Sen. Coats leads drug meeting on campus

BY JOHN O'BRIEN
News Copy Editor

Law enforcement officers, prosecutors and legislators from across Indiana came to Notre Dame Wednesday for a drug abuse prevention conference sponsored by U. S. Senator Dan Coats.

The conference, entitled "Off the Streets: Drug Enforcement in Indiana," focused on the problems law enforcement agencies face in combatting the problem of illegal drugs in Indiana.

"This is an awareness about drugs in our nation, an awareness that will lead to action. This action will lead to success in the war against drugs," said Coats.

Coats, a ranking member of the U.S. Senate Subcommittee on Children, Family, Drugs and Alcoholism, said that the drug problem has "exploded across our landscape" since he took office in January.

"One of my missions has been to attempt to bring the message of the impact of drugs on Indiana, on the industrial heartland, on the area I represent to the state of Indiana" said Coats.

South Bend Mayor Joseph Kernan said, "We face a very serious problem in our community—that problem is drugs." He called the drug problem a "scourge" that affects all communities.

According to David Link, dean of the Law School, Coats chose Notre Dame as a location for the conference because it was a convenient location in South Bend. "He was also attracted by the fact that Father Malloy was here," said Link.

University President Father Edward Malloy is a member of Indiana Governor Evan Bayh's Committee for a Drug-Free Indiana. The head of that committee, Jeff Modisett, serves as Drug Czar for the Bayh Administration.

Malloy called the drug problem a "very perplexing and difficult social and moral issue

Protestors call for marijuana legalization

Two protesters held a banner which read "Marijuana Prohibition is the Gateway to Hard Drugs," Wednesday outside Notre Dame's Law School.

Inside, a conference on law enforcement took place as part of Senator Dan Coats's weeklong program "Drugs:

Fighting the War in Indiana."

The protesters represented the National Organization to Reform Marijuana Laws (NORML), said Ben Masell of Madison, Wisconsin.

Coats is a member of the Senate Subcommittee on Children, Family, Drugs and Alcoholism and Masell said he expected Bush Administration Drug Czar William Bennett to be present as well.

Notre Dame's Office of Public Relations and Information and sources in the Law School denied that Bennett was present or expected.

Bennett was scheduled to appear with Coats at a seminar Monday in Indianapolis.

Two murders cap 13 drug related bombings in Colombia

Associated Press

BOGOTA, Colombia — Gunmen on motorcycles killed two employees of the newspaper El Espectador on Tuesday in an apparent effort by cocaine traffickers to force the daily to end its anti-drug crusade.

The shootings in Medellin follow 13 bombings reported in three other Colombian cities overnight. It was the largest outbreak of bomb attacks since drug lords, blamed for slaying a presidential candidate, went to war with the government nearly two months ago.

Tuesday's outbreak of violence came during a visit to Colombia by U.S. Army Gen. Maxwell Thurman, the head of the U.S. Southern Command based in Panama.

Killed within an hour of each other Tuesday afternoon were Marta Luz Lopez and Miguel Soler, a spokesman for the Bogota-based newspaper El Espectador told the Associated Press.

Miss Lopez was administrator of the paper's Medellin office, and Soler was the daily's circulation manager in the city of 2 million people.

The newspaper has long suffered from attacks by drug traffickers angry at its calls for government action against them.

El Espectador publisher Guillermo Cano was assassinated by drug traffickers in a spray of submachine gun fire Dec. 17, 1986, as he was leaving the newspaper in his car.

A month ago, a car bomb exploded beside the paper's Bogota building, causing heavy damage and forcing the newspaper to cut back operations.

Soler was killed in front of his house Tuesday by a man who rode by on a motorcycle, El Espectador spokesman Alfonso Bernal told the Associated Press.

Miss Lopez was killed by a shot in the neck, and her mother was wounded in a leg while the two women sat in a car at a traffic light, the paper's spokesman in Bogota said.

Family Focus discusses effects of alcohol abuse

BY ROBERT KELLY
News Staff

In this week's Family Focus discussion, Carolyn Kelly outlined the damaging effects of alcohol abuse on the family unit and offered some ways to approach this problem.

Kelly used the analogy of a mobile to describe alcohol as a family disease. Kelly explained that when one branch of the mobile is disrupted by alcohol, the whole structure is set into motion. In the same way, when one member of a family changes, the whole family is affected.

A short film shown at the discussion explained that there are four categories into which children of alcoholics can usually be placed. These categories are the rebel type, the responsible type, the mascot, and the caretaker.

Kelly explained that three of these four types result in a worsening of the alcoholic's situation and a denial of the real problem of alcohol abuse in the family.

One stereotype that Kelly explored is the responsible type of son or daughter, generally the type of student one would find at Notre Dame. This young person is usually achievement oriented and successful in school and activities.

The presence of alcohol abuse in the family upsets the "mobile" by depriving the son or daughter of the praise and affirmation he or she needs, Kelly said. As a result, the child becomes insecure and unsure of his abilities.

Career chats

Peace Corps representative Steve Rypkema speaks to sophomore James Suttle at the Arts and Letters Career Day held Wednesday afternoon.

WORLD BRIEFS

Two hundred and thirteen pounds of pure cocaine were dropped early Tuesday from an aircraft into the bay of Guayama, Puerto Rico, and were seized by police. Sgt. Edwin Sullivan, head of the Guayama Police Division of Drugs and Narcotics, said the cocaine had an estimated street value of $200 million. Sullivan said the drug shipment came from Colombia since it was packaged in special cans, which he said was a common practice of Colombian drug runners.

Libya's official news agency Tuesday assailed NATO's naval exercises in the Mediterranean, saying they threaten peace and will pollute the ocean. The monthlong "Deterrence Force" exercises began Monday in the western Mediterranean. NATO described the maneuvers as routine and said they involve forces from the United States, Italy, Greece, Turkey, West Germany, Britain, Spain and France. In a dispatch monitored in Rome, the news agency JANA said the exercises "flagrantly threaten peace and security in the Mediterranean. These hostile maneuvers diametrically threaten air and naval navigation."

A three-eyed alien with a robot sidekick landed by UFO and made a boy vanish by zapping him with a pistol, a Moscow newspaper reported Tuesday, in a second day of strange tales in the state-run media. But as the bizarre saga of the space invasion of the city of Voronezh unfolded for a second day, a scientist whose words were used to buttress the first published report voiced doubts, and said he was in part misquoted.

NATIONAL BRIEFS

Vice President Dan Quayle forgot the name of one of the GOP's three statewide candidates in Richmond, Virginia at a luncheon featuring bringing about $125,000 to the GOP on Tuesday, no one seemed to mind when he forgot the name of one of the party's three statewide candidates. About 450 people attended the $125-a-person lunch honoring Republican candidate for governor J. Marshall Coleman, lieutenant governor nominee Eddy Dalton and attorney general candidate Joseph Benedetti. A couple of dozen people paid $3,000 each to attend a private reception with Quayle.

A Boston man was $1 million richer for a brief moment, until police arrested him on a larceny charge for allegedly running off with a bag of money that fell from an armored car. "He said he thought it was a bag of laundry," said police Officer Paul Painten, who with an armored car guard arrested the man Tuesday about 100 yards from where dozens of money bags fell from a truck onto the Broadway Bridge. Painten said the white bag, about the size of a pillow case, was marked Bank of Boston in black letters. A seal indicated it held $1,040,000.

