W. Germany offers E. Germany financial aid

BERLIN (AP) — West Germany said Tuesday it was willing to give East Germany massive financial aid in the style of the postwar U.S. Marshall Plan, but demanded political and economic reforms the Communists have so far rejected.

East Germany's new premier said the Berlin Wall must remain, to keep AIDS, crime and other Western problems out of his country. He promised a coalition government but did not say whether the opposition could join it.

After a week of dramatic developments in East European countries, President Mikhail Gorbachev of the Soviet Union said in Moscow:

"They have a common direction, which fosters the building of a European home, for it makes the countries closer, more open and creates new opportunities for human contact and an equal exchange."

The Liberal Democrats, an East German party that is allied with the Communists but shows signs of independence, said pro-democracy groups should be invited in "round-table" talks about East Germany's future.

Discussions this spring between Polish authorities and Solidarity, which were given that name, led to a non-Communist government in Poland.

Mayor Walter Momper of West Berlin said the sudden opening of East Germany's borders was creating traffic jams, currency problems and other economic difficulties the two governments must resolve.

Economics Minister Helmut Haussmann of West Germany announced a six-point aid plan including investments, joint ventures and modernizing East Germany's dilapidated communications and transport systems.

Haussmann did not name a figure for the aid and said East Germany must achieve "thorough change" in its centrally directed economy.

Reforms promised so far by Communist Party leader Egon Krenz, who took over last month from hard-liner Erich Honecker, have resulted in more questions than answers, Haussmann said in Bonn.

He compared his proposal to the Marshall Plan devised by Secretary of State George Marshall, which provided more than $12 billion in American aid in 1948-51 to help Europe recover from the war.

East German authorities have rejected the idea of adopting a complete free-market system and new Premier Hans Modrow, a leading reformer, says he wants "step by step" economic changes.

Modrow appears to want a streamlining of the bureaucracy, but has given no indication he will urge sweeping changes such as those in Hungary and Poland.

He was quoted Tuesday in the West Germany newspaper Bild as saying the Berlin Wall can remain open to travel, but will not come down.

"In our country there is little criminal activity ... cases of AIDS and drugs are virtually unknown," he was quoted as saying. "Our people are asking themselves why they shouldn't just leave that as it is."

ADN, the official news agency, said the government might open a part of the wall near the Brandenburg Gate as yet another passage between East and West Berlin. The high-columned monument is near the wall in East Berlin and is

Smith named SMC Student Affairs dean

By JULIE RYAN
News Writer

Mary Ellen Smith, director of Student Activities at Saint Mary's College, has been named acting dean of Student Affairs for the remainder of the 1989-90 academic year.

Smith, who came to Saint Mary's in 1986, will replace Sr. Karol Jackowski. She will be responsible for a variety of duties within the student life area, including the administration of the departments of Counseling and Career Development, Health Services, Residence Life and Housing, Student Activities, Campus Ministry, and Athletics and Recreation.

Handling the two positions is challenging, said Smith. "Student activities is part of student affairs, so I'm familiar with both of these areas," Smith said.

In the interim, Smith intends to maintain authority in the two fields. "I'm keeping Student Activities rolling in the dean's office, while maintaining Student Affairs," she said.

Mimi Tuohy, a 1989 graduate of Saint Mary's is assisting Smith till the end of the 1989-90 year.

Three main goals need to be fulfilled by Smith from now till the end of the year:

•The Wellness Program, the first of these goals, is a program Saint Mary's will use to improve personal health. It will cover the mental, emotional, spiritual, and physical aspects of the body.

A grant given to Saint Mary's from the government will allow the college to establish Regina Hall's basement as the center for the Wellness Program. There will be a library, computer room, conference room, and aerobics room, as well as a

ND seeks women for new faculty

By KELLEY TUTHILL
Assistant News Editor

Encouraging departments to seek out women when hiring new faculty is part of the mission of Affirmative Action at Notre Dame.

The Academic Affirmative Action Committee is responsible for the "internally driven" program at Notre Dame, said Thomas Swartz, professor of economics, collegiate fellow and chairperson of the Committee.

In the past Affirmative Action meant federal quotas, he said. Now, Affirmative Action is part of the "mission of the University."

The Committee was reorganized this year in light of the changing nature of Affirmative Action at the University, said Swartz. He said that there is a parallel organization for staff on this campus.

"We wanted to establish the credibility of the Committee," he said. "We are no longer a committee that generates reports for the outside."

In light of the importance that the Administration placed on Affirmative Action, the Committee size was doubled, Swartz said.

Presently there are two representatives from each college and three from the College of Arts and Letters on the Committee.

The focus of the program is the teaching and research faculty, said Swartz. "When reporting our success or lack (thereof) in terms of faculty it is understood that we mean tenure-track faculty," he said.

He said that the Committee does examine the hiring of other faculty, the main concern is for the teaching faculty.

The Committee is looking at ways to increase awareness among the departments as to the University commitment to Affirmative Action and try to elicit their support, Swartz said.

The Committee hopes to examine the availability of women by discipline to see how Notre Dame's hiring efforts compare to total available women, he said.

The Committee members are appointed by the Provost in concurrence with the University President, said Swartz. "It's a wonderful committee, just dynamite."

"The real problem is raising awareness," he said. "Folks are not ill-willed, but there is a lot of pressure from all areas."

Each department has a Committee on Appointments and Promotions (CAP), said Swartz. He said that Affirmative Action tries to ensure that CAPs consider the University's commitment to Affirmative Action when hiring.

Swartz said that many

ND computing systems are under major improvements

By SARAH VOIGT

Donald Spicer, appointed a year and a half ago to lead the campaign to upgrade computers at Notre Dame, is currently coordinating some drastic improvements of the computing network on campus.

These changes are part of an extensive $27.2 million dollar plan to upgrade academic and administrative computing. University President Father Edward Malloy announced this ambitious five-year plan last October.

Spicer explained that since computing was not a top priority to the University before his arrival, technology had fallen far behind. "We were not even on the map. The mainframe computer on campus was not even in the used computer books," said Spicer.

In addition to outdated technology and limited capabilities, the computing situation on campus before the campaign lacked coordination and communication between departments.

Spicer said, "The different departments would work to improve their computers on their own. Those without grants or influence were consequently left out."

Spicer perceived his appointment as "an opportunity to jump-start the computing program. I saw this as a chance to get in on the ground floor. Notre Dame had reached a plateau and the plan needed vitality. It can be very exciting."

The University is not trying to invent new computing technology, said Spicer. Instead it hopes to put the current innovations to use as quickly as they become available.

College paper ad censoring is disturbing

Did the Constitution expire when it reached 200 years of age? Last week, the National Organization of Women (NOW) approached several college newspapers with an advertisement for a pro-abortion rally in Washington, D.C.

Chris Donnelly
Editor-in-Chief

The student papers at Georgetown and Marquette chose to run the ad, and were censored by their administrations for it.

Georgetown's dean of students told the paper that it could not be printed if it contained the ad. The paper responded by not publishing last week.

After much negative publicity and numerous meetings with Georgetown's administration, the paper will resume regular publication next week. Georgetown's Media Board, Committee on Free Speech and Expression and several campus editors will establish publications guidelines for the future.

At Marquette, however, the news is not so good. Its student newspaper published the controversial ad last week. The paper's editor-in-chief and advertising manager have since been suspended until semester's end, and the director of student media has been fired.

One wonders why these Catholic universities reacted so strongly to an ad. It was an advertisement, not an editorial, and the event was covered extensively by the media.

These schools, like Notre Dame, believe outwardly, at least, in respecting the freedom of the press. Their media guidelines, however, have a catch-all clause that says they will respect the freedom of the press, if the publication is consistent with the highest standards of journalism and the mission of the university.

These institutions fail to realize that by forbidding students to disagree with the institution's mission or beliefs they are censoring the publication.

Would Georgetown or Marquette forbid its newspapers from covering the rally or from publishing pro-abortion opinion columns? I certainly hope not, but with this precedent and the current guidelines it is possible.

It is understandable that a school would want its publications to act professionally, but why is it necessary that they conform to Catholic beliefs?

Because a campus newspaper prints something does not mean that the institution believes in it. In fact, these publications state that their views do not necessarily reflect those of the administration.

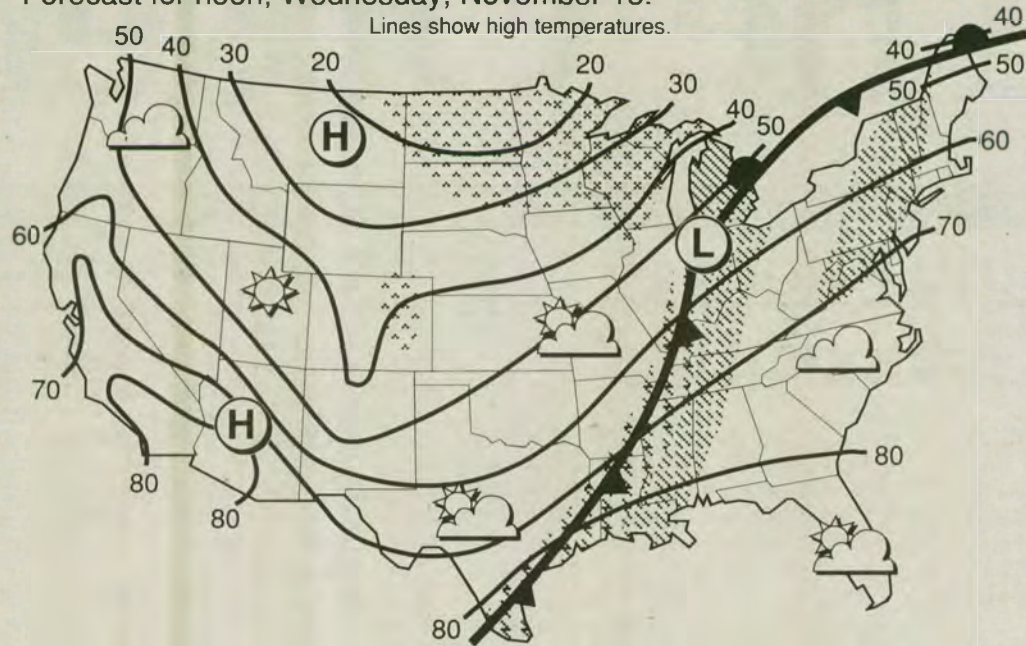

Universities are places where ideas should be freely expressed and exchanged. Forbidding papers from reporting or advertising on views contrary to those of the institution defeats the purpose of education.

