SLC sets date for open hearing

Aims to eliminate overcrowding of dorms

by Jerry Bradley
Staff Reporter

The SLC representatives announced an open meeting to discuss on and off-campus residences for Monday, Nov. 20, at 4:15 in the Center for Continuing Education. The hearing session, the first of five proposed meetings, will consider the areas of procedure for determining who moves off campus, room pick procedures, selection of residence halls for undergraduate women, and the present stay hall system.

The focus of the hearing will be those factors which appear to have contributed to the situation of overcrowding which occurred this year in the on-campus residence halls. The meeting is intended to initiate the necessary planning at this time so as to minimize the risk of overcrowding next year.

At yesterday afternoon's meeting in the Holy Cross Hall Halfway House the SLC representatives listened to reports from standing committees. Sister John Miriam Jones, assistant to the Provost, presented the Campus Life Committee's report on the selection of residence halls for undergraduate women students. The report pointed out that the committee's deliberations were closely associated with an ultimate enrollment figure for women in the 1973-74 school year.

The campus life committee voted unanimously that the hall or halls selected should be on the North Quad so that the concentration of women would not be in one place. The committee also ruled out the two towers, citing safety and location problems.

The list below is the suggested order of halls the committee proposed. The projections are based on several enrollment options for the 1973-74 year. Presently there are 305 women in Badin and Walsh and 25 living off-campus.

percentage of new students in the converted halls.

A survey conducted in Walsh Hall by the committee revealed that 50 women would like to relocate. Of 173 women contacted, nine said that they would like to move off campus.

Student representative Anthony Abowd reported on the Hall Life Committee's proposals for forcing students off-campus. The committee suggested that the university exploit all voluntary means to encourage students to move off-campus. The University should provide more information on off-campus living, the report suggested.

The committee foresaw two methods of approaching the problem. The report suggested as two extremes, a campus wide lottery to determine who must live off-campus, or a "selective exclusion of hall residents deemed not compatible with hall life by some hall committee or other method."

Floyd Kezele read the report of the planning committee reported that it would stick to last year's policy of dealing with long-range issues. The committee would deal with the plausibility of going towards ultimate life styles like coed dorms and would deal with the question of the LaFortune Student Center.

The Rules Committee reported that they were in touch with the Indiana State Legislature waiting on any proposals to lower the legal age. The Committee expects to hear from the Legislature soon after the first of February when the new session begins. The new bill would effect the age on consent needed to move off-campus.

Larry Mentz was unanimously allowed a seat on the Council as a speaking member for the Law School.

The meeting concluded after the Council voted Dean Link, Professor Strauder and Larry Kascht to the Judicial and Appeals Board.

Total enrollment of women 1973-74	Halls	Women relocated
706	Cavanaugh and St. Ed's	376
687	Breen-Philips and St. Ed's	357
636	Keenan	306
607-617	Stanford or Farley	288 277
577-571	Zahm or Cavanaugh	247 241

The criteria used in selecting the list of halls included location, physical layout, security, and the cost of renovation. St. Ed's-Cavanaugh proposal was cited for it's central location and because it has the most single rooms. An important criteria used in the selection was the size of the hall relative to the number of woman admitted.

The University Quota Committee will meet Wednesday to discuss the number of women Notre Dame will admit next year.

The committee agreed that the SLC should continue to require women students to live on campus. The committee also proposed that the women in Badin and Walsh be allowed to relocate in any women's dorm on campus. The report suggested that relocation would reduce the

Messbarger will appeal rejection of tenure

by Don Ruane
Executive Editor

St. Mary's College Professor Paul Messbarger, yesterday, filed an appeal to his rejection for tenure with President Edward Henry.

The former English department chairman learned of the rejection one week ago and said he was "shocked" because he felt he "probably had the best case for tenure" among the candidates under consideration.

Messbarger is not sure what will come of his appeal since the appeal procedure is not very clear. It is described in the Governance of the College, a manual containing the by-laws of the Board of Trustees, the faculty and administrative manuals.

The campus chapter of the American Association of University Professors has sent inquiries to the president, and to its national office in Washington D.C. According to the chapter secretary, Linnea Vacca, the association will investigate how the decision was made, if it acts at all. She said last night that she will convene the AAUP members as soon as possible to discuss the situation.

Chapter president Dr. Donald Horning was not available for comment because he is recuperating from a heart attack, and is still hospitalized in fair condition.

Stories Conflict

Messbarger said there are several peculiarities about his case. The most prominent for him seems to be the fact that he was considered last spring after the merger moratorium was lifted, and that he has been reconsidered.

According to Messbarger, he received a favorable recommendation last spring. He described the second evaluation as "double jeopardy," and challenged the priority of reconsidering a tenure case that had been complete last year."

According to a statement released last night by Rank and Tenure Committee Chairman Dr. Richard Pilger, "Those who were under consideration for tenure were not granted it; they were issued terminal contracts indicating that they would not be retained beyond the 1972-73 academic year; some of them were separately informed that their cases would be reviewed this fall."

Pilger said Messbarger was among those separately informed. The majority of those reconsidered were granted tenure.

Messbarger said there were seven candidates, but Pilger said the figure is not accurate. He would not say how many were considered, stating that it is not public information.

Another peculiarity, according to Messbarger, concerns the reorganized tenure process. The Board of Regents, which replaced the trustees when St. Mary's was reincorporated earlier this year now has the final power to grant or refuse tenure. Messbarger contends that the board participated in the entire process and questions this participation. Pilger said the Regents had nothing to do with his committee's recommendation.

The tenure process begins with recommendations from department chairmen which are sent to the Rank and Tenure Committee for a recommendation. The recommendation is then considered by the president who makes a decision, which is submitted to the Board of Regents for approval. Student evaluations are used in the process.

