Reagan approves proposals for nuclear arms reductions

Associated Press

WASHINGTON—President Reagan has approved a package of proposals for sharp reductions in U.S. and Soviet strategic nuclear weapons and the withdrawal of intermediate-range nuclear missiles from Europe, administration officials said Tuesday.

The package puts on the negotiating table in Geneva the key proposals Reagan made to Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev at their summit in Iceland earlier this month. It includes a ban on all U.S. and Soviet ballistic missiles by 1996, said the officials, who were willing to discuss the subject only on the condition they not be named publicly.

So far, Soviet negotiators have resisted taking up seriously the proposals Reagan discussed with the Soviet Communist Party General Secretary on Oct. 11-12, said Kenneth Adelman, director of the U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency.

"It seems they have been under instructions to be unhelpful since the Reykjavik meeting," Adelman said in an interview. "We want to build on Reykjavik. They want to dispute."

Adelman said separate talks would be held with the Soviets next week in Geneva on improving the verification of underground nuclear tests. Reagan told Gorbachev that better monitoring procedures could lead to a treaty outlawing all blasts.

A more modest U.S. arms control package was sent to chief U.S. negotiator Max Kampelman last week. Several key items were held back, including the proposed ban on U.S. and Soviet intermediate-range nuclear missiles in Europe.

The U.S. military chiefs wanted to consider first the impact that a missile ban would have on defending Western Europe from Soviet attack. NATO ground forces are outmanned by Warsaw Pact troops.

The discussion was held at the White House Monday with Reagan presiding. The chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, Adm. William J. Crowe, participated and endorsed the package, the sources said.

The new instructions were transmitted to Kampelman Monday night.

Spokesman Larry Speakes, accompanying Reagan on a political campaign trip to the South Tuesday, confirmed the meeting.

Reagan's proposal on strategic weapons calls for a 50 percent reduction in U.S. and Soviet long-range bombers, intercontinental ballistic missiles and submarines within five years.

A ceiling of 1,600 would be imposed on all U.S. and Soviet strategic nuclear delivery vehicles. Intercontinental ballistic missiles and submarine-launched missiles would be held to a total of 600. Strategic bombers would be limited to 350 on each side.

The Soviets also have proposed a 50 percent cutback, but their formula and the kind of nuclear weapons to be covered by the reductions differ from the U.S. approach.

Reagan's call for a ban on ballistic missiles by 1996 carries out the position U.S. officials said he took in talking with Gorbachev. The Soviets contend, however, that Reagan went further and supported a ban on all strategic nuclear forces.

A U.S. official, who said records of the conversations between Reagan and Gorbachev were still incomplete, acknowledged that Reagan "may have said that at one point."

But he and another U.S. official stressed that the president informed Gorbachev on several occasions during their talks that he sought a ban only on ballistic missiles.

Test tremors to be monitored by Soviets

Associated Press

NEW YORK - Soviet seismologists will visit the United States in November to select locations in California and Nevada for equipment to monitor the Earth tremors from U.S. nuclear weapons tests, a scientist said Tuesday.

The visit is the latest step in an agreement negotiated privately between U.S. and Soviet scientists that has allowed Americans for the first time to begin such monitoring inside the Soviet Union, said Thomas Cochran, senior staff scientist of the Natural Resources Defense Council.

However, the government won't permit the Soviet scientists to visit the actual sites for the equipment because they don't represent the Soviet government, he said.

Cochran, who initiated the discussions with the Soviet Academy of Sciences that led to the agreement, said at a news conference that both parties have also agreed to establish a computer link between the American and Soviet monitoring stations.

The agreement is intended to promote the signing of arms-control agreements by making it possible for Americans to verify that the Soviet Union is observing any such agreements, Cochran said.

The three American monitoring stations now operating near the Soviet Union's principal nuclear test site near the city of Semipalatinsk, about 1,800 miles southeast of Moscow, are adequate to detect any violations of the current Soviet moratorium on nuclear weapons tests, Cochran said.

"Our stations in effect cover their test site," he said. "We can monitor explosions down to a few tons."

The stations also serve as prototypes for the estimated 25 stations that would be needed inside the Soviet Union to monitor compliance with a comprehensive test-ban treaty, if one were negotiated, he said.

And they give American scientists and government officials the ability for the first time to "map" the geology of the Soviet test site, thus allowing more accurate determination of the magnitude of any Soviet nuclear tests, Cochran said.

United Way campaign set to begin

By ANN KALTENBACH
Assistant News Editor

Promoting enthusiasm for the University's United Way campaign kickoff next week, Pat Mangan, assistant director of the St. Joseph county campaign urged students to "make compassionate decisions to give" at Tuesday night's Hall Presidents' Council meeting.

Mangan told the Council that "as students you may not realize the importance of your role in the campaign . . . but it becomes very important. Because you care enough, even though you are passing through . . . we appreciate that."

"Each and every dollar counts," said Mangan.

"We'd really like to raise $10,000, which is basically $2 per person," said John Seidensticker, Notre Dame campus drive chairman.

Vicki Smithberger, mother of St. Joseph County United Way poster child Lyndsi Smithberger said, "I am really touched that college students today are involved in United Way. On behalf of all families like us in St. Joe County, I'd like to thank you. You are a real blessing," she said.

Joanie Cahill, HPC co-chairman, spoke with optimism for the United Way campaign. "I think it looks pretty good. The door to door is what they really want to stress. The door to door has to be the heart of it" and . . . "is what will make it or break it," said Cahill.

Seidensticker highlighted fund-raising events to be held in the upcoming weeks. He said "Casablanca" will be shown in the Engineering Auditorium November 5 and 6.

Senior Bar Night, scheduled for Nov. 14, along with a Charity Bowl (interhall football championship) on Nov. 16, sponsored by Zahm Hall, are also events scheduled to donate proceeds to the campaign, said Seidensticker.

He added that a Lock-Up is scheduled for Nov. 18 and 19 while details of a 5-K Turkey Trot are to be announced at a later date.

Cahill said the HPC will sponsor an Aerob-a-thon (an aerobics marathon) on Nov. 22 in the ACC from 10am to 4pm. She said, "It could be a lot of fun but we need a lot of participants to make it work."

Cahill said aerobics instructors from Notre Dame and Saint Mary's will use their regular one-hour aerobics workouts and modify them "so people can go for 50 minutes."

In other business Vince Willis, general manager of Theodore's, a non-alcoholic campus bar located in LaFortune, announced its opening Friday. Willis said DJs from WZZP will be on hand Friday night from 8 pm to 3 am.

"I am very confident if (students) see it once, it will speak for itself, said Willis. "The sound system is awesome," he said. "We want people to come out," said Willis.

