Bush leads hunt to find aid for Iraqi campaign

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush is dispatching two high-level missions this week on a global search for billions of dollars to support the economic and military campaign against Saddam Hussein — a strategy some say is unbecoming of a superpower.

One delegation, led by Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady, leaves Tuesday for stops in Paris, London, Seoul, South Korea and Tokyo, passing the plate in search of as much as $25 billion to help defray the expense of the American troop deployment and to aid nations suffering hardships from the economic embargo against Iraq.

Secretary of State James Baker leaves later in the week on a similar whirlwind trip looking for assistance in the capitals of oil-rich Persian Gulf countries.

Bush announced the burden sharing effort just last Thursday and on Monday officials were still scrambling to put together itineraries for the hastily scheduled trips.

The fact that Bush was sending two of his closest Cabinet advisers served to emphasize the importance the president was attaching to the task of getting other countries to share the burden. However, administration officials conceded that the sales job was not going to be easy.

Bush's effort has also raised questions about the propriety of issuing a global call for donations to support the U.S. military. Critics charged that it left the appearance that America's soldiers are up for hire as mercenaries.

"I don't want to leave any impression in the world that we pay for our soldiers and our

Koreas begin peace talks

PANMUNJOM, Korea (AP) — North Korean Prime Minister Yon Hyong Muk and 90 of his countrymen crossed the heavily armed Korean border into South Korea on Tuesday for a historic visit aimed at easing four decades of hostilities.

Yon and the six official North Korean delegates to the premiers' talks were welcomed by their South Korean counterparts at the truce village of Panmunjom inside the Demilitarized Zone separating the rival Koreas.

"A Korean proverb says a thousand miles start with a first step," said South Korean Unification Minister Hong Sung-chul, who was among those to greet the visitors.

The North Koreans were given bouquets of flowers, a traditional Korean gift of friendship, and tea, before being escorted to South Korean-made sedans for a 35-mile trip south to Seoul.

A military helicopter hovered overhead as the motorcade of 12 cars and three buses prepared to move south toward Seoul.

The group is the first to cross the border since 1985 and only the third delegation to travel to the South since the end of World War II in 1945.

South Korean Prime Minister Kang Young-hoon was to meet the North Koreans at a luxury hotel near Olympic Park, official headquarters for the talks.

The premiers' meeting is seen as a new phase in capitalist South Korea's efforts to coax the totalitarian Communist North out from four decades of isolation and begin a thaw in their Cold War.

South Korean officials say the meeting will be the first in which both sides recognize the legitimacy of each other's governments. North Korea has steadfastly refused to recognize the Seoul government since the Koreans established separate capitals in 1948.

During the visit, the North Korean prime minister is expected to make a courtesy call of South Korean President Roh Tae-woo, possibly delivering a letter from North Korean leader Kim Il Sung.

If all goes well, a second round of talks is to be held Oct. 16-19 in North Korea's capital of Pyongyang.

"The Korean peninsula still remains in the grip of the Cold War era that has placed South and North Korea in a state of mutual distrust and confrontation," said Unification Minister Hong Sung-chul, spokesman for the South Korean delegation.

"This continued national tragedy should not be permitted to go on endlessly," he said. "Every effort must be made to establish regular dialogue between the two sides."

The Korean peninsula was divided at the end of World War II into the Communist North and capitalist South. The two sides fought the 1950-53 Korean War but a peace treaty was never signed.

The border between the Koreas remains the most heavily fortified permanent demarcation in the world, with more than 1.5 million armed men on either side behind bunkers and barbed wire. There is no travel, mail or other communication.

Time helps ease fear, panic after U of Florida murders

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Campus life was returning to normal Monday for many college students frightened by a string of mutilation murders, but police warned that the killer could still be on the loose.

Students returning to the University of Florida for the second week of classes said they were less worried than they were last week by the deaths of five students who were found slain in their apartments.

"All you can do is be very careful. I'm usually in my room before dark," said Ava, a sophomore from Fort Lauderdale who refused to give her last name.

"Everyone I know is calming down," said Aaron Sotola, 20, a sophomore from Copper Harbor, Mich. "It has been almost week, but there is still tension on the campus."

Police said they have eight suspects, but warned residents against dropping their guard.

"Students should know that the killer has not been apprehended — the killer is not in custody — and assume that person or persons is still in the area," Lt. Sadie Darnell, a police spokeswoman, said Monday.

Police said an emotionally troubled University of Florida freshman, in custody in Brevard County for allegedly assaulting his grandmother, remained a suspect.

Edward Lewis Humphrey was held on $1 million bond. Public Defender J.R. Russo said he would seek a hearing Tuesday to request reduced the bond.

Survey: educators disagree about role of ethics in courses

By PAUL PEARSON
Assistant News Editor

According to a report submitted to University Provost Timothy O'Meara, some faculty members of the College of Business Administration are not in favor of integrating ethics into business courses taught at the University.

The report was presented by the Committee to Review the Ethical Dimension of Education at the University of Notre Dame. According to the report, this committee was formed to "make recommendations with regard to ethics in the curriculum and programs of the various departments and colleges."

To assist in its findings, the committee sent a faculty survey to 83 faculty members of the College of Business Administration. Only 38 of them were returned. According to the report, "One interpretation of nonresponse to this survey is lack of interest or support for this idea."

Committee chair Father Oliver Williams, associate provost and associate said that he finds this lack of response "very troubling."

Representatives of the College of Business Administration could not be reached for comment.

Williams does not believe that all of the nonresponse is due to faculty apathy. Instead, he said, "in looking back, I think we should have been more aggressive in our data gathering."

"From my experience, I would say that there is maybe 20 percent of the Business School faculty who would show apathy, but even that concerns me," Williams said.

According to the faculty survey, more than 70 percent of the faculty members responding do include ethical issues in their classes. Nearly 60 percent of the faculty members said that a discussion of ethical issues facing business managers should be integrated into the College of Business curriculum, either as a part of all business courses or in a separate course.

Another faculty survey was sent to all faculty members of the College of Engineering. Approximately 40 percent of these surveys were not returned.

According to the survey, less than 50 percent of the faculty members responding do not include ethical issues in the classes they teach. However, more than 50 percent of the faculty members believe that a discussion of ethical issues facing engineers and architects should be treated in a separate ethics course, either exclusively or along with discussion in regular engineering courses.

In response to these statistics, James Taylor, associate dean of the College of Engineering, said Monday, "Some professors who teach Advanced Math or a course which is highly technical would not think that a discussion of ethics is part of an appropriate course."

The survey sent to the College of Engineering faculty also asked for general comments about the role of the professor in discussing ethics. Comments ranged from "Not feasible," to "Irrelevant!"

With regard to these comments, Taylor said "I like to think that, if it comes up in class discussion in some way, they would handle the issue."

Williams believes that some of these responses may be due to the increasing specialization of faculty. "Very good scholars get intensified in one particular area, and they forget the broader implications of their actions," he said.

Another factor, according to Williams, may be that, "A lot of faculty members think 'They can think these things out for themselves.'" Williams disagrees with that. "The world is now so complex that you need

Reading between the 'lines' at ND

It's that time of year again. Now that the bookstore has a chunk of each of our bank accounts, the athletic department wants its turn. That's right, it's time to get football tickets.

Robyn Simmons

Right now we are in the middle of the fall ritual where thousands of students line up around the JACC in order to get their season tickets for the home football games. There really is no way to get around this; I doubt that we could use the DART system to get tickets without blowing a few circuits.

As a senior at Notre Dame, I have learned that this school loves lines. I have spent more time in lines at this school than I have anywhere else, whether it was for the dining hall, the Mac Lab, the bookstore, registration, Keenan Revue tickets, or—in the days before DART—signing up for classes.

Since lines are an inevitable part of life at Notre Dame, I thought I'd look at the more positive aspects of waiting in line for football tickets, especially for those of you who might be waiting in line while reading this.

IT'S CHARACTER BUILDING: By the time you've graduated from Notre Dame, you will have waited in so many lines that waiting in line will not faze you in the least.

Most people get grumpy and irritable waiting in line, but a seasoned line-waiter can wait for two hours for concert tickets and still be able to say, "This is nothing compared to the time I had my face smashed into the door while trying to get Keenan Revue tickets."

