Women's Week to open with actress' solo show

By BERNADETTE PAMPUCH
News Writer

Boston-based actress Robin Lane brings six of America's first ladies to the stage tonight at 8 p.m. in Dalloway's Coffeehouse with her production of "Ladies First" as part of a celebration of Women's Week.

As part of a series of events scheduled throughout the week, Lane offers an intimate visit with such notable women as Rachel Jackson, Eleanor Roosevelt, Julia Tyler, Mary Todd Lincoln, Abigail Adams and Jackie Kennedy.

"I chose these women mostly for (the) theatrical as well as historical contrasts," Lane said. "I have worked as an actress in Boston for quite a few years and had been interested in the challenge of doing (a) solo performance. I knew colleges and organizations did this sort of thing if it was educational and interesting."

The contrast in the roles, ranging from the nearly obscure Julia Tyler to the ever-popular Jackie Kennedy comes both from Lane's desire to utilize her artistic talents and to compare the differences in the wives of America's presidents.

"It occurred to me (that) it would be interesting to see how different First Ladies performed in the same role," she said.

Many of the six pieces are taken from actual accounts of the women during and shortly after the time they spent in the White House.

Lane's interpretation of Jackie Kennedy is based on an interview following the assassination of her husband John F. Kennedy.

New course, film begin on disorders

By MYRNA MALONEY
News Writer

"Food Fright," a film on women and eating disorders, will preview tonight from 6:30 p.m. to 7:30 p.m. in the Haggard College Center Game Room.

The film will also be shown in the future throughout Saint Mary's departments and residence hall section meetings, according to Nancy Mascotte, assistant director of the Counseling and Career Development Center.

Written and staged by women who have fought personal battles with anorexia and bulimia, the film is factual, anecdotal and sociological, according to a posted review.

"The film is being shown in conjunction with a new course being offered this semester about women and eating disorders," said Dr. Joyce Block, a lecturer in the psychology department.

"The course focuses on four main aspects of eating problems. First, we looked at the conflict in a psychological context in terms of a woman's individual personality and family.

"Second, we are studying fasting in a historical manner. We will also spend time observing the sociological side of eating problems which include the media and other large-scale pressures.

"Finally, we will move away from this surface of the media and will study the more complicated struggles that a woman faces just by being a woman in

Catholic women's education enables success

By LYNN BAUWENS
Assistant Saint Mary's Editor

The Catholic women's college experience encourages women to succeed in all areas of life, according to Mary Lou Gorno, Saint Mary's Class of 1972 and keynote speaker for the Play of the Mind conference held this past weekend.

Introducing herself as college trustee, advertising executive, world traveler and pilot-in-training, Gorno said, "The reality behind this resume is simply this — I am a product of a Catholic women's college. This is what it looks like."

She discussed how her experiences at Saint Mary's taught her to pursue a path committed to a rich, intellectual life.

"(It was) an education that would offer me and other women the opportunity to become leaders in society, in the workplace, in the community and in the Church," she said.

When discussing her reasons for attending Saint Mary's,

Gorno shared her father's "Henry Ford philosophy" for selecting colleges — "You can go to any college that you want, just so it is a Catholic women's college."

At that time, the social revolution declared single-sex education to be outdated. Enrollment was down and many women's colleges were closing their doors or merging with brother schools.

"Although our survival has not been easy, today women's colleges are thriving in the marketplace," Gorno said. "Familiar to all of us, but unfortunately not to the world, is the extensive research conducted over the last decade that documents the strong link between women's colleges and success rates of their graduates."

Gorno spoke of a recent front page article in The New York Times that announced the resurgence of women's colleges. She cited statistics which show that women from single-sex institutions are twice as likely to enter medical school and pursue doctorate degrees as their counterparts at coeducational institutions and that the percentage of women majoring in math, chemistry and biology at women's colleges is three times the national average.

"Women achievers are more likely to come from women's colleges, it is that simple," Gorno said. "They are charged to succeed in multiple roles they will select during their lifetime."

Gorno has selected many roles in her own lifetime. After graduating from Saint Mary's with a bachelor's degree in business administration and economics, she earned her masters in journalism from Northwestern University and continued at the University of Chicago to earn her M.B.A. in finance and accounting.

Gorno also spoke fondly of her graduation from the United States Air Force flight training school. She went to "Top Gun School" in Alabama to fulfill her dream of experiencing air combat in a fighter aircraft.

After surviving winter in South Bend, SYR's and senior comprehensives at Saint Mary's, she felt confident flying at 230 mph in a F-16 fighter aircraft even though she was the only woman in the class.

"I have a diploma to prove that this was not a dream. I am a graduate of Top Gun School and Saint Mary's College," she said.

As the Vice President of Leo Burnett Company, Inc. in Chicago, she works with the world's largest clients including McDonald's, Nintendo, Sony and Reebok. She recently spent time in Los Angeles working on an upcoming commercial for Reebok featuring U.S. figure skater Nancy Kerrigan.

While pleased with the resurgence of interest in colleges such as Saint Mary's, Gorno

Quilts provide access to public realm

By ELIZABETH REGAN
Saint Mary's News Editor

The strong female networks created through quilting became major vehicles for women of the 19th century to move into the public and political realm, according to author and quilter Elaine Hedges.

Not only did quilts symbolize personal rites of passage for women of the 19th century, but they also proved to be effective tools in the anti-slavery movement, Civil War relief, temperance and suffrage movements, she said.

The quilters used special designs such as the "underground railroad" and the mere inscription of names and slogans in the squares themselves to reinforce their messages, Hedges said.

"Initially, sewing was the woman's way to raise money for good causes," Hedges said. "However, the massively organized movements requiring extensive and essential relief work helped them develop skills that they used in further movements."

The women first congregated at sewing societies at their churches as well as privately sponsored quilting bees, according to Hedges.

"Taken by the anti-slavery movement, women extended their religious commitment into a new area," she said.

The women held craft fairs to raise money for the cause. They sold their most elegant and expensive work at these fairs in order to collect money from those upper class citizens that might not otherwise give donations, according to Hedges.

"These women gave over $25 million for war relief," Hedges

NOTRE DAME ELECTIONS

Elections for student body president and vice-president are today. Students can vote in the lobby of dorms from 11:00 a.m. to 1:00 p.m. and from 5:00 p.m. to 7:00 p.m. Off-campus students can vote in LaFortune during the same time period. Seniors are eligible voters. A runoff will take place on February 9 if necessary.

INSIDE COLUMN

Alternative music's identity crisis

A funny thing happened to alternative music on the way to Casey's Top Forty; it ceased to be "alternative," and became "mainstream." And that genre of music has no idea how to handle this new found popularity. Alternative music is having an identity crisis. What's worse, the vanguards of alternative music are dealing with it in the worst ways possible.

Dave Tyler
News Copy Editor

There seem to be two schools of thought trying to bridge the gap from CBGB's to Giant's Stadium. Both are angry and spiteful, and both are surprisingly narrow minded and short sighted, coming from a place that used to be so visionary.

The first is musical snobbery. I guess its now trendy to deny that you are popular, or assert that you are just plain better than the rest of the music industry.

A glaring example of such snobbery is the Smashing Pumpkins fan who felt compelled to use the Viewpoint page to ridicule The Observer's music critics for their choices of 1993's best albums. While it is okay to disagree with the selections, what was not okay was the tirade that followed. This writer actually thanked the critics for not including Smashing Pumpkins latest release on the top ten lists because, although "it was an excellent and innovative album, it would be an insult to all the Pumpkinheads for it to be included on these lists."

While I'm sure fans of the Grateful Dead are insulted by a lack of creativity on the devotees of Billy Corrigan, I believe this Pumpkinteer has a hang up about his band "selling out." So what if they sold a few albums? So what if they won some critical acclaim? Maybe the rest of the world is finding out what you've known all along. That good music gets noticed.

If the first school of thought is Dr. Jekyll, the second school is Mr. Hyde. This school is the exact opposite of exclusionary snobbishness: complete, saturated overkill. At times the word alternative is rammed down our throats. It seems that whoever makes the programming decisions feels obligated to name every band that burst onto the scene as "alternative." Under this new species of music, Alice in Chains, a band whose sound leans towards Black Sabbath and Bob Dylan are lumped into the same category. Soul Asylum, Spin Doctors and Sonic Youth are all thrown together. Do they all sound the same to you?

Once they've got everyone classified under the same roof, its is now your civic duty as an American to listen to that music. And it is not an isolated occurrence. All over the airwaves, there is a drive to push alternative music right through America's eardrums. You just aren't cool if you don't believe that Pearl Jam's Ten is the best album of all time.

Somewhere in the middle lies a happy medium. There are just two things the alternative music crowd needs to remember: one, to make money, you need to sell records and, two, to sell records you need to produce music people will like. So back off, and just let the music take you where it will. Everyone finds it a lot more enjoyable that way. Until enough people who control the airwaves figure that out, alternative music will continue to have an identity crisis.

