College replaces interim security head

By JAMIE BELCHER
News Writer

Dan Woods is leaving his position as interim security director at Saint Mary's to focus on his other role of safety officer. Rosemarie Harris has been appointed as his replacement.

"Mr. Woods is our safety officer," said Linda Timm, vice president for student affairs. "It was becoming very difficult to manage both the responsibilities of safety officer and the responsibilities of interim director."

According to Melanie Engler, public relations director, the decision to switch interim directors was based solely upon the desire to allow Woods to focus his full attention on his responsibilities as chief safety officer.

Harris, Woods' replacement, said she is using her first week at Saint Mary's to get settled into her new role and meeting with faculty and reviewing operations of the department.

"Everybody that I came into contact with here at Saint Mary's has made me feel so welcome and they're helping in every way they can," she said.

Harris is a former member of the Notre Dame Police Department and has also served in other colleges departments. She was the deputy chief of police at Butler University and was captain of the operations division of the Indiana University at Bloomington Police Department. Harris is a graduate of the Federal Bureau of Investigation National Academy and the Indiana Law Enforcement Academy.

The fact that a new and permanent director of security has not yet been appointed, however, is unsettling to some students.

"It makes me nervous because if we keep changing [directors] how can we be secure?" said sophomore Maureen Bush. "Where's the continuity?"

Saint Mary's plans to launch a nationwide search for a director this spring, according to Timm.

Rabbi defends Pope Pius XII

By KATERI MCCARTHY
News Writer

Connecting recent debates on Catholicism to Church involvement in the Holocaust, Rabbi David Dalin challenged the historical representation of Pope Pius XII during World War II.

In his Monday evening lecture, "Pius XII and the Jews," Dalin, a Princeton professor, criticized books that vilify Pius XII, such as Garry Wills' "Papal Sin" and John Cornwell's "Hitler's Pope." These books address Pope Pius' alleged failure to speak out against Hitler during the war.

"Hitler's Pope" denounces Pope Pius as "the most dangerous church man in modern history," without whom "Hitler might never have been able to press forward," Dalin said, adding that such views are gross misrepresentations.

He pointed out that many prominent Jewish leaders both during and after World War II, including Albert Einstein, Golda Meir, Moshe Sharett and Rabbi Isaac Herzog, expressed publicly their gratitude for the efforts made by Pope Pius during the war.

Dalin also highlighted the efforts made by the bishop of Rome during the war to condemn the Nazi regime. Giving one example, Dalin read an editorial in the New York Times the day after the Pope's 1941 Christmas address.

"The voice of Pius XII is a lonely voice in the silence and darkness enveloping Europe this Christmas ... the pope put himself squarely against Hitler," Dalin said, reading the editorial.

The Nazis understood the Pope's statements as attacks on their regime, Dalin said, adding that Hitler's notes spoke publicly of wanting to besiege the Vatican.

"Pius XII was not Hitler's pope but the closest Jews had come to having a papal supporter," Dalin said.

Dalin went on to illustrate efforts the pope made to protect Jews.

"In the months Rome was under German occupation Pius XII instructed Italy's clergy to save lives by all means," he said.

After discussing several acts that showed Pius' benevolence toward Jews during World War II, Dalin addressed the question of why Pius never excommunicated Hitler.

He said a papal declaration of excommunication could have done some good, but it also could have enraged Hitler and provoked retaliation towards both Jews and Catholics causing "the mass murder of hundreds of thousands more."

Dalin called for "a new understanding of Pius XII's role."

"It needs to be remembered that he had been so universally praised by the Jews," Dalin said. "[Pius] saved more Jews than any other person."

In response to a dissenter that questioned the extent of Pius' efforts, Dalin said, "There is no question Pius XII could have done more."

Johnson empowers women

◆ Women's talk celebrates school's co-education week

By JASON MCFARLEY
News Writer

Women should emulate character traits in other women who they look up to, Chandra Johnson told a group of female students Tuesday.

"Look at your mother, look at the women in your life and pick and choose what you want to replicate in your own life," said Johnson, assistant to University President Father Edward Malloy and assistant director of Campus Ministry.

Johnson's hour-long talk in Welsh Family Hall was part of a week of activities observing the 30th anniversary of co-education at Notre Dame. The student government-sponsored events began Sunday with a run to benefit breast cancer research.

In a revealing discussion, Johnson recounted growing up in South Central Los Angeles with a mother suffering from bipolar disorder. The mental illness led her mother to say and do things that hurt Johnson's self-confidence.

Johnson's work as an executive assistant in the male-dominated corporate world also skewed her perception of herself and other women, she said.

But Johnson began to think differently when she entered Notre Dame in 1992 as a 38-year-old undergraduate.

"When I sat in those classes and read those books, a whole new world opened up to me," said Johnson, now 48, to a group of about two dozen students, including three men. "I decided that I was either going to be the woman my mother convinced me I was going to be or the woman God created me to be."

The person Johnson is today isn't the one she was 10 years ago, she said.

She took the Campus Ministry position in July 1996, two months after receiving her bachelor's degree in theology. She's been Malloy's assistant since August 1998. She is the first woman to hold the job and is the sole female administrator in Malloy's office.

Her presence brings balance to the president's office, she said.

"I wonder how they functioned so long without a woman's perspective," she said. Being the only woman at the boardroom table is sometimes intimidating, Johnson said. Still, she urged students to never be afraid to speak their opinions.

She said Notre Dame is still a male-dominated institution but pointed to signs of female progress, such as the election of the University's first and second female student body presidents in the past two years.

Cooperation between the sexes is key to the advancement of women, Johnson said.

"We're not going to bust open the system if we go in with an attitude against men," she said. "We have to know how to work with men if we're going to effect change in a male-controlled structure."

Notre Dame first admitted women as undergraduates in 1972. Student Body President Libby Bishop's office will sponsor events through Sunday to recognize the 30-year anniversary.

A campus kickball tournament at Rolf's Sports Recreation Center is planned for today. The competition between residence halls to create banners celebrating co-education will end with a panel judging the banners today and announcing the winner at Friday's pep rally.

INSIDE COLUMN

I love North

I never thought I'd say these words – ever – but here goes: I love North Dining Hall.

Although I'm less than 75 feet from the building, I've never been a fan. Like most students living in North Quad, I've always savored those treks to South Dining Hall, feeling like a country boy in the big city as I stood in South's food serving area, taking in all the selection.

Since last week, however, I've gained a new appreciation for lowly old North.

It all started last Tuesday when I agreed to meet some friends from Saint Mary's at Noble Family Dining Hall. Now I had heard horror stories of food at Saint Mary's but none of them prepared me for dinner at Noble.

It all started innocently enough. Well, actually it didn't. I strolled over to the salad bar pretty impressed with the selection. It featured croutons, shredded cheese, fresh vegetables and just about anything else you could ask for except for one thing – lettuce. Where they hide the salad at that salad bar is a complete mystery to me.

I finally decided to cut my losses on the lettuce and put some dressing on the croutons. Italian seemed like a nice choice until I noticed that the large bottle of dressing was perfectly separated into its oil and vinegar parts.

"It'll do that sometimes," replied the salad bar attendant when I pointed this problem out. I didn't bother to inform her about the lettuce situation.

Salad was obviously not an option that night so I moved on to the main course.

Saint Mary's dining hall is a lot smaller than North or South at Notre Dame so it's easier to decide what to eat. My decision was primarily based on the fact that there was really just one choice. The pasta station lacked pasta (again, I didn't ask any questions) and I didn't feel like a sandwich so I hopped in the remaining line to see what it offered.

I won't bore you with the gory details of the food I ended up with – meat shadier than anything in North Dining Hall's stir fry station, flavorless potatoes and steamed vegetables that had the life sucked out of them during their preparation.

All I'm going to say is that my experience was so bad that I took my friends up on an offer to treat me to pizza at Dalloways using their munch money.

Now I'm not writing this column to insult the women of Saint Mary's or their precious dining facilities. In fact, I love SMC and I'm one to give credit where it's due. For example, Noble definitely gets props for its desserts: gourmet double chocolate caramel brownies and awesome cookies, but those alone didn't justify the 20-minute walk to our sister school.

The point of this column is to make you follow North Quaders aware of just how good we have it.

I love North Dining Hall – there, I said it again.

Senior Renee Donovan and Father Joe Carey, a Campus Ministry priest discuss commitment Monday night during a sexuality lecture on "Relationships: Sexuality at its best."

Series looks at commitment

By SARAH NESTOR
News Writer

Discussing the importance of commitment in relationships, students gathered to share their thoughts and experiences with each other Monday at Saint Mary's.

The discussion "Moving toward Commitment, Part I" was part of this year's Student Affairs sponsored talks "Relationships: Sexuality at its best."

Moderating the discussion were Student Affairs Vice President Linda Timm, Director of Campus Ministry Judy Fean, Father Joe Carey and Angela Bryant from The Career and Counseling Center.

At the start of the evening, participants were asked to define commitment. Then students and the moderators shared their experiences while in committed relationships with family, friends or significant others, voicing the importance of honesty and compromise.

"If you feel like you are sacrificing yourself or are worried about how you should act because you just can't be you and be accepted for who you are then don't make a commitment to that person,"

Bryant said.

Participants then wrote questions down on cards that were collected and randomly read out loud, allowing everyone a chance to answer. Questions ranged from whether or not commitment is the same as love, how distance affects relationships and if commitment to another person should supersede

"There has to be that willingness to compromise."

Angela Bryant
counselor,
Counseling and Career Development

career goals.

"There are relationships where you can have both [commitment and career]. There has to be that willingness to compromise," Bryant said. "Find an individual that is willing to support career goals."

Ending the session participants found that the keys to commitment are communication, trust and friendship.