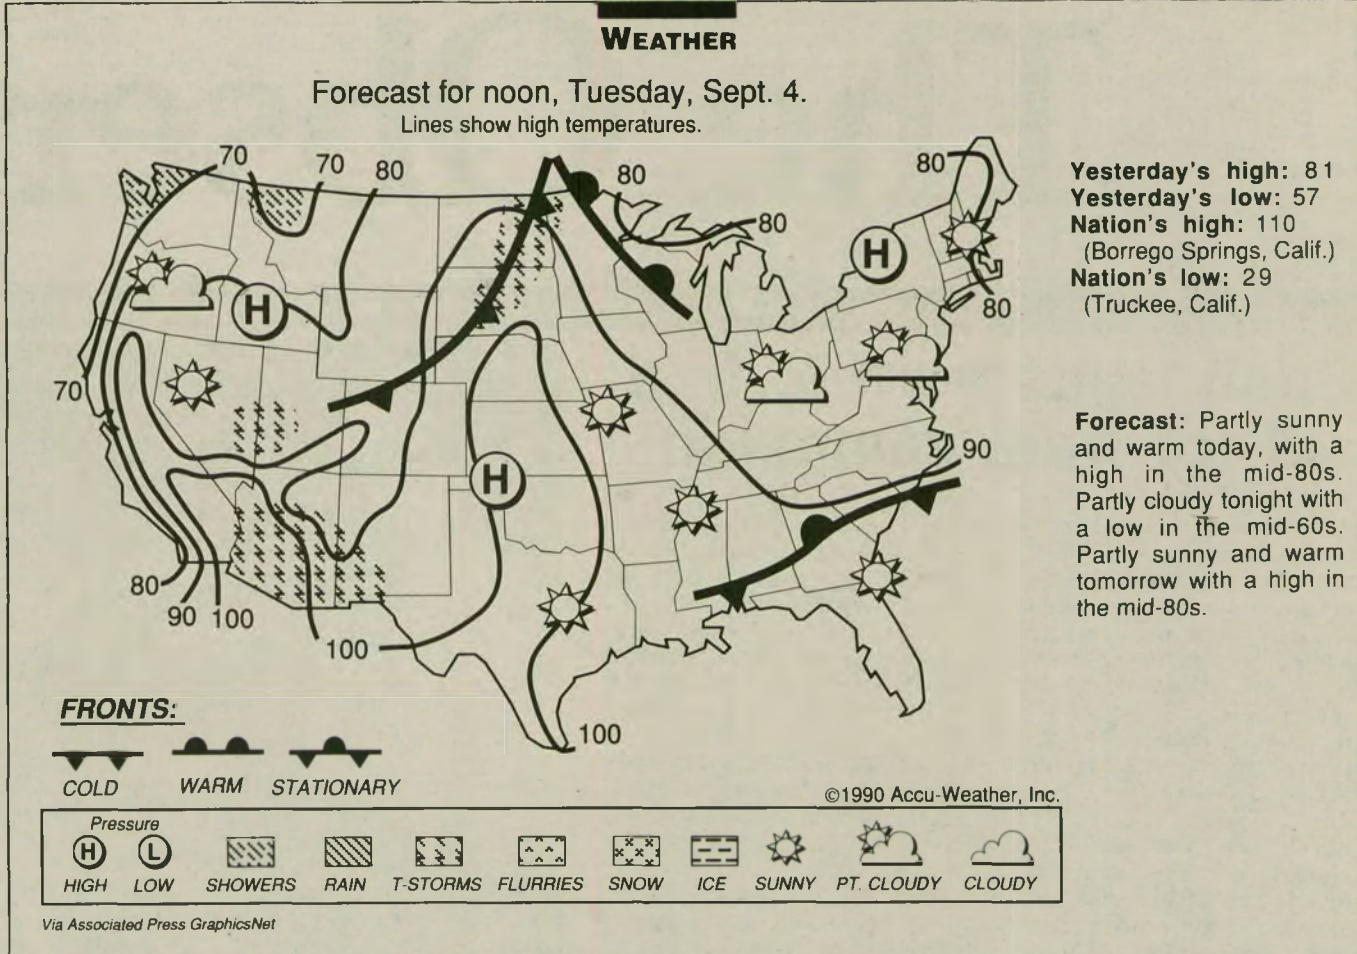

BONDING: Lots of bonding. Waiting in line for football tickets isn't so bad when you've got all of your friends with you, and what a better way to meet new people than while you're spending the night camped out in front of JACC. Probably the best way to make new "friends" while waiting in line for football tickets is to be the first in line.

TICKET TO THE MIAMI GAME: All of the home games should be exciting but the Miami ticket is the one that will have the Alumni and other fans groveling. Don't be surprised if you see a few middle aged men in plaid pants on their knees begging for tickets on the day of the Miami game.

As students, we are guaranteed tickets to this football showdown. The Miami ticket will give each student a chance to make Notre Dame history—or a tremendous profit.

So enjoy the wait while you're in line for tickets, and be thankful you're at a school where the football program is worth lining up for. And a special thanks to Lou Holtz for personally delivering donuts yesterday morning to the seniors who camped out the night before.

Pope John Paul II yesterday, on the third day of a 10-day, four-nation African pilgrimage, criss-crossed Tanzania, flying from the Indian Ocean port city of Dar Es Salaam to the southern town of Songea and then to this northern city on the edge of Lake Victoria. John Paul spoke bluntly of Africa's problems and hardships—a common theme in his seven visits to the continent. About 25,000, many waving Tanzanian and Vatican flags, attended the Mass in a dirt field in the middle of the African savannah. The pope spoke in English, with several passages of Swahili mixed in, from an altar with a bamboo backdrop.

The city of Chelyabinsk in the U.S.S.R., which was wracked by shortages of food, tobacco and alcohol, suffered more woes yesterday when bus drivers went on strike, the Tass news agency reported from Moscow. The drivers, whose demands include higher wages, longer vacations, retirement at age 55 and better housing, agreed to return to work later in the day, Tass said. It did not elaborate on their demands. The buses in the southern Ural Mountains city of about 1 million people are old, with no spare parts, and the regional transit authority loses about $35 million a year, the news agency said.

Lax laws governing day-care centers in many states are failing to protect children, the Children's Defense Fund said yesterday. The fund said its national survey of child-care centers and day-care homes shows, "inexcusable failures to protect the health and safety of children." The report urged support for legislation pending in Congress that would provide $1.75 billion in federal funds for child care, expand tax credits for low-income working families, and guarantee parents the right to make unannounced visits.

Virtually all those convicted of savings and loan fraud are first-time offenders, but they are getting harsher prison sentences than the typical white-collar criminal, according to Justice Department figures. There were 128 people convicted since Oct. 1988, who received average prison sentences of 3.2 years, according to department statistics. That compares with an average 2.5 years for all federal fraud cases, including embezzlement and forgery. Thirty-seven of those convicted for S&L crimes since Oct. 1988 have not been jailed.

A Hobart man drowned in Lake Michigan yesterday after rescuing a young woman who got into water over her head, officials said. Robert Frybort Jr., 32, was swimming at the Washington Park beach on the north side of Michigan City when he saw the other swimmer in trouble about 12:30 p.m. "He went out to assist, got her into shallower water then stepped into a deep trough, went under and drowned," according to conservation officer Wilson Davis.

South Bend kids need Big Brothers/Sisters

By MEGAN JUNIUS
News Writer

The Big Brothers/Big Sisters of St. Joseph County, Inc. gives Notre Dame students the opportunity to form relationships that can benefit and influence children of the South Bend area.

According to organization president, David Jones, the relationship between the "big" and "little" resembles "friend" and "role model".

Jones says that scheduling 2-5 hours a week for his little brother has required some effort; however, Jones has learned that relationships do not just happen, they take time to build. "It also gives students a chance to leave their books behind and be a kid for a while," Jones said.

Twelve year old Atlantis Walker is a little brother. Walker and his big brother often spend their time together going to ND athletic events, doing homework, watching TV and going to the mall.

"Spending time with my big brother gives me something to do during the time I would be getting in trouble," Walker said.

Walker's grades have gone from F's to B's and C's, and he attributes this to the influence of his big brother. Because of his big brother, Walker says he now knows that good grades and going to college are important in order to get a good job.

Currently, there are 106 children matched up with a big brother/big sister in St. Joseph County. Still, 142 children are currently on a waiting list to be matched.

All freshman, sophomores and juniors are eligible to sign up for Big Brothers/Big Sisters. Each applicant for Big Brothers/Big Sisters is required to go through a screening process.

A one-year commitment is necessary in order to give enough time for relationships to form.

Anyone interested in becoming a Big Brother or a big Sister, can stop by the booth on activities night at the JACC or call the South Bend office at 232-9958.

New video store gains funds

By FRANK GAUL
News Writer

The Student Senate on Monday began the 1990-91 session discussing the proposed Video Store in LaFortune, upcoming events sponsored by the Multicultural Executive Council, and some recommendations concerning the use of Theodore's for the remainder of the school year.

Steve Perkins, proposed manager of the Video Store, was given a six thousand dollar donation from the Carry Forward Fund to help finance this endeavor. He hopes to include five-hundred videos within the new store, which will be located in the space formerly occupied by the Cellar record store.

The representative from the Multicultural Executive Council announced that next week will be African Awareness Week (AAW) at the University. The purpose of the week is to expose the student body to African culture with activities such as a fireside chat at Theodore's.

Joe Cassidy, director of student activities, announced that Theodore's is available for weekend reservations for any student-sponsored activities. Student groups can get more information about Theodore's from the Student Activities office.

Cassidy also announced that comedian Tim Settimi will be performing at Theodore's this Friday evening.

Protestors halt N.J. casino traffic

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Protesters demanding more parks blocked traffic into this gambling center, delaying thousands of Labor Day travelers on the casinos' busiest day of the year.

Police arrested 25 black activists out of the approximately 250 who demonstrated on behalf of what they called "the forgotten youth of Atlantic City." Leaders of the group said they would extend their protests through the week and disrupt the Miss America Pageant, which has its finals televised live Saturday night.

They called for more recreational sites and an end to alleged police brutality. Negotiations broke off last week between the group and Mayor Jim Whelan, a former teacher who says he wants to work with them but refuses to be pressured by demonstrations.

Police on motorcycles, in cars and a helicopter watched as the demonstrators marched through the slums that abut the glittering Boardwalk strip of casinos and hotels.

Shortly before 1 p.m., the marchers blocked traffic coming into town on the Atlantic City Expressway, forcing officers to temporarily divert traffic to side streets.

Eight of the marchers, including the Rev. Al Sharpton, who has been active in black community protests in New York and elsewhere, sat down.

Twenty-five people, including Sharpton, were arrested, said mayoral aide Lou Tuscano. Most of the arrests were for being disorderly; two were for aggravated assault for throwing things at officers.

Sharpton and local group organizer Steve Young also were charged with incitement to riot for allegedly telling others to cross police barricades.

