UNIVERSITY OF NOTRE DAME, NOTRE DAME, INDIANA, SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 4, 1923

PRICE 4 CENTS

VISITORS MEN OF PROMINENCE

Among Those at the Game Were Men Well Known in Activities in City, State and Nation.

Before the game began yesterday afternoon, announcement was made at the University that men prominent in the city, state and nation would be among those occupying seats at the game. It was said that:

Lew Shank, mayor of Indianapolis, who recently declared his candidacy for Republican nomination for governor of Indiana, will view the game from the west stand in Box K.

Eddie Meehan, class of 1920, and captain of the track team of that year, will be in Box 14. Meehan was probably one of the greatest milers ever produced by Notre Dame. During track meet between Notre Dame and the Illinois Athletic club, he raced Joie Ray, the national champion, and decisively beat him.

Warden Ed. Fogarty, of the Michigan City state prison, will be in the east stand in Box 30. A. R. Erskine, Harvey Dalton, N. R. Feltes and H. A. Biggs, prominent officials of the Studebaker Corporation will be found in Boxes W, X, Y, and Z. C. A. Carlisle and Rev. Matthew Walsh, president of the University of Notre Dame, will sit in Boxes D and W.

The rest of the field boxes in the west stand will be occupied by Carl Ginz, Mr. Beveridge, E. Warner, Mr. A. F. Spaulding of Michigan City, Helen Vinson, Dr. J. E. McMell, John L. Lynch, and David L. Guilfoyle. Boxes L to Z have been reserved for the Kiwanis club of South Bend.

Howard Edwards, captain of the football team in 1910, who was a member of the team that defeated the University of Michigan by the score of 11 to 3, will be in Box 33. Frank E. Hering, of this city, who was captain of the football team in 1879, will occupy box 51. Robert Proctor of Elkhart, former state senator, and a graduate of Notre Dame in the class of 1904, will be in Box 34.

The rest of the boxes in the west stand will be occupied by J. M. Studebaker, Jr.; R. H. Horst; J. M. Stephenson, publisher of The News-Times; Mrs. K. K. Rockne, Dr. G. L. Geyer, Elwin M. Moore, of the class of 1920; Guy M. McMichael, William K. Lamport, Andy Weisberg, Dr. R. F. Lucas, Albert McDonald, L. W. McGann, John K. Smogor, F. W. Thomas, F. H. Wellington, George W. Hull, Wade Hardy, Tom Williams, Dr. F. R. Carson, former mayor of South Bend, W. Studebaker and J. M. Guthrie.

Celebration Ends With Annual Ball

Homecoming festivities were brought to a close last night at the annual Homecoming dance which was given at the Palais Royale. The dance, which was for Notre Dame alumni, students and friends, began at 9 o'clock, and was continued until midnight.

The affair, at which Jack Warr's orchestra played, was featured by many novelties, and a crowd of at least 500 couples attended. It was under the auspices of the Student Activities Committee.

The patrons and patronesses for the dance were: Prof. and Mrs. John M. Cooney, Prof. and Mrs. W. L. Benitz, Mr. and Mrs. K. K. Rockne, Dr. and Mrs. Frank Powers, Mr. and Mrs. S. J. Reichert, Prof. J. E. McCarthy, Prof. D. E. Waters, and Prof. Paul Fenlon.

KENNEDY SETS RECORD, 18:08

Irish Harriers Win Second Victory in M. A. C. Meet; Conlin Turns Ankle; Wendland Second.

Breaking his own course record, established at the Wabash meet last Saturday, Paul Kennedy, captain of the Irish track team, led the field in yesterday's cross-country meet with the Michigan Aggies, which Notre Dame won, 25 to 30. Kennedy crossed the finish line in 18:08, which was faster than the time in the Wabash meet by seven seconds.

The Irish harriers scored first, second, fourth, eighth and tenth, with Wendland of Notre Dame beating Bagley of the Aggies out of second place.