No Impropriety

Pilger said he is "satisfied that there has been no impropriety in any of the tenure deliberations this fall." His statement, a copy of which was given to Messbarger last Wednesday, emphasizes that decisions are made on the candidates merits and are not the results of "bias or whim."

Messbarger: "shocked" at tenure rejection because he feels he "had the best case for tenure."

Saigon—South Vietnam's foreign minister Tran Van Lam said Monday that the visit of Gen. Alexander M. Haig, Jr. has brought the United States and South Vietnam "closer together" on a draft peace settlement. But Lam said that there were still some problems requiring "clarification" before Saigon would accept the accord.

Moscow—Communist Party leader Leonid I. Brezhnev asked the United States to remove "the obstacles created by the American side on the eve of signing" a Vietnamese cease-fire agreement. He chose a banquet in Moscow in honor of a visiting Bulgarian Party leader to address to the Nixon administration in the sharpest language to date by the Soviet leadership since the draft agreement was made between Hanoi and Washington.

Charlotte Amalie, Virgin Islands—Sen George McGovern, in one of his first interviews since losing the presidential election, vowed that he would "keep the heat on" President Nixon to end the Vietnam War, reduce military spending and reorder national priorities. He also pledged to try to prevent George Meany and others whom he called "wreckers" from gaining a dominant role in the Democratic party.

Washington—Moshe Dayan, Israel's defense minister, will hold to-level policy talks in Washington Tuesday in which he expected to press for new weapons and seek assurances of continued deliveries of jet fighters, well-placed administration officials said.

Question of coex courses to be resolved soon

by David Rust
Staff Reporter

Saint Mary's students deciding whether or not to take classes at Notre Dame next semester may be encouraged by a statement that will probably be issued before the end of the week by University provost James T. Burtchaell and Saint Mary's College president Edward Henry, reports SMC's William Hickey, vice president for academic affairs.

Dr. Hickey expects the question of SMC students enrolling in University classes to be resolved by the end of the week.

Presently, any St. Mary's student who wishes to pursue her studies in part at Notre Dame must pay, over and above her SMC tuition, University tuition costs amounting to $100 per semester credit hour.

Thus, any SMC student taking a regular three-hour course for two semesters would owe the University $600 if she took her classes at Notre Dame.

This policy is new this semester to ND-SMC. During the 1971-72 school term, when both schools were headed toward what seemed to be an imminent merger, policy was "wide-open"—students at Notre Dame and Saint Mary's could attend classes at either institution and pay only their regular tuition.

In the tumultuous aftermath of the "unmerger," the present policy was arrived at by the University and Saint Mary's.

"The issue will most likely be successfully or unsuccessfully resolved this week," said Hickey. "This present policy will either remain in effect next semester, or there will be a change."

Meetings have been held over the past few weeks by a group composed of SMC representatives Henry, Hickey and assistant to the president John Hof, and Notre Dame representatives Fr. Burtchaell and president Theodore Hesburgh. Hickey believes the issue will have to be settled very soon to meet deadlines and other requirements concerning registration for next semester's courses.

In any case, Hickey feels fairly certain that provost Burtchaell and SMC president Henry will make their statement either way this week.

"We're working towards a program that will be a lot more realistic than our present set-up," said Hickey. "a program in which each school recognizes the independence of the other."

Five ND students injured in crashby J. Patrick Boyle
Staff Reporter

Five students, in a car traveling "at excessive speeds" failed to negotiate a curve on Douglas Road, skidding out of control, hitting a cement post on one side of the road, sliding across Douglas and digging up a tree on the other side. The driver, pinned behind the wheel, was hospitalized. Injuries to the other students were minor, and the accident resulted in extensive damage to the automobile.

A break-in occurred at the Golf Maintenance Building Saturday night. A quick inventory revealed that nothing was missing, and Campus Security feels that the thieves were apparently looking for something specific, but couldn't find it. Everything was left untouched.

Vandalism struck the campus elsewhere early Saturday in Grace Tower, where a trash can was thrown through the window of room 430.

Elsewhere, three people refused to stop their cars by the security booths that mark the entrances to the campus, and drove through the wooden gates. Jerry McGlynn, security officer, feels this is, "A real stupid and expensive thing to do. The people who try it never get very far, and then there is the bother and cost of having to install a new gate."

There were three minor "fender bender's" on campus this weekend. The damage was only minor, and there were no injuries.

Senior transfer women to be issued guidelines

by Ann Therese Darin
Campus News Editor

After nearly a year's delay, the University of Notre Dame will issue very soon a statement containing guidelines for 80 St. Mary's College seniors who will receive degrees from the University in May.

Reportedly the statement includes information on commencement, tuition, degree eligibility, and academic regulations for the senior women majoring in American Studies, Psychology, Government, Art History and Modern Languages.

Written by Rev. Ferdinand Brown, university associate provost, and Dr. William Hickey, college academic vice-president, the guidelines are the first definitive information the women have received since they became pseudo-Notre Dame students last spring.

In the document the only point still disputed is the section on graduation honors. Representatives for the university contend that women will receive academic recognition according to Notre Dame's honor system. If applied to St. Mary's seniors, the regulation would mean only courses taken at the university, no SMC courses, would count in grade point averages.

St. Mary's spokesmen, however, believe implementation of this rule could present problems for some seniors, who have taken much fewer than the usual 60 resident hours needed for Notre Dame degrees. Determination of academic honors using the Notre Dame criteria could result in "non-representative determination" of honors, according to SMC representatives.

Although the statement reportedly does not mention number of hours needed for graduation or whether the women are eligible to receive Notre Dame academic awards, it does stipulate:

-these 80 students will receive only a Notre Dame degree (instead of a joint degree of St. Mary's diploma);

-they will participate in only Notre Dame's commencement, but may take part in every official SMC graduation activity except the college's graduation;

-before graduation in May, these students will become Notre Dame students by transferring officially to the university from the college; and

-St. Mary's will pay diploma fees to Notre Dame for the 80 women. Money will come from graduation fees paid by the women to the college earlier this year.

