Waite safe as group claims responsibility for abductions

Associated Press

BEIRUT, Lebanon - A pro-Iranian Shiite leader said Wednesday that kidnapping is a proper weapon in "the causes of Islam," but Moslem students marched to protest abductions of foreigners, including four of their teachers.

The fate of Anglican Church envoy Terry Waite remained a mystery.

Waite vanished Jan. 20 after leaving his hotel to negotiate with Shiite Moslems who have held two Americans hostage since 1985. An unconfirmed report by the official Kuwaiti news agency said the kidnappers had him under a form of house arrest.

An American was evacuated Wednesday from Moslem west Beirut, where 11 foreigners have been seized in 12 days, to the city's Christian eastern sector.

In Washington, the State Department announced restrictions on travel to Lebanon in an effort to force U.S. citizens to leave and discourage other Americans from coming here.

Hussein Moussawi, leader of the pro-Iranian militia Islamic Amal, said, "I support acts of kidnapping against spies and (intelligence) agents."

Moussawi's remarks were broadcast by the Voice of the Oppressed radio station run by the pro-Iranian Hezbollah - party of God. His Islamic Amal organization is separate from

Terry Waite

Amal, Lebanon's main Shiite militia.

Officials in Bonn say the separate seizures of West German businessman Rudolf Cordes, 53, and engineer Alfred Schmidt, 47, were linked to the arrest Jan. 13 in Frankfurt of Mohammed Ali Hamadi, a Lebanese Shiite.

The United States seeks to extradite him for trial in the 1985 hijacking of an American TWA jetliner to Beirut, during which U.S. Navy diver Robert Stethem was killed and 39 Americans were held hostage for 17 days.

Fewer than half a dozen American men remain in west Beirut. An estimated 50 American women are there, most of them married to Lebanese Moslems.

An anti-kidnapping march by hundreds of young Lebanese accompanied a one-day strike by about 50,000 students protesting the abduction of four professors - three Americans and an Indian - from the Beirut University College campus last Saturday.

Moslem schools in west Beirut joined those with American, British and French affiliations in the strike, the second since gunmen disguised as police abducted the four educators.

The latest kidnap victim was Saudi Arabian Khaled Deeb, seized Monday night in a predominantly Shiite district near Beirut airport.

Moslem-controlled Channel 7 television said an anonymous caller Tuesday attributed the abduction to the previously unknown Organization of Partisans of Islamic Jihad.

Life of single females discussed by panel

By KAREN WEBB
Copy Editor

A panel of four Saint Mary's students addressed the topic of "Single, Female, and 21," in the second lecture of the series "The Catholic Experience" Wednesday in Stapleton lounge.

The panel, Student Body President Jeanne Heller, Vice President for Student Affairs Sarah Cook, Off-Campus Commissioner Jill Tiefenthaler, and Rebecca Hetland, student representative to the Board of Regents, spoke on the evolution of their Catholic faith and beliefs, illustrated by personal experience.

Heller, a senior English major, spoke on the re-evaluation of her personal religion. She said having been raised Catholic, "Catholicism was something I took for granted . . . I went through the motions, but I never had to think about it. It was always something that was presented to me and that I did, but it was just part of being Catholic. It wasn't a choice that I had made."

A crisis in her life led her to lose faith in her religion, she said, and only much later she was forced to rethink her stance, when "all of a sudden there were questions that I couldn't answer."

Working within herself and questioning herself, she said, helped her to work out her self-conflict.

"I'm stronger as a person (now). I don't always have the answers but I know where to turn and I think now I'm starting over again as a Catholic. I choose to be a Catholic now and to remain a Catholic, and I like that."

"I think if you were to ask me if I would raise my children Catholic I would say yes, but I would teach them to question." Cook, an English-psychology major, compared her Catholic experience to what she supposed her mother's and grandmother's would have been.

"The Catholic faith that they learned gave them comfortable answers to many questions. The Catholic faith that I have learned sometimes gives me answers, but more and most importantly it gives me the ability, strength, and courage to ask questions of my God, my faith, myself, and others."

"I am sure many others (who are) 21, female, and Catholic have many questions about women in society and Church."

"My Catholic experience now at 21 is to say the least a question of challenge - to stay committed to the Church despite my questions because of the hope I have for the Church."

Tiefenthaler, founder and coordinator of the Women's Studies Club at Saint Mary's, also spoke on her temporary rejection of Catholic ways and her subsequent reconciliation with the Church.

Also raised in the Catholic Church, she said "I couldn't question it or challenge it because it was the only way I knew."

But her developing feminist views began to conflict with her Catholic views, she said, so, "I totally separated myself from the Church."

"Soon I came to terms with the fact that I was not gaining anything by leaving the Church but that I was losing a lot. Not only did I lose my religion, I lost my heritage and tradition, and in a sense I lost my home."

"I began my reconciliation with the Church, not as an institution but as a community."

"Catholicism had given me strength such as self-discipline, a sense of community, and most importantly a love of people."

"My feminist views have helped me to deal with my Catholic experience. The Church has made its commitment to social justice, and feminists I believe are concerned with bringing justice to the oppressed."

"Although as a single, Catholic, 21-year-old female I still

Student Body President Mike Switek and Off-Campus Commissioner Tracy Thoman were subjected to field tests to demonstrate the effects of alcohol at LaFortune Wednesday night as part of the scheduled programs for Alcohol Awareness Week.

Indiana State Police officer Kevin Kubsch and Irv Sikorski of Campus Security conducted the field tests on Switek and Thoman.

The pair ceased consumption of alcohol about an hour prior to the program. Each was then led through three separate field tests used by officers to establish probable cause for arrest on a Driving Under the Influence offense.

Kubsch also gave a summary of the Indiana state laws concerning drinking and driving, including the changes that were enacted in 1982 to toughen existing laws.

"We would like to educate you on the use of alcohol and drinking and driving rather than enforce (the law)," said Kubsch.

"The basic message is don't drink and drive," said John Sheehy, BACCHUS president, about the week's activities. BACCHUS, a nationwide organization that promotes the responsible use of alcohol, is sponsoring the events.

The first program was held on Saturday as members of the Freshman Advisory Council conducted a lecture on the effects of alcohol and the restrictions on alcohol consumption at Notre Dame.

Services mark first anniversary of disaster

Associated Press

With monuments and memorial services, Americans mourned the seven Challenger astronauts Wednesday on the first anniversary of history's worst space disaster.

Thousands of workers at 10 National Aeronautics and Space Administration centers around the nation observed 73 seconds of silence, the length of Challenger's final flight, at 11:38 a.m., the time the shuttle roared off an icicle-draped launch pad at Cape Canaveral. Wednesday also was cold, with a low of 33 degrees, a reminder of the conditions that contributed to Challenger's loss.

