

NOTRE DAME READY FOR ILLINOIS MEET

GILLMEN TO APPEAR ON CARTIER FIELD TODAY; OBERST TO BE SEEN IN ACTION.

A Notre Dame victory over the championship Illinois track team on Cartier Field this afternoon is not the most probable thing on the 1924 track schedule. The brilliant aggregation of tracksters from the Urbana school coached by the inimitable Harry Gill has a host of elegant track material which has been the sensation of middle western track circles for several years. However their appearance here this afternoon will be made more than interesting by several members of Notre Dame's track team who have won for themselves the plaudits of the midwest track critics.

Illinois has engaged in 51 dual meets since 1904, when Harry Gill began his coaching regime and only 14 meets have been lost and two tied in that time. Seven times, the Gillmen have copped the indoor and outdoor conference title and after their notable performances during the indoor season, the critics have doped them to repeat on the outdoor card at Stagg field next June.

The feature event on the program will be the javelin throw with Oberst of Notre Dame and Angiers and Schildhauer of Illinois providing the competition. While this event will attract great interest inasmuch as two title holders and one near title holder will compete for supremacy, it will not far overshadow the dash events and the mile and two mile runs.

Having met in track competition several times during the past two years, the personnel of both squads will be well acquainted with the abilities of each other and the Notre Dame runners will be out to settle several scores of long standing even though the prospects of winning the meet are not overly inviting. Barr and Layden in the dashes, Luke Walsh and McTiernan in the quarter and Kennedy, Cox and Wendland in the distance runs will be in trim to burn the cinders all the way.

The entries and officials are as follows:

100-Yard dash—Illinois: Ayres, Evans, Yarnell and Shock; Notre Dame: Barr, Layden and DeHooze.
220-Yard dash—Illinois: Ayres, Evans, Yarnell and Shock; Notre Dame: Layden, Barr, Kryder and DeHooze.

440-Yard dash—Illinois: Fresenden, Carter, Smutz and Koontz; Notre Dame: McTiernan, Hamling, Walsh and Eaton.

880-Yard run—Illinois: Graham and Bruington; Notre Dame: Cox, Barber, Conlon and Wagner.

Mile run—Illinois: McKeever, Hall, Lindsey and Ponzi; Notre Dame: Kennedy, O'Hara and Sheehan.

Two-mile run—Illinois: Mieher, Marzullo and Toepper; Notre Dame: Wendland, Keats, Griffin and Cooper.

Glee Club Season Closes Shortly

The Glee Club will wind up the present season with two programs scheduled for the next few weeks. The last home appearance of the singers will be at the Palais Royale on Friday evening May 9 where a concert and a dance will be given.

After this concert the club will conclude the season with a formal concert and dance in the Cameo room of the Morrison Hotel in Chicago. The trip and program of both the concert and dance are under the auspices of the St. Patrick's church choir of that city. Dr. Browne is the director of the Glee Club and the St. Patrick's choir.

SOPHOMORES NAME FLEMING AND O'NEIL

RUN FOR DOME POSITION; McELROY IS SELECTED AS ART EDITOR.

At the best attended meeting of the year, the sophomores yesterday nominated candidates for the Dome staff next year. Dennis J. O'Neil, a member of the Scribblers, and Jay Fleming, who has been connected with the Daily for the past two years, were chosen as candidates for the position of editor-in-chief.

Lester Hegele, a student in the college of commerce, and Maurice McNulty, of Brownson hall, were selected as candidates for business manager. Wilbur McElroy, who has been active in Juggler work was nominated for the position of art editor, and refused the nomination, but was prevailed upon to accept for the benefit of the class.

Jack Scallan, editor-in-chief of this year's Dome and John Bartley, the business manager, spoke before the election, advising the class to choose men who were capable of handling the work. On Monday at 12:30, the final election for the staff will be held and all sophomores are urged to attend.

K. OF C. DANCE.
There are still a few tickets left for the K. of C. Post-Prom dance tonight. These may be obtained from John James in Corby Hall.

