American warships reportedly close to Lebanese territory

Associated Press

BEIRUT, Lebanon - U.S. warships were reported within 50 miles of Lebanon on Tuesday, and official sources in Cyprus said civilian aircraft flying near the ships were ordered by radio to veer off.

The warships of the 6th Fleet were in international waters.

The sources in Cyprus, which lies 100 miles northwest of Beirut, spoke on condition of anonymity.

The United States marshaled a strong battle group in the eastern Mediterranean over the past week in response to rising tensions in the Middle East and following a spate of kidnappings of foreigners in Lebanon.

The kidnapers, and Moslem leaders in Lebanon, warned that any military action by the United States would mean death for the captives.

Pentagon sources stressed in Washington on Tuesday that the U.S. battle groups had received no orders to prepare for any military operation.

The sources, who demanded anonymity, said the carriers Kennedy and Nimitz and a Mediterranean Amphibious Ready Group of roughly 1,900

Marines were steaming on a "routine patrol pattern" in the southeastern Mediterranean, south of Cyprus and relatively close to Lebanon.

The force consists of about 22 warships, and 1,900 more Marines were moved out of Spain on Tuesday to join the battle fleet.

Also Tuesday, Iran's Foreign Ministry denied reports that Anglican Church hostage negotiator Terry Waite was held by Iranian Revolutionary Guards in Lebanon.

The fate of Waite, 47, remained a mystery. The 6-foot-7 emissary has not been seen since he left his hotel in Moslem west Beirut on Jan. 20, apparently for a meeting with the Shiite Moslem kidnapers of two Americans held since 1985.

Lebanon's justice minister, Nabih Berri, said in Damascus, Syria, on Monday that Waite had been "arrested" by the kidnapers. He did not elaborate.

Unconfirmed reports last week said Waite was spotted in Lebanon's Bekaa Valley, a Shiite stronghold and base for about 400 Iranian Revolution-

'Blood War' and special advertising discussed by HPC

By REGIS COCCIA
Assistant News Editor

"The Blood War" and advertising in an issue of The Observer commemorating the retirement of University President Father Theodore Hesburgh were among the topics discussed at Tuesday night's Hall Presidents' Council meeting.

Richard Gund, an Alumni Hall sophomore, announced to the Council that a pizza party will be given for "people who participated in the winning dorm's 'Blood War.' "

According to Gund, "The Blood War" was initiated by Alumni and Stanford halls in response to a request by the St. Joseph County Blood Bank.

"Publicity (for 'The Blood War') will be handled by Alumni and Stanford in the dining halls," Gund said.

He said the dorm with the most pints of blood donated, counted as a percentage of the total number of dorm residents, will win a pizza-and-beverage party at Barnaby's.

The Council also heard from Joe Murphy, editor-in-chief of The Observer, regarding a special issue marking the end of Father Hesburgh's presidency. Murphy asked the hall presidents for advertising support to defray the cost of the special issue.

"We're going to have an issue sent to all 78,000 alumni," Murphy said. "We tried to get the lowest rates possible. Production costs alone are over 9,000 dollars. The total cost of the issue is going to be over 22,000 dollars," said Murphy.

"We'd like to get ads from each dorm, congratulatory ads for Father Hesburgh," said Jack Lee, advertising sales representative for The Observer. "We'd like to get it set by next week because the ad deadline is Feb. 23," Lee said.

In other business, HPC Co-Chairman Joanie Cahill announced the appointment of Laurie Hollenbeck as HPC Executive Coordinator.

Stanford Hall sophomore Andy Shannon spoke to the Council regarding an arm wrestling tournament sponsored by Stanford. "It's been planned for a long time, but just got underway this week," Shannon said.

According to the Shannon, money raised from the tournament, the first round of which

Freshmen no longer housed in lounges

By GREG LUCAS
Staff Reporter

Freshmen no longer are housed in study lounges, said Evelyn Reinebold, director of student residences.

Eighty-four freshmen were originally assigned temporary residences in Grace, Flanner and Sorin study lounges at the beginning of the year because of limited dormitory space.

As residences became available during the year, however, freshmen were gradually moved out, and the last ones were integrated into dorms at the beginning of the second semester, she said.

Reinebold, who has been at the University for 15 years, said this is both the largest number of freshman who have had to take temporary residences and the longest time students have been unable to get permanent residences that she can remember.

"I know that there were fewer people moving off campus and fewer vacancies for freshmen last year," said Reinebold.

She said she did not feel there would be such an extensive problem next year, but indicated there is always a certain amount of ambiguity. "I don't know how many openings we will have for freshmen next year," Reinebold said.

Howard Hall's conversion to a woman's dorm, however, will probably cause some overflow, she added.

Although in the past both male and female freshmen have been placed in temporary quarters, this year all were male, she said.

Reinebold said some freshmen

Law enforcement officials and legislators praised the idea, but predicted heavy lobbying against it by vendors of alcoholic beverages. Under the proposed legislation, everyone ordering a drink at a bar would have to show his driver's license. Those holding red licenses would be refused service, by law. - Associated Press

Impoverished Americans should not be patronized

"Ninety percent of the young people of the ghetto never come in conflict with the law . . . Despite the overwhelming odds, the majority of people in the ghetto go on living, go on hoping, go on striving. This is the miracle."

Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. wrote these words concerning poverty in America more than 20 years ago. Poverty is about as timeless as the sun, the moon and the British Crown. King's statement, then, is still applicable to today's society.

Each time I visit a large city, I try to notice little quirks of human nature that I wouldn't normally have the opportunity to see. (Being a "Bender," it's always fun when I have the chance to expand my mind by really seeing the world.) On a recent trip to Chicago, I noticed two opposite ends of the sociological spectrum. The beggars, representing blatant poverty, first caught my eye, and then the Yuppies appeared on the scene during rush hour.

The appearance of the beggars stood in direct contrast to that of the industrious Yuppies, who looked like they had just pranced off the pages of Vogue, Cosmopolitan and Gentleman's Quarterly. These Young Urban Professionals had success written all over their faces.

But it was the beggars on the street asking for money who really touched my heart. Anyone's first reaction to such a sight might have been one of horror, pity or despair (for the poverty-stricken person and for modern American society in general). These were my first reactions as well.

But, either I'm a tremendous fan of Charles Dickens (who admired the values, ethics and the determination of Victorian society's destitute), or I'm simply a hopeless romantic. The heroic spirit of the impoverished really inspired me. They reflect courageousness, willingness, and true independence. Even the most cynical among us, must admire these qualities.

A friend of mine commented that the poor didn't need to take refuge in the streets because there were shelters for them to visit in times of trouble. This is true, and in many instances shelters are necessary for people to take refuge. These shelters also help people to make a new start, or they offer opportunities the poor would not have otherwise.

Shelters do not necessarily take away independence from people, but the situation is "different" for the souls who decide to rough it out on their own. This "roughing-it" attitude represents a uniquely American theme. The United States is renowned for its frontier-spirit, and the independent poor represent a modern frontier-mentality in this country.

There are numerous opportunities for many students in the Notre Dame Saint Mary's Community to help relieve the plight of the poor. Unfortunately, it is also very easy to patronize this segment of society.

What some people need to realize is what Dickens realized over 100 years ago. Many of the impoverished may be unable to implement direct change in their present economic situations, but that does not mean the poor are not as moral and independent as anyone else on these two campuses.