Willis said several non-alcoholic drinks such as daiquiries and margaritas will be served. He said free popcorn will always be available.

A trip for two to the USC game is among prizes which will be distributed at Theodore's Friday night according to Willis, but he said students must be present to win.

Willis said no admission fee will be charged and that questions about Theodore's can be answered by calling 283-CLUB.

Notre Dame Security is continuing its investigation of a break-in into the South Dining Hall at 11:28 on Wednesday Oct. 22., according to Assistant Director of Security Phil Johnson. A 16-foot statue of Olive Oyl on the roof of Popeye's Hair Care salon in Sebastopol, Cal. "brings a smile" to passersby, but city officials frown on it. The officials say the paper-mache work violates a 1984 ordinance against the use of mannequins as business signs, and that the law has to be enforced to keep downtown neat. Amorelli has refused to comply with a citation ordering her to take down the statue. She argued that the statue does not serve as a sign for her business but "as an example of patriotism." - Associated Press

Biased campaigning hurts voters

How high would you rate on the Biblical scoreboard?

I received a large, white election pamphlet in the mail while home on break. It claimed to give impartial information on election candidates.

But this "unbiased" brochure included percentages from the Biblical Scoreboard. No information was given about the exact nature of the scoreboard; references to it just dropped into the pamphlet out of the sky.

Only extreme scores were used, of course, and as one would guess, conservatives scored above 80 percent while most of the "lefties" had batting averages in the .200 range.

In general, campaigns across the country this year have sunk to new lows as political advertisements have ruthlessly attacked candidates.

Columnist Tom Wicker wrote in an Oct. 28 commentary that "... this is the year of negative campaigning - the art of describing the opponent as a liar, a louse, an enemy of the people, who's soft on crime, drugs, family values, national defense and communism."

The expanded role of political action committees, (PAC's), seems to be one reason for the increased negative campaigning. Candidates are able to smile and kiss babies while PAC's do their dirty work for them.

In the past, PAC's were most noticeable for their work on broad issues such as the environment. But now PAC's are springing up just to harass a candidate on a particular issue which may not even exist.

Ohio newspapers have been running an ad titled "Why Homosexuals are Supporting (Ohio Governor Richard) Celeste."

Such ads are being submitted by the Ohio Citizens for Decency and Health. The group was previously unknown to most Ohioans.

It is hard to determine just who is running such a group because all statements are made in the name of the group, not in the name of a particular person.

Celeste's opponent, former Governor James Rhodes, claims no knowledge of the ad. However, one Ohio church pastor said he received literature from Rhodes' campaign and from OCDH both of which bore address labels identical down to the misspelling of his address.

Besides the vagueness of the group's sponsorship, the issue is rather vague itself. It seems that no one even knew there was such an issue until the OCDH brought it up, but, nonetheless, Rhodes has gotten plenty of free mileage out of the "homo issue," as he has been heard to call it.

Such publicity provided by groups outside of a candidate's official campaign allows the candidate to deny involvement in the mudslinging but wink silently to those who support the position supported by the PAC.

While at home, I also received a flyer that displayed a 6x9 inch picture of a candidate with his back to the camera. The mayor "has turned his back on you," said the caption in two-inch red letters. The return address on the flyer was of the National Republican Congressional Committee, so the mayor's opponent could claim not to have any responsibility for the ad.

Jim

I much prefer strictly partisan literature because I at least know from where the authors are coming. With a flyer that says "Vote for these democrats" the intentions of the authors are obvious. Ditto with a letterhead that features a red, white, and blue elephant and with a letter signed by Ronald Reagan addressed "Dear Summit County voter" (at least they spelled my name right).

The large, white pamphlet that quoted percentages from the Biblical Scoreboard intrigued me most.

Who runs the scoreboard? Moses? The Great Scorekeeper in the Sky himself? Can candidates play it safe and get three points for a moment of silence vote, or go for a touchdown with a vote for mandated school prayer?

The serious concern I have about the large white pamphlet is that it pretends to be unbiased when in fact it is not. Not only can't I hold a particular person responsible for the pamphlet, I also can't be sure at first whose "side" it is on.

If I am told that the mayor is turning his back on me and the governor caters to homosexuals, at least the flyer is not pretending to be unbiased.

It was kind of reassuring to get a flyer, sent all the way here from Ohio, that showed a smiling candidate sitting with his family and saying nothing bad about his opponent. He even signed the letter by hand and crossed out "Dear Voter" at the top and replaced it with "Dear JS" - he almost got my initials right.

Christmas Bazaar proceeds to benefit spina bifida

By KAREN WEBB
News Staff

The Saint Mary's Programming Board decided to donate the profits from student government's participation in December's Saint Mary's Christmas Bazaar to the Spina Bifida Association at Tuesday night's programming board meeting.

The Spina Bifida Association had originally hoped to raise money at Saint Mary's by sponsoring a bowl-a-thon, according to Lisa Lawler, Traditional Events Commissioner.

Lawler said, however, "There has been little or no interest in this weekend's bowl-a-thon."

Because of the anticipated low level of participation, Lawler said student government will make the donation to the Spina Bifida Association.

In other business, Sara Cook, vice president for student affairs, reminded the board that a "One Woman Comedy and Horror Show" entitled "Everything You Ever Wanted to Ask About Nukes but Were Afraid to Know" will be held tonight at 8 in the Chameleon Room at Haggar College Center, Saint Mary's.

Also, Cook announced that Brian Huskey will give a performance of music and comedy November 10 in the Chameleon room. Cook encouraged all students to attend the show.

Georgeana Rosenbush, faculty advisor to the Board, said "(Brian) is funny, he sings anything you want to hear and he loves Saint Mary's."

Institute says cancer deaths may be halved by year 2000

Associated Press

WASHINGTON - The National Cancer Institute said Tuesday that the aggressive use of existing knowledge could cut the annual cancer death rate in half by the year 2000.

The institute released a plan, combining cancer prevention, screening, early detection and treatment, that it said could produce dramatic results by the turn of the century if it were adopted as a national goal.

"Knowledge gained over the years can be used to control a significant portion of the disease which was responsible for an estimated 462,000 deaths in 1985," said Dr. Vincent DeVita, director of the institute.

Detailed in a new report entitled "Cancer Control Objectives for the Nation: 1985-2000," the plan calls for stepped-up efforts against cigarette smoking and poor diet and earlier use of the latest diagnostic and treatment techniques.

"The report on cancer control objectives is important because it represents a comprehensive plan of action," DeVita said.

The strategy, developed to meet national disease prevention objectives established by the Department of Health and Human Services, would require cooperation from the public, industry, health professions, news media and government to succeed, he continued.