University of Mississippi freshmen must take an academic course that covers social issues and tries to engender an appreciation of cultural and ethnic diversity. The university on Tuesday also announced the creation of a Minority Affairs Council to establish programs and policies to increase minority participation in campus life. A school spokesman said the freshman course should begin in the fall. Earlier this year, members of the school's Beta Theta Pi fraternity stripped and bound two members, wrote racial slurs on their bodies and dumped them on the campus of predominantly black Rust College. The students contended they did not know their prank had racial overtones.

The quest for the easy 'A' is a futile effort

I have a vision of the perfect class. This class will be interesting, will entail some sort of enjoyable work like watching movies, and boost my GPA because of the high mark the excellent professor will give me. For 3 1/2 years I have been searching for this perfect class, but it has eluded me.

My friends constantly come to me and say "Blas, have I got a class for you. It's so easy you'd have to be an idiot not to get an A." Unfortunately, their easy A's turn into my generous Cs.

It doesn't matter to me that I'm paying 15 grand a year to learn something from this fine institution. I want a class that will yield maximum results with a minimum of effort. Something fluffy like the "Evolution of the American Family from the Cleavers to the Cosbys" would shield my plummeting GPA from the barrage of B's in my Metaphysical Nothingness and Existential Realities seminars.

I want to go to a graduate school, a MAJOR graduate school or get a great job in Chicago so I can watch the Cubs lose year after year from the top of my roof—I can't decide which. What more can I ask for out of life? What else is there?

My friends had informed me of their latest experience of introductory business courses. They assured me of the simplicity of the material and the subtle humor of the instructors. They even had movies and the books had pictures, a prerequisite for a truly enjoyable class. So with my career objectives in mind, my friends' assurances and my course selection book in hand, I decided to enroll in two introductory business courses.

What better way to supplement my liberal education than with some basic business classes and more importantly boost my GPA? In the back of mind I realized that my actions were inconsistent with my desire for a liberal education; after all, I had not come to college to be trained like a robotic tool and take my place with the other cogs in the wheels of corporate America.

But I sacrificed my lofty ideals to the almighty god of the high GPA and enrolled in my courses. At first, I believed that I had found the elusive promised land of easy courses.

We talked about TV commercials and shows in class and the textbooks were easy to read, something unheard of in PLS books. Those numerous digressions in Aristotle's works and the myriad of ambiguous pronouns in Kant's works did not plague me in my business textbooks. Reading Descartes' "Method" would be so easy if he had only highlighted his key points in bold and set them out in the margin in red print in case you missed them the first time through like my textbooks.

But the best thing about these books was that they had graphics and PICTURES. Not just ordinary boring pictures either. There were pictures of dancing raisins and Mickey Mouse.

"I sacrifice my high ideals to the almighty god of the high GPA."

I was seduced by the fascinating material and the faux marble cover of my beautiful textbooks, perhaps I thought they were ancient Grecian artifacts or something. I embraced the definitions of product and was entranced by our classes' discussions of debits and credits, toilet paper and dancing raisins. Yes, I loved my classes.

I eagerly anticipated and answered every "feed me" question my professors gave me to the dismay of my classmates, the crossword puzzle hounds. These students didn't seem to share my enthusiasm for our material and spent most of their time doing the daily crossword puzzle in The Observer. They even began to have races during class to see who could finish the puzzle first.

My enthusiasm for my classes ended when one Sunday at mass I became frightened after I inserted a thank you for the marketing miracle we call the Supermarket in the Lord's Prayer.

I began to wonder if the few brain cells I had left would turn into the Grandma Gooseberry's Jam we discussed in class the previous week. Had my head become like that cream filled golden spongecake, the Twinkie, that jumps in the saddle and lassos Oreo cookies in distress.

My mind had moved from the metaphysical to the mundane. My thoughts, once filled with the lofty but useless notions of Being qua Being per se and per accidens were now filled with strategies for selling Ho Ho's and nylons.

The very uselessness of the Being theories was the reason I enjoyed them so much. Selling Ho Ho's and nylons was far too practical—I could lose my mind.

I dropped one of my courses and somehow managed to pull a passing grade in the other. My quest for the perfect class, however, continues. So, if you know of a great class with easy tests and an interesting prof...

Economist discusses American labor unions

BY PATRICK HEALY
Staff Reporter

Union negotiator Edmund Ayoub addressed the new roles of American labor unions in what he called "the new economic environment" in a lecture Wednesday night.

Ayoub stated that labor's changing role was a result of the decline of U.S. competitiveness and slower real growth since the 1960's. These economic factors caused management to demand back many concessions the union had fought for and won over several decades, said Ayoub. "The pendulum had swung" away from the days of union strength, Ayoub said.

As industries such as steel, autos, and textiles continued to suffer, management and labor had to restructure their relationship with one another, he said.

Ayoub said that this led to labor to evolve from an organization whose function was to bargain with management to one whose function was to participate alongside them. This included participation in decision-making, equity ownership of the company, and representation of labor on the board of directors, said Ayoub.

Ayoub emphasized that labor must take on this new participatory role in order for the U.S. economy to be competitive in the international economy. He noted three developments in the new relationship between labor and management; the emergence of profit-sharing, Employee Stockholder Ownership Planning (ESOP), and "participatory involvement."

He said that profit-sharing and ESOPs serve as insurance for the unions for concessions they made to help the company. There is also a premise in both of workers' attitudes improving because of their interests in the company.

Ayoub said the notion behind participatory involvement is that workers should have much more input in management because it utilizes the knowledge and skill of the workers.

Ayoub said cooperation between labor and management is difficult because "the history of mistrust is a strong obstacle" to be overcome in a short time. He noted that "there is no natural tendency toward cooperation in America."

For agreement between management and labor there must be acceptance and respect on both sides, Ayoub said. A balance of power is also essential to a fair agreement, he added.

Ayoub concluded by stating that he believed "unions are an essential component of democratic society," and that "there is a trade union in our future, of that I am certain."

Latin summit considers drug trade

Associated Press

ICA, Peru — Police action against cocaine suppliers is futile unless the United States and Europe reduce the demand that drives the illicit trade, President Carlos Andres Perez of Venezuela said Wednesday.

Perez spoke on opening day of a summit of seven Latin American presidents in this desert city that also is to consider expelling Panama as the eighth member of the Group of Eight regional organization.

Panama's membership was suspended in 1988 after Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega arranged the dismissal of President Eric Delvalle, who had tried to fire Noriega as military commander.

The Venezuelan leader called Noriega's military rule a "masked dictatorship." President Alan Garcia of Peru used his opening remarks to "express publicly the Peruvian people's and the Peruvian government's repudiation and condemnation of the military dictatorship."

Peru and Venezuela were expected to push for expulsion of Panama, but diplomatic sources said Mexico and some other members felt that would amount to meddling with the internal affairs of another country.

In his remarks on the drug trade, Peres said: "The more demand grows in the north, the more production will grow in the south. Police actions will be useless unless demand is reduced."

Other opening statements also expressed support for Peru, Colombia and Bolivia, which argue that President Bush's emphasis on attacking the cocaine traffic at the source is not enough.

