Dow Jones recovers, averts 'Black Monday'

88.12 point gain is fourth largest

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Wall Street averted another Black Monday and had a Blue Chip day instead, as some of the heaviest trading in history produced a rally in big-name stocks and losses in many smaller issues.

The Dow Jones average, which represents stock prices of America's 30 biggest industrial companies, rose 88.12 points, or 3.4 percent, to 2,657.38, erasing nearly half the losses suffered in last week's Friday the 13th plunge. Volume totaled 416.29 million shares, the fourth largest in history.

It was a "reasonably normal 400 million-share, 88 1/2-point day," New York Stock Exchange Chairman John Phelan Jr. joked at a news conference.

In spite of the gains in the Dow Jones average, stocks whose prices declined outnumbered those that increased by a 5 to 4 margin in the New York Stock Exchange. The 88.12-point gain was the fourth largest point rise.

"When you get into a period like we're in now, there's always a flight to quality. People want safety and they want companies that have either documented growth rates or a safe dividend," said Robert Kahan, manager of equity trading at Montgomery Securities Inc. in San Francisco.

On Friday, the Dow Jones average suffered its second-biggest point drop ever, falling 190 points and raising fears of a repeat of Oct. 19, 1987, when a Friday decline turned into a Monday rout that knocked a record 508 points off the average.

Indeed, it started to shape up as a repeat of Black Monday, with sharp declines in foreign stock markets and the Dow Jones average falling about 63 points in the first hour Monday.

But after gyrating wildly, the market settled down in the afternoon. Indexes of the American Stock Exchange and over-the-counter stocks fell, but the New York Stock Exchange composite index rose.

"What we're seeing is a demonstration that the safety valves in the U.S. financial system are in place and operating," said David Resler, chief economist of Nomura Securities International Inc. in New York.

In lower Manhattan, tourists lined up early outside the New York Stock Exchange, hoping to get an eyewitness view of the trading spasms.

"I feel like I'm watching a car accident," said John Egan, 24, a New Yorker waiting to get into the visitor's gallery.

Duffy talks on perestroika, NATO

By DAVID CERTO
News Staff

The President of the North Atlantic Assembly (NAA) Honorable Patrick Duffy spoke about perestroika and its effect on NATO, arms control, and the Soviet Union, Monday in the Notre Dame Law School.

Duffy discussed perestroika, a Russian term for restructuring, and its political, cultural, economic, social and military implications for the Soviet Union and its impact on international relations.

Stressing the need for stability in bringing about reform, Duffy asked his audience to "be wary of the Soviets while not impugning their integrity." This, he said, would foster greater contact between East and West while creating a safe and stable international environment for arms negotiations.

Duffy described the dominance of the military in the Soviet economy and the prevalent "siege mentality" of the Soviet people in both the general populace and the upper echelons. This explains the Soviet's determination to remain strong in any arms control agreement, said Duffy.

There is a need for the NATO and Warsaw Pact alliances to remain intact so that stable, safe reforms could be affected, Duffy emphasized. While he said he wished nothing more than the dissolution of the Soviet empire, he cautioned the West against pushing dissent.

Duffy also urged dialogue between the two alliances to reduce tension. "This is a dangerous world. That's why I prize stability above all else," Duffy stated.

Duffy stressed the key role the Communist Party will play in any future Soviet reforms and detailed some of the political moves made by President Gorbachev and his opponents in the Politburo, the ruling council.

When asked about his opinion of Gorbachev's sincerity in reforming his nation, Duffy stressed the past history and nature of the U.S.S.R. "Mr. Gorbachev's motives are still not clear," said Duffy. "Is Mr. Gorbachev serious? I think he is," Duffy said.

Another important point that Duffy made concerned the West's view of Gorbachev's reforms. "Soviet policies must be tested over time. We may be at a point where history swings on a hinge, but that is no reason for us to lose our heads," Duffy said.

The son of a coal miner, Duffy entered English Parliament in 1963 on the Labor ticket. Since then he has been active in international relations, first as Minister for the Royal Navy and then as the chairman of the NAA's Subcommittee on Devence Cooperation.

Wedtech conspirator gets 6 years

Associated Press

NEW YORK - E. Robert Wallach was sentenced to six years in prison Monday for taking $425,000 in illegal payoffs from scandal-plagued Wedtech Corp. to influence former U.S. Attorney General Edwin Meese III and other government officials.

Wallach, a prominent, 55-year-old San Francisco lawyer, also was fined $250,000 and ordered to forfeit $425,000.

Defense attorney Gary Naftalis pleaded for leniency, and Wallach told the federal judge who sentenced him, "Too much success can bring failure. I am the epitome of that and I am paying for it."

A federal jury convicted Wallach on Aug. 8 of racketeering, two fraud charges and conspiracy to defraud the U.S. government for dealings with Wedtech, a South Bronx defense contractor.

Wallach, who will be eligible for parole after serving two years, was convicted of receiving payoffs in exchange for using his friendship with Meese and others to help gain government contracts for Wedtech.

Wedtech, which collapsed in 1986, was awarded more than $250 million in no-bid contracts in just four years. It became the target of five state and federal criminal investigations, which produced a slew of criminal defendants.

U.S. District Judge Richard Owen gave a harsh, detailed account of Wallach's crimes.

"I am sickened to talk about them," Owen said.

Naftalis urged the judge to sentence Wallach to community service. He said Wallach devoted his life to helping various causes and was an excellent father.

The judge faulted Wallach for his behavior during the reading of the verdict in August, when the mother of one of his co-defendants collapsed.

Owen said that before he asked the jurors to leave the courtroom, Wallach said to them, "See what you've done."

The judge said he thought it was "an incredible act" for an experienced trial lawyer.

ND luggage service starts Friday

The Irish Express Luggage service will begin picking up luggage at 1:30 p.m. Friday, said a senator at Monday's Student Senate meeting.