"[The other key to commitment is being able] to know that you can disagree, but in a respectful manner," Bryant added.

Students will have the chance to discuss commitment again at the next sexuality discussion "Commitment Life Realities" on Nov. 11 at 7 p.m.

JACC adds extra seats for Mellencamp concert

By JOHN FANNING
News Writer

American rock legend John Mellencamp will be making his way to the Notre Dame Joyce Center Nov. 2 touring in support of his 16th studio album "Cuttin' Heads."

Mellencamp

Tickets for the event, which went on sale Sept. 27, sold out during the first 24 hours. But in response to the event's popularity, however, the Joyce Center ticket office has made rear stage tickets available for sale.

The added seats for the concert are on sale for $34 and can be purchased at the Joyce Center Ticket Office on the second floor of the Joyce Center weekdays between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. For an extra service charge, tickets can also be purchased online through Ticketmaster.

The record, which was released October 2001, debuted at No. 15 on the Billboard Top 200 album chart and sold around 75,000 copies in its first week, according to Mellencamp's official Web site. The album, which has received much critical praise, features ten new studio tracks as well as guest appearances from artists as diverse as rapper Chuck D of the group Public Enemy, soul singer India Arie, and country artist Trisha Yearwood.

Further ticket information can be obtained by calling the ticket office at 631-7356.

Bush fears 'murderous tyrant' may target U.S.

Associated Press

CINCINNATI

President Bush, seeking support for war against Iraq, called Saddam Hussein a "murderous tyrant" Monday night and said he may be plotting to attack the United States with biological and chemical weapons.

Bush also said Saddam could be within a year of developing a nuclear weapon, and he declared, "Facing clear evidence of peril, we cannot wait for the final proof — the smoking gun — that could come in the form of a mushroom cloud."

"I am not willing to stake one American life on trusting Saddam Hussein," the president said.

His address opened a week of debate in Congress over resolutions giving the president authority to wage war against Iraq. The House and Senate planned votes for Thursday, and the Bush-backed resolution was expected to pass by wide margins.

Facing skepticism at home and abroad, Bush portrayed an apocalyptic struggle between good and evil, saying the threat posed by Saddam could dwarf the damage done in the Sept. 11 attacks. He said Iraq must be the next front in the war on terrorism.

"There is no refuge from our responsibilities," Bush said. If it comes to war, "We will prevail."

Citing U.S. intelligence, Bush said Saddam and his "nuclear holy warriors" are building a weapons program that could produce a nuclear weapon in less than a year. U.S. intelligence agencies issued a report last week estimating 2010.

"If we allow that to happen, a terrible line would be crossed," the president told civic group leaders at the Cincinnati Museum Center.

As he spoke, new polls revealed lingering unease among voters about going to war, particularly if casualties were high or fighting distracted attention from America's sagging economy. Democrats criticized Bush's insistence upon confronting Iraq alone if the United Nations failed to act.

About 1,000 protesters gathered outside the building where Bush spoke, police said. Tafari McDade, 11, held a white posterboard on which he had drawn the twin towers of the World Trade center. "We shouldn't go to war," he said. "I came down here with my mom to tell people that." The president hopes an overwhelming vote in Congress will persuade reluctant allies in the United Nations to adopt a tough new resolution forcing Saddam to disarm — by force, if necessary.

"If we have to act, we will take every precaution that is possible," Bush said. "We will plan carefully. We will act with the full power of the United States military. We will act with allies at our side, and we will prevail."

Bush said a cornered Iraqi military may "attempt cruel and desperate measures," suggesting that biological and chemical weapons could be used against U.S. troops. He warned that Iraqi commanders would face war crimes charges if they followed such orders.

The president said U.S. intelligence shows Iraq to be building manned and unmanned aerial vehicles that could be used to target the United States with chemical or biological weapons.

Four dead in Kashmir as final round of elections near

Associated Press

SRINAGAR

Pakistan and India traded artillery fire on Monday, leaving four Indian soldiers dead, as election officials prepared for the final round of elections in Kashmir.

A senior police officer said that 50 to 60 rounds landed in Indian territory, killing two Indian army soldiers and two paramilitary guards.

Firing was heavy overnight about 65 miles north of Srinagar, the summer capital of the Indian state of Jammu-Kashmir, a senior Indian army officer told The Associated Press on condition of anonymity.

Election-related violence left at least eight people dead on the eve of the fourth and final round of voting for the seven remaining seats of Jammu-Kashmir's 87-seat state legislature.

The dead included three rebels killed in a gunbattle, and three kidnapped Hindus, whose bullet-riddled bodies were found away from their village.

Vote counting from the four-phase elections ending Tuesday is expected to start Thursday and final results are expected by Saturday.

Election-related violence left at least eight people dead on the eve of the fourth and final round of voting ...

The Indian government hopes the election will defuse support for Islamic separatists who have fought since 1989 to merge Muslim-majority Kashmir with neighboring Islamic Pakistan or make it independent from predominantly Hindu India.

India accuses Pakistan of trying to disrupt the elections and aiding the militants. Islamabad denies the allegation, and calls the Kashmir elections a "sham."

The South Asian nuclear rival countries have fought two of their three wars over Kashmir. Both claim the Himalayan province in its entirety. The Line of Control, drawn in 1972, divides the province between Indian and Pakistani control.

A local newspaper, The Himalayan Mail, said Monday that 180 civilians and security men have been killed in Jammu-Kashmir since the first day of polling on Sept. 16.

WORLD NEWS BRIEFS

U.S. denied Iran airspace for Iraq attack:

Iran will not allow the United States to use its airspace to attack Iraq, and its armed forces will defend the country's territory, the Foreign Ministry said Monday. "We hope such an error will not be committed by anybody," ministry spokesman Hamid Reza Asefi said. "It's clear our armed forces are prepared to defend the country's territorial integrity and its airspace and land. The Islamic Republic will not accept such acts in any way." He said Iran was not a friend of Iraq but will not take part in any military operation to topple Iraqi President Saddam Hussein. Iraq's neighbors fear a U.S.-Iraq war would destabilize the region, and Iran fears U.S. influence in the region would increase if Washington succeeds in ousting Saddam. Iran fought a 1980-88 war with neighboring Iraq and the two sides still view each other with suspicion.

NATIONAL NEWS BRIEFS

Mourners bury victim of mob beating:

Hundreds of family members and friends buried Charlie Young Jr. on Monday, little more than a week after he was beaten to death by what police say was a mob of children. Mourners received programs with pictures of Young on the cover and inside, of his dog, Ty Ty, and his best friend. It said Young loved his mother's cooking and working with his hands.

Sailor held on bail in New York City:

A Navy petty officer charged in the death of a female shipmate told police he went to another room and went to sleep after watching her fall from a Times Square hotel window, court papers say. Petty Officer Brian Cooley, 29, was held on $250,000 bail after his arraignment late Sunday on a manslaughter charge in the death of Lisa Tedstone, 30, a seaman from Simpsonville, S.C.

Shuttle Atlantis begins anticipated mission:

Atlantis blasted off on the first shuttle flight in four months Monday, with a side-mounted video camera showing the coastline and the brilliant blue ocean receding fast in the distance as the spaceship climbed toward orbit. The shuttle rose from its seaside pad under tight post-Sept. 11 security, carrying six astronauts and a 14-ton girder that will be installed on the international space station later this week. It was the first shuttle launch since early June, a long and frustrating delay caused by cracked fuel lines that grounded the entire fleet. The space agency's boss, Sean O'Keefe, described the successful return to flight as "a big deal for NASA." The launch also marked the debut of the shuttlecam, a color video camera mounted near the top of Atlantis' external fuel tank. The camera beamed down live images as the shuttle soared out over the Atlantic.

Members praise The Tent

By MATT BRAMANTI
News Writer

Executive Cabinet members met briefly Monday night to discuss upcoming student activities.

Amy O'Connor, who leads the Club Coordination Council, reported on the success of "The Tent," erected in front of the Hesburgh Library before the Stanford game. The Tent served low-priced food to students and hosted dance performances by eight Notre Dame student groups.

Bishop

Approximately 200 students stopped by the tent on Saturday, according to O'Connor.

"It was a great opportunity for the clubs to perform in front of an audience," O'Connor said. "I was really pleased with the size of the crowd."

The Tent was sponsored by the CCC, and food was provided by the Sailing Club.

Senior Class president Matt Smith confirmed that the "Senior Friday" event will be held Friday from 12 p.m. to 2:30 p.m. at the Alumni-Senior Club. The event will feature a cash bar and all the Subway you can eat for $2, Smith said. Senior Friday is open to members of the Class of 2003 who are at least 21. The lunch is jointly sponsored by the Class of 2003 and the Alumni-Senior Club.

Student leaders also promoted the events surrounding the 30th anniversary of co-education at Notre Dame. Student Body President Libby Bishop encouraged Cabinet members and their constituents to attend Wednesday evening's panel discussion. The panel, which Bishop will moderate, will include administrators, faculty members, and students who experienced the changes that began in 1972, the first year Notre Dame admitted female undergraduates.

"It will be great discussion about how far we've come as an institution," Bishop said.

Students fight illiteracy

By CAITLIN EARLY
News Writer

Notre Dame students, working in partnership with the St. Joseph Literacy Council, are attempting to combat the wave of illiteracy that has hit St. Joseph County in recent years.

In the latest National Adult Literacy Survey, it was estimated that 700,000 adults in Indiana were illiterate. St. Joseph County literacy rates rank among the lowest in the state.

The St. Joseph Literacy Council serves as the umbrella organization under which various literacy programs, such as the South Bend Schools Adult Education Program operate. The Literacy Council trains volunteers and provides them with tutoring materials.

The Council offers a variety of services such as GED classes, ESL programs a life skills training.