The summit began the day after Presidents Garcia, Virgilio Barco of Colombia and Jaime Paz Zamora of Bolivia invited Bush to attend a drug summit in Latin America within 90 days. Bush accepted immediately.

Paz did not remain for the Group of Eight meeting because Bolivia is not a member. Garcia and Barco were joined by Perez of Venezuela, Carlos Salinas de Gortari of Mexico, Jose Sarney of Brazil, Carlos Menem of Argentina and Julio Sanguinetti of Uruguay at the third summit since the regional organization was formed in 1987.

The three-day meeting is being conducted in closed session at the Hotel Las Dunas on the outskirts of Ica, a city of 350,000 people 185 miles southeast of Lima.

An army battalion of 300 soldiers guarded the hotel and 3,000 plainclothes policemen circulated in the city in case of attacks by Shining Path, a Maoist guerrilla group that began fighting Peruvian governments in 1980. The insurgency has cost 15,000 lives by government count.

CRIME OF THE WEEK

The crime of the week is the theft of computer equipment from O'Shaughnessy Hall. Security reports that sometime between 1 a.m. and 7 a.m. on Feb. 2, 1989 an unknown person or persons entered the computer lab on the second floor of O'Shaughnessy and took five Macintosh SE computers valued at $15,000. disrupting anything, only in expressing our views," Masell said.

Masell said the group was twice approached by Notre Dame Security, who asked them to leave because University policy is that protesters must have a permit to be on campus.

"I said, when an otherwise private University holds a U.S. Senate hearing on campus, my understanding of First Amendment rights are that we can be here," Masell said.

According to Masell, everything said at the conference will go on record although Coats is the only subcommittee member present.

In a mailing about the meeting received by The Observer, sessions held Monday in Indianapolis and Wednesday morning in Fort Wayne were labeled "United States Senate Hearing" while the other three meetings were called "conferences."

NORML works toward the legalization of marijuana to provide an alternative to drugs like cocaine and crack.

"We focus on towns where heavy marijuana enforcement coincides with heavy coke and crack problems," Masell said.

Family

The next stereotype which both the film and Kelly discussed is termed the "mascot" in the film. This child gives an outward appearance of being happy, lively, and friendly in order to cover up the true problems that alcohol has caused in his family, Kelly said. As a result of this coverup, the family continues to deny the problem of alcohol abuse, and the alcoholic continues to abuse.

The film established a third category of the "caretaker." This type of child tries to "mother the alcoholic parent" and will go to great lengths to make sure that the parent is happy, Kelly said. While this might seem beneficial, Kelly explained that the child is hurt because he always puts his own feelings last.

The "rebel" is the healthiest stereotype of a child that Kelly outlined. While the typical rebel does not seem healthy, Kelly explained that the child is dealing with the problem of alcohol abuse correctly. This child realizes that the problem is caused by the alcoholic and not by himself.

that faces our country and our world today."

He also called for better utilization of all resources in the war against drugs. "Two resources in particular have been under-utilized, those are the institutions of higher education and the Churches," said Malloy.

Modisett said that there is a "great concern, a great interest in doing something to stop the problem of drugs," and that the Bayh administration is attempting many different approaches to the drug problem.

He cited the formation of an interagency council on drugs that coordinates spending on drugs among all state agencies and several pieces of pending legislation as examples of the efforts of the Governor's office.

According to Modisett, Bayh's commission is considering legislation that would allow the state to place wire taps in drug cases, a bill to establish a statewide reward program for anonymous tipsters in drug cases, and a bill allowing licensing agencies to revoke the license of any professional convicted of a drug felony.

In addition, Modisett said that a bill will probably be passed to suspend the driver's licenses of drug offenders. "In talking to teenagers, we have found that revoking their driver's privileges would hit them where it hurts," said Modisett.

Among the panel members to speak at the conference were several federal law enforcement officials, including James Richmond, U. S. attorney for Indiana's Northern District; Agent-in-Charge of the FBI in Indiana Bill Ervin; David McDougal, Agent-in-Charge of the Indianapolis district of the Federal Drug Enforcement Agency (DEA); and John Twomey, deputy director of the U.S. Marshals Service in Indiana.

Twomey said that unless the drug problem is put under control, "the future is bleak." He proposed a three-part solution that consists of stopping the supply of drugs, enforcing drug laws to a "zero tolerance" level and stopping the demand for drugs.

McDougal echoed the sentiments of many of the speakers by calling for better drug education. "Education about drugs and their consequences is needed, preferably at the first, second, and third grade levels."

The conference also featured presentations from local law enforcement officials such as Neil Moore, chief of police in Fort Wayne; Darrell Gunn of the South Bend Police Department's Narcotics division; and Brian Jennings, deputy director of the Marion County Metro Drug Task Force.

Jennings' call for better distribution of funds received through seizure of drug offenders' property was one of many calls for more funding for drug programs.

According to Dunn, his division has confiscated "$293,000 in cash, $2 million in drugs, and several autos and homes" in the last two years. He said that the law enforcement agencies must continue to share personnel and resources in order to succeed.

Attending the conference were law enforcement officers from across Indiana including Chief of the Indiana State Police Lloyd Jennings, lawyers involved in drug enforcement, and also observers such as the director of Indiana's chapter of Mothers Against Drunk Driving (MADD) and a spokesman for U.S. Rep. John Hiler.

Tuesday's conference was part of a statewide tour by Coats and his wife called "Drugs: Fighting the War the Indiana." The tour included other conferences in Merrillville and Evansville, speeches at area high schools and United States Senate hearings in Indianapolis and Fort Wayne.

After criticism, regulators plan to sell FADA

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Federal regulators said Tuesday that they will try to sell the Federal Asset Disposition Association, a quasi-private company created to manage and sell sour loans and real estate from failed savings institutions.

FADA in structure is a private financial institution, but it is wholly owned by the federal government.

Until early last year, it was under intense congressional scrutiny after critics complained that FADA had grown into a bloated, inefficient bureaucracy mired in political favoritism and insider dealing.

The Resolution Trust Corp., a two-month-old government agency created to handle failed S&Ls, said it will accept bids until Oct. 31 for a sale to settle no later than Nov. 30.

If no bids are acceptable, FADA will be taken over by the government and its 275 employees offered government jobs working for the RTC.

FADA manages about $3 billion in real estate and loans from failed thrifts, having disposed of $1.3 billion in the four years since it was created. FADA's purchaser will acquire offices in Washington, Los Angeles, Atlanta, Denver and Dallas, a computer system, office furnishings and not much else.

The sale will not include the agency's name, stock, charter as a financial institution, cash or the right to retain government management contracts.

John Wills, president of FADA, said his organization offers buyers a core of real estate experts ready to participate in a flood of work as the government attempts to resolve the S&L mess, including the sale of an estimated $100 billion in hard-to-sell real estate and bad loans.

"If you intend to get into the asset management business, it's one way to way get the largest group of professionals that have expertise in managing these troubled assets coming out of the thrift industry," he said.

Wills acknowledged past criticism, but said: "Every single rock in FADA was turned over and examined. If anything, because of the intense scrutiny, we came out of it much more sound than any comparable organization."

Wills said about 40 companies have expressed varying degrees of interest in FADA. But industry officials believe the core of serious buyers is much smaller.