Horrors against civilians continue to escalate in the former Yugoslavia

Shelling in Sarajevo

Shells hit Sarajevo's main downtown marketplace Saturday, killing at least 66 people and wounding more than 200.

The Worst Attacks on Civilians in Sarajevo

It is estimated that about 200,000 people have been killed in the war in Bosnia-Herzegovina.

Previous attacks on civilians during 22 months of war in Sarajevo, almost exclusively attributed to the Bosnian Serbs who surround the city:

May 27, 1992 - A mortar attack on a bread line kills more than 16.

Aug. 31 - Shelling of a marketplace kills at least 15.

June 1, 1993 - At least 15 are killed and about 80 wounded in a mortar attack on an impromptu soccer match in the suburb of Dobrinja.

July 12 - Twelve are killed by a mortar round while lining up at a communal tap in Dobrinja.

Nov. 9 - At least seven die and 22 are wounded in the shelling of a school. At least three children and their teacher are among the dead.

Jan. 3, 1994 - Shelling kills at least 15, including six members of a single family.

Jan. 22 - Shelling kills six children in the Alipasino Polje neighborhood.

Feb. 4 - At least eight are killed by mortar rounds in Dobrinja.

Goldberg will host this year's Oscars

BEVERLY HILLS

Whoopi Goldberg, already an Oscar winner, will host this year's Academy Awards show. "I'm thrilled about my date with Oscar," the actress said in a statement. "To go from watching to winning to hosting in one lifetime is major." The 66th annual awards show will be held March 21 at the Dorothy Chandler Pavilion of the Los Angeles Music Center. Billy Crystal turned down an invitation to emcee the show for a fifth year, saying he wanted a break. "Whoopi Goldberg has all the qualities of a great Oscar host," said the show's producer, Gilbert Cates. "She is a major movie star with millions of fans, and she is also one of the funniest, most talented performers working today." Ms. Goldberg, 44, won an Oscar for best supporting actress in 1991 for her role as a phony medium in the tear-jerker "Ghost." Her other films include "The Color Purple," "Clara's Heart," "Sister Act" and its sequel "Sister Act 2: Back in the Habit."

Songwriter claims Jackson stole his song

DENVER

Michael Jackson isn't expected when a trial begins Monday to hear a local songwriter's claim the pop superstar pirated the hit song "Dangerous." Jackson's publicist Lee Solters said Denver was "not on his schedule." His lawyer will be there, along with Crystal Cartier, who says she wrote her "Dangerous" nine years ago. "He augmented the lyrics, he took the chorus, the hook, from my song — and that's loot," Cartier said. "I don't mind sharing credit, but I got bumped completely out of the picture." Jackson and his lawyer have refused to comment on the case. The U.S. District Court trial will decide Cartier's copyright infringement claim. If she prevails, there will be a second trial to determine damages. Cartier plans to seek at least $40 million. Last month, a Los Angeles jury ruled Jackson didn't steal the songs "Thriller," "The Girl is Mine" and "We Are The World" from two former childhood neighbors in Indiana. Later, Jackson settled a lawsuit alleging he molested a teen-age boy.

Beauty salon bandits meet their match

NEW YORK

An off-duty police officer, caught in a gun battle with three robbers in a hair salon, got lucky when one of the robbers put a gun to her head and it misfired — twice. Police said Officer Arlene Beckles, an instructor at the Police Academy, was getting her hair done Saturday afternoon when three men entered the Salon La Mode in downtown Brooklyn, forced the patrons against a wall and emptied the cash register. Beckles drew her .38-caliber revolver and exchanged shots with the men, hitting all three, said Officer Andrew McInnis, a police spokesman. She disarmed one man, but another "knocks her down, puts a gun to her head and fires," McInnis said. The gun misfired twice. Two of the men fled. Beckles arrested the third man, Fernando Douglas, with help from transit police Sgt. William O'Brien, who was on dinner break from the nearby Transit Authority headquarters and had spotted the commotion. Douglas, 25, who had been shot in the face, was taken to St. Vincent's Hospital in critical condition.

Rapper to perform at music awards show

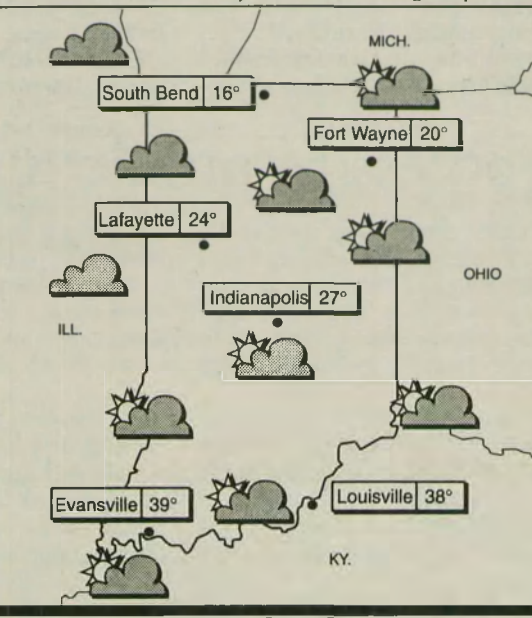

LOS ANGELES

So what if Snoop Doggy Dogg is facing a murder charge? That won't stop producer Dick Clark from including the rapper among the performers at Monday's American Music Awards. "That's another part of his life. He is an innocent man until proven otherwise and that's another thing the courts will deal with, not the music public," Clark said. Clark said the popularity of Snoop's album "Doggystyle" was enough to justify his performance at the 21st annual awards show, which is essentially a popularity poll. Nominations are based on record sales and airplay, and winners are voted by a national sampling of 20,000 record buyers. "You don't sell three and a half million albums in three weeks and not carry with you some degree of importance to a certain part of the audience, a big part of the audience," Clark said. Snoop, whose real name is Calvin Broadus, pleaded innocent to the murder charge and is free on $1 million bail. Authorities say Snoop was driving a Jeep from which his bodyguard fatally shot a man last August.

The managing editor is ultimately responsible for the editorial content and daily production of the newspaper.

Riley, a Dillon Hall resident, is from Erie, Pennsylvania and is a Finance/Computer Applications major. Riley was previously the circulation manager at The Observer.

Joseph Riley

"I look forward to this new position at The Observer," Riley said. "I look forward to the challenge and moving up at the paper."

The Business Manager oversees the operations board and maintains the financial budget of the newspaper.

Lucas and Riley will begin serving their new positions immediately after spring break.

Aftershocks continue; damage estimates climb

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES

Creaking windows and vibrating floors roused thousands of people Sunday as predawn aftershocks struck just minutes apart. No damage was reported.

An aftershock measuring 4.1 on the Richter scale struck at 5:19 a.m. and lasted about five seconds. It was followed three minutes later by a magnitude 3.6 aftershock.

The shocks frightened children and sent some of the 80 people staying at a Red Cross shelter in Granada High School scurrying to dress, said Red Cross volunteer Fran Fruzen of Beloit, Wis.

"It woke me up. I knew it was a four," said Fruzen, who, like thousands of people after the deadly January quake, has become a devotee of estimating ground motion magnitudes. "I can sleep through the threes, but the fours get my attention."

There have been more than 3,500 aftershocks to the Jan. 17 quake that killed 61 people and injured more than 9,000. Damage estimates range up to $30 billion.

The quake was original measured at a magnitude of 6.6, but could be revised to 6.8, the National Earthquake Information Center said.

More remains returned to U.S. by Vietnam

By GEORGE ESPER
Associated Press

HANOI, Vietnam

Four days after the United States lifted the 19-year trade embargo against Vietnam, Hanoi is turning over on Monday more remains of what are thought to be missing American servicemen.

U.S. officials will announce the number of remains returned after a ceremony at Noi Bai International Airport.

President Clinton had made lifting the embargo contingent on Hanoi's cooperation in the fullest possible accounting of Americans missing in action from the Vietnam War.

U.S. veterans groups and families of MIAs had strongly opposed the end of the embargo, saying the United States would lose its leverage in forcing Vietnam to cooperate in accounting for the 2,238 American MIAs.

But the United States withheld some carrots, the biggest of which is the restoration of diplomatic ties, broken when Communist North Vietnam defeated U.S.-backed South Vietnam in April 1975.

The United States also did not immediately grant Vietnam "most favored nation" trade status, which would lower tariffs on Vietnamese imports to the United States and make them more competitive in the American market.

Vietnam is now pushing for diplomatic recognition. Just after Clinton announced the end of the economic sanctions, Deputy Foreign Minister Le Mai pledged Vietnam would continue cooperating in trying to resolve MIA cases.

Lt. Col John Cray, the U.S. Army officer who heads the MIA office in Hanoi, said the lifting of the embargo would help his mission.