Questioned on how these students will transfer to Notre Dame, Dr. Hickey replied yesterday afternoon, "In the first week of May, they will officially go through the motions of officially transferring to Notre Dame. It would be too confusing to award Notre Dame degrees to St. Mary's students."

Fr. Brown, the other author of the document, Fr. Burtchaell and Assistant Provost William Burke were unavailable for comment.

Sr. John Miriam Jones, assistant to the Provost, would only acknowledge "there's something in the process.. right now it is on Fr. Brown's desk."

Sister Miriam confirmed since Notre Dame is granting the degree, it will establish the degree requirements. Earlier this year, St. Mary's administrators had stipulated that the seniors receiving their degrees from Notre Dame, under tuition plan "D" (major courses at Notre Dame, all electives at St. Mary's,) would fulfill St. Mary's requirements for a degree.

According to St. Mary's administrators, seniors would fulfill requirements for Notre Dame majors, specific St. Mary's degree requirements for a degree and complete the 128 class hours needed for SMC graduation. Notre Dame Arts and Letters degree candidates only need 120 hours for graduation.

Last month Fr. Burtchaell remarked in a private conversation that the SMC seniors graduating from Notre Dame only needed 120 hours to graduate. This regulation has not formally appeared in any document yet.

SMC registrar Donald Rosenthal reported that after first semester grades are recorded on the transcripts of the 80 women, they will be sent to Notre Dame's registrar to be re-set as Notre Dame transcripts.

Completed student directories will be on campus by Nov. 24

by Bill McGinn
Staff Reporter

The long-anticipated completed student directories won't be available to Notre Dame students for several weeks. Mr. Dickmeyer, President of Promotional Enterprises of Indianapolis, has promised that his publishing company will have the revised and fully completed student directories delivered to the campus by November 24.

In order to aid the students during the interim, Student Union President Jim Scheider has decided to distribute the defective directories this week. These directories lack student campus addresses. The student Union Directory also stated that a special supplement prepared by his organization will be distributed along with the defective directories. This special supplement will contain the addresses and telephone numbers of students at St. Mary's.

Last week the defective student directories arrived on campus within the time limit specified by the University contract. Unfortunately, campus addresses were omitted by the publisher. Dickmeyer admitted the company's fault.

The publisher's errors were also explained by Mr. Joseph O'Brien, Director of Personnel at Notre Dame. He stated that the University submitted a computer tape listing all the necessary student information, including local addresses, to the publisher. The publishing company reprogrammed this tape in order to convert it to printable form. Unfortunately, their programmer omitted the tape sections that included campus addresses. He did, however, include the listings for off-campus addresses.

O'Brien was surprised by this action since the University had highlighted the hall information part of the student directory.

O'Brien stated that the University informed Promotional Enterprises of Indianapolis that the first edition was not acceptable since it was not a complete directory. The publishing company was obligated by contract to produce an acceptable copy.

The company is now preparing 10,000 copies of the directory which will include the necessary revisions. The Director of Personnel further explained that the University at present has no agreement to provide any additional payments to the publisher for the production of the revised directory.

Burrell, Giantonio discuss human sexuality tonight

Fr. David Burrell C.S.C. and Dr. Gerald Giantonio will speak on human sexuality at Notre Dame tonight in Washington Hall at 8 p.m. This will initiate a general program sponsored by the Notre Dame Campus Ministry.

Fr. Thomas McNally described this program as a spin off of the Masters and Johnson lecture. Tonight's speakers will discuss sexuality in a Christian light and pertain more to the situation here at Notre Dame.

Last Spring the Campus Ministry laid the plans of this program with co-education being the primary reason. It also felt that sexuality was one area that hadn't been dealt with recently.

A program was decided on, not consisting not only of tonight's lecture but including other functions as well. There are also plans to have panels of married couples visit various halls and discuss topics such as marriage.

The Fine Art of Being in Committee

The Student Life Council cast the first ray of hope yesterday that the important decision concerning which dorm will be converted to a female residence might be made before Christmas. The Campus Life Committee's report made the decision contingent on the quota of incoming female students. That passed the buck squarely to the University Quota Committee.

Logically, the quota committee is going to have to make the first hard and fast decision. It's impossible to allocate physical facilities when the needed capacity is not known. At Wednesday's meeting, then, Dr. John Goldrick, director of admissions, and the remainder of the quota committee should let the rest of the university know how many new female students to expect. But since this is the committee's first meeting, it's doubtful that a final decision will be made.

For now

Where does that leave the rest of us now? The Campus Life Committee of the SLC has done its homework. The suggestion, though, certainly has no finality. That is the unfortunate element of the fine art of "being in committee." None of the committee's work and, consequently none of the SLC's work can be completed until the rest of the committees involved get on the stick.

At the least, the residents of the north quad have been formally served notice that two of the quad's dorms will probably be converted. This should come as absolutely no surprise. Unfortunately, all the residents of St. Ed's, Cavanaugh, Farley, Breen-Phillips, and Zahm must still worry about whose rooms are going to harbor next year's female students. It's impossible to argue that the anxiety of any of these students could be reduced by any further extensions of the decision. It is equally unlikely that the residents of Cavanaugh, and St. Ed's would worry any more if the selection of their dorms was finalized.

Next step

It's time for a little prudent haste. This means that all concerned students should make optimum use of the November 20 open SLC meeting to let the council know that there is some urgency surrounding the decision. The Monday before Thanksgiving is not known as a particularly good time for student activism. Nonetheless, time is running out -- make the most of every opportunity.