"Our goal is to take adult members in the community at every level and bring them to the next step," said Gayle Silver, director of the South Bend Schools Adult Education Program.

The Literacy Council's success relies heavily upon the 119 volunteers who make a minimum commitment of six months to the program. Notre Dame students comprise a large portion of this group.

Notre Dame students have also taken the initiative to expand the programs of the St. Joseph Literacy Council into various aspects of the community. Two graduate students are currently working with the council to organize a program that would bring GED classes into the local jails.

"We serve the community to provide adults with a second chance at making it in the world," said Silver. "While there is a lot of work to be done in trying to meet the needs of these folks, it our committed staff and the Notre Dame volunteers that help to make a difference."

College dorms plan more programs

By MELANIE BECKER
News Writer

As Saint Mary's Residence Hall Association strives to implement new programs and activities on campus, it has been recognized for its achievements. Saint Mary's has received numerous awards at the sub-regional and regional level for its excellence in residence halls in the last few years.

Every year the Regional Board of Directors to the Great Lakes Association of Colleges and Residence Halls (RBD) sets policies and standards for residence housing and watches over the residence hall associations in the Great Lakes Region. RBD oversees the residence hall programs in participating colleges and universities. In turn the residence hall associations compete at local levels during fall and early spring semester.

Colleges from across the nation meet every May for the National Association of Colleges and Universities Residence Housing (NACURH) to honor outstanding Residence Hall Associations.

At last year's Indiana Conference at Ball State, Saint Mary's won first place awards for school spirit, school display and roll call, a performance by the delegates that represents life at Saint Mary's.

Former hall director of Le Mans and former Indiana Advisor to the NACURH, Laura Sobiek also received the award for Hall Director of the Year. Priganc was named regional NCC of the year and competed at the national level for her work on the all-school formal. Additionally, senior Whitney Ross, this year's NCC, won an award for hosting the RBD retreat.

Ross plans to attend the Great Lakes regional conference this November. There, she will present her 30-page bid, "A League of their own."

Wham! Women have a Mission," for regional school of the year.

"The bid exemplifies all aspects of student life," Ross said.

This year, RHA has plans to improve the quality of campus life by adding more to campus activities. Work with a homeless shelter, awareness months, Hall of the Month competitions and updating the RHA web page are on the agenda, said Jillian Kamaski, RHA president.

"The one thing that we are hoping this year to do is to create more hall spirit and hall pride within each residence hall," Kamaski said.

J.P. Morgan to cut thousands of jobs

J.P. Morgan Chase & Co. is expected to cut several thousand employees in the next few weeks, published reports said.

Bank officials are currently drafting lists of layoff candidates, The New York Times and The Wall Street Journal reported Monday, citing unnamed company executives. As many as 4,000 employees, including some of the bank's managing directors, could lose their jobs.

Adam Castellani, a spokesman for J.P. Morgan, declined to comment on the reports.

The affected divisions are likely to lose as much as 25 percent of their staff, the reports said.

The layoff plan is expected to include employees who specialize in mergers and acquisitions, equity and debt underwriting and private banking. Most of the layoffs are expected to come from J.P. Morgan's offices in New York and Asia.

Supreme Court allows asbestos trial

The Supreme Court has refused again to get involved in a dispute over a giant asbestos trial in West Virginia that big corporations claimed could cost them millions.

The court in September refused to stop the trial from starting and then said Monday it would not review arguments from Mobil Corp. and other large companies that the large trial was unconstitutional.

"These fundamentally unfair procedures will render West Virginia a national asbestos-litigation magnet," the Supreme Court was told in a filing by Christopher Landau, the attorney for General Motors Corp., Ford Motor Co. and Daimler Chrysler Corp., which supported Mobil Corp.

The trial combines the cases of some 8,000 people who claim asbestos exposure. The 8,000 people live in as many as 35 different states and should not be allowed to join in one trial, the court was told.

Malpass speaks on economy

COLLEEN GANEY
News Writer

Scott Malpass, Notre Dame's vice president for finance and chief investment officer, stressed the importance of skepticism and modest expectations in the world of cyclical financial investment during his keynote address at the annual President's Luncheon for Michiana Business Leaders on Monday.

During his address, "New Realities in Global Investing," Malpass assessed past and future market conditions and outlined Notre Dame's investment goals.

Malpass works closely with the investment and finance committee of Notre Dame's Board of Trustees in budgeting and managing University investments. Community members attending Monday's speech were eager to gain insight direct from the financial expertise that garnered top returns during market booms.

From 1979 to 1999, the University endowment increased from $135 million to $2 billion while generating an income for University programs of over $300 million. The endowment is currently distributed among academic chairs, undergraduate scholarships, graduate fellowships and a variety of other programs.

After reflecting on the inertia of the 1990's "tech-bubble" that led to incredible economic opportunities, Malpass warned of the danger of overconfidence.

"Market timing doesn't always work," he said, referring to the fact that equity market returns were, on average, less than average T-bill returns from 1995 to 2000.

Malpass said he expects little economic improvement over the next nine to ten months, explaining that inflation should be moderate and interest rates have reached their cyclical low.

According to Malpass, the coming economic atmosphere will create a "stratification" between those who want to work hard and those who want easy answers. He believes that most telecommunication companies won't survive the coming economic cycle because of probable geopolitical shocks and the unmasking of corporate business scandals.

Conceding that war with Iraq would be initially detrimental with investors fearing inflated oil prices and a "double-dip recession,"

Malpass expects the economy to rebound if the nation engages in what he anticipates will be a 90-day war.

Malpass said that Notre Dame's $3.5 billion in financial assets, which includes a $3 billion endowment that ranks as the 19th largest in American higher education, is invested in public and private markets across the globe. Endowment investment enables the University to balance its financial support of present and future generations of students and faculty by keeping purchasing power equal to or above rates of inflation.

Malpass outlined the bullet points of the University's investment philosophy. Notre Dame advocates what Malpass calls the "I don't know school" of investment principles, operating according to skepticism, modest expectations and humility.

"[The key is to] think more about what can go wrong than what can go right," he said. "[Investment is about] making judgments about the future. The future is inherently uncertain."

Rejecting the myth of the "silver bullet" or a venture with predicted high returns and no risk, Malpass said that markets function over time by repossessing extraordinary earnings of the past. In order to take advantage of short-term volatility, Malpass said that Notre Dame is primarily investing in hedge funds, which are specialized private investment portfolios that value controlling risk over maximizing returns. Also, the University is reducing its bond allocations and looking into real estate strategies and community investments such as timber.

"[The key is to] think more about what can go wrong than what can go right."

WorldCom exec pleads guilty

◆ Official helped hide billions in expenses

Associated Press

NEW YORK

A former WorldCom executive pleaded guilty Monday to securities fraud and conspiracy, saying he acted on orders from his superiors, and agreed to cooperate in the probe of the largest corporate accounting fraud in U.S. history. Buford Yates said in federal court that he was instructed by supervisors to misreport expenses, allowing WorldCom to overstate earnings by $5 billion between October 2000 and April 2002.

Yates admitted he helped the company hide billions in expenses; WorldCom officials say the total amount of financial misstatements is more than $7 billion.

"I came to believe that the adjustments I was being directed to make in WorldCom's financial statements had no justification and contravened generally accepted accounting principles," Yates said in court.

"I concluded that the purpose of these adjustments was to incorrectly inflate WorldCom's reported earnings in order to meet the expectations of securities analysts and mislead the investing public," said Yates, 46, who had served as WorldCom's director of general accounting.

Former director of general accounting for WorldCom Buford Yates, right, arrives with his lawyers at a federal court in New York Monday where he pleaded guilty to charges related to accounting fraud at WorldCom. Yates previously pleaded not guilty to charges of conspiring to hide billions of dollars in expenses.

Yates' lawyer David Schertler said his client had argued against the accounting tricks, but was overruled.

"He strenuously objected to making those adjustments," said Schertler outside court. "When he raised those objections, he was told they had been approved by the highest levels of WorldCom management."

The lawyer would not say if that included former CEO

Bernard Ebbers, who is under investigation but has not been charged in the case. Ebbers has denied any wrongdoing. U.S. Magistrate Judge Andrew J. Peck said he would recommend that a federal judge accept the plea.

Sentencing was set for Jan. 9, 2003. Yates faces 10 years in prison and a $1 million fine on the most serious charge of securities fraud.

Prosecutors say Yates carried out orders by chief financial officer Scott Sullivan to hide $3.8 billion in expenses in order to make the telecommunications giant appear profitable. Since the accounting mess first came to light, WorldCom officials have said roughly $7 billion was misreported, and more recent reports have placed the final figure as high as $9 billion.

Problems of perception still face women at Notre Dame

The first women to walk under the Golden Dome as students encountered a much different university than I have. Now, 30 years after the admittance of women, many throughout the campus community have taken the opportunity to examine the status of women and gender relations at this university. The increased number of female students, the success of women's athletic teams and the presence of women in all aspects of campus life highlight the strides women have made since 1972.

Joanna
Mikulski

Tuesday Voice

Yet, although these tangible statistics are relevant when considering gender equity on campus, the fight to build a campus community that regards women and men with equality continues. The true measure of equality lies in the assumptions, ideas and perceptions surrounding "Notre Dame women."

After three years, I know a lot about what is thought of them. I have heard comments and read newspaper articles suggesting that Notre Dame women are not that attractive, wear sweatpants and sneakers too often and spend too much time pouring over books and homework.

Yet, at the same time, I have heard male students refer to a female student dressed in tight clothing as a "slut." Other male friends have told me that they wished female students did not wear such revealing clothing. They said that they were concerned that the women demonstrated a lack of self-respect by dressing as they did.

Of course, Notre Dame women are not the only women who must choose to come across as a "slut" or a "nice girl." However, campus culture increases the strength of the assumptions about women's dress and behavior present throughout society.