President Reagan, in taped remarks played at NASA centers, said that school teacher Christa McAuliffe and her six fellow astronauts had taught a "lesson of courage, spirit and love to America's children, and now it is for all of us to learn the lesson from them."

Vice President George Bush met in his office with relatives of three of the astronauts.

At the Kennedy Space Center at Cape Canaveral, where the Challenger took off on its last flight, some employees cried openly, other fought back tears and several hugged one another, and tourist buses stopped in their tracks at 11:38 a.m.

"A lot of people just wanted to be with themselves," said Terry Eddleman, a spokesman for the Marshall Space Flight Center at Huntsville, Ala. "It is not a happy day."

Killed in the accident were Cmdr. Dick Scobee, Pilot Michael Smith, McAuliffe and crew members Judy Resnik, Ronald McNair, Ellison

Onizuka and Greg Jarvis.

Jarvis' widow, Marcia, shunned any public appearance on the anniversary. "I'm going to spend that day quietly on a trail somewhere ... because we always did things outside," she said.

Junior high school students paused for 90 seconds at 11:38 a.m. at Lake City, S.C., McNair's hometown.

Onizuka's family planned a happier observance Saturday, gathering in Houston for a Hawaiian-style luau. "We promised Ellison a luau when he got back ... and the luau never occurred," said Claude Onizuka, his younger brother.

Texas Gov. Bill Clements designated Jan. 28 as "Challenger Memorial Day" in his state. Oklahoma Gov. Henry Bellmon joined about 100 school children and others in 73 seconds of silence at the state Capitol.

The Washington state Senate unanimously adopted a resolution honoring the "bravery and citizenship" of Scobee, a Washington native, and Minnesota Gov. Rudy Perpich announced plans for an endowed scholarship in memory of McAuliffe, with a goal of $9 million in public and private money.

For some, it was a day to remember two disasters in the nation's space program.

About 90 people attended the dedication of a granite monument at the Michigan Space Center in Jackson, Mich., to Jarvis and to Roger Chaffee, who died in the Apollo 1 launch pad fire 20 years ago Tuesday. Both were Michigan natives.

"I think each of us lost something on that day a year ago," former astronaut Jack Lousma, commander on the third shuttle flight, said at the dedication.

Rebels end occupation of complex in Manila

Associated Press

MANILA - The defense minister announced Thursday that 200 rebels had agreed to end their two-day occupation of a Manila broadcasting complex.

"I'm glad to announce we have ended another episode in the history of disturbances that have plagued us these many months," Defense Minister Rafael Ileta told reporters.

The end of the occupation, which began early Tuesday, was announced after a two-hour meeting between military leaders and Col. Oscar Canlas, who led the group of mutineers who took over the studios early Tuesday.

Canlas refused to call the lifting of the occupation a surrender, saying "We never left the armed forces." Ileta said the question of punishment for the mutineers, whom the government linked to ex-President Ferdinand E. Marcos, would be discussed later.

President Corazon Aquino vowed Tuesday to punish "to the fullest extent of the law" the estimated 500 rebels who attempted to take over major media and military facilities in the capital.

The mutineers at the television-radio complex were the last rebel holdouts.

Pro-government troops surrounding the television and radio complex and fired about a dozen tear gas canisters shortly after a late Wednesday deadline expired, but did not attack.

College president innocent of sex abuse

Associated Press

BOSTON - A jury Wednesday found the ousted president of Westfield State College innocent of sexually assaulting a student.

The Suffolk Superior Court jury deliberated 8 hours before acquitting Francis J. Pilecki of two charges of indecent assault and battery.

Pilecki faces a second trial on two charges stemming from an alleged sexual assault of a second student. Each charge carries a maximum penalty of five years in prison.

The case, which was moved across the state following intense publicity, prompted statewide investigations into the use of college funds after it was disclosed that a student was secretly given a $10,000 payment from college funds in connection with the sexual assault charges.

Pilecki hugged his wife Juliana and their son and daughter after the verdict was read.

When asked about the second trial, he said, "I haven't given it a thought."

"I'm just very pleased," Pilecki said, adding that he just wanted "to go home with the family."

Prosecutor William W. Teahan said he had no comment except to say "I feel we're going to have a second trial."

Pilecki's attorney argued during the trial that the student, 21 at the time of the alleged assault, could have rebuffed the president's advance or left the room when Pilecki, 52, asked him to disrobe and then grabbed his buttocks.

The former student declined to comment on the verdict.

The defense disputed whether the incident actually occurred, but said that even if it did, it clearly was between consenting adults and did not constitute sexual assault.

Pilecki, who had announced his retirement from the $80,413-a-year job effective Aug. 31, 1986, was suspended without pay after his June indictment.

In closing arguments, defense attorney James St. Clair said the student, who wanted a career in college administration, consented to anything that might have happened when he visited the college president's campus home in the summer of 1984.

Teahan contended that acquitting Pilecki would be tantamount to declaring that the former student, now 23 and working at another school in the state, was a homosexual.

Teahan said the young man did not use as much common sense as he might have, but said the student was "paralyzed" during "a bizarre game" of trust with the college president, "a physically large and practically powerful man."

Terrorism suspect's brother arrested in West Germany

Associated Press

MERZIG, West Germany - Police found an explosive cache after arresting a Lebanese terrorism suspect's brother and are investigating whether he ran a terror ring from West Germany, officials said Wednesday.

The cache was hidden in a field six miles from the apartment in Merzig of Ali Abbas Hamadi, 28, a naturalized West German citizen arrested Monday night at the Frankfurt airport. His brother is Mohammed Ali Hamadi, 22, an alleged hijacker of a TWA jetliner in 1985, who was arrested at the airport Jan. 13.

West Germany's ZDF television network said Tuesday night that Ali Abbas Hamadi may have led a terror ring responsible for several bombings in France last year and a June 1985 bombing that killed three people at the Frankfurt airport.

Federal officials in Bonn, speaking on condition of anonymity, said police were probing the possible link. "All of these things are being investigated. I can't tell you any more," one said.

Ali Abbas Hamadi was arrested because police suspected he was involved in the abductions of two West Germans in Beirut after his younger brother was arrested.

Authorities have made several searches in and around this town near the French border since the arrest of his brother.

Good friendship is groundwork of marriage, panel says

By DIANE SCHROEDER
Staff Reporter

A good friendship is the most important groundwork for a successful marriage, according to the ten panelists at last night's discussion entitled "A Realistic Look at Marriage."

Both married and divorced panelists shared their thoughts and answered questions on the institution of marriage during the session which was sponsored by the Saint Mary's sexuality education council. Saint Mary's sociology professor Chuck Pressler moderated the event which was held at the Haggar College Center parlour.