"I believe that the Vietnamese cooperation is at a peak right now," he said.

Vietnam and the United States will begin another major search operation Feb. 26 involving more than 100 American specialists.

Disorders

today's society," Block said.

An eating disorder refers to a person's distorted, self-destructive way of thinking, feeling and behaving around food and is both a problem and a symptom of a problem, according to Mascotte.

"People with eating disorders have a message and you can't solve their problem by treating the disorder alone. Even from the extensive research that has been done on eating disorders, you can never tell what the underlying cause is for each specific case.

"The person faced with the problem must be encouraged to sort out their own puzzle to find the cause, whether it be self-esteem or something more serious such as an event that happened in the past," Mascotte said.

Anorexia nervosa is a serious disorder which often starts with dieting and becomes self-starvation with loss of as much as 25 percent or more of body fat, according to a brochure from the Development Center.

The person denies being thin, even when emaciated. Some anorexic sufferers, unable to control their hunger, turn to the habit of self-induced vomiting, purging or abuse of laxatives.

Anorexics may get into the cycle of bingeing followed by purging called bulimia. Not all bulimics have a history of anorexia. Others develop the habit of bulimia in the effort to lose a few pounds. A binge is often an initial physiological reaction to starvation, according to the Development Center.

An effort to offset a binge may be self-induced vomiting, laxative abuse, diuretic abuse, frantic exercising, fasting, or a combination of these.

Compulsive Overeating, in contrast to anorexia and bulimia, involves the inability to maintain consistent body weight, lying about eating and the consumption of large amounts of food in short periods of time, according to Mascotte.

About 95 percent of those who suffer from eating disorders are female and 10 to 15 percent of all college-age women develop bulimia. These national statistics generally mirror the Saint Mary's population, according to Mascotte.

"Persons with these disorders share some of the same behaviors and concerns, especially the intense fear of becoming fat. Both groups set high expectations for themselves and strive for success, which is why college students are vulnerable to them," Mascotte said.

Although Mascotte encourages those with concerns to inform the Development Center, she stresses that Saint Mary's is not a treatment program.

"We believe in helping students who could be experiencing three stages of an eating disorder. We can identify those who are in the early stages, help them seek intensive treatment and offer support for continued recovery following their treatment," she said.

The following combine the relationship between statistics on eating disorders and every day life in the United States and were compiled by Florentine Films who distributed "Food Fright."

•A California study found that 80 percent of fourth-grade girls are already on their first diets.

•In 1921, the first Miss America was five feet four inches and weighed 137 pounds. In 1987, Miss America was five feet eight inches and weighed 116 pounds.

•The U.S. weight-loss industry (catering mostly to women) takes in $10 billion a year, second only to the arms industry.

•A poll asked women what aspect of their lives they would most like to change: wages, lack of access to power, vulnerability to poverty, inflation, pollution or nuclear war. Over 50 percent substituted their own answer, "my weight."

•Up to two percent of those with eating disorders die as a result of their illness and its effects.

Boutros-Ghali asks for airstrikes Clinton hopes violence pushes factions to peace

By TONY SMITH
Associated Press

SARAJEVO
U.N. Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali asked NATO on Sunday to approve air strikes on mortar positions around Sarajevo, one day after the deadliest attack on the city in the 22-month siege by Bosnian Serbs.

The death toll from Saturday's shelling of a busy marketplace rose to 68, while three U.S. cargo planes arrived to evacuate victims of the massacre.

The Bosnian government declared a day of mourning, and residents railed at a world they say should be stopping the fighting rather than mopping up after it.

A senior U.N. official in New York, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Boutros-Ghali sent a letter Sunday night to NATO Secretary General Manfred Woerner asking him to seek authorization from NATO members for air strikes.

The strikes would be targeted "against artillery or mortar positions in or around Sarajevo which are responsible for attacks on civilian targets," the official said.

The North Atlantic Treaty Organization voted in August to provide air strikes on Serb troops ringing Sarajevo if the United Nations requested them. NATO leaders toughened their stance at a summit last month, but had been waiting for Boutros-Ghali's request.

There was no immediate word on when the NATO Council would meet.

NATO sources in Brussels, Belgium, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Sunday it was unlikely NATO would turn down a request from Boutros-Ghali to approve air strikes. They were commenting before Boutros-Ghali's request was made public.

In comments over the weekend, the 16-member alliance demonstrated it was not in full agreement about the wisdom of increased involvement in Bosnia's war, which has killed more than 200,000 Muslims, Serbs and Croats.

Some nations, notably Britain and Canada, have been reluctant to call in planes for fear of spreading the war and of reprisals against their troops serving with the U.N. aid operation in Bosnia.

British Foreign Minister Douglas Hurd on Sunday warned that air strikes might provide "one day of satisfaction," followed by an intensification of the siege, with the Serbs cutting all humanitarian aid.

U.S. Defense Secretary William Perry backed away from the threat of U.S. air strikes, calling instead for a negotiated settlement.

Speaking to European defense officials in Munich, Germany, Perry asked, "If air strikes are Act One of a new melodrama, what is Act Two, Act Three and the conclusion?"

But Belgium's foreign minister urged air strikes be launched. France demanded NATO set a deadline for the Serbs to lift their siege or face military action. French officials said the NATO ambassadors probably would meet in Brussels, Belgium, within 48 hours to discuss the ultimatum.

The United Nations' top civilian official for the former Yugoslavia, Yasushi Akashi, said he had been unable to reach agreement in talks Sunday with Bosnia's government and Bosnian Serbs on a cease-fire and monitoring of weapons around Sarajevo.

By TOM RAUM
Associated Press

WASHINGTON

President Clinton ruled out any immediate air strikes in Bosnia in retaliation for shelling that claimed at least 68 lives, but said Sunday he hoped "the shock of these deaths" might spur new peace overtures.

Saturday's carnage in a crowded market in Sarajevo is "terrible and outrageous" and "obviously, it seems highly likely that the Serbs are responsible," the president said.

The United Nations should speed up its efforts to pinpoint the blame, Clinton told reporters.

But he called on members of Congress to tone down their rhetoric in calling for air strikes, explaining that some European allies remain hesitant because they have troops on the ground who could be targeted for reprisals if air strikes take place. France, England and Canada are among the nations with ground troops in Bosnia as part of the U.N. humanitarian effort.

Canada, and to a lesser extent England, are concerned about proceeding with air strikes, said an administration official, speaking on condition of anonymity.

"That does not mean it won't happen," Clinton said of air strikes.

But he said the United States does not have the authority to order the strikes on its own.

"We are working at the highest level" with U.S. allies on the air strike question, Madeleine Albright, the U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, told CNN after Clinton spoke.

Clinton's remarks followed an emergency meeting at the White House of most of his national security team. Defense Secretary William Perry was on his way back from Germany and was to talk to Clinton by phone on returning to the United States.

With Clinton out of town — he left for Houston later Sunday — his national security team was to hold another meeting on Bosnia on Monday.

Clinton also said he favors — and always has — a lifting of the United Nations arms embargo so that the Muslim-led government of Bosnia can be armed to help defend itself.

"I think the United States position on the arms embargo is only reinforced by the kind of thing that happened yesterday," he said.

Senate Republican Leader Bob Dole said a decision by Clinton to order air strikes would have "strong bipartisan support" in Congress.

"I think it would certainly send a strong message to Belgrade," Dole told NBC-TV.

NASA again unsuccessful in deployment of satellite

By MARCIA DUNN
Associated Press

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. For the second day in a row, NASA failed to release a science satellite from space shuttle Discovery on Sunday and tried to salvage what little it could from the experiment.

Ground controllers raced against the clock to try to resolve the latest satellite problem: a malfunctioning guidance system. NASA said Monday would be its last opportunity to deploy the Wake Shield Facility, one of the primary purposes of the shuttle mission.

"We have not lost hope," Mission Control assured Discovery's astronauts just before they went to bed.

The Wake Shield was supposed to fly free of the shuttle for two days so scientists could try to grow semiconductor films in the ultra-clean wake created by the saucer-shaped craft. There would be time for only one day of free flight if deployed Monday.

As Discovery whizzed around Earth with the Wake Shield propped on the end of the shuttle crane, Mission Control struggled to pinpoint the problem with the satellite's horizon sensor. The infrared sensor is supposed to help guide the satellite when it flies.

Alex Ignatiev, the project's chief researcher, said managers had gone out of their way to install a guidance system with a strong track record. Similar systems have flown on 50 other spacecraft without error, he said.

The crew was disappointed after two days of failure, especially astronaut Ronald Sega, who had spent years working on the Wake Shield. Cosmonaut Sergei Krikalev, the first Russian to fly on a U.S. shuttle, had trained for more than a year to retrieve the satellite with Discovery's robot arm.

This newly developed confidence and organizational skills gave the women of the 19th century the ability establish the temperance movement, the largest mass movement of American women.

