little slapstick and off-beat. If you don't like that type of humor, fine. What has me upset is that people take the content of "Life of Brian" too seriously.

I don't intend to slam the poor soul who wrote that letter last week, but it really irks me when people don't open their eyes to the world around them. How weak is your faith in Christ that watching "Life of Brian" will shake it?

Take the movie for what it is. A humorous spoof on a historical event. Is it sacrilegious? I guess so. Does that make it evil? I should think not.

Notre Dame is a Catholic school. Saint Mary's is also. That doesn't mean that we have to live in a vacuum or bubble, ignoring anything that isn't dogma or doctrine. Notre Dame's charter says that we are Catholic. It also says that we are a University open to a liberal exchange of ideas. Perhaps we shouldn't allow students to take classes in Marxism. After all, Karl baby did preach atheism. Is that not offensive to my Christian ears?

We could always do away with movies entirely. Well, okay, we'll show movies like "The Greatest Story Ever Told" or "Jesus of Nazareth." Maybe an occasional Disney flick for old times' sake.

This is getting silly. My point in all of this goes something like this: Relax -- don't get uptight over things like "Life of Brian." They are meant to make people laugh. If you don't find it funny, don't laugh. If you find it offensive, stop, take a look at what you just saw on the screen, and realize that it is all a joke. Don't take it seriously.

Too often at Notre Dame, there is cross-fire

Jim Winkler

between the ultra-conservative forces of stalwart Catholicism and the liberal-minded bloc who profess an open society of free expression, free love and free sex. Somewhere in-between, most of us try to avoid getting shot, keeping our middle-of-the-road lifestyle.

"Life of Brian" seems to be a target of one of these groups. What upsets me, usually an innocent bystander, is that these people take their close-minded opinions and attempt to force-feed them to us, using Church doctrine as justification for what they say and do.

If they don't like "Life of Brian," or what Ron "The Gipper" Reagan has to say, that's their opinion. If they want to express displeasure in The Observer or that Common Nonsense publication, that is their option. What they can't do is tell me and anyone else who likes Monty Python that we are living in sin, or that Notre Dame is failing in its mission by allowing movies like that to appear. If they don't like Monty Python, they can save the two bucks and go preach somewhere.

Notre Dame has a mission that is not based on closing our eyes and ears to what some may construe as anti-Catholic thought. It strives to open those sense gathering units so that we may understand what type of world we live in.

ND Senate, task force members discuss reports

By JENNIFER GRONER
News Staff

Notre Dame Student Senators held a question-and-answer session with members of the task forces on residentiality and alcohol, while Senator Thomas Rask presented a proposal to postpone enforcement of a bylaw during the senate meeting Monday night.

The senate members spoke with Ann Firth, director of residential life and member of the task force on residentiality, and Steve Newton, coordinator of special projects at the Center for Social Concerns and member of the task force on alcohol, at the senate meeting Monday night.

The question-and-answer session was modeled after those sessions held in residence halls, according to Tom Doyle, student body president.

The senate will debate the issues raised in the report and give their reaction at the next meeting, said Doyle.

Rask, District 4 senator, proposed to postpone enforcement of Article II, Section VI, number seven in the "Bylaws of the Undergraduate Constitution of the University of Notre Dame."

The bylaw states: "Membership fees are required for all non-service organizations before they are eligible to receive student activity funding."

Many organizations were not aware of this new bylaw in time to implement dues before this year's budget considerations, according to Rask. The postponement would allow these organizations to wait until the 1988-89 academic year to collect membership fees without jeopardizing their funding, he said.

The bylaw was passed by the previous senate to insure that organizations give an accurate count of their membership before they are given funding, Rask said.

Pro-choice coalition seeks to strip Roman Catholic Church of its tax-exempt status

Associated Press

WASHINGTON -- The Roman Catholic Church's tax-exempt status gives it an unfair advantage in the political battle over abortion rights, the Supreme Court was told Monday.

The court was urged by a "pro-choice" coalition to keep alive an 8-year-old lawsuit that seeks to strip the church of its tax exemption because of its anti-abortion lobbying.

The suit is against the federal government, not the church.

The justices are being asked to go forward -- not whether the church's tax exemption should be revoked. A decision is expected to be announced by July.

If the suit against the government is kept alive, the church faces $100,000 a day in fines for its refusal to surrender documents sought by those suing.

Marshall Beil, a lawyer for pro-choice groups and individuals, said being free from paying taxes is a form of government subsidy that "is skewing the political process" in the national debate over abortion.

Only the courts "can create a remedy," he said. "The political process can't."

Church officials and the Reagan administration urged the court to kill the lawsuit.

Permitting such legal claims could "expose the government to untold suits by people interested but not affected by the outcome" of federal regulation, said Justice Department lawyer Alan Horowitz.

Several justices hinted that the case could be sent back to a federal appeals court for clarification of that court's views on the pro-choice coalition's legal standing to sue the government.

Justice Byron White, in raising that possibility, said, "It would save us a lot of work."

Chief Justice William Rehnquist suggested that the case is in "sort of a twilight zone" because the 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals did not state clearly whether it believed the pro-choice coalition has the proper legal standing to sue.

The appeals court said last June that "there is at least a colorable basis for standing."

Palmer speaks on Reagan ideology

By MIKE O'CONNELL
News Staff

John Palmer, former Assistant Secretary of Health and Social Programs, spoke on the social and economic changes of the Reagan Administration in a lecture Monday night at Hayes-Healy Center.

Palmer's speech, "Beyond the Reagan Revolution," focused on the repercussions of a short-sighted political ideology combined with the "pervasion of basic value conflicts in American society today," he said in his talk.

Palmer looked back on the Reagan years as a "consolidation" of political ideologies which satisfied the majority will.

"The public, largely through Congress, made it clear that social programs must remain intact," said Palmer. "Most of Reagan's ideology comes from our American heritage, and it's up to students to weigh the pros and cons of this credo."

Palmer then turned to the changing welfare situation in America, and Reagan's cuts in the upper and lower tier social programs. "These changes mark a substantial shift in federal government, a de-evolution from federal to state government," said Palmer.

Palmer described the problems of an enormous national deficit coupled with the deterioration of government officials since the 1970s. One of the difficulties, according to Palmer, is the fact that the American government refuses to deal with many of these long-range problems.