The successful bidder would have three alternatives: seek management contracts from the RTC, compete to buy property outright from the RTC or offer its management services to financial institutions and others that end up owning the S&L property, Wills said.

J.E. Robert Cos., an Alexandria, Va., company specializing in the management of distressed real estate, is among the organizations considering making an offer for FADA, according to the company chairman.

Congress continues to struggle with capital gains tax

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Senate Democratic leader accused the White House Tuesday of trying to scuttle congressional talks aimed at ending the partisan stalemate over a Republican-backed plan to cut the capital gains tax.

House and Senate leaders of both parties met for nearly two hours but reached no agreement in their dispute, which has delayed Senate work on a deficit-reduction bill.

Unless the budget-cutting measure is passed by Monday, spending cuts in many defense and domestic programs will be automatically triggered by the Gramm-Rudman deficit-reduction law.

The bargaining, which began last week, resumed as congressional experts estimated the size of the spending cuts that would occur Monday. Their non-binding estimate: $41.3 billion, out of a $1.2 trillion budget.

The sticking point in the deficit-reduction talks has been GOP efforts to have the Senate vote on a plan to reduce the capital gains tax rate, which President Bush promised to fight for during his election campaign.

Leaders of both parties have been maneuvering for parliamentary advantages in how that vote will occur. They have been exploring ways to keep the capital gains cut — along with other controversial provisions — from being attached to the Senate's $14 billion deficit-reduction bill, which is considered must-pass legislation.

Asked Tuesday if the administration would accept a stripped-down deficit-cutting measure in exchange for a separate Senate vote on capital gains later, White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said, "We believe the capital gains provision should be a part" of the bill.

After Tuesday's meeting of congressional leaders, Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine, said Fitzwater's comments had "complicated" the talks.

"It appears that the White House is intent on torpedoing this discussion," he said.

He added, "The administration doesn't really care about the deficit."

The House last week approved its own $11 billion deficit-reduction bill that contained a two-year capital gains tax cut, an extension of child-care programs, a rollback of Medicare benefits for elderly people with serious, long-term diseases, and other controversial provisions.

The House provision would make the maximum capital gains tax rate 19.6 percent for two years, instead of the current maximum of 28 percent (33 percent for some taxpayers).

Democrats and Republicans agree that slimming down that bill — and figuring out a way to deal with the numerous initiatives in contains — is such a difficult task that avoiding the Gramm-Rudman cuts is all but impossible.

"You're not going to avoid" the automatic cuts, said Senate Republican leader Bob Dole of Kansas. "I think we're all pretty much in agreement on that."

Graduate students plan for improved integration into university social life

Dear Editor:

In his column "State of the University: There's Room for Bettering" (Oct. 4, 1989), Regis Coccia astutely identifies the need for integration between the graduate and undergraduate populations here at Notre Dame. As part of our agenda for the 1989-90 academic year, the Graduate Student Union (GSU) will attempt to bring the two groups into close contact beyond the TA-student and resident hall staff-resident scenarios.

The GSU is presently developing better relationships with many undergraduate groups and organizations to facilitate this goal, including the Academic Council and the Student Union Board, and we hope to revitalize the Graduate/Undergraduate Committee with the help of Student Government. We will sponsor a "Graduate Student Appreciation Week" later this year in order to create greater visibility of the graduate population on campus. In the past, the GSU has co-sponsored with Student Government a panel discussion on the controversial "Last Temptation of Christ," and this year we also hope to work together with that body to add to the intellectual as well as social life of the university.

It is true that both groups could learn much from each other, as Mr. Coccia points out. Before that can be accomplished, however, both groups need to learn much about each other. The GSU thanks Mr. Coccia for bringing this issue to the pages of The Observer. We hope that, by raising awareness of the need to integrate the two groups and then acting upon the need, we can help to improve the inner community of the university.

Incident of racial harassment at ND disrupts 'Year of the Family' theme

Dear Editor:

As a black student, I have encountered some hardships at Notre Dame. My worst experience, by far, concerns the teaching methods of Father George Wiskirchen. While I was enrolled in his "Introduction to Jazz" course in Fall 1988, the professor frequently compared the African and European styles of music in a manner demeaning to the African form. For example, the rhythms of African and European were considered to be "dirty" and "clean", respectively.

After a few such lectures, I discussed my feelings with Father Wiskirchen. He agreed to alter his lectures and asked that I inform him if he made any racial comments. Fortunately, Father Wiskirchen ceased with the derogatory statements for the remainder of the semester, so I assumed that he was willing to change his lectures according to the students' needs.

However, in the present semester, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP) and the Black Cultural Arts Council (BCAC) were informed of Father Wiskirchen's continued use of insulting remarks. The black association members collectively wrote a memo to the professor asking him to comply with three demands. They were that he apologize to his class for making the comments, that he change the format of his lectures, and, finally, that he write a formal apology in The Observer.

Unfortunately, his response was negative, for he did not feel that he was in the wrong. Therefore, the problem was taken to the provost. To the shock of the black community, no previous charge had been filed against Father Wiskirchen in his 17 years as a professor at Notre Dame. Moreover, no racial complaint form had ever existed at the University. Hence, Father Wiskirchen only received a warning from the provost about his comments.

Due partly to this incident, students experiencing racism from a professor in the future will be able to complete a racial harassment form. I urge all students to report incidents of racism in order to aid in the success of the "Year of the Family."

Alva M. Lewis
Secretary, NAACP

Editor's note: A letter of apology from Fr. Wiskirchen, dated Oct. 2, was printed in The Observer on Oct. 6.

CIA engages in necessary evils to protect human rights and justice

Dear Editor:

The world in which we live is not ideal. We live in a shadowy world in which there are forces which do not operate under the same high principles of freedom, justice and democracy that exist in the United States. To help us understand these forces, and to protect ourselves against them, we need the CIA. But more than this, we need moral men and women, with a strong commitment to the ideals of human rights to enter the CIA.

Although we are entering a period in which superpower competition is less threatening than in the past, we must not delude ourselves into thinking that the U.S. is not threatened from abroad. There are still, and always will be, forces which need to be combatted.

We live in a world in which terrorists kill plane loads of innocents in the skies above Scotland and Africa; in which drug lords control nations in Latin America.

These forces cannot be countered with World Court decisions, Geneva Conventions, or the like. America made that mistake once, in the 1920s, when well-meaning idealists thought they had outlawed war with the Kellogg-Briand Pact and the League of Nations. The terrorists and drug lords of our world can be stopped only with knowledge about their actions, which the intelligence-gathering power of the CIA must continue to provide. That information must, in some cases, translate into prudent action.

Few would deny that the intelligence-gathering role of the CIA is beneficial. It is the covert activities of the CIA that bring it criticism. No serious person can deny that these actions have resulted in tragic errors on occasion. Alternatively, no serious person can deny that such actions are necessary on certain occasions. Covert operations are a necessary evil.

Christian ethics and common sense demand that these tragic mistakes be corrected. Since they cannot be undone, we have a moral imperative to prevent mistakes of a similar nature from being repeated. This can be accomplished only by changing the way decisions are made. The decision of how best use covert operations, then, should be made by those with a deep commitment to democracy and human rights.