The Observer was not approached by NOW with the ad but we would have run it if we were.

President Bush declared his confidence Tuesday that "Europe will some day be whole and free," saluting a decision by Czechoslovakia to ease travel restrictions as just one more sign. Bush said he was not concerned about the dizzying pace of change sweeping Eastern Europe. The Namibian black nationalist movement in that fought South African rule for 23 years won a solid majority Tuesday in national elections but will have to bargain with rival parties in drafting a new constitution. The leftist South-West Africa People's Organization won 384,567 votes, or 57 percent of 670,830 ballots cast, according to results announced Tuesday. SWAPO's leaders had predicted their movement would easily win the two-thirds majority that would have enabled it to single-handedly write the constitution.

Retail sales fell a full 1 percent in October, driven down by a slumping auto market, and industrial production dropped 0.7 percent in its steepest fall in more than three years, the government said Tuesday. But some analysts said the reports were not as pessimistic as they would appear. They noted that except for autos, most other sales categories rose and that the drop in industrial output was due largely to an aircraft strike and factory disruptions after the California earthquake.

Bush criticizes El Salvador rebels for recent 'senseless bloodshed'

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush on Thursday criticized the leftist rebels of El Salvador for "senseless bloodshed" in the all-out offensive that has crippled the capital of the Central American nation.

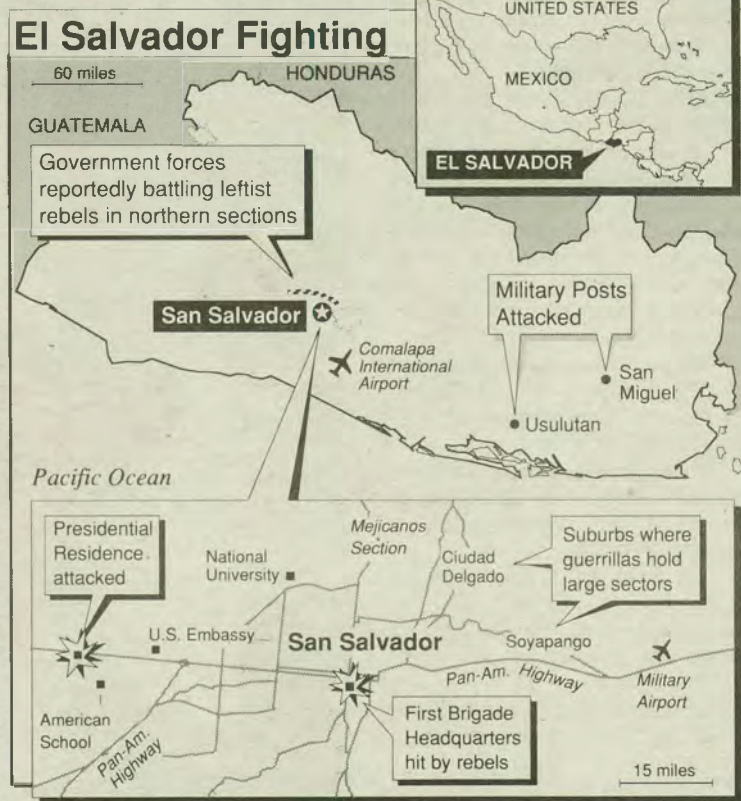

He also renewed a charge that the leftist Sandinista government of Nicaragua is continuing to arm the Salvadoran guerrillas, the Faribundo Marti National Liberation Front.

In remarks to ministers of the Organization of American States meeting here, Bush said he wanted to relay "how upset I am that at a time when we're all trying to build peace in Central America through diplomatic means, the FMLN in El Salvador, aided and abetted by Nicaragua and the Cuban government, has resorted to senseless bloodshed and gross violations of all the agreements reached to promote peace in Central America."

Bush made a pitch for the democracies that are members of the OAS to pressure Nicaragua to stop aiding the FMLN.

"As democrats, we ought to be supporting the concept of stopping these weapons going in there," he said.

The rebels mounted their largest offensive of El Salvador's 10-year civil war Saturday night, with the death count so far at 466 people as residents were trapped by combat and government aircraft that struck at rebel positions.

Despite government denials, rebels clearly held parts of northern and eastern neighborhoods in San Salvador, and a rebel communiqué said guerrillas had liberated parts of eight of the country's 14 provinces.

"I am delighted with the new moves toward democracy in Eastern Europe," Bush said. "Despite the excitement, we're not going to neglect this hemisphere. We're building the world's first democratic hemisphere."

U.S. House votes on new versions of abortion bills

WASHINGTON (AP) — A House committee on Tuesday endorsed new versions of two vetoed spending bills that comply with President Bush's demand that they maintain a ban on most federally funded abortions, including cases of rape or incest.

House Speaker Thomas Foley said it was time for abortion-rights activists to "face the fact" that Bush would prevail this year in the dispute. But House Democrats who support abortion rights said they may continue their fight.

A group of four pro-choice Republican House women, meanwhile, met with the president to express their concern over his position on the federal abortion issue.

And on still another abortion fight, the House backed away from risking a third Bush veto on a foreign aid bill that includes $15 million for the U.N. Population Fund. The bill would reverse a five-year ban on U.S. aid to that agency, which promotes Third World family planning and birth control.

Bush has threatened to veto the bill because of a provision fought by abortion opponents. They charged that because the agency operates in China, which has a one-child-per-family policy, the money would indirectly support forced abortions there — despite a stipulation in the bill that the U.S. money not be used in China.

The House voted against a move by anti-abortion forces to take out the population fund money, but then voted 219-203 to accept an amendment that allows Bush to block the money if he concludes it would be used for coerced abortions.

The House Appropriations Committee voted unanimously and without debate to send to the floor a revised version of the $157 billion bill for fiscal 1990 appropriations for labor, education and health programs. Bush vetoed the bill last month because of a provision that would permit greater use of federal money for abortions for poor women, allowing them for victims of rape or incest.

The panel also approved a revised bill appropriating $558 million for the District of Columbia government. Bush vetoed that measure last month, objecting to provisions that would have allowed the D.C. government to use its own money to finance abortions for poor women.

The House approved the spending bill last month after voting for the first time in a decade to broaden the prohibitions on abortion financing. But the House failed by 51 votes to override Bush's veto.

"Without the votes to overturn that veto, we have to face the fact that there's going to be a denial of funds," Foley told reporters Tuesday, adding that pro-choice forces could try again next year.

"The president has to take responsibility for that decision," he said.

Rep. Les AuCoin, D-Ore., a leader of the House abortion-rights forces and a member of the appropriations committee, said it would have been futile for his side to try to amend the bill in the committee.

He said abortion opponents may easily thwart floor amendments using parliamentary means as well. But he said abortion-rights forces in the Senate, who have a larger majority in that chamber, could force the debate to continue by voting again to permit financing in cases of rape or incest — an outcome that could for a second time send the bill to a House-Senate conference committee to work out differences.

"That's where the end game is going to be fought — in the conference," AuCoin said.

The abortion dispute is caught up in Congress' hurry to adjourn for the year, as well as concerns by some Republicans that anti-abortion positions hurt their candidates in last week's elections and could hurt them further in 1990.

"The temperature is going to build, and we'll see how everyone feels when the temperature rises even further," AuCoin said.

"I just have a feeling in my bones that a lot of people who have been opposed to our pro-choice position are very eager to find a way to now support the victims of rape and incest, and we intend before it's all over to give them a chance," he said.

3 smart ways to help pay for college

Here's how the Army Reserve can help you pay for college.

If qualified, the Montgomery GI Bill can provide you with up to $5,040 for current college expenses.

If you obtain a qualifying student loan, you can get it paid off at the rate of 15% per year, or $500, whichever is greater: up to a maximum of $10,000 for many specialties. Selecting certain specialty training can result in a $20,000 maximum.

And here's how you can make even more part-time money while in college. Take Basic Training one summer. The next summer, complete skill training at an Army School. You'll earn over $1,250 for Basic and even more for skill training. Then you'll train with your Army Reserve unit near college, usually one weekend a month plus two weeks a year. You'll earn over $85 a weekend to start.

Notre Dame students come from "narrow backgrounds" and need a faculty that can offer them a broader array of experiences.

In the 1990's there will be a shortage of teachers; the demand for college professors will exceed the supply, he said. "It mandates that we do our best today as the competition for women will become tougher."

If students are unhappy about the number of female faculty members in their department, Swartz said that they should speak to the Chair. "Students do have a say."

In regards to the Faculty Senate Committee on the Status of Women report Swartz said, "It was one of the best I've heard at the University." He said that it was well prepared and presented.

In addition to Affirmative Action and the quality of life for women, the Committee on the Status of Women report mentioned the Gender Studies Program as an area of concern.

Specifically, the report mentions University support for the Gender Studies Program; fostering research on women; incorporating Gender Studies approaches into the curriculum; and ongoing development of library resources in Gender Studies.

Kathleen Biddick, associate professor of history and co-chair of the Committee on the Status of Women, said "We need a stronger funded Gender Studies program."

The Gender Studies Program was conceived five years ago by Joan Aldous, William R. Kenan, Jr., professor of sociology, Sonia Gernes, associate professor of English, and Sister Regina Coll, professional specialist and director of field education in theology, said Charlene Avallone, assistant professor of English.

This is the program's third semester, said Avallone. The first offerings were in the fall of 1988.

All of the program's funding is from a non-University grant, she said. Kate Halischak serves as the program's executive officer.

When centers start up they must be self-supportive, according to Provost Timothy O'Meara. Once a center is better integrated it can be eligible for the budget process, he said.

