Phone registration on hold for spring

DART (Direct Access Registration by Telephone) will not be initiated for this spring's enrollment, as further testing of the system is needed prior to student use.

registrar has many duties, page 4

The system will be tested thoroughly this summer with plans to register students by phone next Oct. for the Spring 1990 semester, said Daniel Winicur, dean of administration and registrar.

"I was willing to try the system this semester, but I was not willing to take the chance that something would go wrong," said Winicur. "We don't want the students to be guinea pigs."

"This system, as does any large, complex computer system, requires extensive and thorough testing before it is introduced in order to minimize the likelihood of problems when it is first used," said Winicur in a letter sent out to all Notre Dame students that are not graduating this May.

Winicur said that there was not sufficient time to do the testing before registration this spring.

The tests will determine the responsiveness of the computer and check for unforeseen combinations such as special majors or requirements that have not been programmed into the system, said Winicur.

The Registrar is looking for students to participate in the testing of the system this summer, said Winicur. "The more students, the better the test," said Winicur.

Bush lobbying hard for Tower

Associated Press

WASHINGTON- President Bush launched a full-court press Tuesday to salvage John Tower's nomination, meeting privately with a dozen swing Democrats and wavering Republicans in hopes of persuading them to back his chosen defense secretary.

"I'm working hard at it," Bush told reporters at a picture-taking session during an afternoon Cabinet meeting. "I'm committed."

The administration's efforts suffered a setback when Republican Sen. Larry Pressler of South Dakota announced he was "very much leaning against" confirmation and urged Tower to withdraw before a vote.

"I think that he may very well be doing him (Bush) a favor in this case," said Pressler, who said he was fearful that Tower would not be capable of cleaning up the Pentagon procurement system if confirmed.

Bush said he did not know whether he could win over senators who have indicated opposition to Tower, saying only that "I hope so."

But with Tower sitting on his left in the Cabinet room, the president said he had not heard anyone "challenge this man's knowledge and his ability."

"He's the best to do the job that needs to be done," Bush said. "I don't believe that anybody should be pilloried on

Daley wins Chicago mayoral primary

Associated Press

CHICAGO- Richard Daley, son of the legendary boss of Chicago politics, defeated Mayor Eugene Sawyer in a Democratic primary Tuesday and took a giant step toward the City Hall office his father held for 21 years.

Daley built a commanding lead with overpowering support from predominantly white wards. Although Sawyer, the city's second black mayor, ran up impressive margins in his own strongholds, he was hampered by a lower turnout among blacks than whites.

With 67 percent of the city's 2,911 precincts reporting, Daley had 386,950 votes or 65 percent to Sawyer's 206,345 votes or 34 percent. Three other candidates divided the remaining votes.

If Daley wins the April 4 general election and claims leadership of the nation's third-largest city, it would mark the first time a white has ousted a black mayor in one of the country's biggest cities.

Zahm triumphant in Iceberg Debates final

By KATHY RYAN

News Staff

Zahm defeated Stanford last night in the final round of the Iceberg Debates held last night in the Library Auditorium.

Dean of the Law School David Link, chairman and spokesman of a panel of five judges, announced a vote of 3:2 in favor of Zahm after what he called "a very close debate."

Zahm defended the negative side of last night's debate to the improvement of that country's record of upholding the human rights of its citizens.

Zahm held that cutting economic aid to Latin American countries hurts the needs of the people in those countries while increasing the number of dissenters and creating political unrest.

Stanford stressed the importance of the U.S.'s public dissociation from oppressive governments. Their argument was based on "an ethical power imperative logically synthesized with driving American principals."

University President Father Edward Malloy presented Zahm's team with $500 for the dorm's general fund and plaques for individual team members. Stanford was awarded with a second place prize of $250 for the dorm's general fund in addition to trophies for each team member.

"I was pleased. Turn out was good, as was audience participation," said Father Malloy. He also commented on last night's debaters' ability to defend sides opposite to their own opinions.

Father Malloy added that the debates were intended to improve intellectual life in the middle of winter and felt they accomplished this goal. He hopes the program can be sustained in further years.

Chairman of Iceberg Debates Joe McKenna, rector of Sorin Hall, was equally pleased with the success of last night's debate. "I think it pays tribute to the quality of the Zahm and Stanford teams. They are budding politicians with a great deal of flair and ability to think on their feet. Let's look out for them in ten years time," said McKenna.

IN BRIEF

Cat Stevens songs have been banned by an Indianapolis radio station because of the former pop singer's support of Ayatollah Khomeini's condemnation of "The Satanic Verses." The radio station WXTZ-FM made the announcement Monday. Stevens, who now lives in London under the name Yussef Islam, said he supported Khomeini's call for the death of author Salman Rushdie. "If someone defames the Prophet, he must die," said Stevens. "WXTZ does not believe it's appropriate to support in any way this type of international terrorism, nor do we believe in the advocating of murder in any way, much less in a manner than imperils freedom of expression," said Randy Harrison, operations manager for the easy listening station. -Associated Press

INSIDE COLUMN

February: A time to complain, but not to act

February must be that time of the year. That time when everyone has nothing better to do with their time in sunny South Bend but complain, whine, and moan about anything that suits their fancy.

It seems as though February at Notre Dame brings out the worst in people. It's true that compared to the football season there is nothing to do on weekends and that this is compounded by the infamous lake-effect weather but February isn't all that bad. Is it?

We've complained about Sports Illustrated's sexist swimsuit issue, the lousy food in the dining hall, the closing of the 24-hour Oak Room, JPW weekend, hell, we've even complained about the complaints (this column included).

I don't know why February effects everyone so. Maybe it is the shortness of the month, maybe it is the weather, or maybe it's a let down after the football season. Who can say for sure?

For whatever reason it is strange that of all the months of the year, we pick February to complain in. It is almost like national complaining month.

The interesting thing about all of the whining we as students have been doing for the past 28 days is that in the midst of this onslaught of complaints there has also been a considerable amount of apathy. (Here comes my complaint).

Most everyone on campus thinks Notre Dame is one of the most apathetic places on earth. We complain about this constantly.

They all want someone else to take the initiative and change the attitudes around campus. "Notre Dame stinks, I wish there was something to do on weekends," is just one example of this attitude.

Don't get me wrong. There are some students who make an effort to make a difference, but the majority of students are like a friend who lives next to me in the dorm. This friend is constantly telling me that The Observer should do this, that and the other thing to fix things around campus. "Someone really should write about this teacher's lousy teaching," he'll tell me.

To some extent he's right, The Observer is hardly exempt, but he is really just trying to get someone else to do his work for him. He doesn't want to make an effort to write a letter to the editor himself. He wants someone else to do it.

Regrettably this friend is not alone. Student government, in an effort to assist students with class selection, distributed course evaluation questionnaires to all the students on campus. About 400 students responded.

Students complain about classes, but when someone makes an effort to help, they decide not to assist in the process.

I am not sure why so few responded, but I'd say a large number of the respondents figured it wasn't worth their time. "Enough people will fill them out, they don't need mine," seems to be the pervasive attitude.

Chris Donnelly

How wrong all these people are. Your response does make a difference. Take for example the student body election. Only 3,711 students voted in Monday's election. If only 11 more people had voted for Matt Breslin there would have been no need for a run-off. In this instance every seemingly insignificant vote would probably have made a difference in the final outcome.

Where does all of this leave us on the first day of a brand new month? Well, we have managed to voice a lot of complaints and get some dialogue this past month, but we have also complained about things without presenting an alternative we are willing to follow through on. Getting people to want to change something is a lot easier than actually getting them to change it.

Since February was the month of bitching and apathy, let's try to make March the month of acting and suggesting ways to change the system.

March is coming in like a lion, and hopefully will go out like a lamb.

Garzia upgraded to good condition

Observer Staff Report

Saint Mary's Junior Ursula Garzia has been upgraded to good condition Tuesday afternoon, following a car accident in which she was injured early Saturday morning.

Junior Michael Stonebreaker, who was the driver of the car involved in the one-car accident, remained in fair condition late Tuesday, said a Memorial Hospital spokesperson.

Stonebreaker and Garzia were injured when Stonebreaker's car ran off the road on U.S. 31/33 and struck a sign pole. Tests after the accident showed Stonebreaker had a blood-alcohol level of .157 percent. Indiana's legal intoxication level is .10 percent.

No decision has been made regarding punishment of Stonebreaker, said Associate Sports Information Director John Heisler. Heisler said Head Coach Lou Holtz had returned to campus late Tuesday afternoon and has not had a chance to either review the accident report or to meet with Stonebreaker.

"Our only concern at this point is for their health," Heisler said. It would be several days at least before any type of decision regarding punishment would be made, Heisler said.

Heisler said that all University policies regarding alcohol abuse would be upheld. He said any further action would be up to Holtz.

University policy requires evaluation and counseling of students who abuse alcohol and the possible loss of campus driving privileges for alcohol-related driving offenses, said Denny Moore, assistant director of public relations and information.

In an unrelated case, Heisler said that disciplinary action taken against Sophomore tailback Tony Brooks barring him from extracurricular activities was a decision made outside the athletic department. Heisler would not speculate on the reason behind the suspension.

Gov't suspends rights to restore order

CARACAS, Venezuela—Rioting over price increases ravaged Caracas for a second day Tuesday as looting spread, and the government said it was suspending constitutional guarantees to restore order.

Police estimated up to 50 people were killed and 500 injured in the worst violence in 30 years of democratic rule.

Civilians exchanged gunfire with police and shop owners took up arms to protect their property in the wake of the riots, which began Monday in Caracas, the capital, and spread to up to seven other cities.

The month-old government of President Carlos Andres Perez announced it has decided to suspend constitutional guarantees to re-establish order.

Democratic Socialist speaks on poverty in U.S. from 50s to 80s

By DANNIKA SIMPSON
News Staff

Michael Harrington, national co-chairperson of the Democratic Socialists of America, examined poverty in America from the 1950's through the 1980's in a lecture Tuesday night.