"Wives and children were threatened by male drinking," Hedges said. "The movement helped them to establish social controls and to give them greater power."

Women associated with the suffrage movement were oftentimes considered "unwomanly". This derogatory labeling deterred many women from supporting the cause.

"Sewing and quilting proved that they could be both feminist and feminine," said Hedges. "It was a form of good politics."

Quilts today are also concerned with social ills and injustices, according to Hedges.

"The AIDS quilt is a good example of the influence that quilts have on society today," she said.

Hedges spoke on Friday evening at the Little Theater in Moreau at Saint Mary's.

Peace support wanes as clashes rise Arafat receiving pressure from all sides of peace issue

By NEIL MacFARQUHAR
Associated Press

JERUSALEM
Palestinians were jubilant at the prospect of better lives when moves toward self-rule were announced. Not quite five months later, they're again eager to attack Israeli targets and challenge PLO leader Yasser Arafat.

The bitter mood in the Israeli-occupied territories turned blacker Sunday when bickering between Israeli politicians and top generals threatened further delays in achieving Palestinian autonomy.

"Peace is not a theory, it's something that ordinary people need to touch," said Raji Sourani, a lawyer who heads the Gaza Center for Rights and Law.

There have been some changes since the accord between Israel and the Palestine Liberation Organization was signed in Washington on Sept. 13, 1993.

Palestinians could openly raise their flag, an act that used to draw Israeli gunfire. Over 700 Palestinians have been released from Israeli jails and a few streets sealed with barrels to prevent stone-throwing have been opened.

But under the original plan, the Israeli army was to start withdrawing from the Gaza Strip and the West Bank area around Jericho on Dec. 13 and finish withdrawing by April 13. Palestinians were to police the streets and civilian authorities were to assume responsibility for taxation, housing and utilities.

There are no deadlines now. Instead, the process is in Israeli hands. In Cairo, PLO spokesman Saeed Kamal said Israeli Foreign Minister Shimon Peres would meet with a PLO delegation Monday. He said Arafat would arrive Tuesday for talks with Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak, but would not say if Arafat and Peres would meet.

Already, Israeli officials have noticed a sharp shift in Palestinian attitudes.

"The Palestinian population woke up," an officer responsible for undercover operations told the weekly Al Hamishmar. He could not be identified due to army regulations.

"They thought they would experience a new reality. They know this is not true. So they are resuming the intefadeh," he added, using the Arabic word for the uprising against the Israeli occupation that started in 1987.

The numbers tell why. Since the agreement was signed, 62 Palestinians have died in clashes with Israelis, including six children under the age of 16. In the same period 20 Israeli soldiers and civilians have been killed.

Thousands of Palestinians remain behind bars, some for acts like raising the flag that are no longer illegal. Arrests continue. Over 50,000 Arabs lost jobs in Israel as a security measure to try to minimize attacks, and more work permits are being confiscated at random.

Israel subjects entire neighborhoods to power cuts if some residents don't pay bills. Land confiscation have risen sharply, and house demolitions or disruptive searches continue.

Israeli officials have said that the number of Israeli troops in the occupied lands is at one of its highest levels ever. The Israeli human rights group Betselem has noted a marked rise in the use of undercover operatives.

TUNIS, Tunisia
Senior PLO leaders are urging Yasser Arafat not to meet with Israel's foreign minister, as a way to pressure the Jewish state into greater flexibility over delayed Palestinian self-rule, sources said Sunday.

But Egypt and the United States are pushing the PLO chairman to go ahead with the meeting in Cairo, Egypt, the sources at the Palestine Liberation Organization's headquarters in Tunis said.

In Cairo, Saeed Kamal, the PLO's ambassador to Egypt, said Israeli Foreign Minister Shimon Peres would meet with a PLO delegation Monday. He said Arafat would arrive in Cairo on Tuesday for talks with Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak, but he would not say if a meeting was scheduled with Peres.

Shimon Peres

"Arafat will follow what is happening ... and will decide during his meeting with President Mubarak the direction of negotiations," Kamal said.

Peres confirmed Sunday that he planned to go to Cairo on Monday and said he expected to meet with Arafat this week. Peres said Saturday that he did not foresee an agreement being completed this week.

Arafat and Peres had been expected to make another personal attempt to work out the final details of an agreement on limited Palestinian autonomy in the Gaza Strip and the West Bank town of Jericho.

Israel and the PLO signed a general accord on self-rule Sept. 13 in Washington.

But Israeli withdrawal from those areas has been delayed by bickering over security matters, economic coordination and Palestinian civil administration.

The Israelis have said three key security issues are unresolved: control of border crossings to Egypt and Jordan, security for Jewish settlements in the autonomous zones and the size of the Jericho area.

Yasser Abed-Rabbo, a PLO executive committee member, said Arafat would make up his mind on the Cairo meeting after talking with senior aides late Sunday.

Many of Arafat's aides urged him not to meet with Peres personally until Israel was willing to make more concessions, said PLO insiders, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

They said Abed-Rabbo and Mahmoud Abbas, who signed the September accord with Peres in Washington, were among those advising Arafat to stay away.

Budget officials defend cuts in $1.5 trillion plan

By ALAN FRAM
Associated Press

WASHINGTON

Liberal Democrats and lobbyists aimed fire at President Clinton on Sunday for cuts he will seek in his 1995 budget, as administration officials defended the $1.5 trillion blueprint on the eve of its release.

"I'm not satisfied with the budget," Rep. Kweisi Mfume, D-Maryland, chairman of the Congressional Black Caucus, said Sunday on NBC's "Meet the Press."

Mfume took special issue with Clinton's plans to whittle down spending for public housing and heating assistance, saying, "Those things are getting close to becoming what we call non-negotiable items."

Clinton's package, for the fiscal year that begins next October 1, will lack the dramatic tax increases and spending reductions the president sought a year ago in his first budget. That proposal paved the way for last summer's enactment of his near-$500 billion deficit-reduction plan.

But to meet the tight strictures imposed by last August's package — and pay for increases Clinton wants for scores of other programs — the budget will propose eliminating 115 small programs, and holding nearly 600 others at or below the amounts they were allowed for this year.

The proposed cuts would total $25 billion, said one administration official who spoke Sunday on condition of anonymity. Of that, $8 billion will be used to beef up favored programs such as job training and technological research, and the rest to contain a 1995 deficit the administration will project at $176.1 billion — the lowest level since 1989.

Word of the spending cuts has already angered many members of Congress, all of whom have favorite programs they furiously defend. Lawmakers will spend most of the year deciding which of the president's proposals to embrace and which to ignore.

Special interest groups are also wasting little time gearing up.

The American Public Transit Association warned Sunday that nearly seven in 10 mass transit systems would have to raise fares if Congress approves Clinton's proposal to cut operating assistance to commuter train and bus systems.

"This is the potential aftershock of an unfortunate budget decision," said association Executive Vice President Jack Gilstrap, whose group surveyed commuter systems across the country.

Clinton wants to cut the program by $200 million from its current $800 million level, government and industry officials have said. A program for helping local governments buy buses and other equipment would be increased instead.

Administration officials said cuts in those and other programs were needed to help reduce the deficit and to pay for increases in education, crime fighting, and other favored initiatives.

On NBC-TV, with Mfume, Treasury Secretary Lloyd Bentsen conceded that getting the president's proposed cuts through Congress would not be easy.

"They couldn't do it before, and now we're talking about doing it now," Bentsen said. "Each of these has an interest group of course, and that's what you have to overcome."

The budget will claim that tens of billions of dollars can be saved over the next five years if Congress enacts Clinton's plan to revamp health care. Part of the savings will come from a previously announced plan to increase the cigarette tax.

Other details of Clinton's budget emerged Sunday. According to an administration official, the president will propose:

- $69 million for research on alternative fuel vehicles, $25 million more than this year.

- A reduction in the program that helps the poor pay heating bills from $1.4 billion this year to $730 million in 1995.

- $100 million over the next two years to build a new railroad terminal to replace Pennsylvania Station in Manhattan, in the home state of Senate Finance Committee Chairman Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-New York.

- A $196 million cut in Agriculture Department flood-prevention and watershed programs.

Support, funds sought in trip

By NANCY BENAC
Associated Press

HOUSTON

President Clinton is mixing policy and politics on a three-day Southern swing designed to fatten Democratic Party coffers and promote his new federal budget.

The president was expected to raise $2 million Sunday night at a glitzy Texas Presidential Dinner and Gala at Houston's Wortham Center, the money to be divided between the Democratic National Committee and the Texas state party.

A few hundred guests were paying $10,000 a couple for a buffet dinner with the president before a larger $1,000-per-couple reception featuring country and Western entertainment by Asleep at the Wheel.

Before the fund-raising events, Clinton met with hundreds of young cancer patients at a Houston hotel, sitting with several of them on his lap and answering their questions about what it's like to be president. Sometimes he feels like being just "an ordinary citizen," he told them.