The Dome will be distributed from the various halls Saturday May 17th.

Tipperary Terrence, Irish Mascot, Dies from Accident Suffered on Niles Road

Tipperary Terrence is dead. The game little mascot of the Irish athletic teams died Thursday night partly as a result of injuries that he sustained when he was run down by a machine, and partly because of an inconsistent diet.

The dog was presented to the Notre Dame athletic association by the Toledo club and Mr. Edward Lynch, a former member of the varsity football team. Before the dog was given to the university, the need of a mascot was acute. All the other colleges in the United States have their mascot supposed to represent in some manner the character of the school. Terry was given to the school because it was felt that one of his breed was the best standard bearer that we could possibly have.

Terry with his inquisitive snout and his twinkling eyes won instant favor among the students and the faculty. The only complaint that could have been made was that he inspired too much fondling. He was a visitor everywhere on the campus and there was no place too sacred for the little animal. He visited both the cafeteria and the refectory at the lunch hour and many an instructor will testify as to how

REYNOLDS TO READ MONDAY NIGHT

GRADUATE OF LELAND POWERS SCHOOL HAS READ IN EAST AND SOUTH.

On Monday evening, at eight o'clock, in Washington Hall, Mr. Reynolds of the public speaking department, will read the four act comedy drama, "A Tailor Made Man," by Henry James Smith.

The "Tailor Made Man" was first produced in America by Cohan and Harris at their theatre in New York, in 1917. The first writing, a definite adaption of the Hungarian original, was done during the winter of 1916-17. The following summer it was rewritten with much greater freedom, and in the following winter after the road production, when Grant Mitchell made his marvelous characterization of John Paul Bart, it was rewritten again, this time with the dynamic help of George M. Cohan.

Mr. Reynolds give a fine rendition of the play. He has read it with great success in many colleges and cities throughout the South and the East. He is a graduate of the Leland Powers school of expression, and for the past four years has been associated with the Federal and Affiliated Lyceum Bureaus throughout the country as a play reader. His technique and his theory of reading is based on the principles and philosophical laws taught by Leland Powers.

Professor Reynolds will also read at St. Mary's Sunday night.

Excuse Senior Classes During Ball Week

Seniors will be excused from all classes during the period between noon on Thursday and the end of the week, known as Ball week, in order to allow members of the class of 1924 ample time in which to spend with their guests, it was announced yesterday by the Senior Ball committee.

Seniors contemplating taking St. Mary's girls may be certain that their guests will be permitted to attend all the functions during the Ball week. However dates should be made immediately and the girl's names submitted, in order that every girl be permitted to attend.

Harold Lloyd Here in 'Girl Shy' Tonight

Harold Lloyd will be featured in his latest production "Girl Shy" at Washington hall, this evening. The picture which was released last week is pronounced one of his best. It shows the troubles of Lloyd as a tailor's apprentice who is afraid of women. He makes a secret and intensive study of them during his free time in the garret of his home. He writes a book of his experiences and tries to sell it. The story of how he conquers his shyness and wins the girl he loves is humorous and interesting. The last two reels are by far the most exciting that have ever been screened and Harold is found riding on everything from a trolley car to a team of horses to save the girl he loves.

BASEBALL SQUAD LOSES TO WABASH

DWYER HAS POOR START; CROWLEY AND DUNNE STAR.

Wabash took advantage of every hit and every misplay by Notre Dame yesterday and won an interesting game of baseball, 10 to 6. Notre Dame threatened to win several times, but long flies, rollers, and pop-fies ended each rally too soon. Errors by Quinlan opened the game, and gave Wabash the confidence and runs that led to victory. The game showed that Wabash has again developed a team that can play baseball, and play it well.

Robertson, who pitched for the Crawfordsville nine, was hit hard, but the support of his teammates enabled him to get out of many holes. He was unsteady and found the plate seldom but he had some stuff on the ball, and he never lost his head. Dwyer, on the contrary, began in misfortune and although he was not hit hard in the first innings, he worked so hard that Wabash got to him in the fifth for several hits, one home run, and a walk, and the result was that Coach Keogan sent in McGrath. Wabash bothered McGrath for four walks and three hits until the ninth, when Magevney began to pitch, and put Wabash to rout for one lone inning.

