Iraq lashes out at east and west as Kuwaiti oil burns

DHAHRAN, Saudi Arabia (AP) — A cornered Iraq lashed out at enemies east and west Tuesday with terror from the sky, firing missiles at both Saudi Arabia and Israel. One Scud slammed into homes in Tel Aviv and pushed Israel closer to joining the Persian Gulf war.

At least three people died and 70 were wounded in Tel Aviv when the new U.S.-supplied Patriot defense system failed to stop the incoming Iraqi missile, Israeli military officials said.

But the Patriot interceptor missiles did their job against Scuds falling toward this Saudi city, site of a major Operation Desert Storm base.

Up the Persian Gulf coast, the oil-pumping heart of Kuwait burned through the day Tuesday, spewing black clouds of smoke across the sky in what some saw as a bid by Iraq to screen its troops from punishing air attacks. Others suggested it might be a prelude to an Iraqi withdrawal.

Nearby, in the drizzle and mist of the northern Saudi front lines, Iraqi tanks have been shuttling from one hardened position to another, and Iraqi gunners have fired sporadically on U.S. lines, officers reported.

"He still has a lot of firepower," said a Marine intelligence officer, Col. Ron Richard. "... This is not an enemy that is going to go easy."

Pro-life supporters gather in anniversary of Roe v Wade

By KATE MANUEL
News Writer

Abortion opponents from throughout the Michiana area gathered Tuesday outside the Federal Court Building in downtown South Bend for a memorial procession commemorating the eighteenth anniversary of the Roe v Wade decision legalizing abortion.

Cynthia Simmons, president of St. Joseph County Right to Life, said, "The silent memorial procession—whose theme is 'Abortion Stops a Beating Heart'—commemorates the twenty-eight million babies that have died by abortion." Approximately 100 people participated in the procession.

Simmons compared legalized abortion to a war zone. "The womb is a very unsafe place. We feel there is a war against the unborn," she said.

She said, "One out of every three children conceived is killed. It's more unsafe to be in the womb these days than to be in the front lines of the Persian Gulf."

Joseph Maneri, a senior who is a member of Notre Dame Right to Life, participated in the hour-long procession because he believes abortion is one of the most important issues in society today.

"The number of unborn babies killed in a year has to force you to come out and do something," he said.

In addition to a reversal of the Roe v. Wade decision, Maneri and his fellow marchers would like to see the passage of a human life amendment, protecting all those who have no opportunity to speak for their lives.

"Euthanasia is becoming more prevalent in our society.

There is a tie-in there; both are killing the helpless. I would like to see a human life amendment protecting all periods from conception to birth to natural death," said Maneri.

A South Bend resident participating in the procession said, "The least safe place to be today is in the womb. Our society is sponsoring an attack on the helpless, chiefly, but not only, those in the womb. They cannot 'choose' whether to be carried through the nine months of pregnancy or to be aborted. It is a matter of who's choosing. The helpless by nature do not have a voice to choose. That's why I'm here today, that's why I want to see the reversal of Roe v Wade and a human life amendment."

Although Simmons had expected nearly a thousand abortion opponents to participate in the procession, which has been gaining participants each year, approximately one hundred actually took part.

Maneri was one of the few representing Notre Dame Right to Life at the procession. Most group members had gone by bus to Washington D. C. to take part in demonstrations there.

Twenty-four hour lounge opens tonight on-campus

By ANN MARIE HARTMAN
News Writer

It took nearly three years to create an on-campus, non-dorm, twenty-four hour lounge where students can retreat when the clock strikes perietals.

With the help of Joe Cassidy, director of Student Activities, our student government leaders, Rob Pasin and Fred Tombar, have made it happen.

Pasin and Tombar initiated the idea of a twenty-four hour lounge over the summer. Cassidy gave his approval to use the basement of LaFortune, but the funding to carry out the lounge did not exist in LaFortune's yearly budget.

In November, Pasin and Tombar submitted a proposal to the budget committee asking for funds to finance a twenty-four hour lounge in LaFortune's basement. The committee agreed to grant $3500 to the student government which would defray the costs of the lounge's student monitor. The money to pay the salary of the student monitor came from the contingency fund of the Student Senate Budget Committee.

If the lounge is a success, Cassidy has said that he will include the lounge's costs in LaFortune's costs for the 1991-1992 school year. "I hope that the students will find the twenty-four hour lounge to be a beneficial service," said Pasin.

The twenty-four hour lounge will consist of the current lounge area in the basement of LaFortune. Access to other areas of LaFortune will be closed off after 2 a.m.

The vending machines and restrooms that are not available to students who use the twenty-four hour computer lab will be made so to all students who will be utilizing the lounge and the computer lab area.

Security for this lounge will be provided by a student monitor with assistance from campus security.

The new twenty-four hour lounge will have its grand opening tonight starting at midnight. There will be free food and movies will be shown on a large screen television.

INSIDE COLUMN

SUFR's demands need more thought

I have reservations in writing this column because I know there is a trend that calls for anyone who criticizes minority groups to be labeled a racist, and anyone who criticizes women's groups to be labeled a misogynist. God forbid anyone criticize both groups at once, for they surely must be a racially-biased chauvinistic misogynist. Being a white male, I am especially at risk.

Florentine Hoelker

The Students United For Respect (SUFR) have recently released a number of demands to be addressed by the ND Administration concerning minority students' needs. Many of the demands are more than justified, and I have nothing but respect for the group for rattling the administration. In one case, I agree with the group's assessment that the administration has little excuse for taking so long to formulate a racial harassment policy, and I applaud SUFR's demand that one be made—soon.

The call for increased financial aid is of concern to all students, and SUFR's requirement that more commitment be made to minority students' financial needs is valid. I hope, however, that the University doesn't target minorities only for aid. I know people who, having been "caught in the middle," are over $30,000 in debt for only four years of school. The issue is not exclusive.

However, other demands approach the ludicrous. SUFR wants a commitment to build a multi-cultural center which includes office space, lounge space, an auditorium, library space, and study rooms. I think it absurd that this group wants its own building when the University still sometimes lacks adequate classroom space and is just now completing enough academic buildings so that 40 students aren't cramped into a room that seats 30.

A related demand states "Because Theodore's is ours as students, we expect the freedom to utilize Theodore's for events without D.J. or monetary restrictions." Who is the "we?" Any minority group? Would the Hawaiian club be able to use Theodore's for free? Would it be only for minority groups?

The dates for all of the group's demands are also unrealistic. Most are for March 19, 1991. That's only two months from now. They want Theodore's and new club space by February 6.

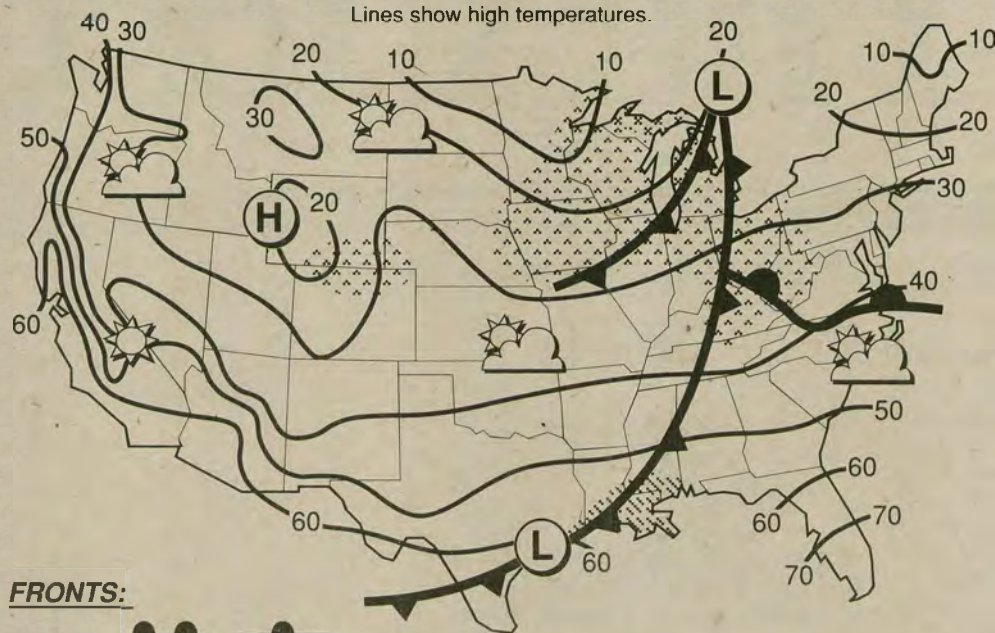

But the most disturbing thing is the closing of the list of demands, which reads "Until each of these demands are met we, Students United For Respect, will consider ourselves disrespected by the University of Notre Dame and will act accordingly." What does this mean, to "act accordingly?" Is it a threat to act in whatever way they see fit so that their demands are met?