At any rate, the beggars, who for instance played their guitars and saxophones on the street-corners for any pittance that was thrown into their instrument cases, did honest justice to their art. Like their music, the beggars should be recognized, not patronized, for the inspiring contributions which they make.

Reagan's chief of communications adds name to list of resignations

Associated Press

WASHINGTON - Patrick Buchanan, President Reagan's combative chief of communications, added his name Tuesday to a growing list of administration resignations, saying he could work for conservative causes more effectively outside the White House.

Buchanan, who announced last month that he would not run for president, has seemed frustrated in his two-year campaign to get the administration to follow a hardline conservative script.

Announcing the resignation, presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said Buchanan "feels he can better influence the issues and politics of 1988 and the direction of the conservative movement and Republican Party by speaking and writing from a vantage point outside the White House."

He will leave the $77,400-a-year job March 1, joining an exodus of top administration officials departing with two years left in the administration.

Fitzwater said the turnover was healthy. "You get a lot of new blood in ... It's good to get new energies in for the last drive."

Some people delayed their departure, Fitzwater said, "because of the Iranian situation and didn't want to leave while there was difficulty." He was referring to the controversy over the secret sale of arms to Iran and the diversion of profits to Nicaraguan rebels.

That affair produced a shakeup in Reagan's National Security Council staff and cost the president his national security adviser, John Poindexter (replaced by Frank Carlucci) and a top aide on the NSC, Oliver North.

In addition, Reagan has lost his longtime spokesman, Larry Speakes and his deputy, Peter Roussel; CIA director William Casey; political adviser Mitchell Daniels; Cabinet secretary Alfred Kingon; drug-abuse adviser Carlton Turner; and the president's doctor, T. Burton Smith.

Fitzwater also acknowledged there seems to be "kind of open speculation around town" that Richard Perle, a top administration policy-maker in arms control, is poised to resign as an assistant secretary of defense.

He said that Donald Regan would not resign as Reagan's chief of staff, as has been urged by members of Congress and others in the wake of the Iran-Contra scandal.

Catholic elected to head group

Special to the Observer

History professor Jay Dolan, director of the Charles and Margaret Hall Cushwa Center for the Study of American Catholicism at Notre Dame, has been elected president of the American Society of Church History.

Most members of the American Society of Church History are professional teachers, writers, and archivists from universities, colleges and seminaries.

Professor Dolan is the second Catholic president in the 100-year history of the organization, whose presidents are elected annually. The first was Msgr. John Tracy Ellis, elected in 1969.

Dolan, who joined Notre Dame's faculty in 1971, is a native of Bridgeport, Conn.

He graduated from St. John's Seminary in Boston in 1958, obtained his S.T.L. degree from the Gregorian University in Rome in 1962 and his doctoral degree from the University of Chicago in 1970.

He taught theology for one year at the University of San Francisco before coming to Notre Dame.

His publications include dozens of articles and reviews in scholarly journals and three books, "The Immigrant Church: New York's Irish and German Catholics, 1815-1865", "Catholic Revivalism: The American Experience 1830-1900"; and "The American Catholic Experience: A History From Colonial Times to the Present."

Vote in Philippines shows little support for Communists

Associated Press

MANILA, Philippines - The Philippine government said Tuesday the overwhelming voter approval of the new constitution shows Communist insurgents have little popular support, and offered to reopen peace talks with the rebels.

Juan Ponce Enrile, the former defense minister and President Corazon Aquino's main right-wing opponent, conceded defeat in the campaign against the charter along with several leftist groups.

Aquino fired Enrile from the Cabinet in November. The new constitution legitimizes her revolutionary rule, which began nearly a year ago, and she contends it will help stabilize a government beset by challenges from both the left and right.

Defense Minister Rafael Ileto said in a statement: "This shows repudiation of the Communist claim that (the Communist Party) has the support of the people. It is clear our position is gaining ground."

Official returns from Monday's referendum were not expected for days. An unofficial tally of just over half the 86,918 precincts by the private monitoring agency National Movement for Free Elections, known as NAMFREL, showed the charter with 78.51 percent of the vote.

NAMFREL said 9,754,012 voted for the constitution and 2,669,231 against it.

In Washington, State Department spokesman Charles Redman called the results "an impressive institutional triumph for a resurgent Philippine democracy and a remarkable personal victory for President Aquino in her steadfast efforts to restore stability and prosperity to her country."

The only one of the country's 13 regions in which the constitution was behind was Cagayan Valley of north-eastern Luzon, which includes Enrile's home province. The margin was 53 percent to 47.

Aquino and her constitution were winning 52 percent to 48 in the Ilocos region of northwestern Luzon. That includes the Ilocos Norte home province of former President Marcos, who fled the country last Feb. 26 in the face of the civilian-military uprising which brought Aquino to power.

"The trend is already decisive," said Edgardo Angara, chairman of NAMFREL. He predicted a final affirmative vote of at least 75 percent.

A cease-fire with the Communist insurgents expires in four days. Defense Minister Ileto said the referendum victory gives Aquino a clear popular mandate and the upper hand in peace talks.

Negotiators for the estimated 23,500 insurgents withdrew from the talks last week, accusing the government of "insincerity" and the military of abuses.

Ileto said: "Mrs. Aquino now has the support of the military and the other side will have to be very careful because they have seen the reaction of the people."

"It is clear that people ...

dislike the Communists because of what they demonstrated during the cease-fire," he said in reference to alleged rebel violations.

Aquino has not commented on the collapse of the talks, but Ileto and the president's spokesman, Teodoro Benigno, said Tuesday her government is ready to resume negotiations.

Reporter for Wall Street Journal arrested by Iranians as 'Zionist spy'

Associated Press

NICOSIA, Cyprus - Iran confirmed Tuesday that it arrested American reporter Gerald Seib as a "spy of the Zionist regime" who entered the country in the guise of a journalist.

Seib, a 30-year-old correspondent for the Wall Street Journal, went to Iran with 56 other foreign correspondents by invitation from the fundamentalist Shiite Moslem regime. He was arrested Saturday and not allowed to leave with the other journalists.

The Tehran radio broadcast was Iran's first official confirmation that Seib was under arrest. It also said the United States had asked for his release, but did not say when or how the request was made and gave no details.

Iran invited Seib and the other journalists to visit the border battlefield between Iran and Iraq, which have been at war since September 1980.

Its official Islamic Republic News Agency reported during the weekend that a "spy of the Zionist regime" (Israel) had been arrested after entering the country with a false passport disguised as a journalist, but it did not identify him.

State Department spokesman Charles Redman said Monday that the Swiss Embassy, which handles U.S. interests in Iran, protested Seib's detention to Iranian authorities and demanded his release.

"His continued detention is unwarranted," Redman said.

He said Tuesday that the Swiss had been unable to obtain an appointment with Iranian officials to discuss the arrest.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said the Swiss had been denied access to Seib, so "we don't have anyone who has talked to him or seen him."

Seib had sought assistance from the Swiss Embassy after immigration authorities impounded his passport last Thursday while he was preparing to leave the country. He is based in Cairo.

Warren Phillips, chairman of the Wall Street Journal, said Monday: "We believe that a dreadful mistake has been made in the detention, and we fervently hope that the government of Iran realizes it has made a mistake and will set him free."

