Burtchaell to maintain fellowship

By DAVID KINNEY

Spokesmen for Princeton University said that Father James Burtchaell's resignation from the faculty at Notre Dame will have no effect on his fellowship at Princeton.

Burtchaell resigned Monday amid allegations of sexual misconduct toward male students while teaching at Notre Dame.

Burtchaell has been on sabbatical leave at Princeton the since August 1990, according to Jacquelyn Savani, university press officer. He is an academic fellow under a Lilly Endowment grant doing research on universities that had been founded by religious organizations that had made a transition to non-religious operations.

Since he is a visiting fellow, he has no "institutionally organized interaction with students," Savani said. Burtchaell does not teach or counsel students at Princeton.

Former Senator Eugene McCarthy shared anecdotes from his past and some of his personal political predictions for Washington's future with students at a lecture last night.

McCarthy details duties facing American citizens

By CARRIE DWYER
News Writer

The three most important duties facing American citizens today are participation in political elections, financial support of the government and service in the military, according to former Minnesota Senator Eugene McCarthy.

In a lecture titled "The Inalienable Duties of Citizenship" last night, McCarthy maintained that the growing trend in American elections is towards an institutionalized nonparticipation under which many voters have come to believe that it is better to "let someone else do it for us."

On the issue of taxes, McCarthy said that the nation's massive debt accumulation during the past few decades is largely due to "those who should have been paying but were made exempt."

McCarthy said he blamed the government for this "fiscal irresponsibility" that has resulted in a four trillion dollar national debt that he further broke down to a figure of $40,000 of debt per individual taxpayer.

Addressing the nation's unemployment problem, McCarthy said that it has become "a question of distributed justice" and called for the "redistribution of employment" as a remedy to the current situation.

"The dominant word in America is 'more,'" said McCarthy and he said he feels that Americans must resist the urge to overwork and overconsume.

McCarthy noted that the last time work was redistributed was in 1938 with the introduction of the eight hour day and the fifty week year.

"Making people work longer for things we don't really need," McCarthy said, is a problem that continues to affect the status of American workers and unemployment levels.

McCarthy concluded his lecture with a comment of the different levels of the decision-making political process, stating that long-range decisions should be left to the academicians, short-range judgements should be made by the press, and immediate decisions should be the sole responsibility of the politicians.

"This is reversed right now," said McCarthy. "The politicians are making the long-range judgements concerning the direction of national policy."

Pangborn Hall chosen to house women

By SANDY WIEGAND

Pangborn Hall will convert from a men's to a women's residence hall next year to accommodate an anticipated increase in female students at the University, according to Patricia O'Hara, vice president for Student Affairs.

The Officers of the University made the decision Monday after analyzing information and possible choices at their November meeting, according to a letter sent O'Hara to Pangborn residents yesterday.

Pangborn residents reacting to the decision were "not very favorable," Pangborn Rector Father Wilfred Borden said. "There are guys that are upset, there are parents that are upset. You get attached to a dorm. They just don't know what the future holds for them."

The announcement came after a May 1991 decision by the Board of Trustees to lift the 37 percent cap on female enrollment that had been in place for the past several years. At Monday's meeting of the Officers, a new target for a freshman class of 44 percent female, 56 percent male was set for the 1992-93 academic year.

The decision to increase the number of female students necessitated a residence hall conversion, according to William Kirk, assistant vice president of Residence Life. Existing female residence halls would not be able to accommodate the increase in students.

"We believe that this decision is in the long-term best interest of the University," O'Hara said in her letter. "We know, however, that it comes at a price to the existing residents of Pangborn Hall. We will do our best to try to minimize this disruption."

Kirk informed Borden of the decision Tuesday afternoon, Borden said, and he promptly called a hall meeting to tell students.

Borden said he did not know whether students would have any input into which hall they are placed in next year. Nor did Borden know where he would live next year. "I'm in limbo," he commented.

O'Hara's letter indicated only that Pangborn residents would most likely receive alternative on-campus housing next year. "Because of the reduction in the number of male Freshmen, we expect that we will be able to accommodate all existing residents of Pangborn Hall who wish to remain on campus in other male halls," she said.

O'Hara and Kirk will meet with Pangborn residents Thursday night to discuss the change and any student questions.

Sununu resigns after criticism

WASHINGTON (AP) — John Sununu, the combative White House chief of staff whose abrasive style earned him enemies in both parties, resigned Tuesday, telling President Bush he didn't want to be "a drag on your success."

The resignation came after weeks of rumors that Sununu was on his way out. The 52-year-old former New Hampshire governor had come under increasing criticism from Republicans for his role in what they saw as ineffective White House action on the faltering economy.

Speculation immediately centered on Transportation Secretary Samuel Skinner as a likely successor, although the White House said no decision had been made.

One GOP congressional source called the decision to give Skinner the job "definite but not official."

Sununu handed Bush a five-page handwritten resignation note on Air Force One while Bush was on a trip to Florida and Mississippi.

Bush accepted the resignation, effective Dec. 15, and said in a statement that Sununu would remain as a counselor with Cabinet rank through March 1.

Later, standing beside Sununu on Air Force One, Bush told reporters, "He has taken a lot of hard shots that would have landed on my chin."

Sununu noted that Bush was heading into his reelection campaign and said, "He doesn't need an extra political target folks will be shooting at."

John H. Sununu

Born: July 2, 1939, in Havana, Cuba, where his parents were on a business trip.

Marital status: wife Nancy, eight children

Education: Graduated as the top cadet from LaSalle Military Academy, earned three degrees from Massachusetts Institute of Technology, including a Ph.D. in engineering.

CAREER

■ Combined engineering work with a teaching career at Tufts University in Boston.

■ Elected to New Hampshire's, House of Representatives

■ Elected governor of New Hampshire (three terms)

■ Joined George Bush's 1988 Presidential campaign

■ Appointed White House Chief of Staff by President Bush that as far as she knew, Bush had not offered Skinner the job.

Skinner is well respected by other Cabinet members, GOP members of Congress and Republican campaign workers.

Speculation that he would get the post was fueled by revelations that he had a private dinner with the president on Sunday and breakfast at the White House on Monday with Bush's son and chief political troubler shooter, George Bush.

In fact, it was Bush's eldest son — who is co-owner of the Texas Rangers' baseball team — who delivered the bad news to Sununu last Wednesday that there was wide opposition to him among Bush's top advisers, administration and Republican sources said Tuesday.

In his letter, Sununu said that until recently he had been convinced he could be a strong contributor to Bush's efforts.

"But in politics, especially during the seasons of a political campaign, perceptions that can be effectively dealt with at other times can be — and will be — converted into real political negatives," Sununu wrote. "And I would never want to not be contributing positively, much less be a drag on your success."

The controversy over what role Sununu would play next year had also held up Bush's naming of a re-election campaign team.

Charles Black, a GOP consultant expected to play a key role in that campaign, said Sununu's resignation cleared the decks for Bush to move on that front.

INSIDE COLUMN

Basketball is America's sport, not Indiana's

Residents of the state of Indiana believe that their state is the cradle of basketball.

Hoops was born one hundred years ago in Springfield, Mass., but most Hoosiers think that the game soon relocated to the verdant corn fields of Indiana.

Though many of the greatest players of what has become America's most popular game have since come from urban centers such as New York and Chicago, Indiana sees itself as the most important basketball arena on earth. Though the biggest part of this myth is found in high school hoops, the most visible salesmen of basketball as Indiana's game are the Indiana Hoosiers themselves.

One of the most controversial figures in sports, Bobby Knight, is the perfect example of the arrogant IU supporter. A vulgar disciplinarian who wears the ugliest sweaters west of Lou Carnesecca, Knight is a demigod to nearly everyone in this state.

Granted, Knight is a great coach. But he is not a great man. He once told interviewer Connie Chung that victims of rape should lie back and enjoy the experience. Though he seems to have outgrown chair-throwing, Knight still enjoys spitting strings of four-letter words at surprisingly kind officials.

