SMC students race for scholarship

By JAMIE BELCHER
News Writer

Her sister once said only a symphony could begin to describe her.

Among other things, Suzanne Kondratenko was a sister to seven girls. She graduated in the top of her class from Saint Mary's College in 1996 and after spending time in Rome, it became one of her passions.

Suzanne's sister Caroline is now a senior at Saint Mary's and also went on the Rome Program. Caroline says that her life so far, parallels her older sister's.

"She was the reason I ended up going. She's the reason I'm at Saint Mary's. She's the reason I went on the Rome Program," Caroline said.

Suzanne was killed while working in the World Trade Center on Sept. 11, 2001. A scholarship has been set up in her memory to assist a student wishing to go on the Rome program.

Peter Checca, an Italian professor at Saint Mary's and the director of the Rome program, spoke to Suzanne at her class reunion last year.

"Although she loved her work, her ultimate dream was to return to Rome some day and become the director of the Rome Program," Checca said.

The day of their conversation, according to Checca, Suzanne described how Rome influenced her and changed her life.

"She'd be really glad just to give someone the opportunity to go," said Caroline.

Soon, Suzanne will have such an opportunity. This year's Oktoberfest Run/Walk held tomorrow will be in memory of Suzanne and raise money for the scholarship fund.

Joan Muecke, Abby VanVlerah and Courtney King, among others are establishing a team to run in Suzanne's memory. Muecke received some assistance going on the Rome Program and explains what a wonderful experience her sophomore year in Rome was to her.

Chris Pfau is organizing the event to be held tomorrow in front of Angela Athletic Facility at 4 p.m. Participants Coordinators of the Paid Community Service Program say poor advertising and program stipulations may have contributed to a lack of student interest.

The program, which allows students to do service and receive work-study pay, has roughly 20 local agencies, said Cortney Swift, senior financial aid administrator.

"Many students tutor children in reading and math," Swift said, adding that the Center for the Homeless and Robinson Community Learning Center employ the greatest number of Notre Dame students through the program.

Junior Adam Senior is one of the many students who work at the Robinson Learning Center as a tutor and said he feels rewarded by helping others.

"When I do it, I don't treat it as just tutoring. It's more than just doing homework," Senior said.

According to Swift, 40 positions remain available in the service program and the program is still looking for students who want to work in the community.

"We're always looking for people to fill positions," Swift said.

The two employment programs that Notre Dame offers are Federal Work-Study and Campus Employment.

Any student who fills out the Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA) is eligible for community service positions with some exceptions.

"Students who do not apply for financial aid or do not qualify for

SMC pride

It began in 1843, when four Sisters of the Holy Cross Order came from Le Mans, France, with the dream to open a college in northern Indiana. One year later, in 1844, the sisters opened their first school and Saint Mary's College was born. And 158 years later, the Sisters of the Holy Cross are still here, lending support to Saint Mary's, as the College has educated thousands of women over the years.

Sarah Nestor

Saint Mary's
News Editor

How is that significant today? Today is the start of Saint Mary's pride week. A week in which Saint Mary's women, present and past, celebrate the College heritage, students, athletes and each other's accomplishments.

With the freedom and encouragement that students receive from the College the women of Saint Mary's are always amazing me, whether it is missionary work in China, internships that have resulted in patents or with beautiful poetry written in class.

While the brochures are true when they state that the campus is beautiful, dorm rooms are usually big, classes are small and that the College has some impressive rankings and statistics, these would all be at the bottom of my list of reasons for Saint Mary's pride. It is the students, professors and staff I know that makes the College special to me.

No, Saint Mary's isn't for everyone and I'll admit that. Despite the fact that Saint Mary's was the only college I applied to, or wanted to go to, I didn't even like it that much my freshman year. Taking initiative I applied for the Saint Mary's Ireland program, hoping that a year away would provide me with a better college experience.

I'm not going to gush on and on about how much studying abroad changed me, but it did. My attitude towards Saint Mary's also changed, I was sad about coming back but I couldn't wait to the girls that were my family for a year.

To me Saint Mary's will always represent the great friendships I have made, in my year in Ireland and while on campus, friendships that I know will always be there.

While primarily I will have positive memories of Saint Mary's, it is not a perfect institution and the women who attend are not perfect. There are plenty of issues that upset me about Saint Mary's: the fact that there is not recognized support for lesbian, bisexual or questioning women, that there is not a recycling program and even the fact that the dining hall closes at 7 p.m. all annoy me.

There are plenty of outlets to voice my concerns, whether at a Board of Governance meeting, talking with the hall director or even e-mailing or setting up an appointment with the College president or vice presidents. I may not like the answer I get, or agree with it, but from experience I have always gotten one.

So this week celebrate Saint Mary's pride by celebrating the people you know at Saint Mary's, by questioning what you don't like about the College and working to change it for yourself and future generations.

Panel discusses college and religion

By JIM GAFFEY
News Writer

A panel of university presidents from prominent Christian colleges gathered Friday afternoon in McKenna Hall Auditorium as part of this weekend's "From Death to Life" conference. The panel, entitled "The Future of Christian Higher Education," included Charles Dougherty, the president of Duquesne University, Robert Sloan, president of Baylor University, and Father Edward Malloy, president of Notre Dame.

Each speaker expressed different points important to the mission and identity of private Christian universities. Dougherty emphasized the unique role Christian universities play in a religiously pluralistic society.

"I think U.S. society is drifting towards an amorphous spirituality," he said. "There's a hunger for values in America, and our universities help fill that."

The success of Christian universities is part of a new counter-movement to growing secularization in society, and for them to compromise their mission would be to lose both part of their identity and their niche in the economy, Dougherty said.

Sloan, in his efforts to promote and improve education at Baylor, stressed the interplay between maintaining a Christian identity and making gains in the U.S. News & World Report rankings. One of Baylor's goals was to break into U.S. News' "top tier" of universities, while at the same time deepening his school's Christian roots.

"Christian faithfulness and academic excellence are not mutually exclusive," Sloan asserted. Where the pursuit of these goals conflicted, however, Sloan emphasized the higher ideal of offering a Christian education. "It is more important to be faithful than it is to be great," he said.

"It is more important to be faithful than it is to be great."

Robert Sloan
Duquesne University president

Sloan also revealed his theory that Christian universities, if well-run, can impact society in four distinct ways including educating students morally, preparing them for leadership, analyzing and critiquing culture, and replacing society's bad moral content with good. This final impact on society can be realized, according to Sloan, by putting things out into "the marketplace of ideas."

Malloy stressed the importance of hiring faculty who are committed to carrying on the university's Christian mission as well as establishing a core curriculum for all students designed to foster exploration religious questions. Malloy referred to Notre Dame's University requirement of two philosophy and two theology courses as a way to establish such a Christian core curriculum.

Malloy also addressed the skepticism society shows toward religiously affiliated universities.

"There are always people suspicious of an institution like Notre Dame," Malloy said. "Some people equate pursuing a university's moral mission with mediocrity. I do not think this is the case."

Malloy honored again

Special to the Observer

Father Edward A. Malloy, C.S.C., president of Notre Dame, received an honorary doctor of laws degree from Gannon University in Erie, Pa., during a special ceremony Thursday. It is his 14th such honor.

Malloy

Notre Dame's 16th president, Malloy was elected by the Board of Trustees in 1986. Now in his third five-year term, he has led the University at a time of rapid growth in its reputation, faculty and resources. During his tenure, Notre Dame's faculty has increased by more than 350, the academic quality of the student body has improved dramatically, and the number of minority students has more than doubled.

The University's endowment of approximately $3 billion is among the top 20 in higher education, and its recently completed "Generations" capital campaign raised $1.1 billion, by far the most successful in the history of Catholic higher education and just the 12th billion-dollar campaign ever for a private university.

Malloy has been a driving force behind efforts to promote community service and combat substance abuse in higher education. A member of the advisory board of AmeriCorps and the National Civilian Community Corps, he also is a founding director of the Points of Light Foundation, a member of the board of governors of the Boys and Girls Club of America, and a member of the Indiana Community Service and Volunteer Committee and the Indiana Commission on Community Service.

In combating substance abuse, Malloy has served as a member of numerous organizations, including the National Advisory Council on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism, the President's Advisory Council on Drugs, the Community Anti-Drug Coalitions of America, the Governor's Commission for a Drug-Free Indiana, and the National Center on Addiction and Substance Abuse (CASA) at Columbia University. He also currently serves as cochair of the subcommittee on college drinking of the National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism, a component of the National Institutes of Health, and chairs the National Commission on Substance Abuse and Sports for CASA.

Federal Work-Study are eligible for Campus Employment as long as their total financial aid (loans, University scholarships, private scholarships, work eligibility, etc.) does not exceed their cost of attendance Swift said.

"For students who qualify for federal work-study, we include additional inserts to promote the community service program," Swift said.