Conservative An Answer to Soothsayers

jim napier

Judging from the editorials and the majority of opinion columns appearing on these pages as well as the bitter caterwauling erupting from McGovern party headquarters last week, the recent elections results appear to have sentenced the United States to four more years of immorality. Sixty per cent of the American electorate has seemingly opted for the continuation of governmental corruption and Machiavellian values, over the reinstatement of righteous ethics embodied in the person of George McGovern. America has shunned a vision of Camelot for a state clearly unsuitable for those who believe in what used to be this nation's ideals.

The Question is What Happened?

How could over forty-five million people chose vice over virtue? Unless one questions the basic moral fiber of the American people, the answer is blatantly obvious. Most individuals did not interpret the campaign as a choice between corruption and integrity.

Perhaps those that have predicted moral catastrophe should endeavour to understand the reasoning behind the votes of these forty-five million people. Americans did not believe Richard Nixon to be a war monger, a hater of peace, who maliciously connived to prolong the Vietnamese War because of some well concealed, inner desire. Nor either did blue collar workers heed McGovern's claims that the main goal of the President's wage and price controls was to sacrifice labor in an effort to help big business set record profits. The American voters found such concepts too irrational for a master politician like Richard Nixon to endorse.

In the finest tradition of the American creed of innocent until proven guilty, the majority of the electorate declined to smear the President with labels of Warren Harding. Despite the efforts of Chief McGovern Party Justice Lawrence O'Brien, the electorate decided not to indict the President in this election on the basis of a lack of convicting evidence.

A Silent Majority Decision

Despite George McGovern's morbid portraits of Richard Nixon, the bulk of the voting populace interpreted the campaign as a choice between the fundamentally sound America they know now and a radically revamped America with such priorities as increased Federal expenditures, pseudo-isolationism, and a realignment of the nation's wealth via the Robin Hood method.

The Real Question of 1972

The real question of 1972 was posed best by Hubert Humphrey in the California primary debates, when he challenged Californians and all Americans, to decide whether they wanted the type of President whose concepts of government included advocating the creation of a federal dole in order to give every man one thousand dollars. The former Vice President might just as well have added in his questioning of America, if the people of the United States have confidence in a man who would strip the nation's armed forces, grant virtually unconditional amnesty to those who chose not to serve in the military, and who would almost undoubtedly spend billions more than the present federal budget thus leading to increased taxation.

15 Million Answers

The American people answered Hubert Humphrey's question five months after he first posed it in California. Forty-five million Americans said they did not wish to live in George McGovern's home.

Explo '72: A meeting of teachers

by Joseph Abell
Managing Editor

First in a series

The Castle Room of the Royal Coach Motor Inn: a quiet, empty auditorium. Tired sunbeams drag themselves through doorways flanked by massive oak arches and equipped with plush, leather-covered doors. Proud paintings of legendary Middle-Age figures stare blankly at each other from eight and nine foot perches on fake wooden walls.

At the front of the room, a long yellow banner greets the emptiness: "Welcome to God's Forever Family Reunion!" But God's Forever Family has already gone to bed.

A solitary janitor wanders among the rows of disarrayed chairs. A young man, he is fascinated by the goings-on of the week-long meetings being held here, but not really interested; he still has some twelve hundred chairs to straighten.

A bright pamphlet catches his eye and he stoops to pick it up. The Word is Getting Around shouts at him in four colors. He flips through it and reaches for another, his curiosity aroused.

"Interesting?"

The janitor looks up, startled to see a smiling face of a man in his late twenties.

"Yeah, well..." he hesitates.

"I've noticed you for the last few days; do you like to read?" the man asks, indicating the pamphlet in the janitor's hand.

Yes, he tells the man, recognizing him as the coordinator of the convention here at the Royal Coach, he likes to read.

"Well, here, let me give you some more to read," the man says smoothly, "maybe your interest will help you find what I did: the peace and contentment of Jesus Christ."

"Did you know I've been praying for you these last few days? I've been praying that we could meet together and share Christ. Let me help you find Him...."

The scene: Dallas, Texas, during the week of June 12 through 17, 1972.

The occasion: the International Student Congress on Evangelism, Training for Spiritual Explosion—Explo '72, a gathering of an estimated 75,000 young people to discuss an organized way to spread the gospel of Jesus Christ.

The impact: incredible.

In the planning stages for over two years, the Campus Crusade for Christ evangelistic organization sponsored its most impressive convention ever. "Delegates" from all states and many foreign countries descended en masse upon Dallas for a week of meetings, singing, prayer, consultation, witnessing, laughing and hard work in the cause they hold sacred.

Dallas was stunned. Never before had so many young people mingled with citizens of all races, all beliefs, all ages, so peacefully. Never before had the city seen such determined, yet petulant looks on so many dedicated faces. Never before had such confidence been present in the delivery of a single purpose.

Yet it was the simplicity of that purpose that eventually won the hearts of Dallas to Explo: the easy simplicity of the passing on of the Word of Jesus Christ, the One Way for everyone.

A brightly-colored Volkswagen pulled up behind the motel limousine. Despite its size, it bore seemingly hundreds of stickers, paintings, badges and decals proclaiming "Jesus is Lord," "One Way-Jesus Christ," "Peace is Knowing Jesus," "Honk if you Love Jesus," and "Guess Who's Coming Again?" Nearly every inch of the car had some kind of message, down to the hubcaps and tailpipe.

The sunroof opened and up popped a shaggy head. A broad smile on his face, the youth waved to the people on the sidewalk, strangers to him, and pointing his index finger heavenwards, yelled out, "One Way, brothers, One Way!"

Of course, all this eager campaigning for Jesus needed organization. The sponsoring group, Campus Crusade for Christ furnished this amply. The entire week of meetings and discussions was very carefully planned out in advance. Some 65-70 separate meetings in various Dallas motor lodges and small auditoriums had to be planned and coordinated. Housing had to be found for the 75,000 college and high school-aged delegates at a bearable cost. The massive Cotton Bowl gatherings each night had to be arranged and coordinated. Transportation around the city had to be found. And a million and one incidentals had to be handled with such timing and precision so as not to upset the intricate workings of the program.