"The problem stems from the deterioration of public dialogue," said Palmer. "We're not talking about these problems as we need to."

"There is a serious conflict in some basic values of society which must be resolved," he said. "The public must be educated in order to realize the significance of these problems, and strive toward long term goals."

SMC Board prepares for elections

By JULIE RYAN
News Staff

Saint Mary's hall elections were the main focus of discussion at the Board of Governance meeting Monday night.

Hall elections will be held today, during meal hours, according to Julie Parrish, student body president.

The location has been changed to downstairs, in front of the president's dining room on the LeMans side of the dining hall, said Parrish.

The change will avoid the confusion of previous elections, when people were entering and leaving the dining hall in the same place where the voting was being done, she said.

Parrish read the newly revised election rules from the student government handbook to the new members of the board.

Parrish said a photo ID must be shown to receive a ballot, all ballots must be initialed on the back or they will be invalid, and all ballots must be put in the ballot box by the person who is voting.

Each group running for office may have a representative who is not on the ticket present at the voting place to make sure that the procedures are followed correctly, Parrish said.

The board discussed whether the raw number of votes should be made available to the public, rather than the percentage of votes.

This suggestion was given to the board by Sandy Cerimele, Saint Mary's editor of The Observer, to give the readers of The Observer more exact coverage of the elections, Parrish said.

The board decided they did not want to give out the exact number of votes to save possible embarrassment of some candidates.

Demjanjuk convicted of Nazi war crimes

Associated Press

JERUSALEM -- Retired Ohio autoworker John Demjanjuk was convicted Monday of Nazi war crimes by an Israeli court that said there was no doubt he was "Ivan the Terrible," a death camp guard who ran gas chambers that killed 850,000 Jews.

The three-judge court convicted Demjanjuk of the four counts against him: war crimes, crimes against the Jewish people, crimes against humanity and crimes against persecuted people.

Demjanjuk, 68, listened to the guilty verdict from a cot in a cell next to the courtroom. Six police officers had carried him there feet first after he said he was unable to sit down because of a back injury.

He was the second person to be convicted of war crimes in Israel. Adolf Eichmann, architect of Adolf Hitler's "Final Solution" for the extermination of European Jewry, was hanged in 1962, the only person to have been executed in Israel's 40-year history.

The Ukrainian-born Demjanjuk, who lived in suburban Cleveland before his extradition to Israel in 1986, could face the death penalty when he is sentenced April 25. Observers have said it was more likely he would receive a life prison term.

"We determine decisively and without hesitation or doubt that the accused John Demjanjuk who is on trial before us, is Ivan, known as 'Ivan the Terrible,' the operator of gas chambers," said presiding Judge Dov Levine.

Defense attorneys have said they would appeal the verdict, which came after the court spent 11 hours reading the 450-page summation. Before it was announced, Demjanjuk's attorney and relatives said they expected a conviction.

"These are old-fashioned hanging judges," said Demjanjuk's son, John Jr. "It's a disgrace to the word justice."

"The writing is on the wall," added Demjanjuk's son-in-law, Ed Nishnic. "This is going to go down in history as the most lopsided case ever conducted anywhere in the world."

Defense attorney Yoram Sheftel said he told Demjanjuk last week there was "no doubt" he would be convicted. "He accepted it," the lawyer added.

Jewish leaders praised the verdict.

"The trial was an affirmation of law and civility in response to the barbarity of the Holocaust," said Harry Wall, director of the Israel branch of the B'nai Brith Anti-Defamation League, a major American-Jewish organization.

PLO leader assassination sparks protests in Israeli-occupied areas

Associated Press

JERUSALEM -- Army curfews and strikes to protest the killing of a PLO leader paralyzed the occupied lands Monday, and hospital officials said soldiers shot two Arabs to death, including a woman who was taking her children home.

At least 167 Palestinians have been reported killed since riots began Dec. 8 in the West Bank and Gaza Strip, which Israel has occupied since capturing them from Jordan and Egypt in the 1967 Middle East war. An Israeli soldier and civilian also have been slain.

Israel ordered the closure of Jerusalem's only English-language magazine owned by Palestinians, alleging that it is financed and directed by terrorist organizations. Its managing editor denied the allegations.

Buildings in the West Bank were draped with black flags of mourning for assassinated PLO leader Khalil al-Wazir. Hundreds of Palestinians paid condolence calls in Nablus to al-Wazir's cousin during three days of mourning, said Adnan Zahran of Nablus.

"Nablus is a city of ghosts," the 30-year-old engineer told The Associated Press by telephone about the West Bank's largest city, which was in its second day of curfew.

Al-Wazir, also called Abu Jihad (Father of the Holy War), was killed early Saturday by commandos who burst into his home in a suburb of Tunis, Tunisia.

News of the death sparked riots in the West Bank and Gaza in which 17 Palestinians were killed and more than 100 wounded. It was the bloodiest day in the territories since the rebellion began.

In a message to Arabs in the occupied lands, Palestinian Liberation Organization chairman Yasser Arafat said al-Wazir, his chief aide and the PLO's military commander, "fell, weapon in his hand, to the bullets of a Mossad gang." The Mossad is the Israeli secret service.

Arafat said he had lost "a brother, a friend, a revolutionary companion and one of the symbols of the liberation fight of the Palestinian people. . . . The price of his death will be high."

Official sources in Tunis said privately Monday that investigators concluded Israel had conducted the operation against al-Wazir and Tunisia would make a formal complaint to the U.N. Security Council.

Israel has said nothing officially, but Israeli sources have said the assassination was the work of Mossad, the navy and an elite commando unit.

rising violence in the gulf, but that the U.S. military response was "appropriate in light of our vital security interests and Iran's continued belligerence."

"The stakes are very high, and the U.S. cannot permit Iran to impede the free flow of oil in the gulf," association president George Moses said in a statement.

There were no immediate indications of American or Iranian casualties from Monday's fighting.

The incident was the second such outbreak of violence since the United States began escorting oil tankers through the gulf last July to protect them from attack from the warring parties in the 7-year Iran-Iraq war.

On Oct. 19, a raid was staged in retaliation to a missile attack on a Kuwaiti ship flying the U.S. flag in which 18 Americans were injured. Two Iranian oil platforms were destroyed in what Reagan at the time termed a "prudent" response.