If it is a threat, it is thinly veiled and unwisely placed. If these students want respect they should exercise their demands with temperance and avoid putting threats where they will do little but harm.

The heavy metal band AC-DC on Tuesday denied witness accounts that it continued to perform while three teen-age fans were being crushed to death by a surging concert crowd in Salt Lake City. "Nothing could be further from the truth," the band said in a statement. Two 14-year-old boys and a 19-year-old woman were trampled when they apparently lost their footing Friday night as the crowd rushed the stage at Salt Palace when the music began. Autopsies showed they died from compression asphyxiation. A number of fans reported the band continued to play despite chants of "stop the concert" from the crowd.

HPC asked to 'Adopt-A-Squadron'

By DAVID KINNEY
News Writer

The Hall Presidents' Council (HPC) has been asked to support several programs, including an Adopt-A-Squadron program and Christmas in April. Student Senator Billy Allen announced that Alumni has adopted a squadron of United States troops in Saudi Arabia in an effort to support the effort in the war. He encouraged all dorms to put action behind their words of support for American troops.

Badin adopted a group of troops in October.

Paul Johnson announced that the Christmas in April program will take place on April 13, 1991. Students can sign up to help improve fifty homes in South Bend.

The program is crucial to improve the quality of life for those in need in the community. Last year's program implemented $750,000 worth of improvements to 60 homes.

Interested students can sign up in their dorms, in the dining halls, and in the LaFortune Student Center before March 1, 1991.

In other HPC business:

• Allen announced that the Student Senate passed a resolution to raise a "Support the Troops" flag with the U.S. flag on campus.

• "You can help feed hungry people by skipping one meal a week." Paul Radich reported the continuation of the Wednesday student lunch fast to help hunger development programs overseas.

Last semester's program raised $8340 for the hungry. Students can sign up in the dining halls or by calling 2270.

• Barbara Rossman announced that Student Training Programs will be held by the Office of University Computing in order to help students interested in learning how to use computer software.

The meetings will be held on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 7-9 PM in the Hesburgh Library Auditorium.

Human rights activists in China are ordered out

BEIJING (AP) — A half-dozen human rights activists left China on Tuesday for Hong Kong after they were ordered out of the country.

The six, who were attempting to attend the trials of pro-democracy demonstrators, left China without incident six hours before the government's evening deadline.

One of those deported, university student Fong Tak Ho, said the group had gone to the Hong Kong and Macao Affairs Office in Beijing trying to find out how they could attend the trials and to relay rights concerns to Chinese officials.

Earlier Monday, the rights activists who were told to leave were detained for five hours and questioned about their activities in Beijing.

Norman Quan, a Chinese passport-holder now living in Los Angeles, was told without elaboration that he had violated China's laws. Five other activists from Britain, Canada and the Netherlands were accused of engaging in activities incompatible with their status as tourists.

The activists arrived in Beijing on Thursday to try to attend trials of the leaders of the 1989 democracy movement, which was crushed by the Chinese army, resulting in the deaths of hundreds of people.

The group had made several trips to the Beijing city court where the democracy activists are being tried. Court officials told them foreigners had no right to attend trials.

They also met with officials of the national legislature, the Justice Ministry and the Public Security Bureau to express their concern that trials be fair and open.

A Roman Catholic priest from Mauritius joined the group on Sunday. He was detained with the others for a few hours before being released with a warning not to violate his tourist visa.

Pope urges an increase in efforts to spread teachings

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II on Tuesday urged more aggressive efforts to spread church teachings in the Third World and cautioned Roman Catholics against the belief that "one religion is as good as another."

Catholics "cannot be content when we consider the millions of our brothers and sisters ... who live in ignorance of the love of God," he said in the eighth encyclical of his 12-year-old papacy, titled "Redemptoris Missio" — Latin for "Mission of the Redeemer."

The document addresses the church's relationships with other creeds and philosophies at a time of considerable tensions between Christian and Islamic cultures in some parts of the world.

It is the church's first major statement on missionary work in a quarter-century. Since then, the number of potential converts has doubled, the pope said, with the missionaries' biggest tasks in Africa, Latin America and Asia.

To emphasize concern that missionary zeal was diminishing, the pope laid out his strategy in the encyclical, one of the most authoritative forms a papal pronouncement can take.

"Missionary activity ... appears to be waning," the pope wrote in the document, addressed to Roman Catholics worldwide. He warned faithful not to succumb "to the belief that one religion is as good as another."

The pope referred to the approaching 500th anniversary of Columbus' 1492 discovery of America, which at that time opened up a new front for conversions.

At several points in the encyclical, the pope emphasized the need to respect freedom of religion as well as to continue dialogue with other faiths.

"The church proposes; she imposes nothing," the pope wrote.

In an apparent reference to religious workers who espouse liberation theology, the pope said it was an error to portray missionary work "as if it consisted principally in helping the poor, contributing to the liberation of the oppressed, promoting development or defending human rights."

"The missionary church is certainly involved on these fronts but her primary task lies elsewhere: the poor are hungry for God, not just for bread and freedom," the pope said.

The church has been harshly critical of liberation theology, which, rooted in Marxist philosophy, teaches the poor to fight for their rights.

John Paul said one new front for missionaries was the wave of non-Christian emigrants and refugees arriving in predominantly Christian countries.

While the pope did not name the countries, in the past he has spoken of Italy's refugee problem. Overwhelmingly Catholic Italy has been flooded with hundreds of thousands of immigrants, mostly Muslims from Africa and Asia.

Among the church's challenges, he said, was the popularity of cults and sects. The pope has previously expressed worry over the predominance of sects in mostly Catholic countries such as Brazil.

He also noted the challenge posed to missionaries by the collapse of Communist regimes in 1989 in Eastern Europe, where an entire generation grew up in a society that suppressed or outlawed religion.

Church officials said Tuesday that more than 500,000 missionaries were at work worldwide. Over the last 50 years, they said, hundreds of missionaries have been killed — on average more than one per month. The highest rate of slayings among religious workers was in Africa, they said.

ND officials 'confused' following minority ruling

By L. PETER YOB

Assistant News Editor

ND officials are "concerned" and "confused" following an Education Department ruling last December giving universities four years to review their minority scholarship programs.

The ruling, issued by Michael Williams, assistant secretary for civil rights, would prohibit colleges from using general school funds for scholarships that are reserved for minorities. After a public outcry the ruling was modified by the Bush administration.

Joe Russo, Notre Dame director of financial aid, said that the Bush Administration has made several attempts to clarify the policy, but that their current position remains confused.

Under the Civil Rights Act of 1964, schools are not allowed to discriminate based on race, Russo explained. Although the source of much controversy, one interpretation of this Act is that it prohibits scholarships reserved for members of certain minority groups.

Russo pointed out that Title IX of the Higher Education Act of 1965 encourages universities to take affirmative action steps.

"Competing directives need to be reviewed," Russo said.

Despite the confusion, Russo said that "we are comfortable with what we are doing," in this area at ND. According to Russo, no scholarships that are race exclusive are offered through the office of financial aid. "No decision (regarding financial aid) is made solely on race," he said.

"All financial assistance awarded by the office (of financial aid) includes as an essential factor the demonstration of financial need, as demonstrated through national needs analysis agencies and reviewed by Notre Dame's office of financial aid," Russo said. Under this policy, no aid given at ND is jeopardized by the recent government rulings.

Russo said that the "university is attempting to increase the representation of minorities." "Many minorities who apply and are accepted are needy," he added.

Russo noted improvement in minority representation at ND over the last three years.

Kenneth Durgans, director of minority affairs at ND, said that he is "concerned that this is another signal from the Bush Administration that correcting past wrongs is not a priority."

Durgans believes that a result of these rulings may be lawsuits alleging that scholarships reserved for minorities is discriminatory. These lawsuits may eventually reach the U.S. Supreme Court, an idea that Durgans said leads to "concern" and "skepticism" within the African American community.

"There was some concern in the graduate school," he said, "students didn't know if it applied to them."

Durgans noted that universities weren't initiating any complaints to create this kind of government action. "This was out of the blue."

Durgans said that "education is under attack as far as diversity is concerned." He said he wondered what is the motivation behind this policy.

"Minority scholarships are such a minute part of the budget," he said "that when you attack these things you are going out of your way to block the progress of minorities as they pursue higher education."

Russo said that he was pleased with the appointment of Lamar Alexander as the new Secretary of Education. Russo said that Alexander's position is that he will not discuss this, but "early on he made a statement that he likes to approach situations like this with a warm heart and a lot of common sense."

New program developed to aid in SMC job searching

By CORINNE PAVLIS
Saint Mary's Editor

The Saint Mary's Counseling & Career Development Center (C & CDC) has completed a project aimed at making alumnae networking and job searching easier for Saint Mary's students.