Knight's ego is so big that he drove future NBA greats (and legendary egomaniacs) Isaiah Thomas and Larry Bird out of Bloomington rather than letting them play their own games.

Indiana has won three national championships during Knight's tenure in Bloomington. How many more would he have won with Larry and Isaiah playing all four years? How much better would the Hoosiers be with Indianapolis high school sensation Eric Montross? Though he probably fights it, I'll bet Bobby lies awake nights dreaming of what could have been.

Indiana fans hate to remember those ones that slipped away. This year, they again have a contender for the national championship. But the team has many weaknesses, as the fans saw against UCLA, and will probably not win the championship.

After the Hoosiers get knocked off by Richmond (or some other automatic bid) in the 1992 NCAA tournament, IU fans will quickly put this season out of their minds and will wait for next November. They will hope for the complete blossoming of the much-vaunted class of '93, and will revel in the glorious Damon Bailey.

Hoosier fans love Bailey. He's a lot like them. He is an average-sized middle-class white person from a small town. So was Steve Alford, the last IU player-deity. Indiana fans don't seem to revel in the talents of Calbert Cheaney or Isaiah Thomas nearly as much, despite their greater successes. They aren't typical Hoosiers.

Indiana fans need to learn who their real stars are. They need to realize that Bobby Knight is nothing more than an aging boor, whose failures in life are as great as his successes on the court. And they need to realize that basketball is not Indiana's game, but America's game.

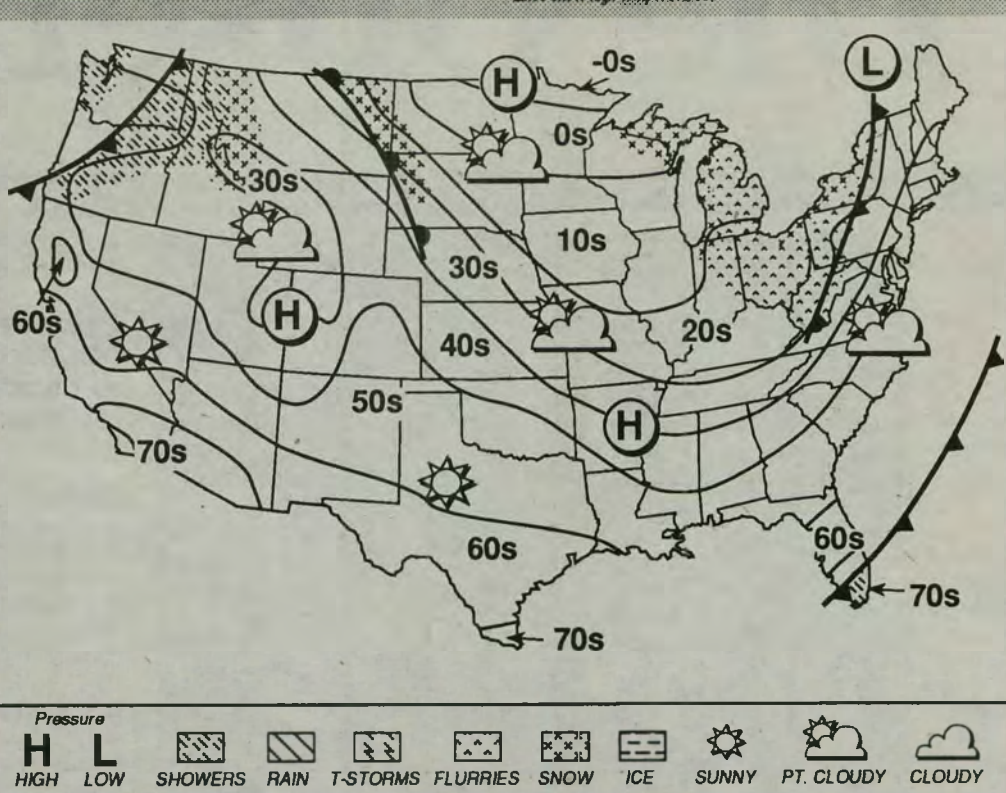

The views are those of the author and not necessarily those of The Observer.

Parents give wish list to Santa Claus

NEW YORK — Letters to Santa both heartwrenching and hopeful have been pouring into New York City's general post office by the thousands this troubled holiday season. "I am a very poor woman and I have three kids," wrote one New York mother. "If you will please send us something to eat, clothes to put them in and toys to play with." In a tradition begun 60 years ago, postal workers in New York set aside letters addressed to Santa and let the public rummage through them and choose letters from needy families or children they can help. John Kelly, general manager of the New York postal division, said the recession could push the number of letters — most of which are actually written by adults — above last year's record of 26,000. "It's just a guess, but based on the way things look now it's going to be a tough holiday season for a lot of people," Kelly said at a news conference Monday to kick off the annual Letters to Santa campaign.

Bush says he cares about economy

BRADENTON, Fla. — President Bush insisted today he understands the plight of economically hard-pressed Americans and said "we can't sit back and hope for the best" with the nation's foundering economy. Bush offered no new economic measures, but told workers at the Tropicana juice plant here that there was good news from Japan, thanks to trade and agricultural contacts by the administration. "Japan will drop its prohibitive quota system on orange juice and throw its market wide open to American orange juice, effective next April. And we will be able to compete in that market," meaning more jobs for the Tropicana plant, he said. Bush, under attack from Democrats who say he is out of touch with the needs of the recession-plagued workers of the nation, outlined no formula for stimulating economic growth. But he said, "much more needs to be done."

Watson gives insight into teaching

By JEANNE DE VITA
News Writer

Karilee Watson, acting chair and assistant professor of education, discussed the pieces and patterns that make up the life of the mind of a teacher at last night's Life of the Mind Lecture at Saint Mary's.

"The life of the mind of a teacher involves making sense out of thinking," said Watson. Watson traced in her lecture the influences in her life that led her to think about the teaching profession as pieces set within a pattern.

Watson noted the "lone voyagers" who served as pieces in "the pattern that made the profession" of teaching, noting such pioneers in teaching as Maria Montessori.

Watson also discussed personal experiences with her mother and grandmother that contributed to her interest in the teaching profession. Because of the patterns she saw in her mother's and her grandmother's lives, Watson said she chose to become a teacher.

"Living as part of these women's lives" exposed Watson to thinking about the learning experience. Coloring, cutting, pasting, as well as decorating turkeys and fish for a classroom are externals Watson noted that stereotype the teacher, but convey one of the primary obligations a teacher has to "first think of the teaching space," said Watson.

Thinking about the learning experience focuses toward new learning and triggers understanding, Watson said. "The thinking of a teacher begins when she enters the teaching site," said Watson.

Watson then discussed that it was the job of a teacher to evaluate every student and every piece of material that she teaches begins with the basic evaluation of the learning environment.

Watson's mother, a teacher, told stories of the experience of teaching that to Watson "are the same as my stories of teaching."

"They learned well or they learned badly depending on my ability to put the right piece in the pattern," said Watson.

In conclusion, she encouraged teachers to continue cutting, pasting, coloring, and thinking about all the complex pieces that make the pattern of learning the teacher's responsibility.

Faculty hopes for more reps on Colloquy

By STEVE ZAVESTOSKI
News Writer

A concern for the lack of faculty representation on the Colloquy for the Year 2000 was the main issue discussed at last night's Faculty Senate meeting.

According to the Faculty Senate, if members of the faculty want to be involved in what happens at Notre Dame over the next ten years, then greater representation is necessary in the Colloquy for the Year 2000.

Members of the Senate also expressed concern that the colloquy is not focusing enough on academics. The last committee to address the concerns of the University predicted most of what occurred in the next decade, according Chairman of the Faculty Senate Paul Conway. Consequently, members of the Senate said they are concerned they are not only underrepresented, but also that the academic concerns of the university may not be met.

The Senate also discussed proposing a revision to the process of updating du Lac. Under the current format, du Lac is revised over the summer when students cannot offer any input.

The Student Affairs Committee of the Faculty Senate suggested offering students a chance to express their concerns in the academic year prior to the summer of revision. In addition, the committee suggested that students be informed the most effective means of offering input is through the Campus Life Council.