At the State Department, spokesman Charles Redman said Monday that the United States sent a message to Iran warning that any "further provocation or hostile Iranian military or terrorist action against U.S. personnel or targets will receive a firm U.S. response."

The message said the mine explosion that damaged the Roberts had followed repeated warnings by the United States to Iran about the consequences of placing mines in international waters of the Persian Gulf.

Redman said that before Monday's retaliatory action, the United States had notified Britain, France, Italy, the Netherlands and Belgium of its intentions. All have naval vessels in the gulf. Others, including the Soviet Union, were notified at the time the action commenced, he said.

Democratic and Republican congressional leaders said they felt Reagan's actions were fully justified. Several said they were pleased that Reagan consulted with them on Sunday night before acting.

Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., said: "the Iranians were carrying out terrorist acts. . . . I support the decision to destroy the (Iranian oil drilling) platforms."

Task Force needs student input

The release of the four task force reports two weeks ago has left many students confused. Whether because of apathy or intimidation at the sheer size of the reports, many are waiting to see what becomes of them. This is a mistake.

Students must make their opinions heard now if they wish to have any effect on policy decisions.

University President Father Edward Malloy has explicitly asked for input to aid in assessing the recommendations, stating in the letter accompanying the reports, "In determining priorities, we should be grateful for your reactions."

The timing of the reports' release seems rather poor, as students are busy with end of the year activities. Regardless, they have been released now, and now is not the time for apathy. Recommendations may very well become actual changes by next fall, as happened with the Committee on the Responsible Use of Alcohol in 1984. Students responded then by storming the Administration Building and holding mass rallies. Amidst their rage, no articulate response was formulated by these students and, as a result, the administration adopted policy changes without the help of significant student input.

Again student input has been requested, and the time for such input is now. A unified student opinion is not necessary; better a disjointed opinion than no opinion at all.

Many vehicles exist by which students can express their ideas and concerns, and all should be used to their fullest. Malloy himself requested input in the form of letters, asking students to "direct your comments to the person to whom the report was made" -- namely Malloy, Provost Timothy O'Meara, and Father David Tyson, vice president for student affairs. Such an offer should not go unheeded.

Student government has assembled and distributed a questionnaire in an effort to solicit opinions. Granted, the form allows primarily for only yes/no responses, but a large response by students in terms of sheer numbers would send a clear signal of student concern.

Forums have been assembled in the dorms to initiate student response. These forums continue through Thursday, and they provide an excellent chance to speak out.

These Task Force reports address four crucial areas of University life, and their effects will undoubtedly be felt by students in the coming school year. The administration has requested student response; the time to act is now. To remain silent would eliminate the only opportunity students have to affect the reports' final impact.

Mr. Stanford: for a worthy cause

Dear Editor:

We would like to thank all those who helped out with the 1988 Mr. Stanford Contest, especially Washington Hall Manager Tom Barkus, and Dr. Emil Hofman, who videotaped the event. This was the sixth consecutive year that we have held the competition, and it was the best and biggest so far in the history of the contest. The first Mr. Stanford Contest was held in the basement of our dorm; however, the fact that we can now sell out Washington Hall lends some credibility to the fact that the Mr. Stanford Contest is not just a dorm event, but now a campus event as well. This year we were able to raise about $700 which will benefit the Hope Mission Homeless Shelter. The proceeds going to the Hope Mission will be used to purchase various items which they have requested.

We would like to thank The Observer for covering the event for the first time ever. Unfortunately, we at Stanford feel that Mary Berger's article "Stanford Contest Entertaining but Lacks Taste" of Apr. 11 was not a fair review of what we think was a worthy fundraiser for a local charity. We acknowledge that there were a few rough spots as well as one or two isolated incidents during which things may have seemed "off-color." However, these parts were not more crude than some things said during other campus events. Nevertheless, Berger seems to have judged the entire contest solely on these few incidents. The rest of the contest was tasteful, funny and exciting, and we have heard nothing but positive comments from numerous people who were in the audience.

We feel that Mr. Stanford accomplished two main goals: we were able to raise a sizable amount of money for the homeless shelter, and we provided a different sort of entertainment to over 600 people. We at Stanford feel that we are speaking with the majority when we say that the 1988 Mr. Stanford Contest was not just "locker room talk" but a huge success.

Flaws corrected in SMC elections

Dear Editor:

As student body president, I am concerned about the recent attack on the integrity and honor of Saint Mary's student government which appeared in The Observer on Tuesday, April 12. It is unfortunate I have to address such an arduous accusation at the beginning of a new term, however, I also feel clarification and redemption is needed here.

Saint Mary's student government fundamentally supports student involvement, inquisition and input. Unfortunately, this is an ideal and, like most democracies, is limited without voluntary outside participation. Student government leaders are therefore entrusted by the student body to act in accordance with students' beliefs. It is both parties' responsibilities to communicate any discrepancies in such beliefs, ideas or views.

Student government is not a flawless organization and has never claimed to be one. There were flaws in the election procedure that were not apparent before the narrow three ticket student body election for 1988-89. These flaws, however, did not obstruct the running of a fair and impartial race. The flaws were in election procedure, not structure, and therefore did not affect the end results of the election.

These procedural flaws did not make student government a mockery, nor were they an embarrassment to student government. They were an oversight to the expanding participation and awareness in student government and its' elections.

Now that the flaws in the system have been addressed and corrected democratically, I hope the interest in student government remains as hall elections approach this week on Tuesday, April 19. I encourage all of you to go out and vote for those student government leaders who will represent you within the next year.

ROBYN SIMMONS
accent writer

Beetlejuice-- say it three times and "the ghost with the most" will appear. Actually, this is the last thing anyone would want to happen after seeing this film.

Michael Keaton stars as Beetlejuice, a "freelance bio-exorcist" who helps scare people out of haunted houses. I would use the term 'stars' quite loosely, since Keaton didn't appear until the second half of the film. When Keaton finally did appear, his character was so obnoxious and irritating that I wished he never showed up in the first place.

The real stars of this movie were Adam and Barbara Maitland (Alec Baldwin and Geena Davis), a likable young couple who were involved in a car accident at the beginning of the film. The Maitlands returned to their home to find a "Handbook for the Recently Deceased" in their living room. Somehow they got the clue that they didn't survive the accident.