Together with the Office of Alumnae Relations and the Saint Mary's Computer Services, the C & CDC will debut Alumnae Resource Network (ARN) during the first week of February.

Karen Kyle, a Career Counselor at the C & CDC, described the program as "a computer program that allows students to identify and view information on alumnae career paths as well as to identify alumnae willing to talk to them about jobs, careers, graduate school, and more generally the job search process."

Kyle has been counseling for three and a half years and is primarily responsible for the network. Kyle contacted Systems Analyst Lorena Bidwell of Saint Mary's Computer Services to produce the software Kyle designed.

Kyle described the program as easy to use in that it is menu-driven. She stressed that no previous knowledge of the Zenith system the ARN is based on is necessary to access the Network. Informational booklets are available to guide students in a step by step manner through use.

Kyle discussed that many Saint Mary's students come to her asking what types of career paths have been taken by previous graduates in their majors. The new ARN will make answering this frequently asked question easier.

The ARN allows students to research what graduates in particular majors have gone on to do after leaving Saint Mary's. Profiles on graduates include their occupation, entry position, job history, and what they are doing now. A portion of the profiles include the names, phone numbers and addresses of alumnae who are willing to be contacted with questions.

Bidwell explained that fields of study while at Saint Mary's is just one of many ways to initiate a search with the Network. Users can also call upon particular occupations alumnae now hold. Bidwell described this as the most "exciting" aspect of the program. Students can view files on graduates in positions they find interesting and trace individual career paths.

In addition to dividing the positions held by alumnae into various careers, the program further categorized the positions by level. Bidwell explained how this is particularly helpful to those researching managerial type positions which vary greatly in level from job to job.

Geographic area is another option. Students can access information pertaining to careers of alumnae living in a particular city and state. This feature allows students to locate how many alumnae hold various positions in almost any area of the country.

Students considering the graduate school path will also be helped by the ARN. Information concerning graduate education is another feature of the system. Information concerning in what part of the country alumnae are studying, what types of degrees they are pursuing and in what subject, as well as particular institutions Saint Mary's graduates have gone on to attend, is available in many of the profiles.

Although these profiles are initially aimed at aiding current students in their post-graduate pursuits, it is hoped that it will also play a key role in alumna networking. "The Alumnae Association Board of Directors, which is an eighteen member board of graduates who act as advisors have been interested in such a program for the last three or four years," said Adeline Cashore, Director of Alumnae Relations.

Cashore explained that the Board was interested in developing some sort of networking program for Saint Mary's graduates. "In pursuing this they discovered that the Kyle was also interested in setting up a computerized data base where students could access alumnae information," added Cashore. "The alumnae Board has been instrumental in working with Kyle and Bidwell in getting input from all of the different sources."

The Alumnae Relations office worked with the Board to develop an "Alumnae Verification Form" to send out to the more than 16,000 active alumnae. The form requests information concerning graduate work, job history, spouses, and children.

The form also asks alumnae if they would be willing to participate in ARN. Those interested are sent a follow-up questionnaire concerning education and employment history. Respondents even code their careers into particular categories. Those willing to provide interested students with their names, phone numbers, and addresses indicate so on the form.

The office began sending out this form last January. Cashore described the program as still being "young". Initial projections indicate that approximately two years will be necessary to reach all alumnae. Alumnae receive this form every two years as well as whenever the office is contacted by the graduate concerning specific changes.

Besides helping with gathering the necessary information, the Alumnae Office also donated funds. The Class of 1985, for example, donated $2,765 for the necessary hardware.

Bidwell has been working on the design of the software since Oct. of 1990. With the help of two other staff members the program was designed entirely "in house". "The initial program is a simple one and as time goes by we will decide what types of features need to be added," said Bidwell. The database will continue to expand throughout the life of the system.

The C & CDC hopes that students will use this system, the libraries of information available at the Career Resource Center, SIGI Plus-Another computerized database of career information- as well as conducting informational interviews with a variety of professionals to develop a realistic picture of graduate school, a career filed, or the job market.

The ARN will be available to student during the first week of Feb. on Tuesdays and Wednesdays from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Those who wish to try the Network should go to the C & CDC located in LeMans Hall.

Talhmi: Leave Arab world alone

By MEGAN JUNIUS
News Writer

What began as a simple border dispute has lead to American intervention in the Arab world, "We want the West to leave us alone," according to Prof. Ghada Talhmi, a native Palestinian currently a professor at Lake Forest College.

Even if the United States Military forces overcome those of Saddam Hussein, the United States must face the facts that Arab nationalism will continue to strive for the dream of joining together the Arab states, Talhmi said.

Along with Talhmi, Father Gaffney, Prof. of Anthropology at Notre Dame and Kelly Reuba, the campus coordinator of Amnesty International, spoke Tuesday evening on the Historical and Cultural Aspects of the Crisis, the second of four lectures sponsored by the Gulf Crisis Action Group.

Both Talhmi and Gaffney stressed legitimate goals which the Arabs hope to achieve throughout the Gulf War. First, Talhmi said, "Arabs should have control over their own resources; Arabs should control Arab oil."

Next, they want to put an end to the long-standing differences between the Arab states. The rights of the non-Jewish people of Palestine need to be restored, Talhmi said.

According to Talhmi, immediate citizenship to Israel is given to persons with Jewish relations. In contrast, Palestinians are not given these opportunities, "We have a right to our homeland."

The United States, until recently, has not been consistent with their views, Gaffney said. In the late 1980s, Congressional measures allowed Hussein to borrow money. "It looks as the United States did approve in his previous actions. We did not do anything about it," Gaffney said. "The entire situation is one of great military tragedy, great cost and great personal suffering."

In contrast to the first two speakers, Kelly Reuba spoke not of hauling United States intervention in the war, but of the Iraqis violating human rights.

According to statistics documented by Amnesty International, Iraqis have been holding people in detention without trial, torturing people for no legitimate reason, and executing civilians and children. Iraq has taken over all newspapers and television stations in Kuwait.

According to Reuba, Amnesty wants the Iraqi government to stop carrying out executions, killings of children, and to investigate why this is happening. "We must put an end to these abuses," she said.

Tonight, the Gulf Crisis Action Group continues its four part series with "The Gulf War: Where Do We Go From Here?" This lecture takes place at 7:30 p.m. in the Library Auditorium.

The Observer/Elisa Klosterman

Father Gaffney makes his point in a discussion on History, Culture and Human Rights. The discussion took place yesterday.

Gaffney: War in Gulf could become prolonged conflict

By BRADLEY GALKO
Assistant News Editor

Father Patrick Gaffney, professor of anthropology who teaches a course on the modern Middle East, believes the war in the Gulf could turn into a prolonged conflict.

"I hoped it would never start. . . now I hope it doesn't escalate," said Gaffney. "That's my feeling on the subject. My head tells me it will last quite a while—maybe months—a thought I don't find very appealing."

"The Iraqis are tough customers," warned Gaffney, "casualties and destruction will follow." He also said he is not as confident as some in the "bravado of air strikes" that have dominated recent news reports and feels a ground war could be costly.

As for what students concerned about the war can do, Gaffney said, "I think being informed is one thing instead of getting wrapped up in the propaganda. Resist the preoccupation with war as excitement, as euphoric, victory as the only thing."

He said students should "keep solidarity with the troops. They should never be made scapegoats."

"This policy of the government, they shouldn't have to answer for," he said, "we all have to answer for it." He encourages students to "go public with what you feel about war generally."

Gaffney also reminds students to resist anti-Arab bigotry and racism at all times.

"Remember Arabs are on our side," he said, referring to Arab nations in the Coalition against Iraq such as Syria and Egypt.

In trying to gauge public sentiment Gaffney said, "My guess is . . . the support for this (war) is broad but thin." He added that "the most dramatic event that will probably cause (a decrease in support) is casualties."

In response to the question of future Israeli action, he said, "I am surprised and appreciative that Israel has restrained itself." However, he added, "I think Israel is going to go after them (Iraqis)."

He says the dilemma is a question of proportionality for Israel now. They must ask themselves whether a few Israeli civilian casualties or even deaths constitute a full scale retaliation.

He also cautioned that if Israel continues to appease the United States by refraining from retaliation, it "can then make demands on the United States in return." One such demand might be aid in delaying discussion of the Palestinian question, he said.

When asked what he would do if he were in President Bush's place, Gaffney said, "I would get the diplomatic initiative back in place. . . to initiate an intra-Arab dialogue and move this from an American-driven military conflict to a problem that the Arab World has to face on their own."

He said that he sees such an initiative as the most hopeful way the war could be resolved "without threatening, continuing destruction and potential disaster."