Shuttles to O'Hare leave the main circle at 3:20 p.m., 5:20 p.m., and 7:20 p.m.. Luggage will be tagged, and students will be asked to save their halves of the tags so their luggage can be easily identified and distributed. Further information about Irish Express will be posted in residence halls.

A resolution to start a club coordination council was approved at the meeting Monday night.

The council will have a chairperson from each of seven club divisions report to a club coordinator, who will report to a Student Union Board director of relations, the student body treasurer, and a student government representative. The council will be used to facilitate communication and activities between the clubs and with student government.

Student Senate approved a resolution to recognize Bill Hickey, former director of University Food Services, for "his dedication and commitment to the excellence in food services provided at Notre Dame."

Copies of the resolution will be sent to executive members of the Notre Dame administration and to Hickey's family.

A resolution to reprimand The Observer for its editorial policy was dropped. The resolution was proposed as the result of a Viewpoint article which a senate member found "culturally insensitive."

Senate member Uma Balakrishnan also said that Viewpoint columns are generally serious and that it could not be assumed that the article in question was taken by readers as satire.

She said that the Viewpoint policy for selection of articles was not printed when she requested it, and that no letters criticizing the article had been printed.

WORLD BRIEFS

At least 100,000 pro-democracy demonstrators marched peacefully through downtown Leipzig on Monday night, the largest protest in communist East Germany's 40-year history. For the first time, state-run East German media promptly reported such a protest, saying that "tens of thousands of citizens" had joined the march. Pro-democracy activists said there were no incidents during the march. More than 70,000 protesters marched in Leipzig on Oct. 9, following a month in which thousands of East Germans fled West seeking freedom.

The Kremlin regrets the past use of psychiatry as a political weapon, said a Soviet official Monday. The comment by Peter Morozov, the secretary of international relations for the state-sanctioned All-Union Society of Soviet Psychiatrists, was a departure from the Kremlin view that has only hinted at possible, isolated cases of abuse in the Soviet Union. "It's clear that we regret our past, not only (political) abuses but the whole system," Morozov said in an interview.

Marina Ogilvy of London is two months pregnant and refuses to marry the father until the child is born. She says her parents are demanding they marry now or have an abortion. It is a sad and commonplace tale of modern morality, but it is also an uncommonly public royal scandal: Miss Ogilvy is 24th in line to the throne, her mother being the first cousin of Queen Elizabeth II. The royal family recently suffered the breakup of the marriage of Princess Anne, the queen's daughter.

The poll of 54 leading critics, published in the magazine's November issue, named Martin Scorsese as the decade's best director for "Raging Bull," "The Last Temptation of Christ," "The King of Comedy," "After Hours" and a segment of "New York Stories."

INDIANA BRIEFS

A New York industrialist and entrepreneur has given Purdue University of West Lafayette, Indiana $1 million to create an endowed university professorship of manufacturing management. The gift from Lewis Cullman, president of Cullman Ventures Inc., will establish a faculty chair intended to draw a professor with an international reputation in manufacturing. The Lewis Cullman Professorship of Manufacturing will be established initially in Purdue's Krannert School of Management. Future vacancies may be filled in other Purdue schools.

The Hoosier Lottery had sold at least $12 million in instant-winner tickets by late Monday afternoon, lottery officials in Indianapolis said. However, sales in the three-day-old "Hoosier Millionaire" game could be as high as $15.8 million, according to a statistical analysis of prize claim figures. Both sets of figures show the slowing in sales lottery officials had predicted would occur after the first day, when $8.19 million in $1 "Hoosier Millionaire" tickets were sold within 24 hours after the game's Friday start.

Put up your 'Dukes' against poll of college knowledge

As most people noticed last week while reading the paper, the National Endowment for the Humanities released the results of a Gallup Poll that tested college students on history and literature. Like every other poll of its kind, this poll concluded that we college students are a pack of mindless slugs who know nothing.

As a result, every newspaper columnist, every professor and every politician has come out and said how TERRIBLE it is that the nation's youth apparently have learned as much in school as their elders have, judging by the fact that every poll has concluded that nobody really knows anything.

Far be it from me to speak out and defend myself and my fellow scholars in the face of these terrible accusations, even though it is a perfectly honest mistake to answer that Shakespeare was a janitor in the House of Commons instead of a famous songwriter or whatever he was.

The fact of the matter is that these polls are 100 percent correct: WE REALLY DON'T KNOW ANYTHING! This should be of great comfort to our parents, who, as we speak, are toiling away in sweat shops and the stockyards to pay our $15,000 dollar tuition and our bar tabs. It would shock them to know what the University has been covering up for years: We don't even have classes here!

That's right, Mom and Dad, while you thought I was studying calculus and Spanish, I was running around the dorm after parietals wearing women's underwear and singing the theme from "Maude." My fellow students have been doing things like eating raw eggs and drinking cheap beer, running around campus dressed like their favorite woodland animals, building scale-model Golden Domes out of used Kleenex, and writing for "Common Sense."

You are probably asking just what this has to do with anything, and I'm not really sure myself. But I do know that this recent Gallup poll could not possibly judge our true knowledge of the real world by asking questions about the Battle of Hastings (which, for those ignorant ones out there, is the name given to the glorious and triumphant rescue of three American medical students held hostage on the island of Grenada). If it were a true barometer of our knowledge of the world, the test would ask about the one thing we actually learned about in grammar school: "The Dukes of Hazzard."

A true classic of American culture, "The Dukes of Hazzard" caused this author to first develop his now evident case of Dorkitis by staying in on Friday nights to watch the exploits of the Duke family. While the other seventh-graders in my neighborhood were going out and experiencing puberty, I stayed and worshiped Bo and Luke. Since coming to Notre Dame, however, I have met many closet "Dukes" fans.