Somehow, all was taken care of, "with the ever-present help of the Lord," as the delegates came, met and parted.

Dallas motels, hotels, and even more private homes managed to absorb the 75,000 visitors. A fantastic economic manipulation went to work and succeeded in feeding them, a task that included providing over 160,000 pieces of fruit just for snacks between meetings. Friendly motorists helped out the thousands

in the spirit

of hitchhikers that daily trooped around Dallas suburbs, and Dallas Love Field even detoured its flights from disturbing meetings in a motel near the airport.

"We were coming to Explo from Phoenix, y'know, and around, oh, I guess it was El Paso, just as came into Texas, we picked up these two guys hitchhiking to Lubbock."

"For the first couple hours of driving, we just talked about things in general; then one of the guys asked us why we were going to Dallas. We told them all about Explo '72 and what we wanted to do in Dallas—to spread the Word. We kept talking to them about how Jesus is the Only Way and how he had found Him and had committed our lives to Him, and by the time we got to Lubbock, neither wanted to get out, but wanted to come to Dallas with us."

Each day of the convention was similar to the last one, yet each was very individual to the delegates, for to them, each day was another chance to witness the Word and help someone new discover Jesus.

The week started out on Sunday afternoon and Monday morning with registration. Hundreds of young people came to the many booths set up at the various motels and hotels or to the main registration at Market Hall, a large Dallas auditorium. Once registered, the delegates, now sporting small badges cheerfully greeting "Hi, y'all!" and providing their name, city, and sometimes (for large delegations from the same city) their church, spend the rest of the day lounging around motel pools, exploring nearby shopping centers, or reading the Bible. Short meetings were held late Monday to prepare the delegates for the task ahead of them, and they retired, prayer books in hand.

The schedule for Tuesday set the pattern for the rest of the week. Groups of 500 to 1500 gathered at over 70 locations around Dallas for the major part of the convention, meetings opened the day at 9:00 with various guest speakers giving their view of the great undertaking of the youth. After a singing break, another talk was given, this time imparting a short message to inspire the delegates.

Two motel executives walked down through the kitchens to the spare warming room beside the great meeting hall. Peering through the diamond-shaped windows in a small vestibule of the meeting hall, they watched as a fiery speaker delivered his message of inspiration to the Explo delegates.

After about five minutes, one walks away shaking his head. He had never seen anyone taking notes on a church sermon before.

Then came the meat of the conference: the seminars. Both advanced and basic seminars in the spreading of the Word were taught by Campus Crusade staff members. Campus Crusade head, Bill Bright's methods are studied, memorized, reviewed, and absorbed by the eager delegates.

Based upon Bright's "Four Spiritual Laws," these methods guide the delegates in helping people to "discover and let in Jesus Christ." All of Bright's philosophy was expounded at the seminars and the pupils learned quickly.

Lunch break, a time to talk to fellow delegates and just plain relax before a more physical sept of Explo comes in the afternoon.

12:30 p.m.: 75,000 young evangelists hit the streets of Dallas to share the Word with Dallas residents. The city-wide witnessing program paired delegates and sent them to specific neighborhoods to join Fuller brush men and bill collectors in knocking on doors and talking to the occupants who answered.

They talked about Jesus, about the Holy Ghost, about man's sinfulness, and how the Lord was the Only Way to salvation. They "shared" the Four Laws, and in many cases, watched people become transformed and "invite Christ into their hearts." They were also rebuffed, chased, threatened, and politely smiled at, but they returned to their motels and happy and confident of future success.

Tomorrow: Explo '72 seemed to have a curious fascination with Campus Crusade paraphernalia; in fact, Dallas was more-or-less flooded with it, from small one-page pamphlets to 300-page instruction books. Also: Explo has many things in store for the future.

US notes appreciation of Cuban aid

by Tad Szulc
(C) 1972 New York Times

Washington, Nov. 13—The State Department went out of its way today to express the "appreciation" of the United States to Cuban authorities for their cooperation in handling the weekend hijacking of a Southern Airways jetliner.

In what other officials described as a deliberate and unusual "friendly gesture" toward Havana, the State Department's spokesman, John F. King, said at a briefing that the Department shared the airline's "appreciation for the cooperation shown by the aircraft crew and passengers by Cuban officials."

King said that Graydon Hall, the general manager of Southern Airways, had told Secretary of State William P. Rogers that "Cuban officials with whom the aircraft crew were dealing were most cooperative in preparing for the emergency landing, cordial to the passengers and crew, and cooperative in permitting Southern Airways technicians and mechanics to fly into Havana to make repairs to the hijacked aircraft which would permit it to be returned to the United States."

King and other officials noted that the Cubans did everything possible over the weekend to assist the safe landing of the crippled jet, help the passengers, including those who had to be hospitalized, and offer facilities to the airline personnel.

ND Institute for Urban Studies named regional IFCO office

The Institute for Urban Studies of the University of Notre Dame, has been designated as one of six regional offices of the Inter-Religious Foundation for Community Organization (IFCO). The appointment of Alfred Williams, Urban Studies staff associate, as director of IFCO's Midwest Region was announced Saturday by the executive director, Rev. Lucius Walker, New York, and Rev. Theodore M. Hesburgh, C.S.C., president of Notre Dame.

The Inter-Religious Foundation is a five-year old black-controlled national foundation with an outstanding record of achievement in the funding and management of self-help community development projects in black, Chicano, Indian and poor white communities around the country. A total of $4-million in grants has been made by the Foundation, generating more than $20 million in direct resources for self-help strategies. The Foundation is located in New York City.

The activities of the regional office on the Notre Dame campus will focus initially on problems and projects in the South Bend area, with the purpose of increasing the skill, sophistication, and effectiveness of the leadership of community development projects in this area.