Harrington said that Lyndon Johnson's "unconditional war on poverty" in 1964 was under-emphasized because of the Vietnam War. He did praise Johnson for "cutting poverty of the aging in half" by establishing Medicare and covering the elderly under Social Security. He also praised the Johnson administration for establishing job training and legal services for the poor.

Harrington said that poverty was an "integrated problem" in the 1950s and 60s, which affected blacks, whites and Hispanics. He also stated that before Johnson many of the elderly were poor because of lack of benefits to help them with their health and day-to-day living.

Harrington stated that, in contrast, the "new poor are overwhelming the working poor." Many people who work have low paying "poverty part-time jobs without any kind of medical coverage." Many people have to take these part-time jobs after being laid off from previous jobs, he said, and they are therefore "sliding down the social ladder."

Harrington compared the U.S. system to Japan's, where, "executives go to the same bathroom as employees" and workers "have lifetime guaranteed employment." He said that the U.S. should incorporate some aspects of the Japanese system into its own in order to make it more economically just.

Harrington said he thinks that we "can't have a war on poverty because the majority of Americans are not affluent." He thinks that in order to solve the poverty problem we must "link the struggle against poverty in the U.S. to the struggle against poverty in the world" because it would be wrong to have an America that was just in an unjust world.

Harrington's lecture, which was held at the library auditorium, was sponsored by the Kellogg Institute for International Studies, the Government department, and student government.

the basis of unfounded rumor. I've known John Tower a long time, longer than many that are criticizing him out there in various walks of life."

Registrar handles many duties

By KELLEY TUTHILL
Staff Reporter

Registering all University students for next semester isn't the Registrar's only headache—the office also allots classrooms, compiles the information in the course schedule booklet and sets the final exam schedule.

First preference for classrooms is awarded to the department whose building the room is in, said Daniel Winicur, dean of administration and registrar. "For example, a chemistry or physics class would have first preference for a room in Nieuwland," said Winicur.

"Then we look at the history. If one faculty member has taught in the room for years, we take that into account," said Winicur. However, if the room size and the type of room does not suit the class, it is unlikely that the professor would keep the room, said Winicur.

The particular departments who sponsor the class decide the maximum and minimum number of students, said Winicur. "We assign classrooms based on the maximum number of students."

After registration, the Office of the Registrar has a better idea of class size, said Winicur. At this time there is a readjustment of classrooms. Another adjustment occurs at the end of the summer when freshmen and graduate class sizes are available, said Winicur. Classrooms are also adjusted further at add/drop week.

The faculty has a fair amount of say on the classrooms that they are assigned, especially if a particular type of room is needed to teach a certain class, said Winicur. If a class has three or fewer students the classroom will be taken away, if the space is needed, said Winicur.

Last semester, for the first time that Winicur can remember, there were more classes scheduled at a given time than classrooms available. He said the busiest times are Mon/Wed/Fri., 10:00 a.m. and 11:00 a.m. and Tues/Thurs. at 9:30 a.m. and 11:00 a.m. When a "classroom crunch" such as this occurs, the Registrar will go to a department that has several classes scheduled at that time and ask them to move some classes around, according to Winicur.

"Some departments like math and engineering historically get together to work out conflicts," said Winicur. Once the preliminary course information is back from the departments, it is entered into a computer, said Winicur. The course information is sent back to the departments for review before the actual course selection booklet is printed, said Winicur.

The departments offering the course also decide if a class is going to be registration by permission only, said Winicur. However, the departments are asked to meet the guidelines set up by the Office of the Registrar. "We ask for justification of why a particular class needs to be 'check-marked,'" said Winicur.

"We want to make sure that all students have access to classes," said Winicur. He added that the University is trying to cut back on the number of "checkmarked" classes.

For example, a music class that required an audition would have to be registration by permission only, said Winicur.

There are several reasons why the course schedule booklet may not specify a professor, said Winicur. The department may not have hired someone yet and consequently are unable to list a professor's name. The second possibility is that the department has yet to decide on a professor, said Winicur.

This spring's exam schedule was made up in the fall semester of 1988, said Winicur. The schedule is based upon the exam schedule from the year before, said Winicur. For example, this spring's schedule depends on when last spring's exams were held.

"We move the exam that was held on Friday last year to the first day this year," said Winicur. Every other exam is moved up accordingly.

The schedule is sent to the assistant and associate deans of each college, said Winicur. The deans look over the schedule and problems are discussed at a later meeting, said Winicur.

"At the meeting, the schedule is amended and if there are conflicts, we clear them up. But when one dean makes a change it affects another," said Winicur. The schedule is also coordinated with Saint Mary's College, said Winicur.

The fall exam schedule is set up in the early summer, said Winicur. The courses offered must be known prior to scheduling exams, he said. Enrollment numbers are also important because there are few large classrooms that must be saved for large classes' exams, said Winicur.

This spring registration will begin on April 20 and the course selection booklet should be available after March 30, said Winicur.

St. Pat's, spring break focus of HPC meeting

By MAURA KRAUSE
Staff Reporter

Constitutional amendments were unanimously approved for the Student Union Board by the Hall Presidents' Council last night, and activities for Spring Break and St. Patrick's Day were also discussed.

The changes, approved first by the student senate, concerned the addition of a new article, creating a council composed of the student body president, the SUB manager, and the HPC chairperson. The changes will go into effect immediately.

In other news, Rich Daly, assistant director of alumni clubs, spoke to the council about the Alumni Association's spring break support program. Each year, the Alumni Association travels to the school-sponsored break location. This year, the association will travel to South Padre Island.

The association will provide free long distance phone calls, orange juice, Coke products and morning newspapers to students on break in the area. There will also be an incoming phone number for emergencies. However, "the Alumni Association will not be acting in loco parentis," said Daly. Students should bring a N.D./SMC I.D., said Daly.

Mike Hough, from SUB, brought to the council information on SUB-sponsored activities for the upcoming St. Patrick's week.

The celebration will officially begin Wednesday, March 15 with "Irish Night at the Alley"-Beacon bowling from 9:00 p.m.-1:30 a.m. Shoes will be free with a student I.D.

The "Shamrock Shuffle", a 4K run around campus, will take place Thursday March 16 at 4:00 p.m. The "King and Queen O' the Irish" contest will follow that evening at 7:00 p.m. at Theodores. After the contest, each dorm will be allowed to donate pennies in support of their candidate for King or Queen. Proceeds from the contest will go to charity.

Irish week will conclude on St. Patrick's day with an "Irish Block Party." Dancing will be to the music of three Irish groups. Irish soda bread and other refreshments will be served including "Midnight Munchies"-a pancake breakfast at midnight. The block party will be held at the Field House Mall under a tent.

Also announced was the continuation of Bookstore Basketball sign-ups. Teams may still register today from 4:00-6:00 p.m. in the SUB office. The captains meeting will be held March 28 at 7:30 p.m. in Stepan Center.

Junior Dog Books will not be made available until the end of this week at which time they can be purchased in the Junior class office.

Following a campaign that many observers found tame by Chicago's raucous standards, turnout in the primary election was lower than expected, and black turnout was running about 10 percentage points behind white turnout, the Chicago Board of Election Commissioners said.

That allowed Daley to build up overwhelming margins on the predominantly white Southwest and Northeast sides. Sawyer was unable to overcome them with weakened support on the predominantly black South and West Sides.

At the same time, the elections board said the number of Republican ballots cast totaled about 25,000--some 50 percent more than in the previous election.

Usually, a victory in a Chicago Democratic primary is enough to ensure victory in the general election.

But this year could be different. The GOP primary took on unusual interest in the past week when former Democratic Alderman Edward Vrdolyak announced a last-minute write-in campaign against endorsed GOP candidate Herbert Sohn.

In early voting, Vrdolyak was running surprisingly strong outside the 10th Ward, the gritty, South Side enclave that sent him to the City Council for nearly two decades and supported him when he converted to the Republican Party.

With 61 percent of the precincts reporting, Vrdolyak had 6,720 votes, or 42 percent, to Sohn's 7,342 votes, or 45 percent, but some precincts were not immediately reporting the write-in votes. Businessmen William Grutzmacher and Kenneth Hurst split the remainder.

Because of the difficulty of counting write-in votes, the outcome of the Republican race might not be known before Thursday.

Adding further to the maneuvering, the two primary winners will face a third opponent in the general election-Timothy Evans, a black alderman who is mounting a third-party bid on The Harold Washington Party ticket.

Sawyer needed heavy black turnout in order to duplicate the victories of the late Harold Washington, who became the city's first black mayor in 1983.

"Iceberg Debates overall are a testament that students can deal responsibly with some of the key issues of our day in an all student forum," commented McKenna.

McKenna hoped the debates raised awareness on campus of social justice issues. "The focus was not the debating process itself, but rather we used debating as a very appropriate tool to get students to deal with some of some these issues," he added.

McKenna expects the future structure of the the debate to remain basically the same with some changes in the implementation.

"The standing committee hopes the incoming student government will invest similar amounts of time and effort into the Iceberg Debates."

English-speakers lose Quebec's lingual battle

Associated Press

MONTREAL- It appeared the French and English languages could live together in Quebec after separatist fervor abated nearly a decade ago, but the struggle resumed in December and French appears to have won.

New issues arise constantly, such as whether the inside of a bus is really outside for sign purposes, and the answer almost every time is that the signs must be only in French. The English-speaking minority, although disgruntled, appears to accept that the fight is lost.

"Resigned is probably the right catchword," said Donald Taylor, a psychology professor at McGill University.

Language is "a symbol of identity and it also is a resource that has associated power, and status, and success and access," he said. "So these apparently minor events evoke very primary feelings."

Quebec was a battleground of culture and language in the 1970s between the 81 percent with French heritage and a minority with a cultural kinship to Ontario and the other English-speaking provinces.

Power shifted to the French-speaking majority in those years but the separatist tide ebbed after 1980, and with it the dispute over language, when Quebec voters rejected a sovereignty referendum.

Then came a ruling by the Supreme Court of Canada in December that a 1977 Quebec law requiring all signs to be in French was unconstitutional. The court said French could be required to predominate on all signs but other languages could not be prohibited.

The provincial government, which has broader powers than state governments in the United States, overrode the decision with new legislation for the language on signs.