So, to prove that Notre Dame is indeed the Harvard of the Midwest, I have made my own humanities poll. Answer as many questions as possible without looking at the answers.

1. Who sang the theme song to "The Dukes"?
C'mon, that's a gimme—Waylon Jennings. Anyone who can stop me on the quad and sing

'It's a perfectly honest mistake to say Shakespeare was a janitor in the House of Commons instead of a famous songwriter.'

John O'Brien
Assistant News Editor

the entire theme song will get my "Dukes of Hazzard" lunchbox.

2. Who was the greatest of all of the Dukes?
Anyone who answers something other than Daisy Duke automatically fails. Daisy was, in the eyes of every sixth-grade boy, the perfect woman. She was innocent, respectful, a good waitress, and looked great in tight clothes and high heels. If you answered Crazy Cooter, I'll give you credit, just because he was a source of pride to Good Ol' Boys everywhere.

3. What was the name of the Duke boys' car?
The General Lee. I used of dream of when I would turn 16 so I could by a 1969 Dodge Charger and then paint a Confederate flag on top, weld the doors shut, and then proceed to jump over police cars at 70 mph.

4. Name the Duke boys' weapon of choice.
Remember, because of their probation, Bo and Luke couldn't carry guns. The only logical alternative was a compound bow and arrows with dynamite taped to them. That's one rugged weapon.

5. At the beginning of one episode, Bo and Luke are driving around singing what rock and roll classic?

It was "Take it Easy" by the Eagles. Shame on you for not knowing that, you heathen.

6. What was the name of the group in which Boss Hogg and Uncle Jesse first met?

"The Ridgerunners" was the name of the group of men who transported moonshine throughout Hazzard County. Uncle Jesse and Boss Hogg were Ridgerunners before becoming enemies.

7. Who was the annoying nephew of Boss Hogg who frequently made guest appearances on the show?

Huey Hogg. That was another gimme.
8. What was the lame excuse provided by the producers of the show to justify taking up five minutes of every show with a performance by some famous country and western singer?

Sheriff Roscoe P. Colettrain would just happen to stop the singer for a traffic violation, forcing him to work off the ticket with a performance.

9. Who was the deputy who was so well-liked that he had his own spin-off?

Another easy one—Enos.
10. To what large city did the Dukes frequently travel in an attempt to overrule Boss Hogg?

Atlanta. Anyone who missed that one might as well pack it up.

SCORING: Zero wrong—You're a genius. 1-5 wrong—Pitiful. More than five wrong—keep 1996 open, Dan Quayle will need a running mate.

Bush signs mandatory Gramm-Rudman cuts

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Bush signed an order Monday night cutting federal programs by $16.1 billion after giving up hopes for a last-minute compromise with Congress.

"It's the law. We're ready to implement it," said White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater. He said that, while the administration had sought to avoid the almost across-the-board cuts triggered by the nation's Gramm-Rudman budget-cutting law, "it might even be good" if the budget ax does fall.

The order Bush signed shortly before 7 p.m., to take effect at midnight, was largely procedural as the spending cuts were automatic under the law.

"We'll continue to work with the Congress" in seeking to develop a compromise to reduce the deficit to roll back the spending cuts, Fitzwater said. "But there is some feeling here that (the automatic cuts) are the way to go. It will reduce spending in a very effective fashion."

"Everyone's going to have to take in their belts," he added. "It will have a hit, there's no doubt about it."

Earlier, budget director Richard Darman said "we are doing what the law requires."

The cutbacks are required under the Gramm-Rudman law because of the failure of Congress and the White House to agree on a deficit-reduction package.

The only hope for averting the cuts had been for the House and Senate to agree to a compromise budget-cutting bill and send it to Bush for his signature by midnight.

Such quick work was made virtually impossible by the situation on Capitol Hill. The House version of the measure was studded with dozens of controversial provisions — ranging from Bush's cherished capital gains tax cut to an expansion of child care services — and many lawmakers were out of town.

Fitzwater said Bush's order would appear in Tuesday's Federal Register specifying the across-the-board cuts in most federal programs.

Shuttle to launch despite protest

Associated Press

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — The space shuttle Atlantis, freed from technical and legal barriers, was declared ready Monday for today's launch with its nuclear-powered cargo. NASA said it expects neither weather nor demonstrators to interfere.

"The vehicle is in good shape, the crew is ready to go fly and the weather looks like we'll have a good chance to get airborne," NASA administrator Richard H. Truly said Monday. "It's been a long haul for this mission."

The launch from the seaside pad at the Kennedy Space Center is scheduled for 12:57 p.m. EDT.

Environmental activists, concerned that an accident could spread nuclear poison into the atmosphere, demonstrated at a gate leading to the Kennedy Space Center headquarters, and eight were arrested.

"This is just only the beginning of the government's plan to use nuclear power and weapons in space, including in the Star Wars program," said Jane Brown of the Florida Coalition for Peace and Justice.

The coalition is one of three groups that lost a suit to stop the launch in U.S. District Court last week. A three-judge panel of the U.S. Court of Appeals in Washington upheld the judge Monday, saying his ruling was not appealable.

The protesters vowed to infiltrate a 30-by-10-mile security zone and stop the launch. NASA had 200 armed security guards in the area and there were sea and airborne patrols.

The space center security chief said perhaps the best protection is the natural barrier surrounding the launch pad.

"We have about 7,000 alligators there, I don't know how many rattlesnakes, a lot of wild hogs, and probably millions of mosquitoes," Gary Wistrand said.

Galileo, weighing 6,700 pounds, will be released from Atlantis's cargo bay 6 1/2 hours after the ship is in orbit, the start of a six-year, 2.4 billion-mile journey to Jupiter, the largest planet in the solar system.

Electricity to run the space probe will come from two nuclear power packs, each loaded with 24.7 pounds of plutonium-238. NASA has used such radioactive fuel on 22 previous flights. Three have been involved in accidents, but no plutonium was released.