Clinton is trying to build support in politically important Texas, where his approval ratings drooped into the 20s last year before rebounding to the 50 percent range in recent months.

The first stop on Clinton's agenda Sunday was the American Cancer Society children's party at the Four Seasons Hotel in Houston.

On Monday, the president's focus shifts from politics to policy. Clinton planned to promote his proposed $1.5 trillion budget for fiscal 1995 before Houston business leaders as the spending plan was being unveiled in Washington.

The president wants to cut spending on more than 300 programs to free up money for priorities including job training, education and crime fighting.

With the latest space shuttle mission still in progress, Clinton planned a Monday afternoon visit to the Johnson Space Flight Center to tour shuttle training facilities.

Crime on campus challenges administrators, students

Michigan State responds to safety problem with new programs

By KATHY HAUSMANN
News Writer

At Michigan State University, the university's size has contributed to the increased problem of crime on campus, making security a more difficult task for campus police.

According to Lt. Dale Metts of the Department of Police and Public Safety at MSU, the college experiences more crime than most other campuses, yet it is a "reasonably safe area" when compared to the rest of East Lansing, where the campus is located.

For students at MSU, safety is an issue that requires them to take some special precautions.

Female student Grazyna Wierzbicka also believes that the campus "is safe during the day, but there are still outsiders who are really not to be trusted, especially if you're a girl. You just have to be more careful about walking outside by yourself."

Yet walking at night isn't the only safety concern for those attending MSU. Last semester, in Phillips-Snyder Hall, a co-ed dorm, a male entered a women's bathroom and fondled two female students.

Police responded to the situation by arresting a suspect that is currently awaiting trial. In addition, bathroom doors have been equipped with locks that can only be opened with a room key.

Similar precautions have now been taken at the University of Michigan, seeking to stop the problem before any such incidents occur.

With 13 first-degree rapes, one second-degree rape, 224 car break-ins, and 260 bicycle thefts, the issue of security has warranted increased attention by campus police. In reaction to this need, the MSU Police have set up special programs.

One such program involves the Sexual Assault 10-point guarantee, a written code telling victims of sex offenses what will happen to them and how they will be treated by the department when they report their situation.

Metts believes that this program "increases the number of reports, not the number of rapes," even if it statistically makes the campus look as if it has more sex offenses than at other schools.

Another program involves placing officers in selected residence halls to hold "office hours" to speak with students. According to Metts, this "determines what needs the community has and how the MSU Police will assist in helping" to satisfy those needs.

A three-year plan to reduce crime on campus is also in place. Police choose one area that they believe needs additional attention, and try to reduce the amount of crime in that particular area.

Thus far, efforts have been successful, with car break-ins decreasing by 27 percent and bicycle thefts down 41 percent in MSU's second year moving towards a safer campus.

Security increases measures at Duke and Ohio State

Duke: University spends $300,000 per year on their Safe Walk program. Officers and students provide walking and van escorts on campus, including to and from parking lots.

Parking lots are monitored by a camera surveillance system and a PA system that detects sounds disturbances, such as breaking glass.

Dorm access requires card entry, restricting the entry of non-residents. University employees also require special identification to enter dorms.

In order to prevent break-ins, academic buildings are equipped with special alarms that sound if doors are propped open for more than 45 seconds.

In 1993, there were 71 cases of assault, 977 cases of larceny and 19 cases of motor vehicle theft.

Ohio State University: A Crime Watch Escort Service is provided from 12-1 a.m. during weekdays, and from 1-2 a.m. on weekends.

University police are not responsible for protection of the student parking lots.

Dorms are secured at all times and must be accessed either with keys or identification.

In 1993, there were 71 cases of assault, 1355 cases of larceny, and 33 cases of motor vehicle theft.

Campus police keep a watchful eye

By TONY POTTINGER
News Writer

The recent attempted sexual assault on a Notre Dame student at the Grotto has left many students with questions and concerns about security at Notre Dame.

"We hope people will see incidents like this and take appropriate actions to protect themselves," said Phil Johnson, assistant director of campus security. "Notre Dame is going to be safe not because of what Notre Dame security does, but because of how the community chooses to live."

The Notre Dame Police Department, a fully authorized police agency by the State of Indiana, is involved in a myriad of activities daily to keep the campus secure. This includes monitoring the entry of motor vehicles onto campus at the two checkpoints.

"Of all security issues, parking and access to campus is the one that tears at the relationship between us and students," said Johnson.

According to Johnson, restricting cars on campus insures the safety of pedestrians and the drivers themselves, particularly on weekends when individuals more likely to have been drinking.

"Officially, students are not permitted to drive on campus. Exceptions are made of course when students are carrying heavy loads in their cars, for example," Johnson said.

Many students would argue that having to walk from the student lots in the dark, especially in light of last week's incident, poses a security threat itself. Johnson responded, "We don't want anyone to be put at risk by the actions of our officers. That is why SafeWalk is available."

Officers also respond to students who are locked out of their cars and transports students to the infirmary or to off-campus hospitals when necessary.

Some security personnel recently completed a training video on helping victims of sexual assault. Both Notre Dame and Saint Mary's students participated as well.

While the Notre Dame Police are a separate entity in and of themselves, they frequently cooperate with local law enforcement agencies.

"Our relationship with the local police is good. In fact, we are part of a joint special crimes unit that has been very successful," said Johnson.

The Observer/Laura Grendahl

Assistant Director of Campus Security, Phil Johnson, monitors campus crime activity.

From a statistical standpoint, incidents of reported crime are down over the last two years, particularly for robbery, burglary, and motor vehicle theft.

Larceny remains the single most prevalent crime.

As Johnson stated, "The quality of life here is such that we'd all like to leave our doors open. Unfortunately, that can't be safely done."

Students indicted for false loans

After forging signatures and authorization codes on student loan applications to receive almost $50,000 in illegally-obtained student loans, fifteen past and present students at Prairie View A&M University in Texas have been indicted.

Arrest warrants were to be issued after a clerk at the university brought attention to the forged applications.

Professors warn of 'strange' classes

With controversy arising from a policy at the University of Iowa that forced professors to warn students before showing sexually explicit material in class, the administration revised its policy to state that students must be warned about "unusual or unexpected class presentations or materials." Reaction has varied among staff.

VA Tech sued for sex discrimination

Claiming that the varsity sports policy at Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University violates sex-discrimination laws for schools receiving federal aid, twelve female students have filed suit to add women's crew, field hockey, lacrosse, and softball as varsity sports to the school's athletic program. Virginia Tech, which just added a women's varsity soccer team last year, has proposed a "gender-equity" plan for sports to increase female participation in varsity sports over the next five years.

Like a good neighbor, program helps acclimate Hispanic families to Michiana

El Buen Vecino

By TANYA KRYWARUCZENKO
Assistant Accent Editor

In this day and age when the world can seem so cold and unfeeling to newcomers to the area, a new program in South Bend now lends a helping hand.

El Buen Vecino is a newly-formed, non-profit center "that assists families to become self-sufficient," said Sara Haber, executive director of El Buen Vecino.

"We educate their minds and prepare them for jobs after graduating from the program."

The program, headquartered in downtown South Bend, serves the entire Michiana area.

El Buen Vecino mainly serves Hispanic families, but also helps others, according to Jim Hogan, director of Edutra, a tutoring program which is among the services that El Buen Vecino offers.

El Buen Vecino, originally Haber's idea, was chartered in Nov., 1992, according to Hogan.

"El Buen Vecino is very young," said Hogan. "It's only a year old, which is such a short life for a non-profit organization. It's now just getting on its feet."

Hogan explained that the Notre Dame community has been a tremendous source of help for the program.

"They've contributed many, many hours," he said. Among the groups lending aid to the fledgling program are the Center for Social Concerns and the Community Alliance to Serve Hispanics (CASH).

"What the University hopes to do with this program is to bridge the gap between the Notre Dame community and the South Bend community," said Hogan.

El Buen Vecino has a variety of different programs to fit many different needs.

The main program that the Notre Dame students participate in is Edutra, a tutoring program wherein students go to a family's home and help to improve their English speaking skills.

"This is an interesting program because normally students go to classes, but here we take the classes to the students," he said.

Senior Patricia Villarreal is one of the participants in the tutoring program.

"Last semester we mainly worked with the family on speaking English," said Villarreal.

"They can speak English well, but they need help with the pronunciation."

Villarreal explained that not only do the tutors help the families with the English language, but they also help with other practical things which might arise.

"I worked with the father of the family who was trying to get a driver's license," said Villarreal.

"I brought a driver's manual, which we went over together. I helped him identify the different traffic signs."

Villarreal said that the program is extremely rewarding.

"I can tell that when we get [to their house] everyone is waiting for us, because they are looking out of the windows—I know they are really happy to see us," she said.