Europe are more dependent on the flow of oil from the Persian Gulf than the United States is.

Still, many private analysts saw the pledge-seeking missions as stark examples of where America's global fortunes now stand.

As the world's largest debtor nation, burdened by huge trade and budget deficits, the United States no longer has the economic muscle to go it alone.

"We are no longer the economic super power we used to be," said Lawrence Chimere of the Economic Strategy Institute, a Washington research organization. "Our changing role in the world economy is clearly in evidence here."

In launching the burden sharing initiative last week, Bush maintained that the "shape of the post-Cold War world" was at stake in the Persian Gulf crisis.

sailors if we send them into another part of the world only through another country's money," said Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt. "This is not a rent military. It's not a mercenary force."

Leahy said a better approach to take would be to boost taxes if necessary to pay for the Persian Gulf buildup.

Bush has vigorously rejected suggestions that putting pressure on the allies for money to support the U.S. military was improper and he has received support for this position from other members of Congress.

"The Japanese have a hell of a stake in this and they ought to pay a hell of a share," said Sen. Frank Lautenberg, D-N.J.

Homeless sophomore returns to Stanford U.

OXNARD, Calif. (AP) — Lupe Vasquez is spending the waning days of summer with her family — farm workers who live in a ramshackle homeless shelter on the edge of town.

This fall, she'll return to Stanford University, where she hopes to maintain her B-plus average as a sophomore studying science and engineering.

"I'd like to think the second year will be easier. But I don't think so," the 18-year-old said. "I'm going to have harder classes and a heavier load."

When she graduated second in a class of 397 students from Oxnard High School in June 1989, she was accepted by six California universities. She chose Stanford because she thought it had the best science program.

Stanford, with annual costs topping $21,000, also is the most expensive university in the state. She's using private scholarships, state and federal grants and loans to pay for her education, and she's saving money from her two summer jobs.

On a recent weekday, the teenager sat at a table in the enclosed patio of a family friend's home, studying calculus and listening to Spanish pop music.

"I don't even want to remember my first year, it was so hard," she recalled with a grimace. "My brain was just going all the time. I could never get to sleep before three in the morning. And finals were just awful."

"The first two to three weeks I really felt homesick," said Vasquez. "I wanted to see my mom. I wanted to go back to the Zoe."

That's the Zoe Christian Center, a former Japanese internment camp that is now a homeless shelter.

Vasquez's mother, stepfather and four younger siblings have shared crowded rooms there for two years, struggling to save enough to rent an apartment in town.

Vasquez spent the first few weeks of summer at the shelter, home to about 150 people, mostly couples and single mothers with children.

She found it hard to concentrate and took a room in her former high school counselor's home. She finds time to visit her family almost daily.

"I lived in an unsettled situation for years," Vasquez said. "And I just found I couldn't return to an unstable condition."

That lack of balance began when Vasquez was two years old and her mother and father separated. The mother, Maria Leyva, left Chihuahua, Mexico, bringing her two eldest daughters, Lupe and Virginia, with her to Mirage, Ariz.

Leyva, 39, said Lupe has loved school ever since she entered kindergarten at age four. Leyva's schooling ended with fifth grade.

"Even when Lupe was sick she forced herself to go to her classes," Leyva said in Spanish. "She was born to study."

Soon, little Lupe was carrying armfuls of library books home to the succession of crowded apartments and boarding house rooms her family shared.

Leyva met her second husband in the onion fields. The couple had three children together.

For years, the family of seven moved with the crops throughout Arizona. They eventually landed about 60 miles northwest of Los Angeles in Oxnard, where Vasquez spent her last two years of high school.

This summer, Vasquez works at a bank in the afternoons. In the mornings, she works for the California Rural Legal Assistance doing research on the effects of pesticides on farm workers.

Radical Goldman's life story will be told

Special to The Observer

"Emma Goldman" will be presented Wednesday, Sept. 5 at 3:30 p.m. in the Hesburgh Library Auditorium. The program, performed by Michele Colopy, is free and open to the public.

Goldman was an early twentieth century pioneer and a champion of free speech, reproductive rights, peace and free love as well as a labor activist labeled an anarchist by the U.S. government.

She was deported in 1919 for her crusade against U.S. involvement in World War I and spent the remaining 21 years of her life in exile.

During the month of September, an accompanying Emma Goldman exhibit of her letter and lecture notes and government surveillance reports will be on display in the Rare Book Room of Hesburgh Library and in the library concourse.

Exhibit sponsors include the University Libraries; the Year of the Women committee; the departments of American studies, anthropology, government, history, and sociology; and the gender studies program.

Crash injures two politicians

FALLON, Nev. (AP) — A light plane crash Monday seriously injured two candidates in Nevada's primary election, authorities said. One person was killed in the election-eve accident.

The injured included Sue Wagner, a candidate for lieutenant governor, and Bob Seale, who is running for state treasurer.

Seale, a licensed pilot, was flying the plane, said Churchill County Sheriff Bill Lawry.

The Republicans were among five people aboard a twin-engine Cessna 411 that crashed shortly after takeoff from the Fallon, Nev., municipal airport, about 60 miles east of Reno, the sheriff said. The plane was carrying the candidates to Carson City from Fallon, where they attended a Labor Day parade.

It appeared the plane's right engine lost power and the pilot was trying to make it back to the airport when the crash occurred shortly after 12:30 p.m. in a grassy area about a mile from the airport. The plane was badly damaged and witnesses said one of its wings was sheared off.

Officials who spoke on condition of anonymity said Seale's wife, Judy, was killed in the crash. Lawry confirmed one death, but withheld the victim's name pending notification of family members.

Two other passengers,

Stephanie Tyler, a campaign aide to Wagner, and Brian Krolicki, Seale's campaign manager, suffered less severe injuries and were taken to a Fallon hospital, the sheriff said.

Wagner and Seale were taken to Washoe Medical Center in Reno. A hospital spokeswoman said the two were listed in serious condition but the exact nature of their injuries wasn't immediately known.

Wagner, 50, is a longtime state senator, and Seale, 48, is a certified public accountant. Both are on Tuesday's primary election ballot.

Wagner's late husband, Peter Wagner, was killed in a 1980 plane crash.

Gang spree kills one in California

FRESNO, Calif. (AP) — Gang members thwarted in an attempt to attack rivals rampaged through the city, killing one person and wounding up to nine others, police said Monday.

The victims apparently were chosen at random during a four-hour spree of shootings and robberies Sunday night throughout this central California city of 350,000 people, said Sgt. Mike Guthrie.

"There doesn't seem to be any identifiable pattern," Guthrie said. "I think it was more driving until they saw an opportunity and taking it."

Police arrested four boys, ages 14, 15, 16 and 17, and confiscated five guns early Monday. All of those arrested are from Fresno, Guthrie said.

Each was charged with one count of murder, six counts of attempted murder and seven counts of armed robbery. Their names were withheld because of their ages.

One suspect remained at large and additional charges were pending against the four held, police said.

Besides the three shotguns, one rifle and a handgun, police seized crack cocaine from one of the youths, Guthrie said.

The rampage began after uniformed officers patrolled a drug-infested west Fresno neighborhood called "the U," said Guthrie.

Five gang members intended to shoot rivals, but left the area because of the police, Guthrie said.

After the fatal shooting downtown, one juvenile left the group, Guthrie said. The other four robbed and shot people along an eight-mile stretch north to near Fresno State University, then headed back downtown, he said.

"This entire scenario was an afterthought," Guthrie said.

The shooting spree was "unprecedented in our city," he said. "I can recall nothing of this magnitude ... There very easily could have been half a dozen or more murder victims."

Palmer resigns from top New Zealand position

WELLINGTON, New Zealand (AP) — Prime Minister Geoffrey Palmer resigned Tuesday as opinion polls indicated his ruling Labour Party would be routed in next month's national elections.

External Relations and Trade Minister Mike Moore, who Palmer defeated in a party vote when former Premier David Lange resigned 13 months ago, was named to succeed Palmer in the Oct. 27 balloting. The opposition National Party is leading by a large margin over the Labour Party in the latest polls.

Moore, 41, who in recent months had repeatedly denied he would seek to unseat Palmer, had been ranked third in power behind Palmer and Deputy Prime Minister Helen Clark.

Moore told a news conference that New Zealanders wanted a "new direction" and that his bid for the leadership "in no way is a reflection on Mr. Palmer's service to New Zealand."

New Zealand, with 3.5 million residents, has been hit in recent months by a weakness in its general economy and a rise in unemployment.

Palmer, 48, had denied he would step down as recently as Monday. New Zealand Press Association quoted sources as saying he had enough support to stay in office but decided to quit because the internal power struggle would have devastated the party.

Palmer told a news conference he "may well have had the numbers to remain, but I took the view that to have a leadership contest on a vote would be destructive, it would be divisive, that it was not in the best interests of the collective."

Solar-powered glider reaches coast

SPOT, N.C. (AP) — A solar-powered ultralight plane reached the East Coast on Monday, but the pilot insisted on covering the last eight miles to Kitty Hawk before declaring he'd made the first cross-country solar flight.

Eric Raymond, whose Sun Seeker was forced down by bad weather, said he'd try again Tuesday to reach the Wright Brothers Memorial, which commemorates the pioneer aviators' historic 1903 flight.

Others on the crew, including Raymond's father, Sam, were ready to call the journey from the inland California desert a cross-country success, since Spot is on a peninsula just short of the Outer Banks, which hold Kitty Hawk. But the pilot insisted on reaching his symbolic goal.

"I said I was going to land (at the monument)," Raymond said in a telephone interview. "I just want to be able to say I landed here. I think it's worth another day."