After two men had got on first due to errors, L. Wyatt hit a two-base hit, Roll hit a three-base hit, and Englehart singled, making four runs for Wabash in the first inning. In the fifth, a home run by L. Wyatt scored F. Wyatt, who had brought in Burdette and Dale, on base by a single and a walk. A base on balls, a sacrifice, and a hit by F. Wyatt made another run in the next inning, and after two men were out, a single by L. Wyatt, a stolen base, and a single by Roll, made another run.

Crowley and Dunne got on base in the first inning for Notre Dame, but they died there when Nolan flew out to deep center, and Vergara rolled to third. For the next two innings, Notre Dame was unable to get to first, but in the fourth they made two runs. Dunne got on when Melson threw wide to catch him at first. He was out when Nolan grounded to Englehart. Nolan went to second on Vergara's smash to right, and scored when Silver careened to deep left. Vergara crossed the plate right after him. Silver was out at third, however, on the relaying of the ball to that base. Quinlan ended the inning with a fly to deep center.

JUNIOR PROM IS WELL ATTENDED

GOLDKETTE'S WELL RECEIVED. HAVE FINE FAVORS.

More than two hundred couple attended the Junior prom at the Palais Royale last night. The hall was decorated to represent a Japanese rose garden, with pagoda like entrances to the floor and Japanese lanterns strung from the ceiling to the walls. This decoration was the result of many hours work on the part of the decoration committee and amply repayed their efforts.

The Grand march was led by John Moran, Miss Dorothy Harris, Gilbert Schaefer and Miss Genevieve Mortensen. The fact that everyone joined in helped to make it a success. Jean Goldkette's orchestra more than lived up to its reputation and steady applause greeted the end of each number. Those unable to attend the Prom were afforded an opportunity to enjoy Goldkette's music through WGAI, which broadcasted the program from eleven to twelve o'clock.

Favors for the ladies were a black and gold vanity case, bearing an N. D. monogram. For the men was a leather memorandum book embossed with monogram and the class numerals. Attractive programs were also furnished.

Entertainment apart from the dancing was furnished by Miss Mann who gave a Japanese dance and by the pupils of the Corrine Seegmuller school of dancing who interpreted a may pole dance. Vernon Rickard sang the Prom song "Smile all the while" written especially for the Prom by Gerald Hassmer '25.

Patrons and Patronesses were: Mr. and Mrs. Knute K. Rockne, Mr. and Mrs. Gallitzin A. Farabaugh, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Reichert, Mr. and Mrs. David A. Weir, Mr. James E. McCarthy and Mr. Paul I. Fenlon.

Annual Golf Tourney Opens Next Monday

With a display of elegant prizes on exhibition downtown at the Krauss Jewelry store, the value of which totals several hundred dollars, the Notre Dame Golf association is ready to open the annual university golf tournament next Monday. Entries for the tourney are now being taken for the four flights by representatives of the association in the several halls.

The winner of the championship flight, the title of which will be defended by Vack Adams, will receive a silver loving cup donated by the Notre Dame athletic association through Coach Knute Rockne. The donors of the other prizes include Max Adler's, Berman's sport store, Stover's sport store, Clauser's sport store Krauss's Jewelry store and the Meyer Hardware Co.

The tourney will be open to every student in school and play will be conducted on the Municipal golf course. The Miami course is closed to students.

The officers of the association are expecting a large entry, considering the popularity which the sport has manifested on the campus last fall and this spring. The entries will close Sunday night at which time the drawings will be made. The tourney will be conducted in match play.

The following men will take the entries in their respective halls: Ward and Foglia, Walsh; Mouch, Babin; Corbett, Corby; DeLeo, Brownson and Carroll; Schmidt, Sorin; Thomas, Freshman; Dempsey, Sophomore; Off-campus office, 9:30-12 in the morning and the shelter house at the Municipal links.