The Maitlands were also unable to leave their house. Whenever they stepped outside their front door, they ended up in a bizarre wasteland-- probably the cranium of whoever wrote the script.

To the Maitland's dismay, their house was sold to the Deetzes, a rather eccentric family. Delia (Catherine O'Hara) had her heart set on revamping the entire building. Her stepdaughter Lydia (Winona Ryder) was a loner who liked to dress in black and take pictures. Lydia's father Charles (Jeffery Jones) was a henpecked husband who spent most of his time looking clueless.

Adam and Barbara decided to frighten the Deetzes away, but proved to be rather inadequate ghosts. They eventually befriended Lydia, who was the only live person in the household who could see them. The Maitlands traveled to the afterworld where their caseworker informed them that they would be stuck in the house for the next 125

In desperation, the Maitlands decided to summon Beetlejuice, who advertised himself on TV as the bio-exorcist with "a free demon possession for every exorcism." I've seen used car dealer commercials funnier than Keaton's parody of one.

In one scene, the ghosts temporarily possessed the Deetzes and their dinner guests. This was probably the one moment of the film that could be considered humorous. The Deetz family and their guests (which included Dick Cavett as Delia's agent) danced around the table singing the "banana boat song." It wasn't terribly hilarious, but the little kids in the theater seemed to enjoy it.

Technically, "Beetlejuice" is a comedy, but it just wasn't very funny. There were some well done special effects, but those weren't particularly scary. Keaton gets to spout off winning lines like, "Attention, K-Mart shoppers!" and "Go ahead, make my millennium."

Keaton is a talented, usually funny actor, and that's why it's so surprising that he was one of the worst elements of an already bland goofy film. With a terminally goofy grin that must have been surgically removed after filming stopped, Keaton came across as someone desperately trying to make people laugh.

Basically, Beetlejuice could do anything--from throwing his voice to spinning his head--but entertain the audience. There's not much to be said for this movie, except that I hope Keaton's next movie role won't involve a plot that makes as much sense as the name "Beetlejuice."

The obnoxious spirit named Beetlejuice(center) strikes up a conversation in the "afterlife waiting room."

'The Wonder Years' -- simply wonderful

Ever want to relive the exciting past years of your life? Everyone, at one time or another, looks back at some favorite times of the past. It's no wonder, then, that someone has captured the essence of this favorite pastime in a new television dramedy, "The Wonder Years."

ABC airs this ingenious show on Tuesdays at 7:30 p.m. (the spot recently occu-the death of the senator, is full of wonder in the form of many intriguing characters. These include Kevin's nerdy friend Paul (Josh Saviano) and Kevin's girlfriend Winnie (Damica McKellar), whose brother was recently killed in Vietnam.

Then there's Coach Cutlin (Robert Picardo), the school gym and sex education teacher. Together, these characters create and sus-looks more like a cow's head.

Someone asks him to draw the rest of the female anatomy so that they can get an understanding of how everything fits together. (In reality, they want to see how Cutlin can handle drawing certain body parts. Those seventh graders are SO sneaky...) When Cutlin merely draws a box around the "cow's head," Kevin comments, "It was then that I understood why Mr. Cutlin would remain eternally single."

The comedy of the show is set against the backdrop of 1968, a year of much turmoil and confusion. In the midst of their daily lives, the characters must cope with the second murder of a Kennedy as well as the Vietnam conflict. The show's writers do an outstanding job showing how these unexpected tragedies can immediately change the lives of the people they influence.

In the midst of exciting seventh grade life, for example, Winnie learns her older brother Brian has been killed in Vietnam. The episode deals with the wake and funeral. Kevin must put his romantic feelings for Winnie aside and, in a very mature fashion, help his friend deal with her suffering.

The performances on the show are very impressive. Hervey's portrayal of Kevin's "pave-in-the-but" older brother is so convincing that those who have older brothers will find themselves remembering their wonderful siblings in all their glory.

Laurica and Mills' portrayals of Mr. and Mrs. Arnold flow with a level of reality greater than most other TV parents. The star of the show, however, is Fred Savage, a truly incredible child actor. His facial expressions and reactions are flawless, enabling the viewers to relate to both his character and the situation.

"The Wonder Years" is a marvelously entertaining dramedy and a sure hit for ABC. The show has maintained the high Tuesday night standards set by "Growing Pains" by starting its run in the Nielson Top Ten. The show appeals to people of every age and depicts a real and nostalgic situation. "The Wonder Years" is simply...wonderful.

pled by "Growing Pains," ABC's highest rated show). The entire series is a flashback of Kevin Arnold on his seventh grade life in 1968. The present-day Kevin narrates the show and each week deals with a wonderful aspect of seventh grade development.

Fred Savage (currently starring in the hit movie "Vice Versa") portrays the young Kevin. Other family members include Kevin's father Jack (Dan Laurica), Kevin's mother Norma (Alley Mills), his older brother Wayne (Jason Hervey), and his "flowery" older sister Karen (Olivia d'Abo).

Kevin's junior high school, recently renamed Robert Kennedy Junior High after tain a very real and authentic past.

When it comes to plots, the show offers situations to which everyone can relate. Kevin relives that awkward stage of junior high when girls suddenly turn from pests into desirable creatures.

The sex education classes are depicted in a witty manner, but the fact that most viewers have lived through such fiascos makes them all the more funny. Kevin comments that "sex in the hands of public education is not a pretty thing."

Group scenarios involve a group of seventh grade boys watching Cutlin draw the female sex organs. When he's finished, the picture

Kevin Arnold(Fred Savage) and "nerdy" pal Paul(Josh Saviano) enter school for another day of seventh grade excitement.

Men's Volleyball wraps up season in MIVA's

The Men's Volleyball Club ended a great season on a sour note last weekend, taking third place in the MIVA Regional Championships.

The Irish, who were seeded first, lost a hard-fought battle to Michigan 12-15, 11-15 in the semi-final round of the tourney. Notre Dame played without the services of starter Andrew Sullivan, who was out for the weekend with an arm injury.

Notre Dame came back to down Ohio State for third place. In pool play, the Irish defeated Wooster College, Toledo and Quincy College. They outlasted Wisconsin in the quarter-finals 15-13, 9-15, 15-12.