Starting the three and a half mile run at 11 o'clock, both teams were well bunched for the first half mile, with Andy Conlin setting the pace. Kennedy and Bagley forged ahead, neither one attempting to let out any speed to gain the lead. Wendland took the pace at the three-quarters when Conlin turned his ankle and dropped out of the race.

At the two-mile post, Bagley pulled up and challenged the Irish leaders for the pace. Kennedy pulled away with the finish only three-quarters of a mile away, and Bagley sped after him in a vain attempt to overtake the Irish captain.

Within sight of the finish line, Wendland passed the Aggie contender for second place, while Cox drew up on the heels of the M. A. C. runner.

The order of the finish for Notre Dame was Kennedy, Wendland, Cox, Bidwell and Cooper.

Pictures of hall students and of campus organizations are being taken for the Dome this week. Most of the halls and practically all clubs have already been photographed.

New Scholastic Out This Week

The October Scholastic, which appears this week, will contain numerous stories, articles, poems and sketches, besides its regular features. Two articles, "St. Thomas: The Perennial Philosopher," by Rev. Charles C. Miltner, and "Stories in Words," by William H. Bucknell, are included.

There will be a summary of events at Notre Dame during September, a review of the football season to the Georgia Tech game, editorials, reviews, and a page of humor.

Soph Hall Wins Silver Loving Cup

Sophomore hall won the silver loving cup presented to the best decorated hall on the campus during Homecoming. Rev. Frederick Gasensmith, rector, and students in the hall decorated the building.

The trophy was donated by Toledo Jewelry Company, through Ray Cunningham, and was presented by the Homecoming Campus Decorations committee. It will bear the engraved name of the winning hall, and the gift will again be offered for competition next year.

Judges of the decorations were two prominent Notre Dame alumni: J. H. Neeson, of Philadelphia, president of the Alumni Association, and Henry Wurzer, of Detroit, former president of the association.

N.D. Blankets Given to Varsity Players

Notre Dame blankets were presented to 30 members of the Irish eleven at yesterday's game, and donations of the following South Bend business men and houses:

South Bend News-Times, George Wyman & Co., Berman's Sport Goods Store, Orpheum Bowling Alleys, Hull & Calnon, Hotel LaSalle, George Platner & Co., Matthew-Kraus Baking Co., LeRoy Glauber, United States Lumber Co., Frank Hering, John Chess Ellsworth, Gross Restaurant, O. Monogram Mass Said at the University

The Monogram Mass, said every year at Homecoming time, was said yesterday morning at 8:30 in the Church of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. The entire Monogram club attended in a body. Rev. Hugh O'Donnell was celebrant; Rev. George Steiner was deacon, Rev. Dominic O'Malley, sub-deacon, and Rev. Francis Wenninger, master of ceremonies.

Masses at the University today will be at 7:30, a low mass, at 8:30, a high mass, and at 10:30, a high mass for the parish. Benediction will be given at 7:30 in the evening.

IRISH GRIDDEERS BEAT PURDUE; 34-7

Rockmen Win State Title in Homecoming Clash; Big Ten Warriors Offer Hard Fight to Impede Irish Attack

BY THOMAS COMAN

Notre Dame, 34; Purdue, 7. That in figures is the story of how the Notre Dame football team trampled on the state title hopes of the Purdue football aggregation from Lafayette, in the Homecoming game on Cartier field yesterday.

Although the supremacy of the Rockmen's football reputation was never in danger of being blotted out by defeat, the Purdue team was a dangerous bunch, constantly alert to take advantage of every break. With the fighting qualities they displayed yesterday, against a team that had the edge on them in every department, they can take their place among the foremost of the scrappiest teams in the country.

Seventeen years ago today, Purdue and Notre Dame met on the football field in a great game which Notre Dame won, 2 to 0. This was the beginning of the long string of Irish victories that have led up to the Homecoming triumph yesterday afternoon.

At times both teams played loose football and the Irish contingent did not seem to play the same brand of ball that marked their sensational victories of the past three weeks.

