Police battle mobs in Chilean protest

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — Police battled hundreds of demonstrators in Santiago Thursday during a "Day of National Protest" against the military regime of President Augusto Pinochet.

The demonstrators, mostly university students, threw rocks and shouted "He's going to fall, he's going to fall!"

The police used tear gas, clubs and water cannons against the demonstrators.

Scores of people were arrested, including Copper Worker's Union President Rodolfo Seguel and former Senator Patricio Aylwin, both affiliated with the five-party Democratic Alliance that called the protest, according to reporters on the scene.

Witnesses said policemen beat Aylwin as he watched a rally and put him on a police bus. Reporters saw many marchers pulled by the neck or the hair onto police buses, thrown to the ground and stomped on.

The day of protest was the fifth in as many months of rising unrest over an economic recession and Pinochet's authoritarian rule.

The non-Marxist alliance had urged Chileans to beat cooking pots in their homes for an hour in the evening. However, Communists and some youth groups from the alliance parties formed marches downtown.

Communists and other leftist groups have called for street demonstrations to last through Sunday, the 10th anniversary of the bloody coup that overthrew Marxist President Salvador Allende and brought Pinochet to power.

More than 1,000 marchers converged from three directions toward Plaza Italia, a square at the end of the main downtown boulevard. Helmeted police, descending from buses and running in small groups, used clubs and tear gas to try to cut them off.

Two police trucks fired water cannons to disperse them, soaking alliance president Gabriel Valdes, who was standing nearby watching.

Most of Santiago's 4 million people stayed home from work, some out of protest and others out fear of violence. The government closed schools for the rest of the week.

Pamphlets were scattered all over the city, some urging people to join the protest and others suggesting they turn up the volume of their radios to drown out the noise of clanging pots.

Saint Mary's names new members to 1983-84 Board of Regents

Special to The Observer

Four new members will join the Saint Mary's College Board of Regents Oct. 20 when the College's governing body convenes for its first meeting of 1983-84.

Mary Lou Morris Leighton, a longtime leader in the Michiana community and cultural organizations, will be serving her second term on the Board of Regents. She was first elected to the post in 1975 and served as chairman of the board's development committee.

Leighton, who also served as a member of the library building committee, was instrumental in founding the College's Madeleva Society, which supports the annual fund through memberships. The $7 million Cushwa-Leighton Library on the Saint Mary's campus bears her name.

A patron of the arts, Leighton is chairman of the board and past president of the South Bend Symphony Orchestra Association, director of the Civic Center Foundation, Inc., a charter member of Indiana Advocates of the Arts, a life member of the Northern Indiana Historical Society and a member of the South Bend Art Center, Friends of the Snite Museum of Art, the Michiana Arts and Sciences Council, the National Gallery of Art, the Firefly Civic Project and Orchestral Association of Chicago.

Monsignor John J. Egan, director of the Office of Human Relations and Ecumenism for the archdiocese of Chicago, will begin a three-year term on the Board of Regents.

A recipient of an honorary doctor of humanities degree from Saint Mary's in 1981, Egan previously spent 13 years at the University of Notre Dame as director of the Center for Pastoral and Social Ministry and special assistant to University president Reverend Theodore M. Hesburgh.

Two Residents of Dallas, Texas,

James E. Jack and Lydia Haggard Novakov, also will join the Board of Regents.

Jack, native of Mishawaka, has been employed by Associates Corporation of North America since receiving his bachelor's degree in accounting from the University of Notre Dame in 1963. He currently serves as executive vice-president and chief financial officer and is a member of Associates' board of directors.

Jack, who earned his master's of business administration degree from Southern Methodist University (SMU), is a member of the board of directors of the Texas Commerce Bank in Irving, the advisory board of Jesuit College Preparatory School, the Cash Management Practitioners Association, the Financial Executives Institute and the College of Business Advisory Council at the University of Texas-Arlington. He also serves on the committee on financial relations of the American Financial Services and is a member of the faculty of the National Installment Banking School at the University of Colorado.

Returning students face housing problems

By CECILIA LUCERO

Senior Staff Reporter

While many students who participate in Notre Dame's foreign studies programs embark on their travels with enthusiasm, the long-awaited return to the University may be hampered by problems with housing.

Confusion still exists whether these students will actually receive on-campus residency that they were supposedly guaranteed. The issue of overcrowding of dorms adds to the concern of these students about their residence.

Director of Foreign Studies Dr. Isabel Charles said that while many of these students may not get their preference of dorms, they nevertheless are guaranteed housing on-campus.

"They will have on-campus housing if that is their preference. They can, like any other student, choose to go off campus. (But) they are not assured that they will be in the dorms they want," Charles said.

These students are still considered regular students of the University even if they attend another university overseas.

After candidates for the programs are selected, notice is sent to all of the offices of the University to verify the status of the students, said Charles. "All of the offices, including housing, get this list (of students) who are all recognized as regular Notre Dame students," she said.

Meg Lochary, a senior who participated in the Mexico program last year, encountered problems with housing upon her return to Notre Dame. According to Lochary, she had anticipated returning to Breen-Philips as her roommate would take care of the necessary arrangements.

"I left with the understanding that I would get housing on campus," Lochary said. According to Charles, students normally try to make arrangements with their rectors or roommates to return to the dorms they had lived in prior to their

In Brief

An attorney representing the owners of Bridget McGuire's Filling Station filed a petition with the city at 4 p.m. yesterday. The petition asked that a demolition order for an addition to the tavern be stayed until the South Bend Board of Zoning Appeals (BZA) can hear an appeal of the order. State Rep. B. Patrick Bauer, who owns the bar along with his sister Teresa Bauer, said a more elaborate petition will be filed today. The city's demolition order gave the Bauers until Sept. 15 to tear down the addition. The petition makes the deadline for demolition "no longer operable," according to Bauer. Kathy Barnard, city code enforcement director, said yesterday that petition missed the 11 a.m. deadline for legal advertising purposes and cannot be on the Sept. 22 agenda. — The Observer

A University hearing is scheduled for today to discuss the case of a Notre Dame sophomore who has accused two University security guards of assault. Rev. Val St. Charles, a student and a Baptist minister, alleges that the two guards physically assaulted him during a scuffle at the Main Gate Security Booth on Sept. 2. Dean of Students James Roemer has scheduled the 3 p.m. hearing to discuss disciplinary action against St. Charles. The University has charged St. Charles with verbally and physically assaulting the security officers during the incident. — The Observer

Feeling hot and sweaty? How about a dip in the Rolfs Natatorium? That's what University officials have decided to name the swimming facility scheduled as an addition to the ACC. The two main benefactors to the multi-million dollar project are Thomas J. Rolfs and Robert T. Rolfs, chairman and president of Amity Leather Products Company in West Bend, Wis. The Rolfs brothers are both alumni — Tom of the Class of 1944 and Bob of the Class of 1950 — and both serve on University advisory councils. Both have sons at Notre Dame, Stephen and Ted, both engineering majors. — The Observer

Notre Dame raised slightly more than $27 million in the fiscal year ending June 30. The amount, which doesn't include government grants, is the second largest in the University's history and the largest ever outside a major fund-raising drive, said James Frick in his last report as chief development officer. The donations came from corporations ($7.4 million), individuals, foundations (both $6.6 million), parents ($5.7 million) and deferred gifts ($690,000). Half of Notre Dame alumni solicited gave to their alma mater, up slightly over the previous year. The average alumni gift was $300. — The Observer

Professor of earth sciences at Notre Dame, Erhard Winkler, addressed an international symposium Tuesday through yesterday on the decay, maintenance and restoration of natural building materials. The symposium was at Esslingen Institute of Technology near Stuttgart, West Germany. Winkler, a member of the symposium's committee program, will chaired a session on natural stone and gave two lectures. One talk, "Ultra-Violet Luminescence — an Important Tool for the Study of Stone and Concrete," covers some of Winkler's most recent research at Notre Dame. Winkler has been at Notre Dame since 1948. — The Observer

Revive Homecoming

Homecoming is coming back. The floats, the dances and the revelry will all be a part of the week leading up to the Pitt game Nov. 5.

The concept sounds excellent, but already the event is losing its association with the football weekend. And I think that's a mistake.

Four days ago, the name of the event was changed to Fall Festival, a generic-sounding title that reminds me of the annual raffle and bazaar at the local Catholic Church.

At Monday night's Hall President's Council (HPC) meeting, the festival was described as a "mini An Tostal." In a conversation yesterday with Lisa Salvador, one of the two chairwomen, she called the event "an An Tostal for the fall." Even HPC chairman Mike Carlin says he is not sure whether having the festival on a home football weekend is a good idea.