"I really like the interaction we have with the family," she said. "We go there to teach them, but we also have conversations with them."

Villarreal added that many of the tutors can relate to their tutorees because they have similar cultural backgrounds.

"Whenever we leave there, we leave feeling happy," explained Villarreal.

"You're glad that you went because you feel so good you helped someone and they appreciated it."

Hogan said that student participation has increased over the past year.

Although students are mainly involved with the tutoring program, Hogan said there are many other programs that El Buen Vecino offers that eventually may need student help.

One of these programs is La Huerta. La Huerta, meaning "the garden" in Spanish, is a vegetable garden that members of El Buen Vecino have planted in the area, said Hogan. "They plant seeds, take care of the land, and harvest it."

"Not only do they work the fields themselves, but at the same time they grow their own food," said Hogan.

"It saves them money and they get their own produce. It's a wonderful program."

In the future, El Buen Vecino may also need more student interpreters to assist Hispanic families and help out with a variety of organizations, Hogan said.

'We need hard-driven people who want to experience working in a non-profit (organization) and who want to learn and really make a difference.'

Jim Hogan

"Right now we are at the end of the first stage, in which we're getting the organization going," said Hogan.

"We need hard-driven people who want to experience working in a non-profit and who want to learn and really make a difference."

The second stage involves actually volunteering in the various programs that El Buen Vecino offers.

"If students are interested in participating in these programs, the best thing they could do would be to talk to an organization they're involved with and drum up support there first, and then as a whole organization contact El Buen Vecino," said Hogan.

Anyone interested in helping with El Buen Vecino should contact Hogan at 634-1148.

Morgan leads women's hoop over Loyola

By DYLAN BARMMER
Sports Writer

CHICAGO

The Notre Dame women's basketball team survived a rocky first half to defeat the University of Loyola Ramblers, 81-66, in a Midwestern Collegiate Conference matchup Saturday.

The win, the third straight for the Irish, enabled Notre Dame to hold on to first place in the MCC. The Irish are now 5-1 in league, with an overall record of 14-5. The loss was the fourth straight for the Ramblers, who fell to 1-6 in the MCC and 5-14 overall.

The Irish came out aggressive early on in the first half of the game, jumping out to a 7-0 lead just two minutes into the contest. The momentum quickly shifted over to Loyola's side, however, as a 12-4 run enabled the home team to gain a 12-11 edge just under six minutes into the game.

The first half saw nine lead changes, as both teams jockeyed for the first half advantage. After taking the lead back from the Irish at 30-28 on senior guard Stacy Kundinger's three pointer, Loyola went on to a 7-4 run, giving them a 37-32 halftime lead.

The Ramblers' up-tempo style troubled the Irish in the first half, forcing the perhaps overly aggressive Notre Dame team to commit ten turnovers and nine fouls. Loyola didn't hesitate to capitalize on their chances from the foul line, hitting 11 of 13 free throws in the first half. For the game, the Ramblers went 20-24 from the line, good enough for an .833 percentage.

Senior center Ginny Hamill, who led the Ramblers with 15 points and 12 rebounds in the game, made five of those 11 free throws, and had nine points and six rebounds in the first half. Stacy Kundinger, whose three pointer keyed Loyola's 7-4 run at the end of the half, also poured in nine points in the half.

Much of the first half offense for the Irish came from freshman forward Katryna Gaither, who led the team at the half with eight points, six rebounds, and three blocked shots. Sophomore Carey Poor scored six points in only five minutes of play, while senior point guard Kara Leary contributed three assists and two steals.

The second half of the game was all Notre Dame - or at least all Beth Morgan. The freshman guard rebounded from a 2-9 first half shooting performance to lead the team with 19 second half points, 10 of which came in the first 5:30. Morgan finished with 23 points to lead all scorers, and her early output in the second half helped key a 13-0 run.

The Irish, who outscored the Ramblers 49-29 in the second half, went ahead to stay when Carey Poor's layup made the score 55-53 with 11:13 to play. The 11-0 run grew to a 23-4 margin over the next 10 minutes, and Ginny Hamill's layup with 6:01 left in the game broke an eight minute scoring drought for Loyola.

The Irish had their largest lead of the game when Tootie Jones, who finished the game with 10 points in only 14 minutes, hit a jumper to put the Irish up 79-58 with just over three minutes to play. The Ramblers went on a 8-0 run to close the gap to within 13 points, but time was not on Loyola's side.

The Irish have won six of their last seven, including five of their six conference games.

While Irish coach Muffet McGraw would have liked to have seen a better first half game from her team, she was happy with the outcome of the game.

"I thought we played very well in the second half," McGraw said. "They (Loyola) are a better team than their record indicates. Defensively, we played well in the second half, and we did what we had to do offensively. Letitia Bowen had her spurts offensively and defensively, and Morgan was great in the second half."

Bowen finished the game with 13 points and a team-high seven rebounds and four steals.

Morgan, who continues to lead the Irish in scoring in just her first year of college basketball, spoke humbly of her second half heroics.

"I just wanted to come out and pick up my defense, and let the offense take over," said Morgan. "We executed really well on offense, which allowed the team to get the ball to me in favorable situations."

The next test for the Irish will come on Thursday, February 10, when the Irish travel to Butler in hopes of avenging a 65-62 loss suffered at home on January 22.

Men's volleyball gets dose of humility

By G.R. NELSON
Sports Writer

The men's volleyball team received a large dose of humility this Saturday at the University of Michigan Tournament.

While the team's match record remains at 7-0, they no longer have an unblemished season. The Irish played four different teams two games each.

They opened with an impressive 11-6 victory over Michigan St. In that game, outside hitter Matt Strottman led a well-balanced attack.

"The first game we came out ready to play," said Strottman, "But then we just broke down."

Michigan St. bounced back in the second game with an 11-7 victory. The Irish were then defeated by both Illinois St. 8-11, 6-11, and Illinois 8-11, 7-11. The team did eventually defeat Northwestern 11-5, but fell in the second game 9-11.

Overall, it was a disappointing day for the team. "Besides a few players we did not play well," said captain Brian Ceponis, "But maybe we needed this reality check."

While the weekend results were disappointing two key players, Tom Isenbarger and Leo Casas, were unable to play. Also, Ceponis aggravated his knee injury in the second match. Illinois and Northwestern both took advantage of the opening in the middle.

"We've had our reality check," said Ceponis, "And now we have to get back to work."

Monty Williams scoops a shot over Ed O'Bannon in the second half.

took advantage of the sluggish Bruins.

A Williams dunk off a pretty pass from freshman Admore White tied the game at 15 and Notre Dame trailed for just 16 seconds the rest of the way.

Notre Dame even had chances to break the game open, but some minor Bruin bursts kept the game from getting out of hand.

But UCLA was never closer than seven points in the second half, thanks to Keith Kurowski, who scored 15 of his career-high 19 points in the final 20 minutes.

"When somebody has a career night against you, what can you do?" Harrick wondered. "We warned our guys about that and that's what happened."

Nobody in baby blue could equal Kurowski or Williams.

Each UCLA player scored below his average except junior point guard Tyus Edney, who led the Bruins with 17.

They shot a woeful 20-for-63 from the field, including 0-for-16 from 3-point range. Leading scorer Ed O'Bannon had just 14 points on 6-for-18 shooting and his brother Charles played just 14 minutes due to a sprained wrist.

That offensive absence was clear in the second half, when UCLA couldn't put much of a dent in Notre Dame's expanding lead.

"We were fortunate to catch UCLA on a night when they didn't shoot well," MacLeod said. "We were razor-sharp from the field and our defense was really effective at times and that was essential against such a formidable offensive group."

The lead grew to 15 after Lamarr Justice found Marcus Hughes for a dunk, but Notre Dame couldn't relax. UCLA has too much firepower, and the Irish have seen big leads vanish too many times.

"They went on a huge run and we flattened out," MacLeod said. "I was afraid at that point

Williams gets best of O'Bannon

By GEORGE DOHRMANN

Monty Williams was screaming.

With 30 seconds remaining in Notre Dame's 79-63 upset win over the Bruins, the senior forward grabbed the rebound off of a UCLA miss, dribbled the length of the court, and threw home the final two of his game-high 28 points.

Williams then stood on the baseline, his hands in the air, screaming at the Irish student section.

He celebrated his dunk and the finest performance of the season for the Irish. And possibly the most satisfying win in Williams' career.

"A friend of mine in California called and told me they thought it was an easy win (for UCLA), like a bye," said Williams.

It should have been an easy win for the Bruins but Williams' performance proved otherwise.

In the first half he led the Irish with 16, scoring six of Notre Dame's final ten points in the half to build a 36-28 lead.

His play screamed for itself in the second half. His two free throws with five minutes gone pushed the Irish lead to 15. When UCLA clawed back within nine midway through the half, Williams hit a gliding one-hander to push the lead back to double-digits.