"You take background, family and values, into a marriage," said Nancy Schoeneman, assistant director of the counseling and career development center at Saint Mary's. Schoeneman, who married upon graduating from college and divorced eight years later, said marriage is only the beginning of committed love, and not the other way around.

"The romance stage often leads to a power struggle stage," said Schoeneman, "and you need to be open to each other's as well as your own needs. Commitment is the result of that give and take process."

According to Schoeneman, we learn how to love and parent from our parents, but it is also important to learn from other experiences. She recommended the books "Couples' Journey" and "Superwoman Syndrome." Before making a commitment to marriage, Schoeneman also suggested pre-marital counseling which is pre-marital counseling through the Church.

Ken and Joan Milani, who have been married for 23 years, said they support pre-marital counseling.

"Although at the time I would have rather been at a pre-game tailgater, Joan's urging of the pre-marital counseling definitely helped our marriage before we even got into it," said Ken Milani. "Being married has allowed me to drink from another cup, to experience areas I otherwise would not have on my own."

Most of the panelists agreed that communication skills and a sense of commitment were important when the deciding to marry. Ken Milani added that physical attraction didn't hurt either.

Milani added "Variety, contact with different views, and concentration on relationships with others and most importantly, with my wife."

Saint Mary's philosophy professor Bill Hawk and his wife Jean who have been married for 16 years, spoke about the balance they try to maintain in their relationship. They said their main concern is for

Advisory board holds first meeting

By SHEILA KANEHANN

Notre Dame's student advisory board, created by the Office of Student Affairs last semester to consult with a South Bend community group, met for the first time last week.

The six-member board discussed the re-opening of the Goodwill parking lot for Five-Points bar patrons, said Student Board Vice President Don Montanaro, a member of the board.

Montanaro said he hopes the board can work out plans for student aid to help take care of the parking lot.

He added that he also hopes the board will "kick in money for lighting and clean-up" of the parking lot.

The advisory board works with the local community organizing group, Neighborhood Housing Services (NHS) of South Bend, under the direction of executive director Anne Mannix.

The student board was established to work with the group on problems of mutual concern to Notre Dame off-campus students and their South Bend neighbors, according to Assistant Vice President for Student Affairs Sister Jean Lenz.

"Our students hope to work with NHS on such issues as finding student housing in the South Bend area and becoming good neighbors," Lenz said.

The advisory board members, five of whom live off campus, are Tracy Thoman, John Ginty, Fred Pugliano, Ann Gibson, Diane Tinley and Montanaro.

Montanaro said the advisory board will "get together with the people of the neighborhood and let them know we care. They are concerned about living in a nice neighborhood, and so are we."

About 1,500 of Notre Dame's 7,544 undergraduates live off campus, as do about 1,050 post-baccalaureate students.

Rebecca Hetland, Campus Ministry representative to student government and a senior English major, spoke on how three homilies which she delivered at Saint Mary's helped her to re-evaluate her sense of faith. "The unwillingness of all of us to confront that which is most painful in our lives, that is our 'humanness,' Hetland said was an obstacle in her faith.

"I talk about this aspect of humanness because it was in discovering that I must come of terms with that humanness that I discovered the person of Jesus Christ. I consider that a point of conversion for me."

"It was then that I moved from a time of burning questions and unresolved answers, ... from an existence of wandering aimlessly to an existence which celebrated God."

Fruit and vegetables could reduce stroke risk says study

Associated Press

BOSTON - Eating an extra helping of fresh fruit or vegetables each day could cut the risk of stroke nearly in half by increasing the body's supply of potassium, a study concludes.

Potassium is found abundantly in many kinds of food, especially fruits and vegetables. The new research suggests that even a small increase in the daily intake of this element can significantly reduce the hazard of stroke.

Dr. Elizabeth Barrett-Connor, a co-author of the study at the University of California, San Diego, said the research is the first to find that people with relatively high levels of potassium in their diets have fewer strokes.

"The results indicate that one extra serving of fresh fruits or vegetables each day may decrease the risk of stroke by as much as 40 percent, regardless of other known risk factors," she said.

She cautioned that her findings must yet be duplicated by other researchers. But in the meantime, eating extra fruits and vegetables can't hurt, as long as people don't increase their total daily calories.

Hall apologizes to Nicaragua upon return to United States

Associated Press

MIAMI - Soldier of fortune Sam Nesley Hall, apologizing for his actions after 1 month in Nicaraguan jails on spy charges, returned Wednesday to the United States and was taken to a government hospital for an examination.

"I just have one thing to say to the Nicaraguan people," Hall told reporters before boarding a flight in from Managua to Costa Rica on Wednesday morning. "I'm sorry I tried to ambush them."

Nicaraguan officials said they were releasing Hall, 49-year-old brother of Rep. Tony Hall, D-Ohio, because he showed signs of mental instability.

Last month, they permitted captured American mercenary Eugene Hasenfus to return home despite a 30-year sentence for aiding the Contra rebels, who seek to overthrow Nicaragua's leftist government.

At the White House, presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said of Hall's release, "they should have done it earlier."

Hall flew from San Jose, Costa Rica, to Miami aboard a Lacs, Costa Rican airlines, jetliner. When he arrived in Miami about 12:25 p.m., a half-dozen, unsmiling airport security men whisked him off the plane and put him in a van, without his going through the normal Customs and immigration procedures. Airport officials said Hall's brother was waiting in the van.

Hall, wearing a pink T-shirt and tan pants, looked calm as he left the plane with his attorney, Gary Froelich of Dayton, Ohio. He did not acknowledge the shouts of reporters waiting on the airport sundeck above him, and an airport security car immediately led the van off the field.

"He is being examined at the V.A. hospital," said Veterans Administration spokeswoman Donna St. John in Washington. "As of right now he has not been admitted."

Froelich had said earlier that

Hall's family was trying to arrange a complete medical examination for him in Miami before going on to Dayton.

Hall was arrested Dec. in a restricted area of the Punta Huete air base, 13 miles northeast of Managua. Authorities said they found maps and sketches of military targets, crudely drawn on hotel stationery, stuffed in his socks, and threatened to try him for espionage.

Before leaving Nicaragua, Hall said he was not mistreated during his detention. "Prison authorities were terrific. They treated me like a human being," he said.

Nicaraguan officials had planned an airport news conference, but Hall was late in arriving and answered only a few shouted questions as he was hustled on the waiting plane of Aeronica, the Nicaraguan national airline.

In San Jose, Hall was taken by a U.S. embassy vehicle from the Aeronica to the Lacs flight, bypassing normal immigration procedures that would have delayed his departure.

Empty alcohol bottles cause problems in auditorium

By SHARON HEGG
Staff Reporter

The litter and empty alcohol bottles being left in the engineering auditorium after Friday and Saturday night movies has become an increasing concern to the administration and student leaders, who met recently to discuss the problem.