"He has not been seized by some mysterious elusive band of terrorists, but by the government of Iran, the government that had invited him personally and by name to come there in the company of more than 50 other American and foreign journalists."

"I think it's a good idea because we're trying to coordinate it with the Late Night Olympics," Shannon said. "We want to try to have a campus-wide playoff at the Late Night Olympics Feb. 13."

Andy Barlow, president of St. Ed's Hall, spoke to the Council about SYR fire regulations. Barlow said the HPC Fire Safety Committee "worked up a set of guidelines. (Fire Safety Marshal Jack) Bland approved the guidelines," said Barlow, adding, "If you follow these, you shouldn't have any problems."

Zahm President Andrew Souder announced that a fund has been established in memory of Michael Cogswell, the Zahm Hall Junior who died of head injuries in a Dec. 6 accident. "There's a fund for Michael Cogswell for needy students," Souder said, asking hall presidents to contact him if any dorm wishes to make a donation to the fund. Souder said although Zahm established the fund, it does not determine who receives the financial award.

Morrissey Hall Senior Danny Harrison, chairman of the Notre Dame Charity Ball, said the Notre Dame Saint Mary's Gong Show will be held in Washington Hall March 6 to benefit a charity for needy children. According to Harrison, the Charity Ball, slated

HPC Co-Chairman Sheila O'Connor said "things are going real well" with the Late Night Olympics. "We'd like to have reps from dorms to help set up. If we could get people to work half-hour shifts, that would be great; they'd really appreciate that," O'Connor said.

O'Connor said Buzz Bus ride cards will be available Thursday, with five rides for $1.

Liberace comatose, nears death

Associated Press

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. - Liberace lapsed into a coma Tuesday, and a priest was called to prepare for last rites as family and friends kept a vigil at the pianist's desert home, his lawyer said.

Fans had lighted candles on the curbstone outside the 67-year-old star's home Monday night and remained gathered outside Tuesday.

"His pulse has gotten weaker, and his breathing has gotten more labored," attorney Joel Strote said outside the house during a news briefing Tuesday evening. "He can't swallow."

"He is comatose," Strote said. "... He is very pale but obviously resting very comfortably. He's not in any pain and basically his family is here—his sister, his deceased brother's wife Laura, his sister's daughter and her husband."

Asked how long he might survive, Strote said, "It's hard to estimate, but obviously it's not going to be long."

"It's real touch and go," said his publicist, Denise Collier, by telephone from New York. She said Liberace suffers from anemia, emphysema and heart disease. A spokesman last week denied a published report that he had AIDS.

Strote said there were no plans to hospitalize Liberace because "there is really nothing that could be done for him in a hospital, and it was his desire to rest comfortably at home."

Officials propose mandatory AIDS testing in hospitals

Associated Press

ATLANTA - Federal health officials, worried by an increase in AIDS among heterosexuals, said Tuesday they may recommend that AIDS blood tests be mandatory for all patients admitted to hospitals and even couples applying for marriage licenses.

The test for antibodies to the AIDS virus now is required only for blood donors.

The federal Center for Disease Control has invited 250 public health officials to Atlanta for a public hearing to discuss its proposal, said Dr. Walter Dowdle, the CDC's AIDS director.

Those invited to the hearing Feb. 24-25 include members of civil liberties groups, who may oppose the proposal, Dowdle said.

The CDC will decide after the hearing whether to make a formal proposal about expanded testing for AIDS. Such a recommendation that state hospitals or government agencies make the tests mandatory would not be binding on them, Dowdle said.

"What the meeting is really about is to explore the issues related to using the test to prevent further infection. We're looking for a public forum," Dowdle said in an interview. "We're saying these are the ways the test might be used. Here are the justifications, here are the obstacles."

One obstacle, he said, could be a concern over confidentiality. Hospitals and government agencies would have to ensure that test results remain secret to prevent discrimination against AIDS carriers, he said.

"The person who benefits from the test is the individual and the contacts of that individual," Dowdle said.

Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency, monitored in Nicosia, quoted a Foreign Ministry spokesman in Tehran as denying a U.S. news media report that Waite was in the hands of the Revolutionary Guards in the Bekaa.

The spokesman said the report was "fabricated by im-

The two Americans Waite seeks to free—Terry Anderson, 39, chief Middle East correspondent for The Associated Press, and educator Thomas Sutherland, 55—are held by Islamic Jihad. The group is believed to be made up of Shiite fundamentalists loyal to Iran.

Altogether, 26 foreigners now are missing in Lebanon and presumed kidnapped, including eight Americans.

Big House pay boost takes temporary effect

Associated Press

WASHINGTON Congress allowed itself a $12,100 pay raise, at least temporarily, when the House let pass a mid-night Tuesday deadline for rejecting the hefty pay increase.

Democratic leaders said the House would pass Senate-approved legislation on Wednesday that gives $50 million to the homeless and also disapproves the pay raise.

But House Democratic Whip Tony Coelho of California said it was unclear whether that action would, in fact, repeal the pay raise because the vote would take place after the mid-night Tuesday deadline.

Still Coelho said, "There's still going to be a vote" later to repeal the pay raise. "Don't create the impression that we've voided all opportunity" for a repeal, he told reporters.

House leaders deliberately delayed action on the pay raise by adjourning for the day in early afternoon. When Majority Leader Thomas Foley, D-Wash., motioned for adjournment, opponents quickly called for a vote but lost 221-17.

The maneuver brought a firestorm of protest to an issue that is always a nightmare for lawmakers who want a pay raise but are fearful of the political consequences of voting for one.

Rep. Connie Mack, R-Fla., called the adjournment maneuver a cleverly designed smokescreen. "We've lost credibility" with the back-door move, he said.

"The House leadership acted like a thief in the night, skulking away with its ill-gotten gains," added Rep. Tom Petri, R-Wis.

Consumer advocate Ralph Nader said the maneuver "added treachery to their arrogant and avaricious behavior," and warned that the public outcry would force Congress to relent.

In addition to elevating congressional pay to $89,500 from the current $77,400, substantial raises were in line for 3,000 high-ranking federal officials and judges.

House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas, acknowledged that pay increases for the federal judiciary were a stickier issue because the Constitution forbids rescission of a judge's pay raise.

The Senate turned down the pay raises last week, leaving the politically sensitive issue squarely in the House's corner and raising the hackles of some representatives.

Rep. William Ford, D-Mich., said the senators were trying to "look like heroes and then run for home. That's how I feel about their ungentlemanly conduct."

Responsible drinking must be allowed on campus

It appears that last semester's drunk driving accidents have produced their only possible positive result: students are finally dealing with the problem of drinking and driving. In letters to the editor and quotes scattered throughout articles in recent issues of The Observer, students have recognized that this problem is serious and that fault for the recent incidents does not lie in any one cause but in a number of different causes.

here, there and back

While some students have placed blame solely on the administration's alcohol policy, the majority are willing to acknowledge that drinking and driving is an individual decision and people who go out to drink are going to have to decide not to drive or be willing to pay the consequences. Even students who feel the alcohol policy is the reason for the drinking and driving problem are likely to admit that, alcohol policy or no alcohol policy, people who drink must be responsible for their own actions and have enough common sense not to get behind the wheel of a car.