He also controlled the glass on a usually strong-rebounding Bruin squad. He finished with a game-high nine rebounds and also added six assists.

"Monty Williams gives them a chance to win on any night," said UCLA coach Jim Harrick. "He's a great athlete."

Much had been made of the Williams-Ed O'Bannon matchup coming into the game, but the UCLA All-American paled in comparison. He finished with nine rebounds but only 14 points. Defensively he stayed away from Williams in the second half, guarding Irish walk-on Pete Miller during one stretch.

"In the first half I don't think his guys were giving him much help on me," said Williams. "It was also hard because the crowd was on him."

O'Bannon and Williams played together at the Team USA tryouts this summer. If O'Bannon wasn't impressed with him then, Saturday's performance surely left a lasting impression.

In the locker room after the game a despondent O'Bannon answered a few questions about the game but more about Williams.

"He's a great player. He got open a lot and made the easy shots," said the 6-8 forward. "He's a great athlete and he took it to the hole all day."

"Nothing he or Notre Dame did surprised us. They just kept it up the whole game."

For most of the game the two forwards were exchanging glances and words, but not at the end.

At the end O'Bannon was quiet. Williams was screaming.

looked like the Irish might let another one slip away. But Georgia couldn't finish the comeback it started. "Down the stretch we did what we had to do to get back into the game," Georgia coach Hugh Durham said. "We did the one thing we really had to do (five-second call) and then to not execute was really disappointing." Notre Dame reversed a five-point halftime lead and took control of the game in the second half, leading by as much as 11. "It was great to see our kids wipe out a five-point lead and take over," MacLeod said. That has been the difference for the Irish lately. Getting leads is one thing, holding them is another. Notre Dame is finally learning how to do both. They did it Sunday against a typically balanced Georgia attack. Bernard Davis led the Bulldogs with 23 points, Dathon Brown contributed 18 and Carlos Strong added 12. But Notre Dame had four players in double figures, including Joe Ross' 10 points, the first double-figure game of his career. "They were warriors today," MacLeod said. It was definitely a battle for the Irish, and the warriors wouldn't let the dwell on Saturday's win over UCLA. "It's a credit to them that they came off a real emotional win over UCLA and played the way they did," Durham said.

1980. It was Paxson who provided the link to the past Saturday, calling point guard Lamarr Justice to congratulate him on his performance. A small gesture, but one that indicates what this rivalry means to the people who helped build it. It's implications are not as great anymore, with UCLA more concerned about its conference schedule and Notre Dame struggling to keep its head above water. But it still matters to the people who play the game. Times have changed in college basketball, but Notre Dame-UCLA remains. Saturday's game didn't mean anything to any conference. It probably won't dent UCLA's NCAA Tournament seed, nor will it drastically improve Notre Dame's chances for post season play. But it mattered. Notre Dame-UCLA will always matter. The players may not have realized it, but they woke up the ghosts and wrote their own chapter in this history of this series. Now if somebody would just open the book.

Belles hoop drops fourth straight

By KIMBERLY BERO
Sports Writer

The Saint Mary's basketball team suffered their fourth straight loss Saturday in Angela Athletic Facility, losing to Carroll College 82-64.

The Belles, now 4-11 on the year, led for the majority of the first half, but the Pioneers jumped ahead in the closing minutes to lead the Belles 35-43 at half time.

Saint Mary's senior Ann Mulcahy kept the Belles in the game by hitting four three point shots in the first half.

"Despite a close game in the first half, our passing was terrible. It's been a long time since we've looked that bad," said Coach Marvin Wood.

The Belles were able to regain their composure after the half as freshman Sarah Koppe-rud hit a three point shot to bring the Belles within five points.

However, the Pioneers came back strong, bulding the lead to 51-42.

Demuri leading the attack. Demuri, who is ranked nationally in both shooting and scoring percentages, scored 13 points and added three assists.

The Belles bounced back by the middle of the second half, cutting the Carroll lead to two.

The Pioneerse went on a rally, increasing the lead to 11 in the final three minutes of the game. This run was due mainly to shooting from the field and a stifling defense that dominated the Belles.

The Belles were led by senior Anne Mulcahy, who poured in 26 points, including six three-point shots.

Sophomore Jennie Taubenheim, a stalwart forward for the Belles, finished the game with 25 points and 11 rebounds.

"This game was a grave disappointment for us. It was our worst game since Christmas, and we only succeeded in making Carroll College look good," Wood said.

The Belles will be in action

Lake Forest too strong for Saint Mary's swimmers

By MARY GOOD
Saint Mary's Sports Editor

The Saint Mary's swim team lost 62-47 to Lake Forest College but beat the Illinois Institute of Technology 75-33 in a double dual meet on Saturday which marked their last regular season meet.

ITT was no problem for the Belles, but Lake Forest proved to be a much more even match up.

"In the events we won we generally placed fourth and third," Belles coach Janson said. "In events Lake Forest won we placed second and third. They just won a couple more than we did."

The Belles faced a new challenge Saturday as they competed in a meter pool rather than the yard pool they are used to.

"In some events the swimmers could end up swimming a whole length further than they are used to," Janson said.

The entire team swam well although not as well as last Saturday against the University of Chicago.

"Meets like the University of Chicago are hard to duplicate on a regular basis," Janson said.

The divers that traveled to Lake Forest Saturday performed especially well.

did 24 points better on the one meter board than in any other meet this season. Freshman Angie Mills did nine points better than any of her previous performances.

"The divers have had an opportunity to compete more in the past few weeks, and coupled with their performance in practice they have made significant improvement this season," Janson said.

Freshman swimmer Shannon Kelleher also had her best meet of the season.

"In the 8000 meter freestyle, Shannon did not swim her fastest, but as far as stroke and turns go it was one of her better swims," Janson said. "The 400 meter was probably her best swim of the year. She paced the race well and swam the way I've been trying to get her to all year."

The team is now looking to the next week and a half of their taper where they will be resting up for the Liberal Arts Invitational.

"We will be resting in the hopes that our energy is at a peak level when the Liberal Arts Invitational starts," Janson said. "There we will be looking to make improvement upon our work this year and also improve on how we did last year. That has pretty much been the theme of the season—consistency and improvement."

Notre Dame misses chance against Miami

By TIM SHERMAN
Sports Writer

Working hard and playing good hockey for two periods may be enough for some of the top teams in the CCHA.

Right now, Notre Dame is not there yet.

In both games this weekend against the visiting Redskins of Miami (OH), the Irish allowed an early lead. The Irish fought back with intensity, but it was not enough.

Friday's tilt saw the Irish drop a heartbreaking 3-2 decision in the final minute, while Saturday's effort resulted in a 6-5 setback. The Irish dropped to 8-17-4, 6-13-4 in the CCHA.

"We had a chance to start to form a winning habit," said defenseman Bryan Welch. "Instead we just perpetuated the losing habit, which is something we're going to have to break if we're going to do well in the (CCHA) playoffs."

Friday's contest was especially painful. It looked as if Notre Dame's efforts were going to pay off, as they tied the game with under three minutes remaining on a Terry Lorenz goal.

But it was not meant to be, as MU's Rene Vonlanthen scored on a deflected shot with only 30 seconds to play.

The Irish were sloppy and inefficient in giving up two early goals. Miami, although sluggish in their own right, took advantage.

Kevyn Adams, an NHL first-round draft choice, got the scoring started at the 13:49 mark of the first period.

Adams also figured in the second score of the night. He hit Marc Boxer with a nice feed, who beat Irish goaltender Greg Louder to give Miami a 2-0 lead.

Davide dalGrande got the Irish on the board, scoring his first goal of the season on a power play to slice the lead in half at the 15:17 point of the second period.

After a 20 minutes of scoreless skating, Lorenz finally knotted the game at two.

But it was Miami who got the break and the game-winning goal.

In the second game, Miami jumped out to an early 3-0 lead and later extended it to 4-0. Once again, the Irish refused to quit, scoring the game's final three goals, but the hole was too deep for Notre Dame.

"We buried ourselves," said Coach Ric Schafer. "We looked like we were still out shopping with mom (it being hockey parents weekend)."

The burial was quick, too. After 8:06 of skating, the Irish were down 3-0.

Andrew Miller got the run started for Miami. Adams chipped in with a conversion of a one-on-one chance against Louder. Next, blueliner Dan Daiakawa had his turn from up top.

Miami extended the lead to 5-1 before the Irish got the nightly wake-up call.

Cary Nemeth started the comeback at the 6:00 mark of the second with his first goal. After Andrew Backen upped the lead to 6-2, Matt Osiecki lit the lamp with a rocket from between the circles.

The third period was all Irish.

"In the second half of the game, Notre Dame did everything correct," said Miami coach George Gwozdocky. "To their credit, they fought back."

Jamie Ling notched his second goal of the night on a power play with 15:41 to play.