Student Movie Commissioner Charles Lobdell said that although administrators have issued no ultimatum, they are very serious about improving the situation.

"I wish students would stop bringing alcohol into the auditorium," Lobdell said. "They are increasing the odds of no more movies in the engineering auditorium which is essentially the only place to show movies on campus."

Maintenance has been monitoring the amount of refuse left in the auditorium, said William MacWhorter, director of building services.

"There has always been pop cans and candy wrappers, but now they have had to clean up vomit off the carpet," said MacWhorter.

MacWhorter said different types of movies seem to attract different types of students.

Lobdell agreed, saying that "the rowdy-action movies (which bring in more money) also tend to bring in more beer."

According to Lobdell, the problem has been on and off in the past.

However, MacWhorter said, "it seems to be a growing problem for the janitors to clean up. There has been damage to chairs and table arms broken off."

The first major complaints about the situation in the engineering auditorium were received last year. "The stench from (the litter) not being cleaned up all weekend interferes with Monday classes," said Lobdell. "We are now working with managers, reinforcing their job description and having a group to clean up afterward."

Don Montanaro, student body vice president, said he became aware of the problem late last semester. He wrote a letter to The Observer appealing to students not to bring alcohol into the engineering auditorium.

"I am hoping that students will assume responsibility for something that is for them,"

Montanaro said Wednesday. "Using the auditorium is a privilege, if we abuse the privilege it will be taken away."

Notre Dame Security supports the student run movies, according to Phil Johnson, assistant director of Security. He said Security is concerned that "the University alcohol policy is not being followed in the engineering auditorium."

lecture on the health effects of alcohol in the New Orleans room of LaFortune.

"America has obviously picked alcohol as our drug of choice," said Alley. "We get a lot of young people dying way before they need to die."

"One out of 1000 people will die in acute heroin withdrawal, one in 20 will die in acute alcohol withdrawal," he continued.

Alley described two hormones which affect brain functions. In approximately 20 percent of the population, these hormones exist in abnormal levels.

"In our population, there are those people that can consume and metabolize alcohol and mind altering drugs at a very different rate," said Alley. It is this minority of the population that is susceptible to alcoholism.

"If you can learn anything from this," said Alley, "The risks are really great."

"Students need to be educated," said Sheehy, indicating that BACCHUS plans another alcohol awareness program in March.

On Monday and Tuesday, similar demonstrations on the effects of alcohol were held at Stanford, Keenan, Walsh,

The same demonstration was repeated Wednesday night at Flanner, in addition to being held at LaFortune.

Minority admissions given greater priority

It has been a hard struggle, but due to a strong and well-defined commitment, the Admissions Office has shown much progress in the area of minority recruitment. After a miserable 1984-85 freshman class, there has been a marked increase in minority enrollment. Under the direction of Rosie Courtney and Director Kevin Rooney, last year was the second best recruiting year in Notre Dame's history.

Mari Fuentes
guest column

And the future seems even brighter. Courtney has since left, but now under the capable direction of Counselors John Goins and Jackie Burns-Rucker the projections for this year tend to indicate even higher numbers. "Presently, we are at 10% above norm ratio in minority applicants as compared with last year's figures. We had the all-time greatest number of black applicants and acceptances in early-action; hispanics were 30-40% above last year's numbers as well. Not only has there been an increase in the number of applicants, but also the quality," said Goins.

The relatively new commitment by the Admissions Office has been evidenced in a variety of ways over the past two years. Through the creation of our positions, Admissions has involved more students in the recruiting process. It has been shown that students recruiting students is the most effective way to interest high school seniors in applying. Students now participate regularly in every aspect of the admissions process from phone calls and letter writing to prospective students, to high school visitations and to the hosting students.

But incorporating students is far from the only advancement. Renewed assistance from minority alumni has also been a significant factor as has the revision of admissions literature so as to further appeal to applicants of all ethnic backgrounds. In attempting to add greater diversity to the University, the Admissions Office has also dictated that all counselors must make 25% of their visits to minority high schools. Furthermore, Rucker indicated that "parents have been asked to participate in their son's and daughter's college decision making process."

Goins stresses that "the future is hopeful with the addition of the new Minority Affairs Director Ken Durgans. He is attempting to make things on campus more positive and therefore is making the Admissions job easier. Because if students are happy here and stay here, then our base will continue to grow and everything will become a lot easier. Right now things are difficult but we are making steady progress."

But amidst all this optimism and hope, it is still necessary to realize that the numbers are low and there is a long way to go. At least now, though, the University is heading in the right direction and the previous downward trend has been turned around. How low are the numbers? Black students currently number about 2.8% of the student body, Hispanics 3.2%, and there are only 26 American Indians on campus. (As an aside, it is interesting to note that only 2 Black Americans are enrolled in Saint Mary's.) Two or three years of steadily improving numbers does not equal success. There must be dedication over the long haul - a yearly rededication to progress. Otherwise, the recent gains could easily be lost.

Finally, it seems that while Admissions is trying to carry its weight, there is a question as to whether a commitment to improving the numbers and lives of minority students exists in the University as a whole. The key to the Admissions Office is that their commitment has been translated from words to action. There is no lip service, only real service. And the rest of the University would do well to follow its guide. For if students are not satisfied once they get here, if retention is low, then the efforts of the Admissions Office may well be in vain and indeed a disservice to prospective high school seniors.

Voter participation is only means of change

Dear Editor:

Parietals, library hours, bank hours and comprehensive exams are all issues that have passed or failed due to participation in the Saint Mary's community. Several decisions affecting our school and social lives may or may not have been to the majority's liking. Often we find ourselves complaining about a particular policy or social event during the course of the year. Unfortunately, complaints to our roommates and peers do not make the necessary changes.

The time has come again for new leaders to be chosen, and believe it or not, everyone's vote is important. In the past, voter percentages have been low, but complaints have been high. A major reason for this lack of participation can be attributed to voter apathy - thinking one's vote will not make the difference in the final decision. This attitude, though understandable, cannot be acceptable when seeking strong and competent leadership. My message to Saint Mary's students is to be aware of the upcoming elections including hall, class and student body races. Take the initiative to familiarize yourself with the candidates and exercise your right to vote. Odds are complaints will decrease, while social and academic satisfaction will increase.

The dates for Saint Mary's elections are as follows: student body, February 18; class, February 18; hall, to be determined.

Dear Editor:

One of the most disappointing aspects of the Notre Dame sports scene over the past few years is the lack of performance of the student body. There was a time when visiting teams did not enjoy appearances at the stadium or the ACC because there were two teams to beat, the athletes and the students. The records of the football or basketball teams didn't matter. Momentum and adrenalin were created by noise and more noise which led to many upsets.