Gaffney also warns that the United States military actions could only serve to restore instability in the region.

"If (the Coalition countries) batter Iraq into submission, and destroy its infrastructure . . . they will leave a power vacuum in the region that Syria would love to fill, or Turkey, or Iran."

There's no inherent logic in a return to unbalance (after) the one bully who is recent on our block (loses power)," said Gaffney in reference to Saddam.

On the question of the future of Kuwait, Gaffney said that the Kuwaiti government has a commission that has been working all fall on planning for the "new Kuwait."

"I think that the new Kuwaiti scene sees the old Emir back on the throne and the old elites returning to power and perhaps a little openness which was not there before," he said. However, he added that the Kuwaitis are not eager for radical changes.

One change he anticipates is either an increased military buildup or friendlier relations with a superpower for greater protection of Kuwait in the future.

Gaffney feels the Arab reaction to the United States' military intervention in the area is divided. "I have often spoken of this as an Arab civil war," he said, "there are all kinds of positions on a sliding scale."

At one extreme, he says, are the nations of Kuwait, Saudi Arabia, and the Gulf Cooperation Council (a military and economic alliance in the region) who fully support the U.S. actions. At the other extreme is a popular sentiment that "Saddam Hussein is speaking up for these deprived, dispossessed masses . . . of Arab victims . . . the great avenger, sticking it to the West."

As for popular support for Saddam in his own Iraq, Gaffney is uncertain. He says that media and speech restrictions in a police state like Iraq can create a deceiving impression of a leader's popularity, as it did for the late Anwar Sadat.

"It's hard to say in a case like Iraq, based on massive outpourings of enthusiasm, that this is genuine, (as) if they had an alternative," he said. "It is clear there is opposition," Gaffney said in reference to Saddam's assassination of numerous rivals, "but is it popular, I don't know."

As to the role of the U.S. in future international disputes, Gaffney said "I don't think it should be our role (to police the world). The United Nations has instruments to deal with such disputes, he said.

Gaffney feels that sanctions were not given enough time to work and that military action was taken prematurely. "They were never intended to work in five months," he said of the sanctions.

"My suspicion is that there were competing views within the government" he said citing diplomatic, economic, and military efforts as working on different timetables. "Sanctions were a . . . strategy that got separated off and stuck in a lower priority."

Times have a-changed at Kent

KENT, Ohio (AP) — An anti-war activist at Kent State University telephoned the school newspaper last week, wondering whether demonstrators would get in trouble if they took over the campus radio station.

"I mean, shouldn't they just do it?" asked Jennifer Lyons, editorial page editor at the Daily Kent Stater.

Times have changed since Kent became a tragic symbol for the peace movement during the Vietnam War.

Those who protested the U.S. bombing of Cambodia in the spring of 1970 didn't ask anyone's permission. They rioted in downtown Kent. They chanted while watching the ROTC building burn to the ground. They threw rocks at National Guard troops.

On May 4, 1970, four Kent students were killed when troops opened fire at a demonstration. Nine other people were wounded.

The shootings put this city, 40 miles southeast of Cleveland, on the map, and they gave the school a reputation that bears little resemblance to sentiment at Kent today.

"This is a very conservative campus," said Trish Hooper, editor of the school newspaper. "It became a symbol, real or imagined, because of what happened on one day."

Letters to the editor are running about three to one in favor of the U.S. action in the Persian Gulf, Ms. Lyons said. And the letters have come in droves, about 60 of them in the first two days after the American attack.

On campus, the prevailing opinion is support for U.S. troops, even among those who disagreed with the decision to go to war.

"Whether or not I agree with the war isn't really an issue," said Wendy Shirer, 20, of Wooster, a sophomore studying fashion merchandising. "I feel we should support the people who are over there. It seems a lot of the anti-war people are saying, 'We want peace.' Well, everybody wants peace. But you can't stand by and just let that guy (Saddam Hussein) go in there."

There is a small but vocal anti-war group at Kent, organized during the five months since Iraq invaded Kuwait. About 100 students, faculty and others opposed to war paraded on campus the night the allied bombing began. A noon rally Thursday nearly became violent when pro-war students began shouting at anti-war demonstrators.

Some brief pushing and shoving ended abruptly when word circulated that a U.S. plane had been downed. Both sides paused for a silent prayer, and the demonstration ended.

"Overall, we're probably a minority, but I don't think we're that small of a minority," said Tom Albanese, 22, of Lisbon, a sociology student and a representative of Students United Against War. "Our dual message is that we support the troops but disagree with government policy."

He wants no repeat of the alienation felt by soldiers during the Vietnam-era protests.

Lack of aid for civilians in Iraq

BONN, Germany (AP) — U.S. bombing raids on Iraq have killed or wounded thousands of civilians and there are not enough doctors, electricity or running water to care for the injured, a European Parliament member said Tuesday.

Dieter Schinzel, a specialist on the Middle East, said two Iraqis who fled to Jordan from Baghdad had telephoned him with details of the situation. He belongs to the opposition Social Democratic Party, which opposes the war.

Spokesmen for the German government and the Defense Ministry said they had no information on Schinzel's claims.

Neither the Iraqis nor the Americans have spoken of such high casualties.

Schinzel accused both the United States and Iraq of playing a "computer game" by discussing only the number of sorties and jets downed and not speaking of human casualties.

He said in a telephone interview that the United States' motive was to maintain support for the war, and Iraq's was to keep morale from plummeting.

The two Iraqis called him because relatives knew him from his many trips to Iraq, Schinzel said. They told him, he said, that the damage to downtown Baghdad was not great but outlying regions of the country had been devastated and "several thousand" civilians were dead or wounded.

That was as specific as his informants could be about casualties, he said.

Later Tuesday, Schinzel met with the Iraqi ambassador to Bonn for an hour. He said afterward he had no new information on casualties and that there was no change in Iraq's position.

Schinzel said the men who telephoned him lived in southern Iraq, but traveled to Baghdad on Sunday en route to Jordan.

Pilots says Saddam may be holding back for big air strike

IN CENTRAL SAUDI ARABIA (AP) — American pilots, who thought the war with Iraq would begin with a decisive battle for air supremacy, now say Saddam Hussein may be holding his fighters back for a huge air strike.

If so, they'll be ready, the pilots say, and they promise to rout the Iraqis.

"We're prepared for that," said Lt. Col. Randall Bigum, who commands a squadron of F-15Cs, the Air Force's premier air-to-air fighter. "We're not letting down our guard. We can't. The price is too high."

"There is a lot of speculation going on right now in classified circles about what his game plan might be, if he has one," said Bigum, of Springfield, Va. "Every one of those speculations includes a massive use of his air power that is remaining in support of some counteroffensive."

Bigum's F-15Cs fly round-the-clock air cover for some of the hundreds of allied planes that are raiding targets in Iraq and Kuwait.

In the past two or three days, pilots have encountered only token Iraqi air resistance on raids into Kuwait, and on even deeper sorties into Iraq, said Lt. Col. Charles Plunkett, 43, of Hartsville, S.C., who leads a squadron of F-16A fighter-bombers.

On Tuesday, F-16As from the Columbia, S.C., and Syracuse, N.Y., air national guards conducted two bombing runs into Kuwait aimed at Iraq's elite Republican Guard divisions. Because of continuing overcast skies, pilots had to use onboard computers to drop bombs instead of more accurate visual bombing.

"What really surprises me is, with the frequency of our attacks and as massive as they've been, and as destructive as they've been, especially in downtown Baghdad ... the decision that Saddam Hussein is making (to hold back his air force) really defies logic," Plunkett said.

On Tuesday, he said, F-16As from his squadron encountered fire from only a single 57mm anti-aircraft gun on a raid into Kuwait.

"If the weather had been good all along, I feel that we would have reached a turning point by now," he said. "As it is, maybe the turning point is another few days down the road. It's really hard to tell right now."

Bigum said Saddam's decision to keep his fighters back had forced a readjustment in the allied air plan.

"We were supposed to confront his air force head-on, early on," Bigum said. "He has chosen not to take that course."

According to Bigum, the role of allied air-to-air fighters in the rest of the war will be determined to a large extent by Saddam's next move.

"It's probably by design that he has refrained from flying his airplanes," he said. "I don't know of any engagement that has occurred in which the F-15Cs have not come out with kills on them. So he has been unsuccessful any time he has chosen to engage the air-to-air F-15 community." Bigum estimated fewer than a dozen aerial engagements had taken place.

"There's been a lot of initiations of intercepts, but they've immediately turned and run, well outside of missile employment," he said. "And they run and land at their airfield, sometimes not even the airfield they took off from."

Plunkett said he believes the Iraqis are afraid to fight.

"We had a case a couple of days ago where the Iraqis engaged a couple of the F-15s," he said. "They launched two radar missiles and before they even timed off (finished counting down), they turned ... and ran."