There are similar guidelines for those who qualify for campus employment, with a few exceptions: federal work-study requires students to work at an off-campus community service agency, said Swift.

"With Federal Work-Study, a portion of the students' wages are funded with federal dollars," Swift said. "The non-federal share varies by agency, however, most agencies pay a quarter of student wages and the remaining 75 percent is paid with federal dollars." Swift said.

However, Swift said that if students tutor reading or math in local elementary schools, the federal government funds 100 percent of the students' wages.

Despite the monetary benefit, Swift sees the program as a "great experience for students to work outside of the campus."

"Volunteer work is a huge component of the Notre Dame experience and paid community service is a good way for students, who can't afford to volunteer, to work in service positions," she said.

Death toll higher than thought in ferry sink

Associated Press

DAKAR

In long, solemn lines, thousands of people pored over photos Sunday of the bloated bodies from one of Africa's deadliest ferry accidents, as the government said that nearly 1,000 people are now believed dead.

Only 64 people are known to have survived when the MS Joola capsized off Africa's West Coast in heavy winds late Thursday. On Sunday, the government said that 1,034 people were on board the ship, sharply up from the 797 it had first announced.

By midday Sunday, Gambian and Senegalese sailors, dive teams and other searchers had collected 352 bodies from the ferry, the water and from along the coast, where some were washing up, said Aminata Dibba, permanent secretary for Gambia's presidency.

Six refrigerated ship containers with bodies inside were lined up in the capital's port, while hundreds more disintegrating bodies were offshore waiting to be brought in.

Authorities planned Monday to finish an investigation into what caused the Senegalese state-run boat to sink off Gambia, a former English colony about 30 miles across at its widest point that divides north and south Senegal.

Grieving family members studied photos of the dead in hopes of identifying rapidly decomposing victims.

"Now there seems to be little chance they'll come back alive," said Tijane Jalow, 29, who had three brothers on board.

"This is awful, awful, awful. I'm inconsolable," he said, pinching his eyes.

On Sunday, the government added the 55-member crew and said 185 passengers had boarded the doomed ferry at a second stop en route from southern Senegal, bringing the total aboard to 1,034, said Diadji Toure, communication's adviser for Senegal's prime minister.

Authorities set up five "crisis centers" in Dakar to display photos of those retrieved from the wreckage. Boy Scouts rushed bottled water and food to more than 3,000 people who waited in line throughout the day, officials said.

Ambulance teams tended to people who passed out from temperatures of about 92 degrees Fahrenheit.

Many victims' faces were too waterlogged to be recognizable. One bleary-eyed woman wailed "Papa, Papa!" as she was helped away from a display.

At the port in Dakar, young men crouched in the shade, pressing radios to their ears. Most family members were calm but bickered with army guards providing slow access to the photo lineup. Senegal's flag flew at half-staff in the last of three days of national mourning.

Capt. Samba Fall of the Senegalese navy said many children were on board because they were returning from summer vacation from the southern Casamance region, known for its powdery beaches. He declined to say how many children were on board or believed missing.

Congress remains divided over problem in Iraq

Associated Press

WASHINGTON

Lawmakers have yet to settle differences about the threat posed by Iraq and how to confront it, despite White House hopes Congress soon will pass a resolution authorizing military force to topple Saddam Hussein.

Republicans and Democrats appearing on the Sunday talk shows said they hoped a resolution would win overwhelming support, even as they sparred over the United Nations' role and the severity of the threat from the Iraqi president.

GOP lawmakers, lining up behind President Bush, said it is unlikely that Saddam will allow inspectors unfettered access to search for weapons of mass destruction.

"He is not going to allow them back in, because he has these weapons and materials and laboratories and he isn't about to give them up," said Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz.

Democrats, including House members visiting Baghdad, urged the Bush administration to work closely with the United Nations and to let inspectors resume their work.

"You don't start out by putting the gun to their head and saying we're going to shoot you if you blink," said Rep. Jim McDermott, D-Wash., speaking from Iraq.

McDermott also suggested the president might be misleading the American people about the need for military action, something the White House swiftly denied.

Congress may consider the resolution this week, though negotiations on terms continue. Bush said Saturday that agreement was near and predicted that "soon we will speak with one voice."

Democrats say they will not give the president open-ended authority and are seeking to put more emphasis on a multilateral approach.

The Senate's top Republican, Trent Lott of Mississippi, said Sunday that he wants the a resolution that can attract as much support as possible.

"We're still working on language that can bring the largest number of Democrats and Republicans, House and Senate, together," Lott, R-Miss., said on CBS's "Face the Nation."

Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., agreed but said the key will be rooting the resolution in the United Nations as "primary responder."

WORLD NEWS BRIEFS

Israel pulls back from Arafat's HQ

Israel bowed to U.N. demands and U.S. pressure Sunday, pulling troops and tanks out through the barbed wire that encircles Yasser Arafat's headquarters. The Palestinian leader said the move was only "cosmetic."

As troops removed sandbags, generators and debris from around the Ramallah compound to end the 10-day standoff, Israel said it still planned to arrest alleged terrorists it says are holed up with Arafat.

Blair confident on Iraq resolution

Prime Minister Tony Blair said he was confident Sunday of securing a fresh United Nations resolution on stripping Iraq of its weapons of mass destruction.

Britain and the United States are preparing a draft resolution that would call on Iraqi President Saddam Hussein to reveal all materials relating to weapons of mass destruction and to give U.N. weapons inspectors unfettered access to presidential sites.

NATIONAL NEWS BRIEFS

Protestors march on Cheney's house

Thousands of people opposing a war with Iraq marched to the residence of Vice President Dick Cheney on Sunday, culminating three days of smaller-than-expected demonstrations.

Protesters, some holding signs that said "No Blood for Oil," blamed Cheney for pushing the nation toward war. Police estimated about 2,500 people turned out for the peaceful event.

Demonstrator threats to shut down the nation's capital and disrupt meetings of world financial leaders during the weekend fell flat and all protesters had evaporated from city streets by dusk Sunday.

Polygraph doubted in Levy case

Police are looking again at a man once ruled out as a suspect in Chandra Levy's death, partly because a lie detector test he passed was administered through a Spanish-speaking interpreter, a person familiar with the investigation says.

Investigators want Ingmar Guandique, 21, a Salvadoran immigrant, to take a second polygraph test about the former government intern's death.

Man arrested in New Jersey airport

A Bulgarian national was arrested Sunday at Atlantic City International Airport after federal screeners found a pair of scissors embedded in a bar of soap and two boxcutters in a lotion bottle in his backpack.

Nikolay Volodicev Dzhonev, 21, was charged with possession of a prohibited weapon. Egg Harbor Township police said Dzhonev was being held on $100,000 bail.

Authorities said the man was a student from Bulgaria with a summer visa allowing him to work at an Atlantic City-area convenience store.

U.S. may fingerprint Egyptian tourists

The United States on Sunday began advising Egyptians traveling to America they may be fingerprinted, photographed and questioned on arrival in America for reasons of national security.

So far, the program requiring registration of foreign visitors included those from Iran, Iraq, Sudan and Libya — the countries listed by the State Department as state sponsors of terrorism.

IN BRIEF

Shippers: West Coast port stays shut

A frail labor peace between shipping lines and West Coast longshoremen collapsed Sunday when workers were ordered off their jobs indefinitely.

The Pacific Maritime Association, which represents the shipping lines, said it would bar workers from the docks until the union agrees to extend a lapsed contract while talks toward a new agreement continue.

West Coast ports handled more than $300 billion in cargo over the past year. Continued labor unrest could cost the U.S. economy an estimated $1 billion a day.

"They're just doing whatever they're doing," said Steve Stallone, a spokesman for the International Longshore and Warehouse Union.

Association president Joseph Miniace called Sunday's action a "defensive shutdown" that came less than 12 hours after longshoremen returned to the docks at the 29 major Pacific ports.

Shipping lines imposed a lockout Friday immediately after talks broke down. That lockout was lifted, then reimposed after the association accused the union of understaffing operations and dispatching unskilled workers.

Former VP to give policy speech

Al Gore plans to offer his views on the U.S. economy Wednesday in a major policy speech on the topic at a time the political debate has turned increasingly toward Iraq and the possibilities of war.

The former vice president helped stir up that debate over Iraq with a speech a week ago in San Francisco criticizing the Bush administration for its policies on Iraq.

Gore told a crowd at the Commonwealth Club that the Bush administration should not allow Iraq to distract this country from the war on terrorism and said the United States should work more with the United Nations to get the broadest possible support for changing regimes in Iraq.

Debt reform goal of leaders

◆ Protestors expected at this week's meeting

Associated Press

WASHINGTON
World financial leaders pledged Sunday to do everything possible to prevent stock market turmoil from derailing an uncertain global recovery and committed themselves to meeting an April deadline for unveiling a dramatic new approach for handling bankrupt nations.