Yesterday's game proved to be good indication of Purdue's ability to take a rise in conference foot-but the ball was called back by the referee.

When the teams changed sides for the second period, Rockne sent in his first string griddeers who put the damper on the Engineers' drive, while the Irish backs, Layden, Miller and Crowley ran circles around the Boilermakers' defense. In four plays, Layden and Miller counted for a 41-yard gain with the aid of the famous Irish interference and brought the ball within the shadow of Purdue's goal posts.

With the ball on Purdue's 14-yard line, Crowley, the Green Bay flash, reeled off ten yards through tackle. Layden carrying the oval on the next play, almost duplicated the Iowa instance when he fumbled on the four-yard line, but recovered the ball and Miller hung up the second tally on a pretty charge through tackle.

Crowe, who went in at the left wing for Notre Dame, played a brilliant game on the offense and Purdue found that it was almost impossible to send the play around that wing. His vicious tackling and blocking was an exhibition of that football instinct that makes great players and drew the praise of the crowd on several occasions.

The entire second period was riot with action and Purdue accomplished what the Army and Princeton failed to do. Gladders came into the game and reeled off a pretty run for 33 yards that put the Boilermakers in midfield. Prout carrying the pigskin on the next play, uncorked one of the most spectacular runs of the game when he zig-zagged his way through the entire Irish team for Purdue's only counter of the struggle.

The score added zest to the game; the crowd was on edge waiting for the next move of the Rockmen and they were not disappointed. Purdue kicked off and shortly after, Don Miller, the greatest running back in the country, stepped away around the Boilermakers' end for 27 yards, and was dropped only after a hard tackle on Purdue's 17-yard line. Here the Irish fumbled again and Purdue recovered.

The third period was featured with a passing attack on the part of both teams. Carlson passed to Jacobs for 15 yards and followed with another for the three yards. The Irish took the ball on the punt and rushed it into the Boilermakers' territory.

Purdue tried some fake kick formations which turned into wide end runs, but the Irish ends were coming too fast for Phelan's backs to get away, and Mayl threw Spradling for a five-yard loss. Still undaunted, Purdue attempted a pass in the shadow of their own goal posts which failed.

Purdue punted and Miller reeled off another 20 yards, which Crowley followed with eight more through the line for another touchdown.

In the final period, Wellman was called into the backfield to work on (Continued on Page 4.)

ball ranks and the team that Jimmy Phelan pitted against the Irish in the Homecoming struggle will make its presence felt in the Big Ten ranks next year, since the squad is composed almost entirely of sophomores and juniors.

The much-heralded Purdue line that made such a brilliant showing against the Maroons, failed to stem the terrific Irish drives in the opening quarter of the game, until the first tally had been hung up on the Rockmen's side of the score board. Captain Brown's cohorts began their second march toward the Boilermakers' goal and the opposition's line stiffened and checked the smashes of the Irish backs through center and off tackle.

Notre Dame had the best of the first quarter, with "Dutch" Bergman and Maher picking up huge gobs of yardage while Cerney cracked the center for gains of six and eight yards. The steady march was enlivened in Purdue's territory when Bergman passed to Maher for 30 yards, who made a shifty run on the next play for the nine yards and the first counter.

The Boilermakers' line smashing crew started some action after the kick-off and punctured the Irish line for first down. Phelan's men completed the first pass attempted for a gain of 16 yards.

The Purdue offensive attack in this period was met with a stout defense from the Rockmen, when Collins at the left flank for the Rockmen, broke through and dropped Hetrick for a loss. Purdue's two passes in this quarter were sudden and executed for substantial gains.

Carlson, Phelan's brilliant fullback, was cracking the line with terrific force and like Layden was able to crawl a few more feet after the tackler had hit him.