To alter the original focus of the festival would be to lose a terrific opportunity. A real Homecoming Week (or some other spirited name... "Kill Pitt Week" sounds all right) would give this campus the chance to spread its spirit and enthusiasm over the whole week, not just on Friday evening and Saturday morning.

Chairwomen Lisa Salvador and Tina Persson have worked extremely hard since July trying to put together this festival. The events that they have planned — including fireworks, a bonfire, floats, special T-shirts, a pep rally and a possible Biergarten — all sound exciting. But wouldn't they be that much better if the events were all unmistakably connected to the idea of beating the stuffing out of the Pitt Panthers?

Several suggestions come to mind as possible additions to the week: A banner contest in which students would paint or otherwise create banners and hang them out of their dorm windows. The festival people could judge the banners on Thursday, with prizes being awarded to the best banners and to the best decorated dorm. Imagine the sight of hundreds of inspiring banners flapping in the breeze on Friday and Saturday morning.

Some sort of campus cheering session on Wednesday night, a la the infamous Campus Scream. It would be a scream with a purpose.

Random appearances by parts of the Band, if possible, say at some dinners during the week. This could be done if everyone understands that abuses of the privilege — such as food fights — would be treated harshly.

Inside Friday

Notre Dame has had a homecoming game in the past. The tradition started to fade in 1978, however. That year a controversy arose in the HPC concerning the election of a homecoming king and queen. The idea of such royalty was termed "regressive" by a number of hall presidents. The women's halls were the most opposed to the idea. Farley Hall President Michelle Kelly called the idea "childish and degrading."

While some halls boycotted the election, some halls nominated joke candidates. Nominees in this group included the Zahm moose mascot, the Holy Cross hog, a roach from Badin and Farley's janitor.

Homecoming went on as scheduled, though, complete with mums, movies, a "Find the Pitt Panther" contest, a pep rally, a fireworks display, a dance and a concert appearance by Neil Young. In 1979, the homecoming game was against USC on the Saturday before Fall Break, and interest waned markedly. By 1980, this "tradition" was dead.

But there is no reason why it cannot be revived, and revived in a bigger way than it ever was. So much talk this year has been centered on the spirit of Texas A&M and its "Twelfth Man" tradition. If you have not heard, Coach Jackie Sherrill was so impressed with the spirit of the school that he formed a kickoff team out of student volunteers. I'd bet the Irish could show even more spirit if given the chance.

When I see the enthusiasm at the pep rallies and the dedication of students who stand on the benches cheering from the kickoff to the final gun, I see a tremendous source that remains untapped, waiting to be given the opportunity to show its stuff.

It is up to the organizers of Homecoming (or whatever it will be called) to provide the framework for such a display. The timing is right; the opponent is tough. The students should be given the chance to show that their spirit can be turned on before Friday at 7 p.m.

Women graduate students offered counseling service

By PATRICIA CARROLL
News Staff

"Women helping women," is the goal which Susan Streibe hopes to see realized in this first year of Notre Dame Graduate Women's Support Group (GWSB).

Responding to what she saw as a neglected need for psychological support and encouragement of the University's graduate women, Streibe, a clinical psychologist for Notre Dame's Counseling and Psychological Services Center, has organized a counseling service aimed specifically at meeting the needs and concerns of this minority.

Much of the emphasis of the University's counseling and psychological services has been on its undergraduate population and although undergraduates make up the majority of the student body a definite need for programs targeted at graduate student's concerns does exist. Graduate women, especially, are easily isolated in an institution whose coeducation is still relatively recent. Certain departments have few women involved in graduate work and those few can suffer feelings of division, inadequacy, and confusion.

After discussion with different department heads, campus administrators, and grad students, Streibe, who holds a Ph.D. in psychology, decided to organize a group in which graduate women can connect with one another to share problems, interests, ideas and concerns. After two years of counseling at Notre Dame, Streibe has found that the concerns and needs of the graduate women whom she has encountered have been strikingly similar and thus a group type of counseling would be ideal in establishing, or reestablishing, a sense of support, trust and strength.

"The philosophy behind counseling and advising women is to give them a sense of power and responsibility," says Streibe; a sense which aids in counteracting the pressures and anger which the traditional stereotype or cultural role has caused, and continues to cause, women today.

The need to reaffirm power and responsibility is reflected in the organizational structure of the GWSB.

The women involved will decide upon the agenda and format themselves. If a need for outside speakers or information is felt, then that need will be met. If a preference for group discussion or questioning is expressed, then the meetings can be held accordingly. Thus, those attending will define what the group is and what they want from it. The main thrust of the service is to provide counseling and a chance to share and compare experiences and ideas.

"We have many high achievers among our women," notes Streibe, who suspects that the pressing issues will include the competitive pressures of an occupation, the balance of career and marriage, and the personal pressures of maintaining relationships.

So far, the Counseling and Psychological Services Center has funded what publicity has been entailed in the formation of the support group, such as flyers sent to off-campus townhouses, the library, the graduate student union, and various academic departments. Streibe does not predict many related expenses, but those that occur will be met by the psychological services center.

Streibe, with Jane Pitz, the rector of the student townhouses who has been greatly involved in Notre Dame's campus ministry, will begin meetings of the group on Monday evenings from 6:15 to 8:00 in the Wilson-Commons Graduate Student Center on Bulla Road. Streibe, who has already received several phone calls regarding the group, is eager to see and work with the women who attend, and hopes that a commitment to the group will quickly enable those involved to build a feeling of constancy, trust, and support.

Philippines president cries over slain rival

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — President Ferdinand E. Marcos said Thursday he shed tears for his assassinated rival, Benigno Aquino, and called the killing a "national shame."

Marcos' wife, Imelda, in a separate interview, said she had nothing to gain from the death of Aquino and added she was considering giving up her vast official powers.

Both denied government involvement in the Aug. 21 assassination and said they had wanted to attend Aquino's funeral. Aquino family members had said they wouldn't be welcome.

Marcos, in an interview with The Associated Press and visiting Japanese newspaper editors, said the killing of Aquino as he arrived home from three years' self-exile in the United States was a "national shame."

"I shed tears for him, and every Filipino should have," said Marcos.

Marcos acknowledged for the first time that he has been ill in recent weeks, although not seriously as had been rumored. He said he had recovered and he appeared to be in good health during the interview.

Mrs. Marcos, in a less-formal interview in a Malacanang Palace guesthouse, said she might step down from public office.

"I am considering not running next year for my elected position," Mrs. Marcos said. She said she wants to give up all government posts to work with the "private sector" backing Marcos' government.

"It's unfair. And how will I be benefited by it, to have somebody killed?" she asked.

St. Michael's laundry alters pick-up days

By SUSAN AYLWARD
News Staff

St. Michael's Laundry, which services nearly 4,500 students and faculty weekly, has altered the rotation schedule for pick-up from the men's dormitories this year.

The Hall President's Council revised the schedule in response to student requests for a more efficient and fair method of laundry pick-up. Within a five year period each dorm will have had their scheduled day of retrieval fall on each of the five weekdays.

According to Norm Muller, Director of the laundry service, "Last year about 89 percent of the overcharges (the surpassing of the student laundry limit) were for $50 or less." This year the overcharge limit was raised to that $50 level so overcharging will be at a minimum and the same services will be offered without the additional charge.

An optional laundry plan for males has not yet been devised, however. Nor is a laundry service for women students likely in the near future, according to Muller. St. Michael's does wash women's clothing on a "cash and carry" basis, but the facility is not properly equipped to wash delicate materials.

Last semester a new computerized washing machines was installed to handle the 12,000 lbs. of laundry processed each day and now that the staff has had a chance to adjust to the new equipment the St. Michael's laundry is ready to continue serving the Notre Dame community.

Soviets to turn over plane debris: U.S./Kremlin relations stagnant

Associated Press

Japan says the Soviets have found debris from the downed South Korean airliner and will turn the material over, but there was no sign Thursday of any other cooperation between the Kremlin and the nations and institutions outraged over the Soviet attack.

An angry Secretary of State George P. Shultz emerged from a contentious meeting with Andrei A. Gromyko in Madrid and called the Soviet foreign minister's explanation of the attack "preposterous" and totally unacceptable.

Gromyko told Shultz the United States had staged a "gross provocation" by sending the South Korean jumbo jet into Soviet airspace and called the act a "criminal deed," according to the Soviet news agency Tass.

President Reagan ordered all U.S. offices of the Aeroflot to be closed and demanded that all American air carriers sever ties with the Soviet airline, the world's largest.

Aeroflot has been banned from landing in the United States since 1981, and its U.S. offices in Washington and New York book only connections out of Montreal and other foreign cities.

Earlier, Reagan announced limited sanctions on cultural exchanges and transportation agreements.