The space agency said in court last week that detailed studies show the chances of release of radioactive material are statistically low and that the environmentalists' fears are unwarranted.

A large team of experts will be scattered around the center with detection devices to sample the air in case there is an accident as the shuttle lifts off. The Department of Energy will have an airplane aloft and another 150 people standing by, said agency spokesman Chris West.

The mission was originally planned to begin in 1982, but was delayed, first by money troubles and then by the explosion of the space shuttle Challenger. The cost of the project to date is $1.5 billion, NASA said.

SMC staff member receives 1989 John Shingleton award

Special To The Observer

Jeffrey Roberts, assistant director of counseling and career development at Saint Mary's College, is the recipient of the 1989 John Shingleton Award for Innovative Research in Career Planning and Placement.

The award, sponsored by the Midwest College Placement Association (MCPA), was presented to Roberts for his research entitled "Working with Third Party Employment Services: A Review of College Placement Practices."

Roberts' study investigated placement office interaction with employment agencies, executive search firms and job clearinghouses.

The report found little evidence of opportunity for employment services to meet job seekers, the lack of a forum for constructive dialogue and exchange of information, few administrative policies and an absence of protocol within the placement profession for dealing with third party services, and a prevailing sense of suspicion and protectionism among college placement officers.

The report has led to presentations by Roberts at three MCPA regional conferences and the College Placement Council's national convention.

In addition, his study has resulted in a request from the Association for School, College and University Staffing for similar research in the area of teacher placement, and the creation of an official third party employment services liaison with the MCPA's principles and practices committee.

Campus Ministry and You

REFLECTIONS ON NOTRE DAME ENCOUNTER. . . MY NOTRE DAME ENCOUNTER

The Notre Dame Encounter Retreat Program begins with a three-day retreat experience designed to help participants deeply explore the meaning of their relationship with God and their commitment to Christian life. Each NDE weekend is directed by a team of students, faculty and staff who work together to produce an exciting, challenging and reflective time away from the day-to-day problems and distractions. The following reflection was written by Amy Weber, a senior who participated in the most recent NDE retreat experience.

have just got to go on one.' So I signed up," I said cheerfully.

But I was really a little scared. I feared a weekend of prayer. My brother had warned me: "All your buddies will be in Michigan for the game, and you'll spend three days praying?" but I did want to see what it was all about. I decided I would just quietly take things in. This was my time away, and I would relax.

Wrong.
Soon, I found myself so interested in the people I was meeting and the lectures I was hearing that I interested in their lives.

Too quickly it was Sunday, and I had to pack up memories of a wonderful weekend and, I hoped, a few answers to the many questions raised over the past days.

When I got back to campus, I called my brother, to let him know what had happened during my 55 hours away. I hadn't spent three days praying. Well, we did go to mass a few times, and had a penance service and many group prayer services. And those times were very special. But on top of that I had spent a lot of time thinking, questioning and finding answers to many questions I had never raised before.

And I had made some new friends; people I hadn't known on Friday afternoon now knew me in ways few others did, and I them. I see some of them when I walk across the campus, in the dining hall and in some classes. And next week we're getting together for dinner.

It won't be the same as huddling in the small circle to pray or talk like we did at Fatima...it never could be the same. The time I spent with those people was incredible; something I will keep in my heart forever.

When I introduce my new friends to my buddies who travelled to Michigan for the weekend, I can't help but laugh. Inevitably, the same corny words come out of my mouth: "Oh, you have just got to go on one."

The next Notre Dame Encounter retreat is scheduled to be held from 12:30 Friday afternoon, November 17 until about 5:00 Sunday evening, November 19. The fee is $20.00.

Applications can be picked up at the Campus Ministry Office at 103 Hesburgh Library and must be returned there with a $10.00 deposit before 5:00pm on Friday, October 20. No places will be assigned or guaranteed until after the application deadline.

For more information contact Campus Ministry at 239-7800 or stop by the office (103) in the Library.

"What am I doing here? And how can I get out of it gracefully?" Those were my only thoughts as I walked through the back-door of Badin Hall into the Campus Ministry office on Friday afternoon. I had signed up to go on a Notre Dame Encounter while all of my friends were signing into their hotel rooms in Ann Arbor. The Irish were to be playing Michigan and I was to be praying with 40 people I had not yet met.

As we walked around the lake to what would be our weekend home, we sang what I considered to be a pretty silly song. I thought: "If I can hide behind this bush for a while, no one'll miss me and I can run back to campus when the group passes by." But then a girl introduced herself. She knew my name. I couldn't hide.

We got to the Fatima retreat house and checked in. My assigned roommate must have gotten away with the bush option - she never showed. The weekend began.

In small groups, we began talking about why we were here. The groups leaders were persistent. I wouldn't get away with just saying: "I couldn't afford Ann Arbor." So I told the corny truth: Everyone I ever talked with about NDE told me how wonderful they were and how everyone should make one. You know the standard line: 'Oh, you just had to participate. I wanted to get involved. The atmosphere was contagious, and I wanted to be part of it.

The talks were given by other students who had already made the retreat and were now members of the team - they were REAL. They made me think. They made me wonder.

My father had told me that if the retreat was a good one, it would not give me many answers but it would ask me a lot of questions. It was a good one. I had plenty of questions. So did everyone else, I found, as I kept going back to my small group after each talk and discuss things and ask even more questions.

Too, there was time for me to go off by myself and ask still more questions and try to hear the answers. I sat by the lake and it felt like the campus was millions of miles away, instead of just beyond the trees. I could think of my own life and of my own life with others.