Part of the program is a one credit, three semester colloquium designed around the idea of an informal faculty/student exchange, Avallone said.

She said that faculty members are not paid for their role in the colloquium. This can be problematic for some faculty members, said Avallone.

Both males and females participate in the Gender Studies classes, according to Avallone. "The faculty is excited about teaching."

The first graduating class who had a concentration in the Gender Studies program did very well in regards to admission to graduate programs, she said.

The nature of the material demands that the program be interdisciplinary, said Avallone. "(One can use) gender-analysis to discuss any material."

She said that the program needs more senior faculty members involved in teaching the courses. "The program tends to be staffed by junior faculty."

With financial support, interested faculty could be "retrained" in Gender Studies, according to Avallone. There's a problem when a senior faculty member has a desire to teach a Gender Studies course, but there's no funding to further their education.

As for possible agenda items, Avallone said the Gender Studies program could re-examine the curriculum to see how women are represented in the classes. The program could advise the committees that are responsible for courses on how to make classes more gender inclusive.

The program could also support workshops for the faculty to inform them of new gender issues, said Avallone.

In addition, "We could also monitor University conferences to see if they include scholarship by women," she said.

She said that there is no funding for Gender Studies guest speakers. Funds for lectures are granted by the AT&T corporation.

For students the program could "make sure that both undergraduate and graduate scholarships are getting in the hands of women," said Avallone.

Margaret Porter, associate librarian, has been working on library resources in Gender Studies, Avallone said.

Avallone said there are some sexist attitudes at Notre Dame that devalue the Gender Studies Program. In some cases at the University "there is a lack of responsiveness to women's concerns," she said.

"We could certainly use more funding and support (for the program)," said Avallone.

among the city's best-known symbols.

Before East Germany opened its borders Thursday, the gate had been a major rallying point for demonstrators seeking freedom to travel to the West. Hundreds of West Berliners gathered there Tuesday in hopes a hole would be opened.

A leader of New Forum, East Germany's main opposition group, said it could work with a revamped Communist Party but naming Modrow premier was not enough.

"There are still too many people in top positions with whom dialogue is not possible," Juergen Tallig, spokesman for the group in Leipzig, said in a West German radio interview.

More change could occur at a special party congress in East Berlin on Dec. 15-17. The congress, which can change the entire leadership, set policy and alter party statutes, was called late Monday by the party Central Committee.

Pro-democracy advocates have held huge demonstrations demanding an end for the 40-year Communist monopoly on power. Although Modrow did not indicate whether the opposition would be allowed in his coalition, he pledged to seek more cooperation with the four small parties allied with the Communists.

Guenter Schabowski, one of the most prominent Politburo members and a leading reformer, resigned as party chief for East Berlin, ADN said, and was replaced by Hans Albrecht.

Schabowski had indicated earlier he might surrender the post because of a heavy workload. He still is the party propaganda chief and political analysts believe he may get an important job in Modrow's cabinet.

Guenter Maleuda, the new, non-Communist speaker of Parliament, said he would seek to alter the first article of the constitution, which defines the Communist Party's leading role in society. The party has used the provision to defend its power monopoly.

paign to upgrade computing on campus is that the communication of information through modern computers is an essential part of education today.

Spicer elaborated, "We are trying to get a good, solid, well-supported computing environment where those who need to communicate have the modern tools to do it. That is what modern education is all about."

According to Spicer, this plan is probably the most expensive single endeavor that the University has undertaken with its own funds. Private donors do not usually find it attractive to give funds for new computer systems, Spicer said.

"Notre Dame 'bit the bullet' and said that if it was going to be a national teaching and research university it would need the tools— and that means computers," Spicer stated.

Many peer institutions have been integrating computers into their curriculums for years. Spicer was previously the Special Assistant to the Dean of Computing at Dartmouth College.

Spicer said that Dartmouth has been significantly using computers in support of undergraduate education for twenty five years. He also mentioned Carnegie-Mellon University as a school that was on the forefront of modern computing technology.

"At Dartmouth the direction was clear. The entire campus had already been networked so that all students and faculty could be hooked into the mainframe," said Spicer.

Spicer compared his job to "a balancing act." He explained, "I have to balance available resources."

SUB sponsors forum on gender problems

By PATRICK HEALY
News Writer

"Family Issues Week" continued last night with an Student Union Board-sponsored forum on "Gender Problems and Stereotypes on Notre Dame and Saint Mary's Campuses."

The forum, consisting of a six-member panel, SUB host Tony Lang, and a small but participatory audience, stressed that these problems will lessen only when women are given more respect by men and by themselves, people stop using discriminatory or sexist language and people rethink their attitudes towards people unlike themselves.

The forum discussed such problems as stereotypes of men, women and minorities, security on campus, sexist language, and discrimination. A topic debated early on in the lecture was whether or not such forums are productive.

The group said that public discussions "help", but aren't having much impact. The lack of attendance reinforced this point, and was noted a number of times.

A key point of the forum was that Notre Dame does not have gender problems and stereotypes because it is a microcosm of society, but rather, as forum host Tony Lang noted, that attitudes prevalent at Notre Dame were "exacerbating" these problems.

Discussing stereotypes, the panel lamented over men being portrayed as the dominant sex while women were seen as passive and weak.

Janet Kourany, associate professor of Philosophy and the Gender Studies Program, noted that stereotypes are acting negatively both ways on campus. She said that while a woman walking alone on campus feels threatened by a man approaching, the man feels resentful of her fear.

Director of Security Rex Rakow reinforced that by stating that there was an unfortunate stereotype against men, that they are looked at more suspiciously by security than would be a woman.

When asked why there seemed to be more crimes on campus recently, Rakow said this was due to all crimes, regardless of seriousness, being reported to the public this year. He noted that this has resulted in more crimes being solved.

Rakow also noted that crimes are often overblown because such descriptions as "sex offenses" covers numerous acts, such as phone calls and sexual harassment. Rakow also called the rumor mill at Notre Dame and Saint Mary's "unbelievable" and also potentially as damaging as an actual incident.

Sexist language was also addressed, with Kourany stating that a person's language reflected their thinking and will be reflected in their actions. She complained of exclusive language such as "mankind", "a man's size job", and the overall reference of humans in history as "man."

Suzanne Marilley, assistant professor of government, noted that Notre Dame and Saint Mary's students are often referred to as "boys and girls" and "kids" by administration and faculty.

A topic she initiated was why women here were often referred to as girls, while men were called men.

Rita Donley, staff psychologist for the University Counseling Center, concurred by saying students were often surprised when she addressed female students as women. Nora Melchert, a member of the Junior Board at Saint Mary's, noted that this was due to the common reference of males and females at Notre Dame as "girls and guys".

A number of people at the forum could cite some form of discrimination in the classroom, some blunt and others more subtle. It was noted that reverse discrimination may occur in the class if there is an imbalance in ratio and the instructor gives too much attention to the minority.

The forum concluded on the topic of awareness of these problems. The group agreed that there was heightened awareness, except on the part of groups not usually discriminated against, notably heterosexual white males.

Family religious education discussed by Groeschel

By JOE MOODY
News Staff

Various aspects of spirituality in the family and in each individual throughout various stages of life was one of the topics discussed last night in a lecture by Father Benedict Groeschel.

"The Role of the Family in Religious Education: The First and Last Stand" was the title of the lecture. It was the first in a series from the Graduate Student Union Intellectual Life Committee on the subject of the family. The lecture was brought about by the chairman of the committee, Tom D'Andrea.

Groeschel discussed, among other things, the subject of religious education in the family. He said, "Religious education is supposed to make you think about death, about the end of life, about where you are going."

He mentioned how every child needed to know three essential things: Why am I here? Where am I going? And how do I get there? He pointed out how a good family must teach the faith through consistent example and by living it themselves.

He explained how we can only teach about God in shadows, since we cannot yet see Him in his fullness. Children of 11 years old and younger should be taught through stories and concrete facts because they cannot yet comprehend the abstract, he said.

Groeschel did deal extensively with the title of the lecture, as well as speaking in great detail about his dramatic and revealing experiences while working with Mother Theresa, being Chaplain of a reform school in New York for 14 years, and his work in the Good Counsel homeless shelters that he founded in the New York metropolitan area.

He received his doctorate in psychology from Columbia University in 1971 and is currently Professor of Pastoral Psychology at Iona College in New Rochelle, New York.

Cholesterol 'myths' may be true

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The nation's top public and private heart organizations released "overwhelming evidence" on cholesterol Tuesday that they said "more than justifies" the campaign to change the way Americans eat.

The American Heart Association and the National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute prepared "The Cholesterol Facts" in reaction to an article in September's Atlantic Monthly called "The Cholesterol Myth."

The article's author, Washington writer Thomas Moore, analyzed a variety of research to make his point that the cholesterol scare has been overblown.

The organizations marshaled the same studies and many more to reach the opposite conclusion: Americans should cut down on saturated fat and cholesterol in their diet to minimize their risk of heart disease.

"If you give the message that cholesterol is a myth, it is wrong. It is important that we detect and treat it," said Dr. John LaRosa of George Washington University.

LaRosa, who called Moore's work "sensational" and "not responsible," was one of six prominent heart experts who gathered at the annual meeting of the American Heart Association to present the case against cholesterol.

Moore could not be reached to respond. There was no answer at his Washington office, the only location his publisher said he could be reached at.

The doctors said Moore misinterpreted some studies and ignored many others, such as animal research and findings that countries with low-fat diets have much lower heart attack rates.

In their report, the doctors said they "intend to remove any doubts about the direct relation between cholesterol and heart disease" and to "dispel the cholesterol myths."

They cited a variety of evidence to back their contention that people live longer if they cut their cholesterol. Among these was a Norwegian study showing that people who reduced cholesterol by diet alone had 40 percent fewer deaths over an eight-year period.

"There is overwhelming data that in addition to lessening your heart attack risk in your 40s, 50s and 60s, you will live a little longer by following a better diet," said another panel member, Dr. William Castelli of the Framingham Heart Study in suburban Boston.