Bill 178, as it is known, requires that all outdoor signs still be solely in French, but for the first time since 1977 allowed bilingual indoor signs.

Indiana House approves 'beer baron bill'

Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS- The Indiana House approved the controversial "beer baron bill" Tuesday as opponents tried to rally beer drinkers to fight the measure.

Lawmakers voted 60-40 for House Bill 2055, which would permit breweries to establish exclusive territories for the distribution of beer. The proposal would repeal a 10-year-old Alcoholic Beverage Commission rule banning exclusive beer territories.

H.B. 2055 now goes to the Senate, where opponents hope to defeat it.

Grant Monahan, president of the Indiana Retail Council, said his group probably will keep up an advertising campaign aimed at getting beer drinkers to call their lawmakers.

"If this bill had come down on Wednesday or Thursday, and the public had had a chance to have input, I think the vote would have been different," said Monahan.

A group of retailers took out a full-page advertisement in The Indianapolis Star on Tuesday to argue against the bill, claiming it will boost beer prices substantially.

Rep. Marc Carmichael, D-Muncie, denied his bill would do that. He argued that "in the long run, it will allow beer prices to go down."

Carmichael claimed the ABC rule "literally turned an industry upside down." He charged the rule was a deliberate attempt to shift sales of beer from one group of distributors to another.

The ABC rule has forced many local, family-owned distributorships out of business, said Carmichael, who left his job with a South Bend distributor after the rule was approved. If left unchecked, the rule could lead to creation of a few large distributorships that would control many brands of beer, he said.

Indiana now has about 80 distributors, compared with more than 200 when the ABC rule took effect, said Carmichael. Carmichael argued that eventually that trend could force up beer prices by putting control of all brands in the hands of a few distributors. By contrast, he and other supporters of the bill claimed, competition among breweries would hold down beer prices if H.B. 2055 took effect.

However, opponents of the bill said it would force beer prices up immediately. Retailers couldn't shop around for the best price for a brand but would be forced to buy it from the exclusive distributor for their area, opponents of the bill said.

"If all the outlets have to come to me to get the product, then I will call the shots," said Rep. Donald Nelson, R-Indianapolis.

"There's no question the price will go up," said Rep. J. Jeff Hays, D-Evansville. He said a recent spot check in Kentucky and Illinois showed beer prices there 38 to 70 cents more per six pack than they were in Evansville.

All other states permit breweries to establish their distribution territories.

Other opponents claimed the bill was attempting to turn back the clock to a time when every community could support a beer distributor who had an exclusive contract.

U.S. economic growth slowest of last two years

Associated Press

WASHINGTON- The economy grew at a lackluster annual rate of 2 percent in the final three months of 1988, the slowest pace in two years, reflecting a worsening trade deficit and the lingering effects of the summer drought, the government said Tuesday.

The Commerce Department said the slowdown in the gross national product, the total output of goods and services, was accompanied by a pickup in the inflation rate as food prices and the costs of imports both rose. While the 2 percent overall growth figure was unchanged from an initial report a month ago, economists labeled the new GNP statistics disturbing because of the weakness in trade, the speed-up in inflation and an acceleration of consumer spending.

"The shape of the economy looks worse than we thought," said David Wyss, senior financial economist for Data Resources Inc., of Lexington, Mass. "All the changes were in the wrong direction."

Economists were concerned because the new GNP report showed that the country's trade imbalance worsened even more than previously estimated during the fourth quarter as imports grew at an annual rate of 13 percent, swamping a 7 percent gain in exports.

recession expected by end of 1990, page 8

Consumer spending rose at a robust 3.5 percent annual rate, too fast given current constraints on production resulting from tight labor markets and high operating rates, economists said. The jump in consumer spending, which went primarily to big-ticket items such as cars, also showed that Americans' appetite for foreign goods is unabated.

"The surge in consumption pulled in more imports with the result that the deterioration in the trade deficit was worse than previously assumed," said Jerry Jasnowski, chief economist of the National Association of Manufacturers.

It marked the second consecutive quarter that the GNP trade deficit worsened and served to emphasize economists' contention that America's trade woes are a long way from being solved.

The fourth quarter figure was depressed by the lingering effects of last summer's drought. Without the drought effects, the economy would have expanded at a 3.1 percent rate.

On the inflation front, a GNP price measure that reflects changing consumption patterns rose at an annual rate of 5.3 percent in the fourth quarter, up from a 4.7 percent rate of increase in the third quarter.

In another economic report Tuesday, the National Association of Realtors said existing single-family home sales fell a sharp 7.4 percent in January to an annual rate of 3.63 million units. The median price of a home rose 3.2 percent to $91,500.

Soviet magazine says gov't told 'political lies'

Associated Press

MOSCOW- A prominent state-run magazine has scathingly criticized the Communist Party, accusing it of spreading "political lies" that have deceived the Soviet people for generations.

The unprecedented attack in the literary monthly Novy Mir also questioned the rationale of the 20 million-member party's legal monopoly on power, enshrined by the 1977 Constitution, and says genuine democracy is impossible until the party permits open dissent in its ranks.

Even in the franker atmosphere fostered by President

Mikhail S. Gorbachev's campaign for "glasnost," or greater openness, such harsh criticism of Communist Party practices in an official Soviet publication would have recently seemed impossible.

The article, by widely known sociologist Igor M. Klyamkin, also hints at the central paradox of Gorbachev's blueprint for political change, by noting that Soviet "democratization" is taking place in a system where one party has declared itself society's sole legitimate ruler.

The criticism comes at a time when Soviets are preparing for their first national multicandidate elections.

Economists expect recession by end of 1990

Associated Press

WASHINGTON- The economy will slow substantially in 1989 with rising inflation and higher interest rates likely to topple the country into a recession before the end of next year, the nation's top business economists predicted Monday.

The National Association of Business Economists said a survey of its members found them slightly more optimistic about growth prospects for this year than they were three months ago.

But by lopsided numbers, the economists were still predicting that the most likely date for the start of the next recession was 1990.

Three out of four of the economists surveyed expected a new recession sometime in the next two years. However, the number predicting a downturn in 1989 dropped from 40 percent to 19 percent in the latest survey.

Jay Woodworth, president of the association, said that economists were more optimistic about 1989 in part because of signs that auto sales, retail spending and housing construction were holding up even with the increase in interest rates.

"The business economists feel that this expansion is not at the end of its string yet. We probably have another year or so to go," Woodworth, senior domestic economist at Bankers Trust Co. of New York, said at a news briefing.

The new survey was taken before the latest round of credit-tightening on the part of the Federal Reserve Board. Last Friday, the Fed boosted its discount rate, the interest it charges to make loans to financial institutions, to 7 percent. A hike in the discount rate is the most dramatic signal the central bank can send of its intentions to push interest rates higher to dampen an overheated economy.

The business economists expressed strong support for the Fed's inflation-fighting battle, with 70 percent expecting the board to boost interest rates further in the next six months.

Woodward said the inflationary pressures, if they do not start receding, would likely take their toll on the expansion, which has already lasted a peacetime record of six years.

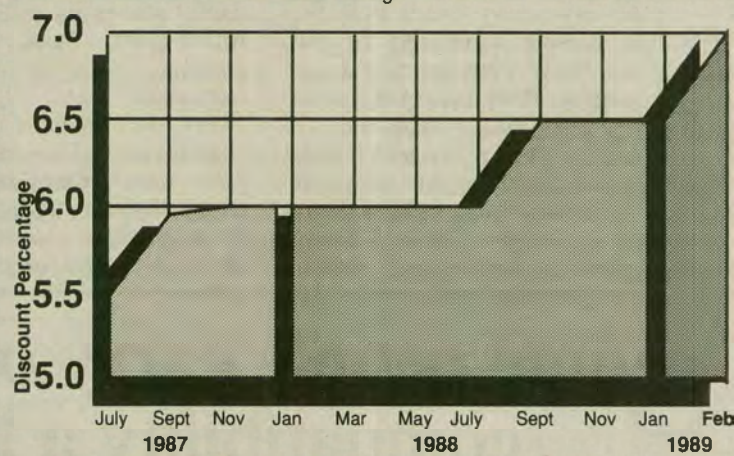

"Inflation rates of 5 percent to 5.25 percent are too high to be consistent with long-term growth and over time they would send the economy into a recession," he said.

The median forecast for growth this year, as measured by the gross national product, was 2.7 percent, up slightly from a 2.5 percent estimate made by the business economists three months ago. The economy grew at a four-year high of 3.8 percent last year.

The Bush administration has based its first budget on an estimate that the economy will slow only modestly in 1989 to a growth rate of 3.2 percent, but this estimate is about one-half percentage point higher than most private forecasters.

The administration is counting on faster growth to bring in more revenues and help it lower the budget deficit without resorting to higher taxes.

On the question of interest rates, the business economists see short-term rates hitting a peak of 8.5 percent this year and then beginning to decline to 7.8 percent by the end of 1989.

The administration is forecasting substantially lower rates for this year, a projection that also makes the deficit look smaller on paper because it lowers government borrowing costs.

Small firms can profit by better college relations

Special to The Observer

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind.- Can small, high-technology firms benefit from improved relationships with colleges and universities?

A preliminary study of 200 high-growth firms says "yes," but the study indicates that universities and industry need to clarify their needs and expectations.

The study was conducted by two Purdue University researchers to gather data on how small firms develop and maintain relationships with colleges and universities. The study was designed to gather data prior to a more comprehensive investigation.

In general, executives feel that universities need to be more practical in their research and more responsive to the needs of industry, says Greg Legan, assistant to the head of Purdue's Department of Computer Science and co-researcher for the study.

While executives place high priority on better relationships, they demonstrate little willingness to invest in developing those relationships, says Legan.

"Only eight of the responding firms have a full-time university relations coordinator, although 58 percent of the respondents have an employee with that as a part-time responsibility," he says.

"Our research and observations suggest that the college relations position in most small companies is a low-priority position with extremely high turnover."

Nicaragua hit by hyperinflation

Associated Press

MANAGUA, Nicaragua- The young businesswoman looked tense and worried when the morning papers brought the news of the cordoba's fifth devaluation this year.