Among other things, it calls for industry to increase health promotion in the workplace, the news media to better spread information about cancer prevention and control, voluntary organizations to offer more health education and screening programs at the local level and health professional groups to reemphasize cancer control in training programs.

The national mortality rate from cancer in 1980, based on the latest available data, was 183 deaths per 100,000 persons annually. This figure could be cut by as much as 50 percent in 15 years by using the prevention and treatment knowledge already available, NCI officials said.

Dr. Edward Sondik, an NCI official who helped analyze and edit the report, said in an interview that there is no estimate of how much the expanded anticancer effort would cost.

"We have not done a detailed budget on what this would cost, but once one understands what can be done, then they can determine how to do it," Sondik said.

"The thing that we are addressing with this report is that you can do something about cancer now without waiting for some research breakthroughs," he continued.

"Research is important and we stress that. The projections we have on reducing cancer death rely to a great extent on the products of past and future research.

"But we think there has been a sense that cancer is a problem we can't get a hold of, that we as individuals can't do much about it," he said, "and that just isn't true."

Sondik noted that 30 percent of cancer deaths are due directly to smoking, but that the public doesn't fully understand how much can be gained just by stopping this practice.

Following Willis' discussion, Cahill announced the rescheduling of HPC committee meetings with John Goldrick, associate vice president for residence life, for Nov. 3. Howard Hall President Jim Bradford suggested discussing with Goldrick the new enforcement of "no paper" SYR decorations in hallways.

Cahill said such meetings with Goldrick were scheduled earlier in the year to clarify "a lot of rumors going around campus." According to Cahill, through these meetings, policies have been made clear and the HPC committees wishes to continue these sessions with Goldrick.

In other business, Mahir Mouasher from OMBUD announced that campus phone books are in and can be picked up by hall presidents on Thursday from 6 to 7 p.m. in La Fortune. He said off-campus students will receive their phone books after dorm representatives have picked up their halls' books.

Gay activists use currency as a demonstration of power

Associated Press

CHICAGO - If money is power, gay activists reason, then money that passes through the homosexual community and is marked accordingly may translate into gay power.

For the last few months, city homosexuals have been circulating greenbacks stamped in red with "gay $" as a demonstration of their strength.

Activists estimate millions of dollars have been stamped so far, and say the movement is spreading to other large cities. Federal officials say the bills are likely being re-circulated to other Midwestern states as well.

The campaign was sparked by the July failure of a proposed city ordinance to guarantee equal rights for homosexuals, said Frank Kellas, owner of a bar in the posh Gold Coast area who helped launch the campaign.

"What buys rights but dollars?" asked Kellas.

"All we're asking for is equal protection under the law and not to be beaten up because we're gay-or fired," said the Rev. Ninure Saunders, co-chairman of the Illinois Gay and Lesbian Task Force.

"To judge by what I've seen, it's given a little more kick in the pride of gay and lesbian people," Ms. Saunders said.

The protest has broadened its aims since the ordinance's defeat.

For one thing, Kellas said the marked bills are helping dispel "the myth of catching AIDS through (casual) contact."

By showing how many dollars are touched by homosexuals, heterosexuals may learn that acquired immune deficiency syndrome cannot be spread by casual contact, he said.

Executive Coordinator Michael Jaeger was misquoted in the Student Senate meeting story in Tuesday's Observer. In reference to senators' comments last year following a student vote on divestment, Jaeger said "the indication (in the opinion of those senators) appeared to be that the student body had become generally apathetic toward the issue of divestment." He added, "Many of the senators felt that the position of the administration was most knowledgeable and proper," and that "they had a good grip on the situation."

stitute of Physics of the Earth in Moscow, are scheduled to arrive in the United States on Nov. 9.

Because of conditions placed on their visit by the Reagan administration, they will not be able to visit the proposed monitoring sites in Nevada and California, each about 70 miles from the Nevada test site where U.S. nuclear weapons tests are conducted, Cochran said.

The conditions were that the Soviets witness a nuclear test and a demonstration of a system called CORTEX, designed to allow the monitoring of nuclear explosions.

The reason, Cochran said, is that the Reagan administration favors a limited test-ban treaty overseen by CORTEX, while the Soviets favor a comprehensive test-ban treaty.

The Soviets declined to agree, and so they will not visit the proposed monitoring sites in Railroad Valley and Nelson, Nev., and Deep Springs, Calif.

"The Soviet position with respect to this is that this is the wrong cast of characters," Cochran said. "They are seismologists. They are not familiar with CORTEX." The administration "might as well have invited the Kirov Ballet to witness an explosion.

State Department spokesman Charles Redman said at a briefing Tuesday that the Soviets would have been permitted to visit the sites if they had agreed to come in an official capacity as representatives of the Soviet government.

Airplane damaged by deer

Associated Press

LOUISVILLE, Ky. - Emergency crews at two airports were on standby, but a small plane that was damaged when it hit a deer on takeoff landed safely in Louisville, airport officials said.

The private Cessna 650 landed without difficulty at 9:01 a.m. Tuesday, said John Scharfenberger, spokesman at Standiford Field.

The plane, owned by Hillenbrand Industries, had taken off at 7 a.m. from a private airstrip near Batesville, Ind., where it struck a deer.

The company said there were seven people aboard, including two corporate pilots, and none was injured.

The pilot circled Greater Cincinnati International Airport for more than an hour for safety reasons before electing to land in Louisville because there was less fog.

"He didn't want to land with a heavy load of fuel in case something happened," said San Juan Romero, air traffic manager at the Greater Cincinnati airport.

Visibility at the Greater Cincinnati airport was one-half mile, said Hank Merrick, assistant air traffic manager. The visibility in Louisville was three miles.

"The runway visual range went down on the approach to the runway he was going to use and the weather was better down at Louisville, and he elected to go down there," Merrick said.

"He wasn't too sure about his left wheel. ... He made one pass down here and it didn't appear to be in place. The left wheel was not normal."

Both airports had emergency crews on standby. Scharfenberger said the pilot did not request foam on the runway to reduce friction at landing.

R.C. Smith, Hillenbrand vice president, declined to release the names of the plane's occupants, but a flight list identified the pilot as Mike Cookendorfer. Smith said other flight arrangements were made to take the passengers to Florida. The Cessna had been bound for Orlando.

Divestment would show 'willingness to grow'

Samuel Williams, the venerable old mentor to Martin Luther King, Jr., once observed that, "The Church has never been a leader in social change, always a follower, and we mustn't expect any more from the Church except that it will, as it has in the past, sanctify that which has been accomplished by others." For the past three decades, the University of Notre Dame has sought to demolish this bleak impression of Christianity as incorrigibly self-serving and indifferent to human rights. Through University President Father Theodore Hesburgh's much publicized work on behalf of world peace, civil rights for blacks and religious ecumenism, for instance, the University has conjured up countless new ways for the American Church to take a progressive stance on a variety of public issues.