Cerney made a pretty run through the entire Purdue team for 60 yards,

THE FIRST HOMECOMING

Another Homecoming is over. Four years ago the first Homecoming was held, and on that day, as yesterday, the men of the new generation welcomed the men of old back to Notre Dame. The first Homecoming was a much less auspicious affair than that of yesterday, but it was none the less thrilling to the men who returned to renew old memories. On that day, as yesterday, Purdue played Notre Dame. Throughout the first quarter, old men remember, the team from Lafayette tore off yard after yard as they marched toward the gold and blue goal. The Boilermakers were forging their way to a seemingly inevitable touchdown. The score was 7 to 0 in favor of the Irish, but the Irish had their backs to the wall. Purdue was threatening to tie the score. The stands yelled. One recurring demand ever and again filled the air. "Where is Gipp," bellowed the crowd, and their insistence never diminished. The Notre Dame line again yielded another pair of yards. The signal came from Rockne and, tearing off their sweat-shirts, the entire first squad pranced into the arena. With them Gipp, long, lean, and agile, loped into position in his easy, inimitable stride. The youth from the copper country tightened his belt. The play was snapped. A flash of legs followed a burst of speed, and dashing, dodging, pirouetting down the gridiron, the all-American fullback hurdled through the Purdue team for 90 yards and touchdown. On this day, with the fourth Homecoming just finished, it is natural to recall that incident, to remind us again, as we greet the men who are back, of one man who is not back, the greatest man that football has ever seen; George Gipp.

interesting and instructive tasks to those who are inclined to help their school and their own selves in this way. A school may be judged to a great extent on the kind of football it plays but it is also judged to a large extent by the kind of dramatics it can produce, the kind of debaters it can turn out and the quality of its paper and yearbook. Non-curricular, non-athletic activities deserve as great support as the football, baseball, basketball and other teams. Loyalty to the school demands that her sons use their talents in her behalf. Receiving high grades is not enough. They must strive to keep "the Purple banner waving high" in every contact of the university with the outside world or they will have failed to attain one of the most far-reaching benefits of a college training.—Daily Northwestern.

WHOSE FAULT IS IT?

If students are cheating themselves out of what college has to offer them, as one Emporia professor believes, whose fault is it? Under our present system at the University, a student who comes here seeking only social life or the right to say he has been away to college, is usually disposed of after the first semester. For the majority of students, "coming away to college" means coming away from home for the first time and entering an entirely different kind of a life from that to which they have been accustomed. Most of them are still in their teens and feel keenly the lack of parental advice and guidance, though at the same time taking great pleasure in their own independence and ability to stand alone. They are all dumped promiscuously into boarding houses, all forced to take practically the same courses for their first two years, many of which they have no interest in. The students are striving to get the most out of college; professors are striving to give them the most. Those facts are uncontrovertible. It would be well for the Emporia professor to realize some of the difficulties against which the average student bumps during his four years in college.—Daily Kansan.

The barbecue was a feature of Homecoming for the first time last year.

CAMPUS ACTIVITIES

A university education is made up of two parts: the scholastic requirements and the non-curricular activities. Each is equally important if the student is to get all out of his college career that is possible. The one-sided man is out of place in a many-sided world. If he is an athlete and a student he starts out in life with all the advantages that the average man can hope for. If he is an athlete and a flunker his strong body cannot serve to give him his place in the world of business. If he is a Phi Beta Kappa and a weakling he is equally incapable of success, for he will break down under mental and physical strain. There are activities other than athletics that have a beneficial effect on the student. From a purely selfish point of view, a man who is in the best of health and is physically well developed is advancing his own interests more if he goes into some other activity and increases his knowledge and interest along another line. Publications, dramatics, debating, student government and other lines offer many betsch hurtling off tackle for yard on yard of hard-fought distance and rode with him into the glory of a successful season. Chicago saw a Nordgren come and a Des Jardiens, and then watched with regret as they faded from view and left behind them a team that measured only to the standard of mediocrity.

Army had its Oliphant, and Ohio State its Harley and Workman. California its Muller, and Princeton its Baker and its Lourie.