The government's latest devaluation of the national currency meant only one thing: higher prices for food and transport; higher costs for doing business; yet another round of belt-tightening.

"If we ate meat three times a week, now we'll eat it once a week and so on until we become vegetarians," the woman said, toying with the pencil at her desk. "But even vegetables are expensive—when you can find them."

The woman and her husband are urban professionals in their early 30s with a small business. They are expecting their third child.

In private conversations, the two spoke of the hardships the middle class is enduring as a result of Nicaragua's economic crisis and the thought that crosses so many people's minds: pack up and leave for the United States, where many have relatives and friends.

The devaluation of the cordoba is part of the government's efforts to halt hyperinflation.

To control runaway inflation that reached 20,000 percent in 1988 and 97 percent in January alone, the government is firing more than 30,000 workers, slashing public spending and tightly restricting credit.

"You keep cutting back and cutting back (on the household budget), but now I'm wondering what else I can eliminate," the woman added.

"And if that's us and people like us," she said, leaning forward to emphasize her point, "can you imagine what poor people are going through?"

Poor and middle-class people are leaving the country in droves, undeterred even by a get-tough U.S. immigration policy that took effect last Tuesday.

Despite a tripling of the price for a new passport, Nicaraguans still flock to immigration offices.

At the new rate, a typical monthly salary of 200,000 cordobas is worth $52. Many professionals earn up to 500,000 cordobas a month, which translates to only $131. A new passport costs 150,000 cordobas.

A senior Western diplomat said figures compiled from various sources indicate that from 1979—when the leftist Sandinistas came to power—through 1987, Nicaragua lost about 8,500 professionals.

The diplomat, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said about 2,000 professionals and business people left the country in 1988 alone—despite the signing of a preliminary peace accord in March.

Employee stock ownership plans not always a good deal

By LOUIS RUYKEYSER
Business Writer

You're an ordinary working stiff in a big corporation. Suddenly your mean old boss starts talking as if we were the rich Uncle Harry you always wished you had. Out of the goodness of his heart, he tells you, he's going to give you and the rest of the labor force a piece of the action.

How good a deal is this really? And is it just possible that somebody along the way is getting snookered?

Could be—even though there's a growing trend among major corporations to adopt ESOPs (employee stock ownership plans) that give their employees a stake in the business. Companies like Texaco, Procter & Gamble, Polaroid, J.C. Penny, Avis, and Hospital Corporation of America have gone this route, swelling the number of ESOP plans to an estimated 8,000.

ESOPs have always been a sort of tax dodge. Low-interest loans are made by an outside lender to a trust set up for a company's employees. The trust buys shares in the company. The company gets the money. But unlike other forms of borrowing, the company's cash contributions to the ESOP (with which these loans are actually repaid) are fully deductible, principle as well as interest.

The leading evangelist for ESOPs is San Francisco lawyer Louis Kelso, who made a major convert in 1973 of Sen. Russel Long, then chairman of the Senate Finance Committee. Highly favorable law was written. The idea was that it would help privately owned companies whose owners wanted to retire, and would give workers the opportunity to become capitalists, even on a small scale.

From the start, there were serious questions about using the tax code for this purpose. Critics ranged across the economic spectrum from Milton Friedman to Paul Samuelson, who denounced the plan as a loophole.

But perhaps the most serious reservation was that ESOPs were making an implied promise on which they might not be able to deliver. ESOPs look like retirement plans and have been launched mostly through the federal pension laws. Congress, however, exempted ESOPs from key pension safeguards that could spell disaster for a floundering company.

aster for a floundering company.

In other words, instead of a pension plan based on sensible diversification, workers, might be putting all their eggs in the same basket from which they pluck their paychecks. If the basket collapses, as companies are known to do, look out!

Indeed, when I pressed Kelso on this once, he acknowledged that he would not recommend ESOPs for "companies that are unsuccessful, companies that are unprofitable," adding frankly: "It's no substitute for good management."

Now, to these traditional concerns about ESOPs, comes a new one. Within the last year or two, many large firms have jumped on the ESOP bandwagon as a financing vehicle to make leveraged buyouts, prevent hostile takeovers, rid themselves of unprofitable divisions, or just reap rewards by selling out at astronomical prices to the firms' employees while giving them only a passive role in management.

Joseph Blasi, management professor and author of the recent book "Employee Ownership: Revolution or Ripoff?" put it to me bluntly: "All too often... employee ownership is abused by managers who exploit it for their own purposes."

At its best, employee ownership can provide financial security and job protection. But workers offered such a plan should remember the oldest rule in investing: caveat emptor. Otherwise, they may find themselves in the goats... in an ESOPs fable.

The new modern version of Heaven

Editor's note: The following fictional article is a satirical account which represents the author's personal views.

Some time ago I had a very interesting experience during one of my late-night visits to the Grotto. No sooner did I reach for my rosary beads than Our Lady, in person, appeared to me, saying "I've been meaning to ask you a favor, Glenn. There have been some pretty strange things happening in Heaven lately, and I'd like you to take a look around. It seems that some nit-wits have staged a coup, and are trying to destroy my son's Church. I'll give you an assumed identity." As soon as I replied "Sure thing, old girl," I immediately found myself standing on a platform of clouds, underneath an arch with the inscription "The Pearly Gate."

Glenn Fogarty
with no apologies

A bespectacled man in a three-piece suit soon approached me, just as I was remarking, "So, this must be Heaven." The man replied:

"Well, we liberal theologians are still debating whether this place actually exists or not. When we decide that it does exist, then it will. Not a moment sooner."

"Who are you?" I asked.

"Oh, forgive me," he replied. "I'm Fr. Charles Current. I'll be your guide to Heaven. You must be Mr. Fogarty, the rep from the Church of Atheism. Atheism is such a grand faith. We liberal theologians have been toying with the idea of incorporating it into our Catholic theology, you know. We must be ecumenical!"

"Well, uh..."

"Let me show you around. You'll like our new setup. You've heard the saying 'All roads lead to Rome'? Well, we've completely rerouted Heaven's highway system. Now all roads lead away from Rome! Aren't we clever?"

Riding in a cloud-car with Fr. Current down Karl Rahner Boulevard, the main drag, I was able to peruse many of Heaven's new features. One could see shopping malls, teeming with wonderful stores like "Ray Hunthausen's Annul-mart, $1.98 Annulment Specials!" "Andrew Greeley's Adult Bookshop," and "Liturgies R Us." There was even a multiplex cinema showing round-the-clock screenings of "The Last Temptation of Christ" in every theatre, with free commentary from eminent theologians after each show. Fr. Current turned to me and said:

"Isn't it just wonderful? I bet you never thought Heaven was as good as this. No more 'New Jerusalem' stuff. There's my favorite store over there! It's called 'The Religious Supermarket.' You can buy any doctrine or heresy you want there, provided that it isn't approved by the Vatican."

"Can I even buy voodoo or paganism, and incorporate it into liberal theology?"

"Oh, sure. I do that all the time. Their Shinto is especially tasty. I make my favorite dishes with the 'Shake & Bake' Religion mix. Just put the ingredients you want in a bag, shake, put it in the oven, and you have your own gourmet heresy! Last night I used some Manichaeism, some Gnosticism, and just plain old Hedonism, mixed it with Arrogance and a dash of paprika, and voila! Charles Current Casserole!"

Wondering where all the 'big' people in Heaven were, I began to ask Current a few questions:

"Ah, Fr. Current, where's this Jesus fellow?"

"Well, he's under guard in our new Schillebeeckx Prison. Would you believe that he actually denied that that fine film was about him? Or that he wasn't actually a woman? He even supports 'Humanae Vitae! I suspect the guy's a Vatican agent."

"Mary?"

"Same place. Annoying woman. Always trying to steal the glory from us theologians. By the way, I highly doubt that she was a virgin."

"St. Paul?"

"That fascist, sexist pig? We locked him up long ago. He and that Jesus character just don't belong in the twentieth century. They both oppose women's ordination, too."

"St. Michael the Archangel?"

"A warmer! A foe of peace and justice! We burned him at the stake last week. No use for intolerant people like him in our new heaven."

Soon thereafter, Current stopped the cloud-car, saying, "Well, we're here!"

"Where?"

"Why, Red Square, downtown Managua! In honor of our favorite Marxist slave pen, of course. Liberation theology, you know. We're going to erect statues of the New Holy Trinity in the center of the square this week! Marx, Lenin, and Daniel Berrigan. Has a nice theological ring to it, don't you think?"

Suddenly a loudspeaker started blaring the message:

"Silence. This is Big Doubter speaking. Today you shall think the thought 'You can be too loyal to the Pope. You can be too emphatic about the divinity of Christ.'"

"Words of Wisdom," Current said. "Over there's our new Buddhist Temple, the centerpiece of our new Heaven. Ecumenism, you know. We have a Catholic chapel over here, for decorative purposes. We only play one hymn, 'Non Serviam.'"

"So I see. What does God have to say about all this?"

"God? We're not on speaking terms with Him. If we got involved with God, it would send a chilling effect over all theological innovation."

"What a pity."

"Would you believe that He actually had the audacity to say that 'He was being patient with us, but that He would be forced to discipline us soon'? Discipline the Third Magisterium? Never! I suspected He was a Vatican stooge all along."

"Well, can I speak to Him?"

"No, but you can speak to the person we've appointed to be 'God' in His stead: Hans Kung, Kung of Kings, Lord of Liberal Theology. There he is, sitting on his high pedestal now!"

I crossed Red Square to the pedestal and asked, "What in the world are you doing up there, Herr Kung?"

He replied, "Ah, sir, I walk upon the air and look down on the Vatican from a superior standpoint."

I answered, "Well, I suppose it's better that you sneer at the Pope from a pedestal in the air than do it from the ground."

Precisely. Only by dangling my mind in the heavens and mingling my rare thought with ethereal air could I ever achieve strict theological arrogance."

I replied, "Well, that's all very nice," and turning to Fr. Current said, "I think I've had my fill of the new Heaven."

"Aren't you going to stay for our Woodstock Hedonistic Lovefest? It'll be just like the 60's! Free abortions, too. Abortion isn't a black and white issue, you know..."