Some strong new evidence in favor of lowering cholesterol also was presented during the meeting Tuesday. Doctors outlined results of three studies showing that reducing cholesterol, either through medicine or diet, can actually shrink the buildups in blood vessels that underlies most heart disease.

The studies, all conducted on people with advanced heart disease, included:

—Dr. Greg Brown of the University of Washington put people on two combinations of cholesterol-lowering drugs. Over five years, the fatty buildups shrank in 35 percent and got bigger in 23 percent.

Let market amend itself to female workforce

When trying to reach an important goal, one often neglects the best possible means in exchange for the quickest results. Such is the case with many of the goals of the feminist movement under the direction of Eleanor Smeal. Smeal favors bringing women to the forefront of politics by "flooding tickets" for elections and only voting for candidates that support and work for feminist principles. Smeal, through her support of the Equal Rights Amendment, also believes in bolstering women's pay in support of equal pay for equal work even at the expense of hindering our market economy.

Although I strongly agree with the end result that Smeal is seeking - equal opportunity for women in all aspects of life - I disagree with her approach. Radical techniques, such as flooding tickets, voting based on one issue, and setting pay guidelines on jobs, are not done in the best interest of all involved and are many times detrimental to our nation as a whole.

The principle behind voting for positions in our government is to select the best person for the job based on the variety of skills and viewpoints that the candidate possesses. The candidates' positions on feminism should rank as a high concern when voting. But should it be the only concern? Smeal's stance requires voting for pro-feminist candidates regardless of their views on other issues, such as the economy or international relations. The feminist candidate may improve conditions for women while worsening the positions of other issues.

Raja Singh

Ideas and Issues

Similar reasoning can be applied to the strategy of flooding election tickets with women candidates. It is true that the best man for the job may be a woman, but it is not simply because she's a woman. Equal opportunities in education have yielded a more intelligent and motivated woman work force that has all the abilities to perform equally as well as men.

For that reason, competition between candidates should be based on skills and issues rather than the candidate's sex.

The mere attribute of being a woman does not qualify one to be a good government officer, just as being a man does not either. Past experience, accomplishments and views on important issues, feminism being one of them, should transcend such criteria as sex in choosing government officials.

Equal pay for equal work has been a cornerstone of feminism since its beginnings, and, in theory, it is correct. The concept is that jobs that require equal skill and are of comparable worth, whether or not the jobs are the same, should receive the same wage. However, in a market economy such as ours, wages are determined by the supply and demand for the job rather than just the skills required to perform the job. The key reason for lower wages in positions that are normally held by women is the oversupply of qualified applicants for a fixed number of positions.

When women first began to enter the job market in large numbers during the 60's and 70's, the majority went into traditional women jobs, such as nursing, teaching and secretarial work. This influx flooded the job market and lowered wages in these positions. Other jobs that are normally held by men did not experience this oversupply and therefore retained their wage level even though they are of comparable skill level to the traditional women's jobs.

By imposing wage guidelines on these positions based on equal skills and comparable worth, a disequilibrium would be created in the economy and demand for these positions would be even higher. The correct action is to let the job market adjust to the higher level of women in the work force. The initial effect, lower wages in traditional women's jobs, will prompt women to investigate new positions demanding new employees rather than to continue to chase the limited opportunities that have traditionally been available.

In order to disagree with Smeal's approach to feminism, I feel that I must also outline an alternative. Approaches like flooding tickets and promoting feminist candidates for office are designed to make women influential, important, and most of all, respected. The way to achieve these goals is not by forcing acceptance but by opening opportunities. Results of opportunities in higher education have been tremendous; having women as a part of the learning community has given both genders an educated insight and respect for each other.

Also as a result of education, women are entering fields of science, engineering and business, fields that offer wages higher than traditional women's jobs, at an increasing rate. Education is something that requires time. For this reason, it is not hard to believe that the economy is still adjusting to the oversupply in the 60's and 70's.

The quick result tactics that Smeal advocates are not the answer to feminism's goals; they will produce only quick fixes at the expense of other important issues. These goals must be reached through the slow but effective process of education. This, however, is something that you should decide for yourself by investigating both sides of the case. Smeal will be presenting her views tonight at 8:00 p.m.

Dance theme tempts students to degrade Christianity

Dear Editor:

I am responding in disgust and revulsion to some advertising I have been seeing lately in the dining halls and covering the campus of Our Lady's University. The students of the School of Architecture are gaily announcing their upcoming dance with the theme "Your Last Temptation."

This thinly veiled reference to the blasphemous and artistically worthless film "The Last Temptation of Christ" is insulting not only to our intelligence but also to every Christian student at this University. I had thought that the issue of this film's immorality and inappropriateness on this campus had been laid to rest, but the students of the School of Architecture apparently see fit to revive it in the form of some sort of festival which blatantly condones and encourages the degradation of our Lord.

This theme of "Your Last Temptation" is an open invitation for people to mock our Lord under the guise of a "Beaux Arts Ball," whatever that might be. I find this patently offensive, and frankly, am baffled how the University and the School of Architecture could permit such a heresy on campus.

As I believe all students who call themselves Christian should, I unyieldingly demand that the administration of the University and the School of Architecture immediately bring to an end this proposed rudeness and that those with any sense of religious decorum join me in a boycott of this pagan ritual.

EXPO 1989 ROMA

accent writer

Expo Roma is an exhibition for architecture majors to display memories of their experience of studying in Rome. The exhibition will last until Thursday and is located in the architecture building.

Founded in 1969 by Francesco Montana, Expo Roma is presenting its 20th exhibition. With various forms of art such as sketchings, watercolors, and photos, a major attraction for viewers will be a model of Rome created by several graduate students.

According to fourth year architectural student Lucy Baraquio, "Expo Roma is a great way to share the (Rome) experience with others and give the program the exposure it would not otherwise receive."

This mandatory year of study in Rome for architecture majors is the only one like it in the country. It provides students with the opportunity to study

"only minutes from... structures which effect architecture to this day," says Kevin Keim who just last year participated in this experience.

Studying at Daliazo Capranica, a studio about two blocks from the Pantheon, the architecture majors take classes in design studio, architecture theory, architecture history and various other courses.

But the "Rome experience" is not only academic. Yes, students want to have fun, too. Outside activities include field trip to such cities as Venice, Florence and Sicily. And while "normal" Domers have gone home for Christmas or midsemester breaks, these students are allowed to travel throughout Europe on their own. Of course the cost is on their own also, but somehow these struggling students manage.

Some of the faculty responsible for making last year's trip a success were director Gloria Sama, architectural historian Jeffery Blanchard, theory professor Sally Schafer, painter Richard Piccolo, and ND architecture professor Ken Featherstone. Through their efforts, not to mention the attraction that Rome seems to have on students, "every day (in Rome) was filled with powerful experiences," remarked Keim.

But not only is Expo Roma a means of advertisement for the Rome trip, but it is also a chance for architectural students to get together and rehash past moments. "It was really fun organizing the exhibit because it brought back so many memories," says architecture major Kim Conrard, "like sitting on Spanish steps and singing with the people."

Memories like these, which will remain for this group when the 100th Expo Roma is being celebrated, seem to make the trip worthwhile alone, not to mention the fact that sketches of Rome are a plus for personal portfolios in the job market.

The Expo Roma is an opportunity for the rest of the ND community to share not only in the architectural students' memories, but also to see the influence Rome has had on their work. The exhibit is open to all viewers in the architecture building until Thursday, November 16.

Student exhibit brings Rome to Notre Dam

Board's pledge to protest Apartheid still not fulfilled

I feel angry and betrayed. The University of Notre Dame Board of Trustees made a promise three years ago which they have failed to fulfill. They claimed that if conditions in South Africa did not improve and that if the violence continued, the University would divest its holdings with corporations doing business in South Africa. The bitter reality is that conditions have not improved, the violence has continued, and the Board of Trustees has taken no action.

I am perhaps most incensed due to the fact that I traveled to South Africa and saw for myself the harsh realities of apartheid. I walked the deplorably dirty streets of a shantytown and I sat in the rusty metal and cardboard enclosures which so many individuals call home. I spoke to the mothers and fathers who have had their children detained and tortured by the Security Police. I lived with Archbishop Tutu, the highest Anglican leader in the nation, a Nobel Peace Prize winner and recipient of innumerable honorary doctorates, yet also a man who cannot even vote in his own country due to the color of his skin. Neither can 74% of the population.

When the Board of Trustees remains silent, not only are they turning their back on the people of South Africa, they are also turning their back on the people of the University of Notre Dame. Notre Dame is supposed to stand for such great values as compassion, justice and social responsibility, yet the Board of Trustees simply ignores the suffering in South Africa. Sadly, we all implicitly condone the Board's abandonment of South Africa when we fail to confront them. Our silence is our consent.

The University of Notre Dame must fully support the struggle for freedom and democracy in South Africa, and ultimately this means getting the South African government to the bargaining table. This will only occur by exerting pressure upon them, and sanctions are the only non-violent vehicle to achieve this pressure. The application of various forms of economic and diplomatic pressure is the only manner in which those outside South Africa can force the government to sit down and bargain with the people. Any other efforts are exercises in futility. Thus, it is time for Notre Dame and the Board of Trustees to add its voice to the worldwide chorus of anti-apartheid participants. To continue the deadly silence and nonparticipation of this University as it stands now is a bastardization of our role as America's foremost Catholic university.

Two South Africas

By Mike Schadek

Notre Dame's inaction perpetuates apartheid. The Board of Trustees claims it desires an end to the racist South African regime, yet our investments in the internal economy do nothing but bolster the infrastructure of apartheid. The Board of Trustees claims it desires improvement in the conditions of Black South Africans, yet they take no concrete steps to serve as a catalyst for this improvement. The Board of Trustees claims it desires an end to the violence and oppression (both economic and political), yet they hide behind a veil of secrecy and apathy.