IMF Managing Director Horst Koehler said the agreement to move the bankruptcy proposal forward was a major achievement for this year's annual meetings of the 184-nation IMF and its sister lending organization, the World Bank.

"This is a kind of breakthrough. ... There is a recognition that there is a gap in the international financial architecture," Koehler told a concluding news conference.

Delegates on Sunday approved a recommendation that the IMF staff develop for consideration by April a fully developed approach for allowing countries with unsustainable debt burdens to essentially declare bankruptcy and force creditors to negotiate more lenient repayment terms.

Protesters had sought to disrupt this year's discussions by shutting down the capital. Their efforts fizzled in the face of poor turnout and an overwhelming police presence.

Police prepared for as many as 20,000 demonstrators, but a much smaller number of mostly peaceful protesters used puppets and bannisters to display their unhappiness with global capitalism.

Koehler and World Bank President James Wolfensohn said the protesters failed to appreciate the extensive reforms both institutions have undertaken to better respond to the needs of poor countries.

But both officials acknowledged that much more needed to be done to narrow the gap between rich and poor nations; 15 percent of the world's population controls 80 percent of the income.

"The quest for a more equal world is the quest for long-term peace — something that military power alone can never achieve," Wolfensohn said.

At the concluding news conference, Wolfensohn ticked off a range of initiatives the World Bank has underway to improve drinking water in poor nations, educate millions of children not now in school and combat AIDS.

"We have to stop philosophizing and get on with the tasks," Wolfensohn said.

Finance officials said the sluggish economy is making harder their job of promoting prosperity. The stock market declines, economic turmoil in Latin America and anxiety about possible war in Iraq have contributed to the weaker than expected recovery.

Argentina was forced into a record default on government debt in December. Brazil's currency fell to record lows in the past week as investors fear Latin America's largest economy soon will default on its debt despite a record $30 billion loan approved by the IMF in early September.

Billionaire investor George Soros said that while this possibility was increasing, IMF officials were "asleep at the switch." A debt default, he said on ABC's "This Week," could have serious repercussions on U.S. banks with loans to Brazil and American companies with plants there.

Finance officials struck a much more positive tone. They said the United States, Europe and Japan had committed during the weekend meetings to address problems in their countries that were holding back growth.

Treasury Secretary Paul O'Neill said Washington was doing its part to promote a global recovery. He said the expected the world's largest economy would return to solid growth of 3 percent to 3.5 percent "over the course of the coming year."

Tyco case: board vs. executives

Associated Press

CONCORD, N.H.

The case against three former Tyco International Ltd. executives accused of looting the company could boil down to a blame game between the board of directors and the defendants, legal experts say.

Tyco documents show some board members knew of certain loans to top executives — knowledge which could help the defense. But those documents also include details of extravagance in how the money was spent, and that could hurt the defendants, according to former federal prosecutor Gregory Wallance.

"They're bringing the charges in the middle of a climate of public outrage at executives pigging out at the expense of investors," Wallance said. "The sheer magnitude of the money is going to be a problem for the defense."

A recent Tyco filing with the Securities and Exchange Commission said former chief executive Dennis Kozlowski, former chief financial officer Mark Swartz and former general counsel Mark Belnick enriched themselves at the company's expense. The company also has filed a civil suit against Kozlowski, seeking $730 million.

Prosecutors have accused

Kozlowski and Swartz of stealing $600 million from Tyco, and both are charged with enterprise corruption and grand larceny. Belnick was charged with falsifying business records to conceal $14 million in improper loans.

The three men have pleaded innocent, and their lawyers have said any money they received was approved.

The king of excess was Kozlowski, Tyco maintains. One example cited by the company: a $2.1 million birthday party Kozlowski threw last year for his wife, Karen, on the Italian island of Sardinia. In documents filed with the SEC, Tyco says it footed half the bill.

Time for talk is over

Let's say you are the President, and the date is July 1, 2001. And let's say that America's intelligence systems (as they failed to do in reality) put together all the pieces and stated that a terrorist attack from a foreign group, Osama bin Laden's al-Qaeda in Afghanistan, would strike U.S. soil sometime in the next three months and kill thousands of Americans. Do you:

Mike Marchand

Undistinguished
Alumnus

A. Launch a fierce preemptive attack, designed to destroy the threat before it can materialize, or

B. Petition the United Nations to draft resolutions, plead with the other four members of the U.N. Security Council to gain acceptance, and wait for Congressional approval?

Obviously hindsight tells us that the proper answer is the first. Yet common sense tells us that as well. You wouldn't know that by listening to those people against a preemptive strike against Iraq, though. I admit, the situation may not be quite as dire as the hypothetical posted above, but it's only tragic hindsight which has shown us how severe the threat al-Qaeda was 15 months ago. The threat Saddam Hussein poses may not be exactly the same, but it's similarly imminent and clear.

Our Commander-in-Chief, regardless of whether it's George W. Bush, George H.W. Bush, William J. Clinton — or, in our little hypothetical game, you — has the authorization by our Constitution to protect America and its citizens. Yet the President's opponents can think of a million different reasons not to act, but can't grasp the fundamental reason why we should.

Global politics and foreign policy can be complicated, but in this case, there are simple questions, and there are simple answers. Is Saddam Hussein a vicious and evil tyrant? Does he possess weapons that can cause unimaginable horrors? Is he attempting to acquire nuclear weapons? The answer to all of these is yes. We've known this for years, of course, but a 50-page dossier issued last week by the British government reinforces these facts.

Another equally simple conclusion that can be drawn is that Hussein will not stop based on any international resolution made against him. He's violated more than a dozen U.N. resolutions already in the decade-plus since the end of the Gulf War. And history teaches us that in the face of a tyrannical threat, diplomacy not backed by the threat of force only emboldens the tyrant — it does not contain him.

The onus should therefore be on those who do not support action against Iraq to provide a compelling case. So far, they have yet to come up with even a coherent case. Tom Daschle (D-S.D.), Senate Majority Leader and the highest-ranking Democrat in Washington, can only express "concern." Last week, he thought it over and heightened his rhetoric; he now expresses "grave concern."

Al Gore, who broke ranks with his own party and supported the Gulf War, admonished President George H.W. Bush for leaving Saddam in power, and served as Vice President in an administration which made several unilateral strikes against Iraq, made a speech last week in San Francisco that threw out that legacy and argued feebly against it. Even The New Republic, which twice endorsed Gore for President, said the speech "sounded like a political broadside against a president who Gore no doubt feels occupies a post that he himself deserves."

And there are still grumbles internationally that an independent America that acts in its own self-defense is more terrifying than a madman with weapons of mass destruction. German Justice Minister Herta and Paul Däubler-Gmelin compared George W.

Bush to Hitler by saying Bush was using Iraq to shift the focus away from domestic issues in a political campaign. Ironically, this statement took place in the midst of the German election season; though the anti-Americanism played well and center-left Chancellor Gerhard Schröder won reelection, he thankfully relieved Frau Däubler-Gmelin of her duties.

To a certain extent, the objections are steeped in good intentions. While President Bush and his braintrust, buttressed by the support of British Prime Minister Tony Blair, have laid out a case for action against Iraq, they've been somewhat caught up in their mission to address some bigger questions. If preemptive action against terror networks and rogue states is going to be the Bush Doctrine, we should at least have an honest discussion about our rules of engagement in the future, if for no other reason than to reassure our allies.

But that should not be used as an excuse to sit around and wait while the threat grows. In three months' time, Saddam Hussein may very well have a nuclear weapon. This would be a problem not just because he could detonate it on a whim, but also because it would give him leverage he doesn't possess now. It would be easy for him to invade Kuwait or Saudi Arabia if he can blackmail the United States with a weapon aimed at Tel Aviv, or London, or Washington. The United States and the United Kingdom are the only ones who'll stop him now; who will stop him then?

There have been months to talk about it. Action is needed now — not more talking.

Life can be rough, but appreciate the ride

Last night I saw one of my best friends in the Peace Corps give a concert. In his former life he was an acting major and writer who aspired to be in pictures in People Magazine and to create art his audience could understand. Now he lives in the village 45 minutes away from me.

Maite Uranga

Life in Africa

When I was at home I saw my college roommate, and for the first time since we met six years ago there was not even one night of debauchery. I am turning 25 in six months. Soon I will be closer to 30 than to 20.

I have sat in the desert for over a year and somewhere in that time my friends and I seemed to have grown up. Serious relationships have come into the picture. Others have been continuously single for the first time since high school and finally get to spend time with themselves. I finally came to terms with the fact that applying to law school does not mean that the adventure is over. My brother is taking a year off of medical school because in much simplified terms he figured out life is not about the destination.