"I think I'll take my leave. Mary, if you'll do the honors?" Suddenly I found myself back at the Grotto. Was I ever glad to be back at Notre Dame, a real Catholic place. Walking across campus, however, I noticed an announcement proclaiming "This week! Bus trips to see 'The Last Temptation of Christ'." Well, maybe not so Catholic after all.

P.O. Box Q

Asst. Treasurer's job now open

Dear Editor:

Each year we see and hear about the many activities offered by the student organizations on campus. However, most of us do not realize that our $55 student activity fee provides the funding for these various groups and the activities they sponsor. In fact, close to $400,000 is collected from the student activity fee and the student body treasurer is responsible for budgeting this sum to the many organizations which rely on it for their operations. These include: student government, SUB, the class governments, each dorm and the Hall Presidents' Council, the Judicial and Off-Campus Councils, and over 120 other clubs and organizations on campus.

Once the budgeting process has been completed in April of each year, the student body treasurer is responsible for maintaining an accurate record of all finances and dispersing the allocated funds to the organizations mentioned above. The student body treasurer serves on the Student Senate, the Student Union Board Steering Committee (the monitoring board for SUB), the Student Business Board (the monitoring board for the student-run businesses in LaFortune as well as Ad-works), and as chairman of the Student Senate Budget and Finance Committee, where it is the treasurer's duty to see that each eligible organization on campus receives funding for the following year.

If you are interested in sharing some of this responsibility, student government needs you. Each year in March, interviews are held to select someone to serve as the assistant student body treasurer. Applicants must be sophomores in the College of Business Administration. During the chosen applicant's junior year, he or she will serve as the assistant treasurer in a learning capacity to become familiar with the financial operations of student government. Then, on April 1, 1990, he or she will assume the role of student body treasurer. Thus, the person chosen will have the opportunity to serve under two different student government administrations.

As the current assistant student body treasurer, I would encourage anyone eligible to apply for the position. This past year has been both challenging and rewarding in helping me prepare for the future. Through this job, I have been able to gain practical experience and help make important decisions. In many ways, this job has been comparable to a summer internship. I have gained a greater understanding of business, leadership qualities, and experience in dealing with people in general. I am looking forward to sharing my experience with the new assistant treasurer next year.

Applications for the assistant student body treasurer's position may be obtained in the Treasurer's Office on the second floor of LaFortune, between 12 and 4 p.m. this week. All applications are due this Thursday at 4 p.m., and interviews will be held after spring break. If you have any questions, please don't hesitate to stop by or call the Treasurer's Office, or to pursue this interest. The position of assistant student body treasurer provides a great learning experience, one which can only be built upon in the future.

The power of the poor

Editor's note: The author of this article participated in an Urban Plunge at St. Josaphat Church in Chicago from Jan. 11-13.

One of the main issues that arose on my first night of the Urban Plunge as Fr. Grassi led us around his parish neighborhood was that being poor means more than a lack of material goods. It also means a lack of political strength, so that the poor often feel helpless about changing or controlling their situation. I learned that in this atmosphere, the Church becomes a trusted friend, the only resort a person may have in asking for help. Fr. Grassi explained that although the Church also has limited power, it can serve as a voice for the poor, and work to organize them so that they can increase their own power and begin to feel more of a sense of control over their destiny.

The very next day this point became a vivid reality when we visited the parish of St. Agatha and their ever-optimistic and energetic priest, Fr. Mike Ivers. Fr. Ivers gave each of us an individual tour of his area, and as he was walking around with Jim Mercurio, they came across a lady who had just then been evicted from her house. Apparently there was a dispute over ownership of the house and the payment of property taxes. This is a legal problem that Fr. Ivers could not deal with himself, so he decided to help this lady by calling a lawyer he knew. Furthermore, it just so happened that a reporter for the Chicago Tribune was also on the tour. He asked the lady if she would like press coverage of what had happened to her. If the lawyers could not help her, possibly the power of public opinion could.

The situation was really a very striking one. Here was a woman standing in front of the home she had woken up in that morning, and now there was a group of men putting boards over all the windows and the door of that house. The sensation I felt as I watched this scene was one of corruption—a corruption of those in control of this situation. There seemed to be a total disregard for this woman's rights and welfare. I wondered to myself who this woman would have turned to if Fr. Ivers was not available to her, or if she lived in an area where the Church was very passive.

Of course, I do not really know the complete circumstances of why she was being evicted, and it is possible that there is a good and legitimate reason why she should not be allowed to live there. However, even if this is so, the lack of respect shown for this lady is inexcusable no matter what the circumstances. The attitude displayed towards her I think, may reflect a general overall attitude that landlords and the Chicago government take toward the poor. I found it very interesting to learn how important the Church can be also said he would like to see his leadership role in the community taken over by members of the community itself. He stressed that one must not take a paternal attitude towards the poor, as an advocate for the poor, in this climate of lack of respect and concern. In conjunction with this, Fr. Ivers

One should help the poor so that eventually they will be able to help themselves. In his Church there is a painting of the Last Supper, and all those seated around the table are represented by various black leaders. This is the Church's way of being sensitive to the needs of its people and identifying with them. Fr. Ivers understands the importance of role models in a child's development, and this painting, combined with his efforts to develop Black leaders within the community, are examples of how he is trying to provide these role models.

Prisoner's rights not violated by US

Dear Editor:

I feel I must reply to Maura O'Siochain's letter criticizing our government's handling of the United Kingdom's request for the extradition of Joseph Doherty. Ms. O'Siochain states Mr. Doherty has been held in this country for over five years without charge, in violation of his rights, while the U.K. has tried to extradite him for "political" crimes.

Mr. Doherty, a member of the provisional Irish Republican Army, was convicted in the U.K. in 1981 of the murder of a British army captain. He escaped from prison that same year and fled to the United States, where he was arrested in 1983 for illegally entering the country without a passport. The U.K. requested extradition, but Judge Sirozzo of the Southern District of New York ruled that Mr. Doherty's crimes came within the political activities exception to the U.S.-U.K. extradition treaty existing at that time, and so he denied extradition. If that treaty was still in effect today, the reasoning behind Judge Sirozzo's ruling would deny extradition to the U.K. of those who bombed Pan Am flight 103. The U.S. Senate moved quickly to pass a new extradition treaty that retroactively included such political offenses as the murder of a British soldier. Since that time, he has been fighting extradition for the murder, and deportation to the U.K. (he is a British citizen) for his illegal entry into this country. She states that four other federal district court judges have ruled that Mr. Doherty's crimes were political. This is not correct. Judge Sirozzo's ruling is, unfortunately, not subject to appeal. Therefore, the U.S. government was forced to mount four separate collateral attacks (an attack questioning the proceedings, not the substantive ruling). All four were dismissed on procedural grounds, not because Mr.

Doherty's crimes were political.

Mr. Doherty has not been held without charge, as she would have us to believe. He is free to leave this country at any time, as long as he is willing to return to the U.K. to serve out his life-sentence. His legal rights have been in no way violated in this country.

She states that Mr. Doherty seeks political asylum in the U.S. This also is not correct. He is trying to be extradited to the Republic of Ireland, where he is only under a 10-year sentence for other crimes. I have no doubt these are political also.

She tells us that the British legal system has been criticized by governments worldwide as being unfair to Irish defendants. This is true. The governments of such countries as Cuba, Libya, and Iran have all been highly critical of British justice. Fortunately, their opinions carry little weight in the UK or elsewhere.

She ends by saying that as an Irish-American I should be angered by this great travesty of justice. I do feel anger, but it is directed at those who would wrap a murderer in the Irish tricolor and try to convince me he's a victim.

Freshman Advisory Council update

Dear Editor:

We would like to inform you of what the Freshman Advisory Council has been doing this year. The Freshman Advisory Council consists of a freshman representative from each dorm on campus to represent the freshmen of his or her dorm in the Notre Dame student government. The council meets once a week and has worked since early last semester to facilitate communication between the class and student government, as well as organizing and sponsoring activities for our class such as Freshman Dare Night at Theodore's, Freshman Night at Beacon Bowl, the Freshman ski trip (with the Saint Mary's freshman class), and the Valentine's Day balloon sale. The council has also worked with the Freshman year of Studies in organizing and executing such events as the freshman trips to Chicago and the snow party at Bendix Woods. The council is currently working on a class mass and a possible Freshman Formal this spring.

We encourage any and all freshman to contact their dorm representative if they have any questions or suggestions, since our purpose is to serve you. The Freshman Office on the second floor of LaFortune is open five days a week and we welcome any freshman to stop by.

Diversity not always desirable

Dear Editor:

English Department Chairman Joseph Buttigieg (The Observer, Feb. 24) thinks that Notre Dame ought to honor Common Sense's two-year anniversary. To the professor, it is a daring project accomplished by "a group of selfless student and faculty volunteers." It is a travesty of justice to Professor Buttigieg that Common Sense has not been recognized because it is a "voice of diversity."

From reading Buttigieg's remarks, it would appear that Common Sense was a learned journal engineered by a group of brave and noble martyrs for the cause of The Truth. From reading Common Sense, it would appear that Buttigieg's judgment is severely impaired. This newspaper has published articles which are offensive to the Catholic faith. To refresh your memory, Professor, Common Sense writers have called Cardinal Ratzinger "a Nazi," they've published scandalously absurd articles about the late Monsignor Escriva and the Catholic lay group that he founded, Opus Dei, and of course, they've poked fun at our Holy Father, John Paul II. Perhaps the folks who produce Common Sense like to criticize everything under the sun which doesn't fit their "progressive" viewpoint, but these Catholic priests that they've offended are inspirational figures to millions of Catholics the world over: Ratzinger serves in a critical post in the Vatican hierarchy, Escriva has been nominated for canonization by one third of the Church's bishops, and the Pope is the Vicar of Christ on earth. While priestly celibacy may be a "sexual disorder" to the Common Sense staff, to Catholics, it is a sign of a person who has responded to a calling from God to give himself entirely to the people as "alter Christus." Few things in the world are more beautiful than the priestly ministry. Yet to the folks behind Common Sense, it is something to be made fun of, an anachronism in our modern, "progressive" brave new world.