Lastly, the Senate discussed a potential proposal to alter the format for selecting faculty members to represent the university at bowl games. Currently, members of the Faculty Board in Control of Athletics are invited to spend the week at the site of the bowl game, attending functions in an official capacity, as representatives of Notre Dame.

Senate members agreed that such a structure is unprofessional. The Senate suggested that faculty members chosen to go to the bowl games are selected in another manner; teachers honored with awards was one proposal.

Students Speak Out

For this poll, we randomly asked students what their reactions were to Father Burtchaell's resignation after allegations of sexual misconduct?

All information was compiled and photos taken by Andrew McCloskey.

"When I first saw it on the news I was shocked. I don't think his resignation from the University could have been avoided after such allegations. I think it is real unfortunate."
-Mike Holley (sophomore)

"I was surprised because I hadn't heard the rumors that were referred to in the stories. I felt taken aback by the possibility that something like this would have taken place at the University. I knew Father Burtchaell, but it makes me stop and think twice about the faculty and Administration at the University. I would like to hear his side of it, because part of me wants to believe it is not true."
-Colleen Greenthal (senior)

"I guess my reaction is sadness in the first place for him and the University because I know him as an excellent human being, a great scholar, and a very effective teacher. My respect and love for him are completely undiminished and, if anything, heightened by the sadness in part because I know I am a sinner but in less publicly perceptible ways. For that reason, I don't want to cast any stone on him nor do I think anyone else should."
-Michael Waldstein (professor, Program of Liberal Studies)

"I think it is unfortunate that a professor at the University of Notre Dame would have charges brought up against him. I think it is more unfortunate if these charges are true. The best thing for the University to do is to weight the facts and act accordingly. The student body should reserve its judgement of Father Burtchaell until they know all the facts and then draw a conclusion."

at the university by the religion department, but is not a member of the faculty. As a result, there was, and is, no reason for Princeton administration officials to be involved in the investigation.

Burtchaell's resignation and the allegations will have no effect on his status, he said.

NCR examines details of Burtchaell resignation

Editor's note: The following article was reprinted with the permission of National Catholic Reporter, Kansas City, MO. The article was printed in the Dec. 6 issue.

Holy Cross Father James Tunstead Burtchaell, a prominent theologian at the University of Notre Dame, has agreed to resign from his tenured teaching position following an investigation into charges he had engaged in sexual misconduct while counseling male students.

Burtchaell, former University provost and theology department chairman, is currently on sabbatical at Princeton University under a Lilly Endowment grant. Contacted by NCR on three occasions, he refused to comment on either the allegations or his status at Notre Dame except to say he has not resigned.

According to University sources, including members of the Holy Cross order, Burtchaell is still on the faculty but has agreed to submit his resignation in December, perhaps as early as this week. The resignation is said to be effective at the end of this academic year.

Sources said Burtchaell agreed to resign last spring after the University investigated the allegations of several students who claimed Burtchaell had made sexual advances toward them in counseling or in spiritual-advising situations. In some cases, sexual contact was alleged to have occurred between Burtchaell and the students, the sources said.

NCR has spoken with two former Notre Dame students who said Burtchaell had made sexual advances on them while in counseling.

While the precise details of events that led to Burtchaell's resignation agreement are known to only a few members of the Notre Dame administration, NCR, through interviews with sources connected to the University, both inside and outside the Holy Cross order, has learned of the general order of events. Sources say that during the 1989-90 academic year, several students, independent of one another, confided to a priest in the theology department that they had been sexually harassed or abused by Burtchaell.

The faculty member subsequently approached the then-chairman of the theology department, Father Richard McBrien, who then approached the University provost, Timothy O'Meara. O'Meara, sources said, decided to investigate and during the course of the investigation more allegations of sexual misconduct directed at Burtchaell were made.

The provost, sources said, met with Burtchaell several times during the 1990-91 school year, and those meetings led to an agreement between Burtchaell and the University.

The precise terms of the agreement—possibly known only to provost O'Meara, Notre Dame President Holy Cross Father Edward Malloy and Burtchaell—are not known. However, sources with knowledge of the agreement said the University agreed to allow Burtchaell to extend last year's off-campus sabbatical for a year, provided that he send a letter of resignation by December 1991 to the head of the University's theology department.

Neither the current Notre Dame theology department chairman, Larry Cunningham, nor former department chairman, McBrien, would comment on the matter.

As part of the agreement, according to sources, the University said it would not speak about the resignation until December. O'Meara has repeatedly declined interview requests by NCR.

Associate Provost Roger Schmitz told NCR, "I know nothing about it. If it is known here, it's known only between Father Burtchaell and the provost, and I doubt if either one of them will offer a comment one way or another."

University president Holy Cross Father Malloy also declined comment. In an Oct. 18 letter responding to an NCR request for an interview, he wrote: "National Catholic Reporter representatives have been in touch with the provost's office of the University of Notre Dame concerning the matter about which you wrote me in your letter dated October 11, 1991. Confidentiality governs the interactions of faculty members and the office."

Burtchaell's Holy Cross order also declined repeated requests for interviews on the Burtchaell case. Holy Cross Provincial Father Carl Ebey said in an Oct. 9 letter that any response "might compromise the confidentiality that normally governs the relationship between a religious and his religious superior."

The order, meanwhile, issued an "interim policy" on sexual abuse, outlined in an Oct. 29 letter by Holy Cross provincial Ebey to order members. The letter describes a policy "based upon the procedures I have been following up to now and which many of you have asked about."

The document makes no specific reference to the Burtchaell case but appears to allude to it, stating that "sexual abuse may occur not only between minors and adults but also between two adults. This type of abuse, although not publicized as much in the papers, also occurs in our society, and we must have procedures in place for dealing with such activity."

Ebey added that the same procedures used for sexual abuse of minors will be applied to sexual abuse of adults except for "the reporting of the case to appropriate governmental agencies."

Burtchaell's career

Burtchaell's career at Notre Dame has spanned more than a quarter of a century. A 1956 Notre Dame graduate, he returned to the University as a theology professor in 1966. He became theology department chairman in 1968.

Father Burtchaell

An NCR profile of Burtchaell written by Jesuit Father Raymond Schroth and publicized in August 1989 was headlined "Father Ivysoul." It described Burtchaell as an essential part of the Notre Dame fabric: "... he entered Holy Ivy U. as a freshman, joined the HIFs (Holy Ivy Fathers), got his degree, then returned to Ivy U., where, for the rest of his life, he will live in a student dorm, say a popular Mass, burn his light late, teach generations of students the same courses, counsel them through courtships, bless their marriages, baptize their children, welcome these children to Ivy, teach them the same courses and maybe even write some books—till his engine grinds to a halt and he joins his predecessors in the Ivy Fathers' graveyard on the edge of the campus underneath the pines."

In 1970, Burtchaell became the University provost, working with President Theodore Hesburgh. Burtchaell appeared to be in line for president. But in 1977, for reasons never made public, he was asked to step down from the provost's office and return to teaching.

At that point Burtchaell also left the Catholic Theological Society of America, the Society of Biblical Literature and the Catholic Biblical Association and emerged, as the NCR profile described it, "as one of the most eloquent writers against abortion."

He authored the Christopher-award winning "Rachel Weeping: The Case against Abortion" (1982), and has been an articulate voice in the anti-abortion movement since.

Burtchaell's writings have appeared in NCR's pages. He has written about such subjects as sexuality, marriage, natural law and the Vatican's 1988 fidelity oath.

Friends and foes alike describe Burtchaell as brilliant. He has his critics, however, who say he has an arrogant streak and can be intimidating. Said one former colleague, "He has made a lot of enemies. He's the kind of man you could admire because he has a great mind and he has lots of flare for all kinds of things. Yet at the same time he has a streak of arrogance."

Burtchaell, however, has supporters who would take issue with such a characterization. He has had a large following among students.

Burtchaell, who until his sabbatical lived in an apartment in the back of a student dorm, has gained a reputation for his innovative counseling style. A Notre Dame public-information department biographical sketch says of Burtchaell: "He is also notably popular as a counselor to Notre Dame students."