Everyone has heard these clichés. And it is highly likely that most people have experienced a lot of them. But within the vanity of the mid-twenties age group, an individual and a group of friends think that they are discovering the world as it has never been seen before. We think we know it all because we are at a top-25 university and spent a semester living somewhere else. Our friends live in other cities, states and countries, which makes us worldly. Our parents do not know where we are on Friday nights and do not know if we ever go to class. We think we are independent.

Then we graduate. We realize a liberal arts degree is hard to sell, especially with an economic downturn. We understand the fast track to the corner office requires a lot of time, but more challengingly a lot of sacrifice. And friends who knew they wanted to be a doctor since they were two suddenly decide to apply to MFA programs instead. Friends start getting married. Friends start having children. Friends get divorced. Suddenly your life-long friends from college no longer seem to be life-long when you have not talked to them in six months and then two years.

Amidst all this, largely because of the pretentiousness that education provides, we search for ourselves. The world is tragic and we are idealistic. We can solve the world's problems although no one ever asks us. The Sahara, the isolation, the distance and the time have helped me grow up. I have not lost all of my idealism and arrogance, although some of the innocence floated away in the three years since graduation. Perhaps because I did not see my brother and friends for so long, when I finally did on vacation home the same thing seemed to have happened to them amidst the chaos.

After trying to escape the influence of two lawyer parents, I resigned that it also happened to be what I wanted. Even more shocking is that my need for continual roaming seems to have been greatly appeased. The actor who lives 45 minutes from me loves theater and everything it involves. He will end up in New York. For now, though, we enjoy the freedom that being away from it provides. My brother still wants to be a doctor but decided a year in Spain is also a great option. My college roommate and I did not want to waste our precious time together in a bar and talked more in five days than we did for a month in college.

One day the actor and I reflected over our Peace Corps experience. Over a year ago, we decided our lives in Mauritania could best be summarized as, "This sucks. We live in hell." After nearly a year and a half I think we still think we live in hell. But what the hell if we don't like hell. Sure, there are rough days, but at least we know that sometimes you've got to go to hell to get to heaven. And on those long hot days when everything seems to be going wrong and the world is going to fall off its axis, I have grown to appreciate the ride.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Joint committee examines honor code controversy

We write to thank The Observer for the attention it has given the recently revised Academic Code of Honor in a front page article on Sept. 25 and an editorial on Sept. 27. Undergraduate students will soon receive, if they have not already, an email explaining in greater detail some of the more significant revisions of the honor code. The revision of the honor code and the attention it has been given will, we hope, heighten awareness of issues of academic integrity throughout the University.

In its Sept. 27 editorial The Observer raised an important issue regarding the faculty's use of Turnitin.com, an internet plagiarism detection service the University has recently contracted. "While a service like Turnitin.com should be employed in cases where professors have a reasonable suspicion of dishonesty," The Observer argues, "it should not be used as a standard procedure in the grading process."

The Observer's concerns are shared by members of the faculty and they merit careful consideration. The appropriate use of Turnitin.com will be taken up by the University Code of Honor Committee, a body composed of six students and six faculty members, which will begin discussion of this issue at its first meeting today.

While we are grateful to The Observer for its interest and for raising an important issue, we strongly disagree with its claim in the Sept. 27 editorial that "the honor code revisions and the contract with Turnitin.com indicate that trust [between professors and students] has been broken."

On the contrary, trust and common commitment to academic integrity has never been greater. The revision of the honor code is the result of a great deal of hard and conscientious work, with wide consultation by faculty and students; the new code enhances the role of students, working with faculty, in the administration honor code procedures; and it was passed unanimously by the Academic Council, a body which includes both faculty and student representation. The University community should be proud of the joint efforts of faculty and students to defend and even strengthen academic integrity at Notre Dame.

Regarding the contract with Turnitin.com, this service was intended as a tool to assist individual faculty and honesty committees to exonerate students as well as to establish that dishonesty has occurred. Whether Turnitin.com should be used by individual faculty in cases in which there is no prior suspicion of dishonesty is an important question, and a policy concerning its use will be debated and established by the students and faculty of the University Code of Honor Committee. But the fact that this tool has been acquired does not determine how it will be used, and so we do not believe the mere acquisition of the Turnitin.com service is in itself a sign of broken trust.

As the University Code of Honor Committee discusses the appropriate use of Turnitin.com and other issues related to the implementation of the honor code, we welcome contributions from members of the University community. Please feel free to pass your observations and opinions on to us or other members of the committee. Academic honesty is the concern and responsibility of every student and faculty member at Notre Dame. The students and faculty of the University Code of Honor Committee welcome your thoughts as it strives to make decisions in light of the ideals of Notre Dame's honor code.

Biblical instructions not always relevant to modern times

This letter is in response to Becket Gremmels' Sept. 27 letter.

So, Becket — you don't hate gay people? That's great. You have gay relatives? Terrific. Wait — you even talk to them, too? Well, Hallelujah. (Pun entirely intended.) Please stop shining your medal for a second and read this.

Something tells me — gut instinct — that you count your gay friends on your hands. And by that, I don't mean that you only choose to have this many or that many gay friends. I say you count them on your hands so that you can say you have gay friends. ("Well, there's Tommy, he's one. And Amy, yeah, Amy's two. And, well, no one knows about Mark, but I'm totally counting him.")

The best defense to any argument — especially one you have such thin evidence to back up, like yours — is to use your own life as an example. But please, don't use your friends and family as backup and then throw out a Bible quote that equates them with "theft, kidnapping, murder, greed, fratricide, lying and lawlessness." I know Tommy, Amy and Mark would be so proud.

So since I'm assuming we're taking the Bible so literally these days, you would tell me to shut my big yap (or stop my fingers from typing) and marry a man I don't know and start making him babies, right? Or that I should start building a tent now, in which I can take solace once my period comes because a menstruating woman is unclean and unfit to be in society. (Shh, I'll let you in on a little secret: this is what the Bible says, too. Not just that gay people are wrong, wrong, wrong.)

I won't directly quote from the Bible because there are so many different versions and so many different interpretations of the book o' rules. And maybe a word you should start researching, Becket, is this: interpretation.

Just because it's written down, in a big, fat book o' rules, doesn't mean it's a. Meant to be taken literally; or b. meant to be taken literally in the 21st century. Countless events, laws and changes have passed since the Bible's inception, for example, the Civil Rights Movement, the Women's Movement, Vatican II. Catholic doctrine has been interpreted over the years to adapt to modern society. In 2002, should sinners or law-breakers be made to wear a crown of thorns? I think not. But, of course, that's just how I interpret it.

But I must say that your final, most moving point was when you note, "God didn't drop the ball on this one; He took it to the basket." That's funny you say that, because I swear I don't remember reading anywhere in the Bible that God played basketball.

Scene takes a look at Notre Dame comedy band, The Kinky Boot Beasts

By C. SPENCER BEGGS
Scene Editor

Friday night: The band takes the stage casting aside empty bottles of Boone's Farm wine. They gear up their instruments and proceed to rock the garage to the sounds of Dave Matthews band. Of course, the version of "The Space Between" the group performs sounds more like Dave Matthews playing at Ozzfest after dropping an entire sheet of acid and snorting a couple king sized pixie sticks. The band: The Kinky Boot Beasts, the self-proclaimed class clowns of the campus music scene.

The band, composed of junior guitarist Dave Lodewyck and senior guitarist Joe Andrukaitis, is one of the most talked about bands on campus. Of course, that might be more a facet of the group's just-escaped-from-an-institution-for-the-criminally-insane appeal than their musical talent, but who needs talent to be a rock star?

The Kinky Boot Beasts formed the day after NAZZ, Notre Dame's annual battle of bands, in 2001. Fellow Fisher Hall resident and acoustic crooner Phil Wittliff was scheduled to play at an acoustic festival called ND at Nite, but couldn't make the event and asked then freshman Lodewyck to fill in.

Lodewyck teamed up with Andrukaitis and the pair hastily drew up a set list and formed a band. They toyed with various names such as Phil Laytio, in homage to their benefactor, and finally settled on The Kinky Boot Beasts.

Garbed in a wig once used to portray Jesus in a Department of Film, Television and Theatre mainstage show and king cobra hats, the Kinky Boot Beasts took the stage singing Johnny Cash songs and as many '80s power ballads as they could remember attempting to make as big of a mockery of the event as they could.

After their iconoclastic set, the pair rushed to gather their gear and make a cunning getaway disbanding the one-hit wonder Boot Beasts, but fortune changed that.

"At the end of the whole thing one of the girls who was responsible for setting the whole thing up ran up to us and we thought, 'Oh no, here it comes. We're about to get an earful.' And she was clearly worked up, so we we're expecting her to be made for making a mockery of her event, whereas she said 'that was so funny,'" Lodewyck said.

"We really thought it was just going to be a one time thing," Andrukaitis said. And so the Kinky Boot Beasts were born.