It cannot be denied that Common Sense brings diversity to the Notre Dame media, but from the tone of some of its articles, it does not appear to be a good type of diversity. While everyone is entitled to his/her opinion, there are limits to tolerance. When individuals blaspheme the sacred, when they live in a Catholic University, yet demonstrate very little respect for the Catholic faith, then they do not deserve our toleration because they do not respect our beliefs. For Professor Buttigieg to demand that we honor Common Sense, it would appear that we would be dishonoring our Catholic faith.

Movie Reviews

'Surrender to the excitement of 'Taps''

KYM MACARTHUR
accent writer

When the lights dim and the audience hushes, only one sound invades the movie theatre-- the steady "drip, drip" of water. The audience is overwhelmed by the intricate layers of rich sensory images presented in the opening scene of "Tap."

From the outset of "Tap," in which Max Washington (Gregory Hines) dances with a frantic nervousness in his jail cell, you know that you have to like tap dancing to like this appropriately-titled film.

Max grew up a black kid in the ghetto with an extraordinary talent for dancing. Disillusioned by the poverty of his hard-working father, also a dancer, Max turns to crime. Although his shady career pays well, eventually the law catches up with him and Max lands in jail.

Upon his release, Max returns to the familiar streets, taking a job as a dishwasher and waiting for a better offer. Amy, his ex-girlfriend (Suzanne Douglas), and Little Mo (Sammy Davis Jr.), her father, are now running the dance studio once owned by Max's late father. Little Mo sees in Max the possibility of realizing his dream of integrating tap and modern rock. Amy sees Max as a man she still loves, but isn't sure she can live with.

Although the story line holds its own, the truly outstanding aspect of "Tap" is the choreography. Henry LeTang, a New York native who has worked with dancers and boxers alike, colors the film with memorable dance scenes. The rhythm is contagious, transmitting the pulsating drama of life itself-- the tap dance is life.

Writer/director Nick Castle merges two art forms, and is so successful due to the artistic capability of Hines, Davis, and Douglas. "Tap" is a movie which will make you tap your feet as well as touch your emotions.

The hard edges of the real world are glossed-over, and extreme realists will object, but "Tap" certainly entertains. If you've had enough of reality-- midterms, winter, bad SYR dates-- surrender to the excitement of "Tap."

It's a "challenge" when Max Washington (Gregory Hines) (dancing at center) proves he's better than ever making a surprise return to the tap dance studio where he grew up.

'Who's Harry Crumb'--too slapstick

accent writer

When a student drops a glass or breaks a bowl in the dining hall, heads turn to look and scattered cheers break out. This occasional embarrassing moment may be funny to on-lookers. However, such an incident is funny only once or twice. One hour and a half of objects (often priceless ones) being destroyed becomes tedious. Unfortunately, this is exactly what happens in the new John Candy comedy, "Who's Harry Crumb?"

There does happen to be a plot somewhere among the debris of ruined living rooms and offices. Harry Crumb (John Candy) is the last "in a long line of great Crumb detectives." He is called in by the home office to solve the kidnapping of Jennifer Downing, daughter of multi-millionaire P.J. Downing.

The president of Crumb and Crumb, Eliot Draisen (played by Jeffrey Jones) calls Harry to take this case based on his belief that Crumb is hopelessly incompetent. This is because Draisen is actually the kidnapper, trying to get $10 million dollars from Downing. By doing this, he hopes to convince Downing's wife, Helen, to leave her husband for him and his new-found money.

Draisen's obsession with Helen (played by Annie Potts) allows him to overlook the fact that she is only concerned with money. What he does not realize, however, is that Helen is actually plotting, with her tennis pro boyfriend, to kill Downing for his millions. It becomes Crumb's job to wade through this mess of greed and deceit. He eventually does, through no fault of his own.

Candy, always willing to appear foolish to get a laugh, takes things too far in this film. In one visit to Downing's office, he gets bitten by a piranha and kills it, puts both hands into a trayful of fish hooks, and destroys an antique model of a ship along with the glass case it sits in.

Not only is Crumb's clumsiness over-emphasized, but his considerable frame is often taken advantage of for laughs. As one of his many subtle disguises, Crumb dresses as a jockey when he goes to the racetrack. He gets firmly stuck while talking on the phone in a booth designed for jockeys.

Annie Potts does a wonderful job as Helen Downing, the cheating, greedy wife. This role is so unlike the one she has on the TV series, "Designing Women," that it is fun to watch. The sight of her repeatedly smacking and berating her brainless boyfriend is hysterical. She plays the part well of a woman who really does not care what man she is with, as long as he has money.

Jeffrey Jones also makes the movie more enjoyable with his performance as Draisen. In this film, his obsessed character is somewhat similar to the high school principal he played in "Ferris Bueller's Day Off." The lengths Draisen goes to so as to insure his future with Helen are unbelievable. His exterior look of a successful business executive amusingly contrasts with his inner sleaziness.

The promotions for this movie claim Crumb has "nerves of steel, body of iron, and brain of stone." The brain part quickly becomes apparent. Crumb never really solves any part of the case. The solutions fall directly into his bumbling path.

This film fails when it tries to imitate the style of others such as "Airplane" and "The Naked Gun." The humorous slapstick quality of these movies is nowhere to be found in "Who's Harry Crumb?" The only crumbs anyone should see are those found on dining hall tables.

Fearless in the line of duty, Detective Harry Crumb (John Candy) slips into a daring disguise in Tri-Star Picture's comedy "Who's Harry Crumb?"

Agents may be tried apart

Associated Press
CHICAGO--A defense attorney on Tuesday sought to have sports agent Lloyd Bloom tried separately from colleague Norby Walters on federal charges including racketeering and extortion. Both men are accused of using cash and threats to line up college athletes as clients.

At a brief hearing, U.S. district Judge George Marovich said he would rule on the motion Wednesday before empaneling the jury.

Marovich also postponed until Wednesday ruling on a move by prosecutors to introduce new evidence, and on a request by defense attorney Robert Gold to remove himself as Walter's attorney if that evidence is allowed.

Prosecutors had indicated Monday that they might seek new charges against Walters, who already faces counts of wire fraud, mail fraud, and extortion. Bloom faces similar charges.

But U.S. attorney Anton Valukas told Marovich Tuesday that they would instead seek only to submit the new evidence.

Gold said the evidence could cause him to remove himself from the case by requiring him to testify in Walters' defense.

Defense attorney Dan Webb said he wanted to have Bloom tried separately from Walters because their defenses could conflict with each other. The trial of the New York-based agents was to begin here Wednesday.

Marovich reiterated Tuesday his irritation at the prospect of delaying the case, telling attorneys for both sides, "As I indicated to you yesterday, I wanted to put the tourniquet on our baby and stop the bleeding."

He told the attorneys to outline their motions at a private hearing in his chambers, and said he would be ready to rule Wednesday.

"I don't mean to be wishy-washy, but somebody is going to go to trial Wednesday," Marovich said.

Prosecutors contend that Walters, 58, and Bloom, 29, backed by a reputed mobster, used lucrative bonuses to sign college athletes to contracts, then threatened to break their legs--or worse--if they tried to back out.

The case is being closely monitored because it raises serious questions about the structure and practice of big-money college athletics, especially football programs that are lucrative for schools.

Several professional athletes who dealt with the two agents are expected to be called as witnesses.

Walters and Bloom are accused of offering cash, cars, clothing, concert tickets and trips to dozens of college athletes in exchange for signed--and usually postdated--agreements giving them exclusive rights to represent the athletes in professional contract negotiations.

The government says such agreements defrauded the universities involved because the athletes continued to receive athletic scholarships even though those same contracts made them ineligible under NCAA rules.

The indictment also alleges that the two agents threatened the players with physical or economic harm if they wanted out to back out of the contracts.

Irish tennis faces challenges in southern California

By BOB MITCHELL
Sports Writer

"Make sure you bring your suntan lotion, bathing suit and a towel.

"Oh yeah, bring a tennis racket or two, and maybe we'll hit around."

Although these aren't the exact words of Head Coach Bob Bayliss, the Notre Dame men's tennis trip to California will not be all relaxation. In between the fun and sun, the 11-4 Irish will stop in Westwood, Ca., and hit around with the No.1 team in collegiate tennis, UCLA on March 6. The following day, the streaking Irish will move over to Southern Cal's Marks Stadium to take the court against the No.12 Trojans.

"The trip is a chance to continue to compete, to improve and to challenge ourselves," said Bayliss. "Yet it is something of a reward for a job well done so far this season."

Before those uphill battles, Notre Dame will hold over in La Jolla, Ca. to partake in the Pacific Coast Doubles competition from March 3-5. At the La Jolla Beach and Tennis Club, some premier collegiate schools will enter their doubles teams to fight for the crown. The Irish will enter four duos in the three day competition.

Also, the PCD will acclamate the Irish to the outdoor setting of all four of its matches in California. "The Pacific Coast Doubles will give us a chance to compete at a high level," said Bayliss. "But it will ease the grind of dual matches."

To continue its Top 25 schedule, the Irish will combat the best that collegiate tennis has to offer when they take on the Bruins. Looking for the first victory against a Top 25 foe, UCLA is not likely to fall prey, and grant the Irish their wish.

"We have no illusions," said Bayliss. "We have nothing to lose. But by no means are we just showing up to say we played UCLA. We want to see what we can do."

Playing UCLA will probably put a loss on their record, but the Irish, according to Bayliss, benefit in other ways.

"Going against UCLA helps us recruit," said second-year head coach Bob Bayliss. "A kid knows that if he comes here that he can play the best. Also, it is good to measure yourself against the best."

With the top ranking, it is not coincidental that UCLA has a long list of excellent players. No.1 Buff Farrow is at the top of that list. Farrow, who finished No.5 last year in the nation, currently holds the No.10 slot. Farrow is an excellent all-court player whose strength is his serve-and-volley approach to the game.

The Bruins' No. 1 doubles team of Pat Galbraith-Brian Garrow is the defending NCAA champions and currently the No.1 ranked team in the country.

"I'm not worried about the winning or losing," said Bayliss. "Win, lose or draw, we should be out there competing."