The proposal to disallow CIA recruitment at Notre Dame is not part of the solution to the CIA's troubles, but part of the problem. It is this intolerant attitude which has shunned many people of deep moral conviction from working in the CIA. Moral decisions can arise only from a moral decision-maker. The recruitment of intelligent, moral individuals, with a deep commitment to human rights, is the best method by which the CIA can be adequately reformed.

If Notre Dame is to support the ideals of human rights and justice, it can best do so by allowing its students the opportunity to be in a position to make moral decisions. Notre Dame should not deny the CIA recruitment on campus. This is in the interests of students, the University, the CIA, and ultimately, the cause of human rights throughout the world.

TARTUFFE

First presentation of the year is nearly flawless and brings audience into the spirit of the play

MAGGIE MACDONALD
accent writer

Tartuffe, originally written by Moliere, truly takes its audience through three worlds. The experience includes not only the world depicted by Moliere, but also that of the Italian commedia dell'arte and that of Washington Hall Theatre 1989 (as the program takes pains to point out). The play is concerned with the excess of religion, and Director Reginald Bain found it a fitting one to present at Notre Dame.

Before lights dim and all of the audience is seated, a character from the two other worlds enters and watches ours — the audience realizes that the stage players are not the sole spectacle in this performance. The efforts of Set and Lighting Designer Kevin Dreyer invite the audience to delve into Tartuffe. Dreyer transformed the problem of the conspicuous architecture and design of Washington Hall — a classroom by day and a theater by night — into a blessing, and continued the design of the theater in the set, dissolving the potential physical division between the stage and the house. Additionally, the set is constructed in the manner of a stage of the commedia dell'arte, a form of comedy which influenced Moliere.

To be applauded is Bain's decision to use the English verse translation of the play, as opposed to the prose, to give the actors a challenge and keep with the spirit of Moliere. The poetry did indeed challenge the performers, but more importantly it also gave characterization clues. Although the constant rhyme and the difficult heroic couplets of the verse alienated the audience at times, a prose translation would have lost the sense of the pretension and hypocrisy of the characters which is central to the play.

One world was absent from the performance: that of the Notre Dame actors and actresses. These students aptly shed their modern duds and slipped easily into ribbons, décolletage or Buster Brown attire, professionally designed by Richard Donnelly. Timothy Deenihan, who portrayed the elder Orgon, convincingly added years to his own age with good vocal skills. Helene Mengert, Robin Dvorak and Karen Carbone tickled the audience with exaggerated facial expressions, with looks sometimes more aghast than the crucifixion image hovering behind them.

One problem of the performance lies in the characterization of the main character of Tartuffe himself. The first traces of Tartuffe's voice off-stage please the ear with Gregorian notes of piety. However, his entrance destroys this image. He is a wretched, slithy-stooped rat in appearance, which contrasts with the previous image and effectively emphasizes his deception and hypocrisy. Piety is gone from the picture for the rest of the performance, and it seems ludicrous that anyone could be seduced by this Tartuffe. Tartuffe's lack of ability to seduce distances the audience. However, the audience often hears him speak in a southern tone reminiscent of a certain evangelist who collapses into fetal position (which Gerald Welch as Tartuffe also imitates). This allusion to current hypocrisy invites the audience back into the performance and strengthens the bond between the worlds of the Tartuffe and the audience.

To experience the worlds of Tartuffe (which I heartily encourage!), tickets can be purchased at the LaFortune Student Center Box Office, or at Washington Hall. Performances run Thursday, October 12, through Sunday, October 15, and tickets are $4 for students and senior citizens, $5 for the balcony, and $6 for the main floor.

ND series highlights ethics in Life Choices

accent writer

It is lunchtime at Notre Dame. The typical student has her I.D. processed, and before she moves through the doors of the cafeteria, she is sure to grab her copy of the Observer. After carefully selecting the delicacy of the day, she makes her way to a seat and begins to eat heartily.

This scenario is not complete until the student begins to flip through the Observer. She takes careful note of the birthday ads, the quote of the day, the Far Side, and the sport's section. However, the "real news" is overlooked because of its often dreary topics. Who wants to read about the problems of immigration, homelessness, or lack of ethics in politics while eating a cheeseburger? Certainly not most students, but these are issues that cannot go unrecognized. A dedicated Notre Dame committee, under the guidance of Fr. Edward Malloy and Fr. Richard Warner, has made it their goal to arouse an awareness of these issues among the American people through television.

Life Choices is a television series exploring the ethical side of social issues. It was a project that began last September when Notre Dame was asked to set up a quality religious program that would educate its viewers as a service offered by the Church. A pilot series aired in May, and it covered the topics of youth at risk, the aging, homelessness, immigration, and political ethics. It received the prestigious Gabriel Award from the National Catholic Association of Broadcasters and Communicators for its accurate portrayals. Since then, Life Choices has been contracted for thirty-nine half-hour segments over the next eighteen months, and it is estimated that its viewing audience will grow from eight million to twenty million.

Fr. Malloy believes that Life Choices is a "significant extension of the University's teaching mission." Fr. Warner furthered this thought by saying that Life Choices is searching for a response from its viewers. It is a television effort that will present critical social problems and then initiate discussions about what the government and individuals can do to alleviate these ailments of society.

It is a hope of the University that, within the year, this television series, accompanied by an instructional manual, will be made available for schools as a teaching aid. This project would be a service to the Church and would be completely non-profit, according to Fr. Warner.

After any half-hour segment, viewers find themselves debating the questions raised. The show forces one to do more than just passively watch; it has an effect on the viewers. It causes them to respond, to think.

This program encompasses the talents and interests of Notre Dame faculty and experts from around the country. Life Choices is Notre Dame at its best.

Do not miss the opportunity to watch Life Choices. It has made this rather passive reader of the news not only want to know more, but to do more. Viewers will have made the wrong "choice" if they dare to miss Life Choices.

Life Choices is shown on cable television, or it can be seen at 5:30 p.m. Mondays, on Channel 34 and again on Sundays at 11:30 a.m.

Texas Tech match vs. Arkansas could determine Cotton Bowl bid

By STEVE MEGARGEE
Associate Sports Editor

In its college football preview issue a few years ago, Sports Illustrated gave Texas Tech the dubious honor of ugliest campus in the nation.

University officials and citizens from around the Lubbock, Tex., campus sent out enough complaints that the magazine decided to reconsider its choice.

After considering for a while, the writers concluded they were right the first time - Texas Tech was the most unsightly educational environment in the U.S.A.

Aside from that, this traditional Southwest Conference patsy has not received much attention from college football publications recently. That could all change this weekend.

With the Red Raiders having just upset Texas A&M 27-24 last weekend, the nation's ugliest campus gets set to host defending SWC champion Arkansas this Saturday.

If the Red Raiders find a way to knock off the seventh-ranked Razorbacks, Texas Tech could play in the Cotton Bowl on New Year's Day. The Raiders will have beaten two of the major conference contenders, and the other one - Houston - can not play in a bowl because it is on NCAA probation.

Nobody expected much of anything from Texas Tech, which went 5-6 last year and lost quarterback Billy Joe Tolliver to the NFL's San Diego Chargers. The only name to remember on this season's team is Head Coach Spike Dykes (only because that rhyme makes his name pretty hard to forget).

The Raiders opened the season with a 24-14 upset of Arizona, and a 29-15 conference loss to Baylor is the only blemish on Tech's record so far this season.