At the United Nations, A U.S.-backed draft resolution was introduced in the U.N. Security Council deploring the downing of a South Korean airliner and calling for a full U.N. investigation, but not explicitly condemning the Soviet Union.

Soviet diplomats, speaking privately, said their delegation would veto it.

British Airways cancelled its flights to Moscow, and European pilots' associations joined in a 60-day boycott to protest the missile attack that claimed the lives of 269 people. The Soviets say the plane, which flew through Soviet air space, was on a spy mission for the United States — a charge the United States denies.

The pilots, from France, Italy, Norway and Denmark, were ahead of their governments in taking concrete measures against the Soviet Union. NATO ministers meeting in Madrid were still considering how to punish the Soviets.

The U.S. State Department cautioned Americans against going to the Soviet Union because the airline protests could seriously disrupt travel.

In Tokyo, Soviet Ambassador Vladimir Pavlov, in a meeting at the Foreign Ministry, said the Soviets would turn over to Japan recovered materials and documents from the crashed airliner, Japanese officials said.

They said he also told them his government will report on its search operations off the tiny Soviet island of Moneron.

It appeared that the reason the plane's debris was to be turned over to Japan is the absence of diplomatic relations between South Korea and the Soviet Union. Seoul has reportedly asked Tokyo to represent its interests in the affair.

The Soviets have not pinpointed the crash site yet, Pavlov reportedly said, but they found fragments in four areas near Moneron.

There were strong indications that the Soviet refusal to offer an account that satisfies the United States was leading to a further deterioration in relations between Moscow and Washington.

In Madrid, a senior State Department official said Shultz probably would cancel a previously scheduled meeting with Gromyko in New York later this month.

Gromyko said he would have nothing to say about his meeting with Shultz for the time being.

The United States has demanded an apology, restitution for the victims' families, and assurances that such an attack will not occur again.

Navy faces first clash in Lebanon

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The U.S. Navy unleashed its firepower in Lebanon for the first time Thursday, destroying a Druse militia battery that shelled Beirut airport while two Marine generals were inspecting Marine positions.

No casualties were reported at the airport, where four Marines have been killed and 28 wounded since late last month. But police said 52 Lebanese were killed and 114 wounded in fierce Christian-Druse fighting in the mountains overlooking the airport.

The Druse, in a statement issued by their Progressive Socialist Party, claimed Lebanese troops and Christian Phalange militiamen burned down a Druse religious shrine in Ebey, 7 miles southeast of Beirut and "massacred" 40 men, women and children who had taken refuge there.

There was no independent confirmation of the claim, the latest in a series of reports of massacres by both Christians and the Syrian-backed Druse since Israeli troops pulled out of the mountains Sunday. Israelis redeployed its troops to safer positions.

On Wednesday, U.S. and French jet fighters roared over Lebanon for the first time in a show of force after Marine and French positions in West Beirut were shelled. One Marine was wounded and at least two French soldiers were killed. Informal sources said a French soldier who was wounded later died.

The 1,200 Marines ashore are part of a 5,400 multinational peacekeeping force that also includes French, Italian and British troops. They have been in Lebanon since Israel troops forced the evacuation of thousands of Palestine Liberation Organization fighters from Beirut last summer.

Nicaraguan rebel planes attack airport, killing

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Two low-flying planes that the government said were piloted by rebel exiles rocketed Managua Thursday, destroying part of the airport's main terminal building and wounding three soldiers, officials said.

Officials of Nicaragua's Marxist government said one of the planes fired rockets near the home of the foreign minister. Deputy Interior Minister Luis Carrion said one plane, a propeller-driven Cessna 402, was shot down at the airport by anti-aircraft guns, killing the two men on board. He said the other plane escaped.

Although the attack was blamed on anti-government forces, neither of the two rebel groups — one based in Costa Rica and the other in Honduras — claimed responsibility.

Elsewhere in Central America, Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger inspected U.S. military exercises in neighboring Honduras, and there was heavy fighting in El Salvador between government troops and guerrillas.

Carrion said the Cessna 402 crashed at the base of the airport control tower. He added that flight plans and other documents found with the dead pilots indicated the two planes had taken off from Tobias Bolanos airport, seven miles west of San Jose, the Costa Rican capital.

There was no immediate comment about the attack from Costa Rican authorities, who claim that their country — which has no army — wants to remain neutral in the Nicaraguan conflict.

Democratic Revolutionary Front rebels, based in Honduras, have been receiving money and training from the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA), and President Reagan earlier this year called them "freedom fighters."

But, so far as is known, the smaller Democratic Revolutionary Alliance based in Costa Rica, has received no help from the United States. It is led by Eden Pastora, a hero of the 1979 revolution that placed the Sandinistas in power, and its members are mostly disenchanted Sandinistas.

Carrion said one plane fired two rockets at the home of Foreign Minister Miguel d'Escoto, in Managua's southwest district of Villafontana, but missed. "One didn't explode and the other hit a tree," he said. He said the plane fled southward towards Costa Rica.

D'Escoto, a Roman Catholic priest, was in Panama City, attending a conference of the Contadora group — made up by Mexico, Colombia, Venezuela and Panama — trying to negotiate peace in Central America. This was the group's eighth meeting since January, so far without success.

Lochary said that during the semester in Mexico, she was informed that she would not be living on campus in the upcoming school year. She said the reason for this was that she was one of several students with a leave of absence status. According to Lochary, however, she had not declared herself on leave of absence.

DuLac states that students on leave of absence cannot be considered regular students of the University, and therefore are not guaranteed housing on campus. These students also cannot receive academic credit for courses they take in other schools. Earned credits can only be accepted by Notre Dame under "special consideration" to be arranged with the deans of the colleges, according to Charles.

Charles said that last year's Mexico Program had been different from previous years. "Only two students were considered a part of the regular (school) year because they had registered for our former program."

The Mexico students were sent to Ibero Americana, said Charles, without agreement with the Mexican university to transfer the one-year program there. Technically, the rest of the students on the Mexico program were on a leave of absence.

Lochary said that the problems with on-campus residency "put a cloud over my last few weeks in Mexico. I was really disappointed in how the Administration handled (the situation)."

Charles said that while a few students have problems due to "a misunderstanding about the status of the program," such occurrences "rarely happen."

Campbell vs. ND Secondary

Remembered more because of failures, they are now the key to the game

By LOUIE SOMOGYI
Sports Writer

Tomorrow's matchup between Notre Dame and Purdue features two teams out to prove something after two straight seasons of mediocrity and losing records.

Tomorrow's matchup also features a Purdue quarterback and a Notre Dame secondary that don't have to prove much. Based on their personal efforts and past accomplishments, anyway, that is true. Unfortunately, Campbell and the Notre Dame secondary lately haven't been judged by their critics on the basis of their many successes, but on the basis of their failures.

Scott Campbell was the darling of the Purdue campus early in his career. His guts and competitive spirit were immediately evident in his very first collegiate game against Notre Dame in 1980. A thumb injury to senior all-America Mark Herrmann forced the freshman Campbell into the spotlight.

Despite facing a fired-up Notre Dame crowd and team, on national television no less, Campbell rallied Purdue from an early 17-0 deficit to a close 17-10 halftime score by completing 14 passes in a row.

"I wasn't scared at all," said the calm Campbell after the game. "I wasn't any more nervous than I was for any game in high school."

The Irish went on to win despite Campbell's stats of 17 completions in 26 attempts for 178 yards, but it was apparent that Purdue would continue its tradition of excellence at the quarterback position once Herrmann graduated.

The Purdue crowd even booed Herrmann and called for Campbell in the fourth game of the season that year when Herrmann was having one of his rare sub-par performances.

As expected, Campbell took over as a starter his sophomore year. Since then he has passed for more than 2,600 yards the past two seasons, completed his passes at a 56-percent clip, hit on 33 touchdowns passes, and, at one point, did not throw an interception in over 200 straight pass attempts.

He's touted as one of the nation's best at his position, and coaches such as Notre Dame's Gerry Faust get headaches just thinking about defending him.

"I've seen more than enough of Scott Campbell in the last two years," said Faust earlier in the week.

Amazingly, some people at Purdue feel that they've seen enough of Scott Campbell too. Purdue won 28 games and traveled to three straight bowl games in Herrmann's last three years. With Campbell at the helm, Purdue finished with a record of 5-6 in 1981, and 3-8 last year.

Included in those losing seasons was a nine-game losing streak which included the final four games of 1981 and the first five games of last year. In a few of those games he did not play well. But in most of them, like the 1981 45-33 loss to Ohio State in which he completed 31 passes in 52 attempts for 516 yards, he carried more than his share of the load for the team.