University atmosphere

The Burtchaell resignation comes in the midst of wider University controversy concerning gay students. About 175 faculty members recently signed a letter published in the campus newspaper, The Observer, urging Notre Dame to become "a safer place for those in it who are addressing questions about their sexual orientations." Gays, lesbians and bisexuals on campus "should not have to fear harassment, the impositions of self-hatred, infringements of intellectual liberty, the loss of employment, physical violence, or sexual abuse," the letter stated.

A former Burtchaell colleague, with knowledge of the case, said he wondered whether the University's refusal to recognize a gay student group on campus and the Burtchaell case might be linked.

"We wonder whether the university isn't starting to stop all mention of homosexuality pro or con. Because if...people start to share and to reminisce, this (Burtchaell) case in particular is going to rise first in everybody's mind," he said.

University's action

The University's official response regarding the Burtchaell case has gotten a mixture of criticism and praise from sources within the University. Some applaud the University for taking action and ensuring that Burtchaell will not return; some criticize the agreement—especially the decision to allow Burtchaell to remain on the faculty during this academic year.

The University appears to be making every effort to conceal the Burtchaell matter. For example, in an advertisement in the Oct. 23 issue of The Christian Century, Burtchaell is listed on the faculty for summer and fall of 1992.

A 1991 University faculty handbook refers to sexual harassment as "unwelcome sexual advances, requests for sexual favors and other verbal or physical conduct of a sexual nature."

Under the heading of "consensual relationships" the policy states:

"Because of the unique relationships between students and faculty members with the faculty member serving as educator, counselor, and evaluator, and the possibility of abuse of this relationship or the appearance of abuse, the University views it as unacceptable (including all those who teach at the university, graduate students with teaching responsibilities, and other instructional personnel) to engage in amorous relations with students enrolled in their classes or subject to their supervision, even when both parties appear to have consented to the relationships."

"In keeping with this philosophy of the University, if charges of sexual harassment are made, it shall not be a defense to allege that the relationship was consensual."

The Holy Cross order

Several sources said Notre Dame has been more aggressive in disciplining Burtchaell than has the Holy Cross order. Some faculty members told NCR they are troubled that the Holy Cross order has not forced Burtchaell to take a lower public profile, including putting aside his public writing and speaking.

In recent months, Burtchaell has published articles in several Catholic publications, including NCR and America magazine. Additionally, Burtchaell is scheduled to give a keynote speech in June before the Jesuits' New York province conference. Burtchaell is to address the subject of "Ministry in an American Context."

Sources said some form of counseling is routine in priest sex-abuse cases. NCR could not confirm what steps - if any - Holy Cross fathers or the University had taken to assist Burtchaell, to respond to alleged victims or to assure against possible further victimization.

One source supportive of the order said he has "great respect" for the Holy Cross Fathers. But, he continued, "What's more important for me is the church and the mission that we have. I think that the more we deal as openly as possible with such issues with respect for all concerned, the better we are."

For years, he said, dioceses and religious orders routinely swept problems such as chemical dependency under the rug. "Now that's being dealt with in a much better way," he said. "And I think we need to deal with all issues like that."

In his Oct. 29 letter to members, Provincial Ebey said the "interim policy" he outlined for handling sexual-abuse cases is based largely on policies in place in the Chicago archdiocese and the Phoenix diocese.

He reemphasized that members of the order should not discuss such cases. "Our policy will continue to be that we do not discuss individual cases or identify the names of any victim or accused religious, and all members of the province need to be mindful of their own responsibility for preserving such confidence," he said.

The letter states that if a member of the order becomes aware of sexual abuse by a member of the congregation, "it is your duty to report it to the appropriate authorities, including the provincial or district superior, so that we might act in a responsible manner."

The letter outlines the steps to be taken in cases of priest sexual abuse, such as hearing both sides of the story, removing the accused from his assignment pending the investigation's findings and sending the religious for appropriate psychological testing, consulting with a canon lawyer to discuss the appropriate canonical sanctions and appointing an advisory panel to advise the provincial.

Himes relates faith and nature

By GERRALDINE HAMILTON
News Writer

The relationship between the Catholic faith and environmental issues is an important aspect of ecological ethics, according to Father Michael Himes, associate professor of Theology.

In his lecture last night, "The Sacrament of Creation," Himes focused on the traditions of North America to discuss the inter-relatedness of Catholicism and environmental ethics. He argued that the American people have resolved the majority of their problems by dealing with space rather than time.

An example that Himes used was that in 1636 when the Puritans in New England disagreed on how to interpret the covenant with God, Roger Williams took his followers and created a new colony in Rhode Island. Himes stated, "In American life space overcame time."

The American people chopped up the space they had as a way to avoid conflict. When cultures clashed, such as the conflict between the Indians and the White people, each culture used the vast amount of space to separate themselves from each other. Himes stated that America had the mentality that instead of confronting problems, "you go away to start fresh."

Himes related the theory that people have the tendency to look at things as possessions. Everything is compartmentalized and fit into the personal realm of the individual, Himes said.

Things that have their own identity become "it," he said. Yet, Himes stated that there is also a flip side one can also make non-human reality into something that has independent realities with their own purpose, need and value.

The sacramentality of the environment, said Himes, is that of a concrete expression of the Grace of God that underlies everything that exists. God is intimately involved in Creation of everything that exists because of his pure and perfect love. If everything exists because God loves it, then everything is in fact sacramental, stated Himes.

Thus, if everything is designed purposefully by God, the duty of the Catholic is to behold the beauty of it, said Himes. Appreciation comes from the reverence for what God has created, he said.

Himes warned that if world is approached as non-sacramental, as a place full of personal possessions, the world will always be viewed as something that must be controlled.

"Catholics have the foundations of how to be concerned about transforming the world into an immense sacrament," Himes said. The sacramentality of nature demands respect of the environment, he added.

Father Himes based the title of his lecture on an article he wrote along with his brother, Kenneth Himes, on the theological base for environmental ethics. The article argues that the universe has become too desecralized and that God is no longer really identified with the natural world.

The lecture was sponsored by Students for Environmental Action and is the first of a continuing series of events focusing on environmental issues this week.

Purcell, Fischer elected to Board of Trustees

Special to The Observer

Two University of Notre Dame graduates, Philip Purcell and Charles Fischer Sr., have been elected to the University's Board of Trustees.

Purcell, a 1964 graduate with a degree in business administration, is chairman and chief executive officer of Dean Witter Financial Services Group of Sears, Roebuck and Co. and a member of the Sears board of directors. Since joining Sears in 1978 he has served as vice president for corporate planning, senior vice president for corporate administration and planning, and president and chief operating officer of Dean Witter.

Before his election to the Notre Dame Board of Trustees, Purcell was a member of the advisory council of the University's College of Business Administration. He currently serves on the council of the University of Chicago's Graduate School of Business.

He holds a master's degree in business administration from the University of Chicago and one in science from the London School of Economics.

Fischer, a 1949 Notre Dame graduate with a degree in science, is president, chief executive officer and chairman of the board of Harbison-Fischer Manufacturing Co. of Fort Worth, Texas, the world's largest manufacturer of sub-surface oil well pumps.

In addition, he is director and treasurer of Harbison-Fischer Canada Ltd. He is a director of Texas American Bank West Side and is chairman of the board of Challenger Tank and Manufacturing Co., Inc., and Abco Acquisition Co.

A member of the College of Engineering advisory council at Notre Dame before his election as a trustee, he also serves as a director of the Fort Worth Opera Association. He received an MBA from Stanford University in 1952. The new Charles A. Fischer Graduate Residence Complex at Notre Dame was underwritten by a gift from Fischer and named for his father.

The board was formed in 1967 when lay governance of the University was instituted.

Maguire to discuss technology

Special to The Observer

William May Maguire, university professor of ethics at Southern Methodist University, will discuss contrasting views of the role of technology tomorrow at the University of Notre Dame.