"In that particular weapons system, if they don't keep the radar on the target, the missile goes stupid."

A THOUSAND POINTS OF LIGHT

Protests against Operation Desert Storm hurt soldiers

Dear Editor:

I have spent a great deal of time honestly trying to understand the protestors' reasoning for speaking out, almost every day on campus, against the war in the Gulf. They scream and holler about how we should have allowed sanctions to be effective for another 18 months. Yet, when I hear these arguments, I ask myself, why?

When I was watching the news, days before the conflict, I noticed that the Iraqi food markets seemed to have an abundance of food. My suspicions were only verified after reading that the head of the CIA was quoted as saying that sanctions were not working. It seemed obvious to me that the sanctions were not causing Saddam Hussein to rethink his position and the consequences of his decision upon his own people.

Saddam showed absolutely no sign of remorse for his actions of taking over Kuwait, and he definitely showed the world that he had no intentions of pulling out of Kuwait. In fact, he agitated the situation by proclaiming that he would attack Israel if war broke out. Is this a man we want to help by providing him with more time?

I am especially disgusted with the protestors who proclaim that this whole conflict is only about oil. Yes, oil was an important factor in the decision to send U.S. troops over there. Oil was a significant factor because this conflict has already threatened the success of the fledgling democracies of Eastern and Western Europe, as I witnessed when I went home to Spangdahlem Air Base, Germany. At times, I really believe that protestors have lost touch with the fact that Iraq invaded, annexed and raped Kuwait. I further believe that they have forgotten that Kuwait and Saudi Arabia are U.S. allies and, as an ally, we have an agreement that we will be there for each other during our times of need. This promise of alliance should definitely mean something.

"The last thing the troops over in the Persian Gulf need to see or read about are the people out there protesting the war."

Protestors are fond of saying that we should have given sanctions more time, but I urge them to ask themselves: "Who would we really be hurting by giving more time for sanctions to work or Saddam to come to his senses?" Certainly not Saddam and his thugs! By giving sanctions more time, we would be hurting the people of Kuwait, who were and still are being forced to live as hostages in their own country. By giving sanctions more time, we would be hurting the soldiers, like my father and my uncle, who are separated from their families. Giving sanctions more time would give Saddam more time to beef up and ready his defenses for the inevitable war that was to come, thus costing many more American lives.

I strongly urge protestors to re-evaluate what they are doing and ask themselves if they are supporting the troops by being out there protesting the war. When they take the time to place themselves in those soldiers' shoes, they will, hopefully, realize how hurtful they are being to those soldiers and their families back home by protesting Operation Desert Shield.

My father, uncle and the rest of the troops over there in Saudi Arabia have so very little contact with the outside world that when they read the papers or watch the television and see people out protesting, they are really hurt; they feel as though people do not even appreciate their sacrifices.

When I talked to Dad on Christmas Day, one of the first things he asked was: "What are people saying about what's going on over here in the Gulf?" When I first arrived in Germany, the first thing that the families of the pilots that are in the Gulf asked me was: "Is there really that much opposition to what we are doing in the Gulf?"

Unfortunately, since many protestors have not been overseas or actually talked to any of the soldiers serving in the Gulf, they really do not realize the devastating effect that they are having upon the troops and their families that they wrongly claim to be supporting. The last thing the troops over in the Persian Gulf need to see or read about are the people out there protesting the war. The time has come for us all to unite in support of our troops and our nation.

When I say support the troops, I am talking about writing letters to those men and women over in the Gulf, donating your blood, and offering your prayers for their safe return. When I say support the troops, I am not talking about protesting Operation Desert Storm.

I think it is important for protestors to realize that when they go out there and protest against Operation Desert Storm, they are truly protesting against the soldiers. I say this because Operation Desert Storm and those soldiers are synonymous with one another. Those men and women serving our nation in the Persian Gulf need and deserve our support, and that certainly does not include protests and demonstrations.

Bush's real motive is religious imperialism

Dear Editor:

I was shocked to hear that on the night of the attack on Iraq, George Bush called Dr. Billy Graham to the White House as an overnight guest and that he attended a church service held by Graham the next morning. As I see it, either our President was trying to inoculate a guilty conscience, or else he was deluding himself that he is beginning the war to end all wars, Armageddon. Graham, like all committed evangelicals, believes that Armageddon, a world-wide conflagration centered on the Middle East, must come before Christ can return. Bush's spiritual advisor is potentially far more dangerous than Nancy Reagan's astrologer, Jan Quigley.

In his speech to the nation two hours after the attack began, Bush spoke of creating the opportunity to forge "a new world order." If I read Bush's lips correctly, then he used these words not as a childish cliché or a presidential platitude, but as a statement of his real agenda in the Gulf. Bush wants more than Kuwait, more than oil. He wants religious imperialism, and he is cleverly disguising it in sweet-tasting phrases for the American public.

So far in this crisis-turned-war, we have laughed at Saddam Hussein's call for a holy war, branding him a religious madman. But what of our own leader, who calls upon a right-wing fundamentalist for spiritual advice at our country's most critical hours of military initiative? What of this White House infiltration by spiritually and morally deceived and deceitful advisors?

Protests for peace now seem purposeless. The bombing of Baghdad cannot be reversed. Yet, I fear that even if the present offensive causes Saddam to quit Kuwait today, our president will lead us to the brink of Armageddon again tomorrow. We must recognize the president's ideology for what it is, and stop him—if we can.

GARRY TRUDEAU

QUOTE OF THE DAY

'Always do what you say you are going to do. It is the glue and fiber that binds successful relationships.'

Jeffrey A. Timmons

By FLORENTINE HOELKER
Associate News Editor

The Gulf War is hitting close to home for some students with friends and relatives stationed in or near Saudi Arabia, raising concerns for safety and a quick end to the conflict.

Nancy Wallace, a Notre Dame law student, knows several persons close to her in the Gulf War. Both her brother and her sister's fiancée are currently serving in the Gulf, and Wallace is worried for both of them.

Her brother left on January 11 after coming home to pay his respects after a death in the family, she said, but her family hasn't heard from him since. "We don't know where he's stationed," Wallace said.

"He went to Pendleton Camp in California first," she said, "but after that we don't know where he is."

"I'm glad I got to see him right before war started," she added.

"I'm nervous and afraid. I'm worried of what may happen but I'm proud of my brother," she said.

Her sister's fiancée is on the front line, she said, and her family is concerned for him, too. After the initial news of the attack on Baghdad, Wallace said she called her sister first to see if her sister had heard anything, but she hadn't at the time.

'I think what we are doing is right. Something had to be done but you still worry about your family.'

Wallace said that she wasn't terribly surprised by the announcement that war had begun. "It was what I expected of him [Bush], but it was no real news. I remember getting chills— I was very frightened. I think it's better like this than to sit and wait, though."

War hits home

ND students concerned about relatives in Persian Gulf

She said she supports the actions in the Gulf. "I think what we're doing is right. Something had to be done but you still worry about your family. . . I'm real anxious to find out how things will end. There's a lot of anxiety for it to be over, to know how everyone is."

A few other things concern Wallace, one being the differences in the cultures of the Western world and the Arab nations. "There's a parallel to Vietnam in that their world perception is so different from ours. We don't understand completely how they think or how they might react, so that worries me."

The second thing is that Wallace thinks in the armed services small things sometimes get lost or are ignored. She related how her brother wore glasses, but that the issued gas masks didn't allow for glasses to be worn, so the soldiers had to wear contacts. The catch is, she said, that there is little if any saline solution for contacts.

"Whatever else happens, I hope it's over quickly," she said.

Senior Bernard Nunies has three close relatives in the Gulf, two uncles and an aunt, all called in from the reserves.

His first uncle and his aunt have been in the Gulf for some time, he said. Their two children, ages one and two, are staying with his aunt's parents and sister. Nunies said that his uncle sent his grandmother a Christmas card, and his aunt calls as often as possible, perhaps every day, to check on their children. His uncle serves in transportation, while his aunt serves as a cook.

His other uncle was just called to the Gulf this past Wednesday, the first night of the war, Nunies said, and is serving in a combat position.

"We're all worried what will happen," he said. "And we hope and pray that they come home safely."

In honor of the Day of Women on Saturday, January 26th, the Snite will be offering a visual cross-section of the various roles of women in the past.

The museum will be conducting tours from 3 to 4 p.m. that highlight images of women. The object of the tours is to present the role of women in different civilizations by interpreting the art that was created in these civilizations.

The pieces shown are all permanent objects of the museum collection and vary from the 10th to the 20th century. The tour has been divided into five parts that focus on a different area of the world. There will be five speakers that will each address one of these sections.