Although student reaction indicates most of us are willing to accept blame for the drunk driving problem on campus, reaction from members of the administration has not been nearly as positive. Associate Vice President for Residence Life John Goldrick says the alcohol policy is "not at all" to blame for the recent drunk driving problem, according to Friday's January 23 Observer. Fr. David Tyson, vice president for student affairs, notes that "making the alcohol policy tighter or looser is not going to solve the problem...I know the student body is waiting for this big bureaucratic reaction from the University as far as I'm concerned, there isn't any."

'The temptation to drink and drive does exist and it's furthered by a policy that has forced students to go off-campus to drink.'

The administration's reaction to last semester's drunk driving accidents is typical of the University's approach to the issue of drinking on campus. Members of the administration have worn blinders as they churned out policy upon policy, seemingly oblivious to the effect such policy would have on student life. Fr. Tyson's remark that the University has no reaction to the drunk driving problem or the impact of the alcohol policy on the problem is just another example of the administration's "sweep our problems under the rug" approach to student life. A few years ago, the administration was aware enough to recognize an alcohol problem on campus, a problem that has been growing for some time. But rather than get tough with the people who abused alcohol, the administration more or less banned alcohol for the majority of students here. Although consumption of alcohol was allowed in some limited and unrealistic circumstances, the administration basically pushed Notre Dame's alcohol problem into the streets of South Bend.

So now we have this great alcohol policy and there's no more drunk students kicking holes in walls and there's no more guys trying to out drink each other in dorm basements and there's no more groups of girls going from dorm to dorm to drink and there's no more disgusting smell on Saturday and Sunday mornings. But the problems the alcohol policy was designed to correct are still there. Students are still abusing alcohol. The only difference is that now instead of going from dorm to dorm to drink, we're going from bar to bar. Instead of throwing up in our party rooms, we're killing each other. The alcohol policy hasn't worked. If anything it has made matters worse.

Some basic facts of college life seem to escape those who are making the rules around here. College students are going to drink, rules or no rules. Virtually nothing can be done to change that. Since students are going to drink at college, they should at least learn to drink responsibly in a social atmosphere. Therefore, rules should be designed toward teaching and encouraging students to drink responsibly. Permitting drinking in the limited circumstances currently allowed on campus does not encourage students to drink responsibly. It does encourage them to head off-campus where they can drink in large groups, in a party-like atmosphere, and unfortunately, almost completely unsupervised.

The second basic fact of college life overlooked by these rules is that Notre Dame is an island surrounded by, well, nothing. This isn't Indiana University or Michigan State; you can't walk out the door of your dorm, walk down the street a couple of blocks and be at your favorite watering hole. Here, if you're going off-campus, you're almost certainly going to drive. Now that doesn't mean that you're necessarily going to drink and drive; by now we've all realized that is a poor decision to make. But the bottom line is, the temptation to drink and drive does exist and it's furthered by a policy that has, whether the administration is willing to admit it or not, forced students to go off-campus to drink.

The answer is not simply to allow drinking the way it was four or more years ago. The majority of students are willing to acknowledge that there was an alcohol problem on campus and that stricter rules on alcohol were certainly needed. But attempts to solve the alcohol problem have largely failed and have created new and more serious problems. We've tried the old policy and now a new policy is needed. Allowing drinking in a realistic but controlled atmosphere is needed. The administration should encourage moderation and help students learn to drink responsibly. Students who refuse to drink responsibly should be punished, but room should be given for mistakes to be made. Under the current policy, if you make a mistake, you're taking your life into your hands.

I was here almost three years ago when the alcohol policy was announced. After the protests and all the rest of the nonsense were over, many students voiced their concern that the new policy would just force students to go off campus to drink. The administration didn't want to listen, or, if they did, they didn't give much consideration to those concerns. Now there have been three drunk driving accidents here. Still the administration is unwilling to acknowledge that the alcohol policy has become part of the problem.

Student reaction to these accidents has shown that we are learning and we know we're at fault and we're at least willing to try to work hard to correct the problem. We're learning from our mistakes. Too bad the administration can't do the same.

Presidential hopefuls receive encouragement

Dear Editor:

They said it couldn't be done. We knew we wouldn't win. We didn't want to win. But it happened. Before we knew it we were the student body president and vice president. And we were scared, real scared. But we lived through the first few weeks and things got better, much better. On February 17, elections will be held for a new president and vice president. This evening there is a mandatory meeting for prospective candidates.

Now it's time for someone else to come out of the woodwork. Let's face it, if we can do the job, anyone can. All it takes is a little enthusiasm and creativity. We're going to be honest, you can't do everything. We had a lot of ideas that we just couldn't get away with, no matter how hard we tried. There are a lot of things that go on that nobody knows about, and nobody cares. But you have to do them. The key to the whole job is to keep everything in perspective. You can't change the University overnight. Don't try. But you can make a difference. You can do small things. We weren't great. We were good. We did enough to affect more than a few people. Hopefully, we made some people smile.

It's a big job and it takes a lot of time. You'll meet more people than ever before. You can make it fun or you can make it a drag. We had fun and we learned a lot. You can too. We wholeheartedly encourage everyone who is even thinking about running for office to do it. Get off your couch, dust off your crayons, and go out there and give it a shot. Why not? It's free, it's fun, and even if you lose, people at parties will know your name. If you win, well that's your problem.

Just ask WNDU anchorwoman Maureen

features writer

There are some interviews that you just don't want to do. When presented with the rather curious assignment of interviewing television anchor person Maureen McFadden, I was excited. But I had some reservations: the topic of the interview, "the importance of writing" seemed rather dubious, I had never actually seen the WNDU news or McFadden, and from what I had heard about Maureen I was a little bit jealous.

But when I talked to her on the telephone, she sounded pleasant enough, so an appointment was set.

Friday found my car parked in the WNDU guest spot, while I was perhaps a bit less com-modiously parked within the glass covered building. McFadden was already 10 minutes late and thoughts of "Who does she think she is?" percolated slowly to the surface. Thoughts of "What does she look like?" followed close behind.

Maureen, (I call her Maureen now) entered fully 15 minutes late, but she looked nothing like the Jean Harlow vixen-type I had pictured. She didn't even wear a fur coat or evening gown, subtle clues that success and popularity in the South Bend area hadn't gone to her head.

After a somewhat delayed, yet polite introduction, I was welcomed to the world of South Bend broadcasting. We passed the security precautions, went up the bar-guarded staircase and into the rather well-decorated conference room. True to my assignment, I began immediately to question her about the importance of English writing in her field., that of a television anchor woman.

"Writing is very important; it is one of the most important things in this job," she said to my astonishment. She laughed at my apparent shock. "That's one of the common misconceptions about news anchors-- that we just read the news, either off a paper or a teletype machine. Actually, every news anchor writes his own stories, and those are the ones he reads. So if he can't write well, he's going to be the one to look embarrassed."

"The working day for a news anchor is really quite long," she continued. "I, for example, come into the studio at 4 o'clock and go to my newsroom desk. I don't have a 'dressing room' or office or anything. I guess in that way it's a lot like a newspaper room, with all the reporters having their own desks but no privacy," she smiled and continued.

"We get the latest news from the wire services; you know them, AP, UPI. In this area we also get local wire services like NIW, Northwest Indiana Wire, and the Michigan News Wire. We also get feeds from the major networks in Chicago."