A recent report by the University Committee for Women, Faculty and Students confirmed what all students at this university already know: Male and female dorms operate under a different set of rules. It outlined the differences in security presence at male and female dorms, the questionable actions of some security monitors at female dorms and the discrepancy between how strictly rules for alcohol consumption, parties and pariets are enforced.

The security around female dorms acknowledges a reality. I know that as a woman, I have to act with more caution than my male friends in many situations. However, by separating male and female students to such an extent, it makes both men and women more conscious of the role that they play for the other sex. It confirms mistaken ideas that rape occurs not at the fault of the man, but instead at the lack of caution and protection surrounding the woman. Furthermore, it imposes boundaries between male and female students that strain relationships between them.

A former resident of McGlinn Hall, I have found it much easier to have male friends without the dormitories surrounding us. Yet, it seems that single sex dormitories, a school tradition and unique campus communities, will remain at this university. Therefore, the University needs work towards ensuring that male and female students receive equal treatment. In doing so, it must not only look at increasing security in male dormitories, but also at educating rectors, rectresses and residents assistants about the problems of unequal treatment, assumption and perception.

Of course, campus living situations are not the only problem. Although women have stepped into important roles on campus, women still need to have a greater presence within the administration. Football still receives more money and attention than any other sport. Men still have the highest, most visible positions of spiritual authority on campus.

But then, I believe that I have seen this university changing in the past few years. It has made an effort to counteract the detrimental stereotypes surrounding women at this university and to address the problems of female students. Last year, it allowed The Vagina Monologues, a celebration of womanhood, despite the controversy surrounding the play. A group founded two years ago, "A Life Uncommon," helps female students to build spirituality and self-esteem and to cope with eating disorders. Two women have been elected student body presidents.

Yet, still more needs to be done. It is places like here — where women and men are intelligent, privileged and willing to enter into conversation — that problems of perception must be conquered first.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Republicans disregard more than the law

I would like to respond to Mr. O'Driscoll's Oct. 5 letter, "Democrats disregard law in N.J." about the U.S. Senate race in New Jersey. O'Driscoll spoke of how Democrats in the state disregarded the law and were "corrupt and malicious" in wanting to change the name on the ballot after their candidate bowed out of the race. I see this simply as wanting to give the people of New Jersey a choice in what will be a fair, democratic election. This is something the state Supreme Court unanimously felt as well. I do understand O'Driscoll's concerns, but would say to him that if he is really worried about disregard for things in politics, then he should be talking about the Republicans not the Democrats.

President Bush and the Republicans have been disregarding the American people and important issues since Election Day 2000. They failed to recognize all the voters in Florida and further ignored the fact that Bush lost the popular vote. This should have been a mandate for bipartisanship, but it has been quite the opposite with Republicans as partisan as ever. They failed this country in passing an irresponsible tax cut which has mostly benefited people like their greedy, rich friends from places like Enron and brought back federal budget deficits. All the while, nothing has been done to revive the spiraling economy and help average families across the country. And now, they are failing to recognize the rest of the world and a majority of Americans in wanting to go unilaterally into Iraq with an unprovoked military assault.

Republicans have disregarded the people of this country and the issues that matter to them for two years. They have not acted on the economy, Social Security and Medicare, the environment or many other issues that Americans want to see action on.

So, I would say to O'Driscoll that if he is really concerned about politicians disregarding things, he should get behind the Democrats and use much stronger words than "corrupt and malicious" to describe the Republicans who have led our country astray with their agenda that disregards everything.

Irish will fight on, against opponents and naysayers

In Rick Morrissey's Oct. 7. Chicago Tribune article, "Irish don't stir great thoughts," Morrissey says that the Irish don't deserve their ranking and also that the Irish are not and will not be a great team. Morrissey peppers his article with phrases like, "Notre Dame football is a matter of belief this season, and right now I'm an agnostic waiting for the next flight out to atheism." He says that our top-ten ranking proves "that computers are just as susceptible to substance abuse as humans are."

Maybe Morrissey is a witty writer, but I would be hard-pressed to add "sports" to that title. He needs to stop day-dreaming in the press box about his future accolades and start watching the football games Saturday afternoons.

No one will deny that the Irish have not dominated every facet of the game this season. Yet somehow, they have found a way to come out on top at the end of each game. And that says as much about a team as a 40-point margin of victory. It's a team that steps up and faces the adversities of the day to win that is a great team.

When asked if Notre Dame is one the nation's best team, Coach Willingham responded that he doesn't think about that, but that "all I want to be is the team that plays the best on the next Saturday afternoon."

That's all I want," Morrissey writes, "Until I can feel the hole in Florida State's defense Oct. 26, I can't believe in this team." There are 12 games — not one — on the schedule, and every game is important.

Besides, I doubt the Notre Dame football team is looking for Morrissey's belief and support. They need only the coaches' belief and their own, and it appears that they have that. From a popular song in Ireland by the Wolfe Tones: "You'll never beat the Irish ... you can put us down and keep us out but we'll come back again. We are the fighting Irish and we will fight until the end."

End the 'mommy wars'

DURHAM, N.C.

Recently, in the waiting room of a doctor's office, I picked up a women's magazine and, to my astonishment, discovered the existence of an apparently well-known phenomenon called "the mommy wars:" the mutual disrespect that

Emily Streyer
Carlisle

The Chronicle

moms who do market work — "working moms" — and those who do non-market work — "stay-at-home moms" — hold for each other's choices.

In a nutshell, moms who work outside the home think moms who stay home lack ambition; moms who stay at home think moms who do market work selfishly pursue careers at the expense of their families' well-being.

Among my peers and former co-workers, the negative attitude toward the ambitionless, stay-at-home mom prevails. My college classmates held disdain for peers who wanted to stay at home with their future children. After college, my female colleagues routinely expressed disgust with women who did nothing all day but stay home with the kids.

Women of my generation have been brought up with the expectation that we'll pursue meaningful careers. I prefer the expectation that I earn my own living to the assumption that I can't, but I thought the idea was for women to have a choice.

A recent segment on National Public Radio noted differential rates of depression between stay-at-home moms who choose to stay at home (they would have satisfying market work if they wanted) and those who stay home because they lack training, skills or support to work outside the home. The difference is between those with a choice and those without.

This segment included a contribution from an academic OB/GYN whose research indicated that women's fertility begins to drop in their late twenties, far earlier than most women our age realize, and far before most high-ambition women think about starting families.

Sylvia Ann Hewlett writes about related findings in her book, "Creating a Life: Professional Women and the Quest for Children." On a "60 Minutes" segment with an interview with Hewlett, reporters interviewed young women in Harvard's MBA program as well as women in their 40's and 50's with great careers and no children. The business school students planned to work like demons until they were 40, then slow down to have children. The career women had expected to do exactly that and found they couldn't get pregnant when they were 40.

The National Organization for Women (NOW) had predictably suppressed the dissemination of the physician's findings. Does NOW really think women will retreat en masse to ironing boards and soap operas if they choose for themselves, even though it means risking some women will make divergent choices from the organization's political agenda? Surely no one can argue women are better off choosing a career and then heartbreak when 40 rather than making an educated choice while they are young enough to have a choice. We are not going to undo 40 years of progress by allowing women to understand the consequences of their decisions.

Critics of Hewlett have found her numbers misleading, attributing her conclusions to unobserved heterogeneity, such as differential marriage rates between "high-ambition" and "regular" working mothers as well as male-factor infertility.

Hewlett's message, however, is not to tell young women to forget about their MBA, Ph.D., M.D. or J.D., as NOW seems to fear. It's to tell them that in some cases, they might need to re-think their timetables, especially women whose mothers went through menopause relatively early.

The debate is healthy: getting young women to consider their choices more carefully is more important than whose numbers are more correct. With so many options, the task of choosing is more complicated. Women are up to the task, but we can't assume things will work themselves out.

One of the greatest things about my generation of women is that we are benefiting from the lessons of both our mothers, many of whom had to work full-time to prove they could be more than housewives, and grandmothers, for many of whom market work wasn't an option. I believe we will find the balance between career and child-rearing easier because of those experiences.

We should remember that to have a choice is a fortune. We should not judge each other for exercising it.

A place for Kerri at Notre Dame

I wish to commend the University of Notre Dame for remembering a young woman who would have been a freshman at Notre Dame this year. Kerri Castello died of cancer before she could begin her studies at Notre Dame. Saturday afternoon, Father Theodore Hesburgh dedicated a tree and a bench in a garden of Columba Hall, residence of the Brothers of Holy Cross, in memory of Kerri.

Attending the ceremony were Dr. Richard J. Duffey of the Notre Dame Club of Mobile, Steve Warner and the Notre Dame Folk Choir, Dan Saracino, the director of Undergraduate Admissions, Kerri's parents, Sergio and Lora Castello, and Brothers of Holy Cross from Columba Hall. There is now a special place for prayer and remembrance of Kerri, facing St. Joseph's Lake.

CONCERT REVIEW

Nelson rocks the Morris

By DANIEL MCSWAIN
Scene Music Critic

Willie Nelson must have the lightest tour bus in the history of show business.

The man has sold 80 million records. He has recorded with the likes of Bob Dylan, B.B. King, Ray Charles and Paul Simon. He has written some of the most easily recognizable songs in country and rock. He is a member of the Country Music Hall of Fame and is probably most recognizable to our generation due to his spearheading of the annual Farm Aid concerts.

Still, the man tours with a light show that most car headlights would challenge. His stage setup is an elaborate arrangement consisting of exactly two flags alternated as backdrops during his show. On any given Wednesday night in downtown South Bend, the chances of finding a pot-smoking, tax-evading, pony-tailed man are pretty decent. Seeing one or twelve of them would normally be no cause for concern, much less excitement.