"The tours are a way to understand how women were thought of at different times in different cultures," said Diana Matthias, Curriculum Structured Tour Coordinator. "Some depictions put women down, some put women on a pedestal."

The first culture covered will be the Medieval period. The works are mainly Italian, and there will be a portrait of the Virgin Mary, a 16th century portrait of a woman, and a 17th century portrayal of an Old Testament woman.

There will also be selections viewed in the African section, as well as a look at the role of women in India. In particular, a 10th century sculpture of the Indian goddess Kali will be featured.

Another section will focus on 18th century paintings of gods and goddesses, especially Persephone, and Ceres. The last portion of the tour will concentrate on two portraits of women from the 18th and 19th century, and there will be a quick look at two 20th century paintings that were done by women.

Interestingly, most of the artists featured were male, and subsequently present the male point of view. One of the few pieces created by a female artist is an African headdress, crafted by a mother for her daughter to wear on her wedding day.

Those interested in these Snite tours should meet in the Atrium of the museum at 3 p.m. this Saturday.

NL on expansion: no compromises

NEW YORK (AP) — Philadelphia Phillies president Bill Giles, appointed to replace Houston owner John McMullen on the National League's expansion committee, says sharing the money with the American League is non-negotiable as far as he's concerned.

The AL wants the NL to split part of the $190 million it will receive from the two new franchises, which will begin play in 1993. Giles has been among the more outspoken NL owners who oppose any sharing.

"As far as I'm concerned it isn't (negotiable)," he said. "But certainly the American League has the right to speak their peace. ...

"I just feel that there's no precedent or logic for it," Giles said. "It's always been kept within the leagues. The league in which you expand is always going to be hurt initially because attendance will suffer some because the expansion cities will not draw well."

A majority of the AL clubs must approve the two NL expansion cities, so the AL could block expansion by the NL if it wants to. Three-quarters of the NL owners must approve the expansion cities.

McMullen left the expansion committee because he is attempting to sell the Astros. The committee is headed by Pittsburgh Pirates chairman Douglas Danforth. New York Mets president Fred Wilpon is the other member.

Buffalo, N.Y.; Denver; Miami; Orlando, Fla.; St. Petersburg, Fla., and Washington are the six finalists for the two new franchises. The expansion committee is to spend two days in each of the six cities next month.

The committee tentatively is scheduled to report to the league's other owners by June. The league has said it hopes to pick the two cities by September.

"I've gone through the expansion thing from both sides," said Giles, who was public relations director and traveling secretary of the Houston Colt .45s in 1962, the team's first year.

Lemieux still not ready

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Mario Lemieux, sidelined all season by back pain, is still struggling with his endurance and isn't ready to return to the Pittsburgh Penguins' lineup, coach Bob Johnson said.

Team doctors hoped Lemieux might return for Tuesday night's game against New Jersey, but he probably won't play until next week at the earliest.

Lemieux is painfree, but will not resume playing until "he's ready to play hockey," Johnson said.

"It might be Saturday, it might be a week from Saturday," Johnson said. "He'll know when he can play and I'll know when he can play, just by his performance on ice in practice."

Lemieux hasn't played since March 31—he only game he played in the Penguins' final 23 last season—and hasn't played at all this season.

"He's not in game shape," Johnson said. "He's played one game in a year and has to be able to go out there and really push off, accelerate, get loose pucks, make plays."

The two-time NHL scoring champion was bed-ridden for several weeks with a back infection that developed following surgery July 11 to remove partly a herniated disk. He resumed practicing in late December.

Dearest Cynthia, I know thee not
From thy verse, for though thou seemst to be caught
In the snares of that pretty boy Cupid,
Admiring of me, thy lines and thy drooped
Heart hath chosen to remain unknown.
O! That Medusa might turn to stone
Thy love, for love me not, you I pray;
(If indeed I am not too bold to say
You love, at least in the Petrarchan sense)
For I know thee not, and have no defense.

New York-Buffalo— they meet again...

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Super Bowl history suggests that familiarity breeds an edge, that playing a team for the second time in a season can be beneficial, especially with a championship at stake.

Six times in the past, Super Bowls have been rematches, and in four of those games, the team that won the first match won the second. The last time was 1986, when the New York Giants beat Denver 19-16 during the season and 39-20 in the Super Bowl.

Running back Ottis Anderson remembers the sequence and how coach Bill Parcells handled it.

"Bill said, 'Be careful what you say. Enjoy the win but keep it in perspective. You might see them again.'

"That was unbelievable. We got to the Super Bowl and there they were."

That taught Anderson a lesson. Five weeks ago, Buffalo beat the Giants 17-13, and as the game neared its end, Bills safety Leonard Smith, Anderson's former teammate with the Cardinals, went into a victory dance.

"He was shaking his finger in the camera saying, 'We got those guys!'" Anderson said. "I thought of '86 and Denver and said to myself, 'You know, we might see each other again.'

"Here we are."

The first game was memorable because both teams lost their starting quarterbacks. Buffalo's Jim Kelly went out with a sprained left knee, returning for the playoffs. New York's Phil Simms is still on crutches with a sprained right arch, replaced by Jeff Hostetler.

Kelly hurt his knee when Bills tackle Will Wolford fell into him. At the time, however, Wolford was more concerned with his own right knee, sprained on the same play. Center Kent Hull remembers the scene.

"I turned around and saw our starting tackle and our quarterback both on the ground, both holding their knees," he said. "I thought, 'Oh, great!'"

"When Kelly went off, he said, 'I'll be back.' He didn't say it would be three weeks later."

Wolford was blocking Leonard Marshall on the play. Jim Ritcher knocked Carl Banks off his feet and into Wolford's right knee. Wolford rolled into Kelly.

"I never knew I hit him," Wolford said. "I couldn't feel the bottom of my leg. I thought I had torn a ligament. I thought I was gone."

When he got to the dressing room, Wolford found Kelly there. "I said, 'What happened to you?' and he told me I fell on his knee."

The episode deprived the Bills of two Pro Bowl players and occurred after Kelly had driven the Bills to touchdowns on their first two possessions.

The Giants had scored first on a 1-yard run by Anderson, a TD set up by rookie Rodney Hampton's 41-yard run. Hampton suffered a broken leg in the opening playoff game and, like Simms, will miss the Super Bowl.

Kelly brought the Bills right back, throwing 48 yards to Thurman Thomas, setting up a 6-yard TD pitch to Andre Reed. Then Thomas scored on a 2-yard run after Kelly passed to Reed for 36 yards.

Matt Bahr's 23-yard field goal made it 14-10 at halftime. Bahr narrowed it to 14-13 with a 22-yard field goal in the third quarter. But the Giants didn't score again.

Hostetler got New York in scoring position four times, but the drives produced only Bahr's second field goal. Blunders — a holding penalty, a botched snap on shotgun formation and offensive pass interference — stalled the Giants.

Virginia's Moore opts for NFL draft

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — Herman Moore, Virginia's All-America wide receiver, will give up his final year of eligibility to enter the NFL draft, he said Tuesday.

"It's taken me some time to make this decision," Moore said at a news conference. "And it's my decision. Neither my family nor anyone else could decide for me. I had to."

The 6-foot-5, 200-pound Moore expects to graduate this spring.

Moore, who teamed with quarterback Shawn Moore to lead the Cavaliers to an 8-4 record and a trip to the Sugar Bowl, set two NCAA records in his career. During the 1990 season he became the first player to catch a touchdown pass in nine consecutive games, and he averaged 22.0 yards per reception for his career.

Moore also set an Atlantic Coast Conference record this season with 1,190 receiving yards. He holds school records for catches in a season (54), touchdowns in a season (13), yards in a career (2,504) and touchdowns in a career (27).

Moore said Virginia's coaching staff told him some professional scouts thought he would be among the top 10 chosen in the April 21 draft.

Moore said he was not going into the draft with the attitude that he had to be a first-round choice. "I don't want to be in a position where I'll be real disappointed if I don't go in the first round," he said.

Money was not the important factor in his decision to turn pro, Moore said.

"I tried not to think about money," he said. "I wanted to do something that pleased me. The most important thing was the challenge of succeeding at a higher level of football."

"I didn't feel there was any more I could accomplish at the collegiate level. I don't think I could have a better year than this year."

Happy 21st Birthday, Peggy Royce!

twins are doing a good job inside, but they aren't LaPhonso Ellis."

A team that scores just 52 points is not going to win many games, and the Irish know that. Rutgers started out in a man-to-man, and Notre Dame guard Tim Singleton had some success penetrating that defense to score himself and dish the ball off to his teammates, but when the Scarlet Knights switched to a man-to-man, the Irish just couldn't attack.

"They did a good job of playing back in the zone and forcing the outside shot," Singleton said, "and we weren't able to get our running game going. In order to run, we have got to rebound, and when they are scoring on those second shot attempts, we can't get it going."