But what of Notre Dame? "Take Eichenlaub and Rockne away, graduate Bachman and Dorias, and Notre Dame will fall to its own proper level," the experts chortled. "It's a wonder team, but it can't last."

Eichenlaub graduated. So did Dorias and Bachman. Rockne quit playing and turned to coaching. The wonder team was broken up.

But where Eichenlaub had scintillated there came a Berger to take his place; when Bachman was through there was a Rojesky to step into his shoes. And Notre Dame continued to return from the east each year with a victory over the hosts of Uncle Sam's army.

The average of grades received in the University of Michigan were: women, 79.4; men, 72.1.

What They Say

By FORD C. FRICK

A few years ago there came out of the west, unheralded and unsung, a group of husky, well-developed young men who sought to match their football strength against the power and prowess of the Army.

They were pioneers, those twenty-odd Irishmen, with their western manner and their blue and gold jerseys, dirty from the sand and gumbo of the Indiana plains. And eastern experts, smug in the complacency of eastern football prowess, gave them short shrift and dismissed them with a smile of superior knowledge.

Then came the game, and, following the most hectic afternoon that West Point had ever known, there was emblazoned in shrieking headlines for a world to read the story of that first western invasion.

The score that memorable day doesn't matter much now. It was Notre Dame, something; Army, nothing, and almost over night critics everywhere were singing the praises of a Dorias and an Eichenlaub, a Rockne and a Bachman.

Football seasons have come and gone since then. Wonder teams have arisen to the heights of football fame, only to descend again into the dust of oblivion, as fate pointed her finger at the figure of a wizard coach, or graduation took away the stars who had made success possible.

Harvard, fighting to the finish behind the educated toe of a Brickley or the power of a Mahan, reached the heights of football notoriety. Michigan sent a Maulthe sending end of the last minute passing attack that the Boilermakers opened up in a furious effort to score. Wellman made his first pass to Spradling which was a pretty heave of 40 yards and would have settled in the waiting hands of Purdue's great halfback had not the ever-present Crowley leaped into the air and knocked it down. The next pass suffered a similar fate, and Worth punted to the Irish.

In the final minutes of play, Crowley passed to Miller for 30 yards and the following line play failed to net any gain and Layden punted. The Boilermakers started another sweeping end run, only to meet the ultra-aggressive Crowe, who wove through the interference and threw Purdue for a loss.

The Irish took the ball and completed two passes for 40 yards, and Rockne removed his regulars from the game after Miller had taken one of Stuhldreher's passes and making a wonderful run along the side line, crossed the line for the fourth touchdown.

In the closing second of play, Connell, Enright and Houser rushed the ball through the Purdue ranks to the four-yard line, from where Enright drove through the line for the last tally.

The game, play by play, follows:

FIRST QUARTER.

Bach kicked off to Hetrick on Purdue's 25-yard line. He returned it five yards to his own 30-yard line. On the first play, Bach threw Harneson for a two-yard loss. Brown stopped DeArmond for no gain. Taube kicked 45 yards to Reese on Notre Dame's 40-yard line. On the first play, Maher made five yards through center. Maher made three at the same place. Bergman jumped, pivoted and twisted his way to Purdue's 45-yard line for a first down. On a fake play, Reese made a yard at center, but Notre Dame was penalized five yards for off side. Bergman dashed off right tackle for seven yards. Third down, right to go on Purdue's 43-yard line. Reese failed to gain at center. A forward pass, Bergman to Murphy, was good for 30 yards. Now Notre Dame's ball. First down, 10 on Purdue's 25-yard line. Cerney gained eight yards off right tackle. Bergman made his first down on a dash around right end to Purdue's nine-yard line. Maher followed perfect interference off left tackle for a touchdown. Reese kicked off for goal and was successful.

Score, Notre Dame 7; Purdue 0.

Bach kicked off over the Purdue goal line. Purdue put the ball at play on their own 20-yard line. On a wide end run, Harneson made six yards. Harneson made two yards around left end.