His lecture, "Slaying the Dragon: The American Nature Myth," is the keynote address of a seminar, Ethics and the Educated Person.

Before joining the SMU faculty, May served as the Joseph P. Kennedy, Sr., professor of Christian ethics at the Kennedy Institute of Ethics at Georgetown University. A 1948 graduate of Princeton University, he received his bachelor's degree and doctorate from Yale University.

After the 1963 Schempp decision of the Supreme Court made it clear that religion could be taught at public institutions, May founded and chaired the religious studies department at Indiana University. Earlier he served as chair of the religion department at Smith College in Northampton, Mass.

He is a former president of the American Academy of Religion and a founding fellow of the Hastings Center, where he co-chaired its research group on death and dying.

He is the author of "A Catalogue of Sins" and "The Physician's Covenant" Images of the Healer in Medical Ethics."

The lecture is free and open to the public in Room 206 of the Architecture Building on campus.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

"Ice Factor" makes campus walkways treacherous

Dear Editor:

This is my third year of enduring South Bend weather, and during this time I have managed to survive through temperatures ranging from 43 degrees below zero to 110 above. To be quite honest, I can bare such "harsh" conditions. However, the one situation at Notre Dame that becomes most treacherous and least desired is the sight of snow.

I am talking about the Notre Dame "Ice Factor." It can be defined as these enormously long sheets of ice (I have viewed some strips beginning from Walsh Hall and leading to the Lafortune Student Center) that are allowed to materialize on Notre Dame pavements.

This latest snowfall, on November 23 (Saturday evening), made me wonder again to why none of the pavements were "salted" or even attempted to be cleared until about 10 o'clock the following Monday morning. I was aware that the grounds crew had the weekend off, and that is perfectly justifiable by law to have days off.

However, the weather does not have a time clock or a contract to meet work schedules. The fact of the matter is that most of us were walking on "thin ice" for nearly 48 hours before any efforts were made to aid our progress. Believe me, I am a die-hard hockey fan, but I do not want to continue practicing for a New York Rangers tryout session in the midst of a residential area intended for walking.

This entire scenario concerning the "ice issue" perplexes me because this is unlike anything I have encountered relating to this issue. In my hometown of New York City, certain people go through the "snowfall ritual" just before significant, or insignificant, snowfall comes down from the heavens. It involves the placing of salt, or other chemical substances, onto the pavement in order to prevent most of the snow from settling long enough to freeze, and become extremely hazardous to pedestrians and vehicles in the form of ice.

In addition, trucks are anxiously awaiting in the wings available to pick up additional snow in the process. Unfortunately at Notre Dame, there appears to be only three options. One, place the chemical substance onto the ground several hours after the snow has fallen. Two, have tractors or trucks brush or pick up the upper echelons of the snowfall and allow the rest to melt on its own.

The question then remains, what ought to be done? First, administration should focus on making sure that the pavements are safer for the numerous students, faculty, and workers walking on them.

It should involve either of two methods. One, call in the grounds crew to come in on a weekend if snow is in the immediate forecast of local meteorologists. Two, create a task force of students to have access to the grounds crew equipment. Their work can be paid or voluntary. Money is not the issue. Instead, the safety of the people living, working, and visiting this campus is top priority.

Our boots can provide but so much traction, therefore additional manual support is needed. The last thing people need to worry about is a serious injury, and a wrong slip on this ice can lead to such an occurrence. Even though I have been fortunate to avoid such instances, I have witnessed some less fortunate. Will it take, a loved one of ours visiting campus, a guest speaker, or a top administrator for action to be done?

I hope something is done soon because the longer this problem continues, the risk of a serious injury occurring is intensified.

Reader responds to Phelps' idea to give stipends to student athletes

Dear Editor:

I am writing today to comment on an issue raised by Digger Phelps in a recent lecture which he gave on Wednesday, November 20, in Morrissey Hall. The issue to which I am referring is that of giving Division I athletes an annual stipend in addition to their scholarships.

I am opposed to this for several reasons. The first is simply that I feel that athletes are, in essence, paid already. I am, of course, referring to their full scholarships. When you factor in books, tuition, room and board, and free tutoring if desired, this adds up to approximately an $18,000 a year value at Notre Dame.

Secondly, our athletes need only to achieve a composite score of 700 on their SAT for entrance to Notre Dame as well as NCAA eligibility. Meanwhile, the majority of the student body averages a composite score of 1200 or better, yet we do not receive scholarships, much less an annual stipend.

Thirdly, athletes enjoy many privileges not shared by the student populace at large. These include parking stickers for choice lots as well as being allowed to drive on campus when they desire to do so. Many times, I have seen football players allowed to drive to the bookstore, etc. while I have always been denied this privilege by the guards at the entrance gates.

Please don't misunderstand me, the purpose of this article is not to bash our athletes, I realize that they are legitimate students. In addition, I believe that they make many sacrifices not made by the average student. They spent a great deal of time practicing and away from school for games which would make keeping up with their studies difficult. Also, they have to keep fit by not going out every weekend to parties whereas the average student may.

To summarize, I feel that full scholarships and the other privileges enjoyed by athletes at a collegiate level is payment enough for the sacrifices they make in order to play what are still amateur sports. Therefore, an annual stipend would be a grave error. Athletes should acquire summer jobs, just like the rest of us, to earn the spending money they need to sustain them during the school year.

From the Playpen

Angry Domers should say, 'Glitch this!'

A wise professor once wrote to me, "Notre Dame has become a corporation, one whose only regret is that the business in which it finds itself is Education."

This is sadly true as we make our claim as a "research institute."

If we are going to be a major research institute, fine, but ND is doing it at the expense of its students who come in search of "higher education."

If ND is no longer interested in the business of educating its students, then maybe our name should be changed to the Notre Dame Research Institute—the "Frustrated Researchers."

The ramifications of this shift are everywhere, especially through the declining quality of our education.

For example, the recent "hubbub" over the Arts and Letters "glitch" and the University's reaction to it shows the mass concern over our education.

Well, I have something to tell the Administration: "GLITCH THIS."

The University placed a freeze on the largest college in the University which put a stop to all plans for maintenance and expansion of the departments. What kind of University would threaten its students' education over a miscalculation of funds?

And, while the University so generously lifted its "hiring freeze," they neglected to inform the students that while the departments are free to fill present positions, they may not create new positions. (English majors, don't put that camping gear away yet!)

Many departments' plans of a gradual addition of faculty to alleviate problems of class size and class offerings have been halted as a result.

The College of Arts and Letters clearly does not have enough funds to adjust to the increasing number of students enrolled in it. Most of the departments have agreed that under-budgeting is a major obstruction in meeting the students' educational needs.

The College of Arts and Letters needs more funds to increase its staff and the quality of education. Just ask any economics major.

What does the University plan to do about this problem?

Obviously, nothing so far.

How many students were closed out of the majority of their classes or are stuck with classes they don't need? Students wait anxiously by the phones and dial madly when the bells ring at 7 p.m. to fight for classes.

In a U.S. News and World Report article, Notre Dame was listed as one of the universities spending the least money per student in the United States. That's ironic in light of our ever-increasing tuition bills and the rather large sums in donations ND hauls in. The Pope is probably envious.

My concern for Notre Dame is only for its future as a place of higher education and as a University composed of its students and faculty. It is "we" who make this University—not the wealthy donors and NBC. The Administration seems to have forgotten this fact.

The professors are not the ones at fault. It is difficult to get a "well-rounded" education when one has so few classes to choose from. Most non-English majors will never get into a 400-level English class. English majors rarely get into them.

If students don't start investigating and questioning the University about this issue, this school will soon more appropriately be called "McDame" and our education will be as mediocre as a BigMac.

Calm in the Storm

Concerned residents provide hope for the Northeast Neighborhood

By KELLEY TUTHILL
Editor-in-Chief

When people say that the Northeast Neighborhood is going to pot, Renelda Robinson responds by telling them they should look at the whole city—not just her neighborhood.

She doesn't deny that there are problems in the area just south of the University—she sees the results of crime, drugs and poverty every day. Robinson spends most of her time trying to improve the situation, though. After all, it is her home and has been all of her life.