Isaac McDaniel, O.S.B.

It is precisely this humane and progressive heritage which makes Notre Dame's refusal to divest from companies which do business with South Africa so disappointing. For those seeking progress towards racial equality in South Africa, continued financial investment in that country has been nothing short of disastrous. Nearly a year ago, Notre Dame's trustees demanded that the University seek to "pressure the South African government to abandon apartheid and to negotiate with legitimate black leaders." But nothing has changed for the better in South Africa during the past year. The white government remains intransigent to the point of fanaticism. Blacks continue to lack any framework of law to which they can appeal in their quest for equality. The death toll continues to rise, as South Africa drifts along the downward spiral towards chaos. And Notre Dame continues to invest at least $34 million of its $300 million endowment in American corporations which do business with South Africa. Such "constructive engagement" has thus far achieved next to nothing towards the dismantling of apartheid or the return of peace to South Africa.

We must accept the fact that South Africa's season of violence will very probably run its course, no matter what American companies decide to do. Whether five years or a generation from now, South African blacks will eventually win control of the ancient land which they so rightly call their own. Already blacks outnumber whites 5 to 1 in South Africa. That figure will rise to 9 to 1 by the year 2000. Sixty percent of the black population under the age of 18 is becoming increasingly radicalized. Notre Dame, like the United States at large, must avoid aligning itself so completely with the white oppressors in South Africa that no subsequent group of leaders will dare to regard us as conceivable friends of the oppressed.

South African black leaders have long since figured out which way the winds of change are blowing. The African National Congress, the United Democratic Front, the Congress of South African Trade Unions, and the South African Council of Churches continue to implore American institutions to divest in order to hasten change in South Africa. The South African Catholic bishops have described economic pressure as "the most effective non-violent form of pressure left."

In the United States, the National Conference of Catholic Bishops last month urged all dioceses and Catholic institutions to divest their holdings in companies still operating in South Africa. Numerous Protestant and Jewish groups have announced divestment plans in recent months. At least a dozen states, and more than 30 cities, have passed ordinances requiring divestment. The United States Congress several weeks ago voted to impose a long list of additional sanctions against South Africa.

It is obviously too late for Notre Dame to retrieve the mantle of progressive leadership on the issue of divestment. But the University could still present itself to the world as a striking witness to the power of conversion. By consenting to divest, Notre Dame could provide a dramatic example of its own willingness to grow, to admit its own error and to shift its sights in the light of obvious and intractable realities.

Rev. Beyers Naude, General Secretary of the South African Council of Churches and recent recipient of an honorary degree from Notre Dame, once observed that, "God has a funny way of confronting human beings and human societies at the most awkward moment of their existence in history with their refusal to face up to themselves - which is exactly what God has been doing with South Africa." Perhaps God is doing the same with Notre Dame. In any event, the University ought to take the financial plunge and divest now, before it finds itself still colluding with Pretoria after even Jerry Falwell and the last holdouts of corporate America have decided to abandon the South African ship of state.

Reagan's sensibility caused summit failure

Dear Editor:

What has come out of the recent Iceland summit is not a portrayal of President Reagan as "ignorant" or "just plain arrogant" as Andrew Saal would have us believe in his letter (Oct.17), but rather a transformation of Soviet-American strategic relationships due to technological development.

In years past, Soviet theorists did not equate the level of technology with military effectiveness. This was based on many other factors: the quantity of weapons, their organization into divisions or forces, and the training and skill of the troops. With these in mind, Soviet leaders have continually presented their country as powerful, even to the point of hiding its weaknesses by deception and bluff. They have not wanted to advertise their vulnerability, and their concern to not do so has contributed to their reluctance to accept mutual deterrence in the past, with its stress on mutual vulnerability, as a sound basis for Soviet-American relations.

However, Soviet military thought has had to adjust in light of the potential development of SDI, and anti-ballistic defense and first strike missile system which, if successful, could provide the United States an escape from the prison of terror created by the current relationship of mutual vulnerability.

Reagan has understood that the nuclear arms race inspires a feeling of helplessness and terror. He challenged those, like the Soviets, who believe that the superpowers can avert war only through the threat of mutual annihilation, by calling upon the scientific community to create "the means of rendering these nuclear weapons impotent and obsolete." With statements such as this and the proposal of SDI on March 23, 1983, Reagan did "make history as one who wanted peace and an end to the arms race," while concurrently demonstrating the superiority of his sensibility over those with an ignorance of policy complexities.

Institute and memorial can peacefully coexist

Dear Editor:

I have just finished reading Professor Dolan's letter in the Oct. 16 issue of The Observer. "Everybody to his own taste," said the fellow when he kissed the cow.

I view the new memorial as a tribute to the men who gave their lives for their country during the war. Perhaps we ought to have another memorial to those who avoided service and did not have the intestinal fortitude to put their lives on the line for their country. I would prefer to pray in front of the former rather than the latter.

The memorial and the Institute for International Peace Studies are mutually inclusive and perhaps even St. Thomas would agree with this. One is a memorial and the other an institute to work for peace so that new memorials would not be necessary.

The ROTC programs are training persons for Volunteer Service just as much as Peace Corps and the Holy Cross Associates do. Commissioned officers in the armed forces can have a very positive influence if they are trained at a Catholic university. They are only warriors in time of war when the country needs warriors. It does not make any difference whether the warrior is Catholic or not but rather that he/she is working to serve his/her country.

great atmosphere, and interesting rock memorabilia."

As one walks around campus during these last few days of good weather, one sees many types of emblems on shirts and jackets. Think, for a moment, and decide which institution (beside Notre Dame) is represented the most. The obvious answer is the Hard Rock Cafe.

Ever since the first Hard Rock opened in London on June 14, 1971, the restaurants have become some of the most popular in the world. People travel long distances just to eat in these entertaining places.

Years ago, Peter Morton and Isaac Tigrett formed a partnership and opened the world's first Hard Rock Cafe in London. It was a place full of rock 'n' roll and movie memorabilia, and the waiters and waitresses dressed in old-fashioned outfits. The novelty of the restaurant earned it instant success.

Shortly after the first Hard Rock opened, the partnership between Morton and Tigrett dissolved; however, the success of the Hard Rock lived on. Each ex-partner recognized the potential of the restaurants and began to open more cafes on his own.

Today, the Hard Rock Cafe's symbol is a world-wide favorite. Morton's restaurants include those in Los Angeles, San Francisco and Chicago. Tigrett owns cafes in New York, London and Stockholm to name a few.