That ability has recently waned. The student body no longer has the creativity, knowledge of the games, desire, or leadership to create an atmosphere that truly strengthens their teams. Joe Paterno recently said that the mystique of visiting Notre Dame no longer has an impact on opposing teams. He is correct. The mystique of Notre Dame is its spirit, regardless of odds. The present student body forgets the part about "...what tho' the odds..."

I attended the recent Notre Dame-West Virginia basketball game. The student body didn't know whether to stand up or sit down, but in either case they made no noise. Some students even left with three minutes to go in the game. The students seem to know nothing about the impact that loud, incessant, obnoxious, turnover-creating noise has on opposing teams.

It used to be that Notre Dame could count on upsets and come from behind victories in part because of the student body. With a little bit more noise, West Virginia might not have run their offense so well. Seems like upsets are now going to be real miracles. Just ask yourself if this student body can help beat

Artist shows true colors

features copy editor

I imagine a man with inestimable determination. Stir in the concepts of truth, honesty, and beauty and you have the perfect recipe for an artist. Albert Summerlin is just such a man.

His art inspiration not only comes from everyday-life scenes and people, but his inspiration also arises from his inherent need to give life to the images in his mind. This desire to glorify expression, emotion and the humanistic element of life is evident in his representation of University President Father Theodore Hesburgh.

The Hesburgh sketch, taken from a photograph, is remarkable in a truer-than-life sense. Summerlin said the motivation to do this portrait came from the photograph itself in which he recognized a great potential for recreating "that mysterious, subtle smile."

Summerlin met Hesburgh for the first time this January and said, "There's always been a certain mystery about him and I think it's really neat that a man of his caliber has time for small concerns."

Summerlin has never had any formal art instruction, excluding some commercial art courses at Ivy Tech. His talent comes from within. "The inspiration is there, I don't try to analyze it. I work with it; it's always been there," Summerlin said.

Although Summerlin knew he always wanted to be an artist, there was a period in his life when he abandoned his painting. There were too many other pressing commitments that occupied his time. Many years later, after an accident that rendered him blind in one eye, he decided to return to his art.

Summerlin faced the challenge of relearning his craft without the ability of depth perception. Instead of decreasing and limiting his talent, his skill and talent intensified. Summer-

Summerlin in progress

The Observer/Todd Tucker

lin attributes this mastering of his skill to his age-gathered wisdom and a more serious appreciation of the process behind art.

Summerlin focused on commercial art because "I don't like the idea of an artist getting rich after he's dead," he joked. Summerlin's real pleasure comes from pursuing his own interests and ideas, not from receiving a commission. Summerlin does most of his art work in his spare time, either in the basement of Decio in his freetime or in his studio at Colfax Cultural Center on the weekends. He said if his art ever became an obligation he would not feel as comfortable with the art or himself.

If he's feeling good about himself, he's feeling good about his art. "Art is my little girl, my woman," said Summerlin. "Sometimes we fall out, then we regroup. There are arguments and uncertainties but I sleep on them for a while and then the problem is solved."

Does Summerlin have a dream? Of course. He wants to sit back, settle down and just concentrate on art. "I want to be what I call an artist; someone who really knows art and has the intellect of an educated artist," said Summerlin.

"I'd like recognition by my peers along with input from other professionals. I want to know the language of art so I can talk about my art and improve it with new techniques," continued Summerlin.

"Right now, my art speaks for itself. If it didn't, that would mean I would have to. I'd like to be able to do that."

A tribute to the misrepresented Wolfe

Special to The Observer

Look Homeward: A Life of Thomas Wolfe" (Little, Brown and Company, February 4, 1987, $24.95) is the first comprehensive biography of one of the most influential and most misunderstood writers in our country's literary history. Pulitzer Prize-winning biographer David Herbert Donald ("Charles Sumner and the Coming of the Civil War"), the only person to whom all of Wolfe's diaries, correspondence, manuscripts, and notes have been available, spent seven years researching the complete Wolfe archives. Donald gives us a compassionate biography of the enigmatic writer whose life was the basis of his art and shows that Wolfe was a careful and self-conscious literary craftsman.

Contrary to the widely held view of Wolfe as an artless writer who occasionally achieved some remarkable effects by pouring out millions of words that had to be selected, shaped, and formed into something resembling novels by his editors, Donald demonstrates that Wolfe, the best-educated American novelist of his generation, was one of the earliest literary modernists. Much influenced by the novels of James Joyce and the techniques of the cinema, he was an experimental writer constantly trying out new forms and styles in his fiction. Like Ernest Hemingway, D.H. Lawrence, and Henry Miller, he drew heavily upon his own experiences in fashioning his novels. Donald, who has interviewed scores of Wolfe's friends, associates, and enemies, analyzes the mixture of autobiography and fiction that makes up Wolfe's novels. Here, for the first time, is an unvarnished account of the squalid and loveless household in which Wolfe lived as a child. Here, too, is the full story, told with complete candor and explicitness, of Wolfe's turbulent affair with Aline Bernstein, one of the notable love stories in literary history.

One of the most controversial aspects of "Look Homeward" involves Donald's exploration of the relationship between Wolfe and Maxwell E. Perkins, his celebrated editor at Charles Scribner's Sons. Attempting to make Wolfe's fiction more conventional and more salable, Perkins became deeply involved in shaping his books. With scrupulous fairness to both Wolfe and Perkins, "Look Homeward" shows how the writer came to exercise such control over the author's creative processes that Wolfe, with indescribable anguish, felt forced to assert his independence by breaking from Perkins, whom he loved and respected more than any other man.

"Look Homeward" also explores questions regarding the shaping and editing of Wolfe's posthumous novels, "The Web and the Rock" and "You Can't Go Home Again". There has been considerable controversy over the role played by Edward C. Aswell of Harper's, Wolfe's last editor, with some scholars even suggesting that these novels were the work of the editor, and not of Wolfe himself. In the final chapter of "Look Homeward", Donald addresses the questions about the authorship and authenticity of these novels: "I find it absurd to speak of Aswell as the 'author' of Wolfe's posthumous novels....Except for the introductory passages linking the 'books' in these novels and for very occasional transitional sentences or paragraphs, Thomas Wolfe wrote these novels. They are not spurious or forged, and they are not the work of Edward C. Aswell."

However, Donald argues, "It is equally misleading to speak of Aswell's work on Wolfe's posthumous novels as simply that of an editor....Greatly exceeding the professional responsibility of an editor, Aswell took impermissible liberties with Wolfe's manuscript, and his interference seriously eroded the integrity of Wolfe's text. Far from deserving commendation, Aswell's editorial interference was, both from the standpoint of literature and of ethics, unacceptable."