This is part of Nelson's appeal: he has made his career by being the original working man, a humble entertainer who knows of no better life than the road. Nelson is an average guy who just happens to be an exceptional songwriter and performer. He is also the original musical outlaw, as he would like to be known, and his independent and free-spirited live show has been entertaining crowds for decades.

Last Wednesday night, Nelson's "Opera House Tour" stopped to play in front of a sold out crowd at the Morris Performing Arts Center. Before the group took the stage, an inflatable replica bottle of Willie's trademark "Whiskey River" whiskey bounced around in the foreground of the stage. As soon as the inflatable bottle of whiskey was removed, (it would only be shameless self-advertisement if the man didn't drink it at every meal), Nelson and his traveling band appeared. They were truly larger than life even from the vantage point of the third balcony.

Promptly at 7:30, Nelson took the stage accompanied by his veteran crew of performers. Nelson younger sister, Bobbie Nelson, sat comfortably behind a grand piano. She was joined by a guitarist, drummer, percussionist, bassist and a harmonica player. On the opening notes of the first song, the classic "Whiskey River," a giant Texas flag dropped down behind the group, much to the satisfaction of the large Texan contingent obviously present at the show. Nelson was in his element. The show went into cruise control. From here on, the rest became history.

Nelson and company went on to play without a pause for the next two and a half hours. There were no self-aggrandizing breaks for applause, no fake exits designed to elicit an audience response just to come back out and anti-climactically end an otherwise decent show. Nelson just played pure, non-nonsense, musical goodness. From the first song onward he moved through jukebox classics like "Georgia on My Mind," "Blue Eyes Cryin' In the Rain" and "You've Got The Money, Honey (I've Got The Time)."

Interspersed between these rollicking classics were slower, but no less recognizable numbers. "Crazy," which Patsy Cline immortalized, but Nelson wrote, was part of a medley that was spliced with "My Life," another hit of the golden radio age of the 60's. "Stardust," the title track off of arguably Willie's most significant work, hushed the crowd into an awe of amazement and nostalgia.

"Me & Paul," a song written about the quasi-legal shenanigans that Nelson has become famous for over the years, repeats the line, "We've received our educations / in the cities of the nation," a testament to the nomadic and lawless lifestyles which have been the inspiration of so many

Willie Nelson gave South Bend a taste of Texas last Wednesday with a strong set loaded with both original songs and long-time classics that had the audience up and dancing.

Nelson songs. Rounding out the set were renditions of "All of Me," "Whiskey River" again (no one complained), and perhaps Nelson's most famous song, the car trip classic, "On The Road Again."

Nelson and his band also played a few numbers off of his latest album, The Great Divide, which was released on the rapidly growing Lost Highway record label, home to both Ryan Adams and Lucinda Williams, among others.

"Shut Up and Kiss Me" was an upbeat number, showing both Nelson's country roots and a heavy modern influence, coming together as a solid pop-informed country song. Especially moving was the rendition of "I Just Dropped In (To See What Condition My Condition Was In)," a tribute to Nelson's friend Mickey Newbury, the author of the song which was popularized by Kenny Rogers, who passed away two weeks ago.

And for the big finale, Nelson forewent the usual showman's theatrics, and decided, instead, to show just how average he could be. He graciously accepted roses from audience members and hugged adoring fans reaching to touch a living legend and musical hero. The last five songs of the night were covers, with Nelson choosing to let other people's music shine in the memories of his audience.

A rendition of an old Townes Van Zandt song, followed by four Hank Williams songs, including the resurrected "Move It On Over," which has recently found fame in a Gap ad, brought the show to an end.

As Willie waved his final goodbyes, an American flag, which had replaced the Texas flag on stage, stood proudly. A Texas flag, brought no doubt by loyalists from Willie's home state, flew gallantly in the third balcony. The audience had been brought to its feet, feeling like they had just witnessed a living part of history. And all the while Willie waved emphatically, a radiant smile and a humble "Thank y'all very much," the last scenes to which the crowd was treated. And that was it.

No doubt Nelson and his gang climbed back onto their tour bus, light cargo and even lighter egos and spirits in tow, to continue the musical journey that is their lives. The road has been good to Nelson, and mainly because Nelson has been good to the road. The joy of making and sharing music keeps this true musician going. May the wind be always at his back.

ALBUM REVIEW

Andrew W.K. creates guilty pleasure

By GWEN SCHMIEDEBUSCH
Scene Music Critic

"Party Hard," one of the major themes and also the first single off of Andrew W.K.'s debut album, can be described as loud and obnoxious. Basically it is anything but a work of genius.

Or is it? "When it's time to party, we will always party hard." Such a simple statement can convey so much: the determination of the young to rebel, the dedication that so many have to the "party" scene and the idea that no self-respecting partyer would ever half-ass their duties at a party.

Andrew W.K. bewilders listeners with his simple, yet irresistible songs.

The experience of "W.K."

started for many when they happened to catch the video for his second single, "She is Beautiful" during a late night

I Get Wet

MTV binge this summer. The video, featuring a stringy haired W.K. running around holding a microphone with a five-mile-long cord, is so pathetic and lacking in creativity that one was compelled to watch. It must be noted that, W.K.'s music is at the point where it is so bad, that it's actually good.

Don't ask how this happens. With simple, repetitive guitar riffs and simple, repetitive lyrics, W.K. hooks his audience. Perhaps it is because the audience feels sorry for him. Perhaps they are fascinated because they find themselves humming along to music that seems shallow and a little too easily created. Whatever it is, it's working.

The album, entitled, "I Get Wet," has been in rotating in CD players for the past two weeks. Propelled by his first two singles, "Party Hard," and "She is Beautiful," the album has the feel of an artist who acts tough, but is, in actuality, a big sap. The fact that his appearance is utterly disgusting, that his vocals consist of either shouting or growling, and that he doesn't care about either, only adds to his intrigue.

Andrew W.K. is one of those artists that is either loved or hated. One can't help but love this scuzzy new "talent." Other noteworthy singles include, "I Love NYC," "Girls Own Love," and "Take it Off." To anyone categorizing W.K.'s music as something anyone could have done, the truth is yes, it is possible, but as of yet he is the only one who has.

ALBUM REVIEW

Beck stirs things up on Sea Change

By DANIEL MCSWAIN
Scene Music Critic

To argue that Beck has ever really had it all together is a wholly indefensible position, to say the least. But his work always had anguish in disguise. Beck used to hide these very base and human emotions in little Chinese boxes, all dressed up in the neon of sideshow freaks and cosmic noise. Never before had Beck sloughed off the convoluted postmodern rambling that marked his earlier work in favor of the naked and moving honesty of a true singer-songwriter. It is this role, that of the simple yet shockingly heartbroken poet, that Beck adopts on his latest opus, Sea Change.

Beck sings of emotional turmoil and ended relationships on his latest release.

Written and recorded in only eight days, Sea Change comes with the kind of emotional baggage, personal despair and gut-wrenching pain that can only crawl out of the aftermath of an eight-year relationship. Akin to Ryan Adams' Heartbreaker and Marvin Gaye's Here, My Dear, this album lets the listener while leaving enough personal distance and ambiguity in the lyrics for individual interpretation.

Still, Beck creates new sides of the broken man in the way only a truly talented songwriter can. Vocally, he has shifted from the both the menacing snarl and psycho-babbling banter of his earlier work to a fuller, more low key style that sounds like a murmur with a drawl. The sometimes monotone but always mesmerizing approach is pure vocal misery, but it is captivating.

Recorded live on only two tracks, the music carries an almost endearing despair; Beck is hurting and you can tell before the first golden note escapes his throat. Harmonicas, guitar twangs, and violins abound in this orchestral-country sound-scape. The sedated sounds of his band only amplify the sloppy, slobbering sadness that Sea Change captures.

With the help of longtime Radiohead producer Nigel Godrich, this album scopes from orchestrally lush to painfully barren. The absence of noise on some tracks such as "Guess I'm Doing Fine" leave you to deal only with Beck and his big, bleeding, broken heart with no relief. Other songs like "Sunday Sun" feature Beck and his band building a crescendo of sound, which is majestic but ultimately tragic. Four minutes of careful production and masterful instrumentation can't save the track from the eventual sonic bedlam, which it endures as the song de-evolves into an eddy of feedback and musical frustration.

The standout work of the album is the album's second track, "Paper Tiger" a sublimely skewed work that display Beck's gifted lyricism with Godrich's seamless production and artistic vision. "Little One" is reminiscent of Beck's earlier work, a meandering piece that explores despair via slightly obtuse imagery and lyrics. "Already Dead", a piece that begins sounding like a Victorian era minstrel song, suddenly changes into a terrifying eulogy for a relationship beyond repair. Beck perfectly describes this song and Sea Change as a whole as he drools out the line, "It feels like I'm watching something dying."

Beck has harnessed one of music's most daunting tasks: to take a common feeling, a base emotion felt by all of humanity, infuse it with a personal pain all his own and regurgitate a product which is both accessible and intimidatingly unique. At first, the album feels surreal. Anyone familiar even with Beck's one-night stands with Top 40 success will feel almost embarrassed at first listen.

It's a lot like accidentally walking in on someone changing clothes, but more like shedding skin. The neck-craneing human instinct that craves disaster makes this album a voyeuristic, yet hauntingly introspective piece.

While the full of pain, the album is never laborious to listen to. The songs create such an intriguing sensation that they make heart-break sound fun, in a really, really sick way. Only someone with the pop sensibilities combined with the profound lyrical genius and flair for the slightly eccentric like Beck could make such a complicated yet simply beautiful masterpiece. While Odelay may have been Beck's most entertaining work to date, Sea Change is undeniably the one that displays his mastery of song the most and puts Beck in a select and sacred Pantheon of the greatest names in music.