Regardless of the outcome of the UCLA contests, the Irish must hop over to the USC campus on March 7. The Trojans, who have 12 National Tennis Championship banners (second to UCLA's 15) boast of a No.12 national ranking. Continuing the legend of Wimbledon champion and alumni Stan Smith is No. 1 Byron Black. The 5-9 Zimbabwe native, ranked 27th in pre-season rankings, possess an incredible all-court game. No.2 John Carras' style of play is in the Southern Cal serve-and-volley style.

Once again the Irish are the clear underdogs in this matchup, but Bayliss is eyeing a competitive match.

"I told my players not to be surprised if they find themselves in a competitive match," said Bayliss. "USC is a scrappy, confident team. Also, Californian teams tend to think there is no way they can lose to an eastern school."

To conclude spring break, the Irish will take on the Navy's Midshipmen in La Jolla on March 9. Although unranked, Navy is a formidable foe that the Irish can not afford to take lightly. For Bayliss, the Navy matchup has specific significance since he coached there from 1970-1984 and holds the distinction of the only men's tennis coach not to lose to Army.

"They're not as match ready as we are but they are very anxious and dangerous," said Bayliss. "Navy has one of the best teams they've had in several years."

as far as next year is concerned. That's got to be to their advantage."

But DePaul, like the Irish, also runs the floor with young legs.

Sophomore forward Melvon Foster (6.0 ppg), freshman guard Curtis Price (4.7 ppg) and 6-9 freshman center Stephen Howard (8.4 ppg) are the remaining Blue Demon starters.

DePaul also has firepower off the bench in the form of long-bomb specialist Brad Niemann (9.4 ppg.), who is 65-of-142 from beyond the three-point stripe, and 6-7 freshman David Booth (9.2 ppg).

Joey Meyer's squad also resembles the Irish in that it has had trouble from the foul line this year. The Demons shoot 63 percent from the stripe, while the Irish hit 66.5 percent.

Brundy is DePaul's worst free-throw shooter at a dismal 47 percent. Foster and Price are not far behind at 56 percent and 60.5 percent, respectively.

"Both teams are in a must-win situation," Phelps said. "It should be a typical DePaul-Notre Dame basketball game."

Tonight's game is the first of two between the independent rivals, and this year's series could have NCAA Tournament implications.

Phelps would not comment on Notre Dame's chances of securing a bid.

"That's up to the Division I committee to decide," he said. "There's a lot of basketball left. I think, as far as the Tournament is concerned, it's going to come down to the last weekend for a lot of teams."

Junior co-captain Joe Fredrick continues to lead the Irish in scoring with his 17.2 average. Freshman forward Laphonso Ellis averages 13.8, junior co-captain Jamere Jackson scores at a 13.4 clip and junior center Keith Robinson averages 12.8 per game.

Ellis and Robinson pull down 9.5 and 9.1 rebounds per game, respectively.

Schoendienst, Barlick elected to Hall of Fame

Associated Press

TAMPA, Fla. --Former St. Louis Cardinals second baseman Red Schoendienst and National League umpire Al Barlick were elected to baseball's Hall of Fame Tuesday by the veterans committee.

Schoendienst played 18 years in the majors, 14 with the Cards, and was the Cardinals manager from 1965-75. He currently is a coach on Whitey Herzog's St. Louis staff.

Barlick, known for his booming voice behind the plate, worked 27 full seasons and part of another in the National League after coming up to the majors at age 25 in 1940.

Barlick worked seven World

Series and seven All-Star games before retiring after the 1971 season.

Seventeen of the 18 committee members were present during 5 1/2 hours of deliberations. Although the exact vote totals were not announced, it required 14 to be elected.

The veterans committee, which selects players passed over in the regular vote of baseball writers, has elected 119 members to the hall in 32 years but, for the first time, did not elect anyone last year.

Schoendienst and Barlick will be inducted on July 23 along with Johnny Bench and Carl Yastrzemski, who were elected by the Baseball Writers Association of America.

three-point bomb in a 7-0 run which put the Rebels up by nine.

B.P. still would not quit, rallying to within four at 34-30. But the Blitz did not score again as Lewis scored the last eight points of the ball game.

Ellen Mouch of Lewis led all scorers with 15 points, while Ciccone and Marcie Powell had 8 points apiece for the Rebels. Mangan finished with 14 for the Blitz.

The Rebels killed B.P. with their free throw shooting. Lewis tallied 15 baskets in 21 attempts from the charity stripe, while B.P. hit 6 of 10.

B.P. coach Jeff Heilert said the Lewis man-to-man defense really hurt his team.

"We haven't seen man-to-man defense in ages," he said. "I can't remember the last time we've had to play against a defense like this. We tried a lot of different things today, we'll just have to figure out what works for Thursday."

Lewis coaches Tom Zidar and Mark Laboe were obviously pleased with their team's performance.

"I guess it helped us to play a couple of games in a row," said Zidar. "We've gotten a lot better. The run we had at the end of Monday's game against P.E. gave us a lot of confidence."

"We're scared to death of the B.P. inside game, though. Lora Mangan is a very good ballplayer. We're just tickled to death to still be alive and playing in the championship game of this tournament."

Indeed Lewis, seemingly undermanned inside no matter who they play against, is an improbable finalist. But the Rebels' shooting has been phenomenal throughout the

The pit in the Joyce ACC allowed Morrissey to run its offensive game as planned. With tonight's game slated for a confined gym, both teams will have to adapt to the shooting conditions. As two different playing conditions will have been used, the winner of the final contest will be the true champion.

Keeping ND's standards high

After reading last week's issue of Sports Illustrated—an issue which focused on the complete lawlessness of Oklahoma's football program—I was appalled at the depths to which college football has fallen.

And, like every other student with a deep loyalty to a school, I tried to convince myself that no matter how badly the boys act at times, nothing they could do would bring that type of embarrassment to this school.

After all, isn't this Notre Dame, home of all that is good and decent in the world?

Molly Mahoney

Sports Writer

Doesn't the constant reminder of the Virgin Mary sitting on the Golden Dome watching over our every move prevent our players and students from defiling the school's name with unseemly behavior?

None of us are that naive.

But I didn't think that in one week two of our football team's most prominent athletes would play such a major role in dragging our university down to the level of such paragons of morality as Oklahoma, SMU, or Miami for that matter.

This is not the say that the actions by two players necessarily condemns the entire team or is indicative of a growing lack of concern by the players for the school and the ideals which it represents.

But how can we stereotype schools such as Miami as breeding grounds for illiterate convicts and piously speak as if we—supposedly the nation's premier Catholic university—are any different when two of our players spend the offseason inventing new driving techniques on the streets of South Bend.

I'm afraid this is blatant hypocrisy.

If our football players—or any other students participating in activities in the school's name—are good enough to represent Notre Dame on the field, they should be mature enough to take responsibility for their actions off.

There are those who say that these players are being wrongly showered in media attention normal students would not receive.

But when you agree to accept the media in all your glory—after the big win, after a national championship—you have to be ready to be bombarded by it when your actions aren't quite as admirable.

Many people, especially children, respect the team for its accomplishments and look up to the players as role models.

Maybe society puts too much pressure on its exemplary athletes. Maybe we expect too much when we ask them to live by the same standards as the rest of us.

But I would hope that the discipline and dedication it takes to be a varsity athlete would help make these players be better people, better citizens, and not the latest faces on the police lineup.

Needless to say, Notre Dame is no Oklahoma.

Our team has no Charles Thompsons charged with selling cocaine. The Irish don't have players like Jerry Parks, shooting fellow teammates in the chest after disagreements.

But too often, it is easy to hide behind the aura of Notre Dame.

Lets just admit that we can't expect everyone—especially 6'5, 220-pound men who pay their way through school by participating in a violent contact sport called football—to be saints.

But that doesn't exempt anyone from the constraints which guide the rest of society. Its time to either live up to the ideals which this university supposedly espouses or ignore our obligation to stand above such behavior.

Lets make sure that the next time a Notre Dame football player appears on the cover of Sports Illustrated, it is to celebrate another victory and not to be ushered into a police squad car in hand cuffs dressed in orange prison suit.

Canadian drug inquiry starts

Associated Press

TORONTO--The federal inquiry into drugs and athletics prompted by the disqualification from the Olympics of Canadian sprinter Ben Johnson resumed Tuesday with hints of startling testimony to come.

Commission counsel Robert Armstrong said he anticipates that athletes who will appear during the inquiry's review of track and field will admit to steroid use.

He said the extent of the admissions "probably" will be greater than ever heard anywhere before and he urged that no one be penalized for his candor.

Ontario Associate Chief Justice Charles Dubin, appointed by the federal government to investigate drug abuse in Canadian amateur athletics after the Olympic scandal last September, said there was merit to the observation and it would be considered at the proper time.

The commission has sweeping powers to summon and hear testimony but has no mandate to sanction. It could issue recommendations that could be followed by the Canadian Track and Field Association, however.

Appearing for what is certain to be days of testimony was Charlie Francis, Johnson's coach since the sprinter first came to the Scarborough Optimists Track and Field Club at age 15.

The coach, who detailed the accomplishments of his runners with a remarkably accurate recall, has not spoken publicly since Johnson was stripped of the 100-meter gold medal at Seoul after a positive test for anabolic steroids.

Francis said Johnson first came to the track club with his older brother, Eddie, in 1977 and showed little indication of becoming a world champion at that young age.

Johnson, now 27, was showing promise by 1981 and by 1986 was ranked No. 1 in the world in the 100 meters.

Francis offered detailed testimony of building his group of sprinters from four in 1976 to some 30 who garnered an impressive collection of national domination and international wins.

In his only comment on the Seoul scandal since September, he issued a brief statement last fall that suggested the sprinter's urine test may have been sabotaged.

"Such a test result defies all logic and, in my opinion, can only be explained by a deliberate manipulation of the testing process," Francis said in the Oct. 3 statement.

Dear Irish Items,

I'm writing to request that you inform your sports-minded student body that we on the U.S. Olympic Committee tend to spare no expense in order that our athletes get the best preparation possible.