In "Look Homeward" Donald untangles the complexities and contradictions of Thomas Wolfe's life and work, and brings a rare depth of understanding and appreciation to his subject.

Tracing the struggles of a young genius against the restraints of convention and propriety, Look Homeward is a moving account of the brief, turbulent life of a major American writer. At the same time it is a perceptive study of how American culture has shaped and limited its creative artists.

The Observer Accent department announces the following promotions to the position of copy editor: Tom Beatty, a junior from Farmington, Conn.; Tracie Fetters, a junior from Ashtabula, Ohio; and Cindy Petrites, a freshman from Houston.

Assuming the position of assistant features editor last semester was Mary Reynolds, a senior from Edina, Minn.

Dane Galden, a junior from Columbus, Ohio, became the Scene assistant editor.

his junior point guard the rest of the season.

"I'm very concerned about the way he played last night," said Phelps. "I've never seen him throw up two air balls before."

"It's going to be interesting to see if I need to give him more rest in games so he can finish stronger."

As a result, Scott Hicks could be seeing more time at the point-guard spot, while Jamere Jackson and Sean Conner will fill in at the second guard.

The continued emergence of Gary Voce will be another thing to watch tonight. Phelps noted that his center's rebounding and post defense were most needed by the team, and that his improved scoring, such as Tuesday night's 14-point showing, is a bonus for the team. That could also go for the ACC crowds, who have taken a liking to Voce's performance.

Cup

of the America's Cup with a burp and a, "So What?", now he's likely to burp, salute the flag, and yell, "Maim those Aussies."

The Australians meanwhile, along with the New Zealanders (who lost to the USA last week in the semifinals), have done little to spare the jingoism. Why, the New Zealanders even broke the tradition of the semi-final loser offering assistance to the Cup challenger. Connor and his Hahvad accent were too much for even the Kiwis.

All of this means we're going to be seeing and hearing a ship load of America's Cup stories in our papers and on our television over the next week. And with this will come the greatest number of patriotic statements over a minor sports event since the US and USSR luge teams met in the Olympics.

Take this comment from one member of the Australian syndicate, for instance: "These races are like street fights."

Now, I've seen a few street fights and usually the knots involved aren't the kind that drive sails but rather the kind that wind up on someone's head. Sure, they christen boats by breaking a bottle on the side, but in a street fight they break them over a slow-reacting person's cranium.

All in all, a street fight would be a lot more interesting.

College halftime shows require much more than a Knight

This time down the court, we're going to try and explain something that not too many people understand - the 3-minute, 45-second TV halftime show - because even when you styles and play-me-or-I'll-transfer athletes?

The answer, I decide, is yes. Because Bobby Knight, who never played a zone, always wore nothing but a sports-give it the best you can and work really hard, not a lot of folks realize just what's all involved.

What most of my cameo glimpses into the behind-the-scenes world of college hoops require are two days of work - including travel time, from concourse to concourse. But because of space limitations, I've selected one of the few that was done in a day - when I recently took my annual pilgrimage to Bloomington to spend a four-hour time block during a halftime show on Coach Bobby Knight.

OK. The alarm clock jumped me off the living-room floor at 6:15 a.m., and in my stupor I realize that I haven't done an Indiana game in two years, but also that nothing really changes.

This, I decide, is what I want to hit upon in my show - that in Coach Knight's case, change only means that the racetrack sports jacket has become a rotating Adidas pullover red or white sweater. And, that he's left the four powerful Midwest states from which he's always recruited - Illinois, Indiana, Ohio and Michigan - and opened up the whole country, including JUCO blue-chippers. And yes, that he is now playing a zone - which is even obvious to Billy P. and Dick V.

What Coach Knight has shown, I think, is that greatness in any performance is adjusting to change, while maintaining an image of non-negotiability. He's given us the answer to that age-old saloon argument: Would a Vince Lombardi, Red Auerbach, John Wooden or Woody Hayes, be successful in today's sports environment of over-exposure, agents, wild media jacket, and never recruited outside the above mentioned four states - he is adjusting in his own, unique, non-negotiable way.

By the time I'd thought this all out, I'd climbed into a seven o'clock commuter out of Milwaukee for Indianapolis - a plane that was made for the Hunchback of Notre Dame, because once you get on one, you can't straighten up. And the guy who took my ticket at the counter was the same guy who loaded my baggage on the plane, and then ended up tugging on his Eddie Rickenbacker leather hat with goggles as the pilot. I landed at 10:24 a.m. and was picked up by Murray Bartow, a graduate assistant at Indiana and son of Gene Bartow, the head coach at UAB, for a 55-mile trip to visit the residence of the round ball guru.

Upon arriving in Bloomington, I knelt and kissed his ring - and caught the end of practice, which ended at noon because it was the Christmas holiday. Believe me, it was a real physical workout, no nonsense, with Coach Knight always keeping the court spread and working screens in their motion offense. On D, they worked on cutting off the passing lanes, and on a concentrated, maximum effort on man-to-man.

We then went for a paper-napkin lunch, at a place the health department hasn't found yet, accompanied by his son Tim, who graduated from Stanford and represents Coach Knight in all businesses outside of the university.

Like I said, the last time the floor was swept in that place must have been when Victor Mautre starred in "One Million

Indiana basketball coach Bobby Knight took time out to speak with NBC announcer Al McGuire for a halftime special recently, and

B.C.," but the food was good, and the conversation - believe it or not - was mainly on fishing and hunting.

After that, we went back and did a 35-40 minute, in-depth conversation on basketball and what this giant would do if basketball ended tomorrow - and how he'd want to be remembered. This show will be shown February 21 when Iowa visits Indiana, and I think you'll find his answers interesting ... and, in some cases, surprising.

There are a few things I will say: When we talked that half-hour plus before the two-angle cameras, Coach Knight said the three-point play is suicidal to the game. And, that he has certain doubts and reservations about the way the NCAA and the presidents of the universities are handling things.

Also, he doesn't care who refs the games, and doesn't know who the refs are until he gets on the court - which is rare - and feels the three-second lane should be widened.

Coach Knight also said he felt that his next career would not have to be competitive, and in addition, touched a little on the sweaters, the zones, the shoe contracts, athletes receiving some money and the shooting ability of Steve Alford - one of the greatest lights-out shooters in the business.

Believe me guys, I don't think this is one Cage Brief you'll want to miss.

Then, it was back to the airport, with Tim chauffeuring, for my return flight to where beer is Made the American Way. I got back to my home at 11 o'clock that night - having put in about 17 hours for a 3-minute, 45-second show. A piece of cake, huh?

There are a couple of last points I'd like to make.

One is that, if Coach Knight has a human fault, it's that if he likes you, he'll do anything for you. What he did for me was a hell of a favor at a busy time, and you'd better believe this former sideline-pacer appreciates it.