Although the defense gave up 30 points a game last year, which put Campbell and his mostly inexperienced offensive teammates in precarious positions, Campbell was an easier target for criticism since he played the glamour position of quarterback.

In last year's final game against arch-rival Indiana, he threw three interceptions and led the team to just one touchdown in a 13-7 defeat. His critics came out at full force. They demanded that Jim Everett, Campbell's backup, take over the offensive controls. He has pressed Campbell hard for the starting position this fall.

"I never had to deal with such criticism," says Campbell. "I never had to deal with people booing me. I quit reading the paper. I haven't read one since last year. I used to enjoy reading about the team and myself."

Campbell, an active leader in the Fellowship of Christian Athletes, has weathered the storm for the most part.

"Sure it bothers me. But you just have to ignore it, listen to your coaches, work hard, and do what you can to help the team."

The words could have just as easily come from the mouths of two Notre Dame seniors

'Spoilermakers' look to ruin another ND year

By LOUIE SOMOGYI
Sports Writer

"'We're Number One' buttons would vanish like rose blossoms after a spring frost. Talk of National Championships would subside. Gloom would be the order of the day. The symptoms were annual, and the diagnosis was simple: Purdue Depression Week."

That's how The Observer summarized the Notre Dame rivalry with Purdue ten years ago.

Today, some of the anxieties seemed to be relieved. While Notre Dame has lost in its last two visits at Purdue, it has trounced Purdue 10 times in its last 13 meetings. But should a Notre Dame team ever take an indifferent attitude towards a Purdue football team or have the slightest of an off-day, well, that's when Purdue backers usually smile at one another and say, "A'Notre one bites the dust."

Joe Yonto, an assistant defensive line coach for Notre Dame from 1964-1980, remembers well the fire that Purdue always has in their eyes when they see Notre Dame Blue and Gold.

"Purdue rises to its heights when they play us," says Yonto, currently Notre Dame's special assistant to the athletic director. "It doesn't matter what the odds say, what the records are, or what kind of personnel they have. It's always been a great rivalry with very few lopsided scores."

Before 1950, Notre Dame had won 14 of its 15 previous meetings with the Boilermakers. It was in 1950 that the tone of the series as it is known today was set. It was the year that the Purdue football team became known in Notre Dame annals as the "Spoilermakers."

Frank Leahy's Notre Dame squad had, up to then, compiled the longest winning streak in Irish history at 39, and had won three of the last four national championships. Purdue, on the other hand, was on its way to a 2-7 season mark.

But a sterling performance by sophomore quarterback Dale Samuels, who is currently the associate athletic director at Purdue, led Purdue to stunning 28-14 upset over the Irish at Notre Dame Stadium.

"The personal sadness of our first loss in five seasons is indescribable," said a mourning Leahy after the game. "Where had I as a coach failed in our preparation for our time-honored friends?"

The Notre Dame football mystique was brought back down to earth. Purdue became represented as the David who, on any given Saturday, in any given year, could knock out the Goliath of college football.

"A national holiday was declared for all of those who were anti-Notre Dame, for the same reason some people are anti-Yankee in baseball and anti-Dempsey in boxing," wrote a sportswriter after the 1950 clash. "They get tired of extended success and want to see the champ knocked out."

Four years later the "Spoilermakers" struck again.

Terry Brennan's first Notre Dame team went 9-1, but the aspiration for the national title was wiped out in the second game of the season when Purdue upset the Irish at home again, 27-14. Purdue went on to win only three more games that year.

Soon thereafter, the Fighting Irish became known as the "Fainting Irish." From 1956 to 1963, Notre Dame had three losing seasons and three more in which it was 5-5.

The Shillelagh Trophy, which goes to the winner of this annual series, became an added incentive for both universities when the two teams first started competing for it in 1957. The Shillelagh was donated by the late Joe McLaughlin, a merchant seaman and an Irish fan who brought the shillelagh from Ireland.

Purdue won five of the first seven Shillelagh battles before Ara Parseghian arrived in 1964. Parseghian teams did manage to defeat Purdue in 1964 and 1966, but the 1960's was an era when Purdue week at Notre Dame became the time to "stop smiling, start grumbling, and begin praying," as The Observer reported back in 1973.

In 1965 junior quarterback Bob Griese hit 19-of-22 passes for 283 yards as Purdue defeated a Parseghian-coached team for the first time. Griese's successor, Mike Phipps, then became the only quarterback in history to beat a Notre Dame team three years in a row (1967-69). In all three of those years Notre Dame finished No. 5 in the

The Game Plan:

ND defensive lin
Purdue defenseBy STEVE LABATE

Openers: "Purdue could be as improved as any team in the Big Ten," starts Notre Dame Coach Gerry Faust. "They will come in determined to start things off better than last year when they lost their first five games. We lost our last three last fall, so we've both got something to prove to ourselves. It should be everything you would want in a season opener."

Irish offense versus Boilermaker defense: "An awful lot will be determined by what happens when we've got the ball," remarks Faust. "Purdue thinks its defense is better, and we know our offense has to be more consistent and productive. That will tell the tale right there."

The big question centers around how much better the Purdue defense will be, if it is better at all. Last season Boilermaker opponents had neither difficulty moving the football (412 yards per game) nor problems putting points on the board (29.5 points per game).

Purdue's outstanding defensive performer is senior linebacker Brock Spack who has a total of 258 tackles over the last two seasons. But, after Spack, there is a sharp dropoff in experience at the linebacker position. No other player has more than 90 minutes of game playing time.

Because of this lack of experience, look for Notre Dame quarterback Blair Kiel to exploit the Purdue defense in the middle by throwing short to his backs and tight end.

Kiel's front wall (from tackle to tackle) of Mike Shiner, Tim Scannell, Mike Kelley, Neil Maune, and Larry Williams should afford him plenty of time to throw the football too. For without a doubt, the Boilermaker defensive line is the team's major weakness.

Whether senior Melvin Menke (235 lbs.) or sophomore Derek Wimberly (245 lbs.) gets the starting birth at defensive tackle, he will have his hands full playing across the line of scrimmage from Notre Dame's premier offensive lineman, Larry Williams. Williams, in addition to his two years of experience, will have at least a 35-pound weight advantage against either Menke or Wimberly.

Expect Irish offensive coordinator Rod Hudson to call a lot of running plays designed to follow the strongside blocking of Maune, Williams, and tight end Mark Bavaro.

How well the young Purdue secondary plays when Hudson decides to pass the ball will be a crucial aspect of tomorrow's contest. Last season the secondary surrendered an average 223 yards per game, but Purdue Coach Leon Burnett claims. "Our defensive secondary will be vastly improved over last year due to the fact that our young kids now have more experience."

The young kids are juniors Don Anderson and Corey Cooper, sophomore Ray Wallace, and freshman Rod Woodson.

Anderson, the strong corner, lead the team in interceptions in 1982 with five. Cooper, a junior college transfer from Northeast (Okla.), will start his first game for Purdue at strong safety.

Weak corner Wallace, hailed as one of the best freshman defensive backs in the country just a year ago, has a tendency to give up the big play despite his accolades. Woodson is extremely quick and gifted, but he is only a freshman. Woodson's weak corner will be an area of activity all afternoon should Kiel and Hudson decide to pick on the freshman.

Boilermaker offense versus Irish defense: What can be said about quarterback Scott Campbell that hasn't been said already? Faust sums up the sentiments of the entire Notre Dame following when he says "We've seen more than enough of Campbell already." Faust, of course, is referring to his third game as a college coach when Campbell single-handedly snatched victory from the jaws of defeat for Purdue with a last second touchdown toss and two-point conversion.

But Campbell is only part of the story on offense. His tight end, senior Cliff Benson, is an all-America candidate in his own right. "If he's not the finest tight end in the country," says Burnett, "he's certainly one of the top two."

Tailback Mel Gray is a speedster who just missed a 1,000-yard season in 1982. Gray is also a threat as a receiver, catching 38 passes just a year ago.

Up front, the Boilermakers boast both the size and strength needed to establish a running game. Although they lost a starting tackle in Tom Jlesky (285 lbs.) due to academic problems, Purdue will still average 265 pounds on the offensive line.

If the line can open holes for Boilermaker ballcarriers, Campbell will be that much tougher to stop when he decides to put the ball up. The running game will also benefit from the presence of split end Jeff Price. Price runs a 4.6 40 and is a genuine deep threat. His speed will prevent Notre Dame from cheating on defense by crowding the line of scrimmage.

Price, Benson, and a bevy of talented backs will give

nation, its hopes for a national title always vanquished in the second game of the year against the "Spoilermakers."