I then asked what happens after they get the facts from a wire service or network feed.

"Before we do anything, the producer decides which stories we want to read what stories. He first decides which stories we want to air at all, and then he tries to balance the broadcast out. You know, do that I don't have to read all fluff and my male co-anchor all substance, the hard news. We also trade off reading the first band of stories; I lead one night, he leads the next, or whatever."

She then explained what happens after the stories are divided between the anchors?"

"We work on writing up the copy we are going to read that evening. That's pretty hard sometimes because you have to have a catchy opening on the stories, to 'catch' the public interest. That's one way in which the writing for news is different. You can't use the flowery phrases of creative writing class. You have to present the facts clearly, but you have to make them interesting." I asked her consequently if there was any room for creative writing on her job.

"It's all creative, actually, even though we get the facts. It's just creative in a different way. Making some stories interesting takes a lot of creativity."

A look behind the news

features writer

Picture this: A Notre Dame student, Danny Domer, is giving a tour of our beautiful campus to the Smith family, a group from a retirement home in Muskegon, and a man named Morty. Of course, this tour is being given when the weather is reasonable, so visibility is more than a mile.

As the group walks along the lake behind Lyons hall, Ezekiel continues his tour. "To your left you can see the Knute Rockne memorial and to your right is the ROTC building where all four services of our country are represented."

"What's that?" little Johnny Smith asks as he points past the ROTC building to a small two-story building with about five radar dishes in its backyard, "It looks like Metropex from the Transformers."

"That is WNDU," Ezekiel replies. "Channel 16 here in South Bend. But that is too close to the real world of work for many of us, so we do not know much about it." Well friends, I think it is time we found out about our neighbors behind the golf course.

WNDU originally broadcast from the Center for Social Concerns building behind Breen-Phillips. About five years ago they moved to their current location along U.S. 31. According to Gary Sieber, managing editor of the newsroom, the station serves two purposes. First, they are a commercial broadcasting firm and they must assume all of the responsibilities that accompany that title. Secondly, they must provide a learning environment for students wishing to begin a career in their field. This is their obligation they to Notre Dame.

A man who helps them fulfill this obligation is Harold Kevorkian, vice president of WNDU, and professor of the telecommunications internship program at Notre Dame. A select few of his students actually become interns at WNDU to help them get started in the business. But what about those of us who are interested in working in television but can't get an internship? What advice would we receive?

"Try to get an M.B.A. and make more money," said Mike Collins, co-anchor of the evening news. "Seriously, though, writing is extremely important. If you cannot express yourself in writing, you are of no value to us. So that is one thing you must do well. Once you get started in this business, you have to be willing to work hard for peanuts for a while until you start to move up in the business."

Collins' partner at the anchor desk, Maureen McFadden, backs up his statement. "Once you are committed to this line of work, you have to take any position that is available. Whether it be cameraman or TV truck driver, you have to get started somewhere," she said. "My advice to students would be to do as many things as possible in the communications field while you are at school, such as writing for The Observer or working for WVFI."

"There is no formula for getting a job in telecommunications. It is just a matter of being in the right place at the right time," said Sieber. The validity of this statement is confirmed when you look at the careers of Collins and McFadden.

Mike Collins graduated from Notre Dame in 1967 and after working at WSNB he took a part-time job shooting sports film at WSBT, channel 22. He then accepted a job as a reporter for WNDU. "At the time, WNDU was in really bad shape. After I had been there a while, the station had both of their anchors quit within one week. I was then asked one night if I would like to anchor the news. Of course, I said yes." He has worked at WNDU for 18 years and takes pride in the fact that he has never been late for a broadcast. He also sees himself as a newsman and not a personality. "I am intensely shy among groups. Don't get me wrong, I love meeting people. But you'd never catch me just browsing through the mall. I mean, once in a while I'll go to Senior Bar because I know the students just don't care that much. They'll greet you, say a few words, and move on." Collins is married and has two children, ages 18 and three.

Maureen McFadden was born and raised in South Bend. She went to Saint Joe High School and graduated from Saint Mary's in 1979. During the time near her graduation, she had an offer to work in promotion and relations for a certain company but she wanted to see if anything else was available. She talked to Kevorkian and he found her a job offer at U-93 radio. She accepted it and became the U-93 morning news reporter. There she met Jim Dorgan, morning DJ at the time, who would soon become her husband (Sorry guys.) She worked in radio for two years before deciding that she had had enough of getting up at 2:30 a.m. and made the switch over to television reporting. (Initially, however, she rejected an offer from Collins to be a reporter for WNDU because she was camera shy.) She reported and also hosted Studio 16, a half hour talk show, for a year, and then took over the weekend anchor position. About three years ago, when Kathy Ray, the current co-anchor with Collins, left WNDU, Maureen took over her spot and has been there ever since.

So what does this famous TV pair think about Notre Dame students today? "I think they are fine," McFadden said. "I'm a little bit biased, however, seeing as though all my brothers went there and my dad taught there. Some things students do I don't always agree with but for the most part they are fine."

"Students haven't really changed that much," Collins said. "You could take an Observer from ten years ago, change the names, and put it out as today's edition. The same stuff we argued about as students is the same stuff you guys are arguing about. You also are still living in the same rat-traps I lived in. Hey, I lived in Morissey and Cavanaugh so I know what you guys go through."

So there you have it, the big story on WNDU-TV. So the next time you are on a tour of the campus and see all the radar dishes off in the distance, you can tell little Johnny all about our real world neighbors.

But of course you also have to be good at the basic writing skills, like grammar. That's always the most embarrassing because, usually, you notice your grammar mistakes just as you're reading the piece over the air, and then it's too late. They actually encourage us to read copy out loud before we go on the air. Sometimes just before the camera rolls you can see all of us standing around reading copy to ourselves. It looks pretty funny, I'm sure."

After we prepare the scripts for the evening news show, we tell the photographer or whoever is involved that we want a photograph of Reagan or of someone in town to go next to the head shots, and they either pull it out of our photo files, or they go take it, if it's a local shot."

While striking another question off my list, I asked Maureen about the "on the spot" stories, the fires and such that one always sees live with a reporter standing there. "Those are special cases," she responded with a smile.

"For 'spot news' which is what we call it, the producer will just call up the producer who is physically closest to the incident while it's happening and ask him to meet the camera crew. Most of that broadcast will be live, so what we have to decide as reporters is what we # know?

en McFadden

Center 16 anchors Mike Collins and Maureen McFadden

want to say and what we want the camera man to be shooting of the scene for the program. We can also tell the camera man just how long we want them to be taking any particular shot."

I then inquired what kind of audience does she broadcast to? That is, what is their target educational or economic background? Maureen thought about this for a while.

"Of course I am always conscious of an audience presence, even though the studio is empty of bystanders. I guess it's impossible not to be aware with a camera on my face the whole time. But I pretty much follow station policy when I write the stories up. Reporters here are taught to use "small" words rather than big ones when they can. That doesn't mean that we believe our public is uneducated. Not at all. Analysis had shown that our station has mainly yuppie-type viewers, the young, well-educated professional crowd. But we also have to realize that the public has only a few seconds to catch what the newscaster is saying. They don't get to read the copy, and they probably don't get to play back the show or segment they missed. We just try to make it as easy for them as possible. We aren't aiming at the children; our audience is 18 and over."