College Football

Arkansas is using the same strong-defense, strong-kicking game strategy that led the Hogs to a 10-1 record and near-upset of Miami last year. The Hogs are allowing just over 12 points per game, and they have connected on a record 32 consecutive field goal attempts dating back to last season (with Kendall Trainor kicking last year and Todd Wright currently holding the position).

It's too early to assume anything, but Saturday's contest between Michigan and Michigan State probably will go a long way in determining which Michigan (oops, Big Ten) school will advance to the Rose Bowl.

The good news about this East Lansing contest is that both teams are at full strength. Michigan will start Elvis Grbac at quarterback, but Michael Taylor will be available if necessary. The Spartans have their entire crop of outstanding running backs, including Blake Ezor and Hyland Hickson, ready to go.

Bo Schembechler should have his Wolverines sufficiently motivated. The Michigan coach was so disgruntled with his offense after last weekend's 24-0 triumph over Wisconsin that he did not have any of his players speak to the media.

Michigan State, which was good but unlucky against Notre Dame and Miami, was fortunate to come away with a 17-14 victory at Iowa last Saturday. The Hawkeyes rejected two opportunities in the closing minutes to attempt easy field goals that would have tied the game, as Iowa coach Hayden Fry was determined to either win the game or lose it.

After tying three games last season, Fry would care not to see another tie for the next several years.

What's the matter with Washington?

The Huskies, who were ranked 11th in the country after opening the season with wins over Texas A&M and Purdue, have fallen to 2-3 and will need to scramble to earn an invitation to a second-tier bowl.

Washington has not exactly been playing poorly. Aside from a 45-28 loss to third-ranked Colorado, the Huskies have had chances to win in the final quarter, losing 20-17 to Arizona and 24-16 to Southern Cal.

Things don't too much easier for a team playing in a Pac-10 Conference filled with talent and parity. Still to come on the schedule are Oregon and Washington State at home and a road date with UCLA.

The more things change, the more they stay the same.

The University of Florida, which has never won a Southeastern Conference championship, finally wins a clutch conference game 16-13 with a last-play field goal at Louisiana State.

And the next day, Head Coach Galen Hall joins former coach Charley Pell on the university's Hall of Shame, resigning amid charges of payments to players. The university, which has made NCAA probations as much a part of its tradition as losses to arch-rival Georgia in football, also has its basketball team undergoing investigation.

Florida fans still have cause for hope. When Pell resigned in 1984, and the probation announcement followed, the Gators responded by going 18-2-2 over the next two seasons.

Redskins' QB to return

Associated Press

HERNDON, Va. — Washington Redskins quarterback Doug Williams, feeling no stiffness a day after zinging several passes, on Wednesday expressed renewed confidence that he will soon play again.

"Without a doubt, this season is on my mind," he said. "In fact, I'd love to be back way before the end of the season."

Williams underwent surgery to repair a herniated disk on Aug. 25. After spending much of the past few weeks lifting weights, riding a bicycle and trotting on a treadmill, he threw passes on Tuesday for the first time since the operation.

Sitting in front of his locker Wednesday at Redskin Park, Williams said he felt no ill effects from the 11-minute workout.

"I don't feel any soreness yet, and I hope I don't," he said. "Considering the rehabilitation I've already gone through, I don't think I will."

Williams threw passes up to 25 yards to Redskin trainers, and some of the throws had pretty good velocity.

"It's just part of rehabilitation," he said. "It wasn't like throwing 15 yards and out to Ricky (Sanders) or Gary (Clark). It was just a matter of going through the motion and throwing the football.

"That's what it's all about, just being there and being able to do it," he said. "Now I'm just looking forward to being able to do it more."

Williams has thrown 2,583 passes in his NFL career, including four for touchdowns as MVP of the 1988 Super Bowl. The 34-year-old saw limited action last season after undergoing an emergency appendectomy, then injured his back while running on a treadmill during the recent offseason.

He currently is on the non-football injury list and won't speculate as to how soon he could return to the active roster.

"I'm not going to target it. It wouldn't be fair," he said. "I'm just going to keep going through rehab and take it from there."

Williams was named the Redskins' starter after the final game of last season, but now is behind Mark Rypien on the depth chart. If and when Williams returns, it will be as a backup because Coach Joe Gibbs has said the job is now Rypien's to lose.

Celtics no longer need Johnson as a court leader

Associated Press

BROOKLINE, Mass. — When Brian Shaw went to Italy, the Boston Celtics went into the trade market and Dennis Johnson went into a funk.

The team's search for a ball-handler to replace Shaw gave Johnson the message that the point guard position no longer was in good hands. He is 35 and trying to recover from foot injuries.

The man who Larry Bird still calls "the best player I've ever played with" is in the final year of his contract. It probably won't be the happiest of his 13 NBA seasons.

"DJ is a very competitive person. He's got a lot of heart," Boston center Robert Parish said. "He doesn't like the fact that people have written him off."

Johnson has played in five NBA all-star games. He was named to the all-defensive first or second teams every year from 1979 through 1987. He is one of only 11 players with 15,000 points and 5,000 assists.

But he couldn't keep up with the up-tempo style Coach Jimmy Rodgers tried to install last season. And even before Shaw signed with 11 Messaggero last Aug. 9, the search for a point guard had begun.

The Celtics got New Jersey's permission to bring John Bagley, still a member of the Nets, to their summer camp in late July. After Shaw left, there were reports that the Celtics might be interested in free agent Gerald Henderson and Miami draft choice Sherman Douglas.

Last Thursday, the day before Boston began its preseason camp, it traded its second-round draft picks in 1991 and 1993 for Bagley. Kelvin Upshaw and Charles Smith, a free agent from Georgetown, also are in camp as point guard.

Last Friday, Johnson refused to talk to reporters who flocked to the opening of camp.

"You can draw your own conclusions," the normally co-operative Johnson said.

Rodgers has concluded that Johnson may still be able to play point guard but couldn't handle the spot for 40 minutes a game over an extended period.

Johnson often played the off guard last season while teamed with Shaw.

"We've been looking all summer for a way to strengthen that particular position, the point position," Rodgers said. Johnson "has the versatility to do whatever we ask of him and I think that's the way he's going to enter into the picture."

Johnson missed 10 games last season, four early in the season with an Achilles tendon injury that continued to hamper him when he played and the last six with an ankle injury.

"He worked hard this summer, I think harder than he had in the past couple of seasons," trainer Lacerte said.

Johnson missed practice last weekend with a sprained right ankle but worked out at full speed Tuesday.

"The concern for a point guard wasn't the concern (for) what DJ could do or couldn't do," forward Kevin McHale said. "It was how long he could do it for. ... If you have to play DJ 45 minutes, that's going to be a hell of a toll on DJ."

General Manager Jan Volk denied that he has overlooked Johnson.

"If Dennis is healthy, we have expectations for him," Volk said.

Johnson was one of the NBA's best defensive guards

The Boston Celtics are decreasing the role of former All-Star Dennis Johnson (3) as they try to infuse some youthful zest into their aging lineup.

for most of his career and, although he never was an outstanding shooter, he had a knack for getting the ball to the right people and hitting key shots.

"He's been a guy who always came through in the clutch for us," said Reggie Lewis, who is expected to start at off guard. "I still feel that he'll still be that guy."