Despite the fact that the Boot Beasts almost never practice, the group still manages to land an occasional gig. The band even attends those gigs when they can remember and/or are sober enough to find the correct address.

"It really hasn't required any practice, although perhaps it should have. I find that being well practiced and together as a band is more of a liability for the Boot Beasts," Lodewyck said.

The Boot Beasts describe their sound as one of creativity. And,

A Letter from Fr. Bill Lies, the CSC's Executive Director

These are tough days in which we live. Sometimes we find ourselves wondering what's ahead. The tragedies of terrorism and the ongoing realities of war and violence can, at times, lull us into feelings of hopelessness. Yet, in the face of the suffering, hope is among the most important gifts that each of us has to bring.

The motto of the Congregation of Holy Cross is ave crux spes unica, "hail the cross, our only hope." It embodies the Christian paradox, that the cross is for us the sign of transformation, a symbol of our deliverance from darkness to light, from suffering to joy, from death to life.

In these days, more than ever, our faith must continue to lead us through that cross to that hope. We must pray and work for a just and lasting peace, both for ourselves and our distant neighbors. Each of us is called to play a part in the transformation that would bring this justice and this peace.

I invite you to consider ways that you might begin right here and right now to be a part of the world's transformation. I invite you to push the boundaries of your classroom to the neighborhoods of South Bend and beyond and to enter the lives of those who live and study and work there.

Through the years, thousands have taken part in the many opportunities offered through the Center for Social Concerns and our many partners. Each has made an important difference. Very often their service and learning has transformed them and allowed them to be ever more impressive agents of transformation as they have continued to reach out long after their time at Notre Dame, Saint Mary's and Holy Cross College.

Jesus called love the greatest of all commandments—to love the Lord God with all our hearts and to love our neighbor as ourselves (Mark 12: 28-31). It is not easy in these times—indeed, sometimes it seems impossible—but remains no less our challenge and our call. It is the foundation upon which we will build the justice we seek and the peace we long for.

Be a part of the transformation we are called to, and be transformed. Give yourself away. One or more of the opportunities on these pages will quite possibly change you forever.

Hospitality is an important part of the Center's work on campus. Center hospitality includes: a coffeehouse and kitchen, a large multi-purpose room, seminar rooms, and a reflection room. These facilities are available for use by approved student and community groups. Contact the Center at 631-5293 to reserve rooms for lectures, films, liturgies, meals, other gatherings, and to inquire about the new policies surrounding vehicle use.

e Dame's homegrown, nky Boot Beasts

when pressed, admit that they hope to emulate the sound of their idols Tenacious D lead by actor/comedian/musician/psychopath Jack Black. After all, as Lodewyck points out, they're both fat guys on acoustic guitars singing filthy songs.

"In all fairness, we suck. But we're funny and that's what we're going for," Lodewyck said.

The Boot Beasts don't claim to be the best band around (or even competent to have driver's licenses) but they do hope that the future of campus music will be much brighter than it is now. Lodewyck is encouraged by the number of musically inclined freshmen he has met this year and encourages them to follow in his footsteps of not sleeping on Tuesday nights and concocting interesting monikers.

Band names is, in fact, one of Lodewyck's fetishes. Since he began playing guitar seven and a half years ago, Lodewyck has been in bands named Horatio's Orgasm, Six Inches Between Us, The Vancouver Porn Ensemble, and The Salvation Airforce, to name a few.

"For a band like the Boot Beast, the name matters as much as the music, but it will never be as important as our good looks," Lodewyck said.

Though Lodewyck and Andrukaitis pride themselves on their lack of practice, both are, in fact, talented musicians. It's their taste that may have some of their audience raising eyebrows.

For example, at their gig on last Friday night (to which they "lost" their set list for), The Kinky Boot Beasts included a cover of Johnny Cash's "Folsom Prison Blues," a three second long piece called "A List of Things I Wouldn't Do To Have Sex With Anna Kournikova," and a medley of pop songs played to the same four chords.

"Our style is a total bastardization of all popular music," Andrukaitis said.

With Andrukaitis' impending departure at graduation Lodewyck plans to move onto more serious endeavors such as a venture playing trombone in a third-wave ska band tentatively named Shüger in the Raw with former Skammunists guitarist Pete Balogh. Though Andrukaitis said that he would definitely return for some reunion shows.

But the Boot Beasts, serious or not, do it for the fans. When asked if the pair got had lot of groupies, Lodewyck replied, "Sadly."

Editor's Note: This article is the first in a series featuring campus bands. Any bands that are from the Notre Dame, Saint Mary's or Holy Cross campuses that wish to have their group featured in the Scene section should send an e-mail to scene@nd.edu. No off campus bands, please.

NAME YOUR
BAND

Sometimes, the best part of the college music scene is the band names.

But picking a good name can make or break a band. Remember Chumbawumba?

Yeah, neither do we. Luckily, Scene has devised a foolproof way to select a band name.

Here's how it works:

- 1) Pick a word from each column as randomly as possible
- 2) Read selected words out loud starting with the word "the."
- 3) Get famous, get hooked on drugs, die young.

New 'Big Red' emerges as Cyclones crush Huskers

Associated Press

AMES, Iowa

There's a new Big Red to deal with in the Big 12 North, where Iowa State suddenly has eclipsed Nebraska.

Seneca Wallace ran for two touchdowns and threw for another as the 19th-ranked Cyclones signaled a shift of power in the conference by dominating No. 20 Nebraska 36-14 Saturday.

Adam Benike added three field goals for the Cyclones (5-1, 2-0 Big 12), who handed the Cornhuskers (3-2, 0-1) their first consecutive regular-season losses since 1976.

Tom Osborne's fourth year as coach.

"I was ready for this one like never before," said Iowa State's Michael Wagner, who rushed for 107 yards in 19 carries. "This was time to shock the world. I guess we did it."

Iowa State receiver Lane Danielsensen wasn't nearly a surprised by the team's effort.

"Going into it, I expected victory," Danielsensen said. "I felt like we were a better team. There was never a point in the game when I felt we were going to lose the game."

Nebraska center John Garrison felt the exact opposite way, predicting a victory during the week.

"I made that comment because of the confidence I had in this team," he said. "It's not the performance I pictured."

The loss came two weeks after a numbing 40-7 setback to Penn State and is sure to turn up the heat on fifth-year Nebraska coach Frank Solich, whose team committed five turnovers in losing for the fourth time in the last seven games. All four losses have come on the road.

"We'll either splinter apart or come together," Solich said. "There's no middle ground."

Iowa State beat a ranked team for the first time since 1993 and is poised to make a run for the Big 12 North championship. The 22-point margin was the Cyclones' largest against Nebraska since a 34-0 win in 1899.

Thousands of red-clad Iowa State fans ran onto the field when the game ended, with many climbing the goal posts. Coach Dan McCarney was caught in the middle.

"I got a fat lip out of that," McCarney said with a smile. "I don't think somebody hit me on purpose. That can get a little dangerous, but I'll try to fight my way out of that danger any time."

Iowa 42, Penn State 35

After blowing a 22-point fourth-quarter lead, Iowa settled down during an overtime that must have felt oddly familiar.

C.J. Jones caught a 6-yard touchdown pass in the extra period, and Penn State's fourth-down pass fell incomplete as the Hawkeyes (4-1) upset the 12-ranked Nittany Lions 42-35 Saturday.

In the Big Ten opener for both teams, Brad Banks passed for 261 yards to lead Iowa (4-1), and his throw to Jones in the overtime was his fourth touchdown pass.

After the game, Penn State coach Joe Paterno ran over to an official and grabbed him by the shoulder. It wasn't immediately clear which call Paterno was angry about.

It was just the second overtime game for both teams, with the first coming against each other two years ago. In that game, the Hawkeyes kicked a field goal in the second OT, then intercepted a pass from Rashard Casey to win it 26-23.

"We were hoping our defense would hold Penn State, and they were able to come together and win it for us," Fred Russell said. "It felt like it did two years ago, when we won it in overtime here."

The difference this time was that Iowa had it wrapped up until Penn State (3-1) staged a frantic comeback in the last 7 1/2 minutes of regulation.

Penn State's defense started the comeback when Bryan Scott intercepted a pass in the end zone that could have put the game away for Iowa. Jovon Johnson intercepted it right back for Iowa and returned it to the Penn State 1-yard line, but Michael Haynes forced Russell to fumble on the next play.

"If we protect the ball a little better in the second half, it's probably not as exciting," Iowa coach Kirk Ferentz said.

Zack Mills completed 23 of 44 passes for a school-record 399 yards. Three of his four touchdown passes came in the fourth quarter to three different players named Johnson: 36 yards to Larry, 44 yards to Tony — followed by a 2-point conversion run by Chris Ganter — and 8 yards to Bryant. That tied it at 35 with 1:20 left.