What has the Board of Trustees done in the matter? How can they justify their inaction? We deserve answers, as do the people of South Africa. If real change is to occur in South Africa, it will require consistent pressure on the South African Government, and the University of Notre Dame has an obligation to exert some of that pressure. The University must not only divest as it claimed it would do three years ago, but it must demand five fundamental concessions by the South African Government before meaningful negotiations can occur. The South African Government must:

- 1.) Lift the State of Emergency.
- 2.) Release all detainees and political prisoners and allow exiles to return home.
- 3.) Disban the African National Congress and all other banned and restricted political organizations.
- 4.) Guarantee free political activity and amend the Internal Security Act and all other laws accordingly.
- 5.) Repeal the Population Registration Act, the Separate Amenities Act, the Group Areas Act and all other laws which organize South African society on the basis of race.

It is time to revive the issue of South Africa and deal with it in a conclusive manner. It is time for the Board of Trustees to live up to their end of the bargain and for the University of Notre Dame to live up to its mission. It is time for divestment.

Mike Schadek is a senior government major. This is the last in a series of five columns about South Africa.

Beer, sweat, and other party favorites

A recent event on THIS campus has demonstrated the need, once again, for governmental intervention of the problem of poor quality room air fresheners. It's not that we don't have enough variety. A friend and I counted the number of different brands of room air fresheners at the store the other day and there were 38 different kinds. We also counted cereal, 136 not including the hot variety.

I should mention that journalists feel very strongly about this issue since it affects all of us at one time or another, every weekend. And in that we can't think of anything else to write about and, besides we have to finish this before "Cheers" comes on.

Anyway, the reason we bring this up (air fresheners, remember?) is that we were at a party the other night. Now, I know you're thinking, "Golly Gee Whiz, Dan, you sure go to a lot of parties." Well, shut up! What are you my mother? So, we were at this party, and we feel it would be most appropriate right here and now to inform all of you that Mister Beau is NOT an acceptable beverage to offer a guest. Especially if you're charging said guest to come in.

DAN FONTANA The Real World...

This reminds us of another point. Coming in, that is. What do you that say we all agree to start instituting some organized plans for Traffic Patterns through these parties. Maybe if we started using theater ropes or something. We don't know.

And how about beverage distribution? Let's face it, the single garbage can in the corner isn't working. Halfway through the night all the ice melts, the darn thing has an undertow. People are getting sucked in. Swirled around. No wonder they're always running outside getting sick.

Anyway, we got into this party and we soon began to detect a rather unpleasant aroma. Naturally, we thought the person next to us must have gone to the Taco Bar for dinner, so we moved to the other side of the room. Unfortunately, the stench followed us. We soon began to realize that our shoes were sticking to the floor and that everyone in the room was sweating, especially the people dancing. Finally, we noticed that the door was shut because of some rule about letting parties extend beyond the room.

As I'm sure you've figured out by now, the combination of sweat, barley, hops, and no ventilation created a smell very similar to that of, well, quite frankly, Hurricane Cheerleaders.

Naturally, being Brilliant Minds of Tomorrow, we tried to find a way of getting rid of this smell. We had the mushroom-looking things going. The Lysol. The Potpourri burners. Nothing seemed to work. Now if someone doesn't do something quick we may just have to stop having par...ha ha, just kidding! We would NEVER do that. No, either the government intervenes on this freshener thing or we actually start voting on election day. Imagine all the trouble THAT would cause all you politicians out there in good ol' reader land.

Speaking of all you out there in reader land, I've been getting some letters and would like to respond to them. Yes. Yes. No. Yes. I'm not that kind of guy. No. No. Chill out! I was just kidding. Yes. And, lastly, what would you be wearing at the time? Now if you'll excuse me, I have to go buy some cereal. This could take all afternoon.

Darville in contempt after refusal to release names

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Luther Darville was cited for contempt of court Tuesday for refusing to reveal the names of athletes to whom he claims to have given money before his firing by the University of Minnesota.

"The court has determined that this evidence, and testimony, is relevant to the resolution of this case and has ordered Mr. Darville to disclose this information," Hennepin County District Judge Patrick Fitzgerald told jurors at Darville's swindling trial.

Although jurors were cleared from the courtroom when the citation was handed down, they received special instructions concerning Darville's refusal to respond.

Fitzgerald told jurors that, during their deliberations, they should disregard Darville's possible reasons for refusing to answer.

"You may also infer because of Mr. Darville's refusal to answer these questions that, had the evidence been disclosed, the evidence would have been adverse to the interest of Mr. Darville in the defense of his case," he said.

For a second day, Darville cited loyalty to the athletes as his reason for refusing to identify them.

"I can't violate the confidence of the players," Darville said. "I can't answer that."

"You mean you won't answer that," retorted prosecutor Pete Connors.

Fitzgerald said he would decide how to punish Darville for contempt after the trial is over.

Darville, who headed the Office of Minority and Special Student Affairs until he was fired in April 1988, is on trial for allegedly stealing about $186,000 from the university for his personal use.

During cross examination Tuesday, Connors continued questioning Darville's credibility, grilling him about discrepancies between original statements he made in 1988 and his later testimony in court.

Connors also questioned Darville's handling of his personal finances.

Darville said he declared his mother as a dependant for tax years 1986-87 even though she is not a resident of the United States and was not residing with him at the time. Darville testified he did not understand that residency and citizenship were requirements to tax-dependent status.

Connors also questioned Darville's actions when auditors discovered the missing funds.

Miami distracted by Notre Dame

CORAL GABLES, Fla. (AP) — Miami Hurricanes coach Dennis Erickson says one of his major concerns about Saturday's game against San Diego State is Notre Dame.

The seventh-ranked Hurricanes (8-1) play host to San Diego State (6-3-1) on Saturday. Miami then concludes its regular season a week later at home against top-ranked Notre Dame.

"There are a lot of distractions, obviously, with the Notre Dame game looming," Erickson said Tuesday.

"We can sit here and say, 'Gosh, I'd better not mention that game because this and that will happen.' But our players know that on the 25th they're playing Notre Dame."

"So we talk about it, and it's obviously a concern."

The showdown with the defending national champion Fighting Irish, who handed Miami its only loss last season, is just one of the potential distractions this week. Another is bowl talk.

Prospective pairings have the Hurricanes bound for the Sugar Bowl to face unbeaten Alabama. Erickson declined to comment on the possibility of that matchup.

"The bowl speculation, to me, is really the last thing on our minds," Erickson said. "San Diego is first, and then Notre Dame probably is the most important game regardless of what bowl we go to."

A Miami loss to San Diego State — a four-touchdown underdog — could change the bowl picture and would eliminate the Hurricanes from the national championship race.

"All I can tell our team is that if we look ahead to Notre Dame, we'll get beat," Erickson said. "We sure don't want that to happen."

"The fear of losing this week is enough motivation for our people to focus in on it."

The Hurricanes will be strong candidates for the national title if they win their final three games and Notre Dame beats No. 2 Colorado in the Orange Bowl. When Erickson was asked if he has thought about possible national championship scenarios, he said, "I just read what you guys write. It's good enough for me."

"I know one thing we've got to do is beat San Diego."

Miami lost control of its own destiny in the national championship race when Florida State beat the Hurricanes 24-10 on Oct. 28.

Paterno

On the passing offense: "They have a passing game when they need it. They don't need it because their running game is so dominant."

On Chris Zorich: "He's one of the greatest nose guards we've played against. A very, very natural down guy who has great balance, plays pressure well and has great judgment when he sees the ball as to how to get there the best way."

On the defensive linemen: "They're very big and disciplined, and they don't make mistakes. They have big-play people down, which is unusual."

On the secondary: "I've never seen a secondary that defends the run or tackles as well as Notre Dame. They're outstanding."

Paterno evidently is not the only coach impressed with some of Notre Dame's players.

Dominic's Pizza named Rice as one of the 10 finalists for the Coach's Choice Award, a trophy given to the top player in the country as chosen by a poll of the nation's coaches.

Awards are given to the best players in Division I, I-A, II and III. Barry Sanders won the Division I prize last season in the award's inaugural season.

Other finalists include Air Force quarterback Dee Dowis, Baylor linebacker James Francis, West Virginia quarterback Major Harris, Alabama linebacker Keith McCants, Oregon quarterback Bill Musgrave, Florida running back Emmitt Smith, Penn State running back Blair Thomas, Indiana running back Anthony Thompson and Houston quarterback Andre Ware.

Another Irish athlete came up short in the running for a national award last week, but that certainly shouldn't diminish the accomplishments outfielder Dan Peltier made in his three years with the Notre Dame baseball team.

Louisiana State's Ben McDonald, now with the Baltimore Orioles, won the Golden Spikes Award. Peltier was a finalist for the award, college baseball's equivalent of the Heisman Trophy.

Peltier batted .453 for the Irish last season with 15 home runs and 90 runs batted in, leading the team to its first NCAA tournament appearance since 1970.

More amazingly for Peltier, who holds the school's career batting average

Now a Notre Dame senior and member of the Texas Rangers organization, Peltier became the first Fighting Irish baseball player to earn All-America status since Rich Gonski in 1964.

The Clifton Park, N.Y., resident also was a two-time Academic All-America selection.

Notre Dame was ranked 17th in the Associated Press preseason top 25 basketball poll. Several college basketball publications like the Irish even more than that.

Campus Communications has Notre Dame eighth in its pre-season prognostications and the U.S. Basketball Writers Association has the Irish 10th.

Most of the other magazines put Notre Dame somewhere in the second 10. The Irish are ranked 15th by Sport and Inside Sports and are picked 19th by The Sporting News.

Dick Vitale's Basketball and Street and Smith have two of the few top 20 lists that do not include Notre Dame.

Vitale who has the Irish 27th, calls Notre Dame's schedule the toughest in the country.

The Irish have road dates with eight of last season's NCAA tournament teams: Indiana, Creighton, LaSalle, Rutgers, Louisiana State, Duke Syracuse and DePaul.

Wayne Cooper and Jerome Kersey of the Portland Trail Blazers battled the New York Knicks in NBA action Tuesday night. In other action, the Charlotte Hornets earned their first victory of the season.

Bird's jumper paces Celtics to win

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Larry Bird's 10-foot jumper with one second left gave the Boston Celtics a 96-94 victory over the Philadelphia 76ers Tuesday night.