Speaking of public image, I thought it about time to ask her about her person on the screen. "The physical is important, of course, because everybody likes to have an attractive person talk to them, but no one will curl up and die if he finds out the next day that a hair was out of place. I have to wear heavy makeup on the set because the lights bleach out skin tones, but I apply everything myself. There are no makeup rooms, or anything like that."

Thinking of the dressing room analogy, I asked her if she didn't feel like an actress while on camera at times.

Maureen just laughed. "I really wish I were more of an actress. I took only one acting class, an Intro, at Saint Mary's when I was there. It would be easier for me on camera if I could remove myself from myself, but I can't. It's funny, I think I am more nervous now to go on the air than I was when I started. Then I was innocent, now I know how many, many things can go wrong while I'm up there. It's easier for me to speak in front of a crowd than in front of the camera. I'm more comfortable with real people."

When asked which classes she had taken during her four years at Saint Mary's to prepare for her job at WNDU, Maureen had to think. "I was a speech major when I graduated, so I'm sure I took things like Public Speaking and Oral Interp., with Reg Bain, if I can remember. I also took a lot of English and writing classes. I really enjoyed taking those. I know I took a journalism class as well, probably newswriting. I generally took a lot of liberal arts courses, though."

I checked my watch. It was 4 pm, and I knew she had to start on her long day's work of writing. So I asked my last question on the official list, and the second last question on my mind. "What advice do you have for me, or for anyone else who would like to break into the business?"

"Take as many writing courses as you can," she said immediately. "Write. Read a lot. Take creative writing classes because it can be very important when you have to pull something catchy out of your head." She smiled at me, and I felt almost ashamed to ask my last question, but I knew my friends would kill me if I didn't. She laughed as she led me back through the studios and to the door.

"No, tell your boyfriend and the other guys at Alumni that I don't color my hair. My husband and I just went on a short vacation in Florida, and the sun bleached it out. It's funny how people pay attention to those sort of details."

COLLEEN CLYNES

It's up, it's now and it's '80s. It's the social alternative for Winter '87. Yes, sports fans--it's broomball. And not the version played on ice by seven foot muscled jocks, mind you, but the game any ol' couch potato can master, played on South Bend's own infamous natural resource. Yup, you guessed it--that white stuff.

Here's your chance to show off the limits of your broomball dexterity and skill amid the dog eat dog world of TOURNAMENT PLAY. Surprise! This great fun is all sponsored by your friendly neighborhood SAB.

Yes, folks, It's Winterfest time once again, those two short weeks when we try to battle the February blahs and beer bellies.

Now, don't panic. We're not like talking (gaspl)... EXERCISE, y'know? Well, okay, maybe you will have to expand your daily regimen above and beyond the call of the beer can or the Jeopardy Million Dollar, Chance-of-a-Lifetime hour (that half-hour channel change can be just agony.) "Broomball is just hockey in the snow," explained tournament co-chairman Mike Arnold. "All you need is a ball and a broom to play and we'll give you all that. Just bring your team of five and have fun. Co-ed teams are, of course, encouraged."

Games are scheduled to last about half an hour so frostbite won't be a problem either. The rules for the game are few. The tournament begins Monday, Feb. 9, and continues to Saturday, Feb. 16, assuming that all teams haven't been eliminated by then. "We can't let the game get too rough, and there is no kicking the ball, but just about everything else is allowed," said Arnold.

"We wanted something different to do in the snow since we do have to live with it, so we figured we'd have this tournament and let people have a little off-the-wall study break," added co-chairman Christian Barrett.

To top it all off, how about a little fame, fortune, and thrill of victory? I know, you'll just take fortune, but SAB can't provide the beverage money; however it does provide food and tunes.

"Besides the fact that it'll be a blast, we don't expect you to make a fool out of yourself for nothing. So we have prizes for the top couple of winners like a pizza party at Barnaby's or gift certificates to The Cellar," said Arnold.

SAB Special Events Commissioner Eric Timperman thinks Broomball can become a big part of Winterfest. "The tournament is starting out small-scale now but we would like it to become an annual event, a tradition like Bookstore Basketball," he explained.

Timperman also highlights some other up-and-coming Winterfest events. "Winterfest kicks off with a bash Friday night at Theodore's with The Bottom Line. There is also a Bendix Woods trip, a cross-country ski race, a dorm snow-sculpture contest, and a Multiple Sclerosis Valentine's Day Dance planned--with awards for most of them."

"Winterfest is just for fun. Don't take it seriously and go out and have a good time," adds Timperman.

So you're sold on broomball and want to know where to sign up? Well, just head on up to the SAB offices on the second floor of LaFortune between 9:30a.m. and 4p.m. with your creative team name and sign on the dotted line. The deadline for team signups is Thursday, Feb. 5, so hurry and get off that couch.

If you have any earth-shattering questions or are feeling a ambitious and want to help out, just give Eric or Mike a call at 1155 or 239-7757 and they'll do their best to help you out.

any maintenance workers cutting branches off trees would immediately turn into the jubilant Notre Dame players cutting down the nets, a few feet above the mayhem on the floor.

The fact is, this year's squad set the type for its place in the pages of Notre Dame history with the upset over North Carolina. They erased the nightmare of blowing an 11-point lead while succumbing to UCLA's pressure defense and the disillusionment of not being able to come up with a big play to overcome West Virginia. This team, seemingly struggling to elevate itself above mediocrity, has skinned the top dog. And nobody will be able to take that away from them.

But the team must really turn its attention forward to make the big win as beneficial for them as possible. They must forget the glory of their day on the big stage. I, on the other hand, am just a fan. And I'm going to savor it for a while.

In response to reports of Anne Marie's alleged sexual escapades Police psychologist Brian said, "She obviously needed to release some sexual tension. I've seen this thousands of times. Some women suffer from uncontrollable sexual urges. If they are suppressed long enough some thing like this happens." "I was amazed at her carefree sexual attitude. Even I had to say 'no!' to some of the things she wanted to do out there. I couldn't have done any of it if I didn't quaff 30 brews before hand" stated Jim, alleged participant in the nude games, at an afternoon news conference. Continued Thursday

Knight fights back against council criticism by putting his nose in council flower debate

Associated Press

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. — Indiana Coach Bob Knight is offering his help in resolving a Faculty Council debate on flowers. He says it's his way of showing his appreciation for the council's interest in basketball.

Knight, referring to the council's recent condemnation of verbal and physical abuse of athletes by coaches, sarcastically said he wasn't upset with the intrusion into his domain.

And in his weekly television show on Sunday, Knight referred to a bouquet of red roses placed between him and host Chuck Marlowe, telling viewers to be sure not to miss the third segment of his show when he would explain the significance of the flowers.

When the segment of the show arrived, Knight began:

"I just kind of figured that the taxpayers of Indiana have paid my salary to coach basketball and I've not gotten into teaching geometry, or physics, or philosophy or anything else," he said. "I've just tried to stick to basketball."

"To me, I'm not at all upset with that. Knowing how much time I have to put into teaching basketball, for those professors to take time away from their classrooms and their students, to devote it to basketball, just pleases me tremendously, Chuck."