Penn State wasn't nearly effective on its OT possession, however. On second-and-8 from the 9-yard line, Mills threw to Tony Johnson 2 yards out on the left sideline, but Johnson was ruled out of bounds.

Two plays later, Mills' final pass attempt hit one of his offensive linemen and fell to the ground to end the game.

"We made some mistakes" in the fourth quarter, Iowa defensive back Bob Sanders said. "But we corrected those and ended up doing the job."

Bryant Johnson had eight catches for 146 yards and two touchdowns, and Tony Johnson had four catches for 111 yards and one score.

But until the fourth quarter, Penn State's offense was anemic. The Nittany Lions finished with just 54 yards rushing, and Michael Robinson — the backup quarterback who scored five touchdowns on 12 carries in Penn State's last two games — had minus-2 yards on four carries.

Mills said his final pass also was intended for Robinson.

"He was the guy I was supposed to go to," Mills said. "I didn't make the right read. It was my fault."

USC 22, Oregon State 0

Nothing like a rugged "pre-season" to get a football team ready for conference games.

Southern California opened Pac-10 play Saturday with a 22-0 victory over previously unbeaten Oregon State.

The Trojans (3-1, 1-0) were coming off wins against Auburn and Colorado and a loss to Kansas State. The Beavers (4-1, 0-1) had a much softer early schedule with games against Eastern Kentucky, Temple, UNLV and Fresno State.

"It has been a march to get to the conference," USC coach Pete Carroll said.

"Not to take anything away from our first three games, but those were preseason. This is what counts."

Pete Carroll
USC head coach

Carroll said. "Not to take anything away from our first three games, but those were preseason. This is what counts."

Carson Palmer threw a pair of touchdowns passes to Mike Williams, and the Trojans' aggressive defense shut down an Oregon State offense that ranked second in the nation.

It was only the second time a Dennis Erickson-coached team was shut out, with the other a 29-0 Fiesta Bowl loss to Arizona in 1994 when Erickson was at Miami. The NFL's Seattle Seahawks were never held scoreless during his four seasons as their coach.

"I've never had an offense that was so inefficient as we were today," Erickson said. "Give their defense credit. It was ugly."

"Offensively, I'm puzzled on how we went from where we were (in the first four games) to what happened today. We were in second-and-long all game."

DeShaun Hill had six tackles and Mike Patterson had two of five sacks to lead the Trojans, who held the Beavers to 131 yards.

The Beavers came into the game averaging 499.8 yards, and Derek Anderson was No. 2 in passing efficiency. Pressured constantly by the Trojans, the sophomore quarterback went 8-of-30 for 80 yards and lost two fumbles.

"We didn't play to have a shootout," Carroll said. "We played to have a big defensive day. It's so much fun when you can fool their quarterback. We made it hard on them by making them guess all day."

USC defensive end Omar Nazeel said the Trojans were determined not to let Oregon State get into a groove.

"You can't give them an inch; they'll take a mile," said Nazeel, whose six tackles included three for losses. "When you shut the door, you have to close it, lock it and double-bolt it."

The defeat was Oregon State's 28th in the last 29 games against the Trojans — the Beavers beat them at Corvallis in 2000 — and the 19th straight loss at the Coliseum dating back to 1960. USC holds an all-time 55-8-4 edge, including 37-4-3 in Los Angeles.

Palmer went 23-of-41 for 231 yards and threw one interception.

He connected with Williams on a scoring throw of 11 yards just before halftime and added a 16-yard TD pass in the third quarter.

"Offensively, we didn't play very well, I didn't play very well," Palmer said. "The defense won the game."

Tomlinson's 217 yards get Chargers by Pats

♦ Rams lose game to Cowboys and Warner to injury and fall to 0-4

Associated Press

SAN DIEGO Yes, the San Diego Chargers are for real. Any doubts were left in the vapor trails of LaDainian Tomlinson and his teammates as they raced past the New England Patriots.

Tomlinson tied the team rushing record with 217 yards and scored on runs of 58 and 37 yards as the Chargers defeated the defending Super Bowl champions 21-14 Sunday in a battle of unbeaten teams.

Playing in what Junior Seau called their biggest game in three years, the Chargers improved to 4-0 for the first time their Super Bowl season of 1994.

"We shook up the world, baby," said Tomlinson, who had the most yards rushing in the NFL this season.

That was about as exuberant as the Chargers got, although a rare full house at Qualcomm Stadium went wild. The Chargers felt validated by the victory, but there's still three-quarters of the season left.

"It doesn't mean anything unless we make the postseason," said Seau, who hasn't been to the playoffs since 1995. "We're growing, and we hope to build on it."

The Patriots (3-1) lost for the first time in 13 games, including last year's Super Bowl run. It was also their first loss in 11 games against the Chargers, dating to 1973.

"It's a feeling we haven't had for a while," Brady said. "We're all a little shellshocked right now. It's not that they're not a good team and didn't go out and beat us. But in a lot of respects, we beat ourselves."

With both Seau and safety Rodney Harrison in the lineup for the first time since opening day, the Chargers shut out Brady and the Patriots' powerful offense in the second half.

But it was Tomlinson's running that carried the Chargers. The go-ahead score came on his 58-yard run — the longest of his career — on the second play of the third quarter. He was helped along by an unbelievable block from pint-size receiver Tim Dwight.

Tomlinson cut outside, side-stepped one tackler about mid-field and headed down the right sideline. The 5-foot-9, 180-pound Dwight, a former Big Ten 100-meter champion at Iowa, showed incredible closing speed when he came from behind the play. He outran even Tomlinson and drove cornerback Otis Smith about 12 yards before sending him to the ground. That allowed Tomlinson to score the only touchdown of the second half.

"I saw Tim coming up and I said, 'Am I running that slow?'" Tomlinson said.

"It was just a block," Dwight said. "Curtis Conway did a great job of getting the first part, and I just finished it."

Tomlinson's 37-yard touchdown run tied the game at 14 late in the second quarter. He started off right tackle, then cut back inside and found a hole opened by rookie center Jason Ball. Tomlinson outran defensive backs Smith and Victor Green to the end zone.

"All I had to do is beat the secondary guys and take it to the house," Tomlinson said of his scoring runs.

Cowboys 13, Rams 10

A bad season just keeps getting worse for the St. Louis Rams.

The defending NFC champions lost quarterback Kurt Warner before losing their fourth

"It's a feeling we haven't had in a while. We're all a little shellshocked right now. It's not that they're not a good team ... But in a lot of respects, we beat ourselves."

Tom Brady
Patriots quarterback straight game Sunday, 13-10 to the Dallas Cowboys. Picked by many in the pre-season to get back to the Super Bowl, the Rams fell to 0-4 for the first time since 1963, when they started with five straight losses and finished 5-9.

"That's life," coach Mike Martz said. "You can't sit and stew about it. That's where we are, and what's important is what we do about it."

Rookie Billy Cundiff kicked a 48-yard field goal as time expired to win it for the Cowboys (2-2).

The Rams, who went 14-2 last year, fell to must somehow improve quickly just to get back to .500, and they'll have to do it without Warner, who has a broken little finger on his throwing hand. The team said the injury will be evaluated Monday to determine whether he'll require surgery.

"Usually those things take about a month," Martz said. "But it could be sooner. Who knows?"

Warner broke the same finger in 2000 and it required surgery, knocking him out for five games. If he's out that long again, there might be no rush. The only 0-4 team to make the playoffs was the 1992 San Diego Chargers.

"I'm not believing that one bit," Warner said. "We've got too good of a team to believe that. I believe I'm going to be back just in time to take us down that stretch run into the playoffs, and on to where we want to go."

The Rams don't have any relief in sight. They play at San Francisco next, then host Oakland.

Dallas quarterback Quincy Carter, who didn't earn a vote of confidence from owner Jerry Jones after a shaky first three games, led the Cowboys 41 yards on nine plays in 1:27 to set up the field goal.

"I knew we didn't need a touchdown to win it; we just needed to keep moving the ball down the field," Carter said. "Everybody really had to pay attention. I did my part, but also my line did their part, my receivers, my backs. I just thought, as a collective group, that we did a great job handling the 2-minute drive."

Attention Juniors:

Junior Parents Weekend is scheduled for February 14 through February 16 2003. There are still three positions available on the Junior Parents Weekend Planning committee. They are as follows:

Mass Chair: This position will require a moderate amount of time. This individual will be working directly with campus ministry, all the choirs, and various musical ensembles. In addition, they will be required to choose a homilist and priest to preside over the mass.

Hospitality Chair: This position requires a minimal amount of time. The person will be in charge of organizing and setting up the hospitality room in La Fortune for the weekend. They will also need to work with the sophomore chair to obtain sophomore volunteers for the weekend.

Halls Luncheon Chair: This position requires a minimal amount of time. The individual will be responsible to meet with the dorm committee members to organize and set up the luncheons. They might also be responsible for organizing an off campus luncheon.