Robinson serves as the director of the Northeast Neighborhood Service Center, located at 803 N. Notre Dame Ave., which provides over 40 services and programs for residents. She has served in this capacity since 1977.

"Crime is one of the greatest concerns (in the Neighborhood)," says Robinson. She also cited drugs, unemployment, absentee landlords and children who do not go to school as other concerns.

"We need the cooperation of city officials, elected officials and certainly of the Police Department," Robinson says. She believes more police visibility would help curb crime.

"We need the police department, we need more resources and we need more community," she says.

The center offers many services to try to make a positive impact on the community and to bring residents together.

One of the programs offered at the center is the Neighborhood Study Help Program which consists of 15 Notre Dame and Saint Mary's students who tutor middle and elementary school students two times a week.

Other services include a food and clothing bank, a blood pressure clinic

'I would like to see it return to the neighborhood it was when I was a kid.'

and legal and tax assistance. Senior citizens can also take advantage of free lunch five days a week as part of a program sponsored by Real Services.

Notre Dame and Saint Mary's students are active in the center, says Robinson. ROTC students recently participated in a cleanup project, students provide assistance during tax season and Grace Hall has a yearly fund-raiser for the center. Donations are often used to help those in need of assistance with utilities.

"It's one of the greatest sections of South Bend because of the students and the University," she says. Robinson views it as a loss that many students do not live in the neighborhood anymore. "Our feeling toward Notre Dame people is not negative at all. They do great deeds."

In addition to numerous Notre Dame and Saint Mary's volunteers and donors, the United Religious Community and neighborhood churches donate items to the center.

"The building of community is more important than the food in the basket," says Art Quigley, president of the Northeast Neighborhood Association and Notre Dame professor emeritus.

Both Robinson and Quigley are active in the Neighborhood Association. This organization is made up of area residents who come together approximately once a month to talk about issues of concern.

While the center helps provide services for those in need, she and Quigley and others also spend time trying to make long-term changes in the Neighborhood. They meet with representatives from Notre Dame and the city frequently to discuss problems and concerns.

Both Notre Dame and the city play a role in the center, according to Quigley. The center does not receive regular funding, though the building is provided rent-free from the city.

The land belongs to Notre Dame, but the city owns the actual building, a former firehouse. As long as it's used for not-for-profit purposes, the use of the building is up to the discretion of the city. The city rents the building for $1 a year and also reimburses the center for utilities.

Because she has lived in the neighborhood all of her life, Robinson says "it is one of the most beautiful (areas) in South Bend."

She is saddened by the fact that children can no longer feel safe in their neighborhood. "I grieve for my children and grandchildren," says Robinson. She has eight children, 11 grandchildren and five great-grandchildren, many of whom live in the neighborhood.

"I would like to see it return to the neighborhood it was when I was a kid," she says.

Robinson is hopeful about the situation in the neighborhood. "We have to have hope. We have to be positive about the whole situation, if we didn't we'd die."

She says that she and others are going to "take the neighborhood back so people can live decently."

"If we give up, we're lost," Robinson says. "Dedicated people have to keep fighting to make the situation better."

Magic opts not to attend AIDS news conference

Decision has nothing to do with Johnson's health

NEW YORK (AP) — Magic Johnson will not attend a news conference Wednesday to announce a pay-for-view television special to benefit AIDS research, but his agent says it's not because of his health.

The New York Post reported today that several sources said the retired Los Angeles Lakers star "does not feel up to" making the cross-country trip for the promotional appearance with Donald Trump at the Plaza Hotel.

Johnson's agent, Lon Rosen, said in a telephone interview from Los Angeles that the report was a "publicity stunt" by Trump officials.

"There was never a time when Magic Johnson was supposed to go to a press conference in New York or the Taj Mahal," Rosen said. "Magic's health has been fine. He's been seen shooting baskets, running three miles a day."

Howard Klein, senior vice president of marketing for Trump's Taj Mahal in Atlantic City, N.J., which will be the setting for the Feb. 28 show, blamed a scheduling conflict.

"There was definitely a positive indication of participation at some point," Klein said. "It was not set in stone, but it had been discussed in a very positive way."

"We set up the press conference on two assumptions, one — that he would be there; two — that he would not be there," Klein said.

"How the thing got spun out of control that it was health related, I don't know," Klein said. "It was not a health-related case. It was a scheduling thing."

He said he did not know what Johnson was scheduled to do Wednesday.

"Anytime you're dealing with a celebrity who is front-page news, there's going to be scheduling difficulties," Klein said. "It was still up in the air."

But Rosen said "That's not true. There was never an assumption that he was going to be there."

Klein said alternatives, including having Johnson appear via satellite at the news conference, were looked at but could not be worked out.

Earlier, a spokeswoman at Taj Mahal casino said, "We can't comment on Magic's health."

"I don't really know the state of Magic's health," Sharon Pearce said.

"He may be busy with treatment or something. But you have to ask his people about that."

A source at the Taj Mahal said the pay-per-view television special, a one-on-one competition between retired basketball players Julius Erving and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, was planned before Johnson's announcement that he had the virus that causes AIDS.

Once that announcement was made, the casino began planning to find some way to turn the event into an AIDS benefit, the source said.

"Once Magic came forward and made the announcement that he had contracted the virus, we thought somehow this could be a benefit for AIDS," the source said. "It's still kind of in the planning stages."

Originally, a news conference for Nov. 20 was announced by the Plaza in a press release on Nov. 15. Under a headline which read, "Donald Trump Brings 'Magic' to the Big Apple," the release said Trump and Johnson would have a "big" announcement in the hotel's Baroque Room.

It said Johnson would be making his first New York appearance since his announcement about being HIV-positive.

Catherine Saxton, a spokeswoman for the Plaza, who had announced the news conference originally, said today it was put off from the November date "because the hotel was so booked, there was absolutely no place to hold it at that date."

Johnson made his announcement and announced his retirement Nov. 7.

He began taking AZT, the standard treatment for infection with the AIDS virus, on Nov. 17. The drug can cause anemia, nausea and muscle pain.

"The word was he's too sick to come to New York for the press conference," an unidentified staffer at the Taj Mahal told the Post.

"That's part of the reason it's taken so long to get this going."

Syracuse's McRae to appeal ruling

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — Syracuse center Conrad McRae will appeal his suspension to the NCAA Eligibility Committee on Wednesday, but an NCAA official was not sure how quickly a decision would be made.

"There's no time frame. I feel certain they'll discuss it before deciding," NCAA spokesman Jim Marchiony said.

The committee will hear McRae's appeal via a conference telephone call at 6 p.m. EST, said Marchiony.

Syracuse submitted an appeal letter to the NCAA last Wednesday, a day after announcing that the 6-foot-10 junior from Brooklyn was permanently ineligible to play for the Orange just minutes before their regular season-opener against Cornell.

Syracuse spokesman Robert Hill said senior vice president Louis G. Marcoccia and members of his staff and legal counsel would represent the university during the call. McRae and his attorney also will participate, he said.

Hill declined to comment on what basis the appeal is being made on.

The NCAA informed Syracuse officials Nov. 19 that evidence brought to its attention by the university as part of the school's ongoing investigation into alleged wrongdoing with the Orangemen basketball program constituted an unfair recruiting advantage for Syracuse.

The violations that made McRae ineligible involved "street agent" Rob Johnson of New York City, NCAA officials have said. Johnson's involvement with former Orangemen Tony Scott led to NCAA sanctions against Texas A&M, where Scott transferred after playing at Syracuse.

Syracuse immediately appealed McRae's suspension to the NCAA's eligibility staff, but was rejected.

The committee is a four-member panel of faculty representatives and athletic directors from NCAA member schools.

Should the committee turn down McRae's appeal, he would have one more step in the appeals process; that being the subcommittee of Division I members of the NCAA Council.

If none of the appeals succeed, McRae would be able to play at any other school for at least a year and a half by transferring before next semester, Marchiony said.