After Parseghian-coached teams defeated Purdue squads from 1970 to 1973, Purdue gave Parseghian its fitting farewell gift in 1974 — a 31-20 upset over the defending national champions in Notre Dame Stadium. Purdue finished that season at 4-6-1.

But, overall, the 1970's was an era in which good fortune smiled on the Irish at Purdue's Ross-Ade Stadium.

In 1971 for instance, the Irish were trailing 7-0 with only three minutes left. It seemed that once again Purdue's campaign to "Stop Ara Pollution" would be a success. But Purdue's punter bobbled a wet ball in the endzone and Notre Dame defensive end Fred Swenson recovered it for the touchdown.

The Irish tallied the two-point conversion for the win by way of the "Genuflect Play." Tight end Mike Creaney fell to one knee (genuflect) at the line of scrimmage, thus making it seem to the defenders that he missed his assignment. Once the secondary wrote him off as worthless in the play, Creaney sneaked into the back end of the endzone and caught the pass that quarterback Pat Steenberge barely got off.

In 1975, Notre Dame had a 3-0 lead, but Purdue had the ball on Notre Dame's one-yard line with five minutes left to play. On third down, tailback Scott Dierking's pass was intercepted by Luther Bradley and returned a Notre Dame-record 99 yards for a touchdown to seal another close Notre Dame victory at Purdue.

In 1977, Notre Dame was predicted No. 1 in most pre-season polls. Dan Devine's job was on the line though when his team, coming off a loss the previous week against Mississippi, trailed Purdue in the fourth quarter, 24-14. In desperation, Devine turned to a third-string quarterback who had sat out the previous season with a shoulder separation, to rally the team. Joe Montana responded by completing 9 of his 14 pass attempts for 154 yards and one touchdown as the Irish triumphed by a 31-24 count. Montana went on to lead the team to the 1977 national championship.

"As well as bad things, we've also had good things happen against Purdue," smiles Yonto. "That's what makes this rivalry so great — there is no predictable scale as to what will happen."

No, gloom doesn't pervade the Notre Dame campus as it once did during Purdue Week.

But respect always will as it should. Just "A'Notre one bite the dust" against the "Spoilermakers."

Scott Campbell

A real
Freshman KovBy STEVE LABATE
Sports Writer

O. Henry could not have written better Kovaleski story is not fiction, but rather continues to unfold with each passing day.

Introduction: Mike Kovaleski (6-2, 210 lbs.) is a senior while playing at Notre Dame High School in Indiana. He is recruited by several colleges, including Notre Dame and Purdue. Kovaleski is listed fourth on the depth chart.

Chapter One: The setting now is Cartier. The Fighting Irish have begun their first game. Kovaleski is listed fourth on the depth chart.

Chapter Two: Suddenly, the second-stringer, goes down with an injury. Third stringer, the number one man, Mike Larkin, who is a senior, is injured.

Chapter Three: Now it is the week before Kovaleski is making a run at Tom Murphy's Purdue game.

In his office, linebacker George Kelley, the gutty freshman from New Castle, "He's a player," says Kelley. "I think he possesses a lot of talent. He's learned rapidly even though he is still in high school."

It is a few hours before practice when Kovaleski is in his room in St. Ed's Hall. All week long, Kovaleski has been in his room. Apparently, Kovaleski has heard the term "freshman" before.

"Well, I'm a little nervous of course. You know, I'm a high schooler," he says.

"I'm kind of nervous, but after I get through the game, I think that nervousness will be gone."

Who can blame him if he is nervous? It is a tough and sometimes frustrating transition from high school to college.

"Learning all the different defenses is a part," explains Kovaleski. "I have progressed with each day. In high school the defenses were there."

line must bother Campbell, se must improve the Notre Dame secondary its toughest test of the season right off the bat. How well the secondary fares will depend partially on the front wall of the "Gold Rush" defense.

Above all else, the Irish defensive line must contain Campbell. The last two years have shown that. when Campbell is allowed to scramble, he's deadly on a secondary. Secondly, the line must put pressure on the quarterback. Thirdly, it must stop Purdue's ground attack before it gets started.

Expect Campbell & Co. to test Mike Kovaleski, Mike Larkin's replacements at weakside linebacker, and sophomore Pat Ballage at weakside cornerback. Both will be making their first start for Notre Dame.

Special Teams: "The kicking game is very suspect and that's what scares me the most because it cost us three games last year," states Burnett.

For Purdue Walt Drapeza will handle all the kicking chores for Purdue. Like Notre Dame's placekicker Mike Johnston, Drapeza is a fifth-year player. However he will be a rookie at the punter position this season.

"If I don't get a good start it'll make me start thinking," says Drapeza.

For the visitors, Johnston and Kiel will do the kicking and punting respectively. Both are solid at their position.

Intangible: Ross-Ade Stadium. "Historically Notre Dame has had trouble at Purdue," Faust says. "I found that out two years ago when they beat us there in the last few seconds. That was a rude awakening for me, and I'm sure our players who were there remember it."

Players to watch: Purdue's Rod Woodson, who Burnett calls "the finest player I've ever seen in college football at this point." Burnett's dramatics aside, Woodson's speed will make him a threat to go all the way every time he touches the ball on punt and kickoff returns.

For Notre Dame, look for tight end Mark Bavaro to have a big afternoon as the short passing game should be open. Bavaro is also an exceptional blocker who should be especially effective tomorrow against Purdue's 3-4 defense.

The Key: The key tomorrow will be the defensive line's ability to put pressure on Campbell while at the same time preventing him from escaping the pocket and throwing on the run.

The Pick: Football games are won in the trenches. Notre Dame is too strong on both sides of the line for the young Boilermakers.

live storybook tale Kovaleski suddenly finds himself in lineup

Mike Larkin, however, is trying to make things less complicated for Kovaleski.

"He's just great," says Kovaleski of his new mentor. "If I ever have a question, he's at practice and all I have to do is ask him. He knows and he'll just tell me."

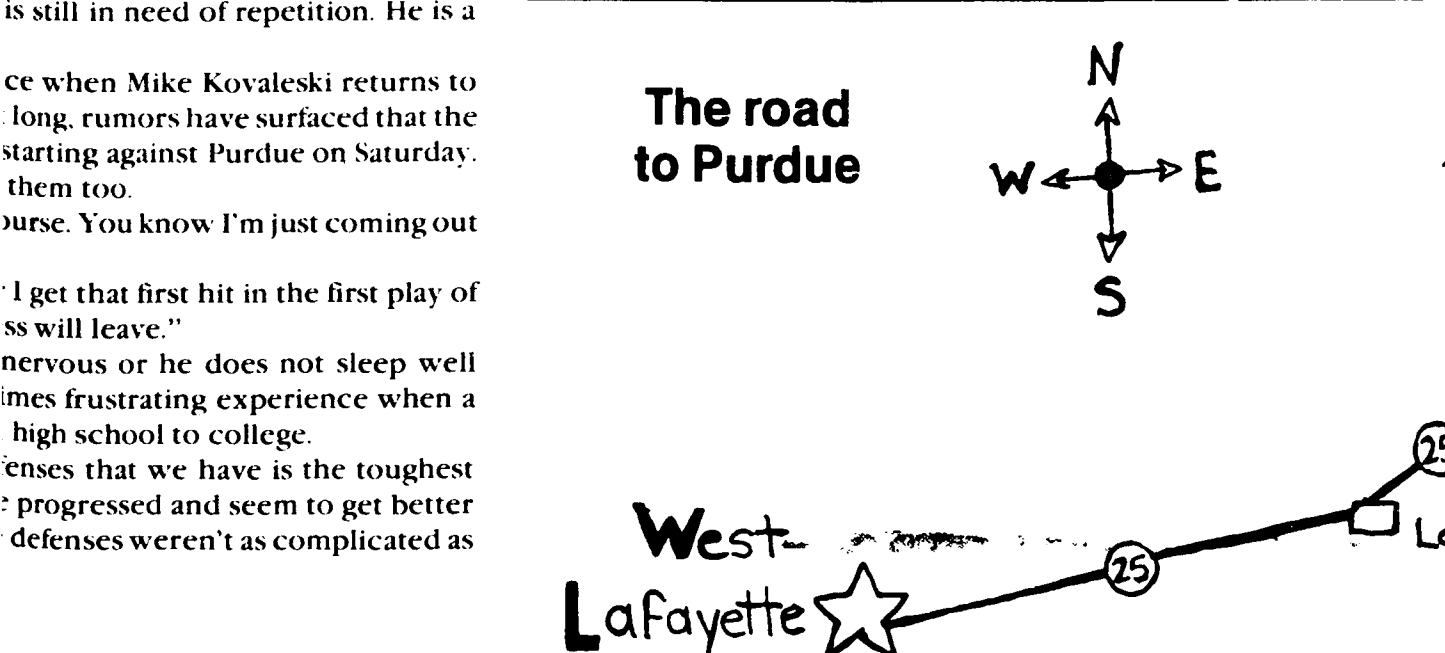

Kovaleski asks because he knows he has large shoes to fill in Mike Larkin's. It's possible that he won't be able to play defense like an All-American like Larkin. But, then again, no one is asking him to do so.