Bird, who scored only 10 points in the game, took a pass from John Bagley out of a scramble and hit a jumper from the baseline.

Bird's last-second basket stopped a Sixers rally that saw them come from five points down early in the fourth quarter to tie the score twice in the last two minutes.

Charles Barkley, who had 16 points, tied the score 94-94 when he hit a short turnaround jumper with 27 seconds remaining.

Kevin McHale's 15 points led six Celtics in double figures. Bagley and Kevin Gamble had 14 points; Dennis Johnson and Ed Pinckney added 12 and Bird had 10.

Ron Anderson led the Sixers with 23 points and Hersey Hawkins added 17.

In the first half, the Celtics opened a 30-21 after consecutive baskets by Pinckney and Robert Parish.

The Sixers mounted a comeback in the second quarter behind the shooting of Anderson, who scored 10 points in the period.

The Sixers started the rally when Barkley sank two free throws and capped it when Anderson hit consecutive jumpers to tie the game 49-49 with 3:28 left in the half.

Anderson gave the Sixers a brief 54-53 lead with 50 seconds left when he completed a three-point play. The Celtics regained the lead when Bagley sank two free throws with one second left.

Hornets 130, Magic 116

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Rookie J.R. Reid had 25 points and 20 rebounds, leading the Charlotte Hornets to their first victory of the season, 130-116 over the expansion Orlando Magic Tuesday night.

Reid started a 17-4 scoring charge with an offensive rebound basket with six minutes left in the game.

The 6-foot-9 rookie from North Carolina scored eight more points in the next four minutes as Charlotte took control of the game. Before the surge, neither team led by more than four points.

Charlotte, the last winless team in the NBA, twice built leads of 26 in the final period. Kelly Tripucka scored 24 points, while Rex Chapman added 23 and Dell Curry 18 for the Hornets, who lost their first five games.

For the Magic, Jerry Reynolds scored 22 points and rookie Nick Anderson 19.

Cavaliers 103, Nets 92

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Craig Ehlo scored 19 of his game-high 23 points in the second half and Ron Harper added 22 as the Cleveland Cavaliers pulled away in the third quarter and defeated the New Jersey Nets 103-92 Tuesday night.

The win was the second straight for the injury-ridden Cavaliers, who opened the season with four straight losses.

Trailing 60-59 midway through the third quarter, the Cavaliers put together a 29-7 spurt for an 88-67 lead. Harper, who also had 12 rebounds, started the burst with a layup and Tree Rollins added two free throws.

Chris Morris hit a free throw for the Nets, but Harper drove the lane for a dunk and Ehlo made a short jumper, giving the Cavaliers a 67-61 advantage. A basket by Joe Barry Carroll pulled New Jersey within four, but Cleveland scored 21 of the next 25 points to break the game open.

pleasing to Schafer is the fact that his defensive skills complement his scoring prowess.

"Dan leads the team in open ice hits and is second on the team in blocked shots. He's given up the puck a few times for breakaways, but just about everybody on the team has done that," Schafer remarks.

Sawyer takes pride in delivering a clean hard check on an opponent. At 5-11 and 205 pounds, he can really deliver a wallop to most of the smaller forwards who come cruising his way.

"I don't go out of my way to take somebody's head off," assures Sawyer. "But nothing feels better than making a big hit on somebody, especially if they're not expecting it."

Sawyer is quick to stress that he loves Notre Dame, saying that there is no place that he'd rather be. In speaking with Schafer, it is obvious that this is true; in fact, it seems that Sawyer practically showed up at his doorstep.

"It's funny how all this unfolded," Schafer says. "Two years ago Dan's father called me and said, 'I have a hockey player here who belongs at Notre Dame.' Frankly I was suspicious, as New Jersey is not exactly a hotbed of hockey, but Dan Sawyer has obviously learned the game well."

Sawyer has played a crucial role in the revival of a hockey team which is 5-1 after a suffering through a dismal 10-26-2 season last year. Schafer appears to be looking forward to three more years with Sawyer anchoring his defense.

"Dan is a really nice guy," says Schafer. "He's a real gentleman and we're certainly glad to have him."

Crew team captures season's last regatta

What better way to spend a glorious fall afternoon than rowing on the St. Joseph River?

For the Rowing Club, which may call the river a "second home" with all the time they spend on it, Sunday was exceptional as it won the last regatta of the year. The Irish brought home the first place trophy at the Head of The Elk by beating out a large field of teams including squads from Michigan, Michigan St., Purdue, and the extremely talented team from Cincinnati University.

"Everyone rowed really well," said club president Brian Lapps. "We couldn't have asked for better results."

The Irish men won the heavyweight four and finished second in the heavyweight eight. The four was coxswained by Paula Lukats while Steve Trzeciak, Dave Mercario, Cesar Gonzalez, and Greg Delauney provided the manpower. The men also made a strong showing in the lightweight division as they won the four and eight races.

The women also did well in their share of the days 14 races. The heavyweight four won as Monique Precheur guided the boat of Kendall Dorminey, Meg Taylor, Jenny Sievers, and Kathy Webb. The lightweight boat also followed precedent for the day as it took home a first place. The novice boats for the men and women gave strong showings as they both placed third.

"It's hard to predict placed results from the fall," explained Lapps. "This looked to be a rebuilding year, but it turned out to be a good season. Hopefully it will carry over to the spring."

The Waterpolo Club won its own tournament over the weekend, going 3-0 against teams from Eastern Michigan, Southern Illinois and Miami (Ohio). The Irish slipped by Eastern 14-12 and then beat SIU 14-11. The Irish once again tallied 14 goals in a 14-9 win over Miami.

"Our continuity wasn't there," said club president Anthony Baerlocher. "But we showed in close situations that we wanted to win and knew how to win."

Jim O'Halleron led the Irish in goals over the weekend while Mike Manning and Greg Garczynski also contributed key offensive inputs. Overall though, the Irish didn't play up to their capabilities.

The Irish can't afford to be at anything but their best this weekend as they will compete at Northwestern in the Midwest Championships for the first time in recent memory. The Irish will be in the same bracket as midwest powers Minnesota, Northwestern, and Indiana. After the round-robin competition in that bracket, the Irish will hope to advance and play the favored Wolverines of Michigan.

"This is a breakthrough point for our club," said Baerlocher. "Just being in the tournament will give us better recognition and a better reputation."

After a long season of bruising competition, the Rugby Club wound up the season on a high note as it defeated Ball St. 32-0 on the A side and triumphed 13-4 in the B contest. The victories were well received by the club as it has had a number of hard-fought matches this year where they fell short.

"It's sort of a boost," said club president Mike Smiggen. "It will give us a good look at what we can do for the spring season."

Notre Dame experienced a change of pace as they scored quickly in the first half. The Irish moved out to 16-0 lead at the half and never looked back. Sean McNamara had another outstanding game with two tries and two penalty kicks. Mike Moore also had two tries as did Jim Dudley, who came off the bench late in game for an injured player and scored twice in 5 minutes.

In the B game the Irish played especially well considering the fact that they had many players who were playing for the first or second time.

Vets control first round of Virginia Slims

NEW YORK (AP) — The heroines of the "geriatric generation" took the spotlight at the Virginia Slims Championships on Tuesday night.

After the teen-agers posted victories on Monday night, the older set took charge Tuesday, with 33-year-old Martina Navratilova leading the way into the quarterfinals of the season-ending tennis tournament.

Navratilova, the oldest player in the elite 16-player singles field and the No. 2 seed, ousted 18-year-old Mary Joe Fernandez 6-2, 6-3; fifth-seeded Zina Garrison, 25, stopped 19-year-old Helen Kelesi of Canada 6-3, 6-1; and No. 7 Helena Sukova, 24, defeated Raffaella Reggi, 23, of Italy 6-3, 7-5.

Monday's winners were 15-year-old Monica Seles, 17-year-old Arantxa Sanchez and 19-year-old Gabriela Sabatini.

The first round will be completed Wednesday night when top-seeded Steffi Graf meets Jana Novotna of Czechoslovakia and No. 8 Manuela Maleeva of Bulgaria takes on Australia's Hana Mandlikova.

The tall and talented Sukova, runnerup in the Slims Championships in 1985, rode her powerful serve to easily grab the opening set. Then Reggi sped out to a 4-0 lead in the second, building her advantage to 5-1.

But Sukova reeled off the next six games to close out the victory.

"I got up 5-1 and I started saying to myself, 'I can win the second set,'" Reggi said. "I should have taken chances, but I waited there for her to make mistakes."

Instead, Sukova rushed the net and Reggi rushed her shots, so much so that Sukova will face the winner of the Graf-Novotna match in the quarterfinals.

Fernandez just didn't have enough tools or firepower to slow the net-rushing tactics of Navratilova, the No. 2 seed seeking her fifth title on the Madison Square Garden court. Roaming the entire floor with fluid grace, always advancing to the net for putaway volleys or easy overheads, Navratilova kept the pressure on the right-hander from Miami.

Zina Garrison led a group of veterans with wins in the opening round of the Virginia Slims tourney in New York. Top-seeded Steffi Graf will complete the first round of play Wednesday.

"I really zeroed in on the ball and concentrated very hard," Navratilova said. "I try not to anticipate the ball but play the angles because she has such great passing shots. I try to react to the ball, and I did that very well."

When Fernandez was able to keep the left-hander pinned to the back of the court, she found herself being passed with precision groundstrokes down the line or cross-court.

"I get the geriatric generation," Navratilova said of the crowd's support.

Navratilova's quarterfinal foe will be Seles, a native of Yugoslavia who now lives in Bradenton, Fla.

Garrison, who next will face

Sabatini, the defending champion, has never lost to Kelesi in three career meetings. But she had her hands full through the first six games. Six times she reached break point, only to have Kelesi slam the door shut.

But in the seventh game, the two fought through four deuces before Garrison closed out the service break for a 4-3 lead. Kelesi, who turns 20 on Wednesday, a day before Garrison celebrates 26th birthday, won only one more game the rest of the way as Garrison began dominating.