Second, make no mistake. There is no doubt, when this man walks onto a basketball court, everyone's eyes are on him. The visiting coach, the refs, the media, the fans - they seem to know by ESP that the man is coming out.

I doubt that he's ever played to a less than SRO house in the Big Ten in the last 10 years, and his intensity and cold stare guarantee the Nielson Rating for any Indiana game.

Coach Knight is one of those rare people who takes the air out of the room, who makes the heart pound, makes it tough to breathe. Everybody knows he's there, even the opposing team, who pretends like it doesn't, but it knows: Here comes the man. He is, today, the only one who has that kind of awareness to everybody in the place. Even the ushers.

What I'm trying to show is that Bobby Knight - as reflected by the reactions of his peers - is so aware. And it's not just coincidence that awareness and greatness take up the same number of letters on the written page.

Farley, PE are favored as IH hoop wears on

By THERESA KELLY
Sports Writer

It looks like Farley A and Pasquerilla East are the teams to beat in women's interhall basketball this year, but forfeits and schedule changes make it difficult to pick a clear winner.

Farley A is 4-0, having beaten Lyons and Breen-Phillips 'A' in early games, and also scoring victories by forfeit over Farley B and Breen-Phillips B.

Pasquerilla East is also undefeated at 4-0, earning its spotless record by beating a tough Lewis A team early in the season and topping Lyons, 45-32, last Sunday. It also has two forfeit wins. Both teams hope to remain strong throughout the nine-game season, with a showdown between the two scheduled for Feb. 23.

The 10-team women's field is heading into the second half of the round-robin schedule. The top four teams will play in an elimination tournament in early March.

Last year's champion, the Lewis A team, is off to a 2-2 start this year, including Sunday's loss to the Breen-Phillips A team. Lewis was down by 12 at the half, but managed to fight back in the fourth quarter and take a one-point lead, but B-P held on to win by three.

"We got off to a slow start," said Teresa Buliavac, the Lewis captain. "We are making adjustments and working with some new people. We ought to do well in the rest of our games."

Breen-Phillips A is led by Vicki Buth and Ann Curoe.

"We are a good team, but we haven't played a whole game well," said captain Carol Cavaliere, whose team starts three freshmen. Farley A is the only team to have beaten Cavaliere's young squad.

Also on Sunday, Lewis B scored its first win, beating Breen-Phillips B, 30-17, behind the sharp shooting of Heather Koch (16 points) and the aggressive play of Lynn Arnold.

"We're really a young team," said Lewis B captain

Sheila Horox, who also starts three freshmen. "The team is looking better every time we play. We just need time to learn to work as a team."

A summary of Sunday's action shows Pasquerilla East beating Lyons, 45-32, Lewis B over B-P B, 30-17, Lewis A lost to B-P A by three, and Farley B forfeited to Farley A. The game between Badin and Walsh was rescheduled for Feb. 5.

The next round of games will be Sunday, with Walsh (1-1) playing P.E. (4-0), Farley A (4-0) taking on Lewis B (1-2), Farley B (0-4) against Lyons (2-2), Lewis A (2-2) meeting B-P B (1-2) and Badin (0-3) playing B-P A (3-1).

Swim teams face tough weekend

By KELLY TOWNSEND Sports Writer

Tomorrow the Notre Dame men's and women's swim teams take to the road. The Irish travel to Cleveland State for a night meet and then journey to St. Bonaventure for a meet on Saturday. These two dual meets should prove to be challenges for Notre Dame.

Last year, the Irish men's team lost both meets, and the opposition set most of the pool records at Rolfs Aquatic Center. The women fared much better last year, and are seeking to control the series.

Coach Tim Welsh is, to say the least, excited about both meets.

"This will be chance to show how well our program is working," said Welsh. "This is our chance to attain one of our season goals - beating teams that beat us last year. To return the favor would be incredibly exciting."

While Cleveland State will have a slight advantage, the meet for the men should be a neck-and-neck race from start to finish. For the women, the advantage will go to Notre Dame. With 12 monogram-winners returning from last year, the women will have more control over their meet.

"To win the meet, the men will need time drops in the freestyle events and significant drops in the 200-yard fly, 200-yard breaststroke and 200-yard IM," said Welsh. "Those three events are critical. We will pick up or lose needed points."

After racing against the Vikings, the Irish travel to St. Bonaventure for another attempt at revenge. This time, however, the roles will be slightly reversed. The women will be faced with the same situation the men are in against Cleveland State.

"The women's meet will be like the men's at Cleveland," said Welsh. "The match-ups will be good, but we can win it."

The women will have to concentrate more having had the last meet on Friday and the first on Saturday."

The men's team will be facing one of the strongest Catholic teams in the nation. Another point for St. Bonaventure is its strength in Notre Dame's main events.

"As with us, St. Bonaventure's strength lies in the freestyle sprints," said Welsh. "We're looking to come closer to them than we did last year. Winning will require a couple miracle swims."

Coach Welsh believes this weekend is the king of back-to-back meets for the Irish.

"I think we'll have an excellent weekend," said Welsh. "We have a chance to narrow the gap against St. Bonaventure and set the record straight with Cleveland."

Next week the Irish will return home for their final home meet. The women will face Ball State while the men will challenge Kalamazoo.

Flyers

comeback with a few smooth moves past the Flyer defense, hitting a left-handed runner and an 18-foot jumper to close the gap to 15-14.

Botham then came alive with a steal, two short jumpers and a three-point play to shock Dayton and put the Irish ahead, 21-17. The Flyers continued to force Notre Dame turnovers and play a patient half-court offense to close the gap as the first half ended with the score tied, 27-27.

The Irish opened the second half with a tough packed-in defense of their own, and Gavin's coast-to-coast lay-up a la Magic Johnson gave the Irish a 39-34 lead with 13:34 remaining.

"Mary Gavin did a great job for us," said DiStanislao. "She does what we need her to do. She gets better and better every game. A 4-11 team is hardly a showcase for a great point guard, but she is."

Dayton's first-year head coach Sue Ramsey called a timeout to regroup her squad and the Flyers came out of the huddle strong. A seven-point Irish lead quickly dwindled and became a one-point deficit as Dayton's Michelle Kruty (11 points) hit a solo foul shot with 8:30 on the clock. Trailing 45-44, the Irish staged a comeback of their own.

But Toney committed a back-court foul with just 20 seconds remaining and Frericks, a .514 shooter from the charity stripe, hit the two decisive free throws for a Dayton victory. The Irish had one last chance with five ticks on the clock and the ball out-of-bounds under their own hoop. The in-bounds pass went to Toney in the corner who, finding no one else open, threw up the potential game-winner which fell short.