Bird admitted that Johnson can't race up the floor with the ball like faster guards, but said, "We're not a running team. It takes McHale and me 20 seconds to get up the court anyway so ... if DJ gets (the ball) up quick, it'd just be him and the other guard up there so he might as well wait on the rest of us."

Yet even Bird, one of Johnson's biggest boosters, said, "John Bagley is the type of guy that we needed. We needed somebody to come in and push the ball up the court."

Although Rodgers said "we're looking for a big year from Dennis," Johnson still has to prove that he's healthy and can contribute at either guard position.

But his teammates stubbornly defend him.

When people "start talking about our backcourt his name was very seldom mentioned (last season), except trade rumors or 'He's all done,'" Parish said. "He has a lot of pride. I think people will see that this year."

Falcons

has earned the opportunity to get more playing time. The only thing is they haven't made the plays. They make them in practice; it's only a matter of getting acclimated to game situations."

Holtz indicated that he has been looking at the versatile Steve Belles at tailback this week.

Notre Dame defensive end and pass-rushing specialist Devon McDonald, who missed the entire Stanford game with a knee injury, is doubtful for this weekend, according to Holtz.

McDonald is the only Irish regular with any major injury heading into the Air Force contest.

Dahlen leads Rangers to 5-4 victory over Flames

Canadiens, Sabres also win

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Ulf Dahlen scored two of New York's three power-play goals as the unbeaten Rangers opened their home season by holding off Calgary 5-4 Wednesday night, handing the Flames their first loss.

In winning their third straight game, their best start since 1983, the Rangers got another steady performance in goal from John Vanbiesbrouck, who made 32 saves while the Flames were outshooting New York 35-23. In his three starts, Vanbiesbrouck has allowed only eight goals on 108 shots.

Calgary, which won 4-2 at New Jersey Tuesday night, trailed 5-2 with five minutes to play, but rallied on goals by Jamie Macoun's on the power play at 15:03 of the third period and Theo Fleury at 16:45. Sergei Makarov had an assist on Macoun's goal, giving the former Soviet National Team star nine points in his first four NHL games.

Vanbiesbrouck preserved the victory with less than two minutes left when he poke-checked the puck away from Makarov, who was alone in front.

Dave Andreychuk scored two goals as the Buffalo Sabres rolled to a 7-1 victory Wednesday night over the confused and clumsy Toronto Maple Leafs, who couldn't even get the right six players on the ice to start the game.

Scott Arniel, Mike Foligno, Phil Housley, Rick Vaive and John Tucker also scored for the Sabres, who got three assists from Pierre Turgeon.

Referee Rob Shick gave Toronto a penalty 40 seconds into the game for failing to start with the six players that were designated on the pre-game scoresheet.

Andreychuk, wide open at the side of the crease on the power play, directed a pass from Foligno past starting goalie Al Bester at 1:08.

Arniel scored at 4:52, ducking behind defenseman Todd Gill to direct in Jeff Parker's pass; Foligno beat Bester between the legs with a slap shot at 16:37 and Housley slapped a shot into an open side of the net at 17:58 on a pass from Mike Ramsey after Gill gave the puck away in his own zone.

Whalers 4, Capitals 1

Mike Liut stopped 24 shots in his first start of the season and Paul MacDermid scored twice in the first period as the Hartford Whalers downed Washington 4-1 Wednesday night.

MacDermid scored the Whalers' first two goals in a span of 4:50 as Hartford won its second straight game to even its record at 2-2-0. Center Ray Ferraro added a goal and two assists while Ed Kastelic completed the Hartford scoring.

The start was Liut's first since an 8-2 loss to Washington last March 18, a game in which Dino Ciccarelli scored four goals en route to a seven-point night.

MacDermid connected from the right post at 3:38 on a pass from Dean Evason, then then scored from the slot during a 5-on-3 power play at 8:28. Ferraro made it 3-0 at 12:17 on the second of two assists by Mikael Andersson.

Phil Housley (6) and Mike Foligno (17) each scored a goal as the Buffalo Sabres pounded the hapless Toronto Maple Leafs last night by a score of 7-1.

Canadiens 4, Bruins 2

Russ Courtnall scored his first two goals of the season and Shayne Corson snapped a 2-2 tie midway through the third period as the Montreal Canadiens defeated Boston Bruins 4-2 Wednesday night.

Rookie Tom Chorske notched the other goal for the Canadiens, who avenged a 2-0 loss in Boston on Monday night. Craig Janney and defenseman Jim Wiemer scored for the Bruins.

Wiemer's goal 10 seconds into the third period gave the Bruins a 2-1 lead.

But the Bruins' elation was brief. Eighteen seconds after Wiemer's slap shot from the middle of the left circle beat goaltender Patrick Roy to the far corner, the Canadiens tied it on Chorske's first career goal, a seemingly harmless slap shot from the right circle that went past Rejean Lemelin's right pad. Lemelin had shut out the Canadiens two nights earlier.

Corson snapped the tie at 9:54 when he took a pass from Stephan Lebeau, worked his way into the slot and scored on a shot that Lemelin was unable to squeeze as it squirted between his skates.

Courtnall added an insurance goal at 14:38. The speedy winger broke down the right boards, deked Lemelin out of the net and scored from a sharp angle.

Illinois fencers charged with arson

Associated Press

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. — Two members of Illinois' nationally-ranked fencing team and a third university student were charged Wednesday with setting fire to the artificial turf in the football stadium.

University police said the three students, who may have been drinking before the incident, were identified by people who saw them playing with matches and a flammable liquid outside Memorial Stadium shortly before the Sept. 24 blaze.

"We have a statement ... there is an admission" from each of the three, said Lt. Kris Fitzpatrick, head of the UI Police investigations division.

Arrested on charges of arson were Conor Gorman, 19, of Ocean City, N. J.; Glenn Schicker, 20, of Franklin Lakes, N. J.; and Aleck Zavalis, 20, of Malvern, Pa.

Ms. Fitzpatrick declined to comment on the details of their statements, but said it was on the basis of the information they gave police that the charges were filed.

The three were arrested Wednesday. Bond for each was set at $100,000 by Associate Judge Jeff Ford of Champaign County Circuit Court.

"When I first heard about (the fire) I said, 'Thank God my kids have enough sense not to do something like that,'" said UI fencing coach Art Schankin. "I've never had any problem with these kids."

UI Police Chief Paul Dollins said the three entered Memorial Stadium before dawn to burn words into the AstroTurf playing field using charcoal lighter fluid. When the fire began to burn out of control, they fled, Dollins said.

UI firefighters extinguished the blaze.

Scalpers hike prices for Series tix

Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — Some ticket brokers think the World Series between San Francisco and Oakland is too local for their pocket books and fear the out-of-town money tap will go dry.

Having two Bay area teams in the series "is kind of bad, because you don't get people from out of town," said Rod Hudson of the Omni Ticket Agency of San Francisco. He said tourists usually take the first reasonable offer they receive, compared to local fans who shop around for lower prices.

"We are getting buyers from surrounding cities in Northern California," Hudson said Wednesday. "But that's not really 'out-of-town.'"

Regarding Northern California interest, telephone company officials note about 2.1 million callers hoping to buy tickets disrupted telephone service for two hours in communities throughout the northern part of the state on Tuesday.