The Sun Seeker made a smooth landing at a sod farm about nine miles northeast of the monument, forced down by rain, wind and poor visibility after flying about 25 miles, he said.

The plane has solar cells to produce power for its electric motor. However, the motor is used only for takeoffs and landings. After takeoff, the motor is turned off and the plane rides thermals, columns of rising warm air, like a glider.

Raymond, a former national hang gliding champion, had hoped to reach his destination Sunday but was delayed by strong headwinds. He logged only 18 miles Friday when he landed at Virginia Tech Airport at Blackburg, Va., about 25 miles northwest of Roanoke, Va.

Raymond flew 124 miles Sunday before landing in Currituck, in North Carolina's northeastern corner, about 35 miles north of Kitty Hawk, said Sun Seeker project spokesman Jack Whitehouse.

"He was struggling when he took off today," Whitehouse said Monday. "He said his climb rate was more like 100 feet per minute, which is very weak. (His chances were) only 50-50."

"We've been very upset because the delays we've had on this trip have had nothing to do with the plane, they were because of the weather," said his wife, Aida.

Two days after the journey began, the 198-pound craft was seriously damaged in an aborted takeoff from Lordsburg, N.M.

Prosecutor seeks crucial override in Stuart case

BOSTON (AP) — The answers to the case in which a man concocted a story about a robber shooting him and his pregnant wife may never be known unless the state's highest court overrules attorney-client privilege.

The husband, Charles Stuart, has since committed suicide, and prosecutors are asking the court to force Stuart's attorney to disclose conversations they had before the hoax unraveled.

It may provide the only break for prosecutors considering charges against Stuart's brother, who says he was an unwitting accomplice.

Attorneys for the Stuart family will contend in hearings set for this week that attorney-client privilege remains intact. And although prosecutors will argue the privilege should be overridden in the interest of justice, some legal observers say that is shaky ground at best.

"There's not much precedent for this," said Phyllis Goldfarb, a professor at the Boston College Law School.

Carol Stuart, 30, was shot in the head on the night of Oct. 23, minutes after she and her husband drove away from a prenatal class at Brigham and Women's Hospital.

Wounded himself, Stuart called police and guided them to his location using his car's cellular telephone. His dramatic, anguished plea for help over the telephone was widely broadcast. Mrs. Stuart died hours after the attack; her prematurely delivered son died 17 days after that.

Stuart claimed a black man had kidnapped them, forced them to drive to a deserted area, robbed and then shot them. Many saw the incident as a symbol of urban crime.

Then, on Jan. 3, Matthew

Stuart went to authorities and implicated his brother in the shooting. Charles Stuart leaped to his death from a bridge the next day.

Nearly a year after the crime, the grand jury investigating the case has stalled over whether Matthew Stuart's role was really that of an unwitting accomplice as he claimed.

Prosecutors want the privilege broken, in order to learn whether Stuart told his lawyer, John Dawley, that Matthew was involved in a plot to kill Mrs. Stuart and cover up the crime by staging a fake robbery.

According to a judge's memorandum, the grand jury was told that Matthew was to meet his brother at a predetermined location Oct. 23 to get items that later would be claimed to have been stolen, and an insurance claim would be filed.

The grand jury, according to the report, was told Matthew pulled alongside his brother's car and talked to him, but was not aware his brother was wounded or that Mrs. Stuart was in the car.

Matthew told police his brother passed him several items, including a handgun. He said he dropped the gun and a woman's handbag into the Pines River in Revere.

The items were later recovered and the gun was identified as the one used to shoot the Stuarts.

We need you.

New trial continues Iran-Contra questions

BALTIMORE (AP) — A former CIA agent embroiled in the Iran-Contra affair goes on trial Tuesday in a case expected to shed light on who made how much in the secret arms supply network to Iran and the Contra rebels in Nicaragua.

Thomas Clines, who retired from the CIA in 1978 after a 29-year career, is accused of under-reporting his earnings from arms sales on his 1985 and 1986 tax returns. He also is charged with failing to tell the Internal Revenue Service about overseas bank accounts.

Clines, of Middleburg, Va., pleaded innocent March 9 to all four counts. If convicted of all charges, Clines could be fined up to $1 million and sentenced to 16 years in prison.

"As I've said in open court, we thought the case should never have been brought," said Clines' attorney, Paula Jung-hans. "He intends to defend it vigorously."

She declined to comment further.

Prosecutors contend Clines reaped about $882,000 in commissions for helping buy and sell arms to Iran and the Contra rebels fighting the Marxist Sandinista government in Nicaragua. Some of the money was kept in a foreign account code-named "C.Tea," according to the congressional Iran-Contra report issued in November 1987.

Clines was in the arms business with Richard Secord, a retired Air Force major general, and Albert Hakim, an Iranian-born businessman, the indictment said.

The business allegedly operated in 1985 and 1986. It was directed by former National Security Adviser John Poindexter and retired Marine Lt. Col. Oliver North, a former National Security Council aide, court papers said.

"North and Poindexter played critical roles in providing the funds that Clines, Hakim and Secord used to pay for the weapons the Contras eventually received," according to court documents.

"Those funds also provided the source of the profits that Clines and his partners kept, which are at the heart of this case."

Prosecutors claim evidence will show that Clines received about $423,000 in 1985 and $459,000 in 1986.

Clines reported gross receipts of $265,000 for the tax year 1985 and $402,513 for 1986, the indictment said.

Hakim, who managed bank accounts in the Iran-contra affair, is a key witness in the case against Clines.

Hakim pleaded guilty Nov. 21, 1989, to a misdemeanor of supplementing North's salary. He was sentenced in February to two years of supervised probation and was fined $5,000.

Hakim was a principal shareholder of Lake Resources Inc., a company that pleaded guilty to stealing government property. That was done by diverting the proceeds from arms sales to Iran to the Contras.

The government also is expected to put Secord on the stand.

Secord pleaded guilty Nov. 8, 1989 to one felony count of making false statements to the Iran-Contra congressional committees.

Some wild plants may be on endangered lists

WASHINGTON (AP) — Endangered species pop up in the strangest places. Like flowerbeds.

Plant-protection activists say some species of bulbs bought to decorate American and European gardens are being collected by the millions in the wild, threatening to wipe out those flowers in their home turf.

"The world would lose an irreplaceable treasure," said Marjorie Arundel of Warrenton, Va., an adviser to the Garden Club of America's horticulture committee. "They're the ancestors of all of our spring bulbs today."

Arundel and other activists are urging American gardeners to buy only commercially propagated plants, which experts say make up at least 99 percent of the flower trade anyway.

"Wild-collected flowers are a small percentage of the trade, but a large percentage of certain kinds of plants," said Faith Campbell, director of the plant conservation program for the Natural Resources Defense Council, an environmental group.

Working with the World Wildlife Fund and the Garden Club of America, the NRDC has produced leaflets calling on gardeners to avoid most kinds of cyclamen, sternbergia and galanthus, or snowdrops, which they say are collected in the wild in Turkey.

Those three species are listed as endangered in the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species of Wild Fauna and Flora, or CITES. But this treaty — effective in fighting trade in some endangered animal skins, horns and tusks — has had little effect on the flower trade, Campbell said.

Snowdrops are greatly depleted in Turkey's Mediterranean regions, forcing traders to seek out sources in more remote regions.

The popular "Angel's Tears" narcissus are being collected in the wild, but experts are not sure if the source is Portugal or somewhere else.

Other wildflowers, such as trillium, are being collected from the wild in the United States and Canada. Japan, China, India and the Soviet Union appear to be the sources for still other rare flowers.

Some species of these plants may be produced by growers in the United States or Europe, but buyers are being counseled to check the origins as carefully as they can.

This may become easier, as a result of the decision last May by the Dutch Commodity Board for Ornamental Horticultural Products to require exporters to use a "Bulbs from Wild Sources" label to identify wild-collected plants.

Army halts advance on Mohawks

OKA, Quebec (AP) — Army commanders on Monday ordered troops to halt their advance on the last stronghold occupied by armed Mohawks as they tried to persuade the Indians to surrender.

Earlier Monday, a shot was fired as soldiers moved through a wooded area toward the Mohawk positions. Both Mohawk and army representatives denied shooting.

The incident took place as a nearly 2-month-old standoff wore on, with troops surrounding about two dozen members of the militant Mohawk Warrior's Society and 30 women and children holed up in a drug and alcohol detoxification center on Indian land in the Kahnatesake settlement.

Mohawk warriors with rifles and automatic weapons manned foxholes around the center, which was encircled by a tight cordon of troops, armored vehicles and barbed wire.

Lt. Gen. Kent Foster, commander for the Montreal region, told a news conference Monday, "The army's next move is to stay in place and keep the perimeter closed (around the detoxification center). There will be no more military movement. We will stay here until this is over."

Foster said the army has a phone line open to the Mohawks in the detoxification center.

He said the commander on the scene, Brig. Gen. Armand Roy, was negotiating with Terry Doxtater, a chief of the Six Nations Iroquois Confederacy, in an effort to persuade the Indians to lay down their arms.

Doxtater described the situation as "desperate."

"The people of the Pines (the Kahnatesake Mohawks) are not going to lay down their arms if the Canadian army moves in. This is a decision made by the men and the women," he said. "The army has created an environment which they hope will trigger the all-out bloody assault they seek."

Another Iroquois Confederacy chief, Bob Antone, said the negotiations centered on creation of a native peacekeeping force to replace the Quebec provincial police in Kahnatesake.