The newest Hard Rock Cafe is in Chicago. The restaurant itself is one of the larger ones and contains hundreds of interesting artifacts. The cafe opened on June 27, 1986 and has been a success from the start. The cafe provides all sorts of food from hamburgers to health shakes. Chicago's Hard Rock is a fun place to eat as well as work. Rob Goldberg, an employee of Chicago's Hard Rock, says that the cafe is popular because it offers "good food at a cheap price,

Memorabilia is what makes the Hard Rock so much fun. The restaurant in Chicago, for example, has Phil Collins' drum, George Michael's jacket, Boy George's cape, Harrison Ford's Indiana Jones jacket, and many other interesting pop artifacts. There's even an old "National Enquirer" from the days of Elvis. The Hard Rock acquires these items in three different ways: some are rented from various record companies, others are purchased and others are donated.

Some people visit the Hard Rock Cafes for the sole purpose of purchasing some sort of souvenir. The cafes sell buttons, sweatshirts, towels, caps, jackets, and many other things that the public loves to buy. People spend hundreds of dollars every day on these items alone. This is evident even on Notre Dame's campus.

Many people are concerned about the alcohol policies of the Hard Rock Cafe. The policies vary from location to location, especially in Europe where there is no drinking age. In Chicago, the Hard Rock has a good system. Those under the age of 21 must be in before 8 p.m. This helps to prevent the possibility of a minor getting alcohol, yet allows people of all ages to enjoy what Hard Rock has to offer. Those who are over 21 are often carded simply for protection.

The Hard Rock Cafes also offer a great variety of special events.

Many Chicago radio stations broadcast from the Chicago Hard Rock and sponsor special promotions. These events attract a lot of attention and people, from which both the restaurant and the radio station profit.

It is interesting to see what type of people visit the Hard Rock. Young people and teenagers are obviously attracted. They are constantly at the Chicago cafe. Lunch time however, is a different story. During lunch hours, Chicago's Hard Rock is full of businessmen and senior citizens. These older people really enjoy the Hard Rock and their attendance proves that most people are young at heart.

The future of Hard Rock is bright. On Nov. 7, Morton will open a cafe in Houston. He is also planning to open restaurants in Honolulu and Australia. Tigrett is opening a cafe in Dallas.

The Hard Rock Cafes are fun places to see and at which to eat. They provide hundreds of interesting items from the past and present. The food is excellent, too. If you have the chance, visit one and see what the world is talking about.

The Russians are coming! The Russians are coming!

"Prices must become an active factor of economic and social policy. We shall have to carry out a planned readjustment of the price system as an integral whole. Prices must be made more flexible; price levels must be linked up not only with the outlays but also with the consumer properties of the goods, their effectiveness and the degree to which products meet the needs of society and consumer demand."

Mikhail Gorbachev
Political Report to the 27th Party Congress

One of the first things that struck me in Moscow was the immense amount of construction going on. Thirty-story cranes are almost as much a part of the skyline as are 25-story buildings. According to our tour guide, the average Soviet upgrades his home once every five years. Perhaps this statistic is overinflated, but I could believe it after seeing the level of building in Moscow.

We waited in line for bread once - no, it didn't take hours. We waited maybe five minutes and bought some quite filling bread rings for six kopeks. That's a dime at official exchange rates and maybe two cents at black market rates. Granted, the average Soviet makes about $8,000 a year, but his rent on a flat is $30 a month. All in all, their standard of living is about half that of Great Britain - about one quarter of ours.

Mark McLaughlin

This is apparently a substantial improvement over the postwar period. According to Soviet figures, suspect as they may be, real per capita income has increased 160 percent over the past 25 years.

Russia is not a rich nation, but neither is it poor. Much has been made of the increasing capitalist tendencies of China - the intensive modernization, incentive programs, and entry of foreign companies into the vast Chinese market. What many do not realize (at least I had no idea) is that a similar process is going on in the Soviet Union. Quickly.

The Political Report by Gorbachev, basically a state of the Union address to the Communist Party, is quite an informative little book. After one wades through all of the condemnation of the imperialist powers and the flag-waving and starts to read Gorbachev's concrete proposals, they sound remarkably un-Communist. He promotes self-criticism by Soviet society. He wishes to link price to quality of goods to promote hard work.

Sounds familiar, doesn't it?

If Gorbachev succeeds in implementing these policies (and there is little doubt that he will), we may all be in for a big surprise. The one complaint that we heard from the Soviet people was that there was no reason to work hard. Now there will be.

When one thinks about it, these people have done remarkably well considering the resources that they have. Moscow is only slightly farther south than Juneau, Alaska; the southernmost point of the Soviet Union is about parallel with Cincinnati. Their growing season is short and their food supply limited. They have vast amounts of land but not much else. Yet they build like crazy and feed almost 300,000,000 people with a crippled non-incentive economy.

If they ever get their economy in gear, the Soviets could become a force to be reckoned with economically as well as politically. Are we up for that kind of challenge?

Even now the Soviets are pulling ahead in areas where the United States was once supreme. In the most obvious field, weapons, they are certainly even with us where 10 years ago they were not. In technological fields like laser and particle beam research, they are 10 to 15 years ahead of us. Similarly, in space they are beating us with antisatellite systems, a manned space station, and a massive rocket booster program which are all in working order while we do nothing. A space shuttle, technology thought of as American, has been developed and is being tested by Soviet scientists. Even their ice cream can compete with America's best.

Japan has already proven that the U.S. economy is vulnerable, and that American industry can be beaten. Other nations may soon do the same. The European countries are slowly learning to work together economically, as demonstrated by their trade agreements and cooperative ventures like the Ariane space program. China is modernizing at an incredible rate.

And now it looks as if an increasingly capitalist Soviet Union is about to join the economic frenzy. And, unlike our other competition, they have political might to match. Are we ready? Or are our heads in the sand? Khrushchev said "We will bury you." While he probably didn't have economics in mind, he might still be right.

Field Hockey faces Valpo rematch

By MARGOT MACHECA
Sports Writer

After the Notre Dame field hockey team's 0-4 loss to Big Ten power Purdue on Monday, head coach Jill Lindendorf looks at the rest of the Irish's season with hope and frustration.

The hope lies in the Irish's strong and consistent defensive play, while the frustration rises because of the team's mounting number of injuries.

"We played our best game as a team against Purdue, who is second in the Midwest and nationally ranked," notes Lindendorf. "Although we did not sustain a significant offensive threat, there was accurate passing to the forwards and great defensive play."

The team's most encouraging news came a day after the match when Lindendorf learned the Irish all-time leading scorer Corrine

DiGiacomo would be out for the remainder of the season with a knee injury.