"I've got a suggestion. Since our (university) colors are red and white and everybody likes those colors, why not roses? What's more emblematic of America and what's good about America than roses."

Knight urged all those who "like roses and the idea of red and white roses instead of petunias or daffodils, write a note to the Bloomington Faculty Council, simply care of Indiana University, Bloomington, Indiana."

NVA Olympiad brings people out to compete for Special Olympics

By THERESA KELLY
Sports Writer

While the real Olympic Games are still a year away, Notre Dame and Saint Mary's students will be able to participate in their own Late Night Olympics, Friday, February 13 from 9 p.m. to 4 a.m. in the ACC.

Sponsored by Non-Varsity Athletics to benefit the St. Joseph County Special Olympics, the Late Night Olympics will pit 12 teams of combined dorms against each other in a large Olympic-style sports competition. In addition, there will be a Not-Quite-So-Olympic Games for those who decide to just drop in.

"We're looking for each team to register and participate in every event," said Sally Derengoski, Assistant Director of NVA.

The Olympic sports will include a co-rec obstacle course, broomball, and innertube water polo. Also planned are water lacrosse and Nerf football for men, as well as tournaments for men and women in volleyball, indoor soccer, basketball, and racquetball.

The teams will be made up of Notre Dame and Saint Mary's dorms. Each team antes $100, and earns points for participating in as well as winning events. The overall points winner and St. Joseph County Special Olympics will split the proceeds from the event. The grand prize will be awarded and distributed among the two or three halls of the winning team. Donations to the Special Olympics will be accepted.

Students interested in participating in the Olympic sports should contact their dorm representative. The deadline for registration is Monday, February 9.

In addition to the Olympic events, the Not-Quite-So-Olympic Games also will be held. These games will include such sports as darts, putt-putt, Nerf basketball, pool, and a celebrity dunk tank.

A Soc Hop will be held by WVFI and the Student Activities Board in the Monogram Room, while University Food Services will sponsor an Olympic Village Cafe on the main concourse.

Derengoski claims the key to the Late Night Olympics is the advanced registration.

"I have no doubt that people will be interested and excited," she said. "They have to contact their dorm reps for all the information."

"We have all the halls committed, with great support from the Hall President's Council," she added, noting that no dorm events have been planned that would conflict with the Late Night Olympics.

The event will use nearly every facility in the ACC, including the ice rink, fieldhouse, and pools.

"We have so much planned, this should go over big," said Derengoski, who also hopes this will become an annual event. "We are fortunate to have so many people interested in making it a success."

People who fail to sign up for the Olympic sports will not be left out. The Not-Quite-So-Olympic events, the dance, and other events are planned for drop-ins.

The 12 teams taking part in the Olympic competition, meanwhile, will be constituted in the following manner: Pangborn/Carroll/Farley, Fisher/Howard/Pasquerilla West, St. Ed's/Sorin/Lyons, Alumni/Augusta/McCandless, Cavanaugh/Holy Cross (ND), Breen-Phillips, Dillon/Regina, Flanner/Walsh, Grace/Badin, Keenan/Holy Cross (SMC), Morrissey/Pasquerilla East, Stanford/Lewis, and Zahm/LeMans.

SMC sets new goal for itself after 65-56 win over St. Fran

By MARISA A KOSLA
Sports Writer

After defeating league rival St. Francis, 65-56, Saturday at the Angela Athletic Facility, the Saint Mary's basketball team has set a new goal. For the win Saturday pushed the Belles record on the season to 8-5 and moved them one step closer to District competition.

"The team has really pulled together," said Saint Mary's head coach Marvin Wood. "After this weekend's big win the squad is treating every game like a playoff game."

The keys to the victory over St. Francis came from an aggressive offense led by freshman Julie Radke, who posted 17 points. Junior Tammye Radke, meanwhile, also chipped in with 11 points while Rachel Bir added 10 points.

The Belles attribute their recent success to a much greater utilization of their strengths. A balanced offense, coupled with intense rebounding, have placed the team at the top of the NAIA.

The squad, however, realizes their weakness in the area of consistency, and knows it must maintain an unrelenting intensity if it is to reach its new goal of going to Districts.

"We are the talk of the district," noted Wood, "because we have beaten some of the best teams while falling to other opponents."

Another thing Wood and his Belles squad must have if they are going to play in the postseason is the continued contributions of players such as senior Kim Pantelleris, junior Stephanie Duke, and sophomore Jennifer Harte, each of whom complements the Radke sisters and Bir on the court.

The Belles as a team, meanwhile, will get the opportunity to move another step closer to their new goal when they take on Taylor University Saturday at 1 p.m. at the Angela Athletic Facility.

Computer Science & MIS Students

SHARE THE INSPIRATION.

The rush of adrenaline. The surge of excitement. The flash of inspiration. Familiar feelings to talented DP professionals at The Travelers. And to the promising graduates who'll join us this year.

You've discovered these feelings in your academic work. Recognized them in the elegance of advanced technology. And now you can share in them at The Travelers, where the support is stronger, the environment more sophisticated and the applications more challenging.

As a distinguished Computer Science or MIS graduate, you now have a difficult decision to make about your future. That's why we created ACCENT. A fast-paced, competitive program. Offering technical and management training through a diverse range of assignments leading to key professional positions.

All in one of the most advanced DP environments in the financial services industry — including the largest IMS shop, 18 IBM mainframes and a 36,000 terminal SNA network.

But our commitment to staying on the cutting edge of DP technology doesn't stop there. We've recently installed 13,000 IBM PCs, integrated the latest 4th generation languages, and we're developing our future leaders with ACCENT.

If you have a degree in computer science, MIS or a related discipline, high academic achievement, exposure to hardware and software, and some programming experience, you have the right credentials for ACCENT.

If you're a highly-motivated person, an independent worker, and an innovative thinker, you have the right chemistry for ACCENT.

Now make the right move. To The Travelers ACCENT program. Where you'll find varied and valuable learning experiences. A supportive human environment and a sophisticated technical one. And where you'll find plenty of opportunities to help move you ahead.

You'll also receive a competitive salary, complete benefits and even an IBM PC AT to take home with you. Plus generous relocation assistance to our Hartford, Connecticut home office.

So, if you're a bright and talented computer-oriented major, join The Travelers. Where the accent is on you and the inspiration is shared by all.

Find out more about signing up for The Travelers interview schedule. Recruiters will be on campus Friday, February 27. Or, send your resume to: Priscilla Pellett, 30-CR, The Travelers Companies, One Tower Square, Hartford, CT 06183-7060.

Bunek and Botham were not to be denied late in the game.

"This was a good game for both Heidi and Sandy, and that's very important for us," DiStanislao said. "(Western Michigan) knew we were looking inside and they really packed it down. Our ball movement made it so that some gaps would open up, and the girls found them. It's a real plus to see both of them playing well at the same time."

The Irish led by as much as 12 points early in the second half after poor shooting (39 percent) plagued Western Michigan in the first 20 minutes, but the Broncos' speed began to pay off with just over 10 minutes to play.

Some nifty inside moves by leading Bronco scorer Shannon Pickell (17 points) brought Western Michigan closer and closer, and a Tracy Wells feed to Alletta Miller off a fast break with slightly less than eight minutes to play gave the visitors their only lead of the game at 52-51.