For applications for these positions go to 315 La Fortune. For more information about Junior Parents Weekend call 1-6128 or email us at jpw@nd.edu.

European Ryder Cup coach Sam Torrance holds the Ryder Cup as his team surrounds him after Europe's stunning 15 1/2-12 1/2 victory over the United States Sunday.

Europe edges out U.S. to win Ryder Cup

Associated Press

SUTTON COLDFIELD, England
The underdogs were the best from top to bottom.

Ripping a page out of the American playbook, Europe won early and won big with its best players. And that inspired the rest of a no-name cast to snatch the Ryder Cup away from Tiger Woods, Phil Mickelson and a heavily favored U.S. squad.

"It was a huge risk," Colin Montgomerie said. "And it worked very, very well."

Europe beat the Americans at their own game Sunday, winning the singles matches for only the sixth time in history to capture the most precious golf prize on the continent.

"Hopefully, that will say to the Americans we can play singles, and we can compete with them and also beat them," Montgomerie said. "It was a superb day for European golf."

The final score was 151/2-121/2, the largest margin by either side since Europe scored 161/2 points in 1985, the first time the Ryder Cup was played at The Belfry. Sam Torrance was the star that day, making the clinching putt.

He was equally important as the European captain.

"He took a hell of a gamble by front-loading his team like he did," U.S. captain Curtis Strange said. "Because if they don't do well, in my mind it's over."

No one was more magnificent than Monty.

He led the charge by beating Scott Hoch in the opening match and whipped the partisan crowd into a frenzy early. Montgomerie was unbeaten at The Belfry, never trailing in any of the 82 holes he played this week.

Phillip Price helped bring up the rear.

A timid Welshman who is ranked No. 119 in the world, Price scored a surprisingly easy victory over Mickelson that deflated any American hopes of a comeback.

In the middle was Niclas Fasth, who survived a spectacular finish by Paul Azinger, and Paul McGinley, who clinched the Cup with an 8-foot par putt.

"Out of the shadows come heroes," Torrance said. "And that's where Paul McGinley and Phillip Price came."

Not many have heard of these guys before, but the Americans sure won't forget them.

"We don't give Sam's team enough credit because they can really play," Strange said.

IN BRIEF

Nebraska unranked for first time since 1981

For the first time in 21 years, Nebraska is not ranked in The Associated Press college football poll.

The Cornhuskers (3-2) fell out of the Top 25 on Sunday after a 36-14 loss to Iowa State — ending a run of 348 consecutive polls.

Nebraska moved into the AP rankings Oct. 5, 1981, and remained among college football's top teams week after week after week until a second straight loss knocked it out.

During the streak, Nebraska won two AP national championships (in 1994 and 1995) and was ranked No. 1 in 52 polls. The Huskers were 49-31-1 against ranked teams, with four of those losses coming in the team's last seven games dating to last season.

A 40-7 loss at Penn State on Sept. 14 dropped Nebraska from No. 8 to No. 18.

The next week the Huskers fell to No. 20 despite not playing. The loss to the Cyclones was the clincher — Nebraska received a grand total of 10 points in this week's balloting.

No. 25 Colorado State had 206 points.

Florida (4-1), ranked No. 6 this week after a 41-34 victory over Kentucky, now owns the longest consecutive polls streak, at 208.

To match the Huskers' run, the Gators would need to be ranked in every poll for the next eight years.

Nebraska also fell out of the USA Today/ESPN Coaches poll.

Clemens to start Game 1 Tuesday vs. Angels

Roger Clemens gets the Game 1 assignment, and Orlando Hernandez is the odd-man out in manager Joe Torre's starting rotation for the New York Yankees' playoff series against the Anaheim Angels.

Torre said Sunday that Clemens will start Tuesday in the opener of the best-of-five series against the Angels, who enter as the AL wild-card team.

Clemens will be followed by Andy Pettitte, Mike Mussina and David Wells.

Clemens went 13-6 with a 4.35 ERA in 29 starts, but his numbers didn't influence Torre as much as his experience and leadership.

"I'm as confident with Roger as I am with somebody else. I really can't come up with a reason for it," Torre said. "Roger is Roger. He's been a leader for us. There is a certain step up when you hit the postseason."

Hernandez started 22 games for the AL East champs, going 8-5 with a 3.64 ERA, but he will work out of the bullpen against the Angels.

Torre said he told the right-hander of his decision several days ago.

"He said he was fine. We're concerned about winning ball games, and somebody has to be left out," Torre said. "He accepted it the way I anticipated he would."

Irish boats claim top 3 spots from Kansas

By CHRISTINE ARMSTRONG
Sports Writer

After an impressive finish last weekend in the Milwaukee River Challenge, the Irish rowed into the top three spots over Kansas in this weekend's races on the St. Joseph River.

Cassie Markstahler (cox), Natalie Ladine, Ashlee Warren, Elizabeth Specht, Alice Bartek, Becky Luckett, Erica Drennen, Kerri Murphy and Kathleen Welsh led the Notre Dame A boat to a first-place finish in 13 minutes, 39.35 seconds.

The varsity B crew of Kathryn Long (cox), Kati Sedun, Ann Marie Dillhoff, Casey Buckstaff, Meghan Boyle, Diane Price, Meredith Thornburgh, Katie Chenoweth and Sarah Keefer finished with a second-place time of 13:51.91.

The Notre Dame C boat of Maureen Gibbons (cox), Kristin Mizzi, Shannon Mohan, Melissa Felker, Christy Donnelly, Danielle Stealy, Jenna Froberg, Sarah Palandech and Megan Sanders secured third place with a time of 14:04.08, just 17 seconds ahead of the Kansas A boat.

The Kansas B boat took fifth place with a 14:33.07 finish and the Notre Dame D boat of Caitlin Rackish (cox), Katie O'Hara, Alicia Garcia, Katherine McCalden, Kristin Henkel, Antoinette Duck, Fallon Shields, Rachel Polinski and Devon Hegeman finished with a sixth-place time of 14:48.78.

Finally, the Notre Dame E members, Becky Campbell (cox), Ann Mulligan, Tricia David, Andrea Amoni, Tori Blainey, Corrine Roman, Jennifer Connelly, Kristen Wright and Beth Franzosa pulled in a time of 15:14.52.

The team attributes some of its success this weekend to the home fans' enthusiasm and support.

"It was a lot of fun for us to race on our home course and to actually have a crowd there to cheer us on," Ladine said.

The team, which had been practicing in smaller boats, usually pairs, used this race against Kansas to strengthen its unity.

"I think we continue to get better with each race," first varsity eight rower Drennen said. "Our goal is to raise the level of intensity each week this fall, and we definitely brought it up a notch for this race. Also, to have three eights beat Kansas's first boat is a testament to the depth on our team this year."

The rowers are satisfied with their performances so far, but will continue to push themselves more with each upcoming race, especially when the team races in Pittsburgh next weekend.

"The competition this weekend was not nearly as tough as what we will be up against next weekend in Pittsburgh," Ladine said. "This weekend gave us the additional racing experience and heightened level of intensity which will help us tremendously at the Head of the Ohio next weekend."

The team will compete in the Head of the Ohio Saturday in Pittsburgh.

Andrea Werner finished second at 231 (79-77-75).

"This win bodes well for the future," said Gebauer, describing the impact of winning their home invitational. "The team's really excited. I think the high expectations made us really concentrate and focus on this week. We weren't going to look past this."

King also noted how the play of the younger members of the team will build for the future.

"This early success helps build a program," King said. "It's neat to have such young players who are mature enough to travel already, and it really makes us look forward to the future."

Notes:

◆ Next up for the Irish is the Shootout at the Legends, held in Franklin, Ind., on Oct. 7 and 8.

◆ Freshman Suzie Hayes and senior Terri Taibl also competed as individuals in the event. Hayes tied for 31st at 245 (85-82-78) while Taibl tied for 64th with 255 (84-86-85).

◆ The Irish won the event for the second time in three years. They won the inaugural event in 2000 by 30 strokes over Princeton.

any one team that is dominating," said Belles sophomore Jen Concannon, who also had a pair of goals in the match. "Right now any team can take it, and we definitely feel we have a chance."

Midfielder Emily Wagoner and defender Jen Herdman also added goals to the Belles' tally.

The Belles continue to show that they are a team on the rise. Only nine games into the season, they are two-thirds of the way to their six-win total from last year.

"Last year was sort of a starting over for our program," the sophomore Concannon said. "It kind of started with Bobby Johnston last season, and now Coach Pfau has come in and done a good job with the team this year."

The Belles next take on Kalamazoo College on the road Wednesday at 4 p.m. The game will be important for Saint Mary's, as Kalamazoo is just a game behind in the MIAA standings at 2-2.

"The conference as really been turned upside down from last year," Irvin said. "The teams that were winning last year are losing now, so we think we definitely have a chance to move to the top of the conference."