The Indians have said they will not give up their weapons without some guarantees of protection from police reprisals. They fear the Quebec police might seek revenge for the death of a policeman in a July 11 clash that triggered the Oka standoff.

On Sunday, about 350 soldiers demolished the last barricades blocking access to the Kahnatesake settlement and seized control of most of it. The Mohawk militants were confined to a small wooded area about the size of a football field around the detoxification center.

The Indians had erected the barricades at Kahnatesake and another Mohawk community, Kahnawake, in a dispute over plans by Oka town officials to expand a golf course onto what they claim is tribal land.

Year of the Woman encourages campus involvement

Rev. Stephen P. Newton, C.S.C.
Campus Ministry

"In the process of my search, I have become more and more convinced that 'womenspirit rising' is one of the most far-reaching social revolutions of our age, touching all dimensions of our lives, from personal identity to our most intimate relationships, to the shape of our social and ecclesial institutions, to the content of our systems of human knowledge. It has raised questions for which there are no ready answers. Its focus is not only justice for women, it is also about the shape of the future." -- Maria Riley, OP

University president Father Edward A. Malloy, C.S.C. proclaimed this academic year to be the Year of Women. He's a man. Some other men at Notre Dame, learning of this proclamation, were quick to ask: When will we have the Year of Men? Someone was heard to answer: every year so far has been the year of men.

The Year of Women is a year intended to investigate, celebrate and contemplate the effect that women have had and can have on certain universal, non-sexist questions: what does it mean to be human? what is the meaning of life, or is there one? if one, only one? or many? if many, are they interrelated? how?

The purpose of the year is not to further rifts that exist between the sexes in society at large and at Notre Dame in particular. The year is not intended to be a vehicle for determining (if either) sex is truly superior or better or more human.

Rather, the Year of Women can be -- at its best -- an opportunity to begin to understand what effect there can be on the campus and beyond, if women's issues were fully understood and integrated into the consciousness of more women and men.

These issues affect every aspect of our lives together, and programs are being developed for almost every area of our lives: literature, culture and art; law, history and politics; residence life; careers; health, recreation and safety; science, engineering and technology; spirituality, religion and education.

Because of what we do, Campus Ministry activities will be most concerned with areas dealing with the realm of the spirit. We will support all areas of involvement, but could use help in deciding how we might focus our own programs to partake in the Year of Women.

It has been suggested that in a culture that thinks of God as male, the male thinks of himself as God. How can that be challenged -- not just in the Church universal, but here at Notre Dame? What kinds of new thinking, speaking and praying might be called for? Who will design new models? What will they be?

It has been suggested that feminism is not a concept that divides women from men but one that is meant to point out equality of male and female. Are males and females equal? Does that mean they're the same? If equal, what structures do we have that deny that equality? What can be done about it? Who should do it? How?

What, if any, are the various attitudes in the Church at large and Notre Dame in particular that obstruct women in religion, spirituality and education? How have those attitudes become systemized? What denials prevent them from being eradicated?

Do you find your religious involvements to be passionate ones? Why or why not? If not, what can increase the passion in your spiritual life? What helps would you need?

What other questions need to be asked? Who is going to ask them? Who will help answer? Campus Ministry would like to know your views on all of these questions.

Need more questions? Consider the following from a feminist credo, quoted by Carter Heyward in her book: Our Passion for Justice:

"How do we come to answers, if we do not formulate questions? The questions we ask determine the type of lives we live, the kind of answers we seek. If we have only answers to meaningless questions, what good are they to us? Can we be both feminists/liberationists and still be faithful followers of our religious traditions? Indeed, what does it mean to follow a tradition? What does it mean to lead a tradition? How do we overcome the temptation to remain innocent -- not to deal with ultimate questions? Can we be innocent and responsible persons at the same time? Will our questions not lead us to conflict with others? Can we love without experiencing conflict? How far are we willing to go?"

Father Stephen P. Newton is Director of Special Projects at Campus Ministry and is a regular Viewpoint columnist.

Harrison Ford is 'Presumed Innocent'

PAIGE SMORON

assistant accent editor

"Presumed Innocent" by Scott Turow, one of the best-selling suspense thrillers of the 80's, is now a movie. (It was only a matter of time...)

It stars Harrison Ford as Rusty Sabich, as a surprisingly wimpy - but still likable - prosecutor. Sabich is assigned to investigate the murder of a beautiful (and highly aerobized) colleague, Carolyn Polhemus, with whom he'd been having - well, great sex.

Sabich becomes the prime suspect in the murder case, and as the investigation unravels, so does Sabich's life. The justice system to which he once committed himself is now threatening to destroy him.

While you're wondering whether Sabich lusted after Polhemus (Greta Scaachi) enough to kill her, new characters are introduced: Sabich's boss, the Chief Prosecuting Attorney (Brian Denehy); his lawyer (Raul Julia); his wife (Bonnie Bedelia); the judge (Paul Winfield); and as the plot unfolds, you can't help but think of everyone as a possible suspect.

The director is Alan J. Pakula, who also directed "All the President's Men." There is a lot of the same mood in "Presumed Innocent," as the corruption uncovered goes deeper and deeper into the system.

The casting is phenomenal, and with all the talent in the film, there are some great performances. Raul Julia stands out as Sandy Stern, Sabich's smooth and savvy attorney.

If at all possible, read the book before seeing the movie. It's more complicated and gripping than the movie, and you'll take it everywhere until you find out who the killer is. (Okay, you probably won't bring it to the Miami game. But you might want it for half-time...)

The plot has been simplified for the movie, so there are fewer suspects and possibilities, which was part of the fun of the book. But even so, the evidence is difficult to keep track of. You'll find yourself coming up with theory after theory as each clue is uncovered. (That doorman looked pretty suspicious...)

"Presumed Innocent" isn't the kind of movie you can see just once. Be sure to go again and bring a friend who doesn't know the ending. Nudge them periodically (about every 10 minutes) and ask, "Who do you think did it?" When they venture a guess, raise an eyebrow and muse smugly, "Hmmm. Interesting." Odds are you'll have popcorn in your hair before the trial scenes are over.

The Sundays offer fresh variation on the pop music scene

JOHN LANE

accent writer

A band that gained a good deal of recognition in the United States this summer is the The Sundays, with the release of their debut album "Reading, Writing and Arithmetic." In a year that has produced few interesting recordings, The Sundays offer a refreshing change.

The British quartet burst onto the U.K. scene last year when they released their first single "Can't Be Sure," which prompted many critics to dub them Britain's next big thing since The Smiths and The Cocteau Twins. That is a lot of pressure for a relatively humble and unambitious band, but they delivered with "Reading, Writing and Arithmetic." The Sundays rely heavily on the acoustic guitar of David Gavurin and the sugary sweet vocals of Harriet Wheeler, the band's two founding members. Gavurin's simple melodies set up Wheeler's beautiful voice, which is sort of a cross between Edie Brickell and the singer from The Cocteau Twins. Reading is full of great pop songs like "Here's Where The Story Ends," which gained moderate play on U.S. radio stations this summer, and "You're Not The Only One I Know," as well as a couple of hard songs like "A Certain Someone."

Humility is a way of life for The Sundays. The band is truly amazed at their rapid ascent and critical acclaim. Gavurin and Wheeler, who started writing songs together just for the fun of it, realize that they were in the right place at the right time. Consequently, their songs are not very pretentious. Wheeler and Gavurin write the music to their songs first, then create the lyrics, which usually depict normal, everyday life. Pretty unusual for a band being billed as England's next big thing.

Any fan of good pop music should look into The Sundays debut album "Reading, Writing and Arithmetic." You can catch The Sundays live (and also miss the Michigan game) in Chicago on September 15.

World Party's album 'Goodbye Jumbo' is upbeat with a message

JOHN LANE

Accent Writer

One of the best pop albums to come out in 1990 is World Party's "Goodbye Jumbo." The album is basically a solo recording, written, produced, and recorded by ex-Waterboy Karl Wallinger, but with occasional assistance from Sinéad O'Connor and keyboardist Guy Chambers, among others.

Wallinger decided to lighten up the music on Goodbye Jumbo but retain the politically-conscious lyrics that were a staple of World Party's 1986 debut Private Revolution. Goodbye Jumbo results with a variety of songs, ranging from classic pop ("Put The Message In The Box") to rhythm and blues ("Ain't Gonna Come 'Til I'm Ready," "Show Me To The Top") to blues rock ("Is It Too Late," "Thankyou World") to slow songs ("Love Street," "Sweet Soul Dream.") All the songs, while you can tell they are done by the same band, sound different. The diversity of songs indicate Wallinger's love for 60s and 70s pop as well as his willingness to try new sounds. While most of the lyrics are of a serious nature, Goodbye Jumbo is basically a light, upbeat record.

Wallinger, a Greenpeace spokesman, writes many songs about saving the earth and man's destruction of the planet. On "Put The Message In The Box," he writes "See the world in just one grain of sand.../Don't let it slip right thru your hand." On "Is It Too Late?," a song suggesting that man may have been too slow in trying to save the planet, Wallinger writes "Talk about biting the hand that feeds/sitting there watching as it bleeds." Goodbye Jumbo ends, however, with "Thankyou World," an upbeat song praising the earth and life's simple pleasures, indicating that maybe Wallinger doesn't have such a bleak outlook on the future of the planet.

If you haven't heard Goodbye Jumbo from World Party yet, check it out soon. It may be the best pop album so far of 1990.

Highsmith dealt; Morris, Turner, Wright released

Alonzo Highsmith went to Dallas and Joe Morris, Eric Wright, Keena Turner, Gary Hogeboom, Matt Bahr, Donald Igwebuike and Cris Carter into limbo Monday as NFL teams cut down to the 47-man roster limit.