MENS INTERHALL FOOTBALL

Controversial call hurts Alumni in 7-6 loss

By LISA REIJULA, JUSTIN SCHUVER and TREY WILLIAMS

Sports Writers

Heading into the Alumni versus Morrissey match up Sunday, both sides predicted the game would be a battle.

Both sides were right. Morrissey (2-0) came out on top, winning 7-6 with a steady if unspectacular offense. The Manorite defense was consistently strong all afternoon.

Alumni, at times, appeared to be the better team, especially on offense. A few small errors proved to be costly for the Dawgs (2-1). The game started off chaotic for Alumni, as the referee stopped the game because players were missing pads. The unfocused Dawgs also were called for an illegal snap and had a punt blocked by Morrissey during the game.

"We were caught off-guard and disorganized. The tempo of the game was mixed up at first," said Alumni receiver Corey Harkins.

Morrissey found their rhythm first, as quarterback Rick Ysasi connected with sophomore Dave Purcell for a touchdown. Kicker Matt Werger's extra point put the Manorites up 7-0.

Alumni's offense took control before halftime when quarterback Chris Cottingham completed several passes to Harkins to bring the Dawgs inside the 1-yard line. Cottingham then scored, but the extra point attempt was wide.

As the second half progressed, the game grew more disorganized and heated. Plenty of penalties were called, and the crowds for both sides grew vocal.

"It was a tough battle that was fought to the very end," said Morrissey captain John Caver. "It was physically and emotionally draining."

In the last minute, the Dawgs thought they had scored a safety. Their fans agreed, and were upset when the referees ruled the player down outside of the end zone.

The no-safety call caused the game to finish on a controversial note.

"I'm sorry such a tough game had to end that way because we'd like to have had a more decisive victory," said Caver. "It's fortunate that the referee was able to make the right call."

The win leaves the Manorites confident.

"We went into this game as the underdogs looking to make a statement," said Caver. "We feel we have a chance to win it all and make it to the Stadium."

The Alumni team was disappointed, but not defeated.

"A loss now is not going to end our season. It's better to lose now than in the playoffs," said Harkins. "We will approach next week with a new attitude."

Stanford 20, O'Neill 0

Stanford the dorm had more success than Stanford the school this weekend, as the Griffins knocked off the Angry Mob of O'Neill 20-0.

Griffins quarterback Rich Whitney had his name associated with all three touchdowns, throwing for two and running for the other.

The Griffins (2-1) scored their first touchdown on a controversial fourth-down conversion. Whitney was flushed from the pocket and forced to scramble to get in the end zone. He was hit as he crossed the goal line, but officials ruled that the ball crossed the plane of the goal line.

The ensuing two-point conversion was successful, with running back Brad Devendorf picking up the crucial three yards to make the score 8-0.

Stanford scored again before the end of the half, with Whitney completing a 15-yard touchdown pass to wide receiver Colin Walsh. The ensuing two-point conversion failed when Whitney was sacked, making the score 14-0.

The final Griffin touchdown came in the fourth quarter, when Whitney completed a short 3-yard pass to Walsh for his second touchdown. The ensuing conversion failed, making the final score 20-0.

In addition to a successful offense, the Griffin defense was also prolific. Dave Marques recovered a fumble and Tony Hollowell and Chris Bechtel collected interceptions for Stanford.

Stanford captain Adam Oyster was pleased with his team's offense against O'Neill (0-3).

"Our offensive line did a really good job," he said. "We expected them to blitz and we picked it up. We opened a lot of holes that our running backs were able to get through."

With two wins, Stanford is much closer to achieving its goal of making the playoffs, although nothing is certain right now.

"It's definitely a game we needed to win if we wanted to make the playoffs," Oyster said. "We want to win the next one too, though."

Fisher 22, Knott 6

Most quarterbacks would shutter at the very mention of the situation Knott quarterback Ben Gilfillan faced during the team's 22-6 loss in Sunday's Blue League battle with Fisher Hall.

Gilfillan had a drawback with the absence of starting wide receivers Brian Price and John Smith. Price was out with a twisted ankle, while Smith injured his arm when he took a rough hit on a pass attempt.

"Our offense is set back a lot," said Gilfillan during the second half. "We're without our two stud wide receivers."

The Juggernauts (1-2) may have had a weakened offense, but that introduced no pity into the hearts of the Green Wave squad.

Fisher (2-1) was lucky to have its star players ready and willing. Wide receiver and captain Tom Gorman got Fisher on the board when he scooped up a low 25-yard pass from quarterback Jimmy Costanzo for the first touchdown of the game.

The Green Wave's rushing game also gained 92 rushing yards on the day.

"Our offensive line did a great job," said Gorman. "We had a lot of holes up the middle and we just went with it."

Costanzo seemed to be struggling on the pass game partially because of a domineering Jugg defense, which showed exceptional wide coverage. He did manage to complete 10 of 15 attempts.

"We've got a new offense with timing issues that need to be worked out," said Costanzo. "We're coming along bit by bit every game. It's just going to take some practice."

Gilfillan and the Juggs were able to pull off one successful offensive drive late in the second half. Without Smith or Price, Gilfillan was forced to depend on freshman receiver Michael Peters.

Peters proved his worth however, diving and catching with a 30-yard bomb from the quarterback for Knott's only touchdown.

Both teams move into their last games of the regular season next weekend where a win will be their only chance at a postseason berth.

Siegfried 41, Carroll 0

The Killer "B's" and the rest of the Siegfried offense swarmed all over Carroll in a 41-0 win Sunday's interhall football action.

Quarterback Bill Bingle and running back Tim Breitbach had a hand in every single Rambler score.

Bingle completed 9 of 14 passes for 172 yards and three touchdowns, and Breitbach carried 12 times for 79 yards and two touchdowns. Bingle also rushed for a touchdown.

"It was an all-around effort," said Siegfried captain John Torgenson. "I was really impressed with Tim. He ran well and really set the tone for the game."

The Ramblers (2-0) scored on its first offensive series, with Bingle handing off to Breitbach for a 25-yard touchdown run. The extra point was good, making the score 7-0.

On Carroll's answering drive, Vermin quarterback Uel Pitts fumbled on a botched lateral and Siegfried recovered.

Following an incomplete pass by Bingle, the Ramblers again went to the ground game as Breitbach ran 22 yards for the score. The extra point was good, which increased the Ramblers' lead to 14-0.

The Vermin (0-3) were unable to answer on their next drive, when Pitts fumbled a snap that the Ramblers recovered. On the very next play, Bingle completed a 41-yard touchdown pass to wide receiver John Kaup. The extra point went wide left, making the score 20-0.

The Ramblers scored once more before halftime, with Bingle running nine yards for a touchdown, making the score 27-0 with the successful extra point.

After receiving the ball to start the second half, Bingle engineered a successful four play drive that culminated with a 53-yard touchdown pass to Kaup to put Siegfried up 34-0.

The Ramblers' offense was held in check for most of the second half, but was able to click one more time before the final whistle when Bingle completed a 5-yard pass to tight end Mike Wahl. The successful extra point made the final score 41-0.

Carroll captain Justin Williams was disappointed with his team's performance, but hopes to end the season with a win.

"We're going to be looking forward to our last game with Sorin," he said. "We want to end on a good note. We have a lot of young guys who are looking forward to come back next year; we just want to make a consistent Carroll team."

Defenses battle when Howard faces Cavanaugh

By HEATHER VAN HOEGARDEN and LISA REIJULA
Sports Writers

Howard looks to play for themselves Tuesday night at Stepan fields, as their hopes of a Stadium appearance will have to wait another year. Cavanaugh, meanwhile, looks to conclude the season on a high note.

The Ducks are led by quarterback Sheena Ketchum, and her favorite targets, wide receivers Meghan O'Keefe and Sally Hosey. They look to avenge a heart-breaking 7-0 loss on Sunday that dropped them to 1-4. However, the Ducks are anything but down on themselves as their disappointing season comes to an end. Instead, they look to have fun as a team in their last game.

"I'm excited for our next game," Hosey said. "Even though it's not for the playoffs, we will still have fun, and play together."

Although the offense has had trouble producing this season for the Ducks, their defense has not backed down from a challenge. In the loss to McGlinn, Howard only gave up seven points. Their defense has been a bright spot all season.

On the other side of the field stands the Chaos. They look to find the defense that led them to a 0-0 tie with Lyons earlier in the season.

McGlinn vs. Pasquerilla East

The only thing that will be different about the Pasquerilla East football team Tuesday night against McGlinn will be the shirts they're wearing.

The Pyros' T-shirts for the 2002 season have finally arrived, just in time for their face-off against the Shamrocks.

"Hopefully they will be good luck for our last regular season game," said Pasquerilla East quarterback Abbey Coons.

The Pyros haven't needed much luck so far, instead relying on a talented offense and efficient defense. They are 4-1 on the season and have clinched a spot in the playoffs.

Coming off a 24-0 pounding of Howard, Pasquerilla East is confident and ready for McGlinn.

The Pyro defense is responsible for several shutouts this season. "I'm impressed with our defense each game, they put so much pressure on the [opponent's] quarterback," said Coons.

McGlinn (3-2) would guarantee themselves a playoff berth with a victory. Shamrocks defensive standout Jessica Laux says her team is aware of the situation and looking forward to the challenge.

"A win would show how far we've come in just a few weeks," Laux said. "Our defense will have to perform and our offense will need to come through for us. They are a pretty good team and it will be a tough game."

The Shamrocks employ a pass-heavy offense anchored by quarterback Julie Kremer. The defense features Jessica Fedor and Laux, who has scored two defensive touchdowns for her team.

The Giants' Barry Bonds gives thanks for his solo homer against the Atlanta Braves in the fourth inning of Game Five of the Division Series. The Giants beat the Braves 3-1 to advance to the NLCS.