Mike Shimota and Keola Chun made the all-tourney team for Notre Dame.

Despite the disappointing finish, the Irish still had one of the best records in their history. They compiled a 28-10 ledger, seven of those losses coming at the hands of varsity teams. More than that, they turned some of the heads that make the decisions regarding the advancement of club teams to the varsity level.

"We had a great year," coach Bill Anderson said. "Hopefully, next year we'll be even better. We have a lot of good freshmen coming in."

Greg Guffey

Club Corner

The Women's Softball Club lost seven of eight games last week to fall to 4-12 for the season.

Notre Dame dropped a doubleheader to St. Joseph's by scores of 13-8 and 6-1. The team bounced back to defeat Purdue 13-3 behind the hitting of Meg Fay and Marie Liddy. The Boilers won the second game 11-8 after taking an eight-run lead in the first inning.

After the Purdue split, the Irish lost four straight games. Lake College swept a doubleheader from the Irish 2-1 and 5-4, rallying from a 4-1 deficit in the second game. McHenry College won two from the Irish Saturday, 17-15 in a slugfest and 9-3 in the nightcap.

The inconsistent play from both the offense and defense has left coach Joe Speybroeck looking for ways to turn the season around.

"When the defense plays well, the offense is not hitting," Speybroeck said. "When the offense gets going, the defense makes mistakes. It's just a mental lapse that arises at a certain point. It seems that if we don't dig ourselves in a hole early, we're allright."

The Irish hope to turn things around Wednesday when they meet Purdue-Calumet. They also play Saint Mary's on Friday.

Belles win three medals in Saint Joe's Relay Invite

By KRISTINE GREGORY
Sports Writer

The Saint Mary's varsity track team took fourth place in the Saint Joseph's College Relay Invitational held Saturday at Rensselaer, Ind., as injuries and Junior Mother's Weekend left the team with only six girls to compete in the relay events.

Saint Joseph's took first place by defeating Spring Arbor, Goshen, DePauw, Taylor, Valparaiso Club and Saint Mary's. Individuals placing first, second or third received medals. The Belles won two medals by capturing one first place and one second place finish. The first came in the javelin relay as Jeanette O'Neil, Kelly Streit and Maggie Daday recorded a combined distance of 248'5" to win the event.

The 1600-meter relay of Mary Cassidy, Cathy Kennedy, Daday and Streit placed second with a time of 4:26.8 seconds to win their medal.

Saint Mary's recorded several fourth-place finishes. In the 400-meter relay, Claire Dettling, Daday, Streit and Cassidy combined for a time of 56.2 seconds. In the 800-medley relay, Daday, Cassidy, Streit and Kennedy recorded a 2:04.5 time.

In the high jump, Daday, Cassidy and Kennedy placed fourth with a combined jump of 8' 10" while Cassidy, Daday and Dettling jumped for a combined length of 36' 6.25" in the long jump.

"Relay invitationals are always fun. Everyone did a great job," said Belles coach Larry Szczechowski. "We are really looking forward to districts next Saturday at Huntington. The way we are improving, we are certain to peak there."

The game was never close, with Address taking a 15-0 lead before Headache could pull to within 14. Botham controlled the inside game, while her teammates in the frontcourt held Headache's star guard Lynn Arnold scoreless. Ar-

"We have to work a little bit on the fundamentals," said Keller, "like offense and defense, before we take to the court again next season."

"We went a little easy on them," Keller continued. "We didn't want them to get injured and jeopardize their pro careers."

Peltier's attitude, hitting boost baseball team

By STEVE MEGARGEE
Assistant Sports Editor

The situation last weekend at Jake Kline Field could not have been more pressure-filled.

Notre Dame's baseball team had rallied from an 11-3 ninth inning deficit against Detroit to make the score 11-10. The bases were loaded with one out.

Sophomore rightfielder Dan Peltier stepped to the plate with the game on the line and his family from Clifton Park, N.Y., in the stands.

"I really don't view it in terms of runners being in scoring position because that will just put extra pressure on you. Just hit the ball hard whether there are runners in scoring position or not."

Peltier fell behind in the count with two strikes. If he hit into a double play, the Titans would escape with the victory. If he struck out, Detroit would have two batters out and the momentum.

"When I'm up there, I think hit the ball somewhere hard. When you start thinking you're going to strike out, you usually do. The best thing to do is have a positive attitude."

As Peltier hit foul ball after foul ball, first-year Irish coach Pat Murphy knew he had the Titans right where he wanted them.

"Dan has a great mental outlook. Because he takes every at bat so seriously and works so hard at every bat, when the pressure situation is on it's just another at bat for him."

Peltier proved Murphy correct. The sophomore fired a shot up the middle that went into centerfield, scoring two runs and giving the Irish an incredible 12-11 comeback victory.

"It was great, and with my parents there, that made it more special," said Peltier, "but it wouldn't have been possible if everyone else hadn't done their jobs. It was a big win, and I was glad to be a part of it."

"I heard Coach Murphy say in the eighth inning, 'You never know,' and that just summed it up," Peltier continued. "We knew we could do it, especially when things started going well for us."

The Irish had reason to be confident in the ninth. Notre Dame already had come back from a 7-2 ninth inning deficit to beat Bowling Green and had cut an 11-2 Purdue to 11-7 in the ninth inning earlier this season. The comebacks have helped the Irish earn a record of 23-16, which they will take to Western Michigan for a single game at 3:00 this afternoon.

Peltier is quick to point out that part of the reason for these patented Irish comebacks is the aggressive style of play Notre Dame has adopted under Murphy this season. Another part, as Murphy will readily admit, is the big offensive production of Peltier and seniors Tim Hutson and Pat Pesavento.

When those hitters have slumped, the Irish have failed to do much as a team offensively. But with Peltier hitting 12-of-20 last weekend, the Irish scored a total of 48 runs in four games.

"Since we got back from San Antonio (March 23), Peltier hadn't hit like he can, but he's such a good hitter that he still got his share of hits," said Murphy. "Peltier was not hitting the ball the way he could, and he was hitting .360. Now, this past weekend, he's gotten back to his old hitting form, and I look for continued success."

"The other guys get excited when he's hitting," Murphy continued. "They know that our team's going well if Peltier's hitting the ball, Hutson's hitting the ball and Pesavento's getting on base. That gets the other players motivated."