"Her balls are more bark than bite," Garrison said of Kelesi. "She hits really early so it seems to have a lot of pace. But she hits like most of the girls."

"The balls seemed really big to me," Garrison said.

Kelesi took Garrison to deuce four times to begin the second set before the Houston native held. That was the last time Kelesi came close as Garrison stepped up her attack, taking the net at every chance.

UNLV, Marymount set for high-scoring game

Last year, Loyola Marymount was No. 1 in the nation in scoring. This season, Nevada-Las Vegas is No. 1 in the nation.

These two high-scoring teams help begin the Big Apple National Invitation Tournament Wednesday night in a game that promises a few stiff necks in the audience.

If Loyola wins, it'll be a big upset. If the two teams don't score 250 points between them, it might be an even bigger upset.

"The way they get up and down the court and shoot the ball, there's going to be a lot of scoring," UNLV coach Jerry Tarkanian said. "We're not going to try and slow the game up. We're going to run."

The rest of Wednesday night's NIT schedule has Southern Mississippi at second-ranked Louisiana State, Richmond at No. 19 North Carolina State, Ohio State at DePaul, Air Force at California and Alabama-Birmingham at Kansas.

Thursday night, it's North Carolina A&T at No. 25 St. John's, and Houston at Wichita State.

The quarterfinals will be played Friday and Saturday nights with the semifinals and finals Nov. 22-24 at Madison Square Garden in New York.

At Nevada-Las Vegas, 6-foot-7 junior college transfer Larry Johnson joins four returning starters in what may be the best team Tarkanian ever has coached. At least, Tarkanian likes his chances.

"We have the ingredients to be a great team," Tarkanian said.

And, he likes Johnson, who led the U.S. team to a gold medal victory over the Soviet Union in the World University Games.

"He's the best player I've ever had," Tarkanian said.

Loyola Marymount, led by the nation's scoring and rebounding leader Hank Gathers, is coming off consecutive 20-victory seasons. The Lions averaged 112.5 points last season and played in the two highest-scoring games in NCAA history, beating U.S. International 162-144 on Jan. 7 and winning a rematch 181-150 on Jan. 31.

"They play a unique style of play," Tarkanian said. "Nobody in the country plays like them. ... We get most of our points out of our defense. They get theirs strictly on offense."

LSU gets to unveil its new inside-outside combination against Southern Mississippi.

Sophomore guard Chris Jackson, second in the country in scoring last season and only the second freshman ever named All-America, should have a lot more room to roam with the addition of 7-1 freshman Shaquille O'Neal and 7-0 Prop 48 sophomore Stanley Roberts.

"Our overall vision, from this day on, is to try to win a national championship," Coach Dale Brown said.

N.C. State is coming off a 22-9 season in which the Wolfpack reached the Final 16 of the NCAA tournament, but Coach Jim Valvano doesn't dwell in the past. That may be good news for Richmond.

"On balance, if I were going against my club this year as opposed to last year, I'd be a lot less concerned as an opponent," Valvano said.

DePaul coach Joey Meyer faces the season without Terence Green and Stanley Brundy, both graduated, and Brad Niemann, out for the season with a back injury. It's not a soothing prospect.

"We have a lot of puzzle pieces, and it's not all put together yet," he said.

Ohio State will be without starting forward Treg Lee, who will sit out a one-game NCAA suspension for playing in an unsanctioned summer league game.

Air Force goes into its game against California untested and undaunted.

Kansas coach Roy Williams is looking forward to the Alabama-Birmingham game; he's just not looking forward to facing Blazers center Alan Ogg.

had rolled to a stop, and the alert Jim Hawkins picked it up for Cavanaugh, racing 94 yards for a touchdown. The extra point was again missed, and the Crusaders led 18-0.

Cavanaugh was not finished, though, as quick on the heels of that score, Eric Bailey drove three yards for another score, putting Cavanaugh up for good, 25-0.

"This team was tired of being doormats," said Cavanaugh coach Ken Cotter. "We've had tremendous support - over 200 fans, a leprechaun, and a band turned out at our last game. This was easily our best game of the year. We played with a lot of intensity, but more importantly, this team did not want to let this opportunity slip away."

Cavanaugh and Alumni, who have already met once this year, will clash Sunday at 2 p.m. in the men's Interhall championship game at Notre Dame Stadium.

Cavanaugh (5-0) was the regular-season champ of the medium-dorm Leahy League at 4-0, followed by Alumni (5-1) at 3-1. Cavanaugh has won the last two meetings, both times returning interceptions for touchdowns.

said Alumni captain Urban Gillespie. "Also, our offense came through when they had to, and we never gave up. Everyone counted us as an underdog, but we pulled it out."

In the day's second contest, Cavanaugh earned its first trip to Notre Dame Stadium since 1967, as the Crusaders steamrolled over the Pangborn Violence 25-0.

After a scoreless first quarter, Cavanaugh quarterback Chris Fox rambled 12 yards for a touchdown early in the second period of play. The extra point attempt failed and Cavanaugh led 6-0. Again, defenses dominated, as the score remained 6-0 at the half.

The score did not remain stagnant for long, as Cavanaugh came out in the second half and lit up the proverbial scoreboard. In the third quarter, Chris Fox again found his way into the end zone, and after a stymied two-point attempt, Cavanaugh led 12-0.

Pangborn was forced to punt in the fourth quarter, kicking the ball down to the six yard line of Cavanaugh. However, the Violence special teams failed to down the ball after it

The Choice for Temporaries

Michigan coach Bo Schembechler is still holding onto the slim hope that the Wolverines could win his first-ever national title. Notre Dame, Colorado and Alabama must lose for this to happen.

Bo clings to outside hope of national title

ANN ARBOR (AP) - It's a long shot, but Michigan coach Bo Schembechler isn't ruling out chances for his first national football championship.

"It's conceivable," Schembechler said in the Big Ten coaches weekly telephone conference on Tuesday, when asked about his Wolverines' chances to take it all. "A lot of circumstances have to happen and we have to have a lot of friends vote for us. It's a real, real long shot."

"Our concern is to win the Big Ten championship and the Rose Bowl. We can't look that far ahead now," he added.

No. 3 Michigan's only loss was 24-19 to No. 1 Notre Dame in the season opener.

The Wolverines, who took over sole possession of first place in the Big Ten with a 24-10 victory at Illinois last Saturday, still have Minnesota and Ohio State to play.

As for the long shot, Michigan would then have to defeat Southern Cal in the Rose Bowl and hope that somewhere along the way No. 1 Notre Dame, No. 2 Colorado and No. 4 but undefeated Alabama would lose.

Coach John Mackovic of No. 12 Illinois, whose only losses have been to Colorado and Michigan, said he hadn't seen Notre Dame, but called Michigan and Notre Dame "terrific teams who can play with anybody."

Mackovic also said Illinois hasn't given up its hopes of going to the Rose Bowl. That, too, is a long shot. The Illini have to win their next two games against Indiana and Northwestern and then have Ohio State defeat Michigan.

Ohio State still could get to the Rose Bowl by winning its last two games and have Illinois lose or tie one of its last two.

Mark Davis receives NL Cy Young

NEW YORK (AP) — Mark Davis of the San Diego Padres won the National League Cy Young Award on Tuesday, easily beating Mike Scott of the Houston Astros.

The 29-year-old Davis, who led the majors with 44 saves, got 19 first-place votes and four seconds for 107 points from a 24-member panel of the Baseball Writers Association of America. Scott, the 1986 winner, got four firsts, 14 seconds and three thirds for 65 points.

Greg Maddux of the Chicago Cubs was third with three seconds and eight thirds for 17 points. Orel Hershiser of the Los Angeles Dodgers, the 1988 winner, was tied for fourth with one first and two thirds for seven points, along with Joe Magrane of the St. Louis Cardinals, who got one second and four thirds.

Tim Belcher of the Dodgers and Scott Garrelts of the San Francisco Giants were tied for sixth with four points, followed by Rick Reuschel of the Giants with three points and Mike Bielecki and Mitch Williams of the Cubs with one point each.

Davis, a free agent, is only the fourth reliever to win the NL Cy Young, joining Steve Bedrosian (1987), Bruce Sutter (1979) and Mike Marshall (1974). Davis is the third San Diego player to win; Randy Jones (1976) and Gaylord Perry (1978) are the others.

Davis was 4-3 with a 1.85 earned-run average and 92 strikeouts in 92 2-3 innings and had a win or a save in 48 of San Diego's 89 victories. He was dominating throughout the season and finished just two short of Dave Righetti's major-league record for saves and one short of Bruce Sutter's NL record.

Davis converted 44 of 48 save opportunities and allowed just 13 of 75 inherited runners to score. He saved 12 games from Sept. 1 on and stranded his final 19 inherited runners, allowing just one of his last 29 to score. He finished the year with a streak of 24 2-3 scoreless innings, and gave up just eight hits over the span.

Davis also was dominating at the start, beginning the season with 17 saves in his first 17 opportunities. The streak was broken against Houston on June 6, the start of his only inconsistent period this year. From June 6-24, he blew three saves in six chances.

His contract negotiations with the Padres have not gone well and Davis could be the first Cy Young winner to start the next season with a different team. His agents, Randy and Alan Hendricks, say there is only a 10-percent chance he will re-sign with San Diego.

Davis made $600,000 last season and didn't have any bonus clauses for the Cy Young. Scott, however, got $50,000 for finishing second, raising his salary for the year to $1.375 million (including a $25,000 bonus for making the All-Star team).

Scott, in all, made $525,000 in bonuses this year. In April he signed a two-year contract extension that begins in 1990 and called for base salaries of $1.95 million. He pitched 205 innings, triggering a $150,000 bonus for each of the next two years, and the All-Star and Cy Young bonuses are rolled over, making his base salaries $2.175 million for 1990 and 1991.

Victim can't identify Sooner players

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — A 20-year-old Oklahoma City woman told jurors Tuesday that she couldn't identify her attackers but said she was raped at least three times in the Oklahoma football dormitory on Jan. 21.

The woman testified for about four hours in the first-degree rape trial of former Sooner football players Bernard Hall, Nigel Clay and Glen Bell. They were charged in February in the alleged attack on the woman.