"Corrine hurt her knee before break and did not travel with us to Boston," said Lindendorf. "We are going to have to look to some experienced, younger players to man our front line."

The forward line had already been thinned out with the loss of co-captain Mary Wagner earlier in the season.

Despite the recent losses, the team travelled to the East over October break to try and improve on its 5-5 season record.

The Irish returned home with three disappointing losses and one tie, yet with continually improving defensive intensity.

The team began the road trip with an 5-0 defeat at the hands of Lowell College and an 6-0 loss to Bentley College. Highlighting each of the matches was the strong performance of junior goalie M.J. Beutel.

"M.J. is getting better and better every game in the net," notes Lindendorf. Beutel tallied 22 and 32 saves respectively in the first two games.

Seniors Stephanie Giggetts and Bernadette Suplick each scored a goal on assists by Benet DeBerry in the Irish's 3-2 loss to Holy Cross College.

"We played our best in the third game of the trip," stated the coach. "Bernadette and Meg McGlinn played well on the offensive side, while Caroline Berezny and Joanne Marshall executed defensively."

The Irish wound up the trip with a 0-0 tie with Gordon College before returning home to finish out the season's final three games.

With continued defensive strength and improving forwards, Notre Dame travels Valparaiso today in a rematch of an earlier season game. The Irish won that contest by a score of 6-0.

Penn St. climbs to 2nd in AP poll

Associated Press

Penn State Coach Joe Paterno, whose Nittany Lions climbed to No. 2 in The Associated Press' college football rankings following a surprisingly easy 23-3 victory over Alabama, says his major concern is Saturday's game against West Virginia.

"I haven't thought about it (the ranking), and I'm not going to think about it," he said. "I think we've got to settle down and get off cloud nine and start thinking about playing a good football game against West Virginia."

The victory moved undefeated Penn State up from sixth in the poll and dropped the Crimson Tide from the ranks of the unbeaten in a fall from second to eighth.

"I really don't know how the team's going to react to it, and I'm not going to ask them," Paterno said.

Alabama Coach Ray Perkins said it was obvious last Saturday against Penn State that Alabama is not a great football team, and that overcoming the defeat will be the real test.

"Sometimes you learn a lot more about yourself in how you get up off the ground after you've fallen than when things are going good," Perkins said.

Morris proves to be Irish soccer's ultimate team player

By PETE SKIKO
Sports Writer

The consummate team player. It's a title that many athletes like to think of themselves as but one by which few can actually be described. Notre Dame soccer coach Dennis Grace knows one when he sees one, and he's glad he's got one in Randy Morris.

"I don't think a player could have a better attitude than Randy," said Grace, in his third year as head coach of the Irish. "He practices like he plays, with intensity, and is one of those players that you can honestly say gets better every day."

Morris, a sophomore from Los Gatos, Calif., has adjusted well to college play. After starting in eleven games as a freshman, he's been a starting forward for all but one Irish contest this year. But this year, even Morris' starting position has been an adjustment.

"I had a good season my senior year in high school," said the 5-10, 155-pound Morris. "I scored a lot, but I knew things would be different in college. I was a little tentative at first, and that's against my style. Once I got used to the pace of things though, I settled down."

Last year as a midfielder, Morris had only two goals and an assist in 18 games. This year, with an abundance of talented freshmen seeking midfielder spots, Grace decided to switch Morris to forward, hoping to implement his quickness and passing ability in an improving offense. Morris has no complaints.

"Knowing I'd be up front this year," said Morris, "I worked all summer at beating my man, getting downfield and scoring. To be honest, I came in hoping to be a scorer, but Tiger (junior forward and leading scorer Bruce McCourt) is taking care of most of that. I'm perfectly happy trying to find some of the other guys. For me, an assist or a hand in setting up a score is as good as a goal."

So far, Morris has five goals and eight assists, and Grace cites other factors which make Morris a multiple threat.

"He might not be a headliner," said Grace, "but he has the ability to draw a double-team throughout the course of a game because of his great speed both with and without the ball. When Randy's double-teamed with the ball, whoever is open usually gets a great pass. Randy is also an excellent defensive forward who charges well and constantly attacks. The guys look to him to perform and he does it. We're definitely not the same team without him."

The team's respect for Morris' ability is complemented by the fact the players are friends off the field. He credits the closeness of the team and Grace's leadership as important to the team's success.

"This is by far the closest team I've played on," said Morris. "Things came together last spring when we played indoors, on a surface that's suited to the type of game I like to play. I played pretty well and I gained a lot of respect from the team. We're always trying to help each other, suggesting things that might work, different stuff to work on if we get a minute in practice. It's just a good atmosphere."

"I try not to think of the team's future too much, because I really want to concentrate on the games we've got left this year. I feel kind of bad for the seniors in that we couldn't have done more this year. We had close losses to Indiana, Michigan State and Akron, games we very easily could have won. That might have taken us a long way towards doing something in the postseason. They (the seniors) are just a great bunch of guys."

Morris feels that if he is to improve, he needs to expand his role as one of the team's igniters and to capitalize on scoring opportunities. He has scored on 5 of his 49 shots on goal this season.

"Athletes in all sports," said Morris, "come across times when they can't score. Sometimes I've been open and I've either passed off or hurried a shot when I should have scored. When you're accustomed to passing and setting people up, sometimes you don't know what to do with the ball when you get it. It's something I'm sure will take care of itself with time and practice."

Grace understands that Morris, like the consummate team player, doesn't always have to score to be effective.

"The thing is, he keeps improving," said Grace. "I've got to think that the future looks pretty good with the young talent we have and guys like Randy playing better every year."

Grace takes his squad and a 10-6-1 record to Valparaiso to face the Crusaders at 3 today. Grace is cautiously optimistic about today's contest.

"Two years ago they took us to overtime," said Grace. "Anything can happen but if we play our game and play it well, we'll be alright."

Hockey

problem of inexperience.

"For the time being we are going to stress fundamentals so that the players get used to the same style of hockey."

"Our goal is to progress weekly. The team is well-conditioned, hard-working and has a great attitude. If we stick to our present work ethic, we are going to be very competitive."

"While a few freshmen like Kuehl and Markovitz have already been thrust into regular roles, several more of the younger players are close to that transition," notes Smith, "and by second semester almost everyone will be ready."

Smith is going to depend on the leadership of junior centers Mike McNeill and Tom Mooney.

"McNeill and Mooney are extremely talented young men. They lead by example on the ice as well as by their lifestyles," comments Smith.

Notre Dame was instrumental in forming the new conference to which they belong, the American Collegiate Hockey Association. Besides Notre Dame, membership includes Kent State, Lake Forest and Michigan-Dearborn.