Several projects with which the new center will cooperate have already been identified, including the Hansel Neighborhood Center and the Urban League Experimental School.

In addition to its staff and leadership training activities, the Training Center will distribute a bi-monthly IFCO newsletter, and will host periodic public seminars on subjects of national and international relevance to the improvement and development of disadvantaged communities.

In commenting on the invitation Father Hesburgh said "...we are pleased to work with IFCO, and accept this new responsibility as an endorsement of the skills and dedication of our Institute for Urban Studies and an opportunity to give real meaning to the ongoing commitment of the University of Notre Dame to the creation of an open, just, and humane society."

"IFCO's commitment to long range strategies to develop strong communities has begun to prove itself. New money for social change, a new kind of training for community leaders, and the unification of diverse forces have been the results of IFCO's formation and control by black Americans."

Rev. Walker added, "we welcome this as a new model of cooperation between an important university and a significant human justice organization controlled by black people."

Badin hit with snowballs

A rash of snowball throwing in the Badin Hall area last resulted in four broken windows. Two of the windows over the porch, one downstairs and one window in a women's room were broken, according to Kim Magnotta, Badin Hall president.

The snowballing began at nine o'clock. The first windows were broken at 11:15. The last windows were broke at 2:15.

"We are really very upset at the lack of concern and atrocious vandalism that took place tonight. The fact that several girls could have been seriously and permanently injured is inexcusable in a university community," Magnotta said.

Several Badin Hall residents had been standing behind one of the windows that was broken at 11:15.

The last time the snowballer attacked one man attempted to hold the Badin hall door open for the remainder of the group to enter.

LaFortune Renovation Committee to begin study of architecture proposals

by Tom Drape
Staff Reporter

Meeting in Dean Ackerman's office last night, the Renovation Committee for LaFortune finalized their survey and began preliminary study of sophomore architect proposals.

Hope for immediate action was expressed to eliminate Center fees, change the music programs, and remain open for 24 hours. If such a change in hours is found feasible, Co-chairman Jim McDermott said hopefully it will become effective between Thanksgiving and Christmas.

It was decided to conduct the survey among a sampling of the student body and individual Hall Presidents are going to be contacted to administer the survey. The Economic Fraternity was to handle the survey originally.

The finalized survey includes queries as to the present student use of LaFortune, suggestions for improvements in recreational facilities, and the earlier possibilities of a bar and co-op stores. The question as to the need of a student center at Notre Dame is also raised.

The sophomore floor plans submitted were discussed and examined briefly at the meeting with the decision to look at them with ideas for specific areas in mind. Most committee members were impressed with mezzanine additions to the main room and the courtyard as a focal point in hopeful plans. After an eventual decision for plans for specific areas of the student center, the suggested ideas will be forwarded to the Senior architectural students.

The committee further agreed to display the plans in the main lobby of LaFortune.

ND Cashier no longer to service SMC students

by Mary Janca
Staff Reporter

As of the beginning of September, Saint Mary's College students were no longer able to cash checks at the Notre Dame Cashier's Office, according to Head Teller, Jim Howard.

Howard requested that SMC students be presently banned from cashing checks there, but the final decision came from Comptroller Dr. Richard Lynch. Howard expressed the desire that this policy remain in effect.

He stressed that this was done in the past as a courtesy, but was not dropped as a result of the unsuccessful merger. When asked why the service was discontinued, Howard stated, "because we have no recourse, actually. They (SMC students) bounce checks and I have a horrible time trying to collect on them."

Not as many checks of Notre Dame students bounce as do those from St. Mary's, he believes. In regard to those ND checks that fail to clear, Howard stated that the clerical work involved is much easier.

"If, after redepositing the check once or twice, the money could not be recovered, it was just a matter of accounting to pass it off on the boy's record," he explained.

However, in order to rectify a bounced check from a St. Mary's student, Howard explained that he first had to notify the Dean of Students, to receive the student's phone number and address, and then attempt to get in touch with them. This process, he said, was "very time-consuming" and in some cases, useless, as he was not able to reach the student involved.

"In fact," he declared, "I have some right now that I never have been able to locate. I've more or less given up on them." In cases like these, he continued, the loss would be absorbed by the Cashier's Office.

At the beginning of the semester, a few students from St. Mary's had cashed checks at the office, because, said Howard, "not all the permanent ID's were ready, so we cashed checks on the temporaries." Therefore, within this time period, some checks from SMC that were allowed to be cashed, bounced. "But when the girls' ID's came out, and we could distinguish between a St. Mary's girl and a Notre Dame girl," he explained, "we just turned those from St. Mary's down."

Howard reported that not very many Notre Dame girls' checks have bounced thus far, but that "it's so hard to tell, because there's so few of them."

Another area of weakness with St. Mary's students developed when, according to Howard, "they would lose, or have their ID's stolen, and we would be cashing forged checks. They didn't seem like they cared to let us know about that, whereas the Notre Dame students were very good about these things. This makes it easier on us, because then we can be on guard."

Several of the remaining bounced SMC student checks were cashed for the maximum amount of $200, the limit set last January

1, by the Cashier's Office.

St. Mary's College itself was "very cooperative" in attempting to locate the students, stated Howard, but "won't assume financial responsibility" for the bad checks.

St. Mary's 24 hour lobbies to be delayed for reasons of security

by Mary Egan
Staff Reporter

The dormitories at St. Mary's do not have 24 hour open lobbies as of yet because more security is needed at Regina and LeMans Halls.

Locks are needed for "one door in LeMans and one or two doors in Regina," stated Mitzy Tracy, the Hall Life Commissioner. "They're supposed to be in by this week. When they come in, 24 hour open lobbies will go into effect."

In Regina, only "the main lobby will be open when the locks come in." The South lounge can not be opened until it is equipped with special doors which can close off the end of the lounge from residents' upstairs.