The woman recounted details of the evening for the jury of five women and seven men selected Monday to hear the case in Cleveland County District Court. During cross-examination by defense attorneys for the three men, she was sometimes vague in her answers and often said she couldn't remember or did not know the information sought.

The woman, who has since married, sobbed some and at one point District Judge Preston Trimble allowed a recess at the woman's request. She left the stand weeping.

She testified she went to the dormitory with a girlfriend, that she drank alcohol in Clay's room and that she was initially grabbed by someone as she came out of the bathroom.

"He took hold of my shoulder. He took me to the bedroom, took hold of my zipper and started moving it down real fast," the woman said. She said she tried unsuccessfully to get away from the person.

"The next thing I know I was on the floor and he was on top of me," she said.

The woman said her underwear was removed and the attacker placed a hand over her mouth and nose and "then he started trying to rape me."

She said two people tried unsuccessfully to rape her. A third person was successful, she said. She said she wasn't sure if a fourth person was successful, but said attacks by two more people were successful.

When lights came on in the bedroom afterward, she said she heard someone ask "What's going on here?"

"Then Nigel came into my line of vision ... I said 'What do you think's going on Nigel, they raped me,'" the woman testified.

The woman testified during cross-examination that there were seven to nine people in Clay's room the night of the alleged attack. She was not able to identify more than a handful of the people in the room.

She said she wanted to leave the dorm room afterward and drove away with her girlfriend at one point. But she said her friend insisted on returning to the dorm and she relented partly because she was in no condition to drive.

During cross-examination by Hall's attorney, Fred Shaeffer, the woman said she never used the telephone in Clay's room after the attack.

Championships which will be held Nov. 17-19 at the Rod Laver Tennis Center in Hilton Head, S.C. DiLucia, the No. 26 collegiate player, is one of 32 player who will compete in the second leg of the Collegiate Grand Slam. The tournament is the only national collegiate played on clay.

The 32-player field includes such sibling stars as Carl Chang, the older brother of the 1988 French Open Champion and ranked No. 32 nationally and Doug Flach, the younger player of USA's Davis Cup double team member Ken Flach.

"It will be a tough tournament for David," said Bayliss. "He is going to have to get used to playing on clay, and he needs to play with a little more patience because of the surface. David is quick and powerful so he should be able to make the adjustments."

Coleman emerging as ND tennis force

By BOB MITCHELL
Sports Writer

On a roster that boasts the No. 26 player in collegiate tennis and a No. 2 player who was a two-time Argentinian national age group champion, freshman Chuck Coleman has the Notre Dame tennis world a buzz with excitement upon the conclusion of the Irish fall season at the Wisconsin Invitational.

Coleman, Notre Dame's top 1989 recruit, has been the shining star of the challenging fall season. Coleman who plays at the No. 3 singles position sparkled in the Wisconsin Invitational where he stunned Northwestern's Steve Herdoiza, the No. 14 player in college tennis, in two sets 7-5, 6-4.

"It was my best match of the fall," said Coleman who posted a 11-5 cumulative fall record. "Herdoiza is a big hitter and I just tried to take away the pace on the ball. I tried to stick to my game plan and didn't give him a target. I mixed it up and tried to make him hit a lot of balls and luckily he missed some."

"Chuck followed his gameplan to the letter which is very hard to do," said Notre Dame head coach Bob Bayliss. "Chuck is as fast as anyone in collegiate tennis. He runs everything down. He sliced it back a lot, kept it low and hit it particularly to the forehand."

The Wisconsin Invitational reflected the fortune of Notre Dame's fall season-mixed results. Notre Dame tied for third in the four-team tournament yet the Irish tied with No. 15th Northwestern Wildcats. The Irish were without the services of No. 1 player Dave DiLucia, who was suffering from shin splints. As a result, Notre Dame was forced to elevate each player up one spot in the singles competition.

Walter Dolhare continued his less than spectacular fall play at the No. 1 position where he fell to Wisconsin's Mark Schwartz, 7-5, 6-3. Dolhare's fall season has fallen short of expectations. Dolhare, the No. 2 single player, has posted a 7-9 record, including two losses in the Invitational.

"Walter can play better than he has in the fall," explained Bayliss. "Walter will bring better things in the spring. He doesn't have the same flash as last year."

With hopes of national prominence going, the Irish doubles play is a major concern for Bayliss's squad for the 1990 spring season. According to Bayliss, this is the one area of the Notre Dame team that unquestionably needs to be improved if the Irish are to have a successful season. Bayliss has shuffled the doubles lineup the entire fall with the intent of establishing three solid teams.

"Our doubles has to get better," said Bayliss of his three doubles teams that compiled a 14-14 fall record. "We have not played well at all. We have not been fundamentally sound and we are not returning well and getting enough first serves in. We have to focus on an attention to detail."

NOTES: The Notre Dame men's tennis coaching staff has added a new member to the team. Brian Kalbas has joined Bayliss as an assistant coach. Last year, Kalbas was an integral part of the 1988-1989 Irish squad. Kalbas, who played primarily at the No. 3 position in his final year, is the coach of the "B" team and assists in the recruiting chores.

"Brian has been a tremendous help to our team this year," said Bayliss. "As a coach, he has already made a great contribution to Notre Dame tennis. He helps the players through their struggling times. And he is the best motivator by example. I can't say enough about what he means to our program."

Alumni edged Off-Campus in Interhall football Sunday to advance to the championship game.

Crusaders, Dogs in Interhall final

By DAVID DIETEMAN
Sports Writer

The semifinal round of the 1989 men's Interhall football playoffs was full of surprises, as Cavanaugh decimated Pangborn 25-0 and Alumni edged Off-Campus 16-8 in overtime, earning the teams the right to battle for the championship.

The first game of the day was an exciting spectacle, as Alumni and Off-Campus waged a defensive campaign, with the Alumni defense coming through in the squeeze. Play seesawed back and forth in the first half, as neither team could mount a sustained offensive drive.

However, Alumni, with its usual flair for dramatics, opened the second half with a bang, as tight end Jack Donoghue hauled in a Jim Passinault pass at the Off-Campus 35-yard line, juked several defenders and flew into the end zone for a score. Jim Passinault added the two-point attempt, putting the Dogs up 8-0.

For the next 15 minutes, neither team moved the ball effectively. But midway through the fourth quarter, on second and twenty-five, the Crime offense came up with a much-needed big play, setting up tailback Dave Cane's 13 yard touchdown run on a sweep to the left side. Cane tacked on the two-point conversion, tying the game 8-8.

Time ran out with the score tied at eight, sending the game into sudden-death overtime. In sudden death, each team was given four attempts to score from the 10-yard line.

Inspired by their defensive performance, Off-Campus elected to defend first, but Alumni drove to a fourth and goal on the five yard line. But just as doom loomed on the Dogs' horizon, Off-Campus was called for pass interference, giving Alumni a first-and-goal on the two. On the next play, tailback Dave Ludwig swept around left tackle for six points, and again for a successful two-point conversion.

Alumni's offense had put the Dogs up 16-8, but it was up to the Dog defense to preserve the win. The Alumni defense proved more than worthy to the task at hand, as an incompletion and two smothered running plays finished the Crime's season at the four-yard line.

"Off-Campus played with a lot of class,"

Paterno can't locate any Irish weakness

Lou Holtz has achieved legendary status for his ability to tout the abilities of opposing teams, but the Fighting Irish coach may have met his match in Joe Paterno.

In his weekly conference call, Paterno, whose Penn State team hosts Notre Dame on Saturday, said this year's Irish group was "one of the greatest teams ever to play college football." Paterno analyzed nearly every facet of the top-ranked Irish and could not come up with a weakness anywhere.

On Raghib "Rocket" Ismail: "He's the best kick return player I've ever seen, and he may be the best one in the country today, including the pros. And we've played against Timmy Brown too."

On Anthony Johnson: "I think he's the best fullback in the country bar none."

On Ricky Watters: "Tremendous breakaway potential."

On Tony Rice: "If not the best quarterback in the country, certainly one of the two or three best."

On Derek Brown: "Fast enough to be a split end. He can beat you if you get careless with any of their outside people."

On the Irish offensive line: "Superb."

Sawyer making impact with Irish

Freshman putting possible pro career on hold for now

By KEN TYSIAC
Sports Writer

There are less than five minutes remaining in a tight hockey game between Notre Dame and Michigan Dearborn. The Wolves lead 4-3, but the Irish are on the power play.

Freshman Dan Sawyer winds up to take a whack at a rolling puck at the blue line. He drives a low, hard slapshot toward the Dearborn net, and right wing Mike Curry manages to get his stick on the puck. He deflects it into the net, and the score is tied.

Sawyer isn't finished yet. Less than one minute later, he finds himself with the puck at the top of the left face-off circle. He fires a snapshot toward the goal, and beats Dearborn goalie Rob Church on the short side to give the Irish a 5-4 lead which they will not relinquish.

Welcome to college hockey, Dan Sawyer.
"Dan is just a good rock 'em,

Dan Sawyer

sock 'em defenseman," praises Notre Dame coach Ric Schafer. "He's got a good, hard, low shot, and added to that, he knows that the puck ultimately is to end up in or near the goal."

Schafer is not the only one to recognize this. The Calgary Flames of the NHL also showed that they appreciate Sawyer's talents when they drafted him in the ninth round of this past year's amateur draft. Sawyer wishes to play professional hockey some day, but he has put those wishes on the back burner for the moment.

"I probably wasn't ready to make the jump to the pros yet," says Sawyer, who hails from Kinnelon, New Jersey. "While I was in high school, I played junior hockey against some pretty good competition, but it would still have been too big a jump for me to make, even if I was to play in the minor leagues."

"If possible, pro hockey is my goal, as it is for most hockey players. But here at Notre Dame I'll still have a degree to fall back on if I don't make it in professional hockey."

Since he came to Notre Dame, Sawyer hasn't done anything to make the Flames regret drafting him. In fact, he has scored five goals and added two assists to lead all Irish defensemen with seven points in just six games. But even more more