Highsmith, the Oilers' No. 1 draft pick in 1987, was underutilized in an offense that had four players competing for one position.

He was sent to his college coach, Jimmy Johnson, for some of the high draft picks the Cowboys got for Herschel Walker and fills the running back void Dallas has had since Walker left last season.

Some of the other big names were just waived, although some could be recalled — many teams cut players, then re-claim them after they clear waivers.

Dallas, for example, waived Keith Willis, its only kicker but hoped to bring him back if no one else grabs him within 24 hours.

"We hope Willis is not claimed," coach Jimmy Johnson said. "We looked at our roster to see where we are safest. We should be able to re-obtain rights to these players tomorrow."

And Detroit waived three running backs, leaving Barry Sanders as the only one at that position. "I wouldn't be surprised if you see a few of these guys back here in the future," coach Wayne Fontes said.

Fontes might want to take a look at Morris, the Giants' all-time leading rusher, who was caught in a glut of running backs that includes No. 1 pick Rodney Hampton and Lewis Tillman.

But he really lost out to 33-year-old Ottis Anderson, kept because he's a better receiver, blocker and short-yardage runner. Last year, Anderson rushed for more than 1,000 yards after Morris broke a foot in the last game of the preseason.

"I think Joe Morris has made a very significant and continuous contribution to this club, and to the Bill Parcells regime," coach Bill Parcells said of Morris, who rushed for 5,296 yards in eight years with New York, including 1,516 in 1986, when New York won the Super Bowl.

"In the length of time that I have been here he is one of several guys who has driven the car and not been a passenger."

It was a bad day overall for the Morris family — Joe's brother Jamie, signed by New England as a Plan B free agent, was cut by the Patriots.

Wright, a cornerback, and Turner, a linebacker, were two of the five 49ers who had played on all four of the team's Super Bowl winners. The others are quarterback Joe Montana, safety Ronnie Lott and wide receiver Mike Wilson, the journeyman who once again survived.

"They told me that they were waiving me and I really didn't ask for a reason," said Turner. "I still feel that I can play."

Among the other name players to go were Carter, who caught 45 passes for Philadelphia last season, 11 for touchdowns; the Eagles' third-string quarterback, 13-year veteran Matt Cavanaugh, Hogeboom, Phoenix' only veteran quarterback, and Buford Jordan, New Orleans' starting fullback the past four years.

Dallas cut three running backs it recently acquired —

Timmy Smith, who rushed for a record 205 yards for Washington in the 1988 Super Bowl and former No. 1 picks Terrence Flagler and Lorenzo Hampton.

Igwebuike, Tampa Bay's all-time leading scorer, lost his job to free agent Steve Christie. The Bucs also cut Lars Tate, their leading rusher the last two years. Bahr, the 11-year kicker for the Browns, was beaten out by Jerry Kauric, a Canadian league veteran. He took an injury settlement because of a back injury suffered against Green Bay in an exhibition.

Cleveland also cut quarterback Pat Ryan, linebackers Clifford Charlton and Larry McGrew and defensive end Daryl Sims.

The New York Jets traded fullback Roger Vick, a three-year starter, to Philadelphia for draft choices.

Drabek four-hits Phils en route to 18th victory

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Doug Drabek won his 18th game by tossing a four-hitter to pitch the Pittsburgh Pirates past the Phillies 4-1 on Monday.

Drabek (18-5), improving to 9-1 since the All-Star break, has pitched three complete-game victories over the Phillies this season, allowing just seven hits and two earned runs (0.67 ERA) in 27 innings.

Trying to become only the Pirates' third 20-game winner in the last 31 seasons, Drabek is 42-19 after the All-Star break in his career and has yielded six earned runs in 37 2-3 innings (1.19 ERA) while going 4-0 in his last five starts.

Mets 9, Cardinals 3

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Dwight Gooden gave up six hits over seven innings to win for the 12th time in his last 13 decisions and Kevin McReynolds drove in four runs as New York beat St. Louis for its seventh straight victory.

Gooden (15-6) struck out five and walked two before Wally Whitehurst relieved to start the seventh. Whitehurst finished, giving up three runs and three hits in the ninth.

McReynolds drove in the Mets' first run in the fourth inning with a double and hit his 20th home run with two on in the ninth. Former Cardinal Tom Herr and Darryl Strawberry added three hits each for the Mets, who are 10-5 against St. Louis this season.

Braves 8, Reds 6

ATLANTA (AP) — Consecutive doubles by Tommy Gregg and Andres Thomas broke a seventh-inning tie as Atlanta beat Cincinnati for its fourth straight victory.

With two outs in the seventh and the score 6-6, Gregg doubled against Tim Layana (5-2) and Thomas followed with a double. Jim Vatcher added an RBI single.

Mark Grant (2-2), who gave up two hits in four scoreless innings, got the victory in relief of starter Steve Avery, who yielded six runs and seven hits in three innings. Jeff Parrett worked two innings for his second save.

Expos 3, Cubs 2

MONTREAL (AP) — Andres Galarraga singled home Delino DeShields from third base with two outs in the 12th inning to lift Montreal past Chicago.

DeShields opened the 12th with a single off Randy Kramer (0-2) and was sacrificed to second by Otis Nixon before moving to third on a single by Marquis Grissom. Grissom went to second on Tim Wallach's grounder and Larry Walker, a .238 hitter, was walked intentionally before Galarraga singled up the middle.

Steve Frey (7-2) pitched one inning for the victory.

White Sox 4, K.C. 2

Carlton Fisk extended his major league record for home runs by a catcher to 330 with a tie-breaking shot in the sixth inning and Bobby Thigpen set a record with his 47th save.

The upper deck homer was Fisk's 15th of the season and 351st of his career, moving him into a tie for 41st place on the all-time list with Dick Allen. The White Sox added an insurance run in the eighth off reliever Jeff Montgomery when Sammy Sosa was hit by a pitch, stole second and scored on a single by Robin Ventura.

Bobby Bonilla (25), pictured here sliding into home plate earlier this season in a game against the St. Louis Cardinals, helped the Pittsburgh Pirates to their second consecutive victory, a 4-1 win over the Philadelphia Phillies.

Fisk's homer made a winner of reliever Wayne Edwards (4-3) and ended a six-game winning streak for Kevin Appier (11-5), who last lost to Toronto on July 28. Thigpen pitched the ninth for his 47th save in 54 opportunities, breaking the mark of 46 set by Dave Righetti of the New York Yankees in 1986.

A's 9, Red Sox 5

Terry Steinbach capped a five-run first inning with a three-run homer as Oakland ended Boston's 10-game winning streak, longest in the American League this year. In a possible playoff preview between the AL's division leaders, the A's quickly kayoed rookie Dana Kiecker (6-7).

Oakland's Scott Sanderson (14-9) struggled for five innings, allowing three runs. Oakland's Rickey Henderson hit a solo homer off Wes Gardner in the seventh while Mark McGwire and Willie McGee had two-run singles for the A's, who maintained their 6 1/2-game lead over Chicago in the AL West. Despite the loss, the Red Sox remained 6 1/2 in front of Toronto in the AL East.

The Red Sox had two-run homers by Mike Marshall, his third, and Tom Brunansky, his 10th.

Texas 6, Indians 2

Nolan Ryan got his 302nd career victory by holding Cleveland to one run and two hits in eight innings. The 43-year-old Ryan (13-7) struck out eight and walked two. John Barfield yielded a pinch homer to Mitch Webster in the ninth. Mike Walker (1-5) was the loser as the Indians suffered their eighth straight loss.

Texas took a 2-0 lead in the third on RBI singles by Gary Pettis and Jack Daugherty.

Becker, Graf return to form

NEW YORK (AP) — Steffi Graf sent Jennifer Capriati back to school with a lesson she'll never forget, a two-set course in playing like a champion in the U.S. Open.

Graf, the two-time defending champ, played almost perfectly Monday to reach the quarterfinals as she dazzled 14-year-old Capriati with powerful groundstrokes and defied a packed crowd cheering for the nervous ninth-grader.

Graf's 6-1, 6-2 victory was complete in every respect, a 53-minute slaughter that was far more convincing than her 6-2, 6-4 triumph over Capriati at Wimbledon, also in the fourth round.

Boris Becker, the men's defending champion and Graf's West German compatriot, played doggedly for more than three hours before finding a way to beat gutsy Australian Darren Cahill, 2-6, 6-2, 6-3, 3-6, 6-4, and gain the quarters.

Becker will play No. 9 Aaron Krickstein, who beat Amos Mansdorf 6-3, 6-4, 6-4.

America's top player, fourth-seeded Andre Agassi, had an easy time getting to the quarters, beating Jay Berger 7-5, 6-0, 6-2.

Graf next goes against 12th-seeded Jana Novotna, who beat No. 7 Katerina Maleeva 6-4, 6-2. Fourth-seeded Zina Garrison, beating Nathalie Tauziat of France 6-1, 7-5. Garrison will meet Arantxa Sanchez Vicario, a 6-4, 6-3 winner over Barbara Paulus.

Graf's victory came on the same day when she was ranked No. 1 for the 160th straight week, a record for both men and women.

It was obvious early in the first set, when Capriati seemed tentative and her usually solid forehands and backhands floated long or into the net, that she was suffering a case of stage fright.

"At the beginning I couldn't hit a ball," said Capriati, overly excited "just going out there knowing that you're on the stadium court, and everybody's going to be out there watching."

Capriati had said before the match that she was "psyched up" and ready to attack Graf. She said she told herself at the start of play, "keep moving, attack a lot, serve well."