Peltier was among the Midwestern Collegiate Conference leaders in several offensive categories before last weekend's games. With the sparkling performance at home against the Titans, his numbers look even more imposing. The right fielder, who has played every inning of every game since starting his Notre Dame career, is batting .384. In 39 games, he has driven in 45 runs, hit four home runs and smashed 15 doubles (his next will break the school record).

He has managed to record these kinds of hitting stats even though he is adjusting to a new position in the field. A natural first baseman who still plays first base in the summer, Peltier has had to play rightfield at Notre Dame.

"It's been a transition," said Murphy. "We've made him a rightfielder; we haven't given him a choice. He hasn't had a lot of experience out there."

"He's going to play in the Cape Cod League this summer, and he'll be playing first base," Murphy continued. "There's a possibility Dan could move to first base next year with Tim Hutson leaving, but that still remains up in the air depending on what our freshmen do."

The Cape Cod League, a summer league for the top collegiate players that uses wooden bats and attracts flocks of professional scouts every year, is another step in Peltier's goal to reach the professional ranks. Murphy wouldn't be surprised at all to see Peltier, who will be nominated for Academic All-American status, eventually reach that level.

"He's a very mature individual, and he's a winner," Murphy said. "I think he'll definitely be drafted. Don't be surprised if you see him on TV some day, and it will be due to his hard work alone."

White Sox win 4th straight

Associated Press

Ivan Calderon hit a two-run homer and Carlton Fisk followed with a solo shot in the fourth inning as the Chicago White Sox won their fourth straight game 4-0 over the Seattle Mariners Monday night in Seattle.

Dave LaPoint, 2-1, pitched seven shutout innings and Bill Long pitched the last two innings.

Phillies 10, Mets 7

Chris James drove in three runs with his first home run of the season and a sacrifice fly as the Philadelphia Phillies outlasted the New York Mets 10-7 in New York on Monday night to snap a seven-game losing streak.

Von Hayes and Lance Parrish each had a pair of RBI as Philadelphia won for the first time since beating the Mets 9-3 on April 9.

Yankees 18, Twins 5

Jack Clark broke out of an 0-for-10 slump with three hits and three RBI and Dave Winfield continued his hot hitting with three hits and four RBI Monday night as the New York Yankees routed Minnesota 18-5 in Minneapolis.

The Yankees, who haven't scored as many runs in six years, had 20 hits. Every New York starter had at least one hit, one run and one RBI in support of winner Charles Hudson, 1-0, who allowed three hits in seven innings in relief of ineffective starter Richard Dotson.

Tigers 4, Royals 2

A double by Tom Brookens triggered a two-run sixth inning Monday as the Detroit Tigers beat the Kansas Royals 4-2 in Detroit for a rare victory over Floyd Bannister.

Bannister, 2-1, who had allowed just four hits this season coming into the game, had won 12 of his previous 18 decisions against the Tigers.

Athletics 5, Angels 4

DeWayne Buice balked home the winning run with two outs in the eighth inning, capping Oakland's rally for a 5-4 victory over California Monday night in Oakland.

Giants 6, Reds 3

Kevin Mitchell's sacrifice fly put San Francisco ahead, Will Clark doubled home another run and scored on Jeffrey

Leonard's single in the 12th inning Monday night, giving the Giants a 6-3 victory over the Cincinnati Reds in Cincinnati.

Red Sox 4, Rangers 3

Mike Greenwell's sacrifice fly in the bottom of the ninth inning drove in Wade Boggs and gave the Boston Red Sox a 4-3 victory over the Texas Rangers in a rain-delayed game Monday in Boston.

Boggs had walked and gone to third when Jim Rice doubled off Mitch Williams, 0-1.

Dodgers 6, Padres 0

Tim Leary pitched a three-hitter, struck out a career-high 11 batters and hit a two-run single Monday night as the Los Angeles Dodgers beat the San Diego Padres 6-0 at Los Angeles.

ND catches 'Scarlet' fever

Golfers place 21st in Keplers on 'unforgiving' course

By CHRIS FILLIO
Sports Writer

At the Kepler Intercollegiate Invitational this weekend, the Notre Dame golf team had to battle more than the obvious competition, as the Irish endured 54 holes of bitter cold at the Scarlet Course in Columbus, Ohio.

Competing in the cold after enjoying a week of mild spring weather at home, Notre Dame's 21st-place finish out of 23 teams is not as surprising as it might first appear.

Irish coach Noel O'Sullivan did not want to mask the team's performance with excuses, but conceded that the team was quite adversely affected by the weather.

"The conditions worked on us mentally," said O'Sullivan. "It seemed that it wasn't enough to simply want it. I'm not disappointed as a coach, but we were just pretty demoralized by the conditions." The favored Buckeyes from Ohio State took top honors in the tournament. The OSU elite overpowered the competition, turning in a three-day total of 913. Taking a distant second was Kent State at 941, while Ball State placed third at 950.

The Irish linksters turned in performances at 333-328-336 for a total of 996. After two days, Irish junior Doug Giorgio was in the top 10 with rounds of 81 and 74, but a third-round 93 hurt his chances at any medals as he ended with 248. The best overall performance came from junior Pat Mohan with 83-83-80 for a 246. Senior captain Dick Connelly finished at 82-88-81 for a 251, while freshman Paul Nolta had 87-84-90 for 261. Freshman Pat Kusek scored a 267 with 91-91-85.

"The skill was there, but there were other factors," said O'Sullivan. "We were prepared physically, but not psychologically. The results would have been different under other conditions, but the Scarlet is unforgiving."

Typical of the adversity was the performance of OSU's second man and son of golf legend Jack Nicklaus, Gary Nicklaus. The younger turned in scores of 90, 83 and 86 for a 259 and most likely merited a late night phone call for advice from the Golden Bear.

Next week the Irish will look to fare better as they head to the Spartan Invitational in East Lansing, Mich. The Irish have a much better history at the Spartan, finishing third in 1979 and first in 1986.

smooth assists to Rice and Peters. The coach assessed his own performance in a not-so-favorable light.

"My head sees what has to be done in a certain situation," said Holtz, "but the problem is that my body doesn't react nearly as fast. It's like being on a flight to Chicago and not getting off the plane until Denver. In the last eight years I think I've touched a basketball twice—for Bookstore Basketball last year and this year."