Deep bench sparks Irish in pair of victories

CHIP MARKS/The Observer

Irish sophomore Emily Loomis goes up for a spike in a Notre Dame victory Friday night against Connecticut.

By MATT LOZAR
Sports Writer

After watching her team blow a 15-6 lead in game one and fall behind big in game two, Irish volleyball coach Debbie Brown had to do something quickly to prevent the Irish from losing their first home Big East match.

Brown worked Kim Fletcher, Kelly Burrell and Meg Henican into the complete rotation and saw her team turn deficits of 20-10 and 29-24 into a 33-31 game two win.

Riding the momentum from game two's impressive comeback, Notre Dame defeated Connecticut 28-30, 33-31, 30-18, 31-29 Friday and two days later, defeated St. John's 30-26, 25-30, 30-20, 31-29.

The Irish's used the energy from game two's comeback as a springboard for the rest of the weekend.

"It was really important to win because you don't want to go down 0-2 and lose the momentum. I think it was huge for us just from a momentum standpoint to take that game," Brown said. "I am really surprised [we won game two]. It is really hard to come back from that big of a deficit with rally scoring, but we played very inspired and put some things together at the end. That game was very critical for us."

For the first time this season, Brown allowed Henican outside of the back row. Henican had been nursing a slight abdominal injury, but with the freshman finally healthy, Brown figured the time was right to unleash the top player of an impressive recruiting class.

"We just haven't had the opportunity to get [Meg] in the front row. I think it was time for us to see what she could do," Brown said. "It was one of those things where you see who is playing well and who isn't, and you need a spark."

Henican took full advantage of her time on the court.

"It was fun," Henican said. "We practice every day for stuff like this. I felt like I was well prepared."

Fletcher, a preseason all-Big East selection, got a kill on her first point and finished with 11 on the match. Meanwhile, Burrell saw her first significant playing time of the season replacing Kristen Kinder at setter. The freshman finished with 35 assists, four digs and five blocks.

"I think with the momentum we built at the end of game two, I thought it was important to keep those guys together [in the rest of the games] since they had a good chemistry out there," Brown said.

The Irish (11-3) dominated the Huskies (4-8) in game three and were cruising in game four before the Huskies battled back. Down 25-14, Connecticut won eight consecutive points and eventually tied Notre Dame at 29. But a Husky error and an Emily Loomis block closed the game and match for the Irish.

Before Sunday's match against St. John's (12-8), Notre Dame had never dropped a game to the Red Storm in seven previous meetings. The Irish took advantage of 22.5 team blocks, 12 from freshman Lauren Kelbley, to overcome their passing difficulties.

"When we were serving, blocking, and playing a lot of defense, we did score a lot of points, but we were giving up a lot when we were receiving serves because we weren't passing very well," Brown said. "We didn't adjust to their servers and gave up several points in a row. That's something we have to do a better job of."

The Red Storm had a 12-8 lead in game three when the Irish took control. Winning 22 of the game's 30 points, including the last seven, gave the Irish game three.

St. John's jumped out to an early 7-1 advantage in game four before Notre Dame used a timeout to regroup. The Irish tied the game at 12 on a Loomis kill and took the lead for good on Kelbley's kill at 19-18. Despite two ugly victories this weekend, the Irish are happy to start Big East action undefeated.

"It wasn't our best weekend," Kinder said. "We struggled a little bit. [Sunday] I thought the energy was better, but we didn't execute well. It's tough because we realize teams want to come in here and knock us off because we are the leaders in the Big East."

Fit to be tied: Irish equal No. 19 Rutgers

By JOE HETTLER
Associate Sports Editor

It was another good performance for the No. 10 Notre Dame mens soccer team and another game without a victory.

For the second straight game the Irish battled a ranked Big East opponent and still could not pull out a win, tying No. 19 Rutgers 1-1 in double overtime. Notre Dame lost to second-ranked St. John's 1-0 Thursday night.

"It's disappointing we didn't actually finish the job, but that'll come," Irish coach Bobby Clark said. "There's an old saying that you've got to be the bridesmaid before you can be the bride. So I think we've been the bridesmaid more than we should."

Midfielder Justin Dettler scored his fourth goal of the season, while Chad Riley tallied his team-leading seventh assist of the year.

The Scarlet Knights took the lead in the 68th minute with a goal by Sam Castellano. But the Irish were able to match Rutgers' mark with Dettler's game-tying goal in the 79th minute.

Notre Dame out shot Rutgers 21-13, forcing Scarlet Knight goalie Ricky Zinter to save 10 shots. Meanwhile, Irish goalie Chris Sawyer successfully defended four Rutgers shots.

While the Irish held the overall advantage in shots, Rutgers had an important 9-5 edge in corner kicks.

"We actually played very, very well," Clark said. "It was an excellent performance. It was a tough weekend for us because I thought we played very well in the St. John's game and the Rutgers game and we only came out with one tie."

The Irish are now 4-2-3 on the season and 2-1-1 in Big East play.

Notre Dame headed into the contest having lost its last five games against Rutgers, and the Irish were 1-6 at the Scarlet Knights' home field. In its last six meetings with Rutgers, Notre Dame had been outscored 11-2.

"I think this is all tremendous experience for this team and I think you know it's going to come out right in the end," Clark said.

Notre Dame will face Big East foe Pittsburgh Oct. 4 at home before heading to Akron, Ohio to face the Zips.

Clark knows his team must be sharp against Pittsburgh if they hope to win their third conference game of the year. Pittsburgh, like Notre Dame, lost to St. John's 1-0.

"[Pittsburgh] is a very tough team," Clark said. "They're a big, strong team and it'll be another test. It's going to be one of these tough games, and if we take them lightly for one second, it'll be a very, very long evening for us. We've got to be absolutely fired to get back into the race for the [Big East conference title]."

An Irish golfer lines up a put in competition in the Notre Dame Invitational this weekend. The Irish edged Western Michigan by three strokes to win the tournament.

◆ Irish win 2nd Notre Dame Invite in 3 years

By ANDY TROEGER
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame womens golf team had high expectations coming into this weekend's Notre Dame Invitational, and they did not disappoint.

Led by a mixture of youth and depth, the Irish captured the event by three strokes over Western Michigan. The Irish also placed five individuals in the top 20.

"It's an excellent start for us," Irish coach Debby King said. "We are right now concentrating on staying in the present moment. We're not thinking of the past, not thinking of the future, but just taking care of business."

The Irish fired a team total of 945 (316-310-319) to hold off Western Michigan's hard charge in the final round. Despite being 14 strokes back heading into the final round of play, the Broncos scored a tournament best 308 for a 948 total. Northern Iowa held second place heading into Sunday but struggled to a 325 to finish third.

The Irish were led by one of four freshmen in the lineup, Lauren Gebauer. The rookie tied for the lead after the first 18 holes and finished in a tie for fifth individually at 234 (75-77-82). Since Gebauer competed as an individual last week at Michigan State, it was the first time she contributed to the team's score.

"It really was a carry over from last week when I shot a 76 in the last round," Gebauer said. "It just got me to work harder in practice and to really focus on this tournament."

The rest of the Irish squad also made important contributions as three other golfers finished in the top 20. Junior Shannon Byrne fired a 239 (82-77-80) to tie for 15th, while freshman Sarah Bassett tied for 18th at 241 (78-78-85) and classmate Katie Brophy finished tied for 20th with 242 (87-78-77).

Former Notre Dame Invitational medalist Rebecca Rogers fired 248 (83-85-80) and Lauren Barbir added a 249 (81-85-83) to round out the Irish team total.

In addition to winning the team title, Irish sophomore Karen Lotta finished tied for third overall in the individual competition. Lotta fired a 72 Sunday, the low round of the tournament. She finished two shots off the pace set by Allison Cusick of Cincinnati who finished at 230 (77-75-78). Evansville's

Belles destroy Olivet squad of 11 players

By CHRIS FEDERICO
Sports Editor

The Belles soccer team smelled blood Saturday, and they went for the throat.

Olivet arrived at Saint Mary's with only 11 players — just enough to field a complete team — and the Belles never let up on their undermanned opponents, defeating the Comets 6-0.

"They only had 11 players, so they couldn't substitute anyone into the game," Belles forward Wendy Irvin said. "We try to go out and do the same thing every game, but we were just able to tire them out because they didn't have any subs."

The junior Irvin had two goals in the contest, moving her into second place in the MIAA with four goals on the season.

The Belles avenged two overtime losses to the Comets during the 2001 season with the lopsided victory.

Olivet's deficiency of players also kept the team from making a scoring threat in the game. Saint Mary's goalkeeper Maureen MacDonald got her second shutout of the season in keeping the Comets off the scoreboard.

The victory pushes Saint Mary's record to 4-4-1 and 2-1-1 in the MIAA Conference — tied for second place and just one game out of the lead.