Dear Mr. Steinbrenner,

Sounds like a good idea. It sure has worked well for your Yankees, hasn't it George?

Dear Irish Items,

I hear Oklahoma is getting a new defensive coordinator.

Dear Heff,

Yes they are. And his motto is, "The best defense is a criminal offense."

Dear Irish Items,

I'm guilty. I admit that I sit home on Friday nights and look at my Sports Illustrated Swim-suit Issue wishing Notre Dame girls looked like that.

Dear Stumped in Stanford,

That's OK. Maybe there's a nomination for Defense Secretary in your future.

Dear Irish Items,

Everyone talks about inflated prices at the Bookstore. Have you come across any bargains since you've been at Notre Dame?

Dear Napes,

There was the time that The Sun Devil House ran out of glasses in Phoenix at the post-Fiesta Bowl party. Do you consider 50 cents for a cupped handful of beer a bargain?

Dear Irish Items,

Why can't the band perform

while the ball is in play during basketball games anymore?

Dear JB,

The answer is obvious. Because if the band played then the cheerleaders would probably dance. And if the cheerleaders were dancing and cheering it would be so hard to concentrate on the game.

Dear Irish Items,

You make my liver quiver. Dear Kelley, Stay away from my photo album.

Dear Irish Items,

You call yourself a writer? Ha! How much longer do we have to put up with your once-a-week waste of 16 inches of newspaper space?

Irish lax starts up with Stony Brook

By PETE LaFLEUR
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame lacrosse team begins a new era when it faces off against SUNY-Stony Brook and Georgetown during spring break.

Led by first-year coach Kevin Corrigan and senior tri-captains John Olmstead, Kevin O'Connor and Doug Spencer, the Irish are looking to start the season off with victories at Stony Brook and against the Hoyas at Hofstra University in Hempstead, N.Y.

Preparing under an intensified practice and conditioning program, the Irish should be in the hunt for the NCAA tournament bid reserved for a "western" school. The Irish fell short of that goal the last two seasons, losing to eventual representatives Michigan State in 1987 and Air Force in 1988. This season many observers sense the Irish have their best shot.

"In the past we really didn't know much about the bid because it was new," Olmstead said. "But now we know what it means, and for the first time we're going to be ready."

Below is an preview of the '89 Irish, position by position:

Attack

All three starters return to form a unit that Corrigan says he has "a lot of confidence in." Juniors Brian McHugh and Dave Carey join Olmstead on a line that averages 6-3, 185, significant size for the fast-paced game of lacrosse.

Olmstead ranks fifth on the Irish all-time scoring list with 107 points and should make a serious charge at 1986 graduate Joe Franklin's record of 161 points. McHugh had seven goals and two assists in last weekend's 19-6 win over Chicago Lacrosse Club and 9-4 victory over Windy City, while Carey added three goals and five assists in the scrimmages.

Corrigan credits the balance of the Irish attack to the experience of the threesome and to their ability to play as a unit.

"They work well in practice and spend time coordinating what they're doing," he said. "I think they've really developed a little bit of a sixth sense for each other."

The starters are backed-up by junior Rob Lynn and sophomore Mike Sennett. Lynn has been a pleasant surprise, coming up with two goals and an assist in Saturday's rout of Chicago. Sennett, meanwhile, has battled back from back problems to see his first action for the Irish, scoring two goals against Chicago.

Midfield

Despite the potency of the Irish attack line and the depth of its defense, Olmstead said the midfielders will, as always, play a crucial role in the team's success.

"The midfielders are responsible for getting the ball from the defense up to the attack so that we can score. We are definitely a transition team," Olmstead explained.

But to see that success manifested, the Irish will depend on many young midfielders coming of age.

Last season the Irish boasted a balanced midfield group, one that countered the experience of four seniors with the youth of five freshmen. This season, however, the Irish have only three of those 13 players remaining, the oldest being junior Mike Quigley.

"On midfield we still run into some problems mainly because we tend to hurry things—and that's not unusual for a young group," Corrigan said. "But I think we have a well balanced group. They're getting better all the time and I think that'll continue."

Quigley, the team's leader in ground balls, and sophomore John Capano, the team's top faceoff man, return to lead the young Irish midfield. They are joined by freshman Chris Nelson on the first midfield line.

Sophomore Chris Rowley returns from a knee injury he suffered in the fall. He is joined by freshman Mike Sullivan and first-year sophomore Glenn Cocoman on the Irish second middle line.

Beyond that, the Irish will use freshmen Doug Murray and Scott Musa on faceoffs while sophomore John Titterton and freshman Brian Schirf will be used in clearing and defensive middle situations.

Defense

The Irish return eight veterans on a defensive unit that is led by captains O'Connor and Spencer, who started every game last season for the 10-4 Irish.

"I think we've got nine defensemen (including freshman Lance Scott) that can play. During the course of the year, you're going to have injuries and those nine players will be in a position to help us," Corrigan said.

"Also, if a player knows he doesn't have to pace himself and can go all out, it allows him to play looser and be a little more aggressive."

The strength of this year's defense lies not only in its experience, but also in the strengths of particular players.

O'Connor and sophomore Dave Barnard specialize on man-to-man coverage while senior Brendan Cahill and juniors Mike Stevens and Jeff Salamon are noted for their physical play on the crease. Those five players should battle for starting spots throughout the season, although Salamon is slowed by a knee injury that sidelined him last year.

Spencer, meanwhile, is expected to see time running on the defensive middle line alongside sophomore Eamon McAnaney and various freshman midfielders. Senior defenseman Warren Sanger will also contribute on various key situations.

Goalie

Junior Jeff Glazier enters the season ranked fourth on the Irish all-time saves list and will be backed up by freshman Tom Duane. According to Corrigan, both goalies saw significant action over the weekend and played well.

"Jeff had a bad game and a great game and he knows that," Corrigan said. "Tom played extremely well both nights. That's great because it means we have two guys we can count on."

Interhall action heats up

Morrissey forces one more game

By DAVE McMAHON
Sports Writer

Morrissey forced a final game to determine the men's Interhall basketball champion last night by outscoring Fisher 18-8 in the fourth quarter en route to a 46-36 victory over the Green Wave. Action gets underway tonight at 6 p.m. in Gym 2 of the Joyce ACC for the final battle.

After Morrissey posted a 20-18 halftime advantage, Fisher tied the score at 28 to end the third quarter. A 30-29 Green Wave lead was enough to inspire the Manor to implement its fast paced offense, reeling off eight unanswered points to post a 37-30 lead with 4:12 remaining.

"We ran our fastbreak well, but we didn't do a good job of shutting down Todd Wagenblast," said Morrissey's Tom Veltz. Wagenblast finished the night with 14 points.

Freshman Rod Culver poured out nine points in the fourth quarter before ending with 13 for the Manor. Sophomores Derrick Johnson and Veltz each contributed 11 points to the Morrissey cause. Kevin Keyes and Ed Larkin scored 7 and 4 points, respectively. "We had a height advantage and just took it right at them," said Johnson. "We had more of a great all around team performance rather than looking for just one key player."

Fisher, which came into the game having won 11 consecutive games, lost for the first time this season. The Green Wave was led by Wagenblast and Paul Fulling, who scored nine points. Despite a well-played first half, the Green Wave slowly faded in the second. The Manor converted on its fastbreak attempts and a few untimely Fisher turnovers led to a less than par performance in the final quarter.

"Our defensive intensity was not as high as it should have been," said Fisher's Fulling. "We gave them too many open shots, which we can't do against a team with their shooting ability."

In tonight's game to decide the champion, both teams will stick with the same game plans that were used last night.

"We'll try to run the break again and play a little better on defense," said Veltz.

Fisher hopes to end the season with a single loss against eleven wins.

Lewis win sends IH into deciding game

The Lewis Rebels raced to an 8-0 lead over Breen-Phillips last night and never looked back in recording a 42-30 victory in the Women's Interhall Basketball playoffs.

The loss was B.P.'s first in the double-elimination tournament, setting up a true championship game between the Blitz and the Rebels Thursday night at 6:30 in the Joyce ACC Pit.

Lewis looked sharp for playing their third game in three days. But the Blitz, with a three-day layoff took a little while to get untracked on offense.

When they did, it was freshman center Lora Mangan who did most of the damage. Mangan's 10 first-half points helped B.P. cut the deficit to 20-14 at halftime.

A B.P. run early in the second half narrowed the score to 24-22, but Lewis countered with Lori Ciccone, who hit a

Irish, DePaul crash the boards

Notre Dame basketball coach Digger Phelps knows his team has a lot of rebounding to do when it hosts DePaul tonight at the Joyce ACC.

First, the Irish will have to rebound from their collapse against Georgia Tech this past Saturday, in which Notre Dame blew a 17-point lead, gave up 60 points in the second half and lost 90-80. But more importantly for tonight's 8 p.m.

matchup, the Irish have to keep leapers like DePaul's 6-7 forward Stanley Brundy off the offensive boards.

"They've got great athletes and they really pound the boards," said Phelps, whose 17-6 team ranks third in the nation in rebounding margin with a difference of more than nine per game. "Our concern is not letting them get the second and third efforts on offensive rebounding situations."

DePaul has a rebounding margin of plus-five.

Brundy pulls down a team-leading 10 boards a game for the 18-10 Blue Demons. The senior also leads DePaul in shooting with a 19.6 average and shoots at a 65 percent clip.

"We're both transition teams and we're both good rebounding teams," Phelps said. "Brundy and (Terence) Greene, the seniors, obviously have that experience of knowing there is no tomorrow

Irish Items

I decided to share some of them with you. Some of the names have been changed to protect the innocent. As a matter of fact, some of the stories have been changed. Perhaps fabricated is a better word.

Dear Irish Items,

I'd like to start the design on a T-shirt to sell throughout the dorms next fall. Any suggestions?

Dear Beefer,

How about "Convicts vs. 'Canes"?

Dear Irish Items,

I don't know what people could complain about. Basketball fans at the JACC have been treated to exciting basketball, fast breaks, high scoring games and scoring in bunches.

Dear Coach Phelps,

I know what you're saying, Coach. At times even the Irish have played that way.