"I haven't been able to check on its progress," stated Tracy, in reference to these doors. "When the South lounge is ready with these doors, that will be open."

The South lounge and the lobby are "the most that will be opened up. The North lounge will never be open 24 hours," stated Tracy.

Tracy feels that there is no reason to open the lobbies in McCandless and Holy Cross, although they are ready, because it would only be a difference of a few days before Regina and LeMans are ready.

"I don't think we're slowing McCandless and Holy Cross down. The locks are expected in this week and it won't take more than a day to install them," Tracy said. She feels that opening all the lobbies at once also "makes it easier for security."

Having open lobbies "was passed experimentally by the Student Affairs Council. It will be evaluated at the Board of Regents meeting in January," Tracy added.

Mrs. Elizabeth Dose, Mrs. Burke, and Sr. Bettina, the respective hall directors of McCandless, Regina, and Holy Cross, are all in favor of open lobbies. The hall director of LeMans was unavailable for comment, but the assistant director, Mrs. Kagel, spoke quite favorably of them.

Mrs. Dose feels that all the dorms should open at once in fairness to the girls. Sr. Bettina said that she understands "the reason behind holding all the halls back for one opening, but I probably would prefer to go ahead with it as each is ready."

Some students at SMC do not seem to mind having all the dorms open at once, but others are impatient.

Morrissey, Stanford post IH upsets

by Stan Urankar

Morrissey and Stanford both pulled upsets to reach the Interhall football finals next weekend. The Marauders had to go into overtime before they downed defending champion Dillon, 26-18, and Stanford pulled off some big plays early to rout Breen-Phillips, 20-6. The two teams will square off Sunday afternoon at 1:30 p.m. in the Stadium.

Morrissey 26, Dillon 18

The win avenged a pair of previous Marauder playoff defeats. Two years ago, the same two clubs finished in a 0-0 deadlock after five periods, but Dillon was awarded the triumph on the basis of more first downs. Last season they squared off in the finals at Cartier Field, and the Big Red again prevailed, taking a 20-12 overtime verdict.

The Irish Eye

ND wins over all --- even officials

It was cold and overcast Saturday afternoon in Falcon Stadium and most people in the capacity homecoming crowd sat with hunched shoulders and their hands shoved deep in their pockets.

Down on the field, much the same sort of behavior was taking place. The officials were constantly reaching into their pockets while Irish coach Ara Parseghian stalked along the sidelines with his shoulders hunched. But neither the officials nor Parseghian were bothered by the weather. Referee Harvey Murdock and his crew let their hands slip into their pockets only long enough to whip out their penalty flags and Parseghian shrugged his shoulders in disbelief at some of the many calls that were made against Notre Dame.

The Irish were penalized a total of 82 yards and the violations cost them 60 additional yards in nullified gains just in the first half. It seemed as if every time Notre Dame racked up a sizeable gain, the officials picked up the football and trotted backwards with it.

Not that the Falcons weren't caught committing an abundance of misdemeanors. The Air Force was penalized even more than the Irish, being assessed 95 yards, but most of their violations came in the second half and few were as costly as the Irish penalties.

Hardly a series of downs passed that one club or another was called for an infraction of the rules. There were more flags flying in Falcon Stadium than at the United Nations building.

"I've never been involved in a game where the officials dominated it so completely," Parseghian said. "You can call a penalty on almost every play in football if you interpret the rules strictly. A good official has to use his judgement."

What sort of judgement the officials were using was a matter of great concern to the Irish, who were confused at some of the calls being made against them. Three times, Notre Dame blockers downfield were called for illegal use of the hands which cost the Irish a couple of long gainers. Willie Townsend was a two-time offender and Mike Creaney was nailed once.

"Sure, they had the hands out a bit," Parseghian said, "but you can't block a man holding on to your jersey. That's what I mean about the officials having to use judgement."

"The team was frustrated when they came off the field," Parseghian continued. "They just couldn't understand some of the calls that were being made."

Besides the questionable holding penalties, the officiating crew made at least one other unusual call and a first class blunder. The unusual call was made against Mike Creaney when he blocked a Falcon defender after Townsend, the ball carrier, had been knocked out of bounds.

Creaney, who was ten yards away from Townsend, was told by the official, "You should have known he was going to be knocked out of bounds."

The blunder came when quarterback Tom Clements faked a handoff to halfback Eric Penick into the line and then tossed a pass to Townsend good for 35 yards. The play was called back, however, because one official thought that Penick had the football and blew his whistle when he was tackled. Although the mistake was obviously the official's, the rules state that when such things happen, the play must be taken over again.

"I'm not intimating any dishonesty on the part of the officials," Parseghian said, "but there is such a thing as incompetency and that's what took place on the field."

Parseghian wasn't displeased by everything that went on in front of him, however. Naturally, he was happy about his club's victory and he was especially pleased with the performance of his defensive unit.

Notre Dame switched from its usual 4-4-3 defensive alignment for its meeting with Air Force because of the Falcons' vaunted passing game and because Navy had rattled the Irish pass defense for 17 first downs the previous weekend. Parseghian installed a 4-3-4 setup, utilizing a fourth defensive back instead of four linebackers. Saturday and the results were most gratifying. Air Force, which had passed for over 1400 yards in eight games, was limited to just 99 passing yards. Falcon quarterback Rich Haynie completed only eight of 25 attempts and had four intercepted, three by Mike Townsend, who seems to have become the opposition's primary receiver in recent games.

"The new defense worked very well," Parseghian said. "We like to defense a team's strong unit and make them play 'left handed.' Air Force ran more often than we thought they would, but we contained them pretty well."

And, while the defense was keeping the Falcons in check, the Irish offense picked up 386 total yards and tallied three touchdowns. Diminick and Huff ran for scores and Willie Townsend caught a pass in the end zone from Clements. Bob Thomas added three conversions and Notre Dame racked up its seventh win in eight games this year, something not even the officials could call back.