The callers were seeking 4,000 tickets that went on sale at 9 a.m. for the three Giants' home games at Candlestick Park. On Monday, a smaller number of tickets for the Oakland Athletics' home games at the Oakland Coliseum were scooped up in 1 1/2 hours.

There's a buying frenzy by natives for Bay Bridge World Series tickets, but will it last?

"No matter how big of a baseball fan they are, how many games are they going to go to," asked Jerry Adelman of Murray's Tickets in San Francisco. "Three, four?"

But for now, brokers are finding it hard to keep up with demand.

"My desk is loaded with work," said Joan Gordon, owner of the San Jose Box Office, where tickets for both the A's and Giants start at $225 per game in the outfield.

In California, there is no law against scalping — selling tickets for more than the face value.

The San Jose agency's manager, Margo Will, noted that few out-of-towners are lining up. The sales in San Jose are almost exclusively to local fans looking for any seat.

The brokers hoping to cash in on the World Series aren't all local folks.

Golden Tickets in Dallas was charging $150 to $700 for San Francisco tickets, depending on the seats. Oakland tickets went for $175 to $600.

If you fail with brokers, try hooking up with people who place ads in newspapers hawking tickets — including one man asking $15,000 for two tickets to all seven games. Another seller was offering four tickets and a limo ride, all for just $1,600 a game.

The sky-high $15,000 price is being asked by Bill Shine, a tax accountant who had season tickets to both the Giants and A's.

"I'm getting so many calls I can't believe it," he said. "No one has bought them yet but they don't seem to be balking. If someone wants to, they can buy them."

Shine says he won't miss the World Series, but he will be in a less expensive seat — providing he sells his season tickets.

Kurt Unger of Murray's said Shine can keep the tickets, estimating the highest price the market will bear, even for front-row tickets to a seventh

Women's golf travels to Franklin Invitational

BY PETE CASTELLI
Sports Writer

After taking a week off from competition, the Notre Dame women's golf team is rested and ready to play.

The golf team travels this Thursday to Franklin, Indiana for the Franklin College Invitational. The invitational is a one day tournament, and this is the first time since women's golf became a varsity sport in 1988 that the Irish have competed in such a tournament.

The Irish will join a field of nine teams which includes such golfing powerhouses as the University of Indianapolis, Miami of Ohio, Bradley, and Tennessee Tech. After surveying the competition, head coach Tom Hanlon is optimistic about the team's chances in the October 12th tournament.

"I am very positive going into this competition," said the second-year head coach. "We have the talent, and if we play to our capabilities, there is no reason why we should not win."

Hanlon's confidence is due to the progress the team made last week in practice. "We are getting good play out of several people. Cappy Mack, a freshman, is improving with each round she plays, and she is starting to develop confidence in her game. Pandora Fecko and Roberta Bryer are also improving. They are shooting well in practice, and if they continue this into the tournament, we should have a strong team."

The Irish will be taking six players to Franklin for the tournament. Junior Roberta Bryer is first seat followed by teammates, freshman Kathy Phares, sophomore Allison Wojnas, junior Pandora Fecko, freshman Cappy Mack, and junior Heidi Hansen.

The Competition will be strong for the Irish this Thursday, but competition is not the only factor that worries Hanlon.

"Aside from the competition, one more factor stands in the girls' way this weekend — the difficult course. It will be short and tight in some instances and long in others. However, if we concentrate, we should do well on it."

"We have a young but very promising team this year. With hard work and effort and a little luck, we should be one of the stronger teams in our area."

game, is $2,500.

Another man, who would identify himself only as "Alan," offered seats in his luxury box at Candlestick for $1,295 each per game. The box comes with phones, two television sets and a switch that calls "room service" to bring in food and drinks that usually have to be bought at a stand.

The Bay Bridge World Series begins this weekend with games Saturday and Sunday in the Oakland Coliseum. After a day off, the series moves to Candlestick Park on Tuesday, Wednesday and — if needed — Thursday. The sixth or seventh games, if needed, would be in Oakland.

Brokers noted that San Francisco tickets are hotter than those for Oakland.

"Definitely, the Giants are a hotter ticket right now," said Jim Burress of Murray's.

The last line for buyers are scalpers who try to sell tickets just before game time at the stadium, an illegal enterprise.

The high cost of the tickets sold by the individuals is not what makes selling tickets at the stadium a misdemeanor, said Alfred Giannina of the San Francisco District Attorney's office.

The key to making it illegal are the location and timing. The tickets must be sold on site and on the day of the event.

Heisman-hopeful QB's lead teams into battle

On paper, it looks like a classic quarterback duel. Dee Dowis of Air Force and Tony Rice of Notre Dame, who both figure to be among the five finalists for the Heisman Trophy, lead their undefeated teams against each other at Colorado Springs.

Dowis leads an upstart squad against a team Rice directed to the national championship last season. Dowis has slightly better numbers (74 carries for 805 yards, 21-of-48 passing for 369 yards); Rice has more important numbers (a 21-2 record as a starting quarterback).

There's nothing like a coach to try to silence this kind of talk.

"Everyone is talking about the two quarterbacks," said Irish coach Lou Holtz. "But this game is a lot more than just Dee Dowis and Tony Rice, and I think those two would be the first to tell you that. You don't have an unbeaten record just because your quarterback plays well — you go 5-0 or 6-0 because your team does what it needs in every area each week to win."

Dowis himself does not make up all of Air Force's potent running attack. Fullback Rodney Lewis has 584 yards on 81 carries, halfback Greg Johnson has 396 yards on 66 carries and fullback Jason Jones has 333 yards on 55 carries.

Air Force is averaging over seven yards per rush this season.

Steve Megargee Football Notebook

Notre Dame's offensive line averages over 273 pounds a man, an average of 35 pounds heavier than the Air Force defensive linemen. Holtz does not believe the Irish can just use that advantage to win Saturday.

"We tried to do that three years ago and had some success," said Holtz. "But last year, we did not control the scrimmage against them."

The Irish defeated Air Force 41-13 last year behind three touchdown passes and some strong running from Tony Brooks and Mark Green.

"Those people who were breaking tackles for us last year are no longer with us," said Holtz.

Air Force has won big in all six games it has played this season, but it took a while for the Falcons to climb into the national rankings.

The reason for the skepticism lies in Air Force's schedule, which has thus far featured San Diego State, Wyoming, Northwestern, Texas-El Paso, Colorado State and Navy.

"All you have to do is look at the film — Air Force is for real," said Holtz. "I don't care if you're going against blocking dummies; to compile the statistics they have is impressive. They haven't been challenged. I personally voted for them in my top 10."

Holtz indicated that his team has an advantage in preparing for Air Force's wishbone attack because the Irish also run some plays out of the wishbone.

He said that Notre Dame's defensive ends and secondary will be feeling the greatest pressure against the Falcons' complex offense.

"In the wishbone, if one defender misses an assignment, it will result in a big gain," said Holtz. "The secondary has to be ready to support against the run, but they still have to defend the pass."

Aside from Raghib "Rocket" Ismail, Notre Dame's young receiving corps has not made much of an impact yet, but Holtz is impressed with what he has seen so far.

"Tony Smith has come along," said Holtz. "Pat Eilers is a role player and a solid player. Ray Griggs