Holtz and his team will face

Pump Up The Volume, which features two more standouts from the Irish football team, defensive back George Streeter and flanker Mark Green, in today's action. Pump Up The Volume slipped past Man In A Canoe Overboard, 21-19, behind Green's eight points and a perfect 4-of-4 performance by Tim Smith. The game will be played at 6:15 (Stepan 1) to allow those involved with spring football enough time to participate in both.

"We really appreciate the way those who handle the scheduling give us the later games," said Holtz. "Our policy since I've been here is that Bookstore Basketball is what Notre Dame is all about and it's something everyone participates in and has fun in, so it was important to let our players play as long as they don't miss practice for any other reason."

Other football players involved in a tough matchup today are Braxton Banks, Anthony Johnson and Bobby Carpenter of Yo...What Up? who face I'll Play, No I Won't, I'll Play, No I Won't, (Stepan 5, 6:15). Joe Hippler scored ten points for Yo...What Up in their 21-7 thrashing of Hans, Frans and Three Others... yesterday while Al Martin hit 7-of-8 from the field to pace I'll Play, No I Won't in their quick 21-9 win cementing of We B Bricklayers.

In other action yesterday, Adworks' All-Stars stopped Larvae: Boon or Bane, 21-17, but lost Mr. Bookstore 1987, John Buscher, for today's game with Ferrence and 4 Other... . Buscher twisted his ankle during the win but finished the game.

"I came down after a dunk," began Buscher, "no...just kidding. Actually I had gone up for a rebound and came down on somebody's foot. I had it checked at the hospital and nothing's broken or anything, so I should be back out there on Wednesday."

"We're sort of the New York Yankees of this tournament," continued Buscher. "We've had a lot of lineup changes in a short time."

The changes include Gary Voce's decision to play, then not to play, then to play again, as well as the addition of Ricky Watters and the absence of Cedric Figaro.

Irish men's tennis wins two

By GEORGE TRAVERS
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame men's tennis season hit a high point last weekend with impressive wins over Indiana State and Ohio University.

Notre Dame defeated Indiana State 6-3, then knocked off Ohio by a 7-2 score. The win over Ohio was particularly impressive as the Irish were slight underdogs going into the match. "We were really hurting coming into this weekend," said first-year Irish coach Bob Bayliss. "Mike Wallace, Dave Reiter, Dan Walsh and Paul Daggs were all out. That meant I had to start four freshmen in singles, and it worried me."

Bayliss' spirits were lifted when the freshmen on his squad gave him a pep talk.

"They basically told me they'd take care of everything," said Bayliss. The Irish then went on to have a victorious weekend, led by the sparkling play of freshmen Ryan Wenger, Paul Odland, David Kuhlman and Shaun Sparkman.

Against Indiana State the Irish were favorites on paper, but with all the injuries plaguing the team, it looked to be a close match. The Irish bench responded with a resounding 6-3 win over Indiana State on Saturday.

It turned out to be a relatively easy match for Notre Dame, which took five out of six singles matches. Junior stalwart Brian Kalbas trounced Claude Servant in straight sets 6-4, 6-2. Senior Sean O'Brien defeated Brad Begley 6-1, 6-2. Ryan Wenger won over Dallas Kelsey 6-2, 6-3.

In other singles play, Paul Odland and Shaun Sparkman won in straight sets. The only Irish loss in singles came at the hands of Mark Smith, who edged Dave Kuhlman 6-4, 5-7, 6-1.

In doubles action against Indiana State, the Notre Dame team of Arnell Gallanosa and Ron Shashy defeated Smith and Kelsey 6-1, 3-6, 6-3. Notre Dame lost the other two doubles matches by close scores.

The Irish next took on Ohio University on Saturday afternoon. This match was expected to be much closer than the match with Indiana State. Notre Dame played a superb match, working as a cohesive unit to win 7-2 despite the team's injuries. In singles, Odland, Kuhlman and Sparkman all won over Chris Petersen, Matt Kline and Fred Krase, respectively. The other singles win came from junior star Brian Kalbas, who defeated Jay Ethridge in straight sets 6-3, 7-5.

Notre Dame swept all three doubles matches from Ohio University to wrap up the victory. The ailing Dave Reiter teamed up with Arnell Gallanosa to beat Ethridge and Donase 6-3, 1-6, 6-1. Kalbas and Ryan Wenger won in three sets, as did the freshmen tandem of Kuhlman and Odland.

Notre Dame now is 17-10 and will finish the season by the end of this month.

Strickland heads for NBA early

Associated Press

CHICAGO- Junior guard Rod Strickland on Monday announced he is making himself available for the upcoming NBA draft and passing up a final year of eligibility at DePaul.

"I think I'm ready to play in the NBA," said the 6-foot-3 Strickland.

"I think it's like any other student in college," he added. "If they were offered $100,000, $200,000, $300,000 (a year), I think they would take it too."

The only other underclassman to announce his eligibility for the June 28 draft is 7-foot center Tito Horford, a native of the Dominican Republic who two years ago set off a collegiate recruiting war before settling in at the University of Miami in Florida.

Strickland, 21, is considered by most pro scouts to be a first-round pick. But a number of team officials have expressed concerns about his maturity, especially since he had a handful of run-ins with DePaul officials this past season.

Strickland doesn't see a problem.

"The biggest thing was, 'Did I think I was ready?'" he said. "I have a lot of confidence in myself that I can make it."

Strickland declined to say what part academics played in his decision, but said he had discussed the matter with Coach Joey Meyer.

Meyer would not say at the news conference whether he personally supported Strickland's decision, but noted there was a thin corps of graduating point guards.

"I think he's making it for all the right reasons," Meyer said of Strickland's decision.

"I told him if he could really knuckle down and get it done in the classroom that he should come back another year. Anybody in their right mind would have told him that," Meyer said.

"It's a mistake for any kid to come out early," said Marty Blake, whose Atlanta-based scouting service is affiliated with the National Basketball Association.

"These people aren't ready. The seniors aren't ready," he added. "People don't realize how good the NBA is."

Strickland closed out the season with two of his better performances in the NCAA tournament, scoring 19 points and adding 13 assists against Wichita State, then 19 points and eight assists in a losing effort against Kansas State.