But enough thinking! There was a lot of fun. The evening activities were broken up with fun group activities that gave me a chance to see the various sides of my new friends, and for them to see various sides of me. Without being distracted by externals, it's really possible to get to know others in a short period of time. And to care, and become

Honor Code serves University in name only

By Jason Carroll

During the week of orientation this year, all freshmen were required to watch an "educational" video. This video was full of many caring people who described a pleasant, non-threatening code of honor. Every student was given a fancy pamphlet, printed in blue and gold, so that no true Domer could object. For the very few students who still might not have been utterly enthralled by this new gift to our precious moral education, two endorsements removed any remaining doubts. This presentation of the Honor Code was, at best, incomplete. Some might even say new students were deliberately misled.

Last spring, I was asked to appear in the Honor Code video and give my thoughts on the subject. I was somewhat surprised at this invitation, because I had been an open dissenter. I was told that the video would present both sides of the issue. But sometime between my interview and the final editing, the administration must have vetoed that novel idea of giving equal time to the opposition. My 15-minute interview was sliced to a few seconds of a watered-down objection. The video, containing only one view, could not be called education, but rather, propaganda.

One must ask, "What was the motivation behind the decision to leave out half of the facts?" The most convincing arguments are made stronger by offering an opponent's objections, and then refuting all protests. In this way, questions can be answered, and doubts can be removed.

So why did the administration not present criticisms? Maybe they were intentionally deceptive. They would rather have an ignorant group of followers than an informed group of protestors. Or maybe they realized just how powerful the objections are. They couldn't come up with a solid rebuttal, so they avoided the complaints completely. Possibly, they didn't want to show any evidence of the enormous divide between the administration and the students. But the exact reason for withholding information does not really matter. The point here is that the students are worse off by not knowing both sides, and the administration, not so coincidentally, is better off for not telling both sides.

In spite of the administration's intentions, one scene in the Honor Code video was accidentally informative. This scene is a dramatization of a student who witnesses another student cheating on a test. He is faced with the dilemma of whether or not to report this fellow student. The audience can hear the thoughts of the witness as he deliberates. The witness' thoughts, unedited, would be a successful skit in the Keenan Revue. Everyone watching the video was laughing at this idiot who was going to "help" his fellow student by turning him in. This scene is a clear indication of the administration's unfortunate failure to gauge student opinion. The people who put this scene in the video are living in fantasyland.

In the back of the Code of Honor Handbook, two endorsements are presented. The first of these is written by Professor Gary M. Kern, an assistant professor in the College of Business. He suggested that the teacher should not be required to "use various methods to dissuade students from cheating," because "the teacher's imposition of these tactics may appear to reduce the level of trust assumed to exist between the teacher and the students." His statement obviously implies that reporting a student destroys trust. He apparently believes that the accused could only feel resentment toward his accuser.

His most shocking view is that this undeniable burden should be forced upon the students. He clearly does not want to deal with the problem himself. Evidently, he would much rather have the trust between the students be "reduced." But Professor Kern should at least be credited for his honesty. He does show how the Honor Code can destroy the trust between the students, and therefore weaken the Notre Dame family, while the administration is merely spewing rhetoric about cheaters who will graciously thank the "narc" for their moral conviction.

The second endorsement was a well-written, convincing article, which was in support of some other honor code. Jeremy Lane wrote about honor codes in the professional world, specifically about the Code of Professional Responsibility, which binds him as a lawyer. He wrote that he has reported three people in his career, each incident involving "serious violation." On many other occasions, he has simply "discussed the situation with the (offender)...so that there would be no repetition." He would, therefore, be in direct violation of the Code of Honor here at Notre Dame.

We have the all-encompassing clause called the "non-tolerance policy." If one student suggests the use of a synonym on his friend's paper, and the paper is turned in without a footnote, any witness is obligated to report them both for plagiarism. This is not an exaggeration. The word was clearly not the author's idea, but he claimed it as his own work. Therefore, the author definitely plagiarized. The witness is absolutely obligated to report the offense, either to the instructor for guidance or to a member of the Honesty Committee; silence is not a legal option. The Honor Code does not allow for even the most minor offense to be overlooked. There can be no interpretation. There is only black and white. That is why virtually everyone at this University has broken the Honor Code.

Simply stated, the Honor Code, as it is now, is not a good thing for the students of this University. If both pro and con arguments were presented side by side, a vast majority of the students would come to the same conclusion. In fact, many students disagree with the policies of the Honor Code after having heard only the administration's view.

The reason for implementing the Honor Code, though, is simple. The administration's first priority is not the students, but the University itself. This school will last long past any one students' matriculation, and therefore, the administration's concern must lie with the school, not the students who just happen to be here now. The Honor Code enhances the image of the University, so its effect on the students is almost inconsequential.

As the image of the University changes, the students who will be attracted to the school will also change. As time passes, the student body will evolve from the trusting group it is today, to a group of people who are very willing to stab their friends in the back. I am sure that is exactly what the administration wants. This Honor Code will serve them well.

I would normally expect a response to such harsh accusations, but I am sure that the administration is not listening.

Jason Carroll is a junior in the College of Engineering.

'Phantom of the Opera'

Baritone Steve White portrays the sinister Phantom in the National Touring Production of "The Phantom of the Opera - the Play." The play will be showing at St. Mary's Oct. 18.

Special to The Observer

A national touring production of "Phantom of the Opera—The Play" will be presented Wednesday, Oct. 18 at 7:30 p.m. in O'Laughlin Auditorium at Saint Mary's College. The play is a musical based on the legendary Gaston Leroux novel which is set in the elegant halls and eerie catacombs of the Paris Opera House.

The performance, part of a cross-country tour by Carrico Productions, Inc. of Detroit, features a troupe of some 30 actors, operatic singers, dancers and technicians, who will take the play to 40 cities.

Cast in New York and fully staged by Carrico, the play is billed as a tribute to the original Leroux story about a deformed musical genius and his ill-fated love for the beautiful young soprano, Christine. The tale was immortalized by the 1925 movie version starring Lon Chaney as the ominous phantom.