But yesterday's battle belonged totally to Morrissey, as final stats will attest. The Marauders ran for 105 yards compared to a minus seven total rushing figure for Dillon. Morrissey's Kirk Miller completed seven of ten passes for 82 yards; the Big Red's Randy Stasik hit on only two of 14 attempts for 45 yards, and was intercepted three times.

A pair of big defensive plays enabled Dillon to stay close. The first came after Paul Breen's six-year touchdown run had put the Marauders ahead early and they were driving again late in the first half. On fourth down from the Dillon 32 with only seconds remaining, Jack Kikata picked off a deflected Miller aerial and raced 68 yards to pay dirt to tie the score.

The Big Red then took the lead, with Marc Brammer scooping up a bad pitch from Miller and going 48 yards for a 12-6 edge.

Again Morrissey recovered

though, going 65 yards on their next possession. A third down completion from Miller to Fran Finnegan put the ball at the two, and fullback Joe Holzmer followed up by belting home for the score.

A scoreless fourth quarter forced the special Interhall overtime rules to be put into effect. Each team received four downs from their opponents' 10 yard line, and the first team to end a series of possessions with the lead wins.

Neither squad converted on its first try, and both matched six-pointers in their next possessions. Tom Luetkemeyer tossed a 10-yard option aerial to split end John Hargreave for the Morrissey score, while Craig Tigh's six-year burst tallied for Dillon.

Luetkemeyer then converted on a big fourth down play that gave the Marauders the win. The sophomore halfback swept right end for a fourth down score from the one. Dillon tried to match it, but a pair of runs and two Stasik incompletions put Morrissey in the leads. The Marauders twice hit the backs for losses, and broke up both of Stasik's final two attempts.

Big Red Coach Mike Caulfield praised the Morrissey performance, but was quick to attack the Interhall referees. "Morrissey totally outplayed us," the second-year Dillon field boss noted, "but the officiating of Rich Hunter (an N.D. grad who returned to help with the finals) was outrageous, and I hope his incompetence will never be shown on the field again."

right to represent the North Quad in the finals.

After a fumble recovery by defensive end John McClure midway through the first period, Packer fired a 35-yard scoring strike to dependable Mike Pohlman for a 6-0 edge.

Early in the second stanza, linebacker Bill Shanley returned an interception 43 yards for a touchdown, with Tommy Ryan running for the conversion.

Packer then struck again, unloading a 78-yard bomb to flanker Jim Slack just two plays into the second half. B-P managed a final period score, but it was too little too late.

"We were really sharp on defense," commented Packer, a junior from St. David's, Pa. "Our defensive line (McClure, Ryan, Dick Prill, Jimmy Segerson and Steve Gilmore) provided a great pass rush, and we're looking forward to next week."

ND sailors win Area C regatta

The Notre Dame sailing team, led by Will Donelan, won the area "C" elimination regatta last weekend in Chicago. The win qualifies the Irish crew for the Timme Angsten Regatta, to be held over Thanksgiving weekend at the Chicago Yacht Club.

Donelan, who alternated Bruce Marek and Skip Reynolds as his crew, turned in a fine performance, posting six first-place finishes and two seconds in eight races.

Junior varsity icers rally, win 10-3 romp

Following the example of their varsity counterparts the Notre Dame jayvee hockey team picked up a victory Saturday, defeating the Park Ridge Juvenile team 10-3.

It was Notre Dame's five goal effort in the third period that put the game out of reach for Park Ridge, who managed to keep the game close in the first two periods.

The Leprechauns were slow to get started, and as a result found themselves on the short end of a 2-0 score after only 2:43 in the first period. The Irish soon picked it up and Frosh Bill Guisti scored at 5:34 on a pass from Jim Augustine.

Both defenses stiffened at this point and it wasn't until 13:23 that Park Ridge was able to score their third and final goal.

The Irish offense began to click when Rick Locke scored the second goal at 14:29 with an assist from Bill Whiteside. This was the first in a string of nine consecutive Irish tallies that broke the game wide open.

With only 8 seconds remaining in the period Dave Howe took a pass from Neil Ungar to score and give the Irish a 3-3 tie at the end of the first period.

Park Ridge managed to skate right along with the Irish for at least the first half of the second period. Then at 9:09 Howe picked up his second score of the afternoon, and at 10:45 Jim Augustine registered his first score to give the baby Irish a 5-3 edge at the end of two periods.

The third period was a field day for Notre Dame and it began with only 50 seconds, one when Augustine scored his second goal and followed up at 8:37 with his third tally of the afternoon. Augustine led the high powered Irish attack with a total of four goals and one assist.

Neil Ungar made his mark at 1:30, followed again by Augustine who slapped in his fourth and final goal at 16:29.

Bill Whiteside scored the tenth Irish goal at 18:56 capping an impressive offensive team display.

Tom McCardy, Mike Thorpe and

Wisconsin placed third, followed by host school Northwestern.

Anyone interested in playing intramural hockey should come to room 214-226 in the Computing Center on Wednesday, November 15, at 8:30 p.m.

There will be a one dollar entry fee charged to each player, and ND-SMC girls interested in being timekeepers are invited.

Musuraca gets game ball

And Monday afternoon at practice, the ball was presented to senior linebacker Jim Musuraca in the club's awards ceremony.

Other players honored were Gary Diminick offensive player of the game, Mike Townsend, defensive player of the game, Jim Bulger, offensive prep team player of the week and John Mariana, defensive prep team player of the week. In addition, Busick was given the "Irish" award, presented on occasion during the season for special achievements.

The Air Force managers were reluctant to hand over the game ball, traditionally given to the winning team, after Notre Dame's 21-7 victory over the Falcons last weekend but Busick convinced them otherwise.

Six players earned helmet stars, for outstanding plays, against the Air Force Academy. Mike Townsend, who tied a Notre Dame