If he can give the Irish the kind of performance that earned him all-state honors, that may be enough for a defense that Kelley says "exhibits confidence."

Three chapters were completed and the writer returned to his room to continue the Kovaleski story. Suddenly, from a window, a stereo speaker blared a recent hit.

You were up to your old tricks in Chapters Four, Five and Six

If Kovaleski performs the same tricks that put him into the position of possibly being the only freshman starter for the Irish, then maybe, when Larkin returns, the story will become a mystery novel. Larkin or Kovaleski?

Matchup

in the secondary, co-captain Stacey Toran and Chris Brown.

Like Campbell, the two won immediate fan favor as freshmen when they played key roles in the 1980 Sugar Bowl season for the Irish. The last two years, however, have had their trying moments.

Brown, especially, was subjected to a painful trial when Campbell completed a touchdown pass and then a two-point conversion against him in one-on-one coverage in the final seconds as Purdue nipped the Irish, 15-14, two years ago.

In essence, Brown and Toran have been very steady and consistent players (Toran has even been good enough to be named to a few pre-season all-America checklists) that quietly get their jobs done.

But, even though they have been part of a secondary that has limited opponents to just under a 50-percent completion rate the last two years, one that gave up only seven touchdown passes last year, they are better remembered as being part of the unit which got burned late in the game last year by the Penn State and Southern Cal passing attacks.

Campbell himself had 25 completions in 39 attempts for 279 yards and two touchdowns against the Notre Dame secondary last year. Can the Irish secondary contain him this year?

"He's a great quarterback, a good runner, good team man, and a very good competitor," summarizes Toran. "I think we'll have problems, but a lot of our play will depend on our defensive line and what kind of pressure they put on him. We plan to keep him in the pocket so he won't run all over the place and have the time to find open receivers."

Maybe the defensive backs will experience problems with Campbell, but the secondary plans to give Campbell and his outstanding set of receivers some of their own.

"We have a smart experienced secondary," says Notre Dame defensive coordinator and secondary coach, Jim Johnson. "We don't have the super speedy athletes, but we are physical and we probably use more types of coverages than most other teams do."

"I think our secondary has more security than ever since I've been here," says Toran defending his oft-criticized unit. Critics have unjustly put Campbell and the Notre Dame secondary under the gun recently. And, although they have nothing to prove to the critics, how they do fare tomorrow when they oppose each other may say a lot about the game's outcome.

PEERLESS PROGNOSTICATORS

Each week, The Observer sports staff, a random student picked at the discretion of the sports editor, and some well-known figure in the Notre Dame community predict the outcome of the week's major college football games. Records are compiled as to how each person does against the spread. In other words, it is not enough to pick the winner of a given game. The person must pick a winner and give the underdog points.

Not Hurting for originality

by Vic Sciulli

The temptation for anyone when listening to a new band is to draw comparisons to other groups which sound something like them. Because of a lack of exposure to the new sound, finding a point of reference through another band is a natural reaction.

Listening to the The Hurting, Tears for Fears' debut album evoked the same type of response. Two years ago this type of music probably would have been considered avant garde new wave. But thanks to the recent successes of new bands, such as The Fixx and Soft Cell, audience acceptance of the new sound has augured and is not acceptance as radical as it would have once been.

Although many will associate The Hurting's clean, uncomplicated arrangements and use of instruments with other bands it is not an album of borrowed themes and melodies. There is a tremendously refreshing sound to this LP.

Englishmen Roland Orzabal (vocals, guitar, keyboards and rhythm programming) and Curt Smith (vocals, bass, keyboards) form the nucleus of the band, with other musicians making smaller contributions. The two formed their first band, Graduate, at 19, eventually changing their name to their present moniker.

The band signed a contract with Phonogram U.K. After releasing their first two impact singles ("Suffer the Children" and "Pale Shelter"), they began drawing attention from dance clubs on the East Coast. It wasn't until their third and fourth singles, "Mad World" and "Change" were released that they gained a following in their homeland. After all this, the band went into the studio to record what eventually became the rest of The Hurting. "Suffer the Children" and "Pale Shelter" were re-recorded for the album.

"Suffer the Children", despite its negative sounding title, has a modern, bouncy beat which could give it a chance on U.S. pop charts. The bass line, drums and keyboards are very similar to the ones in the Go-Gos' "Our Lips Are Sealed". "Change" also has a great reggae dance (not to be confused with disco) sound.

Drums are up front on many of the LP's tracks. On the title track, the drum beat echoes a primal sound reminiscent of the Talking Heads. Acoustic guitars are used sparsely but effectively. The Hurting is not synthesizer music; though used throughout, they are never overwhelming.

"Mad World" features a lush sound but deceptively simple melody. (The latest Police album shows this style.)

Tear For Fears' greatest strength lies in their writing ability. Many of the song's lyrics evoke past memories of fear and of childhood. In this respect, The Hurting reminded me of Pink Floyd's "The Wall" Though not as skeptical and dark, the lyrics will grab and hold you and remain after the song is over.

*I can not grow
I can not move
I can not feel my age
The vice-like grip of tension holds me fast
Engulfed by you
What can I do
When History's my cage
Look forward to a future in the past*

"Ideas as Opites" is just as moody sounding as the impression its title gives. A drum solo like the beating of a distance heartbeat sets the reflective mood of the song, enhanced by Orzabal's straining lyrics.

Tear For Fears sound like it can go in any direction on their next LP. The instrumental portions of many songs are very danceable and they can easily go in that direction on their next LP. However, it would be unfortunate if they were to go so far as to abandon their writing in doing this. The Hurting is an exquisite debut album. Barring any breakup, this is one band you'll be hearing from in years to come.

On being thin-skinned

by Rev. Robert Griffin

I love spunkiness, sassiness, spiritedness: the attitudes with which fighting mad minority members stick up for themselves and resist being treated demeaningly. But I hate the revisionism in which the perpetrators of the alleged abuses take back, modify, or attempt to soften their uses of language which have been perceived as insulting. This week, Howard Cosell is being roasted by certain critics of the Black community. This summer, President Reagan drew flak because he was graceless in one of his comments about women. Several years ago, Father Hesburgh had to apologize because he referred to Notre Dame students as "kids." A word once spoken, says the Lord, is registered in heaven; we will be held responsible at the judgement seat for every idle word we have spoken. No public figure has the right to bad-mouth anyone except an outlaw or a Russian. Yet there are watchdogs in the country who almost seem to make it a profession to be thin-skinned. Doctors take out insurance to protect themselves in malpractice suits. Speakers and writers will soon need a similar kind of defense against the verbal ambiguities. It hurts to be called a bigot. A mis-placed word can betray a writer by its fuzziness. In an imprecise world, where language tries, and often fails, to communicate an objective truth between two highly subjective minds whose chemistry changes with the phases of the moon, a writer hopes that a reader will be patient enough to look for his good intentions. Otherwise, poetry will disappear. Imagery will be distrusted as unreliable. Liveliness will disappear from public discourse. Gingerbread men will become ginger persons. God will be neutered, because no preacher wants to be labeled sexist. Bigots, not bothering to be bland or neutral, will inherit the earthiness from which some of the best rhetoric comes.

H. L. Mencken, as quoted in "Ann Landers" this week, wrote: "In old age, you forget faces. You forget to pull your zipper up. You forget to pull your zipper down." It's a lovely passage, full of truth, humor, and wistfulness. But after the lines were published in the Baltimore Sun, letter-writers complained: "He was making fun of the senior citizens."

I write weekly for a national publication. So far, I have caught hell for hurting the feelings of old maids with a fondness for sweets, the victims of epilepsy, the hard-of-hearing who sit next to me at weddings, Christians who clap their hands when they get the Spirit, and traditional Catholics offended by knowing I have a torn pair of pants. This summer, I wrote a mood piece on some of the local color seen in Manhattan.

"Three old dolls rode across from me on the downtown bus, all of them with dyed hair, one of them in sandals with painted toenails. The middle lady had a can of liquid diet the drugstore had given her. 'All of the vitamins I would need for a day are here,' she said. The other two listened thinking of their own vitamin needs. I wondered if they worried about sickness and death, and kept staring at the toes painted in defiance of the aging process."