Leroux based his book on actual events revolving around an apparent magical and diabolical man-creature who haunted the Paris Opera during the late 19th century. The musical play brings the creature back to life by presenting him amidst resplendent stage settings, memorable music and believable characters.

Playwright John Kenley collaborated with six-time Emmy Award-winning writer Robert Thomas Noll to bring to the stage Leroux's sinister, masked Phantom, who reigns terror upon the Paris Opera in quest of the love of Christine. Music by David Gooding and from the classical repertoire has been selected for its style and period authenticity as well as for its promising appeal to theatergoers. The Phantom moves through the elegant upper levels of the opera house and the dank fog beneath. The many stage settings are enhanced with special effects and dramatic lighting as the tragic and frightening story races to its inevitable climax.

Tickets for "Phantom of the Opera" have been on sale since Sept. 25 at the Saint Mary's box office, located in O'Laughlin Auditorium, which is open from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., Monday through Friday. Tickets are also available at Tracks in South Bend, Nightwinds in Niles, SuperSounds Record Connection in Elkhart and World Records in Elkhart. Visa and MasterCard orders are accepted by phone at (219) 284-4626.

Big Audio Dynamite

New album, Megatop Phoenix, disappointment to fans

JOHN LANE
accent writer

Megatop Phoenix is the new album from Big Audio Dynamite. Although it contains a few good songs, overall, Megatop Phoenix is a weak album.

B.A.D. is led by Mick Jones, who played guitar and wrote some of the songs for The Clash, a band that grew out of the post-punk movement in England in the late 70s. When Jones left The Clash in the mid-80s, he decided to form B.A.D. with the intention of combining his rock roots with elements of funk. In a move similar to what Paul Weller did when he left The Jam to form the eclectic Style Council, Jones wanted more diversity in his music. B.A.D. has moved fast, putting out four albums in five years. However, Megatop Phoenix is the band's worst album so far.

The quality of music in Megatop Phoenix drops drastically from previous B.A.D. albums. There is too much computer-generated music and synthesizers and not enough guitars, like in the songs "Rewind" and "James Brown." The result is a sort of neo-disco sound that betrays Jones' harder-edged past.

Another problem with Megatop Phoenix is the use, or overuse, of additional content brought in from outside sources. B.A.D. uses lines from old movies or television in the middle of many of their songs, apparently to complement the lyrics. They did this often on their first two albums and sparingly on their last one. But this tactic is in full force on Megatop Phoenix. For instance, the track "Mick's a Hippie Burning" is simply a compilation of short scenes from various old movies with a little music tossed in. This disrupts the continuity of the album and will most likely annoy the listener.

Megatop Phoenix does contain some good tracks, however. "Contact" is a classic B.A.D. song, featuring an up-tempo beat and strong vocals by Jones. In "London Bridge," Jones sings about his love for London despite its economic decline. Other highlights include "Around the Girl in 80 Ways" and "Union Jack," which features good guitars and drums.

Despite these songs, though, Megatop Phoenix remains a below-par album. Longtime fans might want to purchase this album, but anyone hoping to acquaint themselves with B.A.D. would do well to buy one of their earlier albums, such as This is Big Audio Dynamite or No. 10 Upping Street, rather than Megatop Phoenix.

Late drive keys Bills' upset of Rams

Associated Press

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y.—Frank Reich threw an 8-yard touchdown pass to Andre Reed with 16 seconds left Monday night to cap a wild final three minutes that gave the Buffalo Bills a 23-20 victory over the Los Angeles Rams, knocking off the NFL's last unbeaten team.

Reich, who was making his first NFL start and had thrown just 20 passes in four seasons before Pro Bowler Jim Kelly separated his left shoulder last week, had thrown a 1-yard TD pass to Thurman Thomas to put Buffalo ahead 16-13 with 2:23 left.

But Thomas fumbled as Buffalo was trying to run out the clock and Jim Everett's 78-yard touchdown pass to Willie Anderson on the next play seemed to clinch the victory for the Rams with 1:23 to play.

Reich, however, drove Buffalo 64 yards in seven plays, all in the air, and capped it with the pass to Reed who was hit as he caught the ball at the goal line.

The win put Buffalo at 4-2, one game ahead of Indianapolis and Miami in the AFC East, The Rams (5-1) fell into a tie with San Francisco for first in the NFC West.

The touchdown pass to Thomas came at the end of an 87-yard, 10-play drive that was Buffalo's only sustained offensive movement of the game.

Thomas fumbled on the Rams 22-yard line and Michael Stewart recovered for Los Angeles.

Everett then hit Anderson streaking down the middle behind Mark Kelso, who could only grab at his jersey briefly before he got loose for the winning score.

Reich, who had no completion longer than 13 yards in the first 51 minutes, finished with 21 completions in 37 attempts for 214 yards and Thomas had 24 carries for 105 yards.

Everett, harried for most of the game and sacked twice by Bruce Smith, was 15-for-36 for 219 yards.

The blockbuster ending overshadowed a dull 3 1/2 quarters as Buffalo, with Kelly out, played exceedingly conservative.

The Rams took a 7-0 first-quarter lead on a 2-yard touchdown pass from Everett to Buford McGee following Reggie Sutton's fumble of a punt at the Bills' 16. Ironically, Buffalo picked up Sutton just two weeks ago after the Rams released him.

Scott Norwood's 38- and 47-yard field goals cut it to 7-6 at halftime. Then Mike Lansford hit a 34-yarder to make it 10-6; Norwood's 40-yarder cut it to 10-9; and Lansford hit from 36 to make it 13-9 early in the fourth quarter.

headed into the general direction of the train station. It was as if the entire city had been called into battle.

Curious, I followed at a distance, filing past the station along a tree-lined path to a place I didn't even know existed—El Campo de Mendizor-roza.