Official Bulletins

Follyology, a monthly magazine published at St. Paul, Minnesota. Because the American people have developed an unstable game is now a paying business. One of the "excitement" magazines, one that has a regular menu of one thing, sex with plenty of tabasco sauce, now has the biggest circulation of any American magazine. All of the newspapers of the kind that print eight and twelve pages of comics every Sunday, with their "paw-price" section of shallow and sordid bunk, highly colored and embellished, have the greatest circulation in America. Humor and shallow satire are having their own, and the American people are living on a queer diet.

Between Covers

One of the most notable contributions of Catholic authors in the United States is the "Robert Kimberly" of Frank Spearman, a book which treats of one of the most vital questions of the day, that of divorce, from a Catholic and sane viewpoint. Mr. Spearman does not specialize in theology, but his story is told with dramatic power and the theology is there nevertheless, although he does not commit the fatal error of turning his novel into a tract. It is an antidote to the effusions of Sherwood Anderson and W. L. George.

Mrs. Wilfred Ward did something of the same sort years ago, but on a much more ambitious scale, with her "One Poor Scruple," which, while it deals with the same subject, is tintured with a survey of the modern woman. Her latest book, "Not Known Here," is the story of a man of German parentage who is living in England during the war. His ostracism, and the way in which he worked out his salvation is told with a note of idealism which can be found in no other volume of recent years.

Then, the most casual survey of Catholic books—and this does not presume to be even that—would be incomplete without John Ayscough's "San Celestino" which is the life of a saint with the touches of humanity too often lacking in books of its kind.

Al Smith, son of New York's east side, graduate of Fulton's fish market, as he once proudly announced to the New York state legislature, twice governor of the Empire state, and presidential possibility, is inevitably the new chief of Tammany hall, the world's most influential political machine.

His ascendancy cannot be gainsaid, for he is by all odds the most powerful democrat in his state. He surpasses Murphy, his dead leader, in that he has as large and faithful a following up-state, now an area not to be despised, as he has in his native city. Party politician though he is, he has the utmost respect of every right-minded citizen of every party, however widely apart they may be on public issues.

Though out of the campaign as a possible candidate, he will nevertheless wield great influence in naming his party's candidate for national honors. If his record may be taken as a criterion, the nation may expect a more powerful Tammany in 1928 than it has ever known before.

The forced withdrawal of William T. Tilden II, America's foremost tennis player, from amateur competition deals a severe blow to the chances of the American tennis team.

If Tilden can rightfully be termed a professional on the grounds that he was writing his ideas for the press, then "Chick" Evans and numbers of amateur golfers, football players, and other sportsmen can also be caught up in the same net of technicality.

It is truly unfortunate that Tilden or any other sportsman who classes himself within the amateur sphere may be forbidden to be a writer as well as a ranking player.

The offer of the Briarcliff club to accept Tilden as a professional at a salary in comparison to his skill carries with it also the hope of the 900 members, that he will be able to beat the sinister elements in the world of sport which have combined, either through malice or shortsightedness, to exclude him from amateur competition.

Tilden, by reason of his accomplishments and journalistic ability, is truly the Walter Camp of the tennis world. Kill his spirit in amateur competition and something precisely essential and energizing is withdrawn from the sport.

The Sophomore class met in the Library yesterday, nominated men for the offices of editor-in-chief and business manager, and elected a man for art editor. On Monday they will meet again to choose the other two men that will put over the university's annual.

The Dome is possibly the most important publication on the campus with the modest exception, of course, of THE DAILY. The sophomores must exercise great care in selecting the men who will have charge of the book, the annual record of a year of college life, one that goes out to homes in every state of the union, and to homes in many other countries, too. Many people judge Notre Dame by the annual, and only a book that is as good as the best is representative of the University. Already a capable art editor has been selected, and it is expected that the sophomores will exercise as much care in the selection of the other two men—the editor-in-chief and the business manager.