But nothing came. Instead, she stood and watched Graf as if trying to record in her memory how she plays.

"If you don't lose, you don't learn," Capriati said. "Every match you lose, you learn something from it. At first, I wasn't doing anything, not making shots, not coming to the net. Next time I can't let that happen. She's definitely still at another level."

Buddy Ryan's Philadelphia Eagles will rise to the top of the NFC East as QB Randall Cunningham will hook WR Mike Bellamy up with the Offensive Rookie of the Year award. The New York Giants' defense will propel them to a wild card spot; Coach Bill Parcells always gets the most out of his players, and explosive second-year RB Dave Meggett will provide his share of fireworks.

The Washington Redskins are terribly talented at the skill positions with WRs Art Monk, Ricky Sanders and Gary Clark, RBs James Wilder, Earnest Byner, Gerald Riggs and Kelvin Bryant, and QB Mark Rypien. But the 'Skins don't have much else, and should finish 9-7. Rookie RB Anthony Thompson may be the lone bright spot for the Phoenix Cardinals, and Jimmy Johnson's Dallas Cowboys will be lucky if they win two games.

The Minnesota Vikings are a lot like the Bills; they have a lot of talent, but they spend a lot of time fighting amongst themselves. Look for the Vikings to keep their battles on the field this year and cruise to a 13-3 record behind defensive linemen Chris Doleman and Keith Millard. The Detroit Lions will continue to improve until somebody finds a way to stop RB Barry Sanders (1,470 yards rushing as a rookie last year), but will come up just short of a wild card spot.

The Green Bay Packers will prove that last year was a fluke by slumping to 6-10 despite sterling years from WR Sterling Sharpe and LB Tim Harris (19 1/2 sacks in 1989). The Chicago Bears will continue to fall toward the bottom of the NFC Central; RB Neal Anderson can't carry the whole offense on his shoulders; and the Tampa Bay Buccaneers will have their typical 5-11 season.

Finally, the 49ers will win the NFC West on the way to their third straight Super Bowl title

San Francisco has talent, experience and Joe Montana, the best QB ever to play the game. The Los Angeles Rams are the second-best team in the NFL, but they have the misfortune of playing in the same division as the 'Niners; still, they should easily sew up a wild card.

QB John Fourcade led the New Orleans Saints to victory in their last three games last year, but with a weak defense, the Saints should be grateful if they finish 8-8. And finally, the Atlanta Falcons will bring up the rear in the NFC West, although they should be better this year after the acquisition of WR Andre Rison and OG Chris Hinton from Indianapolis.

So there you have it. I just hope my picks fare better this fall than the Royals and the Cardinals did this summer.

The chaos that is ticket distribution officially began at 2 p.m. Sunday afternoon, as die-hard Irish followers Bob Wincer, Greg Wong and Company staked their claim as first in a long line of seniors.

Wincer, Wong & Co., whose name might conjure up images of a monolithic law firm, are actually four individuals who represent a group of 26 students from Dillon and Morrissey who have made the quest to be first in line a yearly ritual of their own.

"We've been first in line for three out of four years. Sophomore year we weren't first," noted a visibly proud Greg Wong. "We tried to line up last night (Saturday) at 4 p.m., but security broke us up."

While some may be confused about why such an unconventional slumber party is so popular, there is no mystery for Wincer, Wong & Co.

"We just like to do this because of the fun and the people. We might have a different opinion tomorrow morning, but it's sure a lot of fun tonight."

Late-night camping activities included (allegedly) barbecuing, hot dog- and marshmallow-roasting, consumption of (non-alcoholic) light beer and other miscellaneous forms of relaxation. Of course, the ubiquitous Notre Dame security staff enhances the entertainment value of the experience.

"Security has been sort of picky this year," noted one student who spoke on condition of anonymity. "Security took numbers, and they've been pretty cool. Security really hasn't been much trouble. Of course, the seniors tend to keep themselves under control."

Of course, different people came to sleep out with different expectations. While a handful of zealots told of hopes for a late-night sighting of Irish head coach Lou Holtz, most students polled simply expressed a desire to have a good time.

"This is just lots of fun," attested Greg Wong. "We like camping out, and I think that we're men of courage. Really, this is something we can tell our grandchildren."

A surprising number of the early-morning revelers were participating in the renowned right of fall for their first time, including some who told of no desire to have better seats than they might have had by lining up the next morning.

"I've never lined up out here before," explained Jay Blount. "It's a good party, a good chance to socialize and drink Sharp's and Canada Dry ginger ale."

"This is just for fun, we don't care where we sit," concurred Kelly Kolodzie and Angela Sheve. "We don't have any homework tonight, and this is something we wanted to do before we graduate."

"I want to watch the stars," added senior class president Mike Shinnick. "Senior week was great, and everyone is excited about football season, so sleeping out adds to the fun. By the way, since the senior picnic was rained out, it's been rescheduled for Wednesday from 7-9 p.m. outside of Senior Bar - free food, of course."

One final enticement to sleeping out (at least for male students) was the overwhelming ratio of women to men (3 to 1). Such a chance for conversation and companionship was the prime motivator for "Frank," who summarized his reason for sleeping out in one simple phrase: "There are more girls out here."

However, all was not pleasant outside the ACC, as was attested to by several Saint Mary's students. While the Belles of Saint Mary's also expressed a wish to do what they had never done before and sacrifice their blood to hordes of mosquitos, they insisted that they were not holding spots in line for any males.

"We're not wimps," exclaimed Peggy Kennedy of Holy Cross. "There have been rumors of a tornado warning, but that doesn't bother us."

"Of course, it does bother us that we have to pay $15.30 per game ($92 total cost for six games) when Notre Dame students pay $11.50 per game. We've always paid more than Notre Dame students. With all this emphasis placed on improving relations between our two schools, how can we sit amongst Notre Dame students and still pay more?" posited one Saint Mary's student. "With so much talk of equality, we're not very equal. Twenty-three dollars is a big difference, considering the fact that we're getting the same seats."

Today, juniors will purchase tickets, with law and graduate students lining up on Wednesday, sophomores on Thursday, and freshmen on Friday.

Volleyball team falters in weekend tournament

Notre Dame drops tough matches to Montana, Mississippi and Washington State in tourney

By MIKE KAMRADT
Sports Writer

It's gut-check time for the women's volleyball team. After three straight losses this weekend, the Irish will need to pull themselves together before this weekend's Notre Dame Invitational. The Irish dropped matches to Montana (15-13, 4-15, 8-15, 7-15), Mississippi (10-15, 14-16, 8-15) and Washington State (9-15, 3-15, 9-15).

"Admittedly, I'm disappointed," said Head Coach Art Lambert. "We used a number of different line-ups and combinations. Through the pre-season you think you've got things set up. But then you realize your choices are based on practice against one another. In pre-season the confidence stays high and the team stays loose."

"That doesn't hold when you meet other teams, though. People don't fit together as they do in practice."

The Irish started out alright in their first match against Montana, winning 15-13.

"In retrospect, we were lucky to win that game," said Lambert. "We had a run in serving and they couldn't pass the ball at the end of the game and we came back to win."

Things quickly went awry as Montana swept the next three games.

Offensively, Notre Dame only registered a .085 kill percentage (kills-errors/total attempts), while Montana had a .200. The Irish were also beaten badly in assists, 45-28, and recorded only 35 digs to Montana's 54.

Nothing went well against Mississippi.

"We beat ourselves," explained Lambert. "It was more a case of us not doing the things we should be than them beating us. There were so many unforced errors it was incredible."

The Irish had 23 attack (kill) errors and 10 service errors in addition to only 31 digs for the match.

The dismal weekend continued against Washington State. The Irish went three more games without a win, running their winless streak to nine. The Irish were doubled in attack percentage as Washington State registered a .443 to only .221 for the Irish women.

However, the weekend was not without some bright spots for the Irish.

"I was real pleased with Jen Slosar at left side," said Lambert. "She hit extremely well against Washington State. Janelle Karlan did a good job setting in the last two matches."

Slosar led the team for the weekend in kills (23) and attack percentage (.296). She did most of that damage to Washington State, who saw the junior outside hitter blast them with 18 kills in 35 attempts.

Karlan, a freshman, racked up 74 of the 97 Irish assists for the weekend and may have brought the Irish the stability and consistency they need at setter.

Sophomore middle hitter Jessica Fieblekorn was second in kills with 22 and led the team in digs with 15. Colleen Wagner pounded down 19 kills.

The scary thing about the past weekend is that none of the teams the Irish faced would rival some of the powerhouses they will face later in the year.

"None of these teams would even be in the top 30 by any stretch of the imagination," said Lambert. "If we want to be a Top 20 team, we can't lose to teams like that. We have to overcome what happened. It can be done, but it won't be easy. This coming weekend, we'll find out what we're made of."

ners for this prestigious award. Zorich could become the third Irish lineman, and the first since defensive end Ross Browner in 1976, to win the Outland Trophy, but he will have to have an outstanding season to do so.

Zorich, a 6-1, 266-pound senior who was a consensus All-American last season, is a converted linebacker who relies primarily on his speed (he runs the 40-yard dash in 4.68 seconds) and quickness to make the play. He is also among the strongest players on the Irish squad; he bench pressed 455 pounds this past spring.

Defensive tackle Russell Maryland of Miami might be listed as a co-favorite along with Zorich to win the Outland Trophy. Like Zorich, this 6-2, 273-pound fifth-year senior hails from Chicago; but unlike Zorich, Maryland was not even recruited out of high school. Maryland has been overshadowed in the past by outstanding Miami linemen such as Greg Mark, Bill Hawkins, and Cortez Kennedy.