Bonds finally enjoys playoff success

Associated Press

ATLANTA
The long wait is over. Barry Bonds is finally a postseason winner.

One of the greatest players in baseball history seized the playoff stage Monday night, homering and scoring the first two San Francisco runs as the Giants held off the Atlanta Braves 3-1 in the decisive Game 5 of the NL division series.

"I'll be happy once I win the World Series," Bonds said. "I must admit, I'm a little bit shocked. I've never been past the first round. I don't know how to respond. Should I be happy or just to sit here?"

Bonds homered three times in the series. His last one meant the most as San Francisco won the final two games to oust the Braves.

Bonds and the Giants barely hung on. The Braves, no strangers to postseason misery, put runners on first and third with no outs in the ninth.

But Robb Nen struck out Gary Sheffield and then got Chipper Jones to ground into a double play to end it.

"We didn't capitalize on our opportunities," said Sheffield, who was 1-for-16 in the series. "We had the makeup to do it. The other guys just outplayed us."

Russ Ortiz earned his second win, sending the wild-card Giants to a matchup against the St. Louis Cardinals in the NL championship series. Game 1 is Wednesday night at Busch Stadium.

At 38 and in his 17th major league season, Bonds will be trying to reach his first World Series — but he's already exorcised one of his demons.

In five previous trips to the postseason, the last two with San Francisco, his teams were 0-for-5. The four-time NL MVP and home-run king hit just .196 with one homer and six RBIs in those games.

"He was focused," manager Dusty Baker said. "I prayed Barry would have a great series, and a great series he did. He hit the ball a lot harder than the numbers indicate. I'm very glad for him."

"The Braves have been my nemesis for years," Bonds said.

Because of those failures, Bonds became known as a player who couldn't come through in the biggest games. But in less than a week, he did his best to purge all those unpleasant memories.

IN BRIEF

Favre on fire

Champaign, Chicago, Green Bay. It doesn't matter where Brett Favre is when he plays against the Chicago Bears.

Favre threw three first-half touchdown passes Monday night, surpassed 40,000 yards passing for his career and led the Green Bay Packers to a 34-21 victory over the Bears.

Favre, now 17-4 in his career against Chicago, had an 85-yard TD pass to Donald Driver in the first quarter — the second longest of his career — as the Packers (4-1) took a 24-14 halftime lead.

Green Bay's victory Monday night was its 15th in the last 17 meetings with the Bears, this one coming on the grass-like artificial surface at the University of Illinois where Chicago is playing this season as Soldier Field is being overhauled. Favre has directed nine straight road victories over the Bears.

Favre, making his 162nd straight regular-season start, rolled to his left, motioned with his hand and then heaved the ball to a streaking Driver, who was behind Bears safety Mike Green and cornerback R.W. McQuarters, for a 7-0 lead.

His longest TD pass was a 99-yarder to Robert Brooks in 1995. Against the Bears, of course.

Favre, who was 22-of-33 for 359 yards, also had TD passes of 19 yards to Tyrone Davis and 5 yards to Bubba Franks in the first half.

From the Green Bay 20, Chicago was threatening to get back in the game in the third quarter when Joe Johnson hit Miller as he was attempting to pass and the ball popped right to Gbaja-Biamila who ran untouched down the field to give the Packers a 17-point lead.

Miller also threw three TD passes, hitting John Davis with a 21-yard TD pass with 6:50 left to make it 34-21.

Chicago made one last thrust when Miller hit David Terrell with a 52-yard pass to the Green Bay 7. But Nate Wayne intercepted Miller in the end zone with just over 2 minutes left.

Two of three found guilty on lesser charges

Three men were acquitted Monday of trying to kill Boston Celtics star Paul Pierce in a nightclub attack two years ago. Two of the defendants were convicted on lesser charges.

William Ragland, 30, Trevor Watson, 35, and Anthony Hurston, 33, were found innocent of armed assault with intent to murder in the Sept. 25, 2000, attack in Boston's theater district.

Ragland was convicted of assault and battery with a dangerous weapon (a knife), and assault and battery. Watson was found guilty of assault and battery. Hurston was acquitted on all charges.

Dillon beats Keenan 19-18, Zahm wins late 6-0

♦ The Big Red block potential winning field goal

By PAT LEONARD and TREY WILLIAMS
Sports Writers

The defenses for Dillon and Keenan both knew what the next play would bring.

Both stacked the line of scrimmage.

Both anticipated the run. And still, both defenses could not stop it.

At Stepan Fields on Sunday afternoon, the Dillon Big Red stuffed a fake field goal attempt late in the game and defeated the Keenan Knights, 19-18, in a battle of offensive lines and running backs.

"This is one of the best games I've ever played in," said Dillon tailback and wide receiver Brad Butwin.

The game provided an offensive showcase for both squads, as Dillon gained 195 yards rushing, while Keenan amounted 132 yards on the ground and 118 yards in the air.

Big Red tailback Kevin McCarthy reached the end zone first, breaking several tackles on his way to a 65-yard touchdown run. McCarthy sprained his knee on the play, and freshman Dominick Eck and others filled in.

Brandon Hall got the call on the majority of Keenan's plays, rushing for 125 yards with two touchdown runs of 13 yards and one yard. He also had two catches for 35 yards.

"Brandon had a great game today," said Keenan coach Brett Morlok. "He had two fumbles that were costly, but he came back very well and didn't let that get him down."

Hall fumbled on Keenan's opening two drives in the second half.

On the second drive, Hall coughed up the ball at the Keenan 35-yard line. Dillon's Ray Denis took the ball back for a Big Red touchdown and a 12-6 lead.

The Knights responded by engineering a touchdown drive in which Hall carried the ball four times for 32 yards. He scored his second touchdown of the game on a powerful one-yard dive through the line. The score was tied at 12-12.

But neither offense was finished. Keenan had missed the extra point and Dillon smelled blood.

Butwin, who amassed 95 yards rushing Sunday, turned what looked to be only a seven or eight-yard gain into a 68-yard race for the endzone.

"Our team was a little flat in the third quarter," said Big Red center and captain Pat Esper. "Brad's run got us back on track and sealed the victory."

"All other ten guys made huge blocks," said Butwin. "It wasn't just me."

Keenan completed a 60-yard bomb for a touchdown on the following drive, but a fake field goal pass attempt sailed over an open player's head in the endzone.

Dillon would hold on to the one-point lead.

"Offensively, both teams played very well," said Morlok. "They simply made the most of a few big plays, and that turned out to be the difference."

"Give all the credit in the world to Keenan. They played hard," said Butwin. "We just wanted it more."

The Big Red climb over .500 with a 2-1 record, while the Knights fall to 0-2.

Zahm 6,

St. Ed's 0

Fans looking for a high-scoring match between Zahm and St.

Ed's Sunday were greatly disappointed.

The Zahmbies (2-1) stepped up their offense late in the second half to slip in a touchdown for a 6-0 victory over St. Ed's.

For much of the game, the contest resembled a fight between two concrete walls as the defenses of both teams pounded their target offenses to keep the game at a standstill.

"We had a strong defensive battle," said St. Ed's captain and lineman Jim Kleckner.

"We had a lot of guys playing with a lot of heart and that's what kept us going."

The game might have had a different turn out had it not been for an injury to starting quarterback Mitch Knapke. Early in the first half, Knapke twisted his ankle while drawing back for a pass.

The injury might have been minor at the time, but the ankle was strained further when Knapke was tackled right after the primary injury.

"It really felt good to get my hands under the center. It's a feeling I've been looking forward to all season."

Daniel Burke
Zahm quarterback

under the center," said Burke of first game. "It's a feeling I've been looking forward to all season."

Burke, at that point in the game, hadn't clocked in any field time as quarterback this season and it showed.

He completed five of his 14 attempts for the game, with most passes being too long for the Zahm wide receivers.

The strength of the Zahm defense, aided by linebackers Mitch Lies and Eric Tarnowski, turned the tables on St. Ed's with only a minute on the clock. A sack by Tarnowski forced St. Ed's to attempt a long pass, which was intercepted by Lies.

With the ball in their possession, the Zahmbies were able to complete a 48-yard touchdown pass to receiver Greg Duran for the first — and only — points of the game.

"We just try to play straight up smash mouth football," said Tarnowski. "We go out there and fly around the field and make good hits."

But where the offensive line really showed its power, was in the running game. Heading into a game against a defense that was known for stopping the run, the offensive line knew it had its work cut out for it. But every member of the line was ready to open up the run game.

"After what we saw, we felt pretty confident we could run the ball," said offensive tackle Jordan Black. "We knew they had a reputation for stopping the run. We don't look at it that way."

They definitely didn't as Notre Dame had its best running game of the season, picking up 249 yards, 12 rushing first downs and two rushing touchdowns against a Stanford defense that entered Saturday's game allowing less than 100 rushing yards a game. This was a major improvement from the 130 rushing yards they picked up against Maryland in the season opener.

"It was definitely the offensive line," Powers-Neal said. "I think they did a great job blocking. If it wasn't for them we wouldn't have gotten anything."

The holes in Stanford's defense kept getting bigger. From just 59 rushing yards in the first half, the offensive line opened up holes big enough for Grant and Powers-Neal to pick up anywhere from five to 10 to 15 yards a carry.

"The thing that was missing [in the first half] was the fight,"

Black said.

"We came out in the first half kind of down, things weren't clicking."

Collectively, as a group, we just buckled down and decided to play."

As the Irish head into their next game against Pittsburgh, which also has a solid defense, the offensive line can be confident in a solid performance. It may have taken five games, but they seem to have gotten things back to where they want them.

"I don't think this year we've come together and just beat on a defense running the ball," Black said. "It's refreshing to get back to that."