McRae averaged 5 points and 3.5 rebounds a game as a sophomore. He was projected as Syracuse's starting center before his suspension.

Willis's 29 points, 31 rebounds pace Hawks, 103-99

DALLAS (AP) — Kevin Willis continued his dominating rebounding with a career-high 31, and he also scored 29 points in Atlanta's victory Dallas.

Willis, now leading the NBA with a 17.5 rebounds per game, broke the Reunion Arena mark of 27 set by the Mavericks' James Donaldson on Dec. 29, 1989 against Portland.

Willis, with the highest single-game rebound total since the end of the 1987-88 season when Charles Oakley and Michael Cage both had more than 30, now has 20 or more rebounds in seven of his last nine games.

Dallas, trailing by 10 with less than two minutes left, had the ball with a 101-99 deficit, but Herb Williams missed from 10 feet with 9.8 seconds left, and Willis hit a pair of free throws to seal the 103-99 victory.

Bucks 126, Lakers 94

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Jeff Grayer scored 21 points and Milwaukee opened a 20-point lead in the first half before beating road-weary Los Angeles.

The Lakers, playing their fifth game in eight days on a seven-stop trip, got 24 points from A.C. Green and 20 from James Worthy. The loss, only their second in 12 games, was the most lopsided this season for Los Angeles.

When the Bucks outscored the Lakers 12-5 to start the second half, the Bucks had a 74-50 lead with seven minutes to go in the third quarter.

Nuggets 110, Rockets 100

HOUSTON (AP) — Chris Jackson scored 16 of his 22 points in the pivotal fourth quarter as Denver snapped a 25-game road losing by defeating Houston.

The Nuggets, whose last road victory was 126-122 at Milwaukee on Jan. 29, also handed the Rockets their first loss at home in eight games this season. Denver is now 1-5 on the road and 8-8 overall after going 20-62 in 1990-91.

Houston, playing without centers Hakeem Olajuwon and Larry Smith because of illness and injury, was led by Kenny Smith and Vernon Maxwell with 20 points each. Otis Thorpe had 17 points and 15 rebounds.

Reggie Williams led the Nuggets with 26 points.

Houston tied the score 92-92 with 5:04 remaining after scoring six straight points. But Denver responded with an 8-0 run, six by Jackson, to lead 100-92 at the 3:08 mark.

held without a single offensive rebound, and the team as a whole was limited to just eight offensive boards.

"Overall, I thought we played very well defensively," Knight said. "We were a little shaky on offense. Notre Dame played some tough defense, and it was difficult to move."

"I think we gave it a good effort," said Ellis. "However, it was not enough to derail the Hoosiers."

The only thing the Irish need is time. After years of playing zone under Digger Phelps, the seniors are almost starting from scratch with a new defense, and the freshman class also needs some time to get a handle on the system before the real jelling occurs.

All it will take is work and experience, things that cannot be rushed, and MacLeod has made a commitment to it.

"I want it to happen right away, but I know it won't," MacLeod said. "It's going to take time, and its going to be painful."

If anything positive came out of this game for the Irish, it may be the realization of just how painful the adjustment is going to be.

Anderson, Butler to sit on Sunday

LAKE FOREST, Ill. (AP) — Beware the wounded Bear.

That was Mike Ditka's cry on Monday after his Chicago Bears lost consecutive games that the coach figures they shouldn't have.

"There are certain games you can lose and people expect you to lose and maybe you get beat by a better team," Ditka said. "I don't believe that was the case the last two weeks. We beat ourselves."

Ditka was up in arms over Thursday's 16-6 loss at Detroit and he really hadn't settled down.

He said he wouldn't "celebrate Thanksgiving again and I'll never eat turkey again." Four days earlier, Chicago blew a 10-point lead in the fourth quarter and lost to Miami 16-13 in overtime.

Ditka promised to make some changes, most particularly a return of the running game to the attack.

Running back Neal Anderson and kicker Kevin Butler will sit out Sunday's game against the Green Bay Packers. Anderson has been hampered by a hamstring pull and Butler has a hip injury.

Mark Green and Johnny Bailey will share Anderson's running chores and Chris Gardocki will do the kicking. He also hopes fullback Brad Muster will be ready to play. Muster also has a hamstring pull and was unable to play against Detroit.

"If Brad can't play, I'll use Darren Lewis," Ditka said. "We're going to run the ball. It might not be as glamorous as throwing the ball but there is less risk."

Quarterback Jim Harbaugh was guilty of six turnovers against Detroit, including four interceptions.

"My pride is hurt tremendously," Ditka said of the successive losses that dropped the Bears to 9-4 and tied with Detroit for first in the NFC Central.

"If I didn't have any pride and didn't care about this football team, I wouldn't say a word," Ditka said. "The moment I don't say a word is the moment I'll do something else. This is a good team. Not great, but good. Their pride is hurt and they're wounded."

Ditka said the films showed Anderson was not running well and "not using his tools. He's too great a player not to use his tools."

But he wasn't blaming Anderson or Butler, who missed a field goal, for the loss to Detroit.

"We hurt ourselves with mistakes," said Ditka. "That was evident. Even with all the turnovers, we still had opportunities to win."

Anderson, who has been playing injured, agreed he needs rest.

"It's sore; I can't run," Anderson said. "I'm not going to play. We all made the decision. If I continue to aggravate it, I won't be ready for the playoffs. Right now we're shooting for me to be ready for the stretch and the playoffs. I don't want to do anything foolish. Whether it heals or not, I don't know."

Anderson said it would be a week-to-week situation and he might have to sit out two weeks, which would mean he possibly could also miss the Tampa Bay game Dec. 14.

"We want to get the leg as good as possible. We've looked at the films and the burst of speed isn't there."

Anderson, who has rushed for at least 1,000 yards in each of the last three seasons, doesn't figure to reach that number this year. He has gained 734 yards in 202 carries. He also has failed to gain 100 yards in any game. The closest he came was 91 yards at Minnesota on Nov. 11.

Butler said he would try kicking again in Friday's practice.

Senior Troy Ridgely struggled to come to grips with the disappearing act performed by the Notre Dame defense.

"We've been meeting and we've been doing everything we can as a defensive unit to try and straighten things out," said Ridgely. "There's something wrong and I don't know what it is."

"We keep playing poorly. I think we have the athletes there, but I don't know why the defense is not playing."

McCallum stripped of WBA title

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — The World Boxing Association vacated the middleweight title held by Mike McCallum of Jamaica because the fighter had violated association rules, the organization said Tuesday.

The WBA called on the two top challengers, Steve Collins of Great Britain and American Reggie Johnson to fight for the title. The two have 30 days to arrange a bout.

"We felt obligated to take this measure because of McCallum's violations of organization rules," Elias Cordova, president of the WBA's World Championship Committee, told a news conference.

Cordova said McCallum had been told he must fight Collins this month for the title before he fought any other match. However, Cordova said McCallum has agreed to fight American James Toney, the IBF middleweight champion on Dec. 13., which Cordova called "a clear violation of the rules."

He said McCallum was told Monday of the decision and had no immediate reply.

COUNSELOR'S CORNER

Dear Counselor,

I am having a problem with one of my good friends. I met this person freshman year as we were passing each other through the dorm hallway. Since then we have become very close friends, although sometimes I think we are a little too close. Since we have been back in school my friend seems to want to spend a lot more time than usual with me. My friend seems to only want to spend time with me, and has also been hinting and making "passes" at me. How can I tell my friend that I am not interested in this type of relationship and yet remain a good friend? Please help.

Friendly Senior

Dear Friendly,

I remember walking into my dorm room and meeting Mike from Chicago. He said "Howdy" with a drawl that placed him considerably south of the Mason-Dixon. I wondered what we would ever have in common, and struggled to foresee the wonderful friendship which would soon emerge.

Friendships are a good thing. In the eye of the storm of romantic negotiations, a good friend offers safe harbor. The mixing of romance and friendship, though, is fraught with complex and even potentially powerful interpersonal issues. You care for your friend, but fear you may not share identical definitions of that word "care." It sounds like you are wanting to tread carefully, distinguishing your desires for the friendship while not losing your friend's care.