"Jamie Ling was an all-around force," noted Gwozdocky. "It wasn't just scoring. He was key on faceoffs and he set up their offense."

Nemeth cut the lead to just one with a shorthanded effort. After taking a loose puck at the redline, he skated in and beat Miami netminder Kevin Deschambeault to make it 6-5.

With ten minutes left, it looked like the Irish would manage to tie it. They had their chance but could not convert. Although they were outskated 13-3, the Redskins played well enough in the final two minutes to prevent the Irish from pulling their goalie until just 30 seconds remained. Notre Dame ended with a flurry, but that would be all.

"It was the good, the bad, and the ugly in reverse order," commented Schafer. "We have to be proud of our efforts, but it was too little, too late. We'd like to get to the point where we don't have to come back like that."

The Irish lost sophomore forward Jamie Morshead, who fractured his leg in Saturday's game. He will miss the balance of the season.

Meyo Invitational ruled a success by Irish, participants

By DOMINIC AMOROSA
Sports Writer

At the same time the Notre Dame basketball team was playing one of its best games of the season at the Joyce Center against UCLA, the Irish men's and women's track and field team were competing in one of its biggest meets of the season, the prestigious Meyo Invitational.

The nationally acclaimed meet attracted more than 20 teams and various invited individual talents to Loftus Center for a Saturday afternoon of indoor track and field.

"I was real pleased with the meet," said Irish head coach and meet director Joe Plane. "There were a lot of outstanding events."

Other coaches were just as impressed with the quality of the event. "From the ground up, the facilities, officials, conduct and quality of the competition, this is one of the best meets in the country," commented Tulane head coach Danny Thiel. "This is a well-kept secret in college track and field, because you can get it done here. There is a competitive atmosphere along with friendly people.

"Notre Dame has an aura about it for the people on the outside. The incentive was there for our kids to perform and we did well."

The highlight of the meet was the annual Meyo Mile. Three athletes ran sub-4 minute miles. The event featured a pair of University of Michigan world class milers, freshman Kevin Sullivan and sophomore Scott McDonald.

Sullivan led the way with a time of 3:58.00. Second place finisher Dave Wittman of Nike Texas ran 3:59.28, followed by McDonald at 3:59.40.

The two Michigan stars hail from Canada, and both ran their personal best times. They were equally impressed with the quality of competition during the meet.

"It was excellent competition," explained McDonald. "They stacked the mile with some older guys and the whole field pushed us."

"It's a step below international competition, but there are so many guys running fast this year that NCAA's will be a fight to the end," echoed Sullivan.

Other outstanding events for the Irish men included the 3,000 meters, high jump, 800, the pole vault and men's sprints. Overall, ten different Notre Dame athletes qualified for the Intercollegiate Association of Amateur Athletes of America (IC4A) meet in March.

Notre Dame dominated the 3,000 by placing four runners in the top six. Senior captain Mike McWilliams led the way with a qualifying time of 8:21. Juniors Nate Ruder and J.R. Melora finished second and fourth respectively to qualify for the IC4A's. Freshman Matt Altoff placed a respectable sixth.

In the high jump, senior Todd Herman placed third with a jump of seven and one-half, that qualified him for the IC4A's for the fourth straight year. Junior Brian Headrick qualified by jumping six-nine.

"I wasn't real pleased with my jumps," commented Herman. "No one jumped very well. I need to rest my knee and hopefully things will improve."

The pole vault featured Irish qualifiers Dan Gerrity and Dan Grenough. Gerrity, a freshman placed eighth, while Grenough finished tenth.

The main highlights for the Irish came in the sprints. Freshman football standout Randy Kinder set a Meyo Track and school record in the 200 (21.59) and qualified for the IC4A's in that event along with the 55 meters.

Other qualifiers for Notre Dame included freshman Anthony Swiney in the 55m (6.48), and junior Joe Royer in the 800 (1:52.88).

"I am real pleased with the way our guys ran," said Plane. "We competed very well and I saw a lot of good things."

"I've always been impressed with Joe's programs," commented Thiel. "His team is very strong. They have people everywhere, from the distance events to the sprints, through the jumpers. It's one of the most well-rounded track programs in the country."

On the women's side, the meet was just as successful. The 55m hurdles and 400 were Notre Dame's best events.

Irish junior Lisa Junck set a school record in the hurdles with a time of 7.96 seconds. Classmate Monica Cox finished fifth in a time of 8.41.

Sophomore Erica Peterson finished third in the 400 with a time of 56.28.

"There were a lot of good performances," commented Plane. "We had no real major surprises. We can always do better."

Notre Dame laughs last in 79-63 upset

By JASON KELLY
Associate Sports Editor

It will forever be known as the Tavares two-step.

Tavares Montgomery Williams shuffled to center court when Saturday's 79-63 upset of No. 4 UCLA was secure.

It was a dance of equal parts relief, revelry and ridicule.

"It was a moment we haven't had a chance to feel in a long time," said Williams, who scored 28 points, grabbed nine rebounds and dished out six assists. "When (UCLA) came out before the game, they were laughing and giggling and making fun of us. They weren't taking the game seriously."

Williams took the opportunity to throw some of that laughter back at the Braggin' Bruins, but this game meant more to Notre Dame than bragging rights.

It meant the right to be respected.

Near-misses against Duke and Providence made some waves, but Saturday the Irish finally made a splash.

"It's a great victory for Notre Dame," Williams said. "It was on national television and it was a chance for us to show people that the basketball program is on the rise again."

Tired from travel and emotionally spent from a Thursday night tussle with arch-rival USC, the Bruins weren't exactly at full strength.

Backup center Rodney Zimmerman, bothered with a nagging back injury, didn't even dress because it was a non-conference game.

"We needed another day after an unbelievably emotional game against Southern Cal," UCLA coach Jim Harrick said. "But that's no excuse, you have to come to play everyday."

After falling behind 7-2, the focused and fresh-legged Irish

Irish celebrate with win over Bulldogs

By JASON KELLY

Airplane food has a way of dousing any good celebration.

The Notre Dame men's basketball team was on a plane to Atlanta just hours after defeating UCLA with memories of that game lingering like the turkey log.

"We wanted to stay home and celebrate," Irish forward Monty Williams said. "But Coach (John) MacLeod let us know that even though you beat a top-ranked team, you can't lose the next one."

The Observer/Sean Farnan

Ryan Hoover scored a career-high 32 against Georgia.

So it was on to Atlanta with rubber legs and plastic peanuts.

And Notre Dame didn't lose the next one.

Behind Ryan Hoover's career-high 32 points, the Irish held off a late Georgia rally for an 88-85 win.

Hoover was 10-for-10 from the free throw line, including six in the final 31 seconds, to set a new school record with 40 consecutive free throws made.

But more importantly Notre Dame won its third game in a row, making clutch plays down the stretch to finding some new offensive assets.

"We are finally making a surge," Irish coach John MacLeod said. "That's pleasing to see. We have character and character endures. Character can't be chased away, it keeps coming back."

Williams scored 24 points and grabbed 10 rebounds and Billy Taylor had his best game in two years, scoring 13.

"We need Billy to come up big," MacLeod said. "And Billy needed it, too."

Georgia cut Notre Dame's lead to 86-85 with a Ty Wilson 3-pointer with 16.6 seconds remaining. When Notre Dame couldn't inbound the ball, it

J O C K S T R I P Lack of knowledge adds to the history

They say that those who don't know history are destined to repeat it.

If they taught American history the way they teach basketball history at UCLA and Notre Dame, we'd still be fighting the Civil War.

Saturday the Bruins and the Irish proved their ignorance of this storied series, adding another upset to the pile.

It happened 20 years after Notre Dame's most celebrated victory over UCLA, a 71-70 thriller that snapped the Bruins' record 88-game winning streak.

And it was the fifth time in 23 years that a UCLA team ranked in the top five has lost at the Joyce Center.

Notre Dame tried to awaken the memories, replaying Dick Enberg's call of the final minutes of the 1974 game.

But that static cling to the past seemed lost on everyone, particularly Saturday's participants.

"(The 1974 game) could have been 400 years ago as far as these guys knew," said Bruins coach Jim Harrick, the latest heir to college basketball's most glorious history. "It meant nothing whatsoever."

Jason Kelly
Associate Sports Editor

None of the players in Saturday's game were more than two years old when Dwight Clay's shot shook college basketball.

Their memories of that afternoon are as fuzzy as Clay's afro.

"We knew a little bit about it and we heard that pre-recorded message (Enberg's broadcast) before the game," this year's hero Monty Williams said. "But the guys that played in that game couldn't help us today."

Yet Saturday's game stirred memories of those guys and all the guys who have been a part of this series.

• Austin Carr's 46 points that handed the Bruins their only loss in their 1971 national championship season.

• Clay's jump shot that snapped the longest winning streak in college basketball history.

• John Paxson's four free throws in the final five seconds that clinched a Notre Dame win in