The juniors of this year did well. By their selection, they have insured what will be, without qualification, the best annual the university has ever had. This is not said because of the result of present enthusiasm, but is believed to be mature judgement. It is only right that the book should be called better with each year, for the university, too, is growing in importance and prominence.

For the men of this year, the sophomores will, we feel sure, select men who are not only capable and talented in their work, but also men who can secure the full cooperation of their fellows.

Mrs. Wilfred Ward did something of the same sort years ago, but on a much more ambitious scale, with her "One Poor Scruple," which, while it deals with the same subject, is tintured with a survey of the modern woman. Her latest book, "Not Known Here," is the story of a man of German parentage who is living in England during the war. His ostracism, and the way in which he worked out his salvation is told with a note of idealism which can be found in no other volume of recent years.

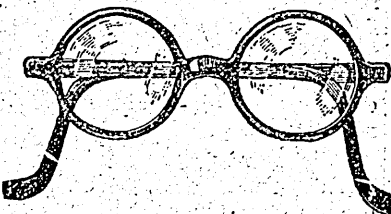

Then, the most casual survey of Catholic books—and this does not presume to be even that—would be incomplete without John Ayscough's "San Celestino" which is the life of a saint with the touches of humanity too often lacking in books of its kind.

The belief that there are no Catholic authors of note in modern times is so naive as to approach the absurd. "America" recently gave a list in which John Ayscough, Robert Hugh Benson, Isabel C. Clarke, F. Marion Crawford, Henry Harland and Canon Sheehan were prominent. To these "Extension" adds Kathleen Norris, Elizabeth Jordan, Joseph Conrad, Peter B. Kyne, Ernest Oldmeadow, Grace Keon, Frank Spearman, Richard Aumerle, Christian Reid, and Kathleen O'Meara.

Those who find themselves of the melancholy opinion that "Tom Playfair," a very good story, but

Burke's Glasses Fit the Eye.

Mr. Woolcott, one of America's foremost dramatic critics is an essayist of far more than average ability, and recently he tried his hand at acting, a dangerous thing for any critic to do. The facts in the case are that Mrs. Fiske was giving a benefit in which a number of personages were taking part, and Mr. Woolcott was selected to play King Henry VIII, much to the delight of his fellows who, no doubt, enjoyed the performance much more than he did.

The book, Mr. Woolcott's second, is divided into "Enthusiasms" and "Resentments." Among his enthusiasms are the late Signora Duse, Charlie Chaplin, John Drew, Professor Copeland of Harvard, and last, but by no means least, Maude Adams. Under the title of "An Open Letter to a Lady," he expresses the admiration of the American play-going public for the woman who immortalized Barrie's "Peter Pan."

One of the enthusiasms with which it is most easy to agree is his essay on John Drew who recently completed his fiftieth year on the stage. Mr. Drew, of course, received letters from hundreds of people, congratulating him on his career. By far the most unique message was a bit of rosemary with a card, bearing the line, "There's rosemary; that's for remembrance, dear Uncle Jasper." There was no signature, but it was from Maude Adams. Only she could have sent it as a remembrance of the days when they played together in "Rosemary."

Mr. Woolcott, however, does not confine himself to his own field entirely. He has an essay or two based on his experiences in France, Neysa McMein is the subject of a glowing tribute, Mr. Tarkington and Stephen Crane come in for their share of praise, and George Ade is requested to write a play entitled "1897," recalling the fashions of that day, in the manner of "Mary the Third."

There have been books written by critics which are far more scholarly than "Enchanted Aisles," but Mr. Woolcott's purpose is not to be dogmatic but entertaining. His anecdotes are the result of years of association with stage people and his more serious moments rise from a love and clear understanding of the theatre.