Rebounding was also a big problem for Notre Dame, especially in the second half. The Irish led 18-15 in rebounds at halftime, but Rutgers controlled the boards in the second stanza and finished with a 38-35 advantage off the glass.

Irish center Keith Tower frequently appeared winded in the second half, and it showed in his statistics. He had seven rebounds at halftime, but finished with only nine for the game.

"That's something we've got to look at," Phelps said. "He played 38 minutes and he's not used to doing that. You'd like to play him for 28, but you're playing to win, and when you've got the lead you don't want to take him out."

With little help for Tower inside, it is unlikely that the situation will improve soon. Without Ellis, the inside game has taken a turn for the worse, and with opponents now concentrating on outside gunners Sweet, Bennett and Ellery, the second half of the season could for the Irish, however, was their inability to hit from the field. Notre Dame connected on only 20-of-54 shots in the game (37 percent) as Sweet (6 of 14), Bennett (2 of 8) and Ellery (4 of 11) turned in strangely uncharacteristic performances.

The shooting slump may be tied to the long layoff between last Thursday's win over Marquette and Tuesday night's game.

"I thought we were in a real good groove," Phelps said. "We took Friday off, went light Saturday and Sunday and pretty hard yesterday, but it's pretty unusual for three guys like that not to shoot it well."

Neither team shot very well in the first half, with Rutgers connecting on just 34.8 percent of its shots and Notre Dame hitting 42.3 percent from the field. After falling behind 5-1 in the first two minutes, the Irish fought back to tie the game at 7-7 on Ellery's hanging jumper from the right baseline.

Seven-lead changes and four ties followed before Ellery sank a three-point shot from the left wing with six seconds remaining in the half to give the Irish a four-point halftime advantage at 24-20.

Rutgers center Keith Hughes, who contributed a quiet eight points in the first half, exploded for 17 second-half points and his fadeaway jumper at the 18:01 mark gave the Scarlet Knights a 25-24 lead early in the second half.

"I think Hughes is one of those NBA three-spot players," Phelps said. "He rebounds well, he shoots well, he puts it on the floor and he's not afraid to post up. I knew him in high school when we recruited him, and he went to Syracuse before he transferred back to Rutgers."

Forward Jon Ross gave Notre Dame its biggest lead of the game, five points, when he completed a three-point play with 7:57 remaining. Rutgers struck right back, however, outscoring the Irish 13-1 over the next five minutes to take a 49-42 advantage.

Notre Dame pulled as close as five points at 55-50 when Tower tipped in a Sweet miss with 55 seconds remaining, but the Scarlet Knights hit their free throws down the stretch to pull away for a 10-point victory.

"The 10 points certainly is not indicative of the closeness of the game," said Rutgers head coach Bob Wenzel. "This is like a three- or four-point game."

maybe we can't make it to the NCAA's this year, but my goal is to get the the NCAA tournament in 1992 and qualify every year after that."

This does seem quite plausible, since the volleyball team is blessed by full administrative and financial support. Not only is it fully scholarshiped, but its budget is well endowed.

"The financial support here versus Arizona State—it's a much larger budget than I had there," said Brown, who with that smaller budget finished with a 117-83 record with the Sun Devils, including being named Pacific-10 coach of the year in 1986.

"The thing that makes Notre Dame unique is that you can't have students come here who aren't serious about school," she said. "Here, it's competitive in the classroom as well as the court. It will be nice to work with bright students, and hopefully it will translate into their being smart volleyball players."

"Your time in college should be a really fun time in life," she said. "Sure, we need discipline, hard work and the will to win, but we're going to work hard and have fun, too. The women on the team should be having a great time. I can't wait to get in the gym with them and start working."

New-look agent Heath signs with Braves

ATLANTA (AP) — Catcher Mike Heath, a new-look free agent set free by the collusion settlement, left the Detroit Tigers on Tuesday and agreed to a $2 million, two-year contract with the Atlanta Braves.

Heath, who will be 36 on Feb. 5, hit .270 with seven home runs and 38 RBIs in 122 games last season. The 13-year veteran has a .253 lifetime average with 85 homers and 457 RBIs.

Heath made $500,000 last season and was to have made $900,000 in 1991 under his Detroit contract. Under the new deal with Atlanta, he gets a $100,000 signing bonus and $900,000 in each of the two years.

The Braves have an option for 1993 at $1.1 million contract and must pay a $100,000 buyout if the option is not exercised. He also can earn $75,000 each season in performance bonuses.

MERRILL LYNCH & CO.

CORPORATE FINANCE ANALYST PROGRAM (Chicago Office)

Merrill Lynch's Investment Banking Division is seeking college graduates for its Corporate Finance Analyst Program, to work with corporations and institutions. The division acts as a financial intermediary between corporations and investors, offering financing alternatives and advisory services. New analysts take part in a six-week training program in New York at Merrill Lynch's World Headquarters and then join the Midwest Industrial Banking Group in Chicago.

While this has traditionally been a two-year position, a number of analysts are invited to remain for a third year, and several of these are hired as first-year associates after completing their third year.

When considering candidates for the positions in the firm, we look for a record of outstanding academic achievement, extracurricular involvement, work experience, and demonstrated leadership skills. Successful candidates are articulate, able to write effectively, and able to work well with others.

We look favorably on degrees in all subjects, though some familiarity with accounting, economics, finance, and computers is helpful. Knowledge of these areas suggests and ability to readily acquire the tools needed for quantitative analytical work.

All of these positions require a commitment to meet a demanding pace as well as the energy to see a project through, often under pressure. Merrill Lynch offers a competitive compensation package and an innovative relocation program.

Potential candidates should send a resume and a cover letter (no student profiles please) to the address below no later than January 31, 1991.

Marinovich may be eligible for felony

NEWPORT BEACH, Calif. (AP) — A decision on whether charges will be filed against Southern Cal quarterback Todd Marinovich will be made within the next couple of days, Orange County deputy district attorney Mike Koski said Tuesday.

Marinovich was arrested Sunday for investigation of possession of cocaine, police said.

"I have the case, I have the reports," Koski said. "We want to have the substance weighed and analyzed."

Carl Ambrust, another Orange County deputy district attorney, said Marinovich will be treated like anybody else.

"If he had more than a gram of cocaine, he'll be charged with a felony," Ambrust said. "If it was less, he'll be charged with a misdemeanor. If it's right at a gram, we'll have to decide."

"If he's charged with a felony, he could go to prison, but he probably wouldn't. He's eligible to apply for a diversion program."

A police spokesman had said Monday that tests proved that the white substance allegedly found on Marinovich was cocaine.

"What we originally thought was cocaine was in fact cocaine," Sgt. Andy Gonis of the Newport Beach Police said.

Gonis also said that an envelope containing four-tenths of a gram of marijuana allegedly was found on Marinovich, who recently was suspended from the Southern Cal team for missing a mandatory team meeting and not registering for spring classes.

Marinovich, 21, was arrested at 4:15 a.m. Sunday morning after he and three other men were cavorting down a street in this coastal city 40 miles southeast of Los Angeles, police said. The four were stopped by officers concerned about possible disturbances to neighbors.

All four men were searched, and police said they found a "bindle" in Marinovich's waistband that contained about one gram of white powder believed to be cocaine, police said.

None of the other three men were arrested, but Southern Cal sports information director Tim Tessalone said Tuesday that one of the three—defensive tackle Adam Swaney—was suspended indefinitely from the football

Tennessee's Webb bolts for NFL draft

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — If Chuck Webb is to fulfill the promise he showed in one season at Tennessee, he will do so in an NFL jersey.

Tennessee coaches confirmed Tuesday that Webb, who as a redshirt freshman had one of the best rushing seasons in Volunteer history, will make himself available in the NFL draft.

Webb has two seasons of eligibility left at Tennessee. He missed all but one game last season after tearing a ligament in his right knee.

Rather than risk another college season in an effort to improve his stock in the pro draft, Webb decided to turn pro immediately.

"I received a letter from Chuck Webb today informing me that he will make himself available for the NFL draft," Tennessee coach Johnny Majors said Tuesday in a statement. "Chuck is an excellent player. I wish him success in professional football." The deadline to file for the draft is Feb. 1.

"I've had people in the league tell me that if he had played all last year and gained something like 1,600 yards, he would've been the first choice," said Jimmy Sexton, an agent who represents several former Tennessee players, including Reggie White of the Philadelphia Eagles.

Webb, who could not be reached for comment Tuesday, reportedly returned to his home in Toledo, Ohio.

There was some speculation that Webb's decision was motivated by continuing academic problems. Academically, Webb is a junior majoring in psychology.

But Haywood Harris, associate athletic director for media relations, said Webb was considered "a full-time student in good standing academically with the university."