But he began the season on a sour note, being ruled academically ineligible for the fall term.

And his personal difficulties went on from there, which included a much-publicized New Year's altercation with a dormitory assistant, and several late-season benchings as a result of missed practices and other disciplinary problems.

Even so, Strickland led the Blue Demons to a 22-8 record by averaging 20 points and nearly eight assists per game, in addition to adding 75 steals.

Bookstore action heats up in last week

Routs are aplenty in women's play

By JANE SHEA
Saint Mary's Sports Editor

Action resumed Monday afternoon at Saint Mary's in the Women's Bookstore Basketball Tournament.

Three teams won easily by the score of 21-2, including We Won Interhall, which beat We Just Want to Score.

Penthouse Playmates II and Five Lyonites who Bite won their games over Brian Boitano and Four other Female Athletes and Sparky's Franchise, respectively.

Three teams had even easier victories when their opponents did not show.

Beefe's Chicks finally beat Do Not Loft Balls in a game that went into overtime after lasting for more than an hour.

Despite the fine defensive effort of Steffanie Keller, We Can't Play Tonight We Have a Headache lost to Give Me Your Address There.

Address looks like a good contender for the 1988 women's title. The team is led by several veterans of Bookstore and varsity play. Sandy

Men's field narrows to 32 title dreams

By BRIAN O'GARA
Sports Writer

It all comes down to six days of basketball. Bookstore Basketball XVII kicked off its final week yesterday as 32 teams advanced to today's fifth round action in hopes of surviving to this weekend's culmination of the world's largest basketball tournament.

After today's games, the 'Sweet 16' will advance to play on Wednesday, then eight remaining teams will have a day off on Thursday before the tournament resumes on Friday and over the weekend.

Among those who advanced to today's action were Lou's 2 QBs And Two Blind Guys and Pump Up The Volume, who will face each other today. Lou's 2 QB's...survived a scare from Rick, Dan and ...pulling out a 21-16 win behind Jeff Peters' 10-of-11 shooting performance.

Lou's 2 QBs, Kent Graham and Tony Rice, combined for eight points while George Baldus added three for the winners. Lou Holtz went 0-for-5 from the field but did dish out some

Garrett qualifies for NCAA's with record time

By WILLIAM STEGMEIER
Sports Writer

Dan Garrett qualified for the NCAA's with a school-record time in the 5000-meter event, highlighting a successful performance for the Notre Dame track team at Stanford last Saturday.

Irish coach Joe Piane was pleased with his team's performance in the meet, where Notre Dame competed with Stanford and Washington.

"Though no team score was kept, the team, as a whole, did reasonably well," Piane said. "The most impressive race of the day for Notre Dame was the 5000-meter run, where we swept the first three spots."

Garrett won the race in 13:53.52. Sophomore Mike O'Connor took second in a time of 13:58.84 and junior Ron Markezich finished third, with a time of 14:00.25. For their efforts, all three men qualified for the outdoor IC4A's.

Garrett shattered the previous school-record time of 14:10.00. The co-captain from Clarence Center, N.Y., also became the first Irish performer this season to qualify for the NCAA's. A time of 13:57.00 or better is needed in his event to qualify.

Garrett attributed his success at Stanford to teamwork.

"The key factor in my setting the school record was that I had two people to work with, in Ron and Mike," said Garrett. "The three of us, together, were able to compensate for the fact we had to run into a headwind on the straightaway."

Garrett is pleased with the progress of the 5000-meter trio.

"I think each of us is improving vastly," said Garrett. "We have each dropped our time by about 15 to 18 seconds."

A school record also was set in the hammer throw. Senior Tom Mick broke his own record of 173 feet, set earlier this season, with a throw of 182'6" at Stanford. Mick placed first in the event and also gained a berth in the IC4A's.

Other individual winners for the Irish included senior Rick Mulvey and freshman Ron Culp. Mulvey recorded a time of 8:57.32 in the 3000-meter steeplechase and Culp took the 400-meter run in 48.97 seconds.

Both now have qualified for the IC4A's.

Not to be outdone, sophomore Glenn Watson was victorious in the 110-meter high hurdles with a time of 14.52 seconds. Freshman Ryan Mihalko, though finishing third in the javelin, still qualified for the IC4A's with a throw of 209 feet.

The Irish will participate in the Indiana Intercollegiate this weekend. Coach Piane is wary, yet optimistic, of his team's chances at Indiana.

"It's tough to compete against the likes of a Indiana and Purdue," Piane stated. "Yet I'm confident we'll have some strong individual performances this weekend."

Rice still holds starting slot

Irish QB's Graham, Rice both looking to improve

By MARTY BURNS
Sports Writer

Notre Dame quarterback Kent Graham may be able to pass the football, but he hasn't been able to pass teammate Tony Rice in the race to be the starting signal-caller for the Irish.

SPRING FOOTBALL

Quarterbacks

In perhaps the most crucial position battle of the 20-workout spring season, which concludes Sunday with the playing of the annual Blue-Gold game, Rice has a firm grip on the No. 1 offense, thanks to the sophomore's experience and elusive running ability.

Graham, a 6'5" freshman with superior passing skills but slower feet out of the pocket, remains as he finished in 1987 --right behind.

"There's still competition at the quarterback spot," said Irish coach Pete Cordelli, who along with coach Jim Strong has spent much of his time evaluating the signal-callers. "But Tony has moved the team consistently and he's No. 1 right now. We're not necessarily looking for a quarterback who can make the big play, but one who can get you out of the bad one. And Tony's been the most consistent doing that."

The speedy Rice frequently turned broken plays into big gains last season, leading the Irish to five wins in seven games after senior starter Terry Andrysiak went down with a broken collarbone.

Irish coach Lou Holtz and his staff, however, never felt comfortable allowing the strong-armed but erratic Rice to put the ball in the air. As a result, the predominantly ground-oriented offense became predictable and impotent late in the season.

"We can't win being a one-dimensional team," Holtz vowed before the start of spring workouts. "We've got to be able to either throw or run the ball when we want to against the caliber of opposition we face from week to week."

Graham, whose 16-of-24 passing for 248 yards in seven games of the 1987 campaign made him a strong candidate for the starting role, passed the