Elway not happy with 2nd; Pro Bowl is no consolation

Associated Press

HONOLULU - John Elway has had a chance to reflect on that empty feeling that goes with being a Super Bowl loser.

"It's like we were never even there," the Denver Broncos quarterback said.

And "It's like the Giants are the only football team there is."

Still, Elway also learned that even after the 39-20 loss to New York in Pasadena, Calif., last Sunday, the world went on spinning.

"I was happy to see that the sun still came up Monday morning," Elway said with a smile.

"I rehashed the game afterward, thought of the things I could've done differently, but you do that with every game."

"It was such a buildup for a game," said Elway, one of five Denver players in Hawaii for Sunday's Pro Bowl.

"We would like to have won, of course, but you never know what to expect."

"It was disappointing for us and for our fans back in Denver, but we still had a great season, and we'll have the chance to make it back to the Super Bowl again."

"If we improve in some areas, we can play with anybody," he said.

Elway, blossoming in his fourth pro season, actually played very well in the Super Bowl.

He wound up with 22 completions in 37 attempts for 304 yards, with one interception. He threw for one touchdown and ran for another.

But although he passed the Broncos down the field on four of their first five possessions, they came away with just 10 points.

Elway said he'd like to finish the season on a winning note, with an AFC victory over the NFC in Sunday's all-star game.

But then he frowned and added, "It's not much of a consolation."

Denver Broncos quarterback says he finds no consolation in his team's second-place finish in the NFL this season. Elway will appear in the

Irish fall to Dayton; Buzzer shot falls short

By BRIAN O'GARA
Sports Writer

The stage was set for the Notre Dame women's basketball team to finally pick up that elusive clutch win, the kind that you pull out in the final minutes.

Too many times this season the Irish have been on the losing side of these games. Last night it happened again, as Dayton came back from a seven-point deficit and defeated the Notre Dame, 55-54.

The two teams traded the lead several times throughout the evening until the Irish made a run midway through the second half to go ahead, 43-36. Dayton called a timeout to regroup and came back on fire, tying the game, 44-44. The teams battled on the boards until Notre Dame surged ahead, 54-51, with 2:20 remaining when sophomore Diondra Toney hit two free throws.

Two minutes later, with only 20 seconds on the clock, Dayton freshman Cindy Frericks went to the foul line and coolly sank two shots, giving the Lady Flyers the victory and dropping the Irish record to 4-12.

"We had the lead and the ball with two minutes left," said a Irish head coach Mary DiStanislaio. "We traveled twice and fouled and that was it. That was the story at the end."

The story at the beginning was a tough Dayton defense, forcing the Irish to turn the ball over 11 times in the first half. The Flyers' full-court defense and quick two-three zone kept the Irish guards from getting the ball inside to leading scorers Heidi Bunek and Sandy Botham, giving Dayton a 13-8 lead eight minutes into the contest. Notre Dame floor-leader Mary Gavin sparked an Irish

Series with independents resumes as Warriors try to break ND jinx

By PETE GEGEN
Assistant Sports Editor

The third installment of the six-part mini-series "Notre Dame vs. the Independents" takes place tonight at 7:30 as 11-6 Marquette visits the ACC.

The Warriors are coming off a 91-89 overtime loss to Miami (Fla.). First-year head coach Bob Dukiet tried to use a two-three zone defense in that game to contain the Hurricanes' big-man, Tito Horford.

"Marquette will mix their defenses," said Irish head coach Digger Phelps. "They'll press at half court, they'll play a tight man-to-man and they'll play a zone. Marquette played a straight two-three zone to pack it in so (Horford) couldn't get the ball. And that's one of the things we can expect from Marquette if Royal turns on."

Defense is also one of the strengths for the Irish, who are ranked seventh in NCAA team-defense with a 59.1 points-allowed average.

On offense, Marquette features a strong frontcourt. Forward David Boone leads the team with 17 points and 8.7 rebounds per game, and junior college transfer Mike Flory adds 12.8 points and 4.9 rebounds a game.

Starting at center for Marquette is Tom Copa who, besides contributing 4.6 rebounds a game, is also known for his strong desire to beat Notre Dame. His frustrations must be mounting, as the Irish have won the last six games these schools have played.

The backcourt features junior guard Michael Sims, who is averaging 15.9 points a game. The other guard spot is a question mark for Marquette, as Dukiet currently has freshman Tony Smith starting and Pat Foley and Kevin Johnson coming off the bench.

"(Dukiet) can go seven or eight people deep and do things," said Phelps. "You just can't take them lightly."

There is some concern in the Irish camp concerning the condition of David Rivers. Phelps said Rivers has been "playing tired" and as a result might change his strategy on using

David Rivers (4) and the Irish look to continue their recent dominance over Marquette as the two teams meet tonight at the ACC. Pete Gegen previews the match-up in his story above.

Please blow away, Stars and Stripes, forever

Marty Burns

Assistant Sports Editor

Ah, the once-idle rich. No longer content to sit back and watch the proletariat hog the sports pages with such nonsense as football and roller derby, they have invented the America's Cup.

You remember the America's Cup. That's the thing that isn't even in America and that no one in America really cares about. In fact, it's really just a Cup.

Well, this thing's not even the Stanley Cup, and still almost no one cares about it. No one, that is, except Dennis Connor, the skipper of Stars and Stripes, the 12-meter American yacht that will try to bring the Cup back to the USA. He, and a great deal of Martha's Vineyard, will wake up Saturday tingling with anticipation for the start of the best-of-seven series against Australia half-way across the globe in the Indian Ocean.

This Cup business has never been a big deal in the past. For years teams of back-slapping, country-club types have been donning topsiders and playing in their yachts without as much as a jealous glance from the working stiffs. This suited the rich just fine, of course, at least while Ted Turner and his boat Courageous were keeping the Cup in its permanent place in some snooty US yacht club.

Then one day four years ago, egads, Connor and his US team lost the Cup for the first time in the 100-plus years of its history. Private beaches along the Eastern seaboard became a scene of bedlam as thousands choked on caviar or attempted to slash their wrists with their Visa Gold cards.

Perhaps they were so angry, not so much because they had lost the Cup, but because they had lost to Australia. There's a real fierce competitor, complete with cuddly Koala bears and bouncy kangaroos. Americans have Old Uncle Sam, Australians have Crocodile Dundee.

Whatever the case, our elite class got real mad, and so they did what came naturally - they decided to make a syndicate. This syndicate put together the Stars and Stripes and rehired Connor, a guy so loaded he could afford to practice racing yachts for the past 13 years.

Unfortunately, however, they didn't stop there. This time, they decided to enlist the interest of the common man. So they called up all their friends who owned newspapers and had them paint the whole issue in colors to which the common man can relate - like red, white, and blue.

This was a pretty shrewd move, for whereas before the common guy would have responded to a television report