It's at these touchy moments, when hurt feelings are at risk, that the truth, spoken in love, seems so reasonable. You said it nicely on paper, that you like being a friend but don't want to be romantic. The worst-case scenario is that your friend experiences embarrassment and it takes some time for the friendship to stabilize. But a good friendship is worth the caring effort of clarifying feelings and wishes. Good luck.

Irish overwhelmed by ninth-ranked Hoosiers

IU wins battle of man-to-man D's

By RICH KURZ
Associate Sports Editor

BLOOMINGTON— When Coach John MacLeod started practice this season, he wanted to make two major changes. The first was an up-tempo offense. The second was a switch from a zone to a man-to-man defense.

Last night, against the Indiana Hoosiers, the Irish got a hard lesson from the masters of the man-to-man defense.

Indiana coach Bob Knight's trademark defense gave Notre Dame fits. Every ballhandler was pressured, every pass was contested, and it paid off for IU. The Irish committed 22 turnovers.

"We've got some quickness, and we use it to pressure," Knight said.

This quickness showed in the final totals. Indiana guards Greg Graham and Chris Reynolds combined for six of their team's 10 steals.

"Defensively, they did a tremendous job on us," MacLeod said of the Hoosier guards. "They're strong and physical, and they really worked hard and supported each other."

Indiana's inside people did their share of damage too. Irish forward LaPhonso Ellis was BLOOMINGTON— Indiana's intense man-to-man defense forced Notre Dame into 22 turnovers last night as Bobby Knight's ninth-ranked Hoosiers kept Notre Dame's John MacLeod winless in two tries.

Notre Dame's woes began early on game day. When senior center Keith Tower and freshman forward Billy Taylor were late for the scheduled departure of the team bus, and MacLeod opted for Malik Russell and Joe Ross to start the contest.

The two combined for five rebounds and were held scoreless.

But they weren't the only two to suffer from poor shooting for the Irish. Notre Dame, unable to overcome Indiana's pesky defense, shot .367 (18 for 49).

"I pick Indiana to win the NBA Championship this year," said MacLeod. "They took us out of most of the things we tried to do."

Indiana took advantage of 2-of-12 shooting by the Irish to open the first half and opened up a 19-5 lead.

Following two dunks by Ellis, (15 points, 13 rebounds) the Irish cut the lead to 27-19 with 3:09 in the first half.

Then Indiana's defense took control, which allowed its offense to eliminate any chance of an Irish comeback with a 13-2 run to end the first half.

"We were a little shaky early on offense," said Knight, who coached the Hoosiers to their eighth straight win at Assembly Hall over Notre Dame. "But we had a good burst toward the end of the half."

Elmer Bennett (1-of-7 from the floor) scored 12 of his 14 points in the second half.

Indiana used its dominance to take a 76-39 lead at the 7:05 mark of the second half.

Forward Calbert Cheaney led the Hoosiers with 19 points, but the play of the Indiana guards was equally threatening. Greg Graham hit 4-of-7 from the field for 8 of his 14 points. Damion Bailey poured in 11 in his role as the sixth man.

Eric Anderson, who has started the previous 37 games, eased his way out of Knight's doghouse with 14 points on 7-of-10 shooting off the bench.

"We still have a long way to go," said MacLeod. "We had some defensive stretches where we played well, but we didn't support it with any offense."

Notre Dame out-rebounded Indiana 39-35, but for the second straight game failed to convert on many open shots.

"We need to buckle down on defense and we have to start knocking down the wide open shots that we've been missing."

The Irish will try to bounce back when they host Louisville on Thursday at the Joyce Center at 8 p.m.

Bettis breaks Notre Dame touchdown record

By DAVE DIETEMAN
Sports Editor

HONOLULU—Despite its unspectacular performance against Hawaii, Notre Dame managed to set several records on Saturday.

For starters, the 42 points which the Irish surrendered to the Rainbows were the most ever allowed by a Notre Dame team in a winning effort.

But the Irish, who victimized the Hawaii defense for seven touchdowns, also smashed two team scoring records. On the season, Notre Dame's high-powered offense has scored 59 touchdowns, surpassing the all-time record of 55 (1912) and the modern-era record of 53 (1949).

Jerome Bettis broke the Notre Dame all-time record for touchdowns in a season (both rushing and receiving). With his two rushing scores against Hawaii, Bettis has 16 touchdowns on the ground and four in the air, for a total of 20.

The record of 18 touchdowns in a season, which Bettis tied Nov. 16 against Penn State, was previously held by Allen Pinkett, who accomplished the feat in 1983 and '84.

Tom Carter, a sophomore, has intercepted five passes this season, well short of the Notre Dame single-season record of 10, set by Mike Townsend in 1972.

Rick Mirer's 218 passing yards against Hawaii give him 2,117 in his career—good enough for third on the Notre Dame all-time list for a season. Mirer trails Steve Beuerlein (151-259 for 2,211 yards in 1986), who is now with the Dallas Cowboys, and Joe Theismann (155-268 for 2,429 yards in 1970), whose professional football career was ended by a leg injury.

Mirer surpassed 1964 Heisman trophy winner John Huarte (114-205 for 2,062 yards in 1964) with his performance against the Rainbows.

Where pass attempts are concerned, Mirer (234) is fourth on the all-time single-season list. He trails Joe Theismann (268 in 1970), Joe Montana (260 in 1978) and Steve Beuerlein (259 in 1986). Mirer has averaged 19.5 pass attempts per game this season.

Lindsey Knapp, a 6-6, 271 lb. offensive tackle from Deerfield, Ill., was named a recipient of the Toyota Leadership Award during the Hawaii game.

Special to the Observer

Two University of Notre Dame alumni are among six former student-athletes selected by the National Collegiate Athletic Association as 1992 Silver Anniversary Award winners.

Alan Page and Jim Lynch, teammates at Notre Dame from 1964-66 and All-Americans on the 1966 national championship football team, will be honored on January 8 at the NCAA convention in Anaheim, Calif., along with football players Floyd Little of Syracuse University and Bob Griese of Purdue University, basketball player Mal Graham of New York University and track and field athlete Ricardo Urbina of Georgetown University.

The Silver Anniversary Award recognizes former student-athletes who have distinguished themselves since completing their college athletic careers 25 years ago.

Page, a three-year starting defensive lineman at Notre Dame, is the assistant attorney general of Minnesota. He has established the Page Educational Foundation to assist minority and disadvantaged youths with post-secondary opportunities and is active in numerous civic and charitable organizations in Minneapolis/St. Paul.

After receiving his bachelor's degree from Notre Dame in 1967, Page went on to a 15-year career with the NFL's Minnesota Vikings and Chicago Bears, earning the league's most valuable player award in 1971. He was inducted into the Pro Football Hall of Fame in 1988.

Lynch won the Maxwell Award in 1966 as college football's outstanding player. He was also an Academic All-American and a National Football Foundation and Hall of Fame scholar-athlete. Now vice-president of D. Thomas & Associates, a food brokerage house in Kansas City, Mo., he is involved in a variety of community activities, including the March of Dimes and Special Olympics.

Lynch played 11 years of professional football with the Kansas City Chiefs, helping them to a win over the Vikings and Page in Super Bowl IV in 1970. He is a member of the Chiefs' hall of fame and was a 1969 American Football League all-star.

Irish, Rainbows may meet again

HONOLULU (AP) — Notre Dame and Hawaii are negotiating to play again in Hawaii within the next five years.

Notre Dame officials approached Hawaii officials at Saturday's game to say they were interested because their players and fans had such a good time during the trip.

The 18th-ranked Irish won the game 48-42, and about 6,000 Notre Dame fans from across the country traveled to Hawaii to attend the game.

Hawaii athletic director Stan Sheriff says the Rainbows won't have to play Notre Dame at South Bend, Ind., as part of the deal.

The Observer/E.G. Bailey
Irish quarterback Rick Mirer, shown here Saturday in Honolulu, moved into third place on Notre Dame's all-time passing yardage list.