Lewis beats Lyons 7-6

By HEATHER VAN
HOEGADEN and ERIN
CARNEY

Sports Writers

In a battle of defenses, Lewis (3-3) scored a late touchdown to prevail on Sunday afternoon 7-6 over Lyons (2-1-1) to clinch a play-off berth.

The Chick defense gave their offense the opportunity to win the game, as the Lions had multiple scoring opportunities throughout the game and were unable to capitalize.

Lewis had an their own offensive drive stuffed on the 1-yard line, only to punt it to their own 10-yard line, where Lyons took over. However, after two passes were dropped in the end zone, and two other fell incomplete, the Chicks took over on downs and gained the momentum.

Trailing 6-0, the Chicks drove down the field with a little over two minutes to play. Led by quarterback Erin Nasrallah and an option offense, Lewis wore the Lyons defense down. Finally, on a quarterback draw play, Nasrallah ran it in for the score. She threw to Mimi Lundgren for the extra point to give Lewis the lead for good.

"This was a much needed victory," Nasrallah said. "We are really excited, and we had a lot of energy in the game. As a team we are really working together, and we were focused and relaxed. That was key."

Lyons, meanwhile had two interceptions and a sack on defense, but the offense failed to do its part. However wide receiver Michelle Celli, who had four catches and a touchdown.

The flags that flew at the end of the game led to the ejection of a Lyons coach.

McGlinn 7, Howard 0

McGlinn had to change jerseys before Sunday's game because both the Shamrocks and the Ducks came to the game sporting green. However the new shirt didn't mean a new look for McGlinn (3-2). They still played like they have all year and dominated Howard (1-4) 7-0 in a defensive-minded battle.

Howard continued to struggle on offense. Although they continually had good field position, the Ducks couldn't seem to find the end zone. They were plagued by three interceptions, including a one-handed grab on the 3-yard line.

A bright spot for the Ducks was wide receiver Sally Hosey, who made two big plays that put the Ducks in the red zone. Although the Ducks were eliminated from the playoffs, Hosey was still positive about the game.

"It's always difficult to lose, but I really think that we played well, especially because we held them to seven points," Hosey said.

"That in itself is still an accomplishment."

McGlinn was led by their own standout wide receiver, On-Kay Wong, who caught five passes from quarterback Julie Kremer. Wong was all over the field, Howard's defensive backs had trouble covering her all game.

Lyons vs. Pangborn

The stakes are much different when two neighboring dorms meet up Tuesday night.

The Pangborn versus Lyons match-up is a battle pretty close to home for these teams and each wants nothing more than finish its regular seasons with a victory.

For Lyons a win would clinch a playoff birth, while Pangborn simply wants to secure its first win of the season.

Pangborn quarterback Charlotte Troupis said her team is "just playing for fun" this week. The key players for Pangborn include seniors, Libby Cunningham, Katy Delaney and Kristin Krouse.

"We are too beautiful to beat some of these other teams," Troupis said.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Your actions and words may be giving your partner good reason for jealousy. It's time to have an honest dialogue. Being absent from home may be the root of the problem. ★★★
GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Don't allow minor infections to go unattended or they will get worse. Tend to them immediately. An old flame may reappear on the scene. ★★★
CANCER (June 21-July 22): Don't live in the past. If you go out with friends, you will meet new lovers. This is the time for new beginnings. You can improve your looks with a little extra care. ★★★★★
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Don't be afraid to ask everyone to pitch in and help. If you're willing to do the work yourself, the renovations will be affordable. If you are driving or operating heavy equipment, be careful. ★★
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You can be of great service to someone you have known for a long time. You are familiar with their situation. Your insight into their problem will be based on your own personal experience. ★★★★★
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Extravagance will be your downfall. If you lose money you will be upset and angry. Use your added discipline to accomplish those personal goals you've been thinking about. ★★★ SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Emotional frustration will mount if you don't get your way. Think before you speak. If you really care about this partnership and want it to last, compromise will be the order of the day. ★★★
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Carefully look at your personal papers. Money will not be as abundant as you anticipated. Reassess your needs. You will need to budget a little tighter. ★★★
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): If you are overly hasty in making choices about friendships, you will live to regret your choices. Slow down. You need to stabilize your life. Try to keep the peace with everyone for the time being. ★★★★★ AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Be careful what you say to whom and don't give information that you wish to keep a secret. New love attractions will develop through family or friends. Travel opportunities appear to be quite favorable. ★★
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Travel will initiate new friendships and new possibilities. Do some reading. If you need some answers, look to good friends for sound advice. ★★★★★

Birthday Baby: You will be determined to follow your heart and live by your rules. You will be bound to your beliefs and will not deviate from them. You will be a tough competitor throughout life.

WOMENS SOCCER

Irish lose another tough match on the road

By JOE LICANDRO
Sports Writer

Sunday marked the end of an era.

For the first time in eight years, the Notre Dame womens soccer team will not be the champions of the Big East Conference. After two heart-breaking one-goal losses on the road against Villanova and Georgetown, the Irish hoped to rebound against Pittsburgh and West Virginia.

On Friday, the Irish resoundingly defeated the Panthers 5-0 at home, but Sunday was a different story. The Irish dropped their third Mid-Atlantic divisional road game of the year to the red-hot Mountaineers by a count of 3-0. The loss effectively eliminated the Irish from the qualifying for the Big East Tournament at the end of the regular season.

With a 3-3 divisional record, the Irish finished tied with Georgetown for fourth place in the seven-team divisional standings. Only the top four teams in the division qualify for the post-season tournament. Since the Hoyas defeated the Irish 4-3 last weekend, they will claim the fourth place spot in the tournament.

While the Irish's Big East Tournament hopes were dashed on Sunday, they still could receive an at-large bid to the NCAA Tournament based on the strength of their schedule. Notre Dame still has six other games remaining against some very tough competition, which includes No. 22 Purdue, No. 10 Connecticut, No. 13 Michigan, Brigham Young, Syracuse and No. 24 Boston College.

If the Irish perform well down the home stretch, they could still receive a bid from the NCAA Tournament Selection Committee. There is precedent for a team qualifying for the NCAA Tournament without playing in its conference tournament. Last year, Syracuse, a fellow member of the Big East, received an at-large bid to the tournament despite not competing in the post-season conference tournament.

Notre Dame has had trouble playing on the road all season and Sunday was no different. The Irish could not carry the momentum of Friday's win with them on the road. In what has become a recurring theme this season, the Irish offense created many quality scoring chances, but failed to reach the back of the net.

Notre Dame actually outshot the Mountaineers 7-5, but West Virginia scored three times. Mountaineer goalie Melissa Haire came up with seven crucial saves to preserve the shutout.

With the victory, the Mountaineers (10-1-1) finished atop the Mid-Atlantic Division and earned a number one seed in the conference tournament. West Virginia still has not lost since their first game of the season against Auburn.

West Virginia put pressure on the Irish early and often. In just the second minute of the game, forward Laura Kane scored for the Mountaineers to give them a quick 1-0 lead. By the end of the first half, the Mountaineers jumped out to a 2-0 lead thanks to Leslie Barden's goal in the 22nd minute of the contest.

Notre Dame player Amy Warner avoids a slide tackle by a Pittsburgh player during Friday's win against the Panthers. The Irish beat the Panthers, but lost to the Mountaineers this weekend.

Much like last week's loss against Georgetown, the Irish surrendered a goal after a corner kick. Big East leading scorer Chrissie Abbott set the play in motion with a corner kick. Irish freshman goalkeeper Erika Bohn knocked the ball away, but the Irish defense failed to clear the loose ball and Barden took advantage with her first goal of the season.

With just under 19 minutes to play in the second half, Abbott broke free for a score of her own. West Virginia midfielder Kambria Riggins sent a cross to an onrushing Abbott in front of the Irish goal. The sophomore standout beat Bohn to the ball and sent a sliding shot into the goal for her Big East-leading 14th score of the season.

While Sunday's loss was extremely disappointing, the Irish must put the frustrations of the difficult conference season behind them and immediately refocus their energy for the rest of the season.

On Tuesday night, the Irish jump back into action at home against No. 22 Purdue. The game begins at 7 p.m.

Irish line goes from offensive to outstanding

By KATIE McVOY
Associate Sports Editor

Early in the season the Notre Dame offensive line was being labeled as just that — offensive. Although some of it was attributed to bad blocking by the running backs, Carlyle Holiday was spending too much time on his back and the run game was going nowhere.

On Saturday, that changed. The seniority of the line finally emerged, changing the unit from offensive to outstanding.

"[The offensive line] did a great job, just knowing the schemes and what defenses [Stanford] was running," running back Ryan Grant said.

The offensive line did more than just know the schemes — the line reacted. The Irish linemen stopped the blitz, they gave first-time starter Pat Dillingham time in the pocket and they opened holes big enough for a truck to drive through. All that was left for the rest of the offense to do was follow through.

"They did an excellent job," Rashon Powers-Neal said. "I didn't really have to do anything but just run hard. The holes were so big anybody could have run through them." Early in the season, quarterback protection was not effective. Holiday was sacked four times against Purdue and six times against Michigan — not a good rut for a team to get in. And this was happening with a line composed of five seniors, what should have been one of the most well conditioned units on the team.

On Saturday, the line finally showed its seniority. After Holiday went down against Michigan State, center Jeff Faine realized that it was up to the seniors — especially the senior linemen — to make sure that the new signal caller would feel comfortable in the offense.

"Me and a bunch of the seniors made sure he was ready for the situation," Faine said. "Just the leadership and guys just helping prepare him and get him in the right mindset to go out there and win that game."

Those seniors helped Dillingham out against Stanford, too. In 60 minutes of football, Dillingham was sacked just once, a statistic his predecessor will be looking forward to.