In today's mail, I got a sheet of paper with my paragraph clipped and pasted in the corner, along with the following typed response:

"One old priest rode across from me, balding and with uncombed hair that would have looked better with a touch-up and dressed in his hot collar on a summer night; but of course that was for showing us he deserved respect, even while he took up a malicious pleasure in calling us 'old dolls with dyed hair.' Oh, he probably also stared at the young girls, most of whom also tint their hair but without his scorn. And instead of looking at our faces, our lined faces that had somehow survived and, with their artificial color were only trying to look more presentable to the world (which did not see them anyway), he kept staring at our manicured toenails with contempt in his heart."

I would have loved the response, if it were not for the bitterness. Some reader obviously found my description unnecessarily sad or discouraging. I was not wearing a Roman collar; my article makes it clear I was wearing a necktie. The feeling in my heart — which sticks out all over the printed page — was sympathy, identification, and concern, and not contempt and malice.

I try never to be deliberately unkind. Each of us represents some truth about life, which is full of dirty tricks. I'm not going to take me for weeks, let the chips fall where they may. Dyed hair doesn't deny that the head is still young. Old dolls represent the rest of us who are fighting on the front line in a losing battle. The best of them give us courage by the ways they are feisty, but that's another story belonging to another busride. Sufficient for the day are the painted toenails thereof. Painted toenails have a beauty of their own at any age.

In a multi-media age, we are being subjected to a censorship through hurt feelings; someone, ruffled by belonging to the human condition, is waiting to silence us, as soon as a spade is called a spade. We already have enough problems with the lies, the propaganda, the perversions, the obscenities, the deliberate insults. To Father Hesburgh's generation, and mine, eighteen and nineteen year olds are kids, with no disrespect intended. Howard Cosell says "monkey" is a word he would use to his own grandchildren. President Reagan feels it weren't for women, men would still be carrying around clubs. He doesn't know what's wrong with that. Maybe the human race would be better off if men were still carrying clubs. A club, skillfully applied, never left a deadly fallout from a mushroom cloud. Maybe that's the point women are making.

What's happening...

Who says this is a dead town? Just take advantage of some of the events listed here and you may be convinced that South Bend is as lively as midnight in Manhattan. Well, almost.

• THEATRE

This weekend the Elkhart Civic Theatre is opening its final play of the season, "Romantic Comedy." Written by Bernard Slade, this is a love story about two authors. The play will be presented tonight and Saturday night at 8:15, at the Bristol Opera House. For tickets call 848-4116.

• MUSIC

At the Holiday Star Theatre it's Rick James with the Mary Jane Girls, tonight at 7:30 and 11. The Stone City Band will perform Saturday at the same times. Tickets are $15.95.

• ART

An exhibition entitled "Afro-American Abstracton" opens Saturday at noon in South Bend's Warner Gallery. The exhibit will feature some of America's foremost abstract artists and will emphasize the link between African art and modern art. Artist Benny Andrews will speak on the topic at the Bendix Theatre tonight at 7:30.

A "Business of Art" workshop, sponsored by the Indiana Women's Caucus for Art, is scheduled for Saturday and Sunday beginning at 8:30 a.m. The workshop will take place at the South Bend Art Center, Inc.

• MOVIES

"Diner", a fairly recent and highly rated motion picture is the Student Union sponsored movie this weekend. Written and directed by Barry Levinson, "Diner" is a humorous and touching story of a group of young men hanging out at their favorite restaurant. The film can be viewed in the Engineering Auditorium tonight and Saturday at 7, 9:15 and 11 p.m. Admission is $1.

As part of the Friday Night Film Series, "Lola," a 1982 German movie, will be shown in the Annenburg Auditorium at 7:30 p.m., for $2.

• MISCELLANEOUS

Of course, on Saturday afternoon not a soul on campus won't be glued to the TV set (or else hamming it up at Purdue), and to help those on the scene celebrate, the Student Union and the Senior Class are setting up a tailgater in West Lafayette. It will begin Saturday morning and will be located just north of the Golf Starter House, off Cherry Street.

Baseball fans are being taken out to the ball game tonight to see the Chicago White Sox battle the California Angels. The $15 tickets are available at the Student Union record store.

Finally, the Sophomore Class is heading for the Dunes on Sunday. Buses are scheduled to leave the Main Circle at 10 a.m. Tickets are $4.

"Diner," the 1982 motion picture release can be viewed tonight and Saturday night in the Engineering Auditorium. See "Weekend" for times.

Montana's arm burns Minnesota

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Quarterback Joe Montana threw a career-high four touchdown passes in the first half and the San Francisco secondary made five interceptions, three by Eric Wright, as the 49ers blitzed the Minnesota Vikings 48-17 last night in a nationally televised National Football League game.

Montana completed only 11 of 18 passes in the first half but four went for scores as the secondary recovered a Minnesota fumble and picked off two passes. The 49ers added three more interceptions in the second half.

The five interceptions tied a single-game record against the Vikings, while San Francisco's 48 points were the most scored against Minnesota in the last 20 years.

The 49ers built a 13-7 lead after the first period as Montana threw his first touchdown pass, a 21-yard strike to Dwight Clark, and Ray Wershing kicked two field goals.

It was the second period that proved the Vikings' undoing, though. Just over four minutes into the period, San Francisco had put three touchdowns on the board and added another five minutes later.

The Boxing Club will hold the first practice for novice boxers on Monday at 4 p.m. in the boxing room in the North Dome of the ACC. Enter at Gate 3. All interested students are invited to attend. NL West race remains tight

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Dale Murphy's second home run of the game, a two-out solo shot in the seventh, cracked a tie and boosted the Atlanta Braves to a come-from-behind, 12-9 victory over the San Francisco Giants last night.

The Braves banged out 20 hits, including five by Rafael Ramirez, who had a homer and three RBI as they stayed two games behind the Los Angeles Dodgers in the National League West.

They trailed 7-3 after the second inning and began their comeback with a four-run third that tied the game at 7-7. They took a 9-7 lead, but the Giants tied it again in the sixth.

Giant reliever Greg Minton, 6-10, retired the first two batters in the seventh before Murphy launched his 30th home run of the season, a towering blast to left. It was his 11th homer against the Giants this season, including three two-homer games.

Gene Garber, 3-4, worked out of the sixth-inning jam for the victory.

L.A. 5, Cin. 2

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Mike Marshall blasted a three-run homer and Bob Welch limited Cincinnati to four hits in eight innings as Los Angeles downed the Reds 5-2 last night.

Welch, 14-11, earned his sixth straight victory, balking home the only run he allowed in the fourth inning. The Los Angeles right-hander struck out eight and walked only two in besting Mario Soto, 15-12.

N.Y. 6, Mil. 5

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Don Baylor and Bert Campaneris drove in two runs each, helping the New York Yankees beat the Milwaukee Brewers 6-5 last night.

Bob Shirley, 5-6, got the win, allowing four hits and four walks in five innings. Rich Gossage picked up his 19th save.

The loss went to starter Mike Caldwell, 11-10.

Chi. 8, Cal. 5

CHICAGO (AP) — Harold Baines and Greg Luzinski hit consecutive homers in a five-run third inning, and the Chicago White Sox hung on to beat the California Angels 8-5 Thursday night.

Rich Dotson, 17-10, walked five and struck out two in seven-plus innings of work.

The loss went to Mike Witt, 7-12.

Hou. 3, S.D. 2

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Denny Walling's pinch-hit double with one out in the tenth inning scored George Bjorkman from first base and gave the Houston Astros a 3-2 victory over the San Diego Padres yesterday.

The game ended a four-game losing streak for Houston and a four-game winning streak for San Diego.

game, Arias reached into Noah's bag of tricks, hitting a ball between his legs. His shot sailed long and Noah wagged his finger at his young opponent — the youngest player to reach the semifinal here since the Open era began in 1968.

"The whole first set he was on top of his game, holding serve at love. I thought I had no chance in this match," Arias said. "But when I got to a tie-breaker, well, I'm 16-and-4 in tie-breakers this year.

"In the fourth set, down 30-love, I threw it away to him. I acknowledged we were going to play a fifth set. He doesn't get too tired, but it saved me."

The Frenchman showed the "between-the-legs" move to Arias in the third game of the final set. But the alert Arias was there to put away a volley that Noah couldn't return.

"These shots are only one point," Noah noted later of the crowd-pleasing acrobatics.

The two held serve until the 12th game when Arias ripped a forehand service return to Noah's feet, which the Frenchman netted. Noah then double-faulted, and Arias had a love-30 lead.

Two points later, Noah sailed a forehand volley long, and Arias wrapped up the match with a wicked forehand service return that Noah could only wave at.

"I played really well and I think he was just a little tired," Arias said. "He was putting more pressure on my serve than I was on his. I was pretty lucky."