This year Maryland will be the marquee lineman for the Hurricane, and he should be ready to dominate. The returning All-American had 83 tackles last year, and will depend on his outstanding foot speed (he runs a 4.8 40-yard dash) to get into enemy backfields.

If Zorich and Maryland are shut out, look for senior nose tackle Moe Gardner of Illinois to sneak in and pick up the award. Gardner's supporting cast at Illinois has neither the talent nor the hype to compete with Notre Dame or Miami, but if the Illini defense comes together and propels the team to the Rose Bowl, Gardner will receive a lot of credit and a lot of votes.

Gardner is small for a defensive lineman at 6-2 and 250 pounds, but he is noted for intense, physical play, and he could inspire his teammates to achieve a higher level in their play.

The top offensive lineman in the Outland race is offensive guard Ed King of Auburn. The 6-4, 284-pound junior is being touted as the best offensive lineman in college football. If Auburn has a great season as expected, King could make a run at Zorich or Maryland.

Another offensive lineman, 6-4, 300-pound fifth-year senior center John Flannery of Syracuse, passed up a chance to be picked in the first round of the NFL draft in order to play in his final year of eligibility for the Orangemen. Flannery is an outstanding run blocker and long snapper who should be considered at the top of the list of dark horse candidates.

Other dark horses include defensive tackle Scott Evans of Oklahoma, offensive tackle Stacy Long of Clemson, offensive guard Joe Garten of Colorado and defensive tackle George Williams of Notre Dame.

The player who wins the Outland Trophy will not get as much recognition as the Heisman winner, but at least he will have the satisfaction of knowing that he is the best player where it matters the most—in the trenches.

DuBose is perfect fit for Darnell's new defense

Linebacker should platoon with Grimm and Stonebreaker following strong spring showing

By CHRIS COONEY
Assistant Sports Editor

New Notre Dame defensive coordinator Gary Darnell wants the 1990 Irish defense to "explode" off the ball.

For inside linebacker Demetrius "Demo" DuBose, the approach may have landed him a starting job.

DuBose's speed, along with excellent winter conditioning and added confidence, impelled the 6-2, 223-pound sophomore to an impressive spring that included working with Michael Stonebreaker on the No. 1 unit for the last two weeks of practice. His performance caused many to speculate that he would replace senior Donn Grimm at the first-line position.

"The new system has really helped me a lot," said DuBose, who runs the 40-yard dash in 4.68 seconds. "We're geared toward a running defense that's good for me because I get to use my speed."

While the defense under former coordinator Barry Alvarez was a little more structured and included more lateral shuffle-stepping, Darnell has implemented a plan that allows the linebackers to read offenses more, rely on their instincts and rapidly commit themselves upfield.

Although DuBose learned both the "Sam" and "Mike" positions in his freshman year, this season he should spend most of the time in the "Mike" slot, a place where he can combine both strength and speed. DuBose beefed himself up over the winter, adding 15 pounds to his frame, while increasing his bench press from 325 to 355 lbs. and boosting his vertical jump from 29 1/2 to 31 1/2 inches.

As for who starts from game to game, DuBose said it doesn't matter to him, because Darnell has assured both Grimm and DuBose that they'll see plenty of playing time.

Demetrius DuBose

"Donnie and I are both needed," said DuBose. "so it's not a big deal who starts. We're both going to play a lot."

The trio of DuBose, Grimm and Stonebreaker should give Notre Dame one of the best corps of linebackers in the nation. Rotating the three is reminiscent of the 1988 national championship season when the lethal combination of Stonebreaker, Ned Bolcar and Wes Pritchett was one of the most feared in the nation.

"We're definitely going to be one of the best (group of linebackers)," said DuBose. "Everyone is just so good. If one guy goes down, we always can send in someone who's just as good."

DuBose attributed his rise within the Irish defense to more than just his quick footspeed. The Seattle native said the winter gave him time to mature, get used to school and dedicate himself to earning a spot on the starting roster.

"I've improved my mental attitude and grown up a lot," said DuBose. "I realized that I had the chance to play, or even start, for the best college team in the country."

DuBose showed signs of his talent last season, appearing in all of Notre Dame's last 10 games and completing his rookie year at the Orange Bowl, where he had two tackles against Colorado, including one for an eight-yard loss.

The contribution wasn't surprising. A three year starter at Bishop O'Dea High School, DuBose played linebacker, receiver, tight end and fullback, leading his team to unbeaten seasons his junior and senior years. As a senior, DuBose's 120 tackles and eight interceptions earned him all-state honors, as well as player of the year in Seattle.

Despite all the attention, DuBose isn't about to relax now. He thinks he and the rest of the linebackers still need some work before the opener versus Michigan.

"We need to work on the little things," said DuBose. "And we're having some problems with the fundamentals."

But, DuBose adds, "We're going to be ready."

When the defense explodes in Notre Dame Stadium on Sept. 15th, "Demo" plans to be its igniter.

Zorich among Outland Trophy favorites

The Heisman candidates get all the hype. The players who score touchdowns and complete passes always become the media darlings during the college football seasons.

Yet the experts say that the game is won or lost in the trenches. If this is true, the candidates for the Outland Trophy, awarded each year to the best interior lineman in the country, deserve at least as much attention as their smaller, fleetier Heisman-chasing colleagues.

Observer Staff Report

Miami, Fla., is the top team in the first National College Sportswriters Football Poll.

The Hurricanes, who have won the national championship two of the past three seasons, received 16 first-place votes and 449.5 total points in the panel of college journalists across the country.

The poll, organized and founded by staff members of The Observer, will appear weekly in college newspapers across the country. More than 30 writers will eventually cast votes in the poll when classes begin at their respective schools.

Notre Dame, which won the national title in 1989, was second in the poll. The Irish, who open the season Sept. 15 against Michigan, received six first-place votes and tallied 432.5 points.

Florida State, which defeated Nebraska in last year's Fiesta Bowl and finished 10-2, is third with 403 points. Auburn was fourth with two first-place votes and 387 total points, while Michigan was fifth with 339 points.

Colorado, 0-0-1 after a 31-31 tie with Tennessee in the Disneyland Pigskin Classic two weeks ago, received 312 points for sixth place. Southern California, 1-0 after beating Syracuse in the Kickoff Classic, gained 301 points for seventh place, and Tennessee, 1-0-1, had 284 points for eighth place.

Nebraska had 267 points for ninth place, while Clemson received 262 points to round out the first 10.

Illinois received 193 points for 11th place followed by Texas A&M in 12th with 172 points. Alabama, which lost to Miami in last year's Sugar Bowl, and Virginia, a co-favorite in the Atlantic Coast Conference this fall, tied for 13th place with 170 points.

Perennial Big Ten power Ohio State is 15th with 130 points followed by Arkansas in 16th with 119 points.

Rounding out the first 20 were Pittsburgh, Brigham Young, Penn State and UCLA.

to overcome the humiliation of the 55-10 shellacking the 'Niners inflicted on them in Super Bowl XXIV? With the National Football League season less than one week away, I feel obliged to answer these and several other questions. Before you take anything written here too seriously, though, keep in mind that in April I picked the Kansas City Royals and the St. Louis Cardinals to win their divisions.

Beginning with the AFC East, the Buffalo Bills have the most talent in the AFC on paper now that RB Thurman Thomas and LB Shane Conlan have been signed. The fact remains, however, that the Bills were 0-4 in the preseason and were plagued by internal strife last year. Still, with a defense led by Bruce Smith and overrated LB Cornelius Bennett, Buffalo can't help but win the watered-down AFC East.

The improved Miami Dolphins, featuring hard-hitting safeties Louis Oliver and Jarvis Williams, could give the Bills a run for their money but will fall short, mostly because of an offensive line which no longer adequately protects steadily declining QB Dan Marino. And the rest of the division?

Indianapolis super-rookie QB Jeff George will have a nightmarish first season (shades of Troy Aikman?) without suspended RB Eric Dickerson in the backfield. The New England Patriots have talent at wide receiver (Irving Fryar, Hart Lee Dykes, Greg McMurtry) and running back (Jon Stephens), but that's about the only good thing you can say about them, and the New York Jets are just plain bad.

The AFC Central, on the other hand, may be the most balanced division in the league. Cincinnati, with its high-powered offense, will return to the form which turned Riverfront Stadium into a jungle in 1988. QB Boomer Esiason, RB James Brooks (1,239 yards on 221 carries in 1989) and TE Rodney Homan should put more than enough points on the board to offset the blunders of the weak Bengal defensive front seven.

First-year Houston Oilers Coach Jack Pardee has the ideal QB for his run-and-shoot offense in Warren Moon. Fleet receivers Drew Hill and Ernest Givins should have a field day in the new offense, as the Oilers should secure a wild card spot. Meanwhile, the Cleveland Browns will slide to 7-9 against a difficult schedule and the Pittsburgh Steelers will find out that their magnificent performance at the end of 1989 was just a fluke.

The defending AFC champs from Denver will have their troubles this year. The Broncos will manage to secure a wild card, but they will have a tough time shaking off the memory of last year's Super Bowl. The Kansas City Chiefs, meanwhile, will unleash RB Christian Okoye, who led the league with 1,480 rushing yards in 1989, and a deep and talented defense in their rise to the top of the AFC West.

The rest of the West is weak. With Jay Schroeder at QB, Coach Art Shell will have a hard time resurrecting the Raiders of old whether his club plays in Oakland or L.A. The Raiders will still finish ahead of San Diego and Seattle, although the Chargers may get back on track in a year or two with GM Bobby Beathard at the helm.