From the outside, the open-air stadium resembled a small-town high school football stadium. Most of the fans owned season passes. Our 600 pesetas landed us in the polideportiva general section, where we stood on what looked like the ruins of an ancient Mayan temple.

The male-dominated crowd was comprised of cigar-smoking, pistachio-crunching, wine-swilling soccer enthusiasts whose sense of civic duty seemed to consist entirely of whistling louder than the guy sitting next to them. The children, meanwhile, sat down in front behind a metal fence which they shook vigorously as an American fan might assault the plexiglass surrounding a hockey rink.

For my part, I wasn't even sure who to cheer for at first. Both teams seemed to have an equal number of supporters, so it was difficult to discern a home team.

The first score of the afternoon quickly changed all that. After a tripping penalty was called inside Sodupe's 18-yard line, Alaves was awarded a penalty kick which it converted for a 1-0 lead. The crowd erupted—whistling, blowing horns, waving flags—it was just enough to drown out the moans of the visiting entourage.

As the match wore on, Sodupe was consistently beaten to loose calls and rarely mounted enough offense to even cross the midfield stripe. The final 2-1 score owed more to blown scoring opportunities by Alaves than Sodupe's stingy defensive play.

As we crossed through the parking lot on our way home from the stadium, my companion remarked how the drivers in Spain give the impression they're out to kill somebody.

Not if you're hoisting that blue and white flag.

DiLucia plays Volvos; Irish prepare for USC

Observer Staff Report

Notre Dame tennis coach Bob Bayliss may be without his top player for Friday's match against 11th-ranked USC, but this may be one time that he doesn't mind.

Sophomore David DiLucia received an at-large berth to play in the Volvo Tennis/Collegiate Championships, the top tournament of the fall season. The tourney will begin Thursday in Athens, Ga.

If DiLucia fares well in the opening rounds, he will miss USC's first trip ever to the Midwest.

"Receiving an invitation to the Volvo Championships is an honor that I just couldn't take away from David," Bayliss said. "He's worked hard to earn a spot in the field. There is a possibility that he could play against USC if he loses in the early rounds. But I hope he advances deep in the tournament and gives an excellent showing."

Three other Notre Dame players were eliminated in pre-qualification rounds for the tourney.

Walter Dolhare won two matches over the weekend, but lost 7-5, 3-6, 7-5 in Monday's contest. Freshmen Chuck Coleman and Mark Schmidt won first-round matches, but lost in the second round.

If DiLucia advances past the early rounds, Dolhare will probably play in the top spot Friday evening against Byron Black, who is ranked 13th in the country. Black turned down a spot in the Volvo tourney because of academic commitments.

DiLucia is ranked 26th in the nation.

Florida QBs out because of gambling

Associated Press

GAINESVILLE, Fla.— Florida quarterback Kyle Morris and backup Shane Matthews have been declared ineligible for the rest of the season for betting on football games, the university said Monday.

Meanwhile, university officials denied what it called rumors that head basketball coach Norm Sloan and three assistants had resigned, university spokeswoman Linda Gray said.

Morris, of Clinton, Miss., and Matthews, of Pascagoula, Miss., admitted placing bets on professional and college games between late August and Oct. 7 — a violation of NCAA regulations, Gray said.

The Gator football program was rocked Oct. 8 when Coach Galen Hall resigned amid allegations of NCAA violations.

Gipp's), Kline also made a name for himself as a Notre Dame player. The Williamsport, Pa., posted a career average of around .350 from 1915 to 1917, before leaving to serve in France during World War I.

In a 14-6 win over Michigan in 1917, Kline hit three home runs, which still stands as a school record. During his coaching days, the former third baseman liked to remember how he hit a fourth shot in that game that "went foul by inches."

into the game. Freshman Paul Kaemmerer scored the second goal of the game at the 24:30 mark, and Grace singled him out for praise.

"Paul has really developed in the past couple of weeks," says Grace. "He scored a critical goal early in the game for us, and I think he proved he deserves to be in the ballgame more."

Kaemmerer and his teammates dominated this game, as they lead 8-0 in corner kicks and outshot the Crusaders 21-8. Valparaiso has an extremely young team (they started six freshmen), and their inexperience was obvious on defense, where they gave up two goals on plays where they were attempting to clear their defense out of the zone and pull the Irish offside.

The only bad news for the Irish, except for the two Valparaiso goals which upset Grace, was what appeared to be an ankle injury to junior fullback Paul LaVigne.

The Irish will meet the Blue Demons at 3:30 Wednesday afternoon.

grabbed a 8-2 lead and then slowly tallied points as several new faces entered the lineup.

The Irish were not as impressive in the third game as they had been in the second as they allowed the Quakers to record points in spurts.

But newcomers like freshman Marilyn Cragin, who had been sidelined early in the season with an ankle injury finished off the Quakers at the net.

Turner led the Irish with 10 kills, five digs, three block assists and two service aces and Choquette tallied nine kills, five digs and four block assists to help the winning cause.

Cunningham has been asserting herself at the net as of late too, as she finished the night with six kills and a team-high seven total blocks.

"I'm really not pleased with the way the team played," Irish head coach Art Lambert said of his team's seventh win of the season. "We won but we have to do better. This was not a tough team."

"I'm surprised we didn't jump all over Penn's young and inexperienced team, but fortunately we got on track and gave everyone a good chance to play."

The Notre Dame volleyball team swept Pennsylvania in three games Monday night 16-14, 15-0, 15-8.

Notre Dame sweeps Pennsylvania

By MOLLY MAHONEY
Assistant Sports Editor

It was a battle of the slow starters and the sloppy Monday night, but in the end the slow starters persevered.

Once again the Notre Dame women's volleyball team took the role of the slow starter and the Quakers of Pennsylvania seemed willing to assume the part of the sloppy.

It could be argued that both squads were vying for a chance to be the most slovenly in game one.