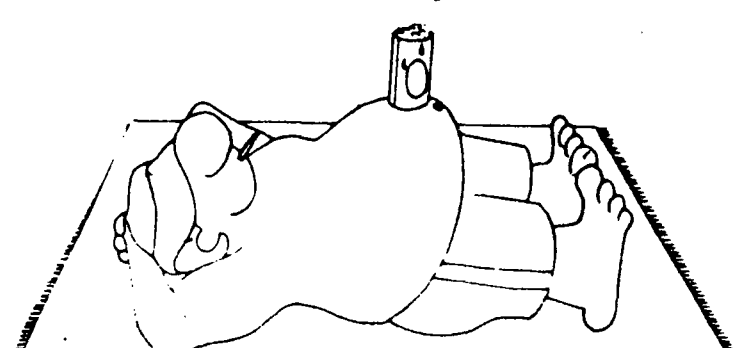

"I wasn't looking forward to a tie-breaker in the fifth set.

Lendl lost in the U.S. Open final to Connors last year. Against Wilander, he was majestic, controlling almost every point.

Top-seeded John McEnroe, who was upset in the singles Monday, teamed with Peter Fleming yesterday to win their doubles semifinal. They defeated Australians Pat Cash and John Fitzgerald 6-4, 7-6, 7-6, and will meet fellow Americans Fritz Buehning and Van Winitsky in the final today.

September 9 Lola (1982) Germany
Directed by Rainer Werner Fassbinder. In German with English subtitles.
Set in postwar Germany but deriving its inspiration from von Sternberg's The Blue Angel (referring to the movie itself, not Lola the woman). Lola transforms the cabaret where Dietrich entices into the site for the town's most corrupt deals, the place where the sociopolitical elite meet, where they go to see Lola. Enter an honest new government official, and the dynamics of the town, the cabaret, and Lola herself seem bound for change.

Tennis team aims for big year as 1983 fall campaign begins

By JANE HEALEY
Assistant Sports Editor

For all those making the road trip to Purdue this weekend, there is an attraction other than the football game awaiting you. Tomorrow morning, the Notre Dame women's tennis team will open its fall season against the female Boilermakers at 9 a.m.

For all those who won't be making the road trip this weekend, you can catch your first glimpse of the Irish Sunday morning on the Courtney tennis courts at 10 a.m. against another Big Ten opponent, Illinois.

In a schedule that Coach Sharon Petro characterizes as "tough," the inaugural weekend is an apt beginning.

"We have our two toughest matches of the season this weekend," she said. "It's not going to be easy to beat Purdue at Purdue, the day of a home football game."

It hasn't been easy for the Irish to beat Purdue in the past either. In the fall last year, the Boilermakers handed Petro's squad an unmerciful 7-0 lashing in West Lafayette. The home court advantage gave the Irish little inspiration in the spring as they lost once again 7-2.

Illinois was a more equal opponent, but still beat Notre Dame 5-4 early in the fall season. These scores provide Petro with all the motivation she needs.

"I'm excited to win," she said. "I'm tired of losing to those two teams. I think we should win these."

"When we played I T linois last year, we had three freshmen in the starting lineup, and it just happened to be our first match of the season. That really worked to our disadvantage."

This year, Petro has a more experienced group of players on the roster. Only one freshman, Jo-Anne Biafore, will be filling a spot in the top six singles positions.

The other five spots will be determined between five returning players — Suzie Panther, Lisa LaFratta, Pam Fischette, Mary Colligan, and Laura Lee. This weekend should help Petro solidify that lineup. For the time being though, she isn't worried. She is pleased with the overall talent of the group.

"This team is much stronger than last year," Petro said. "The individual players came back as better tennis players."

Raw talent won't carry the Irish to their goal, and Petro knows it.

"We have our eye on the National Championship," she said, referring to the Division II championship that barely eluded the team last year. "That's what's motivating us now. We have to work — work hard from day one. That's our attitude."

Petro's outlook will be tested in the new North Star Conference which Notre Dame joined in the off season. Eight schools including Notre Dame are part of the newly-formed league — Butler, Dayton, DePaul, Detroit, Evansville, Loyola, and Xavier.

As of now, the only two teams from the North Star that the Irish will face are DePaul and Butler. But South Bend will be the site of the conference tournament the weekend of October 14-15. The winner of the tournament will be crowned the North Star champion.

Two other tournaments Petro is looking forward to are the Irish Invitation (October 8-9) and the first Wildcat Invitational which will be held at Northwestern University (October 1-2), a traditional powerhouse of talent. "That (the Wildcat tourney) should be some great tennis," Petro said.

As in every other sport, only time will tell if Petro's expectations will be fulfilled. From now until May, the Irish will work toward that coveted and, as of yet, unattained National Championship.

U.S. Open Tennis

Arias, Lendl move to semi-finals

NEW YORK (AP) — Ninth-seeded Jimmy Arias surprised Yannick Noah, and Ivan Lendl methodically and efficiently eliminated Mats Wilander yesterday to advance to the semifinals of the U.S. Open Tennis Championships.

The 19-year-old Arias ousted Noah 7-6, 4-6, 6-3, 1-6, 7-5, while Lendl stopped Wilander 6-4, 6-4, 7-6 to set up a semifinal battle tomorrow in America's premier tennis event. The other semifinal will pit defending champion Jimmy Connors against 16th-seeded Bill Scanlon.

The women's semifinals today will send top-seeded Martina Navratilova against No. 5 Pam Shriver, while defending champion Chris Evert Lloyd, seeded No. 2 this year, will play No. 14 Jo Durie of Britain.

Noah, the 1983 French Open champion who was seeded fourth here, was serving for the opening set when Arias, this year's Italian Open and U.S. Clay Courts winner, pulled off his first surprise. With the score 40-30, Arias reeled off the next three points to break the Frenchman and pull within 5-4.

The two then battled into a tie-breaker and again Noah jumped out front, this time 4-1. But Arias took the next six points and the first set.

Arias lost his serve in the fifth game of the second set as Noah evened the match. But Arias brought the crowd of 20,556 to its feet in the eighth game when Noah hit a stop volley and the Grand Island, N.Y., native raced towards the net and dove to the court, just lifting the ball over the net.

Noah, who went on to win the game, lost that point, however, when he netted the ensuing backhand volley.

After having his left wrist taped — he apparently hurt it when he dove for the ball on the hardcourts at the National Tennis Center — Arias puled off the only service break of the third set, breaking Noah at 15 in the sixth game, the final point coming on a wicked backhand service return to Noah's feet.

Noah, who hit a ball between his legs with his back to the net in an earlier match, delighted the crowd again when, in the ninth game of the third set, he was wrong-footed, but was able to hit the ball behind his back, putting up a deep lob that Arias returned wide.

Noah breezed through the fourth set, breaking Arias in the second and fourth games. But in the fourth

Field hockey squad opens year tomorrow

By MARY SIEGER
Sports Writer

Gerry Faust and the Notre Dame football team won't be the only ones facing a battle on the playing field tomorrow in West Lafayette. Jan Galen Bishop's field hockey team will also open its season tomorrow at Purdue as it faces a tough Boilermaker squad.

Tomorrow will be the first time the Irish have played the Boilermakers in two years and Bishop expects the match to be a good challenge for her team. She feels if the Irish "can match Purdue for speed, then we'll be fine."

Bishop has named the travel squad, but has not yet decided who will start against Purdue. She expects team captains Janet Hlavin and Jettie Totten as well as returning veterans Claire Henry and Molly McCabe to perform well in tomorrow's game.

Although the Irish have only been practicing for 12 days, Bishop expresses confidence in the team despite the fact that there are seven freshmen on the squad.

"This is a better team than last year's," says Bishop. "There is more depth and talent. The talent level of the incoming freshmen is better than in the past."

Last year, the Irish went 13-8 on the season and graduated several top players. To compensate for these losses, Bishop has shifted positions and is using a different game system to provide more defense which she feels will be the key to winning when playing tough teams like Purdue.

In her fourth and final year at Notre Dame, Bishop plans to work on closing the "talent gap" between Notre Dame and the NCAA Division I teams. She expects to defeat at least one of the Division I squads this season and says, "this year, we're out to get them."

This year, Bishop feels the veterans are ready to face Division I teams like Purdue.

"They're past the point of being scared," she says. "Now they want a chance to beat the Division I teams."

Another of Bishop's goals this season is to win the Dayton Invitational Tournament which will be held on November 4 and 5 and she is optimistic of an Irish victory.

According to Bishop, the highlight of the season will be the team's trip to tournaments

The Notre Dame field hockey team is one of three Irish teams that will begin their season tomorrow at Purdue. Jan Bishop's team is trying to close the gap between itself and the big powers. For more, see story at left.