The ACHA's constituents share a common philosophy educationally, athletically and financially. ACHA members will play a home-and-home series each year with each home series including two games.

Brian Boulac, an assistant athletic director at Notre Dame, will serve as the league's first commissioner. Among his many other responsibilities, he will coordinate the 1987 ACHA Championships to be held March 5-7 at the ACC.

The Irish have two weeks off to prepare for the Pointer Classic held Nov. 14-15, in Stevens Point, Wis. Notre Dame will square off against St. John's on Friday night. The winner of that game will face the winner of the game between Augsburg and Wisconsin-Stevens Point Saturday.

The Notre Dame men's cross-country team had mixed performances in its two meets during break. George Travers has the story on that below while Theresa Kelly details the women's team at right.

Women's cross country takes 1st among Little Colleges at Ind. meet

By THERESA KELLY
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame women's cross country team continued to prove that it measures up to strong competition with impressive performances in two major meets.

At the Indiana Intercollegiate Meet October 17, the Irish placed first in the field of ten Little State colleges with 56 points, beating second place St. Joseph's (61 pts.), third place Taylor (81 pts.) and seven other schools. The team placed fifth overall with 147 points, losing to Indiana (24 pts.), Purdue (57 pts.), Indiana State (103 pts.) and Ball State (111 pts.).

Julia Merkel, with a time of 17:55 for the 5,000 meter course, finished 7th overall and 2nd in the Little State Division. Along with Merkel, Irish runners Theresa Rice (18:51), Kathleen Lehman (19:05) and Wendy Murray (19:23) were named to the Indiana All-State team. Sophomore Kristine Dragani finished eighth for the Irish in her first varsity competition.

Coach Dan Ryan said that despite a time gap of 2:18 between the first and fifth Irish finishers, everyone on the team ran personal bests at the Inter-Collegiate meet.

"We were kind of lucky," Ryan said, "but I can't complain—everyone ran their best races of the year."

Ryan noted that three Irish runners greatly improved their times over those at last year's I-C meet. Merkel improved by 1:18, Lehman by 2:48 and Nancy Loughlin by 2:19. Last year the team placed 8th in Little State and 12th overall.

The Irish women turned in a second place finish at the North Star Conference meet in Milwaukee on Saturday. DePaul won the team competition with 30 points, followed by Notre Dame with 55 and defending champion Marquette with 62. Dayton (94 pts.), Cleveland State (109 pts.) and the University of Illinois at Chicago (190 pts.) completed the field.

Ryan was pleased with the way the team beat Marquette. The Irish showed improvement over earlier meetings this year between the two conference competitors.

Julia Merkel again led the Irish, finishing 2nd overall with a time of 18:25 and earning All-Conference honors. Rounding out the Irish top five were Lehman, Rice, Linda Filar and Loughlin. Also competing for the Irish were Wendy Murray and Terry Kibelstis.

"We did not run a good race time-wise," said Ryan, "but it was a great strategic race. As a team we ran better than ever before."

The next meet for the Irish is the District meet at Illinois State November 15 followed by the National meet in Tuscon, Arizona.

ND men's team has mixed showing

By GEORGE TRAVERS
Sports Writer

While most Notre Dame students relaxed over fall break, the Irish men's cross-country team battled with some of the toughest colleges in the country. The Irish turned in their best performance of the year in the Indiana Intercollegiate Meet and then suffered a loss to the Houston in a dual meet.

The Indiana meet marked the high point of a tough season for the cross-country team. Notre Dame came in third behind Indiana and Purdue. Other teams competing included South Indiana, Ball State and Indiana State.

The best single performance of the meet was turned in by Mike O'Connor. O'Connor, a freshman took fifth place in the 8,000 meter run. He finished with an excellent time of 24:36. This fast time by O'Connor led the Irish to their best finish in a multi-school meet this year.

Notre Dame's second meet of the fall break was not as encouraging an experience. The travelled to the Houston for a dual meet and came out on the short end of the score. Mike O'Connor, David Garret and Rick Mulvey all ran well but the Irish still fell to an excellent opponent.

"It was a tough loss we are definitely better than our performance in Houston indicated," Piane said.

Coach Piane and the team have a long time to prepare for their next meet. It will be the NCAA District IV championships on November 15. Piane hopes to do well and rebound from their loss to Houston.

"We have a few weeks to regroup, rest and prepare," said Piane. "We are a young team with a lot of potential."

The championships will be a very tough challenge for the Irish.

"We are in the toughest division in the United States," Piane said. "We have to compete against the Big Ten and Mid-America Conference. We also must run against state schools such as the University of Minnesota, Wisconsin, Illinois, Indiana, Ohio and Michigan. Our future is extremely bright. We have unlimited potential."

The Irish will have two weeks to prepare for the championships. If they can regain the form they had in Indiana, they could surprise a few people.

Tennis

Ventress 6-0, 6-2 in the sixth singles position.

The steady improvement of the doubles teams was evident as the Irish won two of the three doubles titles. Lohrer and Illig clinched the number two title by defeating Andersen and Ventress 6-3, 7-5. Schmidt and Kelly emerged winners at the number three doubles spot after upsetting top seeds Mary Foot and Sheila Murray of Marquette 6-2, 6-4. Schmidt and Kelly ended the season with an outstanding 8-2 record.

The number-one doubles team of Dasso and Tolstedt lost a close match against Marquette's Prescott and Mulcahy, 7-6, 6-4.

The latest NSC championship plaque may be on the wall, but the women's tennis team is never one to rest on its laurels. It always has its sights on the future.

"This spring we're striving for a winning record and in the future we'd like to become a respectable midwest contender," commented Gelfman.

Women's tennis wins NSC title; Gelfman earns coaching honors

By SHEILA HOROX
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame women's tennis team brought its 1986 fall season to a successful close by capturing its fourth consecutive North Star Conference championship last weekend. The Irish came away with three singles and two doubles titles in the flighted tournament.

Head coach Michele Gelfman was also named the NSC Coach of the Year for the second-straight season. But Gelfman also attributes the team's success to the contribution of assistant coach Steve Simone.

The Irish stood atop the team standings with 46 points. Northern Illinois, whose participation was by invitation, finished second with 35, and Marquette, the team expected to challenge the Irish, placed third with 30 points.

In both singles and doubles, every Notre Dame player was seeded either first or second in their respective draws, and not one finished lower than runner-up in the championships.

Since most of the Irish received a bye in the opening rounds, getting into the flow of match play constituted the only problem the Irish encountered.

"Our entire line up was like a sixth man coming off the bench," Gelfman said. "We didn't have a chance to warm up."