But despite edging the Quakers 16-14, the Irish came to life in the second, blanking the visitors 15-0 and tallying a 15-8 win in game three.

The Irish seemed bent upon proving the law of entropy in game one, as they succumbed to the Quakers inconsistent, if not unpredictable play and joined them in a free-fall towards disorder.

Pennsylvania took a 5-0 lead early in the game one but the Irish crept back and finally caught the Quakers at 8-8.

But that was not to be the only stalemate of the game.

The two teams tied it up at 11, 13 and 14 before the Irish, who had been picking away at the Quaker defense with a well-rounded, but not always overwhelming attack, finally put the game away after freshman outside hitter Alicia Turner gave Notre Dame a 15-14 advantage with a service ace.

"In game one they just had us running in circles," senior captain Kathy Cunningham said. "Usually we play team's with very structured play—they dig, they set and then they attack. But they just wanted to get the ball over the net, so you never knew what was coming over next."

"All of a sudden we just figured out what we had to do to win and we did it."

One would think that Sybil had taken the court in game two as the Irish exhibited an entirely different personality.

Unlike the apathetic Irish of game one, a possessed team came out and razed the unexpected Quakers 15-0.

Sophomore middle hitter Chris Choquette, who has been playing with a broken finger and Turner made up the first wave of the Irish attack and freshman Jessica Fiebelkorn, junior Colleen Wagner and Cunningham provided the surge needed to polish off a stymied Quaker squad.

"We knew we shouldn't have let them get 14 points on the board in the first game," junior Amy White said. "We came out and served more aggressively and played with more intensity in game two and just played them off the court."

"We felt more in control once we put the first game behind us and we didn't want to concede anything to them in the final two games."

Irish men's soccer annihilates Valpo's Crusaders 9-2

By KEN TYSIAC
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame men's soccer team busted out of the grips of a six-game winless streak last night at Krause Stadium, pummeling an inexperienced Valparaiso team by a score of 9-2.

Freshman forward Kevin Pendergast led the Irish scoring explosion with three goals. Sophomore Kenyon Meyer chipped in two goals and one assist for the Irish, and Tom Connaghan, Mitch Kern, Paul Kaemmerer, and Peter Sanchez rounded out the Notre Dame scoresheet with one goal apiece.

Pendergast's hat trick was the first by a Notre Dame player since Randy Morris tallied three goals in a 5-1 victory over Boston University on October 30, 1988. He now leads the Irish with nine goals and 21 points on the season, and is the first freshman to lead the Irish in scoring since Joe Sternberg finished with 25 points to lead the 1985 squad.

"He's a good goal scorer," says Irish coach Dennis Grace, "But he's also learning to play defense from the forward position. We're just happy he decided to come play here at Notre Dame."

Despite the decisive victory, Grace was not completely pleased with his team's effort. The Irish gave up goals late in each half, one on a penalty kick by Valpo's Scott Fraungruber, and the other on a point blank smash by Paul Kinser.

"I was pleased because we were able to play a lot of bodies," says Grace, "I was not happy about the penalty kick or the late goal they got from scrimmage, but it was good to get the win and go back above the .500 mark."

The Irish improved to 6-5-3 on the season with the victory, and managed to work quite a few of their younger players

ND mourns the loss of an old friend

Clarence J. "Jake" Kline, the Notre Dame baseball coach for 42 seasons whose remarkable coaching longevity earned him a place in the College Baseball Hall of Fame, died Sunday at the age of 94.

Kline, who had suffered a stroke on Oct. 5, passed away at St. Joseph's Medical Center in South Bend.

Kline compiled a 558-449-5 career record at Notre Dame and in 1972 became only the sixth coach in history to win 500 games. Four of the five previous coaches to reach that plateau had been from Arizona and California, where the teams played schedules twice as long as Notre Dame's annual 20 to 30-game slates.

Notre Dame's campus baseball field was named in Kline's honor on "Jake Kline Day" in 1976, the year after Kline had retired as coach at the age of 81.

Jake Kline
1895-1989

Kline started his Notre Dame professional career as a math professor, then became a freshman football coach in 1931. He took over as baseball coach in 1934, but continued his duties in the math department until 1970, when he decided to concentrate solely on baseball at the age of 75.

"I got goosebumps meeting him," current Irish coach Pat Murphy had said earlier this year about his introduction to Kline. "He's a true legend in Notre Dame baseball. I hope I can touch half as many people as Jake has."

Kline led Notre Dame to nine NCAA tournament appearances, including five consecutive trips from 1956 to 1960. Kline's 1957 team earned the only College World Series berth in the Notre Dame baseball program's history, and finished fourth in the nation.

Kline taught University President Edward Malloy in mathematics and his former baseball players included Hall of Fame inductee Carl Yastrzemski, Notre Dame Athletic Director Richard Rosenthal, South Bend Mayor Joe Kernan, Montreal Expos President John McHale and Super Bowl quarterback and former Irish third baseman Joe Theisman.

Soccer mania thrives throughout Europe

VITORIA, Spain—To the European sports fan, soccer is more than a national pastime—it is a call to arms.

That's why thousands of spectators brandishing flags and banners march miles to cheer on their respective teams. That's primarily why Barcelona earned the right to host the 1992 Olympics. And that's why I, during a brief respite from the semester in London, recently shelled out 600 pesetas to watch a Division III match between the Sodupe Union Club and Deportivo Alaves, in Vitoria, Spain.

Frank Pastor

Foreign Correspondent

Vitoria, the capital of Alava in the Basque country of Northern Spain, is home to some 180,000 people and is one of the few Spanish cities which has circumvented the threat of commercialism. Like any Spanish city, Vitoria closes down from one to four in the afternoon for the daily siesta. But after four, the shops reopen, bars begin to swell with people and the streets bustle with activity.

It was then that I noticed a caravan of people, bubbling with enthusiasm and waving flags adorned with blue and white stripes,