J. S. B.

But all of this is an incentive to young men with some gift for flashy writing, with much education and little wisdom. Out in Minnesota, already famous for Main street, they have begun to publish one of these magazines, "Follyology." The magazine makes pretensions to being moral, but its methods are novel. A long review on "Flaming Youth" is clever, but it is of the kind that would tempt morons to read the book. The last paragraph of that article written to deride the book, is a mere dud, after the whistling shrapnel of an entire page. The other articles are also clever, in some cases, entertaining, but none of them are substantial. Even a Main street sense of art should keep one from such atrocities as appear in the makeup of the book. In one of their editorials, the editors apologize for the cover, but an infinity of editorials could not make amends for the general makeup of a magazine intended to attract the youth of a country which has some sense of art, even if it may be mistaken in many other things. The cuts are poor, and the artists are not the ones the magazine should have. Congressman J. M. Baer is a good cartoonist—for a newspaper—but he is not the man to do work for a magazine with a name like "Follyology."

Indiana Nine Bows to Varsity, 4 to 1

Playing at Indianapolis on Thursday in a benefit game for the Indiana state Olympic fund, the varsity defeated Indiana, 4 to 1, in a seven inning game.

Gus Stange drew the mound assignment and except for the first inning, when the run was made by the Crimson, he kept the enemy well in check. Only four hits were made off his delivery.

Joe Bergman, getting into the game in right field, was the batting star of the encounter, driving out a three base hit and a home run. Roger Nolan got a triple and a double and thus pressed him for hitting honors. Score:

BROWNSON BREAKS BADIN WINNING STREAK

Badin's winning streak was broken Thursday afternoon on Cartier Field when Brownson defeated them 3 to 2. The game was one of the fastest to be staged so far this season, and was not decided until the final out.

Both teams scored in the third, but Brownson took the lead in the fourth with two runs, and was never lead by Badin. Grady and Harmon staged a pitchers duel, the former having a little the better of it. Grady held the Badin hitters to three safeties, while Harmon yielded five. Martin was the leading batter, getting three of Brownson's hits.

As a result of the defeat, Badin dropped from first into third place in the league standing.

WALSH TOPS LEAGUE WITH VICTORY OVER CARROLLITES

Fourteen errors by the fielders cost Carroll its contest with the Walsh nine, when the two squads met on the Brownson field Thursday. Walsh won 13 to 3.

The grounders hit by the Walshites were as good as hits when the Carrollites either let the ball through or dropped it. Besten and Roney pitched a stellar game and given support by their teammates would have given Ahearn a close contest. Ahearn was nicked for five hits and the Carroll tossers for six. The Walsh fielders supported their pitcher in brilliant style throughout the encounter.

BAND WILL PLAY AT TRACK MEET TODAY

The Notre Dame band will be in uniform at the Illinois track meet this afternoon. A conflict was removed yesterday by the cancellation of an engagement to play in the boy parade which is being held in South Bend this afternoon as a closing exercise for universal "Boys' Week."

The band had been scheduled to appear in this parade but President James Egan says that the band has been definitely released from this engagement to play at the Illinois-Notre Dame track meet.

All members of the band are requested to appear in uniform in the band room this afternoon at 2:15.

fifth and made three runs, making the score 8 to 5. McGrath began the inning with a safe one to center, went to second when Pearson, batting for Prendergast, walked, to third when Sheehan went out, Englehart to F. Wyatt, and home on Crowley's second hit of the day. Dunne hit a low one to Englehart, and Crowley was nabbed at second. Nolan hit one just a foot inside the right-field foul line, and scored Pearson and Dunne, but Vergara hit weakly to Robertson, and the inning was over.

Silver was first up in the next inning and he walked, but the next three men were unable to hit the ball out of the infield and he was unable to move from first base.

Sheehan began the seventh with a hit to right. He was followed by Crowley who flew out to Englehart. Dunne was safe on an error by the third baseman, and Sheehan advanced to second. Sheehan got to third on Nolan's long fly to L. Wyatt in center, but the two men died on the base when Vergara scooted one down to Englehart, ending the inning without a score.

Again in the ninth, the Terriers started well. Sheehan hit to right, went to third on a wild pitch and crossed the platter when Crowley put the ball over shortfield. Crowley was out at second when Dunne hit to Dale. Things yet looked well when Nolan hit to right, and Dunne went to second, but Vergara struck out, and Nelson made a running catch of a short fly by Silver.