Freshman Stephanie Tolstedt ousted Northern Illinois' Sari Dinerman 6-3, 6-2, to win the number two singles title and Alice Lohrer, another freshman, took the number three singles title with a 6-3, 6-1, victory over Northern Illinois' VanLankvelt.

Senior co-captain Tammy Schmidt won the number four singles title with a 6-2, 6-1 victory over Leeann Milne of N. Illinois. Gelfman praised the play of her only senior.

"Tammy played with a hunger in her eyes," Gelfman said. "Her performance was incredible. She was hitting shots an inch and a half inside the baseline that were not only winners, but her opponent couldn't even get her racquet on the ball."

Dasso, seeded second at the number one singles position fell to top seed Meg Mulcahy of Marquette, 7-6, 6-4. Illig lost to NIU's Andersen, 6-4, 6-4 in the fifth singles bracket, and Kelly was defeated by NIU's

Hoops tix set for sale

Special to The Observer

Student basketball season ticket sales are slated to begin Monday, Nov. 3, with seniors purchasing their tickets first.

Tickets prices are $60 for lower arena and $45 for upper arena seating. Sales will be held at Gate 10 of the ACC, beginning at 1:30 and continuing until 6. Sales to juniors will be held Tuesday, followed by sophomores, law and graduate students on Wednesday and freshmen on Thursday.

Students should have received their ticket applications during break. Anyone who did not should go to the ticket office as soon as possible to get an application.

Saint Mary's students are not included in this sale. Ticket sales for Saint Mary's will be held by the Saint Mary's Office of Student Activities.

Ticket Manager Mike Bobinski says he does not envision a ticket shortage. Last year, several hundred freshmen were turned away when student tickets sold out.

Students should note that the season ticket package does not include the opening game of the Coca-Cola NIT against Western Kentucky on Nov. 21. Tickets for that game will go on sale at a later date.

Tickets for the men's and women's Blue-Gold games are on sale now at the ACC. Prices are $2 for adults and $1 for students. Proceeds from the games will go to Logan Center and the Neighborhood Study Help Program.

The women's game begins at 6:30, followed by the men's game at 7:30.

86-87 hockey preview

Irish drop season opening pair

By BOB KEMPER
Sports Writer

This past weekend the Notre Dame hockey team opened its 1986-87 season with a pair of losses to Kent State in the first games of the new American Collegiate Hockey Association.

The visiting Flashes scored two first-period goals in Friday's contest and held off the Irish for a 4-2 win. Freshman winger Tim Kuehl of Edina, Minn., and sophomore winger Matt Hanzel of St. Paul, Minn., were the lone scorers for Notre Dame, while senior Tim Lukenda, a native of Saulte Ste. Marie, Ontario, turned aside 20 shots in the losing effort.

Saturday, Kent State again scored two quick first-period goals and held on for a 2-1 win. Freshman winger Bruce Guay of North Smithfield, R.I., tallied for the single Irish goal, while freshman goalie Lance Madson of Minnetonka, Minn., turned in a strong performance by allowing only a single goal and recording 28 saves.

"I was not at all pleased with our overall performance last weekend," said Notre Dame head coach Lefty Smith. "We were not as free an flowing in the games as we had been in practice. We need to fore-check better and be more aggressive in the future."

One area in which the Irish are sure to improve is their power play unit. Notre Dame was only able to convert 1-of-11 power-play opportunities. "Our power play was totally ineffective against Kent State," continued Smith. "We were too tentative and unorganized. That is something we will concentrate on in practice this week."

Notre Dame is a very young team with Lukenda and left wing John Nickodemus being the only returning seniors. Thus, Smith sees the 1985-86 season as a rebuilding year, but one that will be very competitive.

"We are still feeling the effects of our move to the club level during the 1983-84 season," says Smith. "Even though we returned to Division I the following season, we did so without the benefit of being able to offer scholarships. This hampered recruiting for a while, but (assistant coach) Tom Carroll did an excellent job bringing in freshmen last year."

Due to the youthfulness of his squad, Smith is faced with the

The pros and cons of an open date

Off weeks in the season are curious things.

Coaches and players often try to explain the advantages and disadvantages of breaks during the week, but sometimes that changes after the next game.

If the team wins, we hear the list of advantages of the break. If it loses, the list of disadvantages is given.

Either way the team is covered. This little system works much like popular sayings "Absence makes the heart grow fonder" and "Out of sight, out of mind." Between the two, all possible events are pretty well covered.

If a team loses, there are several problems that may have occurred over the break. First, the team may have lost its timing. Since this is such a touchy area, and split seconds are precious, one can see how this can happen, especially if the coach has given the team a few days off.

Another one, which could be loaded in the Irish arsenal, is that the break stopped the team's momentum. After a cakewalk over Air Force, the Irish seemed primed to roll over their next opponent had they played last Saturday. The break may slow the flow of that ever-elusive momentum.

Of course, the Mets could have used that one, but they went out and avoided the problem by winning even after their so-called momentum had been slowed by Sunday's rainout.

The last explanation used by losing teams we will examine is that the week off took the team's mind off football. With no opponent on the horizon, the team lost sight of its goal, they may explain.

But all of these excuses can be cast aside with a simple victory.

After a victory, a team also has many explanations from which to choose. The first one concerns injuries. After getting battered and bruised during the course of a season, what better way for the team to get healthy again than to get a week off?

Players that normally would miss a game now have one week to rest and one week to practice. How convenient.

Some may argue that there should be more off-weeks for this reason alone, but that causes scheduling headaches. That means that the season may have to start even earlier in baseball season to end in time for the "bowl season." When the Kickoff Classic, college football's first game of the year, is being played before most students have their class schedules memorized you know that it cannot be pushed ahead much farther.

Another advantage of the week off, winning coaches will claim, is that the team has time to get away from the grind, even if only for a few days. The disappointments of a season can snowball, and with a week off, the players can take a step back and re-evaluate the direction they are headed, and rededicate the team's goals.

Irish head coach Lou Holtz said the Irish used the break to get back to fundamentals, especially with the young players. This seems to make sense with the current situation.

The final reasoning for a victory is that the team had two weeks to prepare for the opponent. Alabama was a prime example of this explanation being beaten to a pulp. The problem with this is that if the Irish are going to have two weeks to prepare for a team, Navy might be the last team the Irish choose.

With a week off to prepare for an opponent, you would hope that the opponent is one of the tougher ones on the schedule, and Navy obviously does not fit that bill.

Nevertheless, the Irish have had their week off, and their performance on Saturday will decide what the break did to the team. We could be hearing complaints of rustiness, or ravings of the much-needed time off.

Let's all hope the Irish will be using the second set of descriptions of their break after Saturday's game.