Webb tore the anterior cruciate ligament in his right knee on his third carry against Pacific on Sept. 1, the Vols' second game of the year. He had gained 156 yards on 30 carries for the season.

He underwent surgery, and Dr. William Youmans said no other damage was found.

But the doctor said Webb can't "expect a 100 percent return to the way Chuck was. I do not think that is a realistic expectation."

Webb gained 1,236 yards in 1989 despite starting only half the season and missing the season finale against Vanderbilt with an ankle injury. It was at the time the second highest single-season rushing total in school history.

Cunningham, Shell receive honors

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Philadelphia Eagles quarterback Randall Cunningham won the Maxwell Club's NFL player of the year award Tuesday for the second time — and this time he was ready to acknowledge the honor.

The Maxwell group selected Cunningham for the award after the 1988 season, but Cunningham didn't show up for a news conference and had to be contacted by phone at his suburban home while he met with an agent about real estate.

Cunningham referred to that incident during Tuesday's interview, also conducted by phone because he was out of town on vacation.

"The first time I didn't understand how prestigious this was. It's a very respected award and any player would be proud to accept," Cunningham said.

Cunningham, who passed for 3,466 yards and 30 touchdowns with 13 interceptions and ran for 942 this season, won the club's Bert Bell Award over San Francisco's Joe Montana, Houston's Warren Moon, Buffalo's Bruce Smith and San Francisco's Jerry Rice.

Cunningham received 197 first-place votes and 819 points to 110 votes and 567 points for Montana, who won last year's award and didn't appear for the awards banquet. Moon had 84 votes and 481 points, Smith 52 and 434 and Rice 37 and 237. Cunningham is the first player to win the award more than once since Baltimore's John Unitas won it in 1959, 1964 and 1967.

Art Shell of the Los Angeles Raiders won the club's Earle "Greasy" Neale Award as NFL coach of the year over Buffalo's Marv Levy, Kansas City's Marty Schottenheimer, San Francisco's George Seifert and Dallas's Jimmy Johnson. Shell received 133 votes to 72 for Levy and 68 for Schottenheimer.

"After the Sunday we had, this is great," said Shell, who Raiders were beaten 51-3 by Buffalo in the AFC championship game. "I'm excited."

Montana: operation puts two screws in right hand

REDWOOD CITY, Calif. (AP) — Quarterback Joe Montana underwent surgery on Tuesday to repair a bone in his right hand, broken during the San Francisco 49ers' loss to the New York Giants in Sunday's NFC championship game.

Two screws were inserted in Montana's hand during the surgery, performed at Sequoia Hospital by team physician Dr. Michael Dillingham. The procedure was pronounced a success.

Dillingham said Montana's hand will be in a cast for about four weeks. The screws will be removed in about two months and Montana will be able to begin throwing about a month after that.

Montana was sacked from behind by Leonard Marshall with about 10 minutes left in Sunday's 15-13 loss.

Rutgers snaps modest Irish win streak, 62-52

By FRANK PASTOR
Associate Sports Editor

At Monday afternoon's press conference, Notre Dame head coach Digger Phelps outlined three objectives his basketball team needed to meet to have any chance of playing in a post-season tournament two months from now.

Forward Daimon Sweet, the team's leading scorer, had to become more of a rebounder. Center Keith Tower, the team's leading rebounder, needed to become more of a scoring threat. And Point guard Tim Singleton, the team's assist leader, had to penetrate more often.

None of that happened Tuesday night at the Joyce ACC as the Irish fell to Rutgers, 62-52, halting their season-high win streak at three games.

Sweet led Notre Dame with 14 points on 6-of-14 shooting from the field but pulled down only three rebounds, all defensive, in 36 minutes of play.

"Sweet's stats are misleading," Phelps said, "because he's got to be more active on the offensive boards, which is something we've talked about with Ellis gone. He's got to take up more of that slack and become more of an offensive rebounder."

Tower picked up some of the slack with a team-high nine rebounds, including five offensive boards. He also scored eight points in the game but was involved in two crucial plays that proved the difference for the Irish.

With 6:19 remaining in the second half, Tower missed consecutive free throws in the middle of a 13-1 run for the Scarlet Knights. Rutgers center Brent Dabbs punctuated the run with two free throws at the 3:11 mark which came after Tower was called for an intentional foul for throwing an elbow.

"I didn't see the intentional foul," Phelps said. "I thought those were two key situations that kind of put the game out of reach for us."

"I didn't think it was retaliation," Tower said. "I don't know what it looked like. I'll have to see the tape."

Singleton dished out nine assists but shot only four times in the game, connecting on three for a total of six points. The need for Singleton to pick up some of the scoring slack became apparent down the stretch when two of Notre Dame's most dangerous shooters, guard Elmer Bennett and guard-forward Kevin Ellery, fouled out, allowing Rutgers to key on Sweet.

Perhaps the biggest problem see RUTGERS / page 16

Keith Tower, flanked by Brent Dabbs (54) and Donnell Lumpkin (44) of Rutgers, scored 8 points and pulled down 9 rebounds in Notre Dame's 62-52 loss Tuesday night. Tower fouled out with nine seconds left.

Poor shooting dooms Notre Dame

They were riding a three-game winning streak and had posted five victories in their past seven games. The Notre Dame men's basketball team was finally making a move toward a respectable record with Rutgers rolling into town.

Ken Tysiac
Associate Sports Editor

The Irish face a schedule so brutal that it is ranked third most difficult in the nation by USA Today. With such a schedule, the Scarlet Knights were the type of marginal team Notre Dame desperately needed to beat.

But poor shooting doomed the Irish, who skidded to 7-10 on the season after a 62-52 loss, while Rutgers improved to 10-7. Notre Dame shot just 32.1 percent in the second half and 37.0 percent for the game in its first loss since junior forward LaPhonso Ellis was declared academically ineligible.

The shooting was poor right across the board. Daimon Sweet, shooting 58.3 percent for the season, was just 6 for 14 from the field. Elmer Bennett, who was in foul trouble throughout the game, was 2 for 8, and Kevin Ellery went 0 for 4 in the second half to finish 4 for 11 for the game.

Was it the Rutgers zone defense that doomed the shooting of a Notre Dame team, a squad which had shot better than 50 percent in eight of its last 10 games?

"That's very unusual for those three guys to shoot that poorly, especially because we faced zones against both West Virginia and Marquette, so it wasn't like we hadn't seen a zone before," Irish coach Digger Phelps lamented.

"I think you're going to have games like this," Sweet said. "The shots just didn't fall for us, and things didn't go our way. It's difficult for us because with LaPhonso gone we have to attack defenses from the outside first rather than from the inside. I mean, Keith Tower and the Ross

New volleyball coach brings fresh start to program

Walk into the volleyball office in the Joyce Athletic and Convocation Center and you'll see new items: a new desk, new chairs, new carpet, a new bookcase ... and a new coach.

Everything's new. You can still smell the carpet glue. As of Monday, the keys to the desk lock were still sealed in a plastic bag. Since the room had been empty, the only items moved into the room were a desk, a bookcase, a phone, a coffee table/desk, two padded chairs, a new rug and a volleyball coach named Debra Brown.

This setting of lacquered desks, upholstered chairs and fitted rugs is an appropriate backdrop to introduce Brown, a former assistant coach for the U.S. national volleyball team and prior head coach of Arizona State women's volleyball.

"All I've got to do is get a little baseboard around this room, put a few pictures up and move my stuff in and it might look like somebody's worked here," said Brown, sitting behind a desk whose top was speckled with packages, memos and congratulatory letters.

Brown, who was named Head Coach of the women's volleyball team Dec. 14, is still getting her bearings at Notre Dame, but she has had time to share a few thoughts about her upcoming challenge as the chief of the volleyball program.

Scott Brutocao
Irish Items

"This job is one of a few at the very top of coaching," said Brown, who has had plenty of experience in Division I coaching, leading the ASU Sun Devils to five NCAA tournament appearances in six years as head coach. "Others are Stanford, UCLA, Texas and Illinois, and that's probably it. I think Notre Dame is ahead of all of them. We may not have had the traditional volleyball success, but I think the potential is definitely there."

The Notre Dame coaching position came to Brown at an opportune time for both her and the program, as Brown recently had resigned as the U.S. national assistant, and Notre Dame had had its own head coach resign in October.

Brown's reason for resigning as assistant coach of the U.S. team was that her "training philosophy was a little different than the head coach's," while former Notre Dame head coach Art Lambert's excuse for his exodus was the simple "philosophical differences" with the administration.

Making a break from all these philosophical issues, Brown is not going to delve into the prior Notre Dame volleyball situation, unless it is vital to her responsibility of effectively guiding her players.

"I don't know about a lot of what's happened in the past, but that's not important for me to know," said Brown.