A pair of Botham fade-aways from the baseline put Notre Dame back on top, however, and some key rebounding and inside play down the stretch locked up the win for the Irish, their second in a row.

"One crucial thing that we've got to work on is our rebounding," said DiStanislao, whose squad outboarded the smaller Broncos, 41-39. "We said earlier that we had to improve our numbers somewhere, and that rebounding was a good place to do it. We've been having the guards hit the boards a lot more recently and it worked pretty well tonight."

So well, in fact, that Gavin collected a personal-best eight rebounds in the game, while Toney added six.

For Western Michigan, last night's loss was its third in a row after starting the campaign on a blistering pace. It was also the first time the Broncos have been held to less than 60 points all season.

The Irish will look to make it three in a row on Saturday when they face a quick Miami (Fla.) team at 1 p.m. at the ACC.

LaSalle

LaSalle's starting five is rounded out by sophomore Craig Conlin who, despite standing only 6-6, is averaging close to 10 points a game.

Those five have started every game for the Explorers.

The attack is balanced, with Legler having the highest scoring average (19.5 ppg.) and the playmaker Tarr having the lowest average (9.1 ppg.).

With an injury to center-forward Eric Lee, the Explorers use only two players off the bench. Forward Ron Barnes averages 4.2 rebounds a game, while sophomore guard Len Robinson, a starter last season, contributes 3.1 points a game.

LaSalle, however, will have to deal with a problem many Irish opponents have had to deal with this season—a stingy defense. While the Explorers average 76.5 points per game, the Irish are holding opponents to an average of only 59 points a contest.

Irish send out message with win over Broncos

By MARTY STRASEN
Assistant Sports Editor

The Notre Dame women's basketball team used Tuesday night's contest against Western Michigan to send out a message to the remaining schools on its 1986-87 schedule.

Attention, all who are expecting the 6-12 Irish to roll over and play dead: this team is playing some ball.

The high-powered, run-and-gun Broncos made a contest of last night's 65-58 Notre Dame victory with a timely second-half spurt, but the Irish controlled both ends of the floor for most of the game and kept their composure in the waning minutes to seal the win.

"Western Michigan is not a 13-5 team for nothing," said Notre Dame head coach Mary DiStanislao. "They're very aggressive and scrappy—a senior team. When it was crunch time, they came out and crunched.

"It's frightening when a team throws a press on you—especially a successful one—but I thought Didi (sophomore Diondra Toney) and Mary (junior Mary Gavin) really controlled the game when they had to."

Gavin dished out 11 assists and added 11 points in the game, while Toney chipped in for nine points and set up six Notre Dame buckets.

But last night's messengers of the recent emergence of the Irish were spreading the word in the paint. Heidi Bunek, a 6-4 sophomore, and 6-2 junior Sandy Botham poured in 19 and 15 points, respectively, and were both in double-figures on the boards with 11 and 10, respectively.

Even against the packed-down zone of the Broncos,

see BRONCOS, page 14

The Observer/Greg Kohs

Sophomore forward Heidi Bunek rejects the attempt of Western Michigan's Kendra McDonald while Irish teammate Sandy Botham

LaSalle hoping for big ND letdown as teams prepare to battle tonight

By PETE GEGEN
Assistant Sports Editor

Here's the picture. The Irish are just off one of the biggest wins in Notre Dame basketball history. The players have been watching tapes of the NBC coverage. Banners are flying from dorm windows. Fans are still congratulating the players on the victory.

Meanwhile, LaSalle is in town preparing for tonight's 7:30 contest at the ACC. The Explorers have to be hoping for the one thing which usually follows big victories—an Irish letdown.

"We have to put that all behind us," said Irish forward Mark Stevenson. "We still have some tough games left. We'll just try to build on the game we just played."

LaSalle definitely is not a team to be taken lightly. The Explorers are 11-9, including a 93-86 win over Villanova. And perhaps even more impressive, they lost narrowly to both North Carolina, 79-72, and DePaul, 58-54.

"I really like the way LaSalle plays," said Irish head coach Digger Phelps. "They're scrappy and they hustle, and they really impressed me the way they gave North Carolina fits."

The Explorers boast one of the hottest freshman players in the country. Forward Lionel Simmons is the leading rookie scorer in the country with an 18.6 points-per-game average.

The former Philadelphia high school player-of-the-year also grabs 9.7 rebounds a game.

"Lionel Simmons is one of the most impressive freshmen I've seen this year," said Phelps. "He's obviously had a huge impact on their team from a scoring and rebounding standpoint, and he really gives them the kind of force you need on the boards."

LaSalle also has experience in the form of 6-7 senior forward Larry Koretz and 6-4 junior guard Tim Legler. Combined with 6-1 junior guard Rich Tarr, the trio form a serious threat from three-point range, having made 40.3 percent of their shots.

Players must forget, but do we have to?

Rick Rietbrock

Irish Items

Beating the top-ranked team in the nation is certainly cause for celebration, but it's time to get on with business. It was another historic moment in Notre Dame history, showing that Digger Phelps, the ACC and No. 1 teams mix no better than drinking and driving. The main concern now, however, lies in the remainder of the schedule.

Notre Dame begins a crucial stretch in the schedule, one that will determine which post-season tournament it will participate in. LaSalle provides the first obstacle tonight, and the Irish will be somewhere above human and a notch below saintly if they avoid a letdown. The Explorers will certainly be searching for an upset, but if Gary Voce can continue rebounding and scoring like he did against North Carolina...

Knock it off. That game is over. It's time to move on. Well, going against Vanderbilt will be tough on the road, seeing as they are currently 7-2 at home, and they have beaten Indiana, something the Irish couldn't do. Kansas will be a chore. Danny Manning and the Jayhawks are ranked 18th in this week's AP poll and Allen Field House does not treat visitors with much respect. And Larry Brown is such a good coach that you would run out of fingers and toes if you had to count the number of offers Brown has gotten from other basketball teams, both pro and college. But if Sean Connor could launch a few three-pointers like he did Sunday against the Tar Heels...

Stop it. Victories in these upcoming games would put just as big a marker in the "W" column as the North Carolina win did, even if none could approach its appeal with the NCAA tournament selection committee. A win's a win, right?

And in less than two weeks, those Devils clad in blue from Duke will visit the ACC, to renew the respect of their ACC (Atlantic Coast Conference). They have survived the loss of two NBA first-round draft picks, Johnny Dawkins and Mark Alarie, quite nicely. Duke is ranked 16th by the AP, and it knows all about noisy crowds. Another near-spotless game will be required from the Irish to upset the Blue Devils, but they definitely can do it. Especially if David Rivers can take control in the final minutes like Sunday when he...

Oh, who am I trying to kid? I can't help it if I can't get that upset off my mind. If I tried to watch the CBS Chalkboard explain anything right now, the lines would turn into streams of toilet paper like those that bombarded the floor following the first basket of Sunday's game. If I would see a prison riot on television, it would turn into the masses of students on the floor after the game in my mind. And

see MEMORY, page 10

The Observer/Greg Kohs

Sophomore forward Sean Connor goes for the three-point shot over North Carolina's Jeff Lebo in Sunday's 60-58 Irish upset. Tonight, however, Connor and the 12-5 Irish must guard against a letdown as they play host to LaSalle at the ACC. Pete Gegen previews the game above.
